Foreword

The Associated Students present the 1934 Oregon, a record of achievements, activities and life at the University of Oregon, an institution where education is not only an ideal, but a glorious adventure, and where zeal and enthusiasm for the heights of accomplishment are found in the classroom, on the athletic field and in the many and varied phases of University activity portrayed in this volume.

Board Controls Five Schools

The creation of a board of higher education which controls the activities of all the institutions of higher education of the state, has served to eliminate needless expense and wasteful duplication of courses.

The Oregon State System of Higher Education is controlled by a board consisting of nine members.

In 1932 the Oregon State System of Higher Education was reorganized by the Board of Higher Education. The organization under which the institutions are now operating consists of the following major elements: A single administrative head, the chancellor, who directs and integrates the entire system; a central organization for directing all matters pertaining to business; physical plant; statistics and general information, including news and publications, of the entire state system of higher education; a group of major schools and colleges embracing the various academic fields allocated to the institutions in such a way as to eliminate duplication.

The law creating the State Board of Higher Education passed by the 1929 state legislature included three major provisions.

1. Providing for the unified management, control, support and operation of the state institutions of higher education;
2. Creating a department of state government to be known as the department of higher education, conducted by a board of nine directors known as the State Board of Higher Education which superseded the former three separate boards of regents and the state board of higher curricula; and
3. Providing for a survey and reorganization of the work and activities of the higher educational institutions. The policy of a unified administration was to be accomplished without destroying the individuality or identity of the institutions.

Kerr Heads New System

Dr. William J. Kerr is the present chancellor of the Oregon State System of Higher Education, having control of all six institutions of higher learning in the state.

Dr. Kerr was appointed chancellor in the fall of 1932, and has made his home in Eugene since that time.

On account of the strife and turmoil in the field of higher education during the past year, acting presidents were appointed at both Oregon State College and the University of Oregon. Dr. Clarence V. Boyer holds this position at the University, while Dr. George W. Peavy is acting president at the College.

Dr. Kerr comes to the University after a long and successful record as president of Oregon State College. He received his advanced education from Cornell and the University of Utah, and was appointed president of O.S.C. in 1907, holding this position until chosen as chancellor. Dr. Kerr holds honorary D.Sc. and L.L.D. degrees.

Dr. Clarence V. Boyer, acting president of the University of Oregon, has been on the faculty of the University since 1926, when he was appointed head of the department of English. Dr. Boyer is very well liked by all those who have had contacts with him, and his appointment was heartily welcomed both on the campus and throughout the state.

The duties of the acting president are to settle questions of policy pertaining to the particular institution with which he is connected. He also gives advice to the State Board of Higher Education, so that they can better decide matters which are of concern to the University, rather than to the educational system as a whole.

The selection of acting presidents removes the necessity of attending to much detail work affecting the schools, and leaves the chancellor more time to consider matters pertaining to the system as a whole.

President Boyer received his B.S. from Princeton in 1902, his M.A. in 1909, and his Ph.D. in 1911. He attended the University of Pittsburgh Law School from 1902 to 1904; Oxford in 1905, and was a student at the American Academy in Rome and Athens during 1906. Dr. Boyer was a member of the faculty of the University of Illinois from 1911 until he came to Oregon in 1926.

This appointment of acting presidents has evidently settled a great deal of the chaos present in the field of higher education since the institutions were consolidated under one administrative head last year. The whole system seems to be functioning more smoothly since this change was inaugurated.

School of Business Administration

Harrison V. Hoyt

The School of Business Administration tries to broaden its students through a correlation of economics, law and liberal arts with subjects of a professional nature.

The School of Business Administration, established in 1914, offers training for the development of business executives.

Degrees offered are B.B.A., B.A., and B.S. with the M.A. granted for graduate work.

Dean Harrison Val Hoyt has been associated with the University since 1932, having been transferred from Corvallis where he had been dean of the School of Commerce for one year.

School of Education

Curricula for the training of Junior and Senior high school teachers and educational administrators are offered by the School of Education. Courses at the University prepare students for teaching literature, languages, arts and music, physical education, the social sciences, business administration, and combinations of subjects.

Opportunity is provided for majors in this school to carry on supervised teaching, as the University furnishes practice teachers for both a Junior and Senior high school, adjacent to the campus.

The School of Education also carries on research for the benefit of all schools in the state.

Dean James Ralph Jewell, Ph.D., L.L.D., was transferred from Corvallis in 1932.

James R. Jewell

Oregon Law School

The University of Oregon Law School is a member of the Association of American Law Schools, with Class A rating. It was founded at Portland in 1884, and was removed to the Eugene Campus in 1915.

Students entering the law school must have satisfactorily completed at least two years of undergraduate work, and have met the requirements for the Junior Certificate. In cooperation with the College of Social Science and the School of Business Administration, the law school offers six-year curricula consisting of three years of pre-legal work, in addition to the regular three-year professional course. Students completing this work are awarded both the baccalaureate and legal degrees.

Dean Wayne L. Morse was appointed dean in 1932.

Wayne L. Morse

Physical Education

The School of Physical Education gives courses of two general types. Freshmen and Sophomores are required to take service work in physical education, instruction in various games and sports. Courses in Personal Hygiene are offered, but not required.

For those who wish to continue physical education as a profession, the school offers major curricula. Graduates of this school usually secure employment as teachers of physical education, playground or community recreation supervisors, or coaches.

The Health Service gives medical care and advice to students, maintaining an Infirmary and Dispensary.

Dean Bovard has been connected with the University since 1903, and was made Dean of this school when it was established in 1920.

John F. Bovard

College of Social Science

James H. Gilbert

The College of Social Science was established in 1932 by action of the State Board of Higher Education. It is one of the three major divisions of the former College of Literature Science, and the Arts.

It includes the departments of economics, geography, history philosophy, political science, psychology and sociology. The aim of this school is to make the work as broad and liberalizing as possible, and to train for the responsibilities of citizenship and public service.

Dean James H. Gilbert, who heads this college, received his B.A. from the University of Oregon in 1903, and his Ph.D. from Columbia in 1907. He has been on the faculty of the University since 1907, and was made dean of the Liberal Arts college in 1925.

College of Arts and Letters

It is the aim of the College of Arts and Letters to train students in the use of languages, and to familiarize them with the ideals and life experiences which the nations have expressed in their literature.

A special course in Remedial English is given to help students who find difficulty in reading and in expressing themselves.

This college consists of the departments of English, Germanic Languages, Greek, Latin, and Romance Languages. It offers the B.A. Degree, and, in conjunction with the Graduate school, M.A. and Ph.D. degrees.

Dean Clarence Valentine Boyer received his Ph.D. from Princeton. He was made dean in 1932, and in 1934 became acting President of the University.

C. Valentine Boyer

Medical School

Dr. Richard D. Dill-Hunt

The University of Oregon Medical School is situated in Portland. At least three years of general, scientific, and classical education are required before a student can be admitted to this school. The number of students allowed to enter each year is limited, and as a consequence only those of superior ability are enrolled. The Medical School grants the degree of Doctor of Medicine after a four-year professional curriculum.

Pre-medical curricula are offered at both the University and College. The Medical School is rated as Class A by the American Medical Association, and is considered one of the best in the United States. At present it is the only medical school in the Pacific Northwest.

Extension Division

The Extension division brings the educational facilities of the University to those who are not able to attend the regular sessions. It is organized into five departments: correspondence study, Portland center, statewide center, visual instruction, and social welfare.

Dean Alfred Powers received his B.A. degree from the University of Oregon in 1910. He became dean of the Extension division in 1926, having been assistant director from 1922 to 1926. He is widely known as an author as well as educator.

Teaching centers in the past have been located in Astoria, Hood River, The Dalles, Pendleton, La Grande, Baker, Bend, Klamath Falls, Medford, Grants Pass, Roseburg, Marshfield, Coquille, Cottage Grove, Newberg, Junction City, Salem, Mt. Angel and Eugene.

Alfred Powers

School of Journalism

Eric W. Allen

The School of Journalism was organized as a department in 1912, and was made a school in 1916. This school has three purposes: to fit its students for a cultured life through a liberal education; to prepare them for the various branches of journalism, advertising, and publishing; and to contribute to the progress of American Journalism.

Each year the school sponsors a press conference which is attended by representatives of practically every newspaper in the state, and at which problems relating to journalism are discussed.

Eric W. Allen has been dean of this school since its establishment in 1916. He received his B.A. degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Graduate School

Students who have graduated and wish to continue their education are enrolled in the Graduate School, which grants advanced degrees, including that of Doctor of Philosophy.

This school functions in six divisions: the academic year at Eugene; the academic year in the Portland extension center; the summer session at Eugene; the Eugene post session; the summer session at Portland, and the Medical School in Portland. The Graduate School is itself a part of the Graduate Division of the State System of Higher Education, which has jurisdiction over all except strictly professional graduate work.

George Rebec, Ph.D., is the dean, and director of the Graduate Division of the State System of Education.

George Rebec

Home Economics

In the Department of Home Economics emphasis is put on the practical application of the courses offered rather than the scientific. The courses offered are: clothing construction and selection, food preparation and selection, and a one year sequence which includes a term of home management, home furnishing, and child care and training. Additional one term courses are textiles, principles of dietetics, and camp cookery.

Miss Mabel Wood has been associated with this department since the fall of 1932. She is a graduate of Oregon State College, and received her M.A. degree from Columbia University.

Miss Mary Starr, a graduate of the University of Washington, is the assistant.

Mabel Wood

Information Service

The University of Oregon Information Service is a unit in the unified Division of Information of the Oregon State System of Higher Education, created by the State Board of Higher Education in 1932. The University Information Service, as a service department for the entire institution, edits the various institutional publications such as catalogs, booklets, and research bulletins, disseminates the official news of the institution through the various press channels, and handles the mailing of University publications.

Charles D. Byrne is director of the unified Division of Information for the State System. He holds baccalaureate and master's degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Charles D. Byrne

Karl Onthank

Personnel Division

On the staff of the Personnel Division and the Personnel Administration are the deans of Men and Women, and, intimately associated with it, the Employment Secretary. The deans at Oregon are "guides, philosophers, and friends" to students. They seek to help them find their way through the maze of curricular and other requirements and the puzzling and sometimes conflicting alternatives of college life. They supplement the teaching of the classroom with individual information and personal counsel. Through assistance in the analysis of his own abilities the requirements, opportunities and compensation of occupations, and the opportunities open to him at the University, the individual student is aided toward making the choices which will enable him to get the largest personal development from his college experience and to discover the occupation which for him is likely to be most satisfactory.

The Dean of Personnel Administration, Karl W. Onthank, has general charge of this division and its co-ordination with related University activities.

Virgil D. Earl is Dean of Men. To his office men students go for information and counsel of every kind. He is adviser to the men's organizations, particularly the fraternities and living groups. Applications are made to him for help from scholarships and loan funds.

Mrs. Hazel P. Schwering, Dean of Women, is friend and counsellor of women students. Her office is a center of their activities. Women's organizations look to her for guidance and inspiration.

Mrs. Alice B. Macduff, Assistant Dean of Women, participates in the activities of the Dean of Women's office and, in addition, is housing secretary.

The student employment office assists students in finding part-time work. Under the guidance of Miss Janet Smith, secretary, students have found an astonishing number and variety of jobs this year.

University of Oregon Federation

The fall of 1933 saw the formation of a new University service organization, the University of Oregon Federation. Although new in set-up, the organization represents nothing new in personnel or membership, as it is composed of five separate organizations, all of which have been active in University affairs for varying lengths of time. The participating organizations are: the Oregon Alumni Association, the Oregon Dads, the Oregon Mothers, the Associated Friends, and the Affiliated Living Groups.

The constitution of the Federation sets forth as the purpose of the organization thus: "To represent the common interests of the five participating organizations and to promote the interests and increase the usefulness of the University of Oregon and higher education in the state of Oregon."

Since its inception the Federation has taken a very active part in the off-campus affairs of the University. It keeps a vigilant watch over the happenings on the Oregon campus; it stands ready to swing in on any program where its membership can be of help to the administration, is prepared to initiate any activity or program that will react to the benefit of the University and higher education, and to foster and further beneficial relations between the University and the state at large.

Officers of the Federation, elected to serve until April 1, 1935, are: Earle Wellington, secretary of the Oregon Dads, president; Lynn McCready, representing the Oregon Alumni Association, vice-president; Robert K. Allen, alumni secretary, temporary secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Walter M. Cook, representing the Oregon Mothers, Dr. Irvin R. Fox, representing the Associated Friends, and Jack Cate, representing the Affiliated Living Groups, directors.

The Federation was organized with the purpose of federating, not consolidating, the participating organizations. It was felt that, while each of the member-groups played its individual and important part in the promotion of the welfare of the University, many interests were common to all, and that such a federation could promote these interests more effectively.

In the formation of this new University body, it is pointed out, the new group affords a means by which the state board of higher education or University administrative officials could easily and effectively contact from thirty to thirty-five thousand ardent friends of higher education in seeking support or counsel. The board of directors has pledged itself by word and by action to the support of the state system of higher education and a greater University. The experiment of Federating the five such off-campus groups is thought to be unique to the University of Oregon.

Oregon Alumni Active In State

Largest and oldest of the organizations represented in the new University of Oregon Federation is the University of Oregon Alumni Association, composed of more than 15,000 graduates and former students of the University.

The alumni have always been an important factor in the growth and well being of their alma mater, and the Association, through the office it maintains on the campus, has been an important though unofficial adjunct to the administrative offices of the University.

President of the Alumni Association for 1934 was Ralph H. Cake, '13, Joe Freck, '31, was vice-president. Omar Palmer, '32; Merle Chessman, '09; and Carl Nelson, '19, were directors on the Alumni Council. Robert K. Allen, '32, was named to serve another year as alumni secretary and treasurer of the Association.

One of the important activities of the alumni office is the publication of OLD OREGON, a monthly magazine devoted to the interests of the University and news of alumni and alumni affairs. OLD OREGON was re-established in March of 1933 after a lapse in publication of almost a year following drastic budget slashes in the spring of 1932. In the publication of OLD OREGON the alumni have attempted to give to the Association membership not only a comprehensive news digest of alumni but an accurate picture of the higher education situation from month to month and coverage of faculty and student happenings on the University campus. Because of this policy, OLD OREGON has begun to elicit interest from a wider reading group which includes Dads, Mothers, and Friends of higher education.

One of the important happenings in alumni affairs during the year was the re-establishment of the Portland Alumni Association as an active organization, under the guidance of Bert S. Gooding, '26. During the Oregon State-Oregon game in Portland, the Portland group sponsored an alumni dance and theatre party to which all alumni and University friends in the state were invited, and in which several thousand participated.

As evidence of the fact that the alumni were definitely starting out on a program of revived interest, following the set-back that came after the strenuous campaign against the Zorn-Macpherson bill, was the unusually large attendance at Homecoming in November, 1933. More than 500 alumni returned to the campus for this event, despite the heavy activities that followed the next week-end in Portland, when Portland Alumni acted as hosts to the entire alumni body of the state.

Executives

Oregon Dads and Mothers

A very active organization in behalf of the University during the last year has been the Oregon Dads which has worked hand in hand with other such groups. The Dads group was organized during the administration of Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, and has been growing ever since as a very influential off-campus organization.

At the annual Dad's Day meeting of the group, held October 21, 1933, W. Lair Thompson was re-elected for a second time as president of the group. Other officers named for the year 1933-34 were: Roy Raley, vice-president; Earle Wellington, secretary; and Merle Chessman, Arthur L. Fields, Walter M. Cook, Rev. John W. Beard, and Thomas H. Tongue, directors. Earle Wellington is the representative of the Oregon Dads on the Board of Directors of the University of Oregon Federation.

An important change in the constitution of the Oregon Dads was voted at the October meeting when it was decided to change the membership restrictions so as to include all fathers of former as well as present students of the University in the membership of the organization. With more than 300 dads in attendance at the fall meeting, it was declared that the 1933 Dad's Day was the most successful in the seven years of the organization's existence.

An association which provides for the participation by mothers of Oregon students in the affairs of the University is the Oregon Mothers, organized the same year as the Dad's group under the guidance of Dr. Hall. The Oregon Mothers have especially interested themselves in living conditions and health facilities on the Oregon campus. During the past year they did yeoman service before the state Board of Higher Education in assuring the continuation of the present personnel in the Dean of Women's office.

Officers of the Oregon Mothers are: Mrs. A. M. Dibble, president; Mrs. Walter M. Cook, honorary president; Mrs. W. G. Hare, vice-president; Mrs. L. A. Henderson, treasurer; and directors: Mrs. E. M. Burns, Mrs. Edgar W. Smith, Mrs. H. C. Galey, Mrs. H. McCall, Mrs. A. W. Norblad, Mrs. T. J. Aughinbaugh, Mrs. Jack Spence, Mrs. Horace B. Linton, Mrs. C. W. Keene, Mrs. J. A. Zehntbauer, Mrs. Charles T. Chamberlain, Mrs. George Hug, Mrs. D. D. Hobart, Mrs. George Brice, and Mrs. E. E. Gore.

Oregon Mothers hold their annual meetings on the campus during Junior Week-end, at which time personnel and administrative officers of the University discuss with the mothers many problems and policies that affect the welfare of University students. The Oregon Mothers was one of the most effective organizations that took the field against the Zorn-Macpherson initiative measure a year ago.

Associated Friends

An outgrowth of the campaign against the Zorn-Macpherson bill in 1932 is the organization known as the Associated Friends of the University of Oregon. The body is formed primarily of persons who have no connection with the University, either through the alumni, the dads or the mothers, yet persons who maintain an active interest in higher education and the University. Its purpose is to give to these people an organization through which they may direct their activities in the interests of the University. One of the primary interests of the Associated Friends is to advise prospective students of the advantages of the various departments of the state system of higher education and to counsel and advise with them on matters pertaining to their future plans for furthering their education. While the organization is primarily interested in the University, this work, since it includes contact with many hundred high school seniors each year, involves setting forth the advantages of selecting the educational departments of the state system wherein the students real interest lies, and leaving the final choice up to the student. Officers of the Associated Friends are: Dr. Irvin R. Fox, president; John Anderson, secretary-treasurer; and directors: Bertha Comings, Ed Bailey, Clifford Manerud, Olaf Houglum, and Clarence Lombard.

Fox

The last of the organizations represented in the University of Oregon Federation is the Affiliated Living Groups, composed of men's and women's living organizations on the campus. The principal work of this organization is done in connection with the Associated Friends in the work of meeting and advising with prospective students of the state system of higher education. The interest of these member sororities and fraternities is two-fold. First, to set forth the advantages of continuing higher educational endeavor in a student's native state, and second, to acquaint prospective students with campus and fraternity life on the Oregon campus, so that the high school seniors may more wisely make their choice of an institution at which to continue their education.

Jack Cate has served during the year as president of this group and as its representative on the board of the U. of O. Federation.

During the summer of 1933, the first year of the joint program of the Associated Friends and the Affiliated Living Groups, several thousand personal letters were exchanged between the office of these groups and prospective students. Also 10,000 copies of a small publication, "The University Times" was mailed to every high school graduate. The effectiveness of the program was shown by an 8 per cent increase in enrollment, as compared to a 16 per cent decrease in old students returning to school. The office was maintained by Robert Miller, a graduate of 1933.

Senior Class

The class of 1934 leaves behind it four years of happy achievement. John Kendall was officially made president of the class with the presentation of the then traditional green-lid at an assembly held at McArthur Court early in the fall of 1930. The other officers were Billie Eastman, Joan Cox, and Bob DeGraff. The annual Frosh Banquet, Homecoming bonfire the night before the Oregon-U.C.L.A. game, Frosh Glee, an all campus dance, and the class picnic in the spring were also activities of the year. Kenneth Tormachlen was chairman of this picnic, assisted by Mary Lou Muncy, Phillip Bell, Andy Brown, Vince Miesen and Ken Lawson. Athletics also were successful this year, thirty-eight frosh numerals being awarded.

As sophomores, the class was led by Alvin McKelligan, Caroline Card, Helen Burns and Julius Rehal. The class dance, the Sophomore Informal was held amid Arctic scenes of igloos and northern stars. They held a beard-growing contest which was the occasion for another dance, the Whiskerino Shuffle. The class picnic was held at Swimmer's Delight spring term.

While juniors they were prominent in campus activities throughout the year. The Junior-Senior dance was held at the Campa Shoppe on Armistice Day with that theme carried out in the decorations. Louis Vannice was the junior chairman. Junior Shine Day was held on March 8. Hubert Totton was general chairman and was assisted by Glen Hieber, Jane Cook, Helen Burns, Harold Birkinshaw, Richard Wallsinger, Don Caswell, and Ralph Schomp. Junior Weekend wound up the activities for the junior class this year. The Junior council composed of the four officers of the class to direct the Junior Weekend activities was an innovation of this group. The purpose of this council is to make committee appointments for the weekend and thus eliminate having the responsibility of making all the appointments fall on the president and divides it so that a more representative opinion may be obtained. The class officers were Neal Bush, Evelyn Kennedy, Nancy Suomela, and Julius Rehal.

The last officers to be chosen as undergraduates of this class were Edwin Martindale, Phoebe Greenman, Lucille Coate, and Hubert Totton. The class adviser was Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the College of Social Science. The Junior-Senior dance was held fall term, the Senior Ball winter term, and Senior Leap week came just before exams—And so another class has completed its university career.

Gerlinger, Koyl and Albert Cups

Each year, three awards are made to the outstanding students in the junior and senior classes. The Gerlinger and Koyl cups are presented to the junior boy and girl excelling in distinctive service to the University during their college years, and the Albert cup is awarded to a member of the senior class by popular vote.

Last spring term, Helen Binford received the Gerlinger cup, Sterling Green the Koyl cup, and Cecil Espy the Albert cup.

Fifteen years ago, Mrs. George T. Gerlinger, member of the Board of Regents, first awarded the Gerlinger cup to a junior girl for distinguishing herself in merit, scholarship and service.

Miss Binford was given this award at the Junior Prom held at McArthur Court. She is a member of Delta Gamma sorority, was a member of Kwama, sophomore women's honorary, active in Associated Students affairs and in 1930 was awarded a Student Pilgrimage trip to Europe. She was secretary-treasurer of Alpha Kappa Delta, sociology honorary, a member of Phi Theta Upsilon, women's upperclass service honorary, and a member of Mortar Board, senior women's honorary. During her junior year she was secretary of the Y.W.C.A. This year she was president of the group and was active in Associated Women Students' enterprises.

Charles W. Koyl, graduate of 1911, presented the Junior class with a cup to be given the junior man who had distinguished himself in scholarship, character and leadership. The award is made by a committee of the faculty.

This award is also made at the Junior Prom. Sterling Green, a member of Theta Chi fraternity, is best known in journalism activities, having worked on the Oregana, having been managing editor of the Emerald last year and being editor this year. He is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism honorary for men, and was president of the group during his junior year. He also has been a member of the Co-op Board.

In 1921, Joseph H. Albert of Salem presented a cup to be awarded each year by a vote of the senior class to the member who made the greatest progress towards the ideals in character, service, and wholesome influence.

Cecil Espy received this award last spring which was presented at the Failing-Beekman speaking contest. His activities included varsity debate, Y.M.C.A. cabinet, Homecoming and Junior Weekend committees, Rally chairman, Freshman baseball, Friars, senior men's honorary, Delta Sigma Rho, national debate honorary, senior class president. He is a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Junior women are chosen members of this senior women's honorary at the campus luncheon during Junior Week-end in Spring term. During the luncheon the members of Mortar Board march around the campus in their caps and gowns and as each junior girl is chosen, she is handed a rose and steps into line. They are selected upon the basis of service, scholarship and leadership. Throughout the year they are active in campus activities.

During Senior Leap-week at the end of Spring term, Mortar Board holds its annual formal ball at the Eugene Hotel. During this weekend the women are the hostesses and invite the men to shows, dances and all the campus affairs. The men are usually guests of the women at dinner before the ball and instead of doing the usual escorting, are escorted.

Helen Binford, Caroline Card, Jean Failing, Eileen Hickson, Geraldine Hickson, Eleanor Coombe, Nancy Suomela, Ida Mae Nickels, Dorothy Marsters, Lois Greenwood, Virginia Hartje and May Masterton.

Friars

In 1910, Friars, senior service honorary for men, was established on this campus. Junior men who have distinguished themselves as leaders in service are chosen as members.

Half of the members are chosen during the campus luncheon Junior Week-end. The members, dressed in the habit of monks, with folded arms, march through the campus and when they come to the junior chosen he is tapped on the shoulder and then falls in line. This activity is looked forward to during the Week-end. After all the members have been found, their huge copper scroll containing the names of the Friars is hung by chains to a tree in front of Deady Hall and is left there until sundown.

The rest of the members are pledged during Homecoming Week-end at the Homecoming dance. Again the members robed as monks march through the crowded dance floor and tap their pledges on the shoulder.

The juniors, under the leadership of George Birnie, assisted by Althea Peterson, Edward Meserve, and Gail McCredie, have been prominent in campus activities during the entire year. The class adviser for the year was George Turnbull, Professor of Journalism.

Fall term the Junior-Senior dance, under the direction of Nancy Archbold and Corwin Calavan took the form of a visit to Purgatory. This was held at the Koko-Nut Grove. Junior Shine day was the main activity of the class during Winter term. It was held February 28 under the leadership of Richard Shearer, general chairman, assisted by Jim Wells, Bill Davis, Helen Stinger, Jack Mulder and Fred Whittlesey. This year the coeds were given their opportunity to shine the shoes of the campus as well as the boys.

Junior Week-end was the outstanding event of Spring term, with campus day, water carnival, luncheon, prom and canoe fete holding sway. Last year, George Hibbard was the general chairman. The Junior Council, composed of the officers of the junior class, directed the appointments of all committees.

As freshmen they were kept busy keeping the yellow of the "O" on Skinner's Butte from being smeared with Corvallis' orange and black. Frosh Glee, the dance given for the entire campus, was under the direction of Walt Gray. They had their bonfire during Homecoming Week-end, the tug-of-war with the sophomores and the big bonfire in the spring when they burned their freshmen lids, symbolizing that they were no longer "green freshmen." A picnic at the end of Spring term ended the activities of the year. The officers were, Howard Steib, Kay Saunders and Robert Zurcher.

This class of 1935 had the unusual distinction as sophomores to be the largest class in the University, having seven hundred members. The officers were Bill Davis, Louise Thomas, Nancy Archbold and Edward Meserve. Their first activity of the year was the Sophomore Informal with a Night in Holland motif. Charles Clay was the general chairman. In the spring they held a whisker growing contest with awards for the best beards. The picnic was held at Swimmer's Delight, where an afternoon and evening were spent in swimming, dancing, rowing and eating.

Junior Week-End

Junior Shine Day, one of the major activities of the Junior class, was held February 28. Richard Shearer, general chairman, was assisted by Jim Wells, Bill Davis and Helen Stinger, publicity; Jack Mulder, materials, and Fred Whittlesey, construction. Ticket sales were made at the individual houses by the women of the class. Stands were placed in front of the old library, in front of Condon, and between Oregon and Commerce halls. College shine stands cooperated with the class and closed during the day as well as donating their materials to be used. The slogan for the day was, "Both shoes and sox get a shine, step right up and pay your dime."

Junior Week-end held during Spring term is one of the biggest events of the entire school year and is always anxiously awaited by the campus and the many people who visit the campus at that time. Last year George Hibbard was chairman of the affair, Marshall Wright was assistant chairman and they were aided by James Ferguson, Virginia Hartje, Caroline Card, David Eyre, Helen Burns, Richard Wallsinger, Edward Field, Edwin Cross, Donald Caswell, Geraldine Hickson and Julius Rehal.

Chosen by the students of the University through popular nomination and vote, Margaret Wagner was elected Queen over all Junior Week-end events. She was known as Queen Margaret I. The attendants were chosen from those ranking highest in the voting. They were: Dorothy Cunningham, Marion Vinson, Ida Mae Nickels, and Lucille Coate. Each feature of the week-end program was presented before the Queen and her royal court. Virginia Hartje was chairman of the Queen's reign and was aided by George Bennett and Pat McKenna.

The official opening of Junior Week-end started with the Campus luncheon held under the trees in front of the old library. Here a huge throne platform was built. The entire royal party marched across the campus and up to the throne where the coronation ceremony took place. After the coronation, the University orchestra gave a short concert and tumbling and other stunts entertained Queen Margaret I and hundreds of students and their guests.

It was after this that the black robed Friars and Mortar Board marched around the campus and chose their members. Many mothers were on the campus for the week-end and had the thrill of seeing their sons and daughters chosen for the senior men and women's service honoraries.

Junior Prom

The Junior Prom Committee was headed by James Ferguson. He was assisted by Charles Thomas, Lucille Coate, Paul Wagner, Alice Wedemeyer, Marian Vinson, Mark Cory, Kimball Page, Edward Schweiker, John Pennington, and Caroline Hahn.

A spring flower idea was carried out, and the dance was held at McArthur Court.

The Grand March was led by the Queen and her Royal party.

The Koyl and Gerlinger Cups

were awarded to the most outstanding junior man and woman.

Campus Day had Richard Wallsinger as chairman, William Douthit as assistant chairman, and they were aided by Gilbert Olinger and Norval Hamilton. The Frosh numeralsmen painted the "O" on Skinner's Butte, and the traditional Frosh-Sophomore tug-of-war took place Saturday morning.

The water carnival was managed by Edward Field, Bernice Baynard, Eldon Woodin, Robert Sleeter, and Darrel Cornell. Swimming races, diving contests, and canoe races were the main events.

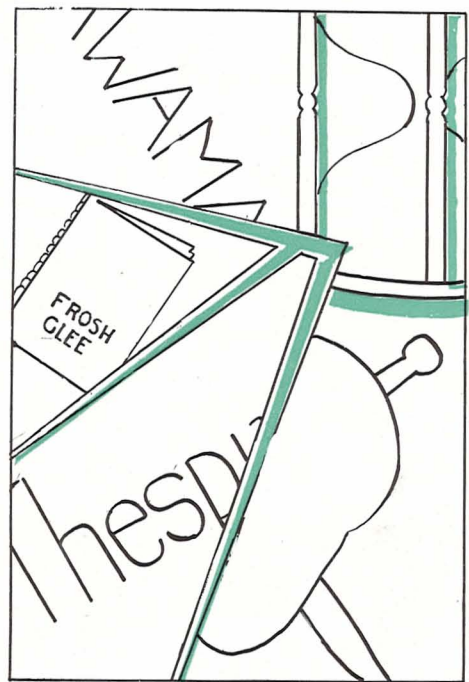

The motif of the Canoe Fete was Fairyland. Each float came through huge curtains placed on an arch over the mill-race, with colored lights playing on them, and brought to life many well known pictures from Mother Goose Rhymes, Grimm's Fairy Tales and many of the other well known fairy tale books. Music was heard across the race as each float came down, the orchestra being on a platform opposite the seats. The Queen and party came down before the other floats in a huge barge and her throne was placed opposite the audience.

Gamma Phi Beta and Sigma Nu were the winners of the Canoe Fete cup. Chairman of the Canoe Fete was David Eyre, assisted by Edward Martindale, Robert Dodge, Evelyn Kennedy, Hubert Totton, Phoebe Greenman, Charles Burrows, Dorothy Cunningham and Bob Downey.

Junior Week-end was completed with the program for Mother's Day which came on the Sunday following all the activities. It was crowded with many teas, banquets, and meetings in which all Oregon Mothers participated. Mothers were guests for Sunday dinner at the respective living organizations of their sons and daughters.

Helen Burns was chairman of Mother's Day activities, assisted by Glen Hieber, May Masterton, Louise Barclay, Don Caswell, Helen Binford, and Mary Lou Patrick.

Underclass Organizations

The class of 1936 took its place in campus affairs and played an important part in them throughout the year. Guided by Jerry Denslow, Peggy Chessman, Virginia Proctor, and Robert Thomas, they are able to look back upon a highly successful year. The class adviser was Calvin Crumbaker, professor of Economics.

Fall term, the Sophomore Informal, an all campus dance, was given at McArthur court. Ed Labbe was the chairman.

The annual Whiskerino Shuffle was held on February 16 at Gerlinger Hall. Bill Paddock was in charge. Junior Week-end the annual Soph-Frosh tug-of-war over the mill race was held.

The freshman class of the University followed all Oregon traditions, improving upon the traditional bonfire by inaugurating a fireworks flare, to make the letters "U of O" on the Butte Homecoming Week-end. Al Davis was chairman and Don Thomas assistant.

Frosh Glee, the annual dance given by the freshmen for the entire campus, was held Spring term with Craig Finley in charge. The class picnic was held the last of Spring term just before finals.

The officers of the class were Fred Hammond, Jean Stevenson, Dorothy Rinehart and Cy Cook. The class advisers were Virgil Earl, Dean of Men, and Mrs. Hazel P. Schwering, Dean of Women.

Each year, fifteen outstanding Freshman men are selected to become members of the Skull and Dagger underclass honorary for Sophomores. Pledging takes place in the Spring term at the Frosh Glee, all-campus Freshman dance. Membership is determined upon the basis of campus activities, scholarship and personality.

The organization provides a goal towards which the Freshman men can work, and provides a basis of training for membership in the upperclass honoraries, both service and professional.

Skull and Dagger offers opportunity for practical experience in extra-curricular fields. The group, although honorary from the standpoint of selection, is characterized by active participation in student functions. The training and experience received through the channels of Skull and Dagger work equips the sophomore men to play an intelligent part in upperclass activities. The group for men corresponds to Kwama for the sophomore women.

Ushering at banquets, games, concerts, and assemblies has been the main duty of the members, besides the general purpose of upholding the University traditions.

In addition to the usual activities of the year, Skull and Dagger was sponsor of a Hello dance given at the beginning of Fall term at McArthur Court to give the new students a chance to become acquainted. The night of the Junior-Senior dance, which underclass men are not allowed to attend, they sponsored the Underclass Mix for all sophomores and freshmen. Ed Labbe was in charge. A joint dinner was held with Kwama, sophomore women's honorary, Fall term at the Alpha Phi house. Spring term a formal dance was held in conjunction with Kwama.

Kwama

Kwama

Nineteen Freshman women are selected each year at the Mortar Board Ball to become members of Kwama, Sophomore women's service honorary. They are chosen for outstanding leadership, service and scholarship. They lead in the serving of all campus luncheons, homecoming banquets, and campus teas.

Present members of the organization include: Adela Sheehy, president; Virginia Younie, vice-president; Ann-Reed Burns, secretary-treasurer; Gladys McMillan, Peggy Chessman, Mary Jane Jenkins, Eleanor Eide, Betty Ohlemiller, Roberta Moody, Betty Gearhart, Henriette Horak, Ruth Mae Chilcote, Elizabeth Rix, Evelyn Hays, Ebba Wicks, Ruth Eaton, Eleanor Norblad and Elma Giles.

Thespian

The Freshman women's service honorary is Thespian. An outstanding Freshman girl is chosen from each living organization and from the independents. Throughout the year they serve at teas and assist in all campus problems. Each term they give a tea for Freshmen women and have a campus survey for the Big Sisters.

Active members of the group are: Hester Howard, president; Eleanor French, vice-president; Lois Day, secretary-treasurer; Jean Pinney, Margery Kissling, Elinor Stewart, Nan Smith, Betty Coon, Jessie Long, Grace Peck, LeNelle Mathews, Doris Bird, Mabel Finchum, Cynthia Cornell, Dorothy Hagge, Vivian Sipe, Gwendolene Vinyard, Starla Parvin, Martha McCall, Thelma Cook, Phyllis McCarthy and Janet Hughes.

LAW

Wayne L. Morse

School of Law

Oregon Law School Active In Service for the Public

The University of Oregon Law School is a member of the Association of American Law Schools and its standards are approved by the American Bar Association.

It is required that all students who enter the law school must have satisfactorily completed two years of undergraduate work and the applicant must have met the requirements for the junior certificate.

The School of Law in cooperation with the College of Social Science and the School of Business Administration offers a six-year curriculum combining work in social sciences or business administration and law and leading to two degrees in the law school.

The Oregon Law Review is a magazine published quarterly to promote legal research and productive scholarship from the students. It is an official publication of the Oregon Bar Association. Both the students and faculty contribute articles in each issue. Charles G. Howard, of the law faculty, is editor-in-chief of the publication.

Wayne L. Morse was appointed dean of the Law School in 1931. His administration has been characterized by a notable improvement in law school standards. He believes that responsibility for the standards of the legal profession falls to a large extent upon American law schools; and he believes further that devotion to mass production in education has caused too many college presidents and law school deans to sacrifice quality for quantity.

Besides his curricular duties, Dean Morse is active in the field of legal research and public service. He is director of Oregon State Crime Survey, a member of the Oregon State Commission for reform of legal procedure, and has recently been honored by election to the American Council of Institute of Pacific relations. In addition to published articles and book reviews, he is the author of two books: A Survey of The Grand Jury System, and the Oregon Crime Survey. He is also author of material published in Commonwealth Review, The Annals, and Mental Hygiene.

Law School Student Body

The student body of the Oregon Law School is an organization composed of those students enrolled in the School of Law. For the past year the membership totaled 114. Officers are: William Goodwin, president; Otto Vonderheit, secretary; William Kinley, treasurer; and William Whitely, sergeant-at-arms.

Fall term the student body sponsored a smoker to which all law students and faculty members were invited. Winter term the annual Barrister's Ball was held, and another dance was given during spring term.

From time to time prominent Portland attorneys speak to law students under the auspices of the law student body. The subjects of these talks pertain to the problems that confront the law student after graduation.

Moot trials with the students taking the part of court officials are held Spring term. At these trials actual court cases are tried.

A new feature of the law school this year is the honor roll. The seven men who obtain the highest grades of their class in law school are selected for this distinction.

Without supervision by the faculty, the law student body sponsors the student honor system. During examinations students are placed on their honor and in the twelve years that this system has been in use there have been few violators. This school is the only one in the University employing this code.

The Hilton prize contest, which is open to all law students, was won by Karl Huston last year. Prizes are given to the students who present the best oral discussions of a legal subject selected by the faculty of the School of Law. The first prize of fifty dollars is awarded by Mr. Frank H. Hilton of Portland, and the second and third prizes of twenty-five and fifteen dollars respectively, are awarded by the School of Law.

The faculty of the law school, combined with the law student body, has encouraged the organization of the pre-legal group. As the name implies, this organization is composed of those students who expect to enter the law school. Under the leadership of Orval Thompson, the group held a "get-acquainted" dance winter term. Another social function was planned for Spring term.

The founders of Phi Delta Phi were pioneers in the field of professional Greek-letter fraternities. At the outset members of college fraternities were encouraged to join the new organization and this has been the policy up to the present time.

Chapters, which are called inns, are of two classes: student inns limited to class A-1 American Law School Association rating law schools; barrister inns composed of alumni members in most important cities. The student inns are named after distinguished jurists and lawyers usually from the fraternity's membership.

MEDICINE

Dean Dillehunt

The University of Oregon Medical School

The history of the University of Oregon Medical School from the day forty-seven years ago when it opened its doors in a tiny two-room building to the present time when it occupies a plant constructed at a cost of two and a half million dollars, is a story of intense interest and one which is interwoven with the development of medicine in the Northwest. During this period the school has progressed rapidly and has taken its place among outstanding medical teaching institutions. It is rated as a Class "A" Medical School by the American Medical Association.

Particularly important have been the advancements along the lines of scientific investigation. Many valuable medical discoveries have been made by the members of the faculty, all of whom are interested in solving original problems through clinical or laboratory research. Such individual work not only adds to the aggregate of medical knowledge and to the effectiveness of treatment, but also makes their instruction of vital value to the student. The Medical School Library, which receives a large number of current journals, and the unified system of recording case histories are aids to the attainment of high standards in research. Projects now under consideration are extremely varied and represent every field of medical science, many of them being closely related to the problems of Oregon and its neighboring states. The nutritional and vitamin values of Oregon food products, the ultra-violet component of Oregon sunlight, goitre in the Northwest, the anatomy of the cerebellum, diabetes, sinusitis, diseases related to the blood corpuscles, and cardiac pathology are a few of the subjects being studied. Much valuable work has been made possible by grants to the school for this purpose by the Rockefeller Foundation. Dr. Richard B. Dillehunt, Dean of the Medical School, has done much to foster the interest in this type of endeavor without which it would be impossible to maintain the institution's present high rating.

Dr. Harold B. Myers, associate dean, occupies the position of professor of pharmacology. He came to the University in 1915 from the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City. The University of Oregon Medical School occupies one hundred and eighty acres in Sam Jackson Park on Marquam Hill overlooking the City of Portland, a site ideally located.

Dr. Harold B. Myers

University of Oregon Medical School on Marquam Hill

Founded in 1887, the University of Oregon Medical School has been the only institution of its kind in the Northwest since the Willamette University Medical Department was merged with it in 1913. It possesses excellent facilities for the care of the sick and for teaching purposes in a group of buildings composed of the Medical School, Multnomah County Hospital, Doernbecher Memorial Hospital for Children, and the Outpatient Clinic.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Thomas H. Tongue

A. S. U. O. Finishes Successful Work

Each year several hundred students enter the University of Oregon because it offers to them the scholastic opportunities which they desire. Oregon offers not only offers fine professors, libraries, and laboratories; it offers not only the opportunity of developing the intellect, but also of developing character, personality, and judgment. It is in this respect that the Associated Students has its place in campus life.

I believe that I can say with confidence that this has been a successful year for the Associated Students of the University of Oregon. Its athletic teams, its daily newspaper, yearbook, band, and forensic entrants have ranked this year with the best on the Pacific Coast. Improvements have been made in the organization of its activities and in the operation of its student government. In financial success the year has far exceeded every expectation, making possible a conservative expansion of its activities.

Perhaps the most significant feature of the year has been the renewal of confidence and enthusiasm on the campus, the Old Oregon spirit. Last year hard times, campus unrest, and the turmoil in higher education combined to undermine student morale. But though some of those factors still remain to be grappled with, a new Oregon spirit has arisen, perhaps not as loud and boisterous as in the years gone by, but just as sincere and loyal. It has shown itself not only in athletics, but in the cooperation and enthusiasm with which almost every student enterprise has been carried out this year.

Oregon spirit is the most sacred and venerable tradition on the campus, a heritage coming down to us through nearly sixty years, from the early days of Deady and Villard, and it is the charge of every Oregon man and woman to preserve and maintain this great tradition.

THOMAS H. TONGUE,
President Associated Students.

Associated Students

Tom Tongue, president of the Associated Students of the University of Oregon, visioned the purpose of this year's organization as centered about the building up of student morale. He believes the University has taken great strides in the development of student spirit, as evidenced particularly by attendance at rallies and games and by enthusiastic participation, by large turnouts for assemblies and concerts, and by a general feeling of cooperation in the student body.

One of the important factors in bring about a manifestation of student enthusiasm was Oregon's victorious football team. Rallies received a new boost. Not only did a winning football team mean further prestige for Oregon, but also a successful financial year.

Elected unanimously in the spring of 1933, Tom Tongue proved to be an outstanding leader. His election to Phi Beta Kappa as a member of senior six was also evidence of his ability as a student.

The associated students sponsored music in a number of ways. The University of Oregon band, under the direction of John H. Stehn, made a remarkably fine showing, and added much to the entertainment at games as well as to the schedule of concerts. A special accredited male chorus was formed as a section of Polyphonic, under the direction of Roy Bryson, assistant professor of music. The appearance of Roland Hayes, internationally famous negro tenor, was sponsored by the associated students, all students being admitted free.

The plan of sending a representative to the annual National Student Federation convention, which was discontinued last year, was resumed. Tom Tongue, Oregon's delegate to the convention, which was held this year in Washington, D.C., received many valuable suggestions to aid in the revision of the A.S.U.O. constitution as well as becoming familiar with the student governments of many of the American universities and colleges.

The constitutional committee which devoted nearly the whole year to a study of the constitution of the associated students and those of other colleges and universities in the United States was headed by Glen Hieber. Other members were: Corwin Calavan, Walter Gray, George Birnie, Bill C. Davis, Malcolm Bauer, Geraldine Hickson, Helen Binford, Virginia Hartje, George Bennett, John Kendall, and Charles Kennedy.

Hugh E. Rosson, graduate manager, believes that much progress has been made this year in putting the University associated students in a better financial condition, in spite of the optional fee payment ruling Spring term in 1934.

Students Share Co-op Benefits

Officers of the board, elected last spring by the student body are: George Hibbard, president; Sterling Green, vice-president, and Orval Thompson, secretary. The remaining members of the board this year are: Dean James H. Gilbert, Dean John F. Bovard, faculty members: Ted Pursley and Bud Johns.

Marion McClain is manager of the store and is assisted by a staff of eight members, five of whom are students at the University. It has always been the policy of the Co-op management, Mr. McClain states, to employ as many students in the store as possible. This enables a number of worthy students each year to earn a part of their expenses while attending the University and provides the store with clerks who are acquainted with the students and understand their needs and desires. Every person now employed at the Co-op store is either a student, graduate student, or alumnus of the University of Oregon.

The Co-operative store, located centrally between the campus and the University business district, was established in 1920 by the executive committee of the Associated Students to fill a long-felt need for a convenient place where students could purchase standard collegiate supplies at reasonable prices. The store now carries a complete line of text books used for University classes, and general college supplies ranging from alarm clocks to slide rules.

A serviceable feature of the Co-op store is the rental library, which contains over eight hundred volumes of "best sellers," both fiction and non-fiction. The rental library was started in 1927 as a private venture. It was then known as the "High Hat" and was located in an unfinished room above the College Side. When the amateur librarians graduated in 1929 they sold their stock of books to the Co-op store, which has operated the library since. Until this year, the library was maintained on the Co-op balcony, but during fall term it was moved to a vantage point near the door of the building, where several hundred students make use of its facilities each week.

The Co-op store, with its stock, is valued at approximately thirty thousand dollars, and all profits realized from its management contribute directly to the general fund of the A. S.U.O. It has always been a dependable source of revenue to the student body, and although the recent depression caused a reduction in total sales, at no time did the Co-op store cease to be a decided asset in all ways to the student and faculty of the University.

Homecoming Dance

Homecoming Colorful Event

The same old spirit of homecoming prevailed this year at Oregon's annual welcome-home, although the usual frosh bonfire was supplanted by colored flares forming an O on Skinner's Butte, and the array of welcome signs was replaced by a rally parade in which each house was represented by a float.

Jack Cate, general chairman of the homecoming committee, was responsible for the installation of the new features and for the excellent organization and work of the student group which arranged for the entertainment of the alumni during their visit.

Registration began Friday afternoon. In the evening the rally parade foreshadowed the Oregon-Utah football game by winding through the city streets. Steam whistles, sirens, circular saws, anvils and blasting powder contributed their part to bring the parade within the hearing of all persons residing within a ten-mile radius of Eugene. The float entered by Pi Kappa Alpha and Chi Omega won first prize, depicting Oregon as a giant killer surrounded by dead giants. The frosh flaming O, flaring in green and lemon-yellow on the side of Skinner's Butte, contributed color to the scene, and a rally was conducted by Mickey Vail at the corner of Broadway and Willamette streets after the parade. Later in the evening many students and alumni danced at the Journalism Jam, an all-campus event which is sponsored each year at homecoming by Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi, professional journalism honoraries.

The morning of Saturday, November 4, alumni met at 10:30 in Johnson hall and adjourned at noon to attend a luncheon at John Straub Memorial Hall. It was at this luncheon that Wayne L. Morse, dean of the law school, made his now famous address in reply to earlier speeches made by Roscoe C. Nelson, at that time chairman of the State Board of Higher Education.

The Utah-Oregon football game, with Oregon's badly crippled team winning 26 to 7, provided tense entertainment for student and alumni throughout the afternoon.

Of course the primary social event of the week-end was the annual Homecoming dance, an all-campus affair to which all alumni were invited, held Saturday at McArthur Court.

A band concert at the Music building Sunday afternoon concluded the organized program although alumni were entertained extensively by their respective social organizations. The Murray Warner art museum was opened for the occasion.

Rally Committee

To Mickey Vail and his acrobatic yell squad goes a great deal of credit for the outstanding year in the history of rallies at Oregon. Oregon's tumbling squad is nearly unique; in only four or five other American universities is tumbling made a part of cheer leading. Back somersaults, pitch backs, handsprings, front and back roundoffs, and other feats of agility added much color to games and rallies. Mickey Vail, yell king, has been doing tumbling feats for fourteen years.

Working under a new arrangement, the rally committee proved very successful in securing the cooperation of the student body. This plan, inaugurated in September, puts both the yell squad and the rally committee under the supervision of the yell king. Thus in the present set-up, Mickey Vail has this year acted as yell king, having three "dukes" as assistant yell leaders, and as supervisor of the rally committee working in conjunction with the three rally chairmen. The rally committee of about ten members is directly responsible to these chairmen. Ed Vail, George Schenk and Bill Douthit are "dukes." The rally chairmen are Ed Schweiker, Harold Birkinshaw, and Ralph Schomp.

The Washington game rally, which turned out as a huge success, started the season. Homecoming and the Utah game saw the people of Eugene cooperating in a fine spirit with the students in producing a noise parade which far outstripped its predecessors. Flares which took the place of the traditional frosh bonfire produced a beautiful effect.

The O.S.C. game in Portland, represented the highest point in rallies at Oregon. Four rallies were held Friday and five Saturday, November 10 and 11. Everywhere the University students received praise for the good behavior and sportsmanship displayed. Here the new victory bell was dedicated and the captain of the basketball team was made guardian of the bell. A special assistant rally committee was chosen to help with arrangements for the game and the numerous rallies. A huge duck, cleverly constructed upon a truck, provided between-halves entertainment. The use of yellow and green lids, forming the letters U of O in the rooters' section, proved very effective.

The rally committee was composed of: Dick Shearer, Robert Armstrong, Roland Blantz, Norman Lauritz, Ed Perry, Louis Vanice, Ralph Walstrom, Jim Emmett and Jim Wells. The following were members of the assistant committee for the O. S. C. game: Douglas Ward, Fred Whittlesey, Ed Meserve, Spike Powers, Ed Patton, Bob Zurcher, Jack Helfrich, and Harry Leonard.

Front row: E. Vail, Schenk, Schomp, K. Vail, Birkinshaw, Schweiker
Second row: Wells, Emmett, Meserve, Vannice, Hargreaves, Anderson
Back row: Helfrich, Patton, Zurcher, Burrows, Ward, Brown, Lauritz

Summer School, 1933

The twenty-ninth annual summer session of the University of Oregon was one of the units in the 1933 summer sessions of the Oregon State System of Higher Education. Three sessions were held, one the regular summer session on the campus at Eugene from June 19 to July 28, one the Portland session held at Lincoln high school during this same period, and one the post session at Eugene for all institutions in the Oregon system.

Alfred Powers, director of general extension and summer sessions, served as executive for the entire system and as director in charge of the Portland session. Dr. Dan E. Clark, assistant director of extension and summer sessions, was director of the Eugene session during the post session.

A regular summer session was held at Oregon State Agricultural College under the direction of Dr. M. Elwood Smith. The president of Oregon Normal school, Julius Alonzo Churchill, who is also director of elementary teacher training in the state system of higher education in Oregon, was director of the sessions held at Oregon Normal school, at Southern Oregon Normal school, and Eastern Oregon Normal school.

An athletic coaching school, known as the Summer Sessions of Athletic Coaching was held last year on the Oregon State Campus from June 19 to June 30, serving all institutions of higher education in Oregon. Carl A. Lodell, acting director of athletics at Oregon State College, directed the coaching school. This summer it will be held in Eugene, according to present plans.

Important visiting professors on the campus were: Dr. Grace M. Fernald, associate professor of psychology, University of California at Los Angeles; Eugene G. Steinhof, director of National School of Decorative Art at Vienna; and Dr. Joseph von Bradish, professor of German at State College, New York.

The only requirement for admission to the summer sessions held at the University is ability to do the work, although those who wish credit toward graduation must fill the regular entrance requirement of higher educational institutions in Oregon. A total of ten weeks instruction is possible for those who wished to pursue work during the summer. The normal number of hours which students carry during the regular session is nine term hours, during the post session, six term hours.

In the summer session particular attention is given to requirements of graduate students in planning the work of the campus session. The post session held every year at Eugene is planned particularly for advanced and graduate students although other properly qualified individuals may enter.

Trips sponsored by the physical education department and by the Obsidian club of Eugene drew many of those who enjoyed hiking and out-of-door life. Large turn-outs were obtained for the weekly dances. The campus frolic, the most important summer school social event, provided a great deal of merriment. It included a campus dinner out-of-doors, followed by stunts by various groups, the faculty stunt proving particularly entertaining. Dancing on the tennis courts concluded the frolic.

The Summer Session Sun, a four-page newspaper published every Thursday was distributed free to all members of the faculty and students in both the Portland and Eugene divisions. This weekly paper devoted entirely to summer school matters was edited by the students in the classes of Dean Eric W. Allen and Professor George S. Turnbull in Eugene and Professor Wallace S. Wharton in Portland.

Assemblies twice a week with musical programs under the direction of the department of music, readings by members of the drama division, and addresses on topics of general interest by members of the faculty and visitors were well attended.

DANCES

Collegiates and Alumni at Homecoming Dance

Homecoming Dance

A collegiate motif, with football scenes and pennants from many colleges adorning the walls of McArthur Court, was carried out in the Homecoming dance, November 4, the climax of the celebration to honor the return to the campus of University alumni.

Mrs. Walter Cook, honorary president of the Oregon Mothers club, made the presentation awards at intermission to rally parade float winners.

The feature of the evening was the selection of Friars. Old members of the organization paraded with folded arms through the couples on the floor and added Jack Cate, Gilbert Olinger, Mickey Vail, Ed Martindale, Dick Near, Glen Heiber, and Mark Temple to their line.

Fred Whittlesey was chairman of the dance. Assisting him were Jeff Howard, Gail McCreddie, Frances Helfrich, Josephine Waffle, Bill Paddock, Jim Whitely, and Bill Miller.

Krazy Kopy Krawl

The Coconut Grove of the St. Francis Hotel was duplicated Saturday evening, January 13, at the Campa Shoppe when Alpha Delta Sigma, national men's advertising honorary, held the annual Krazy Kopy Krawl. Grant Theummel was in charge of the affair.

Decorations which "cluttered up" the walls were posters of all descriptions, motion picture advertisements, and a rogue's gallery of prominent students on the campus.

A premiere idea was carried out through Chick Burrows and Ed Schweiker, masters of ceremony, Irma Bennett of Cottage Grove, and Ray West of the Hotel Roosevelt in Long Beach, California. The Delta Tau Delta trio made its debut at intermission.

Working in conjunction with Theummel were Ed Labbe, Don Black, Eldon Haberman, Bill Meissner, Don Thompson, Ed Meserve, Ronald Rew, Tom Clapp, and John Zehntbauer.

Grant Theummel

Sophomore Informal

On the evening of November 18 the sophomore class presented its annual Sophomore Informal, carrying out a Spanish Court idea with a canopy of many colors, porticos, tiled walls, and speared archways. Ed Labbe was general chairman.

A highlight of the evening was the final selection of the University of Oregon All-American girl, Margaret DeYoung.

James Raley, chairman of the Order of the O dance, at which contestants for the title were presented, made the announcement and presented the trophy.

Programs for the Informal were medieval Spanish castles and manors silhouetted against a background of red. Finished with black cord, the programs beautifully carried out the central theme of the dance.

Chairmen for the dance were Bill Martin, music; Roberta Moody, programs; Ann-Reed Burns, refreshments; Bill Paddock, lighting; Cosgrove LaBarre and Jerry Murphy, decorations; Bill Schloth, clean-up; Eleanor Norblad, patrons; Ed Raudsep, finances; Al Nielson, publicity, and Virginia Younie, features.

Beaux Arts Ball

Caricatures of famous artists, as interpreted by University of Oregon art students, were used as decorations for the Beaux Arts Ball, given by the Allied Arts league in Gerlinger Hall on Friday evening, February 2.

The dance, the only annual costume ball on the social calendar, was the scene of much gaiety and many unusual costumes. Norris Perkins, as "The Beast," won first prize.

At 9:15 a grand march was led by Ed Hicks, president of the Allied Arts league. Preceding the march there was a reception in Alumni Hall.

Members of the art faculty were patrons and patronesses for the dance.

Miriam Henderson and Frank Wilke were in charge of the affair. Other members of the committee included Gerald McGonigle, Norris Perkins, Lowell Anderson, and Mary Ming.

The Purgatory Prowl

Junior-Senior Dance

Weeks before the Junior-Senior dance, the yearly event to which only upperclassmen may go, notices of the Purgatory Prowl, each bearing a red devil, were posted about the campus to arouse interest in the dance.

The night of the dance the Campa Shoppe became an inferno, with flames and shrouded caverns carrying out the motif. The ceiling of the hall was covered with a false roof of moss to bring about a grotto effect. Brimstone walls were erected, around which could be seen red devils leering in the fiery glow of vermilion spotlights.

These decorations were without doubt the most original that have been used for any dance on the Oregon campus for several years.

As special entertainment there were songs by Dorothy Parks, "University of Oregon Kate Smith," and interpretations and original songs by Chick Burrows.

Sherwood Burr's seven-piece orchestra provided music for the dancing, interspersing its melody with feature and novelty numbers.

Nancy Archbold, junior in English, and Corwin Calavan, 2nd year law student, were co-chairmen of the dance. Fred Whittlesey was ticket director, and supervised the arrangement of the dance floor.

Military Ball

The Eugene hotel was the scene Saturday evening, April 14, for the upperclassmen's Military Ball, annual dance of Scabbard and Blade, national military honorary. Each member of the organization issued invitations to two friends, and only these and members of the organization were present.

Abandoned last year in favor of a dinner dance in honor of new members, the traditional ball was re-established this year.

The insignia of the organization and military equipment were the only decorations. Working with Ed Cross, general chairman of the dance, were Don Black, Phil Mulder, Robert Ballard, Malcolm Bauer, Gilbert Olinger and George Hibbard.

Ed Cross

Freshman Dance Proves Popular

Soft blue lights, an Hawaiian moon, sparkling waters in a real lagoon, and grass huts changed McArthur Court into a beach at Waikiki when the freshman class presented its Frosh Glee on Saturday evening, April 9.

Programs were brown and white, a beach scene and a native dancer in silhouette. Features for the evening were two different types of Hawaiian dances, interpreted by University co-eds.

At intermission, pledging to Skull and Dagger, sophomore men's service honorary, was held, each of the nineteen new members being taken to the orchestra platform to receive his pledge ribbon.

On the dance directorate were Al Nielson, general chairman; Louis Fox, and Bill Pad-dock, assistant chairmen; Maryhelen Killiam, secretary; Adele Sheehy, refreshments; Warner Brown, music; Roberta Moody, features; Harold Beam, decorations; Chester Beede, construction; Peggy Chessman, programs; Bill Martin, patrons; Al Davis, clean-up; Ed Labbe and Jack Miller, publicity; George Inman, and Bob Thomas, finance.

Jim Ferguson

A modern flower garden with grotesque flora was the motif for decorations at "La Fantasie des Fleurs," the Junior Prom which climaxed three days of celebration of the annual Junior Week-end. A gigantic tulip blossom, fifteen feet high, was erected in one corner of McArthur court and from this refreshments were served.

After the grand march there was a special dance for Queen Margaret and her court. The presentation of the Gerlinger and Koyl cups for outstanding work in the junior class to Helen Binford and Sterling Green, and the scholarship cup to Kappa Alpha Theta took place.

James Ferguson was general chairman. Assisting him were Charles Thomas, assistant head; Lucille Coates, secretary; Paul Wagner, construction; Alice Wedemeyer, patrons; Marion Vinson, Mark Cory, Caroline Hahn and Ed Schweiker.

Moscow Furnished the Theme for the Ball

The Senior Ball

An Imperial Russian atmosphere pervaded the Senior ball staged by the class of 1934 on Saturday evening, January 27. The ceiling of Gerlinger hall was covered with a draped canopy bearing Russian royal insignia. Billowing curtain-like drapes of blue and ochre descended from this false ceiling and covered the walls of the room.

On two sides of the room were hung three large paintings, two measuring six by twelve feet and one nine feet square, on each of which was depicted some typical Russian scene with lifesize figures. These were portrayed in brilliant shades of red, blue, green, yellow and violet.

A drop at the back of the stage and brilliant silver mosque music stands for the orchestra, further developed the idea of the Moscow Art Theatre. Howard Bobbitt was general chairman for the dance. Ralph Schomp was in charge of art work, and Marian Vinson, Phoebe Greenman and Patricia McKenna made plans for the reception that preceded the dance.

On two sides of the room were

Gamma Alpha Chi Fashion Dance

The Gamma Alpha Chi fashion dance is an annual function sponsored by the Women's National Advertising Honorary. It is given in the spring, and is one of the two dances to which women students invite the men.

One of the purposes of the dance is to introduce the latest spring styles and to predict summer fashions. To accomplish this, popular students are selected as models to display the proper clothes for campus wear, for both men and women.

A stage and walk through the dance floor of the Campa Shoppe were roped off this year by a string of colored lights. It was there that the models paraded, demonstrating latest modes for campus, afternoon, dinner and evening.

Caroline Card, senior in journalism, was chairman of the dance.

Caroline Card

The Masked Ball

The Associated Women Students undertook a new venture this year when they sponsored the Masked Ball, a dance which is to take place annually after the last of the Oregon-Oregon State games.

The 1934 ball was an informal affair, each person attending wearing sport clothes and a black or white mask. At 11 o'clock there was a general unmasking.

Programs were black parchment with white printing and a white mask. At intermission Jack Hammond presented a tap dance and Ned Simpson sang.

Virginia Hartje was general chairman for the dance. Her directorate consisted of Adele Sheehy, assistant chairman; Peggy Chessman, secretary; Ann-Reed Burns, refreshments; Eleanor Coombe, features; Marie Saccamanno, music; Reva Hems, decorations; Elizabeth Bendstrup, patrons and patronesses; Roberta Moody, publicity, and Elinor Stevenson, programs. The affair was the last social event on the Winter Term social calendar, being held on Friday evening, March 2.

A. W. S. Masked Ball

Journalism Jam

The Journalism Jamboree, sponsored annually for the past ten years by Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism honorary for men, and Theta Sigma Phi, national women's journalism honorary, was given Friday evening, November 3, at the Campa Shoppe, Sherwood Burr's orchestra playing.

The dance immediately followed the Homecoming parade, two hours of rallying downtown, and the frosh fireworks on Skinner's Butte.

Headlines, newspapers, and accoutrements of the newspaper profession were used as decorations. Matrices, types, and newspapers were spread about the room.

William Eberhart was general chairman. On his committee were Ruth McClain, Lillian Rankin, Don Caswell, Patsy Lee, Huber Phillips, Douglas Polivka, Dudley Lindner, Paul Ewing, Larry Whytal and Sterling Green.

Eberhart

Margaret DeYoung

Portland; Helen Kalmbach, Portland; Peggy McNamara, Altadena, California; Lucille Stewart, Eugene; Peggy Carper, Portland; Betty Graham, Berkeley, California; Miriam Henderson, Oregon City; and Margaret DeYoung, Portland.

The winners, as proclaimed by the University magazine, were Margaret DeYoung, sophomore in architecture and allied arts; Peggy Carper, freshman in social science; Betty Graham, freshman in architecture and allied arts, Marion Bass, junior in education, and Charlotte Eldridge, sophomore in arts and letters.

The pictures of all the candidates were sent to the University magazine immediately following the dance. Members of the art staff of this publication made the final selections, and printed the pictures of the winning five in a special section of their December issue. Pictures of the candidates for the title of "All-American Girl" also were displayed down town in the window of McMorran and Washburne's store.

Varsity Ball

The Order of the "O" initiated a new custom on the campus this year when it gave its annual Varsity Ball on Saturday evening, October 7.

The day of the dance nineteen girls were informed of their selection as contestants for the title of "All-American Girl."

At intermission the band played "The All-American Girl," and one at a time each of the girls appeared in an elevated picture frame, proceeded down a velvety stairway, and paraded down the center of the dance floor to the judges' stand.

The original participants in the contest were Marion Bass, Portland; Ruth Byerly, Grants Pass; Dorothy Anne Clark, Portland; Elizabeth Crommelin, Pendleton; Edith Kronman, Portland; Bettie Curtis, Eugene; Helen Doyle, Portland; Charlotte Eldridge, Portland; Frances Fearnley, Myrtle Point; Margaret Ann Howland,

Oregana Features Campus Theme In Modern Design

A campus theme, with representative portraits and materials throughout, was used for the 1934 Oregana. The feature section contained pictures and reading matter concerning the Murray Warner art museum, a gift to the University by Gertrude Bass Warner.

It was the aim of Madeleine Gilbert, editor-in-chief, and the higher editorial staff to produce a yearbook that would be more condensed, more interesting of subject matter, and somewhat varied from the usual annual.

To achieve this purpose the staff plotted a book smaller than those previously published and eliminated any material that might detract from the general theme. Pages were varied, the greatest differences occurring in the somewhat modernistic style of running pictures out to the edge of the page. In cover design and internal make-up of the book simplicity and strength predominated.

The general arrangement of pictures was a problem that was especially considered. Every detail of the book was arranged so that the completed edition would be practical and unusual.

Ralph Schomp, chief art editor, and his staff of assistants, worked especially hard to make the art work fit the general scheme of the book. A restrained modernistic type of design, with all sub-title pages having the same directional motif, has produced a simple but impelling effect.

Barney Clark, sophomore in the school of journalism, was associate editor for Miss Gilbert, and also acted in the capacity of copy editor.

Dagmar Haugen was office manager and secretary for the entire staff, and Mary Snider was assistant editor.

Business Staff of Oregana Has Capable People

The business end of the Oregana demands the expenditure of a great deal of time for the careful planning of the financial status of the book. More than $10,000 must be collected by members of the staff before the success of the book may be realized. Numerous contacts must be made with the printers, engravers, binders and advertisers. Subscription drives must be carried out during the first few months of school before any work on the annual is begun. Finally the finished book must be distributed among the students during the latter part of spring semester.

Members of the class of 1934 presented a monetary gift to the Oregana at a meeting held during winter term. This insured the publication of the annual. Code prices, instituted by the N.R.A., had raised the price of materials used in the publication of the book, and the problem had been presented of cutting the book or raising additional funds. Printing and engraving constituted the two greatest cost items. The optional payment of student body fees for spring term also caused serious financial difficulties.

All the work connected with the business and financial development of the Oregana requires detailed arrangement, with a capable man at the head of an organization willing to spend a great deal of time. Edwin Cross, senior in business administration, was business manager of the Oregana. It was his duty to oversee all subscription drives, advertising and contracts.

Bill Phipps, junior in journalism, and Robert Dodge, senior in economics, were advertising managers under Cross. Helen Stinger and Bill McCall had charge of the subscription drives and distribution of the annuals.

Daily Emerald Acts as Voice of University

The 1933-34 Emerald, under the editorship of Sterling Green, continued its policy of clear-cut presentation of facts and interpretation of news interesting to the campus.

It carried out to as great an extent as possible its motto—"Voice of the Students"—and represented the thoughts and opinions of University students in the matters of higher education, compulsory military training for University men, janitorial service, and all campus problems. It made suggestions for bettering campus conditions.

When editors from all parts of Oregon met on the campus during January for their annual Oregon Press conference, members of the Emerald staff acted as guides for the visitors. The daily devoted a great deal of space to carrying the editors' messages and ideas to the student body in general.

The Emerald-of-the-Air was once more attempted under the present administration. During the first two terms of the school year this program featured songs, skits, news reviews, and dance music. Spring term there was an inter-organization competition for all living organizations, each of which entered some form of entertainment for the competition.

Assisting Green as the Emerald upper editorial staff were Joseph Saslavsky, managing editor; Don Caswell, news editor and member of the editorial board; Douglas Polivka, assistant to the editor; and Malcolm Bauer, news editor.

Faced once again with the effects of the present financial situation, the Oregon Daily Emerald business staff set about early in the fall term to organize its members so that it would be able to cope with the problems involved in the fields of advertising and circulation.

Through the development of the promotional department, an organization of the staff which has as its sole purpose the gaining of the goodwill of all advertisers, a definite step was taken to tie together the various parts of the staff. Each member of the various groups was shown the particular significance of his work in connection with other departments.

As a result of coordination of all divisions of the business staff, a most cooperative year marked the services of the group members. Circulation outside the campus was greatly increased and a definite influx of advertising, both local and national, was apparent.

A new step taken to get the viewpoints of the entire business end of the paper was the beginning of weekly staff meetings, short sessions where ideas were exchanged and each department offered suggestions for the others.

Grant Thuemmel, junior in business administration, was business manager for the publication. It was his duty to personally supervise the management of each department and to see that steps were taken to make the budget balance.

Bill Meissner acted as local advertising manager for the year. Assisting him in obtaining the ads was a group of more than thirty students. Eldon Haberman was national advertising manager, and Ed Labbe was promotional manager.

Emerald Awards

At the end of every school year members of the Emerald news and business staffs who have worked faithfully throughout the three terms are honored by a banquet. Last year the affair was given Monday evening, May 22, at Lee-Duke's restaurant. More than 100 students were present at this final gathering.

W. M. Tugman, managing editor of the Eugene Register-

Guard, was toastmaster at the banquet, speaking to the group of youthful journalists on the practical rather than the theoretical side of journalism and newspaper life. W. F. G. Thacher, Dean Eric Allen, George Turnbull, Arne Rae, and Robert C. Hall were faculty members present.

Vinton Hall, former editor of the Emerald, who had recently returned from a trip abroad, was a guest at the dinner. During his trip he reported foreign conditions for the Portland papers. Still another ex-editor of the Emerald at the banquet was Willis Duniway, then telegraph editor of the Eugene Morning News.

A gift was presented to Richard Neuberger, retiring editor of the publication, at the beginning of the program. Neuberger, who left the following day for a trip abroad, was given several farewell speeches. He replied with a rousing talk urging the new staff to make the Emerald a crusading newspaper.

Sterling Green, editor-elect of the University daily, was introduced, and made a short speech outlining the policy to be carried out in the 1933-34 issues of the Emerald.

New members of the two staffs were announced and presented individually by Green and Grant Theummel, business manager.

As a climax to the evening's program, the Hall-Turnbull plaque, an award for the most inspirational work done on the Emerald, was presented to Oscar Munger, senior in the School of Journalism and news editor of the Emerald. Emerald O's and certificates of merit were given to thirty-four students.

Individual miniature copies of the Emerald, printed on yellow paper in green ink, served as favors at the dinner. In the edition was news concerning the members of the news, editorial, and business staffs—but not the serious, authenticated kind of news put out in the regular Emerald. In fact, the banquet Emerald lived up to its "yellow" tradition in make-up and editorial content as well as color.

FORENSICS

Hall, Jenkins, Wheelock

Speech Division

Under the leadership of student managers, Prof. John Casteel, and W. A. Dahlberg, University of Oregon forensic activities were carried out successfully on an unusually large scale. Debates and open-forum discussions were held in communities in all parts of the state, the symposium style of debating being used.

Ed Wheelock, veteran debater, acted as general manager for the season's program, arranging the schedule for the varsity team. Mary Jane Jenkins, secretary and assistant manager, arranged a program for the women's team; and William Hall was secretary of the state forensic league.

On the forensic council of the student body were Otto Vonderheit, chairman; Hugh E. Rosson, ex-officio secretary; Ed Wheelock, student manager; Dean James Gilbert, Prof. John Casteel, Helen Burns and Dick Near.

The purposes of the speech department and the debate teams have been to instruct in speech organization, facility in presentation, competence in meeting people in one's own circles, participation in assemblies, platform speaking, rhetoric of speech, public addressing, persuasion and conviction of speech, and conduct of discussion.

Delta Sigma Rho, national intercollegiate association, is the honorary for varsity debaters. Membership is awarded to men and women on a basis of achievement in forensics. Two years of varsity participation is usually required before a person can be considered eligible. Wallace Campbell, Otto Vonderheit, Thomas Hartfiel, and Winfield Atkinson, are the student members.

Bert Brown Barker, vice-president of the University of Oregon, is a charter member of the national organization, founded at the University of Chicago.

Prof. John Casteel, a member of Delta Sigma Rho, is head of the department of speech, managing oratory, speaking contests, and women's debate. W. A. Dahlberg is in charge of men's varsity debating. The debate program is given during Winter quarter, while the contests, made possible by a gift to the University by W. F. Jewett, are given each term.

A regular part of the commencement activities annually is the Failing-Beekman oratorical contest open to members of the graduating class. First prize of $150 went last year to Robert T. Miller for his oration entitled: "That Soul of a Republic." Wilbur Walker received the second prize of $100. His subject was "The Highest Good."

The speech department this year has undertaken a novel project. Groups of students have presented model parliamentary law demonstrations in various communities. They have appeared in Salem, Coburg, Woodburn, Junction City, and Monroe.

Men's Debate

Conducting their debates and discussions in accordance with the symposium plan of debating adopted last year by the speech department of the University of Oregon, the men's debate squad met during the Winter term before granges, schools, and civic clubs throughout the state, partly as an independent program of the speech division of the English department and partly as a program through the extension department.

One question discussed and debated was: "Is there a wasteful expenditure of the tax dollar with relationship to the public elementary and secondary schools in the state of Oregon?" Another topic for discussion was: "Is there an inequitable tax distribution in the state of Oregon?"

Last year the men and women debaters of the University of Oregon visited 23 communities and towns in Oregon. This year's program was even larger, and indications are that interest is on the increase, both from the standpoint of communities asking for the discussions and the students participating. The men's schedule was as follows: Feb. 1, Westfir; Feb. 3, Willakenzie Grange; Feb. 14, Linslaw; Feb. 17, Willamina; Feb. 18, Portland; Feb. 19, Sheridan; Feb. 20, Gresham; Feb. 27, Buell; March 17, Elmira; March 28, Goshen; April 3, Ashland; April 4, Merlin; April 5, Kerby; April 6, Glendale; April 13, Camas Valley. Climaxing the men's debate season was a series on tax reform with the University of Washington in towns near Seattle from April 9 to 13.

In the symposium type of debating the first speaker in every instance gives an impartial speech, laying the foundation for an intelligent appreciation of the issues involved. The second, third, and, if necessary, the fourth speakers present the solutions to the problem, and the final speaker gives an impartial summary of all that has been delivered.

This symposium type of debate, comparatively new in the realm of public speaking, was introduced to do away with the digressions, hiding of facts, and evading of issues that were so prevalent in the competitive type of argumentation.

On this year's varsity squad were: Herbert Skalet, veteran; Ed Wheelock, veteran; Winfield Atkinson, veteran; Frank Levings, veteran; Ben Chandler, Frank Nash, Jack McGirr, Kenneth BeLieu, Louis Kelsey, Glenn Holliday, Virgil Esteb, David Montag, William Hall, William Shepherd, Everett Cole, James Wassun, Marven Hendrickson, Hale Thompson, Ray Clapp, and Charles Paddock.

These men were chosen on a basis of competitive tryouts, preliminary debates being held during fall quarter.

Women's Debate

Although but three veteran speakers were back to participate in women's forensic activities, an unusual turnout for varsity debating brought the completed list of women debaters to a total of fourteen.

Working fall term on the general subject, "How shall we re-organize the public school system?" the women's teams set out on their annual program the first part of February. They followed the general plan used by the men's teams, of speaking before granges, civic clubs, and public schools in the state. Their schedule was as follows: Feb. 1, Westfir; Feb. 13, Scio; Feb. 17, Hebron; Feb. 27, Creswell; Feb. 25-27, Ashland and Medford; March 2, Leaburg; March 7, Mapleton; March 16, Canby; April 6, Florence; and April 10, Buell.

Active on the team this year were: Geraldine Hickson, Helen Harriman, Pauline George, Hermine Zwank, Margery Kissling, Gwendoline Vinyard, Marguerite Sundstrup, Nora Hitchman, Marian Johnson, Madeline McKeown, Betty Hentley, Eula Loomis, Ruth Van-nice, and Marion Smith. The first three have participated in previous varsity debates.

During Spring term there was an after-dinner speaking contest for women, under the auspices of the speech division.

Among other contests held during the past school year were the intersectional and varsity series, both W. J. Jewett contests. In the intersectional group students were chosen from each of the extemporaneous speaking classes to compete for the distinction of best speaker in the beginning courses of the speech department. Frank Nash, Minoru Yasui, and Louis Kelsey were among these contest winners.

In the Jewett varsity contests there were three types of contests: after-dinner speeches, extemporaneous speeches, and orations. The winner of each of these competitions represented the University of Oregon in the state-wide meets.

The Failing-Beekman contests, given each year on the Friday evening before commencement, will also be on this year's program. Cash prizes of $150 and $100 are awarded each year to the two best orators in each graduating class. Funds for the prizes are derived from a gift to the University of Oregon speech department by Henry Failing and C. C. Beekman. The prize speeches in 1933 were "The Soul of a Republic," given by Robert T. Miller, and "The Highest Good," by Wilbur L. Walker.

In addition to these annual contests, the speech division initiated a contest in the oral reading of poetry this spring, originated for the purpose of creating better reading ability among students, especially in classical poetry.

Colonel Barker

Officer in Charge

The present commander of the Oregon R.O.T.C. department, Colonel Frederick A. Barker, was appointed to West Point from Oregon in 1904. Graduating from that institution in 1908, Lieutenant-Colonel Barker has seen 26 years of service in the army, his work being at various times in the United States, Hawaii, and in Europe during the World War.

After serving as executive officer at Vancouver Barracks and then at Fort Lewis, Colonel Barker was transferred to Oregon in the summer of 1928. Twenty-six years had elapsed from the time he left Oregon for West Point until he came back in an official capacity.

The War department is constantly in touch with the various nation-wide R. O. T. C. units. Military training is compulsory for freshmen and sophomores. Only the more simple of the military sciences are taught during the first two years. Junior and senior work, which is optional, is of a higher order. The members of this upper division work become cadet officers, and at the completion of four years they receive commissions as second lieutenants in the infantry reserve. In case of war, they would hold their regular commissions in the army.

Cadet Officers

Staff Officers

Major R. E. Back this spring completes his third year at Oregon. Major Back saw service in France as a captain of infantry.

Lieutenant Edward W. Kelley has been at Oregon since February, 1931. He received the Silver Star citation for gallantry in action during the World War.

Captain William A. Wappenstein completed his second year as a staff officer, being transferred from Oklahoma A. and M.

College. The remaining staff officers are Sergeant Harvey Blythe, instructor for the rifle team, and First Sergeant Frank I. Agule, keeper of the records.

An important activity of the department is the Rifle team, which represents Oregon in telegraphic meets held with numerous other colleges and universities throughout the country. Under the able coaching of Sergeant Harvey Blythe, Oregon placed third in the national intercollegiate finals. Out of 32 matches that the team participated in, it won 27. High scorer of the season was Elmer W. Thompson.

Scabbard and Blade

Scabbard and Blade is an honorary society of cadet officers founded with the purpose of assisting college men in meeting the obligations of citizenship, raising the standard of military training in the American colleges and universities, encouraging the development of leadership and initiative and creating "esprit de corps" among college cadets.

The honorary is modeled after the United States Army. Chapters are designated as companies, and organized into regiments. Seventy-three companies comprise the roll of the society making six full regiments, and a part of the seventh.

The first chapter was organized by a group of military students at Wisconsin in 1905. In the spring of 1928 Company L. of the Sixth Regiment of Scabbard and Blade was installed at Oregon. The years that have followed have seen Scabbard and Blade assume an important place in Oregon life.

The military ball, a high spot of the spring social season, is sponsored by this group. Scabbard and Blade day is observed every year with a formal banquet and dance. At the banquet this year three prominent men of the city were pledged as honorary members. Major C. H. Corlett, Lynn S. McCready and Captain R. Moxley.

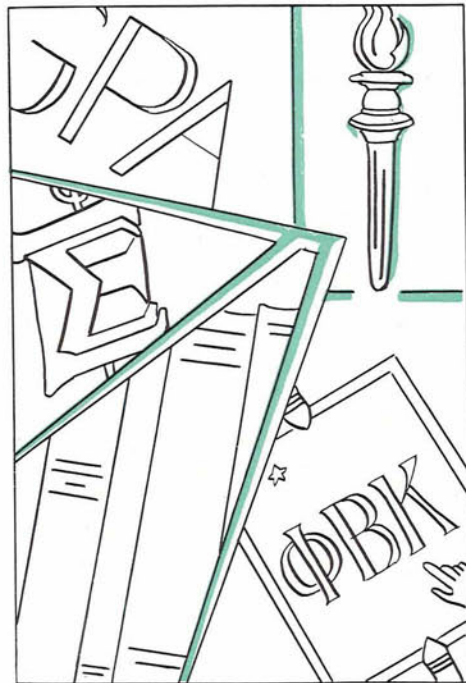

In order to stimulate interest in military training among freshmen, a system of awards is maintained by the fraternity. Merit medals are presented to eight outstanding members of the freshman military classes at the final parade during Spring term. Military bearing, ability and attendance were observed during the year, and awards made on the basis of these factors.

Company L. received high recognition during the 1933 summer camp, when Phil Mulder was made first lieutenant of the Provisional Company, composed of all Scabbard and Blade men from the North Corps area.

Lieutenant-Colonel Barker, Lieutenant Kelley, Captain Wappenstein and Dean Morse, of the Law School, are honorary members and act in advisory capacity.

Howard Bobbitt served in the office of Captain of Scabbard and Blade during Fall term. Winter term captain was Phil Mulder. Elections are held every term and meetings take place weekly. Major Corlett participated in series of lectures during some of the meetings.

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

Jean Failing

A.W. S. Active Campus Group

A vocational conference, to acquaint women on the campus with fields of work open to them, was the main project of the Associated Women's Students under the presidency of Jean Failing.

During the two days of the conference, February 14 and 15, discussion groups and round tables, led by prominent speakers, were in session all afternoon. Fields of discussion were fine arts, business, medicine, teaching, the community and the home.

A masked ball and campus carnival were other major activities of the women as a whole. The ball was given March 2 in Gerlinger hall, and the all-campus carnival was an event of Spring term. The Co-ed Capers was staged February 7, each class participating in the stunts.

Officers of the A.W.S. were: Jean Failing, president; Virginia Hartje, vice-president; Marie Saccamano, secretary; Josephine Waffle, treasurer; Roberta Moody, sergeant-at-arms; Ann Reed Burns, reporter; Marigolde Hardison, frosh councillors' chairman; Catherine Coleman, speakers' committee; Ebba Wicks, activities chairman; Pearl Base, Thespian and Kwama advisor, and Ida Mae Nickels, head of houses.

The Young Women's Christian association is an organization that is open to all women students on the campus. It is a part of the national group that has as its purpose: "We unite in the desire to realize a full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God. We determine to have a part in making this life possible for all people. In this task we seek to understand Jesus and to follow him."

The educational program of the local Y.W. is carried on through such groups as Industry, World Fellowship, Worship, Student-Faculty, Religion, Graduate, Vespers, Frosh discussion and Dill Pickle club.

Events taking place during the year with which the Y.W.C.A. was connected were: the doughnut sales, waffle luncheon, brownie sale, junior-senior breakfast, cabinet dinners, membership banquet, and Mothers' Day tea.

Officers of the Campus Y.W. during the past year were: Helen Binford, president; Lois Greenwood, vice-president; Alma Lou Herman, secretary, and Frances Rothwell, treasurer.

Philomelete

Philomelete, an organization of hobby groups, is sponsored by Phi Theta Upsilon, a service honorary composed of upperclass women who have received recognition for outstanding service work during two or three years on the campus. The primary aim of Philomelete is to promote a wide experience among college women and to gain friendly contacts among girls with similar interests.

The official badge of Philomelete is made of a Greek "phi" superimposed upon an acacia branch (the flower of friendship), the significance of which is a "friendship based upon mutual interests." "Philo" means love of; "melete" means interests or hobbies.

Edith Peterson Holmes, president of Phi Theta Upsilon for the last two years, appointed Valborg Anderson to have charge of Philomelete for 1933-34. With the assistance of Mary Snider and Catherine Coleman, she reorganized the association into five separate groups: charm, folklore, nature, travel, prose and poetry, and drama. All other groups were abandoned, and attention was centered on these five alone.

Dagmar Haugen was general sponsor of the charm school, the purpose of which was to study how to be charming and always appear at one's best and to have a good time doing it. The members of the group met in regular session and discussed problems of etiquette that arose from time to time, and endeavored to develop charm, not only in themselves, but in others. Margaret Osborne and Elizabeth Bendstrup were assistant leaders of the group.

In the folklore group, led by Laura Goldsmith, Josephine Waffle, and Gwendoline Elsemore, people, their peculiarities, and customs were studied so that a better understanding of all nations might be enjoyed.

Members of the prose, poetry, and drama group, under the direction of Velma McIntyre, Margaret Pollitt, and Eleanor Wharton, shared with each other the great literature of the past and present.

The nature group studied the out-of-doors in the various seasons, making botanical surveys. It was headed by Ruth Vannice, Eva Burkhalter, and Gladys Burns.

The travel group studied maps, planned routes on land and sea, and discussed what one might expect to see in foreign lands.

Study, discussion, and recreation, within groups of common interests make Philomelete a force in promoting friendships and broadening viewpoints. Philomelete is an organization expanding its scope and bringing Independent and affiliated women together.

Women's Athletics

Activities of the Women's Athletic association were carried out on an extensive program during 1933-34, on account of the opening of non-voting memberships for women students interested in physical education, but unable to fulfill the usual requirements for membership in the association. With the installation of this participation system, originated to open the organization to more students and to make wider contacts, the enrollment of the group was greatly enlarged. Voting members of the organization are those women who practice twice each week; non-voting members are selected from inter-house and intra-mural competition.

Masterton, Untermann, Coombe, Clement, Stockton

During the past year Master Dance and Amphibian were brought under the W.A.A. Master Dance is an elective honorary for women who have achieved recognition for interpretative and advanced dancing. Amphibian is also an elective honorary, members being chosen for outstanding swimming ability. Each of these two groups has a member on the W.A.A. executive board, and the members of the two honoraries are automatically members of W.A.A.

On the basis of this participation system and committee work, achievement awards are made at the end of each year. A small athletic letter is given when five activity credits have been earned by a student; a letter sweater is the reward for the accumulation of ten such credits. With each additional five activity credits, a stripe is added to the Women's Athletic Association sweater.

The intra-mural and inter-house programs were also continued this year. Contests were held among the various women's living organizations in volleyball, swimming, archery, tennis and baseball. In the spring a golf tournament was held. The basketball trophy is held by Gamma Phi Beta and the swimming cup by Kappa Alpha Theta. Plans have been made to present an all-sports plaque to the women's living organization entering the most contests and securing the greatest number of points.

Officers of the association are Eleanor Coombe, president; May Masterton, vice-president; Edith Clement, secretary; Twyla Stockton, treasurer, and Elaine Untermann, custodian. Miss Margaret Duncan is faculty advisor.

Sport managers are Mildred Ringo, hockey; Mildred Marks, volleyball; Audrey Veymer, hiking; Dorothy Ferguson, basketball; Marion Vinson, swimming; Jean Aiken, tennis; Betty Shoemaker, archery, and Bernice Scherzinger, baseball.

In the sports field, the Women's Physical Education department has sponsored a wide range of activities with the aim of drawing many students for relaxation and enjoyment.

Senior Pep Patrol

Health Week Major Program

A Health Week program, lasting for an entire week, was the major project in the W. A. A. yearly program.

A Senior Pep Patrol for Health Week, made up of Jean Failing, president of the Associated Women's students; Eleanor Coombe, president of the Women's Athletic association; Gwen Elsemore, Virginia Hartje, May Masterton, Ida Mae Nickels, Marion Vinson, Edith Clement, Ruth Irvin, and Bernice Wainscott, were in charge of the week's activities. Each day they visited the women's living organizations, and announced the purpose of the project.

At the end of the week they climaxed their functions with a Health Week tea given in Gerlinger hall. All women students were invited. The main feature of this affair was a posture parade, in which contestants from all women's living organizations were entered. Marion Vinson was acclaimed winner of first place by a committee headed by Dean Hazel Prutsman Schwearing. Arleta Davis won first prize in the Health Week poster contest.

To excite interest in their Health Week program, to promote health and its safekeeping, the members of the W.A.A. labelled trees on the campus as to their posture, defects and possible cures.

Recreational hours, each Friday afternoon from four until six o'clock, were sponsored by the association. At this time any woman student on the campus was invited to take part in swimming or any sports in progress in the gymnasium. Members of the Women's Athletic association acted as hostesses on that afternoon, instructing the guests in sports unfamiliar to them, and participating in the ball games.

Alpha Omicron Pi won the All-Sports plaque, to be awarded annually by W.A.A. to the house which has the most girls participating in the most sports.

During the middle of Spring term the W.A.A. again staged its annual strawberry festival on the campus between the Commerce building and the old library. Strawberry sundaes were served and an outdoor tennis court dance was held.

Another event of Spring term was the annual Play Day, in which women athletes from all parts of the state participated.

The W.A.A. banquet, at which awards for intra-mural and inter-class activities are made and the new officers announced, was held the last month of school.

The University of Oregon was represented at the western sectional convention of the Women's Athletic association, held during the Spring in Santa Barbara, California.

DRAMA

Otilie Seybolt

Drama Division

The work of Mrs. Otilie Turnbull Seybolt, director, was notable during this season as an almost totally new group of students participated in dramatic productions put on by this division of the English department.

In the six years that she has been here, Mrs. Seybolt has helped to emphasize the importance of the drama division as a means of artistic expression. Consequently, a greater number of students have been active in this field during the past year than ever before.

Mrs. Seybolt came to the University of Oregon in 1928 from Grinnell College, where she had served on the faculty. She has had extensive experience on the faculties of eastern and southern schools.

Among the outstanding productions of the year was "Gods of the Mountain," a Dunsany play, which Mrs. Seybolt had directed five times prior to this presentation, although this was the first time it was ever presented at Guild Hall. Of equal prominence and intensity were "Cradle Song" and "The Winter's Tale." All the plays contained creditable work both in direction and acting.

A new venture taken up by the drama division this year was the "Guild Gaieties of 1933-34," a program composed of several one-act skits and interspersed with singing and dancing numbers.

Gertrude Winslow was the only active member of the Oregon chapter of the National Collegiate Players in school this year. In former years this organization has taken an important part in the work of the drama division. Among honorary members are Mrs. Seybolt, Dr. C. V. Boyer, Mrs. Alice Ernst, and Kenneth Shumaker.

Horace W. Robinson has contributed a great deal to the department this year with his excellent technical directing. Mr. Robinson, a new member of the department, filled the position of technical director. The sets that he designed and produced for "Gods of the Mountain" and "Cradle Song" were of great value in the artistic presentation of the plays. The set for the former carried the atmosphere, tempo, and intensity of the play to perfection.

Character Portrayal Skillful

Excellent interpretation of character and artistic portrayal of roles marked "Cradle Song" as one of the best presentations ever attempted by the Guild Hall Players.

Not only was the play a success from an artistic point of view, but it was equally successful financially. Playing to a capacity audience, the drama received a response from townspeople and students which proved it to be one of the most successful, as well as one of the most ambitious undertakings of the department.

Mrs. Seybolt not only directed the production but acted with her students, taking the role of the prioress in the Spanish nunnery where the scene of the story is laid. Unassumingly she was the core of the acting structure in a part for which she was particularly well-suited, and in which she exercised a sensitive regard for details that made her performance a notable one indeed.

Lucille Stewart gave an interpretation of the difficult role of Sister Joanna of the Cross, which bore a distinction of beauty and tenderness. Gertrude Winslow, in the role of the young girl, Teresa, who is raised in the convent, did an unusually fine piece of acting. Kay Briggs appeared as the Vicarress; John L. Casteel, Don Jose; Bill Schloth, Antonio; each role was excellently done. Dorothy Parks, Pauline Conradt, Virginia Wappenstein, Ellen Galey, Bill Thienes and Gwenn Caverhill had shorter bits.

Horace W. Robinson, head of the technicians, was able to produce a setting that gave a convincing and beautiful atmosphere to the play.

"The Winter's Tale," a tremendous undertaking for a university drama department, demonstrated the ability of the Guild Hall Players. Mrs. Seybolt was the recipient of a great many compliments on this production for her excellent direction of a truly difficult Shakespearean comedy.

The scenery, costumes and settings were carried out to the minutest detail, representing the sixteenth century mode of living in a realistic manner, and all cast members after many weeks of training assumed excellent character portrayals and caught the spirit of the play perfectly. Ethan Newman, in the part of Antolicus, executed one of the finest characterizations of the year. His performance in this play marked him as an actor of exceptional ability.

"Cradle Song"

Scene From "Oriental Extravaganza"

Guild Hall Gaieties

Variety of entertainment and informality were the essence of the "Guild Hall Gaieties of 1933-34" which was presented by the Guild Hall Players and their associates, the Campus Vagabonds.

The show was prepared primarily for the entertainment of the CCC boys whose camps are somewhat isolated and not equipped with means of amusement.

The entire program was received in a gay humor by the audiences both at Guild Hall and the CCC camps. The absurd and humorous situations of the sketches left the audiences rolling in their seats. The note of levity was a diversion from the usual type of performances.

The Oriental Extravaganza, a dramatic sketch done in the Chinese manner, was the most outstanding of the playlets. Two casts were prepared for this feature. The part of Kwen Lin, the heroine, was taken by Althea Peterson and Joyce Busenbark; Chang Sut Yen, the hero, was ably handled by Bill Schloth and Bill Thienes. A good piece of character work was done by Ted Karafotias in the role of the Mandarin, which was taken also by Harry McCall.

As in most Chinese drama, the scenery was unrealistic. The actors are seen going through invisible doors, stepping up over non-existent thresholds, walking down steps that are not present, and making love under the eaves of an imaginary pagoda. This was part of the Chinese manner. So also was the property man whom the audience was invited to pretend not to see, and who was most noticeable. This part was cleverly portrayed by Stewart Riddell.

"How Perfectly Absurd," another short skit which was essentially a farce, concerned a young man, played by Ethan Newman, and a girl, played by Gertrude Winslow, who both were contemplating suicide, but each of them dissuaded the other from his purpose. "A One Word Flirtation" also was handled by two casts. Marytine New and Burdette Nicklaus made up the one team, and Dorothy Smith and Neville Biden, the other.

A satirical sketch, "Give the Audience a Chance," depicted a particularly obstreperous and aggravating cross-cut of an audience at a performance. It was highly amusing and cleverly done. In another of these sketches, entitled "Fluttermouse," Kay Briggs and Gertrude Winslow did creditable work.

The show served as a means of bringing out a bevy of vaudeville talent. Marion Bass and Dorothy Parks were enjoyable as they crooned popular blues songs.

Gods of the Mountain

Perfect atmosphere merged with capable acting made "Gods of the Mountain" a truly remarkable production. The massiveness and intensity of the play were exceedingly well portrayed in the lines which were plotted against a background of precise timing and excellent settings. The Dunsany play received treatment that approached professional standards.

Gods of the Mountain

The story itself concerns seven beggars who masquerade as gods and use the piety of the people to the best advantage until the true gods arrive and punish the beggars by turning them all to stone. The futility of man against the gods is the theme of the play, and the audience is constantly reminded of it through Ulf, one of the beggars, whose intuitive forebodings overshadow the fatal ending of the beggars' good fortune.

Ted Karafotias, in the role of Agmar, self-appointed leader of the beggars, portrayed this character to perfection. He revealed a great deal of talent and a fine understanding of his part which marked him as the center interest of the play. Karafotias was lauded as the best character actor the University has seen in a good many years. In the same role on the second presentation of the play Bill Schloth gave a convincing and capable performance.

Bill Thienes carried Oogno's part with consistency throughout. He gave a spirited performance that was indeed praiseworthy. The scrupulous, cautious Ulf, who foresaw disaster was well taken care of by Burdette Nicklaus. His acting helped bring the play to a tense climax.

Illanaun, the chief citizen who almost succeeded in revealing the true identity of the beggars, but was cleverly thwarted by the keen-witted Agmar, was given a creditable performance by Bert Evans. Shorter parts were assumed by Boyd Jackson, Gertrude Winslow, Josephine Poor, Althea Peterson, Ethan Newman and Neville Biden.

The work of Horace W. Robinson, instructor in dramatics, who acted as scene designer and technical director, came in for much deserved praise. The lighting was not only arranged artistically, but in a manner which produced a most effective atmosphere. The effect of changing seven men into seven jade statues was produced entirely by clever lighting. Much of the drama of the piece was brought about by the use of light and shadows supplemented by background sounds.

The presentation reflected a great deal of hard work under capable, careful supervision. The result was an outstanding production.

Studio Players

Studio Plays

In accord with Mrs. Seybolt's plan for encouraging as many students as possible to take part in the activities of the department, a series of Studio plays, presented by a group of students known as the Studio Players and directed by members of the play production class is given each winter term to offer opportunity to interested students to participate in dramatics.

Much interest was shown in these performances this year.

Eight one-act plays were presented in four matinees. The first program included "Silver Lining," by Constance D'Arcy Mackay and "The Singapore Spider," by Edward Finnegan. "Drip, Drip, Drip," by Ethan Newman, who has taken parts of every description and size since he has been working in the drama division, and "Wienies for Wednesday," by Edna Higgins Stracham, were included in the second bill. The third group of plays included "Paste Pearls," by Thomas Harris Downey; "Counsel Retained," by Mackay, and "The Four Flushers," by Cleaves Kinkead. In the final matinee an old English miracle play, "The Brome Abraham and Isaac," was presented.

"Silver Lining" was directed by Gladys Burns, and included Ann-Reed Burns, Edwin Christie, and Grant Conway. "The Singapore Spider" was under the direction of Joann Bond. Members of the cast were Jimmy Doyle, Joyce Busenbark, Clair Johnson, Charles Fahey and Janet Hall.

Robert Dodge directed Newman's, "Drip, Drip, Drip," and the parts were taken by Lawrence Fortner and Leonard Marshall. On the same bill was presented "Wienies for Wednesday," directed by Marian Pattullo. Barbara Reed, Alice Hult, Helene Campbell, David Montag, William Rice, and Nan Smith appeared as members of the cast.

The outstanding play of all the programs was "The Four Flushers," which was directed by Ida Markusen, who is worthy of mention in connection with her excellent direction. The play itself was unusually good, and the acting of Charlotte Eldridge was particularly noteworthy. John Patric, Dan Clark, Jr., Walter J. McCaffery, and Gwendolyn Caverhill appeared in the same play. "Counsel Retained," directed by Dorothy Dykeman, depicted a scene in the life of the great barrister, Edmund Burke. The actors in this play were Marian Johnson, Howard Kessler, John Spittle and Jim Smith. A well-acted play was "Paste Pearls," under the direction of Carl Gross. Greer Drew, Jo Poor, and Laurence Langston took parts in this play.

Ellen Galey undertook a unique type of play in directing the old English miracle play, "The Brome Abraham and Isaac." The cast included Bob Knapp, Helen Veblen, Bill Thienes, Jim Doyle and Ted Karafotias.

ART

Dean Lawrence

Art Center of the West

The Oregon School of Fine Arts has attained in the West the position that Harvard holds in the East. Oregon is the art center of the West, ranking with any and all art schools in the country. For the past few years Oregon has been awarded a portion of the Carnegie Fund which enables the holding of a summer school session. This fund paid all the expenses of selected instructors brought here from various other schools.

In 1914, Ellis F. Lawrence, Dean of Art School, founded the institution at Oregon after many requests to bring an art school to the University. The school was soon recognized by the American Institute of Architects as one of outstanding reputation. When the school was first founded it had only a few students; now it has approximately one hundred seventy-five.

Last year the school had a very outstanding improvement; the addition of the landscape architecture department. However, the most outstanding development during the building up of the school has been the establishment of a five-year course in architecture.

This school, being a professional school, is particularly adapted to give the student a thorough understanding of what the arts mean and have meant to the world. The drafting rooms and studios where the students do their work are in surroundings of artistic atmosphere.

There are many students who are not majors taking art courses as elective subjects. The wide variety of classes has proven to be very popular with students in other fields.

Another part of Oregon's campus dedicated to the fine arts is the Oregon Museum of Fine Arts, which was given to the school two years ago at the '32 commencement exercises by the citizens of Oregon. The building contains the famed Murray Warner collection of Oriental art, given to the University to create a better knowledge and appreciation of Oriental peoples.

The memorial court of the building was dedicated to Prince L. Campbell, who was president of the University for many years.

Variety of Courses Creates Wide Interest

The variety of courses offered is exceedingly large, including Architecture, Painting, Sculpturing, General Art, and Normal Arts. Each subject is divided into various different sub-courses, and many students find it desirable to take one or more subjects in each department.

In the architecture department there are classes in landscape architecture, architectural design, interior design, and many others. The classes are held in large, well lighted drafting rooms where the students do their work.

In the drawing class the students find opportunity to express the subjects, or setups, from which they work. The setups each have an individual overhead lamp which can be moved to get the desired lighting effect.

The painting class has a wider variety of chances for the student to express himself, since he can paint from still-life setups, from life models, or in the portrait class. Here the student learns how to use color to get the desired effect in any problem. He also learns many other elements of design such as texture, proportion, rhythm and balance.

Composition is a class in which the students use chiefly water-colors in a large range of subject matter. Many of these compositions are the students' own impressions of the campus, the surrounding country, and many of the subjects are original compositions.

Perhaps one of the most important divisions of the school is the class in Sculpturing. The students are taught to mold their problems in clay and then in wood or stone. The advanced classes in Sculpturing work from life models, which give the student a better chance to show his individual expression, and also make the criticism of the individual's work much easier.

Some students not wishing to major in art or architecture find many interesting and practical subjects in the General and Normal Arts. One may find pottery, weaving, design of textiles, and dress design in the General Art course. Others which are popular are home decorations, decorative design, and civilization and art epochs.

The classes in normal art, as the name implies, primarily prepare the student for teaching art. The courses offered in this department are not as extensive as the other classes, but give the student the best opportunity for reaching his goal.

In the Sunny Court of the Art Building

Students at Work in the Pottery Room

Pottery

Pottery is one of the many subjects offered under the heading of Applied Design and features the study of form and decoration as developed through the medium of clay, the processes of execution and tools varying according to the different problems. The projects take the form of various articles such as those which are dictated by need for function and conform to the students' capacities for execution. Examples of contemporary ceramics as well as historic illustration are studied for general appreciation and illustration of fundamental principles.

Among the various objects which are made according to the students' own tastes are vases, ashtrays, bowls, and tiles.

There are three methods used in the pottery class, hand-building, casting, and throwing. The first of the three methods is hand-building. The student first gets the object well in mind, then starts the project which is simply building up the piece by putting many small pieces of clay together, occasionally using slightly larger irregular pieces.

The second, or casting process is more difficult. The student first makes a model of the shape which he desires and then makes a plaster cast or mold of the model. The original model is then removed leaving the mold into which slip is poured. The slip is a solution of clay mixed to the consistency of thick cream. The slip after being poured into the mold hardens, leaving the cast.

Throwing is the third and most difficult method of the three. First, a large lump of clay as desired is placed on the pottery wheel. As the wheel revolves the clay is molded by the hands, after which it is finished off with special tools. After the piece is finished it is then baked. The clay which is used in the department at the University is a buff clay and must be baked or fired at about 2030 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature is regulated by the use of pyrometric cones which are placed so that when a certain cone has melted, the heat is turned off. After being fired or baked, biscuit ware, which it is called, is ready for the glazing. In addition to making the piece of pottery more pleasing to the eye as to color, it also makes it much more durable. The glaze which is used to finish the pieces is a specially composed glass. The glaze is ground up very fine and mixed with water to be put on the pottery. It may be either sprayed, poured, brushed on, or the piece may be dipped into the solution. The piece is then fired again to fix the glaze on the piece. Both the clay and the glaze must be of the right type to be used together or the result will not be satisfactory. If they are not the right materials for each other the glaze will crack or craze, as it is called. Also, if the piece is cooled too quickly the same result will occur. Under-firing will often cause the same result.

Sculpture

Here, too, the student has the chance to show his creative ability. He works in clay, molding his subject in any fashion he sees fit, expressing himself as he goes along. Each student has a place at a table or bench where he can work on his particular problem each day.

The lower division students who are just starting in the sculpture class work in clay, making abstract models of combinations of cubes, cones, balls, and triangular shapes.

The advanced student also works in clay, but mostly from life models. When the clay model is finished the student carves the same design out of stone or wood. The most popular medium seems to be stone, the stone used in these projects being an Oregon product. The appearance is that of aged wood, the grain of the stone, a sandstone, giving it a distinctive hardwood appearance.

The tools which the students use are their own, which they buy at the beginning of the stone work. The department has several motor-driven tools which make it easier for the student to execute his problem. Since no special major fees are now charged students of the School of Arts and Architecture, the individual purchase of tools and supplies works no hardship on those taking the work.

The students have their choice of subjects from which to work, but the majority use animal subjects, which offer a larger variety of expressions. In the sculpture class the trend of the style of treatment is very modern, but not extreme, being rather a very plain, simplified or stylized treatment. Beauty of mass and line are stressed more than life-likeness.

There are some students who, though, not enrolled in the sculpture class, work in the sculpture room for a portion of the architectural design class, making designs in bold relief, moldings, cornices, and solving many other problems in architectural designs.

Many of the students who make small pieces of sculpture take them home to make mantel pieces or displays. Some of the students who make a small piece of sculpture create a companion-piece to match the original.

Students who are very outstanding in their work give their pieces of sculpture to the school, which keeps them for reference and exhibition purposes. Once a year the student work is exhibited in the art gallery at the school. The exhibition is always held at the end of Spring term, and attracts a great deal of attention both from students and townspeople. The University of Oregon art department gives as nearly as possible a professional course in sculpturing and emphasizes cultural elements.

Student Sculptures

DRAWING

The drawing classes this year used almost entirely a special graphite pencil that was ordered for the class. The class began the year using no setups and designing abstract patterns with no definite object in mind except to keep within certain boundaries. The class later worked from still-life setups.

The life class used charcoal and pencil almost exclusively.

PAINTING

The painting class started the year in somewhat the same manner, using abstract designs to become familiar with blending the colors. Later the class used still-life setups.

The advanced painting class used as its subject a life model in an appropriate setup. The pose for the painting class lasts about two weeks and is then changed.

COMPOSITION

The composition class uses an opaque water color as its medium in the lower division work. The class uses nearly all original compositions. For subject matter the student uses nature to a large degree.

In the upper division classes in composition the students use oil colors. The upper division classes also use nature as a source of subject matter.

The composition class teaches the student the use of color, its meaning in creating combinations, and methods of achieving different effects, using various schemes.

Every year the classes use different methods of representation, or medium, as experimental methods in discovering which is the most pliable in getting the proper results from the student. Each term finds the class more advanced; finds them using more difficult subject matter. This year, however, the classes have been working with the same medium the whole year.

MUSIC

Dean Landsbury

The School of Music

The School of Music, under Dean John J. Landsbury, offers instruction in any legitimate instrument, history and appreciation of music, and all other types of musical training, as well as preparing students for careers as teachers of music in public grade and high schools and giving adequate training for the obtaining of a regular music degree.

Dean Landsbury has been at the head of the music school since 1917, coming to Oregon in 1914, having spent two years studying in Germany. He is a graduate of Simpson College, receiving his bachelor of music degree in 1900, and his doctor of music degree in 1909.

Under Louis P. Artau, associate professor of music, George Hopkins, Mrs. Jane Thatcher, and Mrs. Aurora Potter Underwood, piano is taught; Paul Petri, Roy Bryson, and Mme. Rose McGrew are in charge of the vocal department; Rex Underwood is professor of violin, with Howard Halbert assisting; Mrs. Lora Teshner Ware is instructor in cello; John Stark Evans presides at the organ, while John Stehn takes care of all those interested in wind instruments.

Differing from the usual type of music lessons, the music school this year offered class lessons in piano, organ, voice, cello, and violin. This was made possible by a gift from Carnegie Institute. Providing they had no previous instruction on the instrument in which they were interested, students could enter these classes. No fees were charged. Here Dean Landsbury has been able to experiment with what he calls "his pet hobby." Instruction was first given with regard to the mechanical side of piano playing and other instruments. Thus many difficulties, pupils usually encounter in the typical method of music instruction were avoided. Later the more academic details were followed up.

There are four music honoraries: Phi Beta, which includes both music and drama and kindred arts; Tau Delta Delta, for underclassmen; Mu Phi Epsilon, women's national music honorary, and Phi Mu Alpha, men's national music honorary. The latter two sponsor an annual song contest among living organizations.

Polyphonic Choir

The University Symphony Orchestra

Directing the University Symphony orchestra, Rex Underwood produced some very lovely orchestral effects. The group's first concert this year was held January 14, at which time some members of the Oregon State College orchestra, of which Mr. Underwood is also director, assisted.

The program of this concert included: "Prelude to the Meistersinger," Beethoven; "Symphony, No. 3 (Eroica)," first movement, Beethoven; "Dances from "Prince Igor," "Introduction," "Dance of the Slave Maidens," "Dance of the Wild Men," and "Dance of the Archers," proved so popular that they were played by request on the second winter term concert, given February 4. Other numbers on the program were "Overture to Rosamund" by Schubert and "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" by Tchaikowsky. In this last number, Frances Brockman was soloist. Four concerts were given spring term, two of which were for the Oregon Music Teachers' Association convention held here. Each program was made up of both light classics and heavier numbers, demanding technique and fine interpretation from the director and the members of the orchestra.

The personnel of the orchestra:

Violins: Howard Halbert, Delbert Moore, George Kotchik, Frances Brockman, Madalena Giustina, Edwin Raudsen, Clara Larsen, Ellen Galey, Peggy Sweeney, Roxanna Waldorf, Vivian Malone, Leo Lohikoski, Virginia Endicott, Josephine Chapman, Maryshore Mishler,

John Stehn

The University Band

This year the University band, under the direction of John Stehn, gave two concerts fall term, three winter term, and several spring term. Each program was well balanced, including music of the romantic and classical type as well as military marches. Townspeople, faculty, and students expressed their enjoyment with hearty applause. Selections by Beethoven, Grigg, Wagner, Gounod, Victor Herbert, Tobani, and Browoski were among those played. The first and second divisions of the band appeared separately and together in concert.

The enthusiastic spirit at rallies, football, and basketball games was greatly increased by the stirring rhythm of the marches played by the band on these occasions.

The band traveled with the football team, playing at nearly all games in which Oregon participated.

The personnel of the band:

Flutes: Howard Baughman, Blaine Bickford, Victor Bryant.

E-flat Clarinet: George Jones.

The University Concert Series

Concerts were given nearly every Sunday by both divisions of the University band, the Polyphonic Choir, or the University Symphony orchestra. Faculty, students, and townspeople fill McArthur Court on concert Sundays. Music of a high quality is always presented, although classics of a lighter nature keep the programs within the understanding of everyone attending.

One of the most interesting concerts of the year was that of Roland Hayes, internationally known negro tenor. Press notices vouched for his artistry, and his performance here proved the thrilling beauty of his lyric voice and his exquisite interpretation, as well as his scholarly understanding of music. The negro spirituals, sung at the end of the program, were especially popular with the Eugene and University audience.

For several years in the past, the Messiah music has been sung by the Polyphonic Choir in its annual concert at the end of Fall term near the Christmas holidays. This year, Paul Petri, director of both the Polyphonic Choir and the Oregon State College Choir, combined the two choirs to offer a program of Christmas carols of many lands and times. Of particular interest were the ancient carols of various European lands, and the three carols for women's voices alone. Roy Bryson, associate conductor of the Oregon choir, this year has been developing a men's Polyphonic Choir. The Polyphonic Choir is a favorite of all those interested in participating in musical activities and has a large membership. The choir gave a program March 4, and one during spring term.

Paul Petri

Another interesting musical feature which is continuous throughout the year is the weekly student recital. George Hopkins has charge of arrangement of the programs. Some of the music faculty, including Aurora Potter Underwood, Lora Teshner Ware, George Hopkins, and John Stark Evans also appeared in recital occasionally during the year. These programs were held in the music auditorium, while the Sunday concerts were given in McArthur Court.

MURRAY WARNER

Murray Warner Collection of Art

Mrs. Warner's Speech at the Opening of the Murray Warner
Collection of Oriental Art on June 10, 1933

Members of the Board of Higher Education, Mr. Chancellor and Friends, all:

This is a very happy occasion for me. We are assembled here today in order that I may present this collection to the University of Oregon as a memorial to my husband, Murray Warner. It is also a tribute to my father, Perkins Bass, who had a wide interest in art, and his love for humanity took in everyone who came within his reach, both at home and abroad. During my childhood we were in Europe for five years and he was with us much of that time, instilling in us the love of the good and the love for the beautiful, the understanding of which makes the whole world kin. My husband's interest in art and his love for his fellowmen were as deep as that of my father.

In the summer of 1906 I had an experience in Japan which interested me very much. In those days I was doing a great deal of photography and wanted to take pictures of everything. I went with my guide to the famous art museum at Nara and after going carefully through the museum I asked the Director if I could take pictures of the statues. He looked at me doubtfully and then asked what I wanted to photograph. Due to my early training I was able to point out to him the museum's greatest treasures, making no mistakes and consequently permission to take these pictures was graciously granted; even a step-ladder was provided upon which to place my camera. As I finished, I discovered a very beautiful statue, twice life size, in a dark corner, and at my request the Director had it moved to the veranda, so that I could photograph it. The pictures taken at that time, have been made into colored lantern slides which I greatly prize. When I went to the Director's office to thank him for his kindness, without any request on my part, he gave me a letter of introduction to the Director of the Museum at Kyoto. Similar courtesies were shown me there; for instance, a large screen was taken into the courtyard, so that I could have sufficient light to photograph it.

In 1929 following the Pacific Relations Conference at Kyoto, I went to see the Imperial Treasure House called the Sho-so-in, at Nara. I told the Director about the kindness extended to me years ago at the museums at Kyoto and Nara and from what he said I judged that these earlier courtesies had been extended to me by friends of his, who were grateful for my appreciation of Oriental art. He also, showed me special courtesies. These experiences taught me that the way to the heart of Japan, which is also the way to the heart of China, is an understanding and an appreciation of their art, which they love and treasure.

After my husband passed away I came to Eugene to live, because my son, Samuel Bass Warner, was teaching here in the University Law school. I found the students not at all internationally minded, not at all interested in giving the foreign students a happy time, not at all appreciative because these students had chosen to come to the United States, to the State of Oregon, and to the University of Oregon to get their education and to form their friendships. So I went to work to see what could be done to change this situation, and to arouse in our students some understanding of the brotherhood of man, all children of one Father. My mother, Clara Foster Bass, showed me the way. Some years before she had provided a building in which she established a museum of Colonial art, a museum library for books on New Hampshire, and an auditorium. This is known as the "Historical Building" at Peterborough, New Hampshire, and was established for the purpose of instilling in the hearts of the people of New Hampshire a love for all that is good in that state's history.

My first step was to give the University my then small collection of Oriental art, and since then I have made six trips to the Orient to improve and to add to the collection. My friends, Mrs. Seaton, Mrs. Potter, and Mrs. Perkins have gone with me in order that this museum collection might be built up. And, above all, my son Sam's deep interest and cooperation, financial and otherwise, have encouraged me every step of the way, and had this not been his attitude, this museum work would never have been undertaken and carried out by me.

It was through the untiring efforts of Mrs. Gerlinger, of Portland, President Hall, and Vice-President Barker that the funds were collected for this building which was built to house the Murray Warner collection. I am most grateful to them and to those who responded so generously to their appeal, and especially am I grateful to people of the city of Eugene for their share, and to Dean Lawrence for having the vision to plan such a beautiful building, and to the Board of Higher Education for their kindness and generosity.

And now, I hereby present to the University of Oregon, in the State of Oregon, subject to my Deed of Gift, this collection of Oriental art . . . my hope and prayer is that it will be a great blessing to the University and to the State of Oregon . . . that it will always be a channel for international friendship and understanding between our students and those of the Orient and that this friendship and understanding will continue unabated, throughout their lives.

Chinese Jade Screen and Red Lacquer Throne

Seeking Museum Treasures

As Told By Mrs. Warner

I gave the Murray Warner Collection of Oriental Art to the University in the Spring of 1921 and the next Fall I went to China to see in what direction I could increase the collection. In Shanghai I met Mrs. Sawyer, wife of the American consul and sister-in-law of Dean Hale, who was formerly dean of the University of Oregon Law School. We went up to Peking together and while there I obtained some old Chinese paintings, the marble statue, and the costumes for the throne scene which was on exhibition in the Gerlinger Building.

The following year Mrs. Lillian Seaton and Mrs. Emily Potter went to the Orient with me. There was a civil war in North China and two factions, outside the city walls of Peking, were fighting for possession of the city. We were on the last train going into the city and from that time on there were no communications with the outside world except through the one wireless station in the American Legation. There was a shortage of coal and our rooms were not heated, which interfered very much with our comfort.

During this time I obtained the Emperor's dinner set in blue and white. Blue is half mourning in China and an Emperor had used this set while in mourning for the death of his father. I also was able to get a rare Ox-blood plate and some blue and white ginger jars which are of the much appreciated shade of dark blue, some jewelry such as was used by the court ladies several hundred years ago, and some old paintings.

The first opportunity to get out of the city came three days later when an International train took the Belgian Minister to Tientsin on his way to another post. This five-hour trip took thirty-six hours and during this time we were only able to get one meal on the train. Fortunately, a friend in our car had brought along some baby food which she cooked and shared with us. The trip took this much time because we were passing through trenches. In one place the track was torn up, and in another obstructions had been placed on it.

We were stopped about thirty times by the leaders, who had to be assured that we were not transporting arms or ammunition. Their method of stopping us was firing on the train, and twice they turned their machine guns on us until we stopped—a very effective method.

In spite of the hazardous experience of my former trip, and even though the war was still on, I decided to go to Peking in the Fall of 1925 to see if there were museum treasures to be obtained. The harrowing details of the trip of the year before did not discourage Mrs. Lucy Perkins from going with me. When we consulted the American consuls in Japan we found that the railroad between Shanghai and Peking was torn up, and that the railroad in Manchuria was also torn up, so the only way that we could get to Peking was by way of Tientsin through the Yellow sea. As the Yellow sea has a reputation for being the most turbulent piece of water on the globe, it is not astonishing that we were in a typhoon all the way.

Arriving in Peking, I asked my friends how the situation was as compared to the year previous. The answer was that it was much more dangerous, because the Chinese had come to feel that all the nations who had an interest in China were to blame for the upset conditions of the country. The atmosphere was very tense and there was a plot to kill all the foreigners in Peking on Christmas Day. This was discovered and a warning was given through the English newspapers. There was no use considering getting away, because that was impossible, so we spent our time seeking things for the museum.

In 1926 Mrs. Frances Thurber Seal of New York went with me to Peking. There was no war in the vicinity of Peking and the museum treasures that had been buried for their protection came onto the market. The fact that one could be assured of getting things out of the city made buying safer, and I was no longer obliged to confine myself to small things. I obtained the large rugs, the throne chairs, and the throne screens at this time.

In 1928 Mrs. Lucy Perkins and I went to Japan to enjoy the Cherry Blossom season. We took with us a large number of the paintings to have them remounted. As they have a hundred per cent duty on works of art coming into Japan, it was necessary to have a letter from the President of the University, also a letter from the Custom House in Portland guaranteeing that these articles had been brought through the customs as the property of the University, and finally a letter in Japanese from the Japanese Consul in Portland addressed to the custom officials in Kobe stating these facts and so assuring them that they were not dutiable. We had photographs taken of all the paintings, one set to leave behind, one set for the Japanese government, and a third set for us to carry for identification.

With all these preparations one essential item had been overlooked. While the Japanese government did not charge for a passport visa, it was nevertheless necessary to have one, and we found ourselves in the dilemma of not being able to land in Japan. We went on to Shanghai where the Japanese consul vise'd our passports. On our way back to Japan we made a stop at Nagasaki where, through an old friend of my husband's, we obtained much of our beautiful old Japanese lacquer. This art dealer was very pleased to send the collection to a university museum on the Pacific coast, as it would bring an appreciation of their art to our students.

Upon our return to Kyoto we were able to get some of the tomb figures that are now on exhibition in the Museum. Very shortly, Miss Maude I. Kerns, who was making a trip around the world, reached Japan and was with us for a month. She was a great help in planning the setting for the Japanese palanquin with Miss Cherry Blossom about to enter, and the gold screens as a background.

In 1929-30, Mrs. Perkins and I went to the Pacific Relations Conference in Kyoto and from there to Peking. Upon this occasion I obtained the valuable collection of Chinese roll paintings, the Chinese jade, crystal, and rose quartz. Also some books on Oriental art which will eventually be a great addition to the Museum library when we get it installed in its new quarters in the Museum building. I wish to add my thanks to Miss Maude I. Kerns for her aid in installing the collection. Her artistic sense of color values was of great assistance to me.

The experience connected with obtaining these museum pieces has been extremely interesting and enjoyable, not to mention the many thrilling adventures at times of Oriental political unrest. I am very grateful to my friends in the Orient who, being art connoisseurs, made this collection possible by helping me to locate these fine specimens.

The Following is a Copy of the Deed of Gift of the Murray Warner Collection of the Museum of Art

Prince Gary Callison's second season as head football coach at Oregon was the most successful experienced by the school in the past decade. The major achievements of the Webfoot grid team were: the winning of the Pacific Coast Conference title; the successful defense of our goal line against the University of Washington for the sixth consecutive year; the second consecutive victory over Oregon State; and the winning of the Governors' trophy by defeating St. Mary's.

The conference race was a dog fight during the 1933 season and the outcome was very much in doubt until the season was near a close. Oregon and Stanford headed the list in a tie for title honors, Southern California on their heels and Oregon State a strong fourth. Callison was in his second year at Oregon, while Lon Stiner of O.S.C.

Oregon's Champion Grid Squad

and Tiny Thornhill of Stanford were in their first seasons as head coaches at their schools.

In addition to the success of the team as a whole, members won several individual honors. Foremost of these was Mike Mikulak, crunching fullback, who was selected as the outstanding fullback of the nation by several experts. Although most of these did not place "Iron Mike" on the first team, they included him on the second or third teams, and no selection of national scope ignored him. Mike was also the almost unanimous choice for all-coast fullback, and was the defensive star of the East-West Shrine game.

Other Oregon players who were given honors on all-star teams included: Bernie Hughes, center, and Mark Temple, half, co-captains; Ray Morse, end, co-captain elect; Bree Cuppoletti, guard; Bud Pozzo, end; Alex Eagle, tackle; and Leighton Gee, half.

The Oregon backfield combination of Temple, Gee, Mikulak and Parke, quarter and co-captain elect, was rated one of the most dangerous on the coast and was favorably compared with the four horsemen of Notre Dame. As is usually the case when a good backfield gets credit, the backs are working behind a scrappy line. Most of the linesmen were veterans and the forward unit showed this in the games. Two of the linesmen, Hughes and Cuppoletti, were Mikulak's teammates in the New Year's Day East-West game in which the West, with a strong delegation of Northwest stars in the lineup, defeated the Easterners.

Prink Callison came in for his share of the extra honors when he was named among the first ten of the nation's grid coaches.

Oregon and Oregon State entered the annual "Civil War" undefeated on November 11. Oregon State had been tied, but the tie was with Southern California and they had been the first team that the Trojans had been unable to defeat in more than a score of games. Oregon's record was Simon pure and included a brilliant 6-0 defeat of Washington. The game was held in Portland, free transportation being provided for the students. It was the last game before a home crowd for several of the players, and they turned in an inspired performance, coming from behind to score on two long drives, one of 76 yards and the other of 71 yards.

Oregon's first score came in the second quarter. The drive started in the first period when Temple received a punt on the Oregon 29 yard line. Four plays and a penalty carried the ball across the middle line, Mikulak plunging to a first down on the Orange 42. Gee on a reverse gained 12 more yards, Temple adding 2 more as the quarter ended.

Mikulak made 10 yards to the State 18 yard line. Temple made 2 more. Parke gained 6 and then Temple made a first down on the Beaver 8 yard line. Temple gained 3 yards on two plays and Parke on a reverse went to the 1 yard line. Mikulak and his famous cruncher play scored. Devine was hoisted high to block Milligan's kick.

The second score came in the final quarter. In the third quarter the Beavers were held for downs on the Oregon 24. Temple, Gee, Mikulak and Oregon State's penalized roughness moved the ball into Orange territory once more. From the State 39, Mike advanced 6 yards on a cruncher. Temple slid through to the Beaver 18, and then added 4 more as the quarter ended.

As the quarter opened Mikulak gained 3 yards. Temple added another. Iron Mike on a cruncher went to the Oregon State 3 yard line. Again Mike gained a yard. Temple on a fake run, cut back off tackle and crossed the goal line standing up. Temple kicked the goal.

Oregon State displayed some heady football to open the scoring. Shortly after the kickoff, Pangle intercepted Temple's pass on the Orange 27 yard line. Two plays made five yards for the Beavers and on the third down Franklin quick-kicked over Temple's head to the Oregon 7 yard line. Parke punted to his own 47, Franklin returned the ball to the Oregon 37. From here Franklin made a first down on the Oregon 20. Three plays brought 8 yards for the Beavers. On the fourth down, Tar Schwammel, linesman, fell back and kicked goal from the 18 yard line.

Mikulak was the outstanding player on the field. He made 89 yards for an average of 4 yards per play. He failed to gain only once. Gee gained 77 yards for a 6 yard average. Temple registered 64 yards, averaging 4.5 yards. Franklin, Oregon State's flashy half, made 73 yards for an average of 3.8 yards. Oregon made 17 first downs and Oregon State 10.

Although Oregon had beaten Gonzaga by one more point than Washington, the Huskies were the favorites before the game. It was hardly hoped that Oregon could preserve its 5 year record of holding Washington scoreless.

Gee recovered a fumble in the second half and after an exchange of punts Oregon invaded Washington territory for the first time in the game. Parke was the man who crossed the center stripe with the ball, being stopped on the Washington 45. Mikulak added the few feet needed for a first down. Gee added another yard. Temple passed to Morse for 13 yards and a first down on the Husky 31. Gee, on a reverse and cutback, went to the 18 yard marker. Temple made eight more in two plays before the quarter ended.

Mikulak went to the Washington 6. A Washington offside and Mr. Mikulak put the ball on the Husky 2 foot line. A high pass from center was fumbled, Washington recovering. Ahonen punted to the Husky 40 and Temple returned the ball to the 23 yard line. Here Oregon was penalized for holding. With 25 yards to gain for a first down, Temple faded back to pass. He was hit, but got away a wobbly pass. Gee retraced his steps, snagged the pass and went to the Washington 25 yard line. Another pass by Temple, this time to Morse, brought the ball to the 17 yard line. On the fourth down Gee took the ball, cut back and dodged to the Washington 4 yard line. Temple plunged to the one yard line and Mikulak dived over for the score. Miligan missed the attempted conversion. The ed one of the heaviest lines in collegiate football, but the Oregon line proved equal in ability and fight. In the first quarter Temple started from the 33 yard line of Oregon and reeled off a 19 yard gain. Temple then passed to Pozzo for 10 more yards. Gee made 9 more on a reverse. With Mikulak, Temple, and Gee packing the ball, the Webfoots worked it down to scoring territory where it was fourth down and a yard to go. Temple faked an end run and passed to Gee over the line to score. Temple converted.

After the Gaels had tied the score, Oregon came back to the St. Mary's goal territory and again tallied. Temple gained possession of the ball on an interception on the Gael's 39 yard line. Gee on a reverse went to the 30. Mike added two more and Temple and Gee five more. A pass, Temple to Pozzo, added 11 yards. As the third quarter ended, Temple reached the 3 yard line.

Three yards were lost as the St. Mary's team stiffened its defense, but a reverse, Mikulak to Parke, scored. St. Mary's tied the score in the third quarter after George Ganrinus blocked Parke's kick on the Oregon 47 yard line and ran to the Webfoot 11 yard stripe. Two plays later, Wilson went over the goal for the tying score. It was following this that Oregon scored its second touchdown and the game ended 13 to 7 for Oregon.

Leighton Gee's field generalship brought him praise from the Bay region fans. The team clicked efficiently under his barking and made it a brilliant last game for the 12 men who were endgame ended with Oregon again threatening the Husky goal, advancing the ball to the 11 yard line.

The leadership of Temple, in the backfield, and of Hughes, in the line, were large factions in the Oregon victory. It was in this game that Mikulak established himself as an offensive threat.

For the first time in five years of competition the Governors' trophy, donated by the governors of Oregon and California, was won by Oregon in the annual St. Mary's tilt. St. Mary's boasting their collegiate football careers. These were Temple, Gee, Hughes, Mikulak, Cuppoletti, Pozzo, Wishard, Nilsson, Clark, Swanson, Bobbitt, and Rushlow.

Oregon had little trouble winning its only intersectional tilt, against Utah. Gee's 51 yard run for a touchdown was the feature of the game. The reserves were given an opportunity to play and showed up well. Ike Armstrong, Utah coach, said of the Oregon team, "The left end on the third team looks a little weak." The final score was 26 to 6.

Oregon scored its winning touchdown against the University of California at Los Angeles in the first half and spent the second half protecting their 7 point lead. The score was made after Oregon had fumbled on the 1 yard line. The Bruins kicked, but the Webfoots came back to a touchdown. The final score was 7-0, Oregon.

Oregon won easily from Idaho, 19 to 0. Willy Smith, speedy back of the invading Vandals, again failed to show his heels to the Oregon eleven.

U.S.C. was the only team to beat Oregon. Few Oregon supporters denied the Trojans the credit for a fairly won game and a fine comeback after the Stanford defeat, but it is felt that the high score run up by the visitors was due to a series of tough breaks, starting with the injury to Leighton Gee early in the game. Cotton Warburton of the Trojan eleven was the one man most responsible for the outcome. The final score was 26 to 0.

The first three games of the season did not give Oregon a great deal of trouble. Linfield was overwhelmed by a 53 to 0 score in the season opener. Gonzaga was defeated 14 to 0 in a game that gave the first hint of Mikulak's line bucking ability, Gee's signal calling forte, and Parke's fine punting. Columbia, led by Murel Nehl, who later played in the East-West Shrine game, held the Oregonians to a 14 to 7 score. Biff Nilsson sustained injuries in this game which kept him out of action for several weeks. Van Vliet, elusive halfback, was uncovered by Callison in this game.

Frosh Divide Annual Series With Rook Team

Frosh Coaches Bill Reinhart and Irv Schultz were greeted by a turnout of 80 aspirants. This number was soon cut to 40 and retained throughout the season. The team this year was heavier than usual, and as a whole compared favorably with yearling teams of past seasons. During the latter part of the season the team was without the services of Bill Reinhart, who was ill.

The yearlings opened the 1933 season by trouncing the Rooks on Hayward field, October 13, by a 7-3 score. The Rooks drew first blood when Woodman kicked a field goal in the third quarter. The Frosh retaliated with a march down the field that culminated in a touchdown by Elmore Borden, halfback. Joe Murray, end, kicked the extra point. Bishop and Farrar also stood out for the home team.

The Frosh journeyed to Klamath Falls October 28, to play Southern Oregon Normal School, which had previously defeated the Rooks 33-0. The yearlings put up a strong fight and made several goal-line stands, losing when the Sons passed their way to a touchdown. Final score was 7-0.

At Corvallis, Nov. 3, the Ducklings were surprised by a greatly improved Rook team and went down 6-0. The game was fought on even terms until the second quarter, when Woodman broke loose for 51 yards and a touchdown. The Frosh tried desperately to score, coming within inches of the Rook goal. Borden and Wilson played well for the Frosh.

At the end of the season numerals were granted to Wilson, Murray, Cross, Adams, ends; Farrar, Berry, centers; Estes, Davis, Hardisty, guards; Bjork, Fury, Burchard, tackles; Owen, Penn, quarterbacks; Borden, Nye, Hamaker, Rix, Shininger, halfbacks; Bishop, Jacobs, Konopka, fullbacks.

The University of Washington lost little time, and only two games, in tucking the northern division flag away, but the feature of the race was Oregon's sensational rise from the cellar to second place. Oregon's season came to a climax with the final two games with Oregon State. In these games the quintet that last year won only two tilts beat the 1933 champions, sending the Beavers down to third place and appropriating the second niche.

The Oregon rise was not without its setbacks. After a disastrous series with the Washington five, in which the Huskies won all four, the Ducks occupied the all too familiar cellar, but with eight games left, Bill Reinhart's boys forged ahead to win seven of these and second place.

Overshadowing, perhaps the winning of runner-up position, was the outcome of the annual series with Oregon State. In the first game Coach Reinhart sent his men into the game with a passing offense that bewildered the Beavers. The score at the end of the half was 16-7 for the Webfooters. The Orangemen changed from zone defense to man-to-man tactics in the second half and came within one point of tying the score. But Oregon finished the game with the score 30-26 for the Lemon Yellow.

The game at Corvallis the following week was featured only by a score that was an all-time low in northern division play. Again in the third game the Lemon Yellow dominated the Orange to win 33-25. The half time score was similar to the first game, 18-6, Oregon, but the Beavers were never closer than seven points in the second half. Of Oregon State's six counts in the first half, four were made on foul shots.

The final game crowd saw Oregon take the lead at the start, saw Oregon State tie the score twice, and saw the Orange miss chances to tie it up again in the closing minutes.

The Washington series featured an overtime game, won, 34-32, by the Huskies.

The University of Oregon freshman basketball team, under the coaching of Gene Shields, took the measure of every high school team it met and divided its series with the Oregon State Rooks during the winter term. Only one prep team even came close to beating the Webfoot babes. That was Wendling high in the game played there. DeNeffe's, strong independent team of Eugene, downed the Frosh, by only five points, in a practice game. It was the yearlings' only home defeat.

The rook five, no less than Napoleon, had its Wellington. This Wellington sank a cripple in the wrong basket in one frosh-rook encounter here to give the frosh the two points needed for victory. In the other frosh win over their ancient rivals, the Webfoot youngsters overwhelmed the visitors. The frosh led at half-time in both of the games they dropped to the rooks, but the Orange babes rallied and won.

The combination that saw the most service during the season included Lewis and Williamson, forwards; Helmken, center; Liebowitz and Faust, guards; with Hardisty, Murray, Rundlett and Guthrie seeing considerable action as substitutes.

Numerals were awarded to the following men: Roy Williamson, John Lewis, Harry Helmken, Sam Liebowitz, Dale Hardisty, Arnold Faust, Sid Milligan, Ray Miller, Vernon Sprague, John Koke, Robert Newlands, Gerald Calhoun and Joe Ahern.

The Oregon yearlings ran up a total of points more than double that of their opponents, scoring 557 and having 254 scored against them. Astoria high school, winner of state title at Salem, was downed by the decisive score of 33 to 16. The Frosh also beat Franklin high school of Portland 28 to 19, Salem high school 32 to 23 and 35 to 22, and Eugene high school 48 to 18 and 33 to 16. All these schools were strong contenders for the state prep pennant.

Bill Hayward, 30 Years Oregon Track Mentor

Coach Hayward Is Honored By Track Results

The Oregon track team handed "Colonel" William Hayward, dean of collegiate track coaches, a fine send-off on his thirtieth year as Oregon track mentor by improving sufficiently over rather unpromising early time trials to take second place at the annual northern division of the Pacific Coast conference track meet. In addition to the performance of the team at Pullman in this meet, the high spots of the season were: the victory over the University of Washington on May 13; the defeat of Oregon State a week later; the winning of national honors by Captain Paul Starr and Warren Demaris in the World's Fair intercollegiate track and field meet and the national A.U. track and field championships in Chicago.

Records made during the season included: a new mark for the 220 yard dash in the northern division meet by Paul Starr; and another new mark at Pullman by Demaris in the javelin throw; a new record in the 220 in the Oregon-Oregon State dual meet; two other dual meet records, one in the javelin made against Washington by Demaris and the other in the 2-mile run made against Oregon State runners by Bob Wagner. Starr also tied the dual meet time in the 100 in the meet with the Beavers.

The Order of the O started a drive on May 24 to send Paul Starr, sprint ace, to the intercollegiate track and field meet in Chicago. Shortly after Bill Bowerman, in charge of the drive, announced that the Oregon captain would definitely attend the meet, Starr offered to split the fund to allow Warren Demaris, javelin hurler, to accompany him. The A.S.U.O. increased the fund to $300, and the two track stars left for Chicago on June 9.

On June 18 the meet was held before 10,000 persons. Starr finished the 100 two yards behind Ralph Metcalfe in a world's record-tying race, Metcalfe's time being 9.4 seconds. In the furlong Metcalfe again won, making a new world's record of 20.4 seconds. Jim Johnson, another negro flash, was second and Starr placed third.

Demaris bettered his best local mark of 206 feet to win third place with a throw of 209 feet, 7½ inches. First place in the javelin was won by Purvis of Purdue with a throw of 216 feet, 6¼ inches, and second by Sample of Arizona with a throw of 211 feet, 4½ inches.

Hugh Rosson, graduate manager, announced June 28, that the two Oregon stars would carry Oregon colors in the A.A.U. meet. Before this announcement there was a possibility of the two representing a coast athletic club.

In this meet, also held in Chicago, on June 30, Starr placed third in the 200-meter and fourth in the 100-meter event, and Demaris won second place in the javelin throw, Metcalfe, Johnson and Jesse Owens, a trio of negro sprint stars, took the first three places in the 100. Metcalfe and Johnson came in first and second in the 200-meter, the Marquette University flash setting a new meet mark of 21.1 seconds. Lee Bartlett, unattached, won the javelin throw with a distance of 209 feet, 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Demaris' throw of 203 feet, 3 inches won him second place.

Six first places, two of them new records, three seconds, two thirds and two fourths, scored by nine individuals and the Oregon relay team, gave Oregon 45 points and second place in the Pacific Coast conference northern division track and field meet, held at Pullman, May 30. Washington State took first with 54 $\frac{1}{3}$ points. Washington was third with 34 $\frac{1}{3}$ points, Oregon State fourth with 13; Montana fifth with 10 $\frac{1}{3}$ and Idaho last with 8.

Starr led the field in individual honors. He made ten points and set a new division record of 21 seconds in the 220. He won the 100-yard dash in 9.8 seconds. Demaris also set a division mark by heaving the javelin 205 feet, 9 inches. Frye won the discus throw with a toss of 141 feet, $\frac{1}{2}$ inch and took fourth in the shot put. Wagner ran the two-mile event in 9 minutes, 49.1 seconds to win. The other Oregon first was won by the relay team of Marrs, Holman, Bowerman, and Burr. The time was 3 minutes, 20.6 seconds for a mile relay. Holman and Burr also placed in the 440-yard event, Holman second and Burr fourth. Other Oregon scorers were McCoy, second in the low hurdles; Hunter, second in the mile; Dolloff, third in the 880-yard run; and Palmer, third in the broad jump.

The Oregon track team added the final touch of perfection to the stag banquet in honor of Coach Hayward by defeating O.S.C. 84 $\frac{1}{4}$ to 46 $\frac{3}{4}$ on the day of the event. William L. Hayward started coaching track at Oregon April 18, 1904. At that time he had already made a name for himself in the sports world. In the 1890's, when rowing was one of the track events, he was one of the greatest foot-racers and track athletes of the day. He was a friend of "Gentleman" Jim Corbett, had been with Walter Christie at the University of California for three years and the previous year, 1903, his Albany college track team had trounced the Oregon team. Since coming to Oregon he has served on the United States Olympic coaching staff several times and coached the Multnomah Club track team. In addition to his track coaching, "Colonel Bill" is head trainer for Webfoot athletic teams.

The banquet was attended by many sport luminaries, including several of the men who starred on Hayward's Albany, Oregon and Multnomah Club teams. The Emerald issued a special "Hayward Edition" for the banquet.

Oregon State was decisively beaten by the Webfoot team on May 19, the day of the Hayward banquet. Oregon won ten first places to celebrate the occasion. Starr won the 100 and 220-yard dashes, tying the dual meet mark of 9.8 seconds in the first and setting a new record of 20.9 seconds in the other. Holman won both the 440-yard dash and the low hurdles. Palmer and Nowland tied for first in the high jump, the former also taking second in the broad jump and third in the javelin and Nowland third in the high hurdles. Demaris and Wagner both set new marks, Demaris throwing the javelin 204 feet 6 inches for his, and Wagner running the two-mile event in the record time of 9 minutes, 38.2 seconds. The Oregon relay team of Bowerman, Holman, Burr and Marris won the mile relay. McCoy tied for first in the pole vault and took second in the low hurdles and high hurdles. Frye rang up two firsts in the discus and shot putt. Hunter won the mile run. Dolloff took second in the half-mile event. Marris and Burr made the 440 an all-Oregon event by placing second and third to Holman. Kostka won second in the shot putt. Jamison took third in the broad jump. Schomp won third place in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

In the sixth annual dual relay meet with the Beavers, the Staters captured five of the eight races. Oregon won the half-mile, distance medley, and mile events. The winning Oregon combinations were: Schomp, Marris, Holman and Starr for the half-mile; Starr, Burr, Wagner and Hunter for the distance medley; and Greenough, Holman, Dolloff and Marris in the mile.

Although the final score was close, 69-62, the meet with the University of Washington at Seattle was all Oregon's. The Webfoot tracksters led all the way and the Huskies did not lead in a single one of the first six events. Oregon won nine first places and tied for first twice. Demaris set a new northern division dual meet mark in the javelin, throwing it 203 feet, 4 inches. Starr won both the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Gardner Frye was a two-time winner, a performance duplicated against O.S.C. a week later, taking the shot putt and discus events. Mason McCoy tied for first in the pole vault, was second in the 220 and third in the low hurdles. Hunter won the mile and Wagner the two-mile. Burr captured the 440 honors. Nowland came in in front in the high hurdles. Palmer tied for first in the high jump.

Freshman track did not include a very extensive season last spring. The yearling track men easily won a five-way meet with four nearby high schools. The Oregon frosh took seven firsts and tied another for a total of 69 points. Eugene high school was second with 27 points.

Three won third track letters, five second, and five first letters. Captain Paul Starr, Arthur Holman and John Marrs were the three-year men. Captain-elect Sherwood Burr, Charles Dolloff, and Robert Hunter, Mason McCoy and William A. Palmer won second letters. William Bowerman, Gardner Frye, Fred Nowland and Robert Wagner won their first letters.

Freshman numerals were awarded to: Whit Arey, Dewey Carpenter, Bruce Ewen, Russell Humphreys, Paulen Kaseberg, Robert Ludington, Dick Mears, John Milligan, Clarence Nye, Bill Paddock, Howard Patterson, Robert Ryan, George Scharpf, Stanford Smith and Robert Thomas.

Webfoot track activities got away to an early start in 1934 with the Hill military academy indoor relay carnival held the first week of the Spring term. Oregon's part in this event was to win the university relay, in which the Lemon Yellow competed with Oregon State tracksters. The men who made up the winning relay team were Bud Shumake, Bill Bowerman, Sherwood Burr, track captain, and George Scharpf.

Oregon's 1934 schedule officially opened with the annual relays with Oregon State on April 28. Colonel Hayward's hopes were somewhat dimmed when Warren Demaris, javelin star, failed to return to school. Another of Bill's worries concerns just who will fill the spiked shoes of Paul Starr, sprint ace, who has been graduated.

Postponed Games Feature Baseball

Facing opposition not only from rival nines, but also from the weather, the Oregon baseball squad turned in a creditable season in spite of this handicap. Almost every game was either canceled or postponed and those games which were played were played on soggy fields. The varsity record follows:

Oregon 7	Columbia 12	At Eugene	Oregon 3	Willamette 5	At Salem
Oregon 6	Columbia 1	At Eugene	Oregon 2	Oregon State 14	At Corvallis

Oregon's Weather Defying Baseball Squad

The season lasted from April 28, when the Webfoots opened against Columbia, until June 3, when the final game was played with the Beavers.

Batteries for the season were picked by Bill Reinhart, coach, from Chatterton, Garbarino, Shaneman, Greene, Donin, Hoag, van Dine and Vail.

Letters were awarded to the following: Robert Chatterton, Leonard Chester, J. Westley Clausen, Leonard 'Ike' Donin, Ernest Barbarino, Ronald Gemmell, Bill Greene, Chuck Hoag, Cecil Inman, Stan Kostka, Fred Sears, LeRoy 'Duke' Shaneman, Kenneth G. 'Mickey' Vail.

Freshman numerals for baseball were awarded to: Earl Bucknum, Harry Butler, Drew Copp, Marcus Delaunay, Lloyd Goff, Joe Gordon, John Hanley, Gordon Holland, Bill Johnson, Francis Kolkowsky, Fred Lieuallen, Bill Martin, George A. Nash, Marvin Stroble, Guy Taylor, Robert Thunemann, Edward Vail and Verne Whittaker.

As the 1934 season neared Coach Rinherth had a promising group of baseball candidates on hand. His roster included four experienced pitchers, a veteran infield and an outfield that should turn in some good work. The loss of Charles Hoag, captain-elect and catcher, left the backstop post empty. Hoag signed with the Portland Beavers. The job is probably to be filled by Homer Goulet, veteran reserve catcher, and Con Fury, newcomer to baseball, but known as a football player. The Webfoot 1934 season was scheduled to start April 13 against Willamette at Eugene. Oregon State is to be met first on April 27 at Eugene.

MINOR SPORTS

Washington and O.S.C. Bowed to These Varsity Swimmers

Swimming Team Heads Program of Minor Sports

After a temporary curtailment in 1932-33, minor sports were put on a budget of $200 for 1933-34. Sports included in this allowance were swimming, golf, tennis, boxing, wrestling and gymnastics. Contestants paid the expenses of their trips to other cities. Officials believe that this competition, although limited, should furnish a basis for minor sports programs in the future.

Golf, led by Don Moe, Walker Cup star, enjoyed a comparatively successful season, winning three tilts and dropping one. After defeating Oregon State twice, the team went up to Seattle, losing to the Washington team 15 1-2 to 8 1-2. In the final match of the season, the Webfoot players defeated the Eugene Country Club. Don Moe, Leonard Anderson, Don Olsen and Dick Near won letters. The team was managed by Preston Gunther. Frosh golf was not as successful, the yearlings dropping two to Eugene high school, and eking out a victory over University high school. John Boyd, Brooks Claridge, Al Lewis, Lewis Fox, Ed Labbe and Ed Wheelock won numerols.

Tennis was represented by an unofficial team which scheduled matches with Willamette and Albany, winning both. Two matches were played with Oregon State, the Webfoot netmen tying one and losing the other.

Swimming was put back on the minor sports schedule, and enjoyed a successful season. The team, coached by Mike Hoyman, established itself as one of the strongest in the Northwest, beating Washington 49 to 35, as Jim Reed, Oregon backstroker, established a new Pacific coast intercollegiate record of 1:46.5. A week later the Webfoots took on O.S.C., swamping them 52 to 32. The next week, with the powerful Multnomah Athletic Club team, was not as successful, the collegians losing 52 to 32.

Intramural Sports Managers. Inset: Paul R. Washke, Director

This year, under the management of the Intramural Administrative Board, approximately 60 per cent of the University men took part in interhouse competition. Play lasted from October to May, inclusive, with sports ranging from boxing to water polo. On the Intramural Administrative Board were Paul Washke, director; Earl E. Boushey, supervisor; Russell Cutler and H. S. Hoyman, assistant directors, and the Emerald reporters.

House intramural managers for this year were Frank Michek, Alpha Hall; Myron Stroble, Alpha Tau Omega; Don Siegmund, Beta Theta Pi; Ben Chandler, Chi Psi; Miles McKay, Delta Tau Delta; Starford Smith, Delta Upsilon; Bob Thomas, Kappa Sigma; Floyd Smith, Omega Hall; Don Olsen, Phi Delta Theta; Tom Aughinbaugh, Phi Gamma Delta; Jerry Murphy, Phi Kappa Psi; Arthur Derbyshire, Phi Sigma Kappa; Clayton Wentz, Pi Kappa Alpha; James Lieuallen, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Stanley Bromberg, Sigma Alpha Mu; Kenneth Vail, Sigma Chi; Norman Winslow, Sigma Hall; Gene Mashek, Sigma Nu; Bob Barry, Sigma Phi Epsilon; Clair Christopherson, Theta Chi; Howard Clark, Zeta Hall; John Crockett, Yeomen.

Beta Theta Pi's Victorious Basketball Teams

Beta Theta Pi took first in both swimming and water polo, also winning the "A" and "B" basketball championships. At the beginning of the new term the Yeomen broke the Beta monopoly by taking the handball tournament. Other fraternities broke into the victory column, Phi Beta Theta winning the "A" league volleyball championship, and Sigma Phi Epsilon taking the "B" championship. The Yeomen, by winning the wrestling tournament, took over second place at the end of the winter term, with 517 points. The Betas still led with 539 counters. Sigma Phi Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, and Phi Delta Theta all ran up over 400 points.

Order of "O" Record Shows Active Season

Three groups on the University of Oregon campus that serve in an auxiliary capacity to Web-foot sports have gone through the past year with considerable success. These groups and their heads are: Order of the "O" club, Bob Hunter, president; athletic

The Order of the "O"

Activities of the Lettermen's club during the past three terms opened in the Spring of 1933 with a tag drive to raise funds to send Paul Starr to the National Intercollegiate Track meet at Chicago, Ill. That the drive was successful is attested by the fact that not only did Captain Starr go east, but his team mate, Warren Demaris, accompanied him. The next project on the club calendar was the sponsoring of a banquet in honor of the start of Bill Hayward's thirtieth year as Oregon track coach. The club donated a cup to the winning 880 yard relay team at the state interscholastic high school track meet held at Eugene. The cup and the meet were won by Washington high school of Portland. The Order of the "O" supplied officials from its membership for this track meet and helped in sponsoring the event. Three year lettermen now receive five year passes for home games as the result of a drive sponsored by the club.

One of the first moves on the part of the club in the Fall term of 1933 was to lead the way for re-establishment of a minor sports program at Oregon. The executive council acted in favor of the drive and minor sports were revived on the campus. During the Fall term the lettermen also sponsored the All-American Ball, at which the selection of Miss Margaret DeYoung as All-American girl was announced.

Eddie Vail, Mickey Vail, leader, and George Schenk, Yell Squad

A rally tie drive was held just before the Oregon-Oregon State game, when the club backed a move to have the executive council make official purchase of rooters' lids for students, which was done. The lettermen were made official custodians of the Victory Bell, installed at the Oregon-O.S.C. game. The club furnished salesmen for programs at all football games.

The second annual boxing and wrestling exhibition was the opening feature of the 1934 Winter term's activities of the club, with Oregon and Oregon State men competing for the championship of the two schools. The club awarded plaques to football lettermen. Although the winner had not been announced, as the Oregon went to press, the club awarded its annual Spaulding cup to the lettermen with the highest grade average.

During the Spring term of 1934, the club plans to reinstate its traditional barn dance and to hold a closed picnic for its members. Officers of the club for 1933-34 include: Bob Hunter, president; Gib Olinger, vice-president; Jack Robertson, secretary; Bob Miller, treasurer; and Dr. R. R. Huestis, adviser.

Athletic Managers, Senior Managers in Front Row

STUDENT MANAGERS

Oregon's student managers had busy seasons this year. Heading the list of managers is Edward Field, senior manager of athletics. Senior managers are: James Ferguson, football, and his successor, Paul Golden, who will be in charge for spring practice; Jim Gormley, basketball; Harold Birkinshaw, track; Eldon Woodin, swimming; Bill Petersno, baseball.

Assisting them are the following junior managers: Sterling Boyd, Harold Peterson, Benton Hargreaves, Don French and Alfred Eames, football managers; Donald Laws and Fred Whittlesey, basketball managers; Jim Ringrose and Reed Swenson, track managers; Tom McCall and Rupert Pray, swimming managers; and Jack Price, Walt Caldwell and John Powers, baseball managers.

YELL LEADERS

As custodians of the Oregon spirit at athletic games and rallies, Mickey Vail, yell leader, and his assistants, George Schenk and Eddie Vail not only led the organized cheering, but added color to the games with tumbling stunts.

The presidents of sororities have direct charge of all activities of their respective organizations. They are responsible for the proper functioning of their houses, both within the sorority and in its relations with other organizations on the campus. Thus house presidents cooperate with the Dean of Women and have served to promote much better understanding between the students and faculty than formerly prevailed.

House managers are responsible for the financial affairs of their sororities. They control purchasing and collections, and have general charge of all business matters pertaining to their respective houses. In recent years many houses have combined the offices of House Mother and manager, the house mother assuming the activities formerly carried on by the student managers.

Pan-Hellenic is a national organization founded for the purpose of maintaining a high plane of social and scholastic standards, and providing a forum for discussion of questions of interest to the college and fraternity world. On this campus the Pan-Hellenic representatives cooperate with the Dean of Women in all matters pertaining to the activities of sororities. There are twenty-one national sororities maintaining full membership in this association, while one is an associate member. Nineteen of these are represented on the Oregon campus.

Fraternity presidents serve both to manage the affairs of their houses and to cooperate with the Dean of Men in regard to the activities of their members. Each house president is the responsible head of his organization, and therefore has a great deal of executive authority. Many matters of a routine nature are settled by these officers without the necessity of calling a meeting of the entire membership, thus expediting the business of the fraternities to a large degree.

The managers have charge of the financial and business organization of their fraternities. They have charge of all purchasing done by the house, including expenditures of all types. In addition they collect house bills, assessments, etc. By these activities the managers receive a great deal of valuable business training, both of a theoretical and practical nature.

EDWARD MARTINDALE - President HAROLD BIRKINSHAW - Secretary
HOWARD BOBBITT - - Vice-President

The Interfraternity Council is composed of a representative from each fraternity on the University campus, the representative usually being the house president. The council's chief function is to control and regulate interfraternity affairs. Virgil D. Earl, dean of men, acts in the capacity of permanent adviser of the group.

One of the principal activities of the council is in regard to rushing. It serves the same general purpose that Pan-Hellenic does among the sororities, serving to put all rushing and pledging on a basis of fair competition, and establishing standards for all fraternities. The council also cooperates with the Dean of Men on questions affecting fraternities as a group.

ADVERTISING

IT is with the deepest appreciation

- that the Oregana staff acknow-
- ledges the loyal support of those
- firms which in this time of economic
- stress and curtailed advertising bud-
- gets, cooperated in making this issue
- of the Oregana possible. Because of
- this consideration, it is to the best in-
- terests of Oregon students and the
- alumni that they give increased and
- prolonged patronage to those insti-
- tutions whose advertisements ap-
- pear in the pages following.
