University signs lease agreement to expand Portland programs

The University of Oregon announced May 4 that it has signed an agreement with White Stag Block, LLC, managed by Venerable Group, Inc., that will allow the university to relocate and expand its Portland Center to the historic White Stag block.

"We are delighted to be expanding our Portland Center as demand has exceeded the capacity of our current center," said university President Dave Frohnmayer. "This new space will bring together our programs in a signature building in Old Town that will best serve our students, our alumni, and the people of Portland."

The university agreed to an 18-year lease for the White Stag building, located in Old Town Portland, and portions of two other historic buildings also situated on the White Stag block. With more than 66,000 square feet of available space, the new Portland Center will unite university academic programs in one place and allow the university to host lectures and other events. The center will include six classrooms, new event space for functions including up to 250 people, a new library presence for its architecture and journalism programs, a shared computer laboratory, and a new university book store/Duck Shop that will feature a café. It also will house administrative offices for 75 to 100 employees, including the university's study abroad program, AHA International.

"Ducks always make good neighbors," said Portland Mayor Tom Potter. "I'm glad the University of Oregon has committed to expanding their excellent programs in Portland. The university's commitment to maintaining a strong and expanded Portland presence is welcome news for Old Town and for our entire region."

Three buildings will be developed as a single complex in the downtown waterfront district, with each keeping its signature look. "Venerable plans to make an investment of approximately $30 million in the White Stag block," said Art DeMuro, president of Venerable Properties. "All of this is made possible by the University of Oregon's need to consolidate and expand its programs in a distinctive place."

Earlier this year, the Portland Development Commission agreed to invest in developing the White Stag block. "Along with the relocation of the fire station, the University of Oregon's decision to renovate and reinvent the White Stag block sets the foundation for Old Town's renaissance as a magnet for activity and diversity for downtown Portland," said Bruce Warner, the commission's executive director.

The university's journalism, architecture and allied arts, and law programs are in strong demand among Portland-area professionals and prospective students. The School of Journalism and Communication's George S. Turnbull Portland Center opened its doors earlier this year and began offering its Eugene-based students a Senior Experience, combining half-day internships with late afternoon classes in Portland this spring. Roundtable discussions bringing together working communications professionals to discuss the issues of the day are offered on a regular basis, and graduate seminars in strategic communication will begin this fall.

"The opening of the Turnbull Center earlier this year is a first step toward the realization of a long-held vision for the school," Tim Gleason, dean of the School of Journalism and Communication, says. "In Portland, we've seen a number of new and exciting ways in which we can serve students, working communications professionals and the Portland community. The design of the expanded Turnbull Center on the White Stag block is underway; once it is complete, the possibilities will increase exponentially."

The School of Architecture and Allied Arts has offered architecture and urban design courses in Portland for more than 25 years. Since 1998, its graduate program in architecture has been a centerpiece of the university's Portland Center. The school is known for the excellence of its cultural and fine arts, digital arts, historic preservation, planning, policy, and environmental design programs. The program in architecture includes more than 75 graduate and undergraduate students studying and working in Portland. Faculty and student urban design and planning projects are underway this spring throughout the whole of the West Coast.

"The School of Architecture and Allied Arts is ready for this exciting move into larger quarters as it aligns with our goals to more boldly and broadly engage our programs with Portland opportunities," said Frances Bronet, the school's dean. "We appreciate the partnership with the private sector which has joined with us to advance the university's objectives. Demand for access to the larger professional and cultural community is strongly felt by all of our school's disciplines."

The university anticipates opening the new Portland Center in January 2008.

The Oregon Executive MBA Program is a joint program of the University of Oregon, Portland State University, and Oregon State University. That program just moved to new facilities located at 200 SW Market Street and is not included in the planned move of the university's Portland operations.

The University of Oregon's current Portland facilities are located in a building it owns at 722 S.W. Second Avenue and elsewhere in the city in leased space.

Three professors win teaching awards

Crystal apples—symbols of teaching excellence—were awarded to three of the university's top teachers on May 11 and 12. The faculty members also will receive a one-time salary increase.

Ronald Beghetto, assistant professor of teaching and learning in the area of Teacher Education at the College of Education, received a 2006 Ersted Award for Distinguished Teaching. Regina Psaki, professor of Italian in the Department of Romance Languages, received the 2006 Thomas F. Herman Faculty Achievement Award for Distinguished Teaching. Tom Lininger, assistant professor of law in the School of Law, also received a 2006 Ersted Award for Distinguished Teaching.

The Ersted award recognizes excellence in teaching by faculty members early in their teaching careers. The Herman Award is given to faculty members who have demonstrated long-standing excellence in teaching at the university. Winners of each award are chosen on the recommendation of faculty members and students, and will receive a $2,000 stipend added to their base salary.

University President Dave Frohnmayer delivered the crystal apples personally to each winner.

"The faculty members who win our Ersted and Herman Teaching Awards set the standards for our future," said Frohnmayer. "They exemplify our commitment to extraordinary teaching. Ronald Beghetto, Regina Psaki and Tom Lininger are absolutely dedicated to their students, their scholarship, and their calling as teachers. I am proud to be their colleague."

Beghetto's students marvel at the way he teaches his courses. They write that his courses are "a life changing experience," and that he is able to bring the world of the classroom to life through his interesting case examples and his remarkable learning exercises. Students also praise his warm personality, commenting on his ready availability for consultation and guidance. Beghetto embodies the very qualities he teaches, including personnel integrity, a sense of humor, a genuine desire to help students learn, as well as an appreciation for theory and research as a guide to professional practice.

Psaki also embodies the qualities of a good teacher, mentor, and scholar. A specialist in medieval Italian literature, Psaki teaches a broad range of graduate and undergraduate level courses. Her peers praise the excellence of her classroom teaching as a highly effective combination of insightful, detailed reading that opens difficult texts to wider questions of perspective and interpretation. She is recognized for her complete and unremitting dedication to the academic life of the department of Romance languages and a "laudable" and "unfailing" commitment to her students.

Lininger is known as a teaching innovator and a demanding instructor who carefully hones the reasoning skills of his students and inspires critical thought. His classes are filled with "humor and passion" and he is described in student evaluations as simply outstanding. Lininger's national scholarly eminence, combined with his engaging teaching techniques, enables student participation in policy discussions and permits them to gain direct experience with law topics and issues.

The winners of the teaching awards will be recognized at spring commencement, set for 12:30 p.m. on Saturday, June 17, at McArthur Court.

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Joe A. Stone, Dean, College of Arts and Sciences, and W.E. Miner Professor of Economics, received a B.A. in 1970 from the University of Texas at El Paso, M.A. and Ph.D. from Michigan State in 1974 and 1977. He joined the UO faculty in 1979, and served as Senior Economist for International Trade on the Council of Economic Advisers during the Reagan administration.

RESEARCH INTERESTS

Joe Stone has primary interests in labor and international economics. Current and recent projects include studies of the rising share of non-marital births in the US and the role of education, the influence of taxes and the composition of expenditures on state economic growth, performance incentives and student outcomes, the effectiveness of public and private schools and influences on the composition of public schools, the role of financial aid in college attendance, cyclical wage and employment adjustment in local labor markets, and the determinants of "intra-industry" international trade.

TEACHING

Professor Stone is currently on an administrative assignment, but normally teaches classes in international trade and labor economics and large-lecture sections of introductory economics.

SELECTED PAPERS

"The Rising Share of Nonmarital Births: Fertility Choices or Marriage Behavior?" Demography, forthcoming, with J. Gray and J. Stockard.

Joe Stone steps down as College of Arts and Sciences dean; Wendy Larson named interim dean

Joe Stone, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences since 1998, will step down as dean on June 30.

Wendy Larson, currently residing at Stanford University as a Stanford Humanities Center Fellow for 2005-06, has been associate dean for the humanities in the College of Arts and Sciences since 2002. Larson will become the college's interim dean on July 1.

Stone, a nationally recognized labor economist, will return to his role in the college as the W. E. Miner Chair in Economics.

"During his 13 years of leadership of the college, both as dean and associate dean, Joe has moved the arts and sciences forward in sometimes difficult financial times, providing leadership in the hiring of exceptional faculty and improving the college's overall quality," said Lorraine Davis, vice president for academic affairs. "As associate dean, Wendy also has demonstrated strong leadership ability. Her desire to build progressively on the college's high quality educational foundation is exemplified by her productivity as a scholar and her strong support of academic excellence."

Larson, a professor of East Asian languages and literature, holds a bachelor's and a master's degree from the University of Oregon and took her doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley.

Linda Brady, incoming senior vice president and provost, will have discussions within the college later this spring with regard to the next steps to be taken in the search for a permanent dean.

RSS feeds added to the university's homepage

Visitors to the University of Oregon's homepage, www.uoregon.edu, now can find an easier way to keep track of university news and events.

A new link in the lower right corner of the homepage will take visitors to a page offering separate RSS, or Really Simple Syndication, feeds for the latest news about university people, programs, and activities, as well as for calendar listings of current and future events on the Eugene campus.

Visitors who have installed RSS news reader software such as NewsCrawler on Windows computers or NetNewsWire on Macintosh computers will be able to subscribe to these RSS feeds by clicking on links to them on the university's RSS feeds page. Platform-independent news readers such as NewsGator are available on the web. Currently, the UO Computing Center only supports RSS access through web browsers Opera and Firefox.

Firefox, which is the university's preferred web browser because it offers full functionality for the changing Flash-based features on the university's homepage, also allows visitors to create "live bookmarks" of RSS feeds. Firefox can be downloaded at no charge from www.mozilla.com/firefox.

Subscribers to the university's RSS feeds will receive updated news and event information as soon as it is posted on the homepage, rather than having to visit the page multiple times to check for changes and additions.

Directions for subscribing to the RSS feeds are given on the feeds page at www.uoregon.edu/rssfeed.shtml. For questions or more information, contact Guy Maynard, director of creative publishing, at (541) 346-5048, or gmaynard@uoregon.edu.

::: University Day at the UO :::

University Day is Thursday, May 18, 2006!

- Come make the UO campus "So Fresh and So Clean" at this year's University Day. Check in runs from 8:30 am - 3:00 pm. One hour of volunteering earns a free "So Fresh & So Clean" t-shirt. Those who check in at 3:00 pm will be able to volunteer until 4:00 pm in order to earn their free t-shirt. Come to our project dedication ceremony at noon to listen to UO Executive Assistant to the President, Dave Hubin, and Director of the Leadership Resource Office, John Duncan, to view this year's project: a commemorative 2006 plaque on the University Day Terrace.
- This year we are celebrating the spirit of Junior Weekend, the weekend of events where University Day first began. we will have a full day of entertainment and games in addition to the traditional campus clean-up activities.
- The original University Day took place in 1905. Let by the class of 1906, students took up shovels and went to work on campus. The event has evolved over the years into what takes place today. Two students revived the tradition in 1990, involving a day of volunteers participating in trash pick-up, planting, and bark dust spreading.
- We hope to see you there! If you have any questions, please e-mail the U-Day Chair, Heidi Rivinus at uday@uoregon.edu.

The Office of Student Life staff is dedicated to helping students have the most successful experience they can while studying at the University of Oregon. The Office of Student Life staff are available to help you find solutions and resources to most issues and concerns on a drop-in basis. University Day 2006 will be May 18

University Day, sponsored by the university's Office of Student Life, is an annual campus-wide community service day for students, staff, faculty, and community members. Volunteer activities include painting, litter pick-up, bark dust spreading and flower planting. This year's event also will feature a commemorative plaque dedication ceremony at noon in the Erb Memorial Union amphitheater.

The theme of this year's University Day, "So Fresh and So Clean," is inspired by the first University Day held in 1905. Originally begun as a way to make Junior Weekend celebrations more meaningful by campus volunteering, these celebrations featured parades, dances, and social events. For this year's celebrations, organizers have partnered with student groups and the university's Cultural Forum to provide entertainment around the campus throughout the day.

Volunteer check-in runs from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., at Collier Lawn, 13th and University Street. Student volunteers who complete one hour of service will receive a University Day 2006 T-shirt.

Victoria/Port Angeles tour a success Cappella Romana sings "Fall of Constantinople" to capacity houses

Led by artistic director Alexander Lingas, Cappella Romana performed its "Fall of Constantinople" program to capacity audiences in Port Angeles, Washington and Victoria, British Columbia on March 10 and 11.

The Juan de Fuca Festival of the Arts in Port Angeles presented the program to nearly 200 people at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church. Considering Port Angeles has a population of about 20,000, the ensemble was thrilled with the large and enthusiastic audience.

The ensemble's appearance in Victoria was in the concert series of the Early Music Society of the Islands, which has featured such prominent early music ensembles as Anonymous 4, the Baltimore Consort, Camerata Koeln, Monica Huggett (of Portland Baroque Orchestra), Ton Koopman, La Venexiana, London Baroque, the Orlando Consort, Andrew Manze, Tafelmusik and many others.

Performing to over 360 in Alix Goolden Hall of the Victoria Conservatory of Music, the audience was treated to one of Cappella Romana's best performances of the program, featuring the striking combination of motets by Dufay and Byzantine chant. This program will be performed in Portland, Seattle, Bainbridge Island, and Eugene in May 2006.

This long-overdue tour was the result of a planned performance in Victoria in January 2005, which in the end had to be rescheduled because of ice storms and freezing fog. Read the dramatic account from last year's press release here.

Ivan Moody conducts Balkan Epiphany

PORTLAND, Oregon; SEATTLE, Washington. Cappella Romana received double standing ovations with two encores on January 13 and 14 in both Portland and Seattle under the direction of Ivan Moody, internationally renowned composer, conductor, and specialist in music of the Eastern Orthodox Church.

The public responded in particular to three works by contemporary Serbian composer Rajko Maksimovic, whose music on the program attested passionately to the recent tragic history in the Balkans.

The concerts received national recognition in the Wall Street Journal, featured with other world music events around the country.

Greek Byzantine Choir Breaks New Ground in Seattle and Portland

PORTLAND, Oregon; SEATTLE, Washington. Just after Thanksgiving, audiences numbered over 250 in both Portland and Seattle to hear the astonishing Greek Byzantine Choir, directed by Lycourgos Angelopoulos.

These concerts were made possible by the generous support of donors in both cities and the Greek Orthodox parishes of Holy Trinity in Portland and St. Demetrios in Seattle.

Their first appearance on the west coast, the choir sang a spectacular collection of virtuosic hymns, including rousing psalmody from Mt. Athos and ecstatic communion verses.

A recording of their concert in Seattle will be featured on the program "The Old Country" on KBCS radio (public radio in Bellevue, Washington) in January 2006.

"Women in Byzantium" sells out in Portland; Seattle and Portland concerts win critical acclaim

PORTLAND, Oregon. Over 575 people came to hear Patricia Rozario and Cappella Romana on 21 October at St. Mary's Cathedral in Portland, again packing the building to over capacity as audiences did last November. The concert received a favorable review in The Oregonian.

"Friday's concert ranks among Cappella Romana's most satisfying performances." Click here to read the full review. The Oregonian also ran SEATTLE, Washington. The center of the vast St. Mark's Cathedral was full for Seattle's performance of "Women in Byzantium. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer ran a very favorable review:

"Rozario has a voice of exceptional beauty: creamy and crystalline in timbre and a wonderfully even register. She essayed the music at hand, sometimes difficult to negotiate, with calm and expressive nuance... Cappella Romana, led by Lingas, has rarely sounded better." Click here for the full review. After two concerts and a BBC broadcast together at the 2004 Byzantine Festival in London, Bombay-born soprano Patricia Rozario makes her Portland and Seattle debut with Cappella Romana this autumn. She is known world-wide for her impressive stratospheric singing in the music of Sir John Tavener, including his recent twelve-hour Veil of the Temple. This program features the U.S. premiere of The Troparion of Kassianē by Christos Hatzis, which was given its world premiere by Rozario last year at The Byzantine Festival in London. This astonishing work for large chorus and soprano will be contrasted with medieval chant by the 9th-century Byzantine nun Kassianē (Kasia) plus modern works by Sir John Tavener and Michael Adamis. Patricia Rozario, OBE (Order of the British Empire) appears by arrangement with Stafford Artists.

The most celebrated and sought-after program in Cappella Romana's repertoire, The Fall of Constantinople has been performed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the J. Paul Getty Museum in Los Angeles, the Bloomington Early Music Festival, at Yale and Princeton, as well as in Portland and Seattle on multiple occasions. Constantinople fell to the Ottoman Turks on May 29, 1453. Cappella Romana commemorates the 553rd anniversary of this event whose consequences are still felt today. Released at this concert will be the CD of the program, produced by multiple Grammy-award winner Steve Barnett.

NEW RECORDING MADE CR Makes Groundbreaking Recording of the Byzantine Divine Liturgy in English

After many long hours of recording, at about 1 o'clock in the morning August 11, Cappella Romana completed the recording sessions for groundbreaking double-CD of the Divine Liturgy St. John Chrysostom in English, sung to Byzantine chant. The recording is scheduled for release in late 2006.

This project is part of its three year initiative, "Excellence in Orthodox Church Music in English" supported by the Virginia H. Farah Foundation.

This program is supported in part by a leadership grant from the Virginia H. Farah Foundation, which covers about 42% of the $32,000 budget.

To complete the project and release the CD by next spring, Cappella Romana is in the midst of a campaign to raise the needed funds. Individual donors are encouraged to add their support to this important project.

"Every gift counts," explains executive director Mark Powell. "This project will have an impact for many years to come."

Just in time for the Lenten and Paschal seasons, Cappella Romana is proud to announce its first CD of the series "Orthodox Liturgical Singing in America" with a collection of music by the visionary priest, composer, and teacher, Father Sergei Glagolev.

Drawing upon a variety of stylistic idioms, from Russian znamenny and common chant, to Byzantine chant, to the works of Chesnokov and Gretchaninoff, Fr. Sergei Glagolev creates choral settings that employ the sound and cadence of the English language as their starting point, achieving deeply spiritual results.

Selections from the Divine Liturgy as well as propers for Lenten feasts and Holy Week are featured, with a bonus Christmas carol to conclude the more than 74-minute disc.

The release of this disc will be celebrated at the "Pearl of an Evening" benefit event on February 27th in Portland. Click here for more information. Space is limited.

Vocal ensemble Cappella Romana to perform May 18

The internationally renowned vocal ensemble Cappella Romana will give a Vanguard Series concert entitled "The Fall of Constantinople" May 18 at 8 p.m. in Beall Hall.

Tickets are available at the door and cost $9 for general admission and $5 for students and senior citizens.

Cappella Romana, one of the Pacific Northwest's few professional chamber vocal ensembles, combines passion with scholarship in its exploration of the musical traditions of the Christian West and East, with an emphasis on early and contemporary music. Its name is derived from the medieval concept of the Roman oikoumene (inhabited world), which included not only "Old" Rome and Western Europe but also "New" Rome (Constantinople) and its commonwealth of Slavic and Syriac countries. The program will feature a blend of music from the Orthodox and Western European traditions: a Byzantine chant relating to the fall of Constantinople; and Medieval and Renaissance music from Western Europe, including Guillaume DuFay's masterpiece, "Ecclesiae Militantis."

Founded in 1991, Cappella Romana presents annual concerts in Portland and Seattle, and has a special commitment to mastering the Slavic and Byzantine repertoires in their original languages, thereby making two great musical traditions that are little known in the West accessible to the general public.

New and improved library services available this spring

A number of new services are now available at the University of Oregon Libraries, including:

Instant Messaging (IM)

A new instant messaging (IM) reference service has just been added to the ever-growing array of reference services offered by the University of Oregon Libraries. University students, faculty and staff can now use IM to get their questions answered by reference staff at Knight Library and the Science Library.

IM is a means of using either software or a web page to exchange typed conversations in real time with another person. Complete information on procedures and screen names for contacting a reference desk staff member via IM can be found on the library's Instant Messaging web page.

IM service is typically offered at the Knight Library reference desk whenever a staff member is present. For staffing hours, visit the Knight Library's Reference Desk Hours page.

For reference services outside these hours are available at the L-net virtual reference service, an online service provided by member libraries throughout the state of Oregon.

In-person, e-mail, and telephone reference services will continue to be offered at all campus libraries: Knight, Science, AAA, Law and Math. For more information on IM and other reference services, contact Paul Frantz, assistant head, reference services, 346-1880.

Longer Library Loan Periods in Effect

Undergraduates and classified staff members now enjoy the convenience of longer loan periods for general circulation materials in the library's collections.

Starting this spring, loan periods were extended from 14 days to 21 days, with one 21-day renewal period allowed. Items in the juvenile and curriculum collections will continue to have a 14-day loan period.

Complete information on loan privileges at the libraries can be found at http://libweb.uoregon.edu/acs_svc/circplcy.html#loan.

Item Check-Out Available at the Branch of Choice

Faculty members, students and staff using the libraries can request that materials shelved in one branch library be delivered to another branch for check-out. For instructions on using the service, visit <http://libweb.uoregon.edu/news/stories/deliveryservice.htm>.

USGS Re-establishes the National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council

Reston, VA – The U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) announced today the re-establishment of the National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council (NEPEC) and the appointment of 12 scientists to the panel. The Council, which is conducting its initial meeting May 4-5 in Menlo Park, Calif., will advise the director of the USGS on earthquake prediction, forecasting and hazard assessment.

Earthquakes are one of the most costly natural hazards facing the nation, posing a significant risk to 75 million Americans in 39 states. As part of the multi-agency National Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program (NEHRP), the USGS has the lead federal responsibility to provide notification of earthquakes in order to enhance public safety and to reduce losses through effective forecasts based on the best possible scientific information.

NEPEC was re-chartered based on advice from the congressionally authorized Scientific Earthquake Studies

Advisory Committee, which provides oversight and guidance to the USGS Earthquake Hazards Program. The committee's 2005 report called for a re-chartered NEPEC, "to serve as the forum to review predictions and resolve scientific debate prior to public controversy or misrepresentation, so decision makers are not misled by unfounded short-term earthquake predictions." NEPEC was first established in 1976, formally authorized by Congress in the 1980 reauthorization of NEHRP, and remained active through the early 1990s.

"I am delighted that we are re-establishing the National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council," said P. Patrick Leahy of the USGS. "The Council is made up of well-respected scientists, and under the leadership of Chairman James Dieterich, will be counted on to provide objective, credible analysis and opinions."

NEPEC members include: James Dieterich, University of California, Riverside, chair; David Applegate, USGS, vice chair; Goran Ekström, Harvard University; William Ellsworth, USGS; David Jackson, University of California, Los Angeles; Barbara Romanowicz, University of California, Berkeley; Bruce Shaw, Columbia University; Wayne Thatcher, USGS; Jeroen Tromp, California Institute of Technology; Ray Weldon, University of Oregon; Robert Wesson, USGS; and, Mary Lou Zoback, USGS. Michael Blanpied, USGS, will serve as executive secretary.

For information about earthquakes, visit <http://earthquake.usgs.gov/>.

The USGS serves the nation by providing reliable scientific information to describe and understand the Earth; minimize loss of life and property from natural disasters; manage water, biological, energy, and mineral resources; and enhance and protect our quality of life.

Ray Weldon named to National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council

Ray Weldon, professor of geological sciences, is one of 12 U.S. scientists named to the U.S. Geological Survey's (USGS) National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council.

The council will advise the USGS director on earthquake prediction, forecasting, and hazard assessment. USGS is the lead federal agency charged with providing notification of earthquakes in order to enhance public safety and reduce losses through effective forecasts based on the best possible scientific information.

Weldon, who heads the university's Neotectonics Research Group, also serves on the working group for California Earthquake Probabilities. The group is producing the California seismic map that will be released in 2007, and will establish the methodology for the next National Hazard Map, due to be released in 2008. These maps are used for many purposes, including setting building codes and insurance rates.

Chris Ramey named to Architecture Foundation of Oregon board of directors

Chris Ramey, director of university planning and university senior architect, has been named a member of the board of directors of the Architecture Foundation of Oregon.

Ramey joined the university as a planning associate in 1988 and became the office's director in 1992. During his tenure as director, the office has been responsible for over $500 million in construction projects representing over one million gross square feet of space. Currently, the office is overseeing about $100 million worth of work in various stages of design.

Ramey has been a member of the prestigious Association of University Architects since 1996. He has received three awards of merit from the association for projects that have made significant contributions to the campus environment. He also is a past president of the Southwestern Oregon Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and founded its architects-in-schools program. He is an active participant in area planning issues and has served on numerous citizen-planning committees.

The Architecture Foundation of Oregon was founded on the belief that physical structures have a profound impact on people as individuals and as communities. It provides programs to help Oregonians become more aware of the built environment and how it affects our daily lives, including scholarships, fellowships, the Look Around public awareness campaign, the Architects-in-Schools program, the Honored Citizen Dinner, and the "dinner with an architect" series.

NIRSA'S RICH HERITAGE

NIRSA History

NIRSA is extremely proud of its long history and its many accomplishments.

The stage was set in 1950 by Dr.

William Wasson, who organized a meeting of twenty-two African-American men and women

Intramural Directors from eleven Historically Black Colleges at the first Intramural Conference at Dillard University in New Orleans.

Participants at the conference formed the National Intramural

Association (NIA).

Since then NIRSA, NIA's successor, has evolved into a dynamic professional association with thousands of members from colleges, universities, military installations, community recreation departments, corporations and correctional institutions. With the annual participation in recreational sports reaching well over 12 million, membership in NIRSA provides numerous opportunities for meaningful involvement at the local, state, national and international levels including instructing, research, presenting and publishing.

Thursday, May 25, 4:00 p.m. Ann Marie Lipinski, senior vice president and editor of the Chicago Tribune.

For nearly half a century, Pulitzer Prize-winner Robert W. Ruhl was one of Oregon's respected newspaper journalists. Ruhl, who died in 1967, was editor and publisher of the Medford Mail Tribune.

He performed his duties with a high sense of responsibility to the public and with uncompromising ethics. In one instance, he wrote a series of editorials against a government reform group that was inciting unrest in the area. The paper's editorials won the 1934 Pulitzer Prize for disinterested and meritorious public service.

Robert W. Ruhl, editor and publisher

The Robert and Mabel Ruhl Endowment was established in 1973 and 1974 by Mabel W. Ruhl, Robert's widow. She specified that the income from the Endowment should be used to foster mutually beneficial contact between the School of Journalism and Communication and the mass media.

The concept of an annual Ruhl Symposium grew out of this directive. The Symposium brings to campus a distinguished American journalist who delivers a public lecture on an issue of significance for contemporary journalism. A fellowship program is a complementary part of the Symposium. Each year, the fellowship brings accomplished journalists to the School. During their visits, they lecture, write, and talk to students and faculty.

The Ruhl Lecturers and Fellows have helped the School of Journalism and Communication achieve Mrs. Ruhl's expressed hope that the Symposium would contribute to "the development of students into dedicated journalists. I feel it is especially important today that we restore in this field of journalism a greater sense of ethics, responsibility, and dedication."

University of Oregon Research Innovation Awards ceremony to be held June 7

The inaugural University of Oregon Research Innovation Awards ceremony will be held June 7 in the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art.

The office of the vice president for research will host the ceremony and reception, the first in a continuing series of annual events celebrating the diversity of the university's achievements in research and scholarship, which include the humanities, natural sciences, social sciences, and the professions. The event's focus will be on the innovation cycle: from basic science to translational research to university spin-off company development.

Twelve university researchers will be recognized for outstanding achievements of creative endeavor, including their many contributions to society and economic development. The occasion also will recognize the multitude of funding agencies that provide invaluable support for the university's talented researchers in their collective passion to explore and apply new ideas.

The ceremony is sponsored by TIAA-CREF. Additional support is being provided by Klarquist Sparkman, LLP and the Endeavor Law Group.

Oregon Quarterly* writers to read from winning essays June 7

The six top winners of Oregon Quarterly's seventh annual Northwest Perspectives Essay Contest will read their essays June 7 at the University of Oregon.

The readings will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the Browsing Room, Knight Library, 1501 Kincaid St. The event is free and open to the public.

The evening's readings will feature "Dreaming of Celilo" by 2006 contest winner Susan Pesznecker; "PauMau" by Ellen Waterston; "Salmonberries" by Joanne B. Mulchaly; "Trailer Base" by Kelle X. Lawrence; "Culturing the Pearl" by Lucy Burningham and "Living Waters" by Leslie Glasser.

Craig Lesley, contest judge and award-winning author of four novels and the memoir "Burning Fence: A Western Memoir of Fatherhood," will provide introductory remarks.

The Northwest Perspectives Essay Contest is an annual contest sponsored by Oregon Quarterly and the University of Oregon Bookstore. The contest, featuring never published writings about ideas affecting the Northwest, is open to non-fiction writers competing in student and open categories. Winners in each category receive a cash prize and publication in Oregon Quarterly.

You can then go to the "workshop" section to register for individual workshops, or the "pass/locker" section to purchase just a studio pass or rent a locker.

Online registration becomes available at 10am on the first day of registration.

If you have registered for a workshop in person at the Craft Center, your information may already be in our database.

To check this out, do the following:

1. Click "log in"
2. Click "forgot your username or password"
3. Enter your email address

If message is address not found, then you are not in our database and you need to create a Craft Center account.

If message is your username and password have been sent to the email you provided, then you will be sent an email with a username and a password.

After you receive this information, do the following:

1. Click "log in"
2. Enter the username and password sent to you
3. Click "account"
4. Change the username to what you want it to be
5. Enter the password sent you, then change it to what you want it to be
6. Click "modify" to save your username and password

If you have any questions, please contact Paul, our webmaster

Please note:

If a workshop requires a studio pass, you do not need to purchase it separately.

You do not need a PayPal account to make your payment.

Create Your Craft Center Account and Register Online

Wednesday | November 30th

Now you can register for workshops, purchase a studio pass or rent a locker online with payment through PayPal. And if your favorite workshop is full, you will automatically be put on the waiting list.

Here's how it works:

After you create a Craft Center account, you will receive an email with instructions on how to activate your account. Once your account has been activated, you are good to go.

You can then go to the "workshop" section to register for individual workshops, or the "pass/locker" section to purchase just a studio pass or rent a locker.

Online registration becomes available at 10am on the first day of registration.

If you have registered for a workshop in person at the Craft Center, your information may already be in our database.

To check this out, do the following:

1. Click "log in"
2. Click "forgot your username or password"
3. Enter your email address

If message is address not found, then you are not in our database and you need to create a Craft Center account.

If message is your username and password have been sent to the email you provided, then you will be sent an email with a username and a password.

After you receive this information, do the following:

1. Click "log in"
2. Enter the username and password sent to you
3. Click "account"
4. Change the username to what you want it to be
5. Enter the password sent you, then change it to what you want it to be
6. Click "modify" to save your username and password

If you have any questions, please contact Paul, our webmaster

Please note:

If a workshop requires a studio pass, you do not need to purchase it separately.

You do not need a PayPal account to make your payment.

The George S. Turnbull Portland Center is dedicated to advancing the study and practice of journalism and professional communication. When the center opens, it will sponsor lectures and forums for working professionals and the public, and it will offer classes to a wide variety of students. Among the program's initial offerings will be a master's program in management communication for working professionals and a "senior experience" for current University of Oregon undergraduates that will combine coursework with internship experience.

The Turnbull Portland Center will open in 2006 and plans to offer degree programs beginning in fall 2007. The ultimate vision for the center, which is expected to be fully operational by fall 2007, is to draw on the school's strengths in all professional areas.

The University of Oregon School of Journalism and Communication is one of the oldest journalism schools in the United States and one of the most broadly conceived. It is accredited by the national Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communication and is one of the few accredited programs in the western United States with as many as six fields of study.

The SOJC enjoys strong ties to the media and communication industries in Portland, with alumni in leadership roles in every communication arena. Currently, more than 2,000 SOJC alumni live and/or work in the greater Portland metropolitan area.

WENDY LARSON

Professor, East Asian Languages and Literatures

East Asian Focus

Phone: (541) 346-4012

Ph.D. 1984 Oriental Languages, University of California, Berkeley

Wendy Larson specializes in modern Chinese literature, film, and theory. Some of her recent works include Literary Authority and the Chinese Writer:

Ambivalence and Autobiography (Duke University Press, 1991); Women and Writing in Modern China (Stanford University Press, 1998); a co-edited volume with Anne Wedell-Wedellsborg, Inside Out: Modernism and Postmodernism in Chinese Literary Culture (Aarhus University Press, 1993), and a translation, introduction critical analysis of Bolshevik Salute: A Modernist Chinese Novel by Wang Meng (University of Washington Press, 1989).

She is currently working on a project that investigates the relationship between sexuality and the Cultural Revolution during the post-Mao era. From 2002 to 2005, Wendy Larson will serve as Associate Dean of Humanities in the College of Arts and Sciences.

A New Humanities Advocate

Wendy Larson with Joe Stone

Wendy Larson, professor of East Asian Languages and Literatures, was recently appointed to a three-year term as associate dean of the humanities for the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Larson replaces Professor Russ Tomlin, who served in the position from 1996 to 2002 and will return to the linguistics classroom after a research sabbatical. Larson has been teaching modern Chinese language, literature, and film at the university for over sixteen years, a tenure which includes research leaves in Denmark, Beijing, and Berkeley.

Educated at UO and UC Berkeley, she has published many articles, books and translations on topics ranging from the modernist Chinese novel to the concubine in literature. Her most recent book, Women and Writing in Modern China, was published by Stanford University Press in 1998.

"Wendy has been a prominent member of the UO faculty since 1985," says Dean Joe Stone. "She's served the university in a variety of capacities, as an advisor and board member to the Humanities Center, the Women's Studies Program, the Center for Asian and Pacific Studies, and the Asian Studies Program, among other groups on campus. The college and the humanities are fortunate to have her leadership."

Though Larson says that her undergraduate days at the university seem "like a lifetime ago," she believes the campus has become a home to her continued academic and professional growth. "I'm happy to have the opportunity to dedicate my energies to this new role," she says.

University of Oregon names Dr. Linda P. Brady senior vice president, provost

North Carolina State dean to serve as the university's chief academic officer

EUGENE--(Dec. 5, 2005)--Dr. Linda P. Brady, dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences at North Carolina State University, has been chosen to serve as the next senior vice president and provost at the University of Oregon. She will assume her new duties July 1.

Dave Frohnmayer, University of Oregon president, selected Dr. Brady to replace Dr. John Moseley, who will retire on June 30, 2006, after serving as provost for 12 years.

"I am very pleased Dr. Brady has accepted my offer to serve as the university's next provost," said Frohnmayer. "Her academic qualifications, administrative experience and leadership skills make her exceptionally well qualified to assume this important position. Dr. Brady will, as the chief academic officer, lead our efforts to further enhance our stature as one of the premier public research universities in the country."

"I am honored to have been selected for this important position," said Brady. "The University of Oregon is recognized as an excellent AAU (Association of American Universities) public research university, and I am thrilled to have the opportunity to help lead this flagship institution. As the senior vice president and provost, I will work tirelessly to promote academic excellence and the academic vision for the university. This is a time of great challenge, and great opportunity, in public higher education, and I look forward to working with my new colleagues to help strengthen the university's teaching, research and service mission," she added.

Dr. Brady has served as dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences and professor of political science at North Carolina State since July 1, 2001. A noted scholar in the field of international negotiations and arms control, she led the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs at the Georgia Institute of Technology from 1993 to 2001, where she also served as a professor of international affairs. She has been a distinguished professor of national security at the United States Military Academy and a senior fellow in international security and arms control at The Carter Center of Emory University. From 1978 to 1985, Dr. Brady held several positions in the U.S. Department of State and the Department of Defense. She served as a political analyst in the state department's Office of Disarmament and Arms Control and was special assistant for mutual and balanced force reductions in the defense department during the Carter administration.

A native of New York City and the first member of her family to attend college, Dr. Brady graduated from Douglass College, the women's division of Rutgers University, in 1969 with a degree in political science. She received her master's degree in political science from Rutgers in 1970, and her doctorate in political science from The Ohio State University in 1974. She has published in the fields of American foreign policy, international negotiation and arms control. Her current research focuses on the role of negotiation in war termination.

A Better Web Experience

Firefox 1.5 has an intuitive interface and blocks viruses, spyware, and popup ads. It delivers Web pages faster than ever. And it's easy to install and import your favorites. Packed with useful features like tabbed browsing, Live Bookmarks, and an integrated Search bar, Firefox will change the way you experience the Web, for the better.

Faster Browsing

Enjoy quick page loading as you navigate back and forward in a browsing session. Improvements to the engine that powers Firefox deliver more accurate display of complex Web sites, support for new Web standards, and better overall performance.

Automatic Updates

The new Software Update feature makes it easy to get the latest security and feature updates to Firefox. Firefox automatically downloads these small updates in the background and prompts you when they are ready to be installed.

Tabbed Browsing

Use tabbed browsing to open multiple Web pages in a single browser window, and quickly flip back and forth. Drag and drop open tabs to keep related pages together.

Improved Pop-up Blocking

Firefox's built-in pop-up blocker has been enhanced to block more unwanted pop-up and pop-under ads.

Integrated Search

Tap into the power of the Web's most popular search engines with the built-in Search bar, and easily add new engines.

Stronger Security

Firefox keeps you more secure when you're browsing the Web, closing the door on spyware, worms, and viruses. The Firefox community of developers and security experts works around the clock to monitor security issues and release updates to better protect you.

Clear Private Data

Protect your privacy with the new Clear Private Data tool. With a single click, you can delete all personal data, including browsing history, cookies, Web form entries and passwords.

Live Bookmarks

Stay up to date with your favorite Web sites and blogs. Use Live Bookmarks that update themselves automatically with the latest content from the Web.

Accessibility

Firefox 1.5 delivers easier navigation for everyone, including those who are visually or motor-impaired. Firefox is the first browser to support DHTML accessibility, which, when enabled by Web authors, allows rich Web applications to be read aloud. Users may navigate with keystrokes rather than mouse clicks, reducing the tabbing required to navigate documents such as spreadsheets. Firefox 1.5 (Windows version) is also the first browser to meet US federal government requirements that software be easily accessible to users with physical impairments.

Customize Firefox

Select new button controls for your toolbars, install extensions to add new features, or change the look of your browser with themes - the way Firefox looks and works is under your control.

Next Generation Web Support

Innovative new Web applications and services deliver a richer Web experience. Support for open Web standards in Firefox ensures you can get the most out of this emerging class of Web-based tools.

What is RSS?

RSS stands for "Really Simple Syndication". RSS feeds are free content feeds from websites that contain article headlines, summaries, and links back to full-text articles on the web.

What tools do I need to use RSS?

To subscribe to an RSS feed you will need two things, an RSS reader (also known as a news reader or aggregator) and the URL (web address) of the RSS feed you wish to subscribe to.

Some commonly used news readers are Feed Demon, NewsCrawler, and Awasu for Windows. NetNewsWire, Newsfire, and Shrook can be used for Macs. For those who like web-based readers there's Bloglines, My Yahoo!, and NewsGator. Currently, the UO Computing Center only supports RSS access through web browsers Opera and Firefox (see "What Are Those Little RSS or XML Tags on Web Pages?" below).

How Do I Subscribe to the UO's RSS feeds?

Once you have an RSS reader installed, right-click (or control + click on Mac) the link below of the news feed you want to subscribe to and copy the URL. Then paste the URL into the reader as a new feed (your reader will have instructions on how to do this).

-  UO News Feed
-  UO Events Feed

What are Live Bookmarks?

Mozilla Firefox has a feature called Live Bookmarks that allows you to see the item titles ("headlines") of an RSS feed in your bookmarks. Instead of constantly checking webpages for changes and additions, a Live Bookmark delivers updates to you as soon as they are available.

How do I add RSS feeds as Live Bookmarks in Firefox?

To add an RSS feed as a Live Bookmark, look for one of these icons  or  to the right of the address bar in Firefox 1.5 (earlier versions will have the icon in the lower right corner of the browser window). Click the icon and select a feed from the list that appears. The Add Bookmark dialog will appear allowing you to choose where to save the RSS feed bookmark. Go to the RSS feed in your bookmarks to see all the latest headlines for that feed. Select a headline to jump to a story.

What Are Those Little RSS or XML Tags on Web Pages?

For more information about subscribing to RSS feeds, please read the UO Computing Center's article "What Are Those Little RSS or XML Tags on Web Pages?".

Instant Messaging

IM or Instant Messaging is a means of using either software or a web page to type conversations in real time with another person. To contact the University of Oregon Libraries via instant messaging, send a message from your IM account to one of our screen names. We have screen names on AOL, Yahoo Messenger, and MSN Messenger.

For information and research assistance from the Knight Reference Desk, use the following screen names:

uoreference (AOL)

uoreference (Yahoo Messenger)

uoreference@hotmail.com (MSN Messenger)

For information and research assistance from the Science Library, use the following screen names:

uoscience (AOL)

uoscience (Yahoo Messenger)

uoscience@hotmail.com (MSN Messenger)

The IM service of the UO Libraries is intended primarily for UO students, faculty, and staff. Non-UO patrons are encouraged to use L-net, an online reference service provided by Oregon's libraries.

Hours of service: the IM service is typically offered at the Knight Reference Desk whenever a staff member is present at the desk. During the regular term, those hours are: Monday-Thursday 9 am-midnight; Friday 9am - 7 pm; Saturday 11 am - 7 pm; and Sunday 11 am - midnight. For service outside of these hours, try the L-net virtual reference service.

If you are using a shared computer in a library or lab, or do not wish to download and install Instant Messenger software on your computer, you may use web-based chat services at AIM Express or MSN Web Messenger. These allow you to create a screen name and to chat, without downloading any software.

Borrowing Policy

Faculty, staff and students who are currently employed or enrolled at the University of Oregon may borrow materials from the collections of the UO Libraries. People who live in Oregon and who are over 16 may borrow from the UO Libraries through the Oregon Card Program. Current faculty, staff, and students from Orbis Cascade Alliance schools and Northwest Christian College have borrowing privileges through reciprocal lending agreements. This statement informs borrowers of their privileges and responsibilities. Borrowers agree to abide by library policies when they use the collections.

LOAN PRIVILEGES

- General Material includes most books and software in the circulating collections.
 - UO graduate students and UO faculty may check out general material for six months.
 - Honors College seniors and other departmental honors seniors working on term long research projects may check out general materials for one term.
 - All other borrowers may check out materials for three weeks.
- Restricted Materials have loan periods which vary from two hours to 14 days. Restrictions may apply to some borrowers. All borrowers are subject to overdue fines. Restricted items accrue fines until they are returned to the service desks from which they were checked out.
- Reserve Materials have shortened loan periods (between two hours and seven days). Some material may be used only in the library. A maximum of three reserve items may be checked out to one borrower. Material must be returned by the due date/time specified, and overdue fines apply to faculty, students, and all other borrowers. Reserve items accrue fines until they are returned to the service desk from which they were checked out.
- Non-Circulating Material includes, but is not limited to, reference collections, rare books, and historical maps. Unbound periodicals are non-circulating at most library locations. Bound periodicals are considered restricted materials and circulate to UO faculty, students and staff.

Loan privilegesRecallsRenewalsOregon CardBorrower responsibilitiesOverdue fines

Recalls:

General material will be recalled for anyone who needs an item currently checked out to another borrower. Materials are subject to recall at any time. Borrowers will be notified if materials have been recalled from them. The overdue fine for recalled material is $3.00 per item per day.

Renewals:

General material may be renewed once. Borrowers may renew their own books through their patron record (library account) available in the UO Library catalog or by telephoning (541) 346-3065. If material is still needed after one renewal it must be taken to a checkout desk and checked out again (recharged).

All restricted material, reserve material, and material not checked out through the electronic circulation system must be renewed or recharged at the service desk from which it was checked out.

Oregon Card Program:

Participants in the Oregon Card Program:

- may have up to ten items checked out at any given time
- may have up to five items checked out from specific restricted collections
- may place up to ten holds on items at any given time

Records will be blocked if card holders owe more than $100 in fines and fees, or if they have overdue items which have been recalled for use by another borrower.

BORROWERS' RESPONSIBILITIES

Borrowers are responsible for material checked out in their names. Overdue fines are charged to encourage prompt returns and to ensure access to the collections for other borrowers.

No one may use another person's ID card or number, or library card to gain access to library resources.

It is the responsibility of each borrower to maintain a current mailing address, telephone number, and e-mail address in university records.

Borrowers should inform the Library if their I.D. cards or library cards are lost or stolen.

It is the responsibility of the borrower to note the time or date that material is due. Overdue notices are sent as a courtesy. Failure to receive these notices does not remove the borrower's obligation to return material by the due date or the recall due date, nor does it constitute grounds for reducing a borrower's fine. If a borrower plans to be out of town, s/he should return borrowed items or arrange with someone to receive notices and return recalled material. The libraries are open during intersessions to serve the needs of patrons who remain on campus: recalled items may be due any time the libraries are open.

Overdue fines and fees per item: (Maximum overdue fine per item: $30.00)
General material	$.50 per day
Recalled material	$3.00 per day
Restricted material	Varies by collection
Reserve material	Hourly loans: $3.00 for first hour or any part, $.75 per subsequent hour
	Daily loans: $6.00 per day
Summit or ILL material	$.50 per day for 10 days, $1.00 per day thereafter

Any borrower who fails to return library material in a timely manner or returns it in damaged condition will be charged lost book fees or repair charges, plus any accrued fines, plus a $15.00 service charge per item.

The Library reserves the right to deny borrowing privileges based upon just cause.

The University of Oregon Libraries' general philosophy is to protect the privacy of its readers. Library staff are not authorized to release information to the public or outside agencies without clearance from the University Counsel. If the user has signed a confidentiality waiver, his/her name may be given to another borrower who is requesting the whereabouts of a specific title.

Oregon Revised Statutes, Chapter 192.502 \(22\) Other public records exempt from disclosure: "The records of a library, including circulation records, showing use of specific library material by a named person or consisting of the name of a library patron together with the address or telephone number, or both, of the patron."

New Library Service Offers Item Check-Out at the Branch of Your Choice

UO students, faculty, and staff using the UO Libraries can now request that materials shelved in one branch library be delivered to another branch for check-out.

To use the service, first search for and locate the item in the library catalog and then click the Request Item/Place Hold button. After entering the required information, use the Choose a Pickup Location drop-down menu to select the library where you would like the item delivered. Delivery can take between 1 and 4 days, depending on the mail route. Note: You may not have the item “delivered” to the same library in which it is shelved; in this case, you will need to retrieve material from the shelves yourself.

General collection materials in all libraries within the UO Libraries system—Knight, Architecture and Allied Arts, Law, Science, Math, Oregon Institute of Marine Biology in Charleston, and the Portland Architecture Library—may be requested through the delivery program. In addition, items that are checked out may also be placed on hold and requested for delivery to another branch upon their return.

The new service is for UO students, faculty, and staff only.

LOOK AROUND

There's no place like here.

Download the LOOK AROUND Guide -- your personal map to 41 buildings, a sampling of Bruce Forster's LOOK AROUND collection, incorporating a downtown/northwest tour and two shorter close-in eastside tours.

Download Look Around Guide Congratulations to John Little of Northwest Portland for winning the AFO-Portland Tribune LOOK AROUND Sweepstakes! John was one of several participants who correctly identified the buildings from which eight of Bruce Forster's architectural detail photos were taken. The photos appeared during November and December in the Portland Tribune. John and a companion will be enjoying an all-expense paid weekend in Seattle, including a personally escorted tour by a Seattle architect. The LOOK AROUND campaign is a rather Christo-like project designed to expose Portland to the art of her own built environment by wrapping her in larger-than-life images of her architectural treasures. Perhaps you've seen some of the images --whether scirms wrapping a construction site, or buses wrapped to appear as though they are moving buildings. Look for them at the roofline of the Whole Foods Building or on the street level of The Henry in Portland's Brewery Blocks. That bus changes routes daily, but is assigned to the Center Street Garage and is frequently on Southeast routes that come through the downtown Transit Mall. All of the photos are the product of renowned Northwest photographer C. Bruce Forster. They are truly stunning. The walking guide, which you can download with the link above, features the buildings that comprise the LOOK AROUND photo collection. Coming soon is a friendly and engaging publication to encourage children and families to explore and experience their built environment. We hope LOOK AROUND will help you see what you walk past everyday without seeing. To help you think about the impact on your life made by the buildings in which you live, work, learn, worship and play each and every day. LOOK AROUND is sponsored by

ARCHITECTURE FOUNDATION OF OREGON

Citizen

Perhaps the year's grandest celebration of architecture in Oregon is AFO's annual Honored Citizen Dinner. Selected for their gifts to Oregon's built environment, be they professional, educational, artistic, philanthropic, or public service, AFO's Honored Citizens are feted and celebrated at a dinner in their honor featuring former AFO Board member and Master of Ceremonies Extraordinaire Jeff Gianola. Contributions to Oregon's built environment have been recognized and celebrated by the Architecture Foundation of Oregon since its first Honored Citizen dinner in 1993. Public officials, architects, landscape architects, artists and philanthropists have been spotlighted for their unique and valuable contributions to our architectural heritage. In 2005, AFO asked the question, "What really sets Oregon's built environment apart from other places?" New Yorker Magazine writer Tony Hiss answers this way: "It's a spectacular setting for human settlements, one in which rugged grandeur and easy living are both givens – as if Alaska had the climate of England." And while AFO is focused on Oregon's rich architectural environment, it is clear that as our population continues to dramatically increase, the natural environment in which we are building is as important to maintaining our treasured built environment as are urban planning and architectural design. The 2005 Honored Citizen tribute went to a renowned urban naturalist who lives and works in our midst – Mike Houck, Founding Director of The Urban Greenspaces Institute and Urban Naturalist for the Audubon Society of Portland. Dedicated to maintaining habitats for wildlife in our urban areas, Mike Houck has maintained a vigilant and vocal crusade for more than 20 years. During that time, his work has grown from a focus on environmental issues to a broader advocacy for a wide range of important urban and natural resources for the region. He has advocated for affordable housing, a rational metropolitan transportation system, the restoration of urban waterways, and a strong urban wilds system. Mike helped to found the Coalition for a Livable Future, now a 60-member organization of groups working for a sustainable metropolitan region. He was awarded a 2004 Loeb Fellowship at the Harvard School of Design to increase his knowledge of urban planning, and landscape architecture and design, and to ensure that natural resource protection and restoration is integrated into the smart growth agenda. According to The Oregonian, "More than any other individual, Houck has motivated, cajoled and convinced a critical mass of key people that regional coordination is essential if the metropolitan area's natural corridors and greenways are to survive the half-million population increase expected by 2010." ARCHITECTURE FOUNDATION OF OREGON said that the natural and built environments in which friends and colleagues gather can enhance the experiences they share, and it must be true, because this event is in its ninth year. From April through June of each year, guests are cordially invited to join friends and colleagues for a fabulous time in an intriguing architectural environment. This year's offerings include:

It's

- Dining on grilled salmon on the deck of Will Martin's family cabin in the Coast Range
- Learning to draw from Phil Sylvester with inspirational food & drink by two award-winning interior designers
- Strolling the forested garden of Northwest sculptor Lee Kelly's Clackamas County retreat
- Gazing out on the Brewery Blocks from the award-winning top-floor suites of M Financial Plaza
- Sipping fine wine in an architect/owner's wooded Northwest-style home just minutes from downtown
- Being among the first to mingle in the recently-restored Trolley Brakeman's Cottage on Council Crest
- Feasting on Cajun boil followed by Segway rides at one of Portland's most innovative studios
- Sharing views and elegant dining in an upper floor condo at The Meriwether in the new South Waterfront neighborhood

Dinner With An

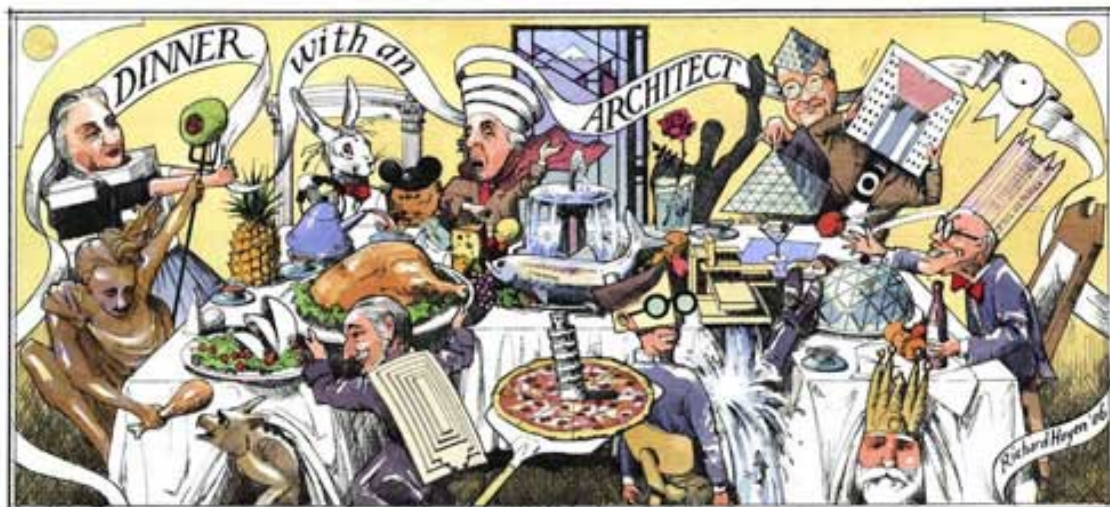

Bid by May 12 for a 3-night package at the stunning BOORA Beach House in Neskowin.

These are just a few of the enticing environments available for socializing each spring as diners from throughout the region enjoy the hospitality of hosts in the architecture/engineering/construction industry as part of Dinner With An Architect. AFO organizes and promotes the series of widely varying dinners in architecturally interesting spaces. Hosts contribute dinners for eight to twenty or more guests who make a contribution to AFO to attend the dinners. Receipts from the dinners are used to support AFO's annual programs and operations. Dinner With An Architect is sponsored by THE DAILY JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.
