THE SPIRIT OF

by JOHN CLINTON

I like radio. Our old box is turned on almost every night. But when it comes to swing music—well, I'm not a hep cat. And I can take my boogie-woogie or leave it alone. The only rug I ever cut was under the living room table when I was fixing the lamp cord.

So, I'm always on the lookout for a "different" kind of radio program—one that is fun to hear, and that "does something" for me. And now, in case you're still reading, I've found a dilly.

It's called "Point Sublime." And it's on the NBC red network every Monday night at 8:30, Pacific Coast Time, except the stations in Bakersfield, Sacramento and Stockton—where it goes on at 9 o'clock. (Of course, if you live where your clock ticks out Mountain Standard Time, you'll hear it at 9:30.)

But anyway, Point Sublime is a series of programs about a fellow named Ben Willett. Ben sort of runs Point Sublime—which is a little village on the coast—and manages to get into and out of more amusing situations than you could shake a stick at. He's sort of a combination of Will Rogers, David Harum and your own Uncle Clem, back home.

Each show is complete in itself, so you don't have to listen every week. But I think if you listen to one, you'll listen to all of 'em. Anyway, take a tip from Clinton, and listen. The sponsor is, as you've probably guessed, Union Oil Company. And if you like the show—will you drop me a line, so I can tell 'em? Thanks.

PICKETT'S IN NAVY

U.S.N.R. Midshipmen's School
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Roy:

Here goes a tardy answer to a well-received letter. . . . I can honestly state that this is the most intensified training I've ever imagined.

I've seen Bill (Pease), '40, only two or three times in the past month and hope to see him this afternoon.

In the last class which was graduated, several ensign commissions were given Oregon boys. The recipients are: Ralph Alden, '40, ensign aboard U.S.S. Colorado, Pacific Fleet; Lloyd K. Hoffman, '40, ensign aboard U.S.S. Mississippi, Pacific Fleet; Clarence Zurcher, '40, aboard U.S.S. Mississippi, Pacific Fleet; Waldo Caufield, '40, aboard U.S.S. Houston, Asiatic Fleet, Manila, P.I.; William F. Streit, '40, aboard U.S.S. Jarvis, Pacific Fleet.

This fine Oregon representation made excellent records here, all finishing in the upper third of their class.

. . . As a result of our first month's exams and class standing, Norm Holt, '40, Bill Pease, and myself are all in the upper third, with grades of 3.0 or better.

Here are a few more names of Navy-minded Oregon men whom you may want to place in your files: Ken Shipley, '40, will enter U.S.N.R. school in New York this spring to complete his study for an ensign commission. Jim Peake, '39, enters school here on March 16. Eldon Wyman, '40, also enters U.S.N.R. school, Chicago, on June

Directors Discuss Schools Tells ELMER FANSETT, '28

Fully 50 sheaves of ideas exchanged and plans organized for future development of the University and its Alumni Association—compiled during the recent directorate meeting in Eugene—are too detailed to include in Old Oregon. County directors have received copies of this edited report. By contacting them for the story one may hear many debatable cases that were aired during the campus discussions. Interesting it is that defense plans have already changed the life of one director. Morrow county's man, diligent Francis B. Nickerson, '40, has been drafted for Army service, and leaves his Heppner home soon for the Camp Murray reception center. "Nick" has the Association's well wishes. Manager Elmer Fansett, '28, has the doings of the directorate, home for a weekend, well outlined in the following story.—Ed.

Hollis Johnston, '21, filled all vacancies in the directorate recently, completing his first big task as Alumni Association president. Appointed were the following new directors:

James T. Donald, '15, Baker county, replacing Lucien Arant, '18; Robert Lucas, '36, Clatsop county, taking the place of Merle R. Chessman, '09; Elton Schroeder, '27, Coos county, for Edwin "Spike" Leslie, '22; Remey Cox, '22, Crook county, for Kessler R. Cannon, '38; Grant J. Williams, '25, Curry county, for Vernon F. Hanscam, '38; Dr. H. C. Staples, '23, Deschutes county, for Henry N. Fowler, '14; Miss Genevieve Dunlop, '34, Gilliam county, for Dr. George Gaunt, M.D. '10; Orval D. Yokum, '27, Grant county, for Roy L. Kilpatrick, L.L.B. '35.

Vacancies existing in several counties were filled as follows:

Robert Pollock, '38, Columbia county; Mrs. Boyd Overhulse, '31, Jefferson; Dr. Clarence W. Keene, '96, M.D. '01, Marion; Francis B. Nickerson, '40, Morrow; M. Keith Wilson, '35, Wallowa.

THREE REAPPOINTED

Three directors whose terms expired December 31, 1940, were reappointed for three years. They are Walter Durgan, '28, Benton county; Peter Laurs, '27, Clackamas; and M. Harris Ellsworth, '22, Douglas. The complete roster of officers and county directors is printed in the OLD OREGON masthead this issue (inside front cover).

Obvious difficulties in getting together a representative group of directors from all points of the state were considered early in February, yet President Johnston announced February 14 and 15 as dates for the first directorate meeting. In terms of attendance, ideas exchanged, actual business accomplished, the series of meetings experienced proved the most successful since Oregon's organization of county directors came into being more than a year ago.

Planned as a group of conferences with University officials, the two-day session began at 3 p.m. Friday, February 14. Miss Janet Smith, employment secretary, met then with the first arrivals and explained her program of work. Closer coordination between county Alumni groups and the employment office will result, it is believed.

George Godfrey, '23, University News Bureau director, led the 3:45 p.m. discussion with a description of his news disseminating agency. Difficulties encountered by the bureau were met with suggestions from the directors present. The remaining time Friday afternoon was allotted to a discussion of OLD OREGON editorial policies. Introduced by Editor Roy Vernstrom, '40, the meeting attempted to clarify what Alumni desired to read in their magazine.

LEGISLATORS VISIT

Highlight of the weekend was the buffet supper arranged by Eugene's Monday Morning Quarterbacks for the entire state legislature. County directors joined as guests of the Eugene organization at the Osburn hotel get-together. Informal conversations spirited the occasion with old acquaintanceships renewed. Later in the evening, the directors and legislators joined students and townspeople in McArthur Court through the courtesy of Oregon's Athletic Department, and watched the home team trim Idaho in basketball, 45 to 33.

Professor W. A. Dahlberg, acting director of the Speech Division, started the series of Saturday conferences, discussing radio and speech work of the University.

Living organization libraries prove popular hangouts for students during winter season.

Directors were particularly interested in the symposium programs carried on in some 110 communities and before 16,000 persons each year.

Head Coach Gerald A. "Tex" Oliver led the 9:45 a.m. meeting, discussing the football team and its schedule. Particular attention was paid to Alumni-Athletic Department relationships under the new Pacific coast conference rules. Coach Howard A. "Hobby" Hobson, '26, followed "Tex" Oliver and painted in words the athletic picture for basketball and baseball.

Athletic News Director Bruce Hamby, '34, then discussed ways and means of bettering his work, explaining mechanics of the bureau. Suggestions were welcomed from the directors attending.

Deans of several University schools sat in for many of the conferences. Included were Dean Ralph Leighton, Ph.D. '31, School of Physical Education; Dean James Jewell, Education; Dean Theodore Kratt, Music; Dean Victor P. Morris, '15, M.A. '20, Business Administration; Dean of Personnel Karl Onthank, '13, M.A., '15; and Dean of Men Virgil Earl, '06, M.A. '32. Saturday noon, the entire group of directors and academicians were luncheon guests of the Association.

Professor Orlando J. Hollis, '26, J.D. '28, faculty representative in the Pacific coast athletic conference, began the Saturday afternoon series. He gave a detailed summary of the new conference rules, following which an informal discussion served to clear up moot points in the minds of many present.

President Donald M. Erb appeared to complete the conferences, discussing with directors recent curriculum changes and plans for future University academic programs. Saturday evening, a buffet dinner for staff members, directors and their wives climaxed a heavy weekend of interesting work. Again the entire group visited McArthur Court to witness a powerful Web-foot hoop team trounce the Idaho Vandals, 52 to 28.

Similar weekend meetings are planned for the year 1941. Some will be carried on in several sectors of the state.

Portland Paper

Hopefully spreading word and interest in the University of Oregon, a staff of Oregon alums this month issued the first edition of a new Portland Alumni Association paper.

The publication, as yet unnamed, is edited by Charles R. Holloway, Jr., '35, with a staff of former University students.

The birthday issue contains a message from Dr. Donald M. Erb, Oregon's president, and articles by Don B. McCormick, '32, Portland Alumni president, and James H. Gilbert, '03, dean of Oregon's School of Social Science.

The paper contains four pages and is four columns wide.

With President Donald M. Erb, several of the Association's county directors met Saturday noon, February 15, near the Library, and were caught by the camera of George Godfrey, '23, News Bureau director. Seated on the Class of 1910 bench (left to right) are Lawrence Hull, Vice-President Forrest Cooper, President Erb, President Hollis Johnston, Secretary Elmer Fansett, Ben Dorris, and Walter Durgan. Standing are Editor Roy Vernstrom, Dr. Clairle Ogle, Otto Frohnmayer, Chester Knowlton, and Dr. Clarence Keene.

June Celebrants of '91, '01, '11 By RAY SCHRICK, '43

North, east, west, and south, from far-hidden corners of the United States, University Alumni of the classes of '91, '01, and '11 will return to Oregon in June.

They will return to renew acquaintances on a campus which, for two days, June 7 and 8, will again become graduation and reunion "conscious."

For these men and women, the Oregon student body of an earlier day, it will be the thirtieth, fortieth, or fiftieth anniversaries since graduation afternoons, when their own classes moved into annals of campus history.

The call, stirring first plans for the '41 reunions, will reach most of the 109 graduates and 84 ex-students of those years; it is an invitation to them to revisit the University, which for all or part of four years was their home.

To the surviving four of the class of 1891, this will be a return to a golden anniversary, Vena Edna Adair (Mrs. B. D. Sigler) housewife; May Huff (Mrs. E. J. Stroud) housewife; Mary Kinsey (Mrs. J. R. Krause) housewife; and J. C. Veazie, lawyer, are Portland residents today—theirs will be a short trip to the campus of '41. With them may return four ex-students of '91, Eugenia Johnson (Mrs. David Cook), "widow and nurse," and Jesse Marion Wise, properties manager. Both are from Portland. Edward Elmer Orton, agent for the New York Life in Eugene, and Miles Cantrall, who is farming at Ruch, are the other two.

Ray Schrick

The flow of students to the University of Oregon after '91, slowly increasing, moved into a new century in the next ten years. In 1901 a larger University, one nearing the stages of its rapid recent growth, gave degrees to 29 men and women.

The fan of time has spread these students far and wide . . . to Tennessee where Claude Russell Fountain is now at Nashville, with Henne-Fogg Technical High . . . to Alberta Canada, where Vestella B. Sears (Mrs. H. J. G. Coops) is today a housewife at Twin Lakes Ranch . . . through the mid-west and Winnetka, Ill., to the home of Harriet Warfield, housewife . . . even farther east to Walter Lincoln Whittlesey, Princeton professor of politics, in New Jersey . . . and toward the "big white way," in Schenectady, N. Y., where Dr. Peter Irving Wold is head of the physics department at Union college.

This is the "far and wide" of the fortieth anniversary class of '01. From the closer geographical point of view, at the opposite end of the pole of distance, is the Eugene "population."

Sadie May Atwood (Mrs. Martin) living at her home at Eighteenth and Villard streets; Susie Bannard (Mrs. Holt), Fairmount resident; Mary Elizabeth Straub (Mrs. O. F. Stafford) wife of Oregon's dean of Lower Division; Richard Shore Smith, president of the First National Bank of Eugene; Percy Paget Adams, University professor of architecture; and William Gilbert Beattie, associate professor of education, extension lecturer, and director of social welfare for the campus general extension division are all local residents.

Five from farther north, the Portland region, were graduated with this group. They are Fred Allen Edwards, merchant; Winifred Bessie Hammond, post office clerk; Dr. Garwood Henry Ostrander, physician and surgeon; Roy Rees Robley, sup-

Front Door Ballot Box

Built by DAN E. CLARK, II, '37

Dynamic Dan E. Clark, II, '37, is the namesake of Oregon's History Department head. Leaving the campus with a B.A. degree, one Phi Beta Kappa key, several hours of graduate study in economics, son Dan did journalistic work, served with the state tax commission, then went to Stanford. As graduate assistant in journalism the Eugene man studied public opinion. Shortly thereafter he began directing "Front Door Ballot Box," a poll of local opinion fast gaining national repute. Dan E. Clark, II, and Associates have since spread their survey work from Palo Alto to Portland, then to Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, and back again to San Francisco.—Ed.

Last November 4—day before election—the Portland Oregonian published results of an eleventh-hour local opinion poll conducted by The Front Door Ballot Box. The poll indicated Roosevelt held the support of 54.8 per cent of the city's electorate.

Next day, when Portland and the rest of the country cast their ballots, Roosevelt's proportion of the city's actual vote was 57.0 per cent. The Front Door Ballot Box had missed by only two and two-tenths percentage points.

In San Francisco, our poll came even closer. A prediction published in the Examiner missed by only three-tenths of one percentage point.

That was the story throughout the country. After conducting pre-election surveys in these two coast cities and in eastern cities as well, we sat back—somewhat anxiously—to await the results. The average error for all our pre-election surveys was only 1.7 percentage points, and in no city was our error more than 2.3 points.

Now that the election is over, we have settled down to the less spectacular but equally important job of carrying on a periodic audit of public opinion on the vital questions of the day such as selective service, aid to Britain, national defense. Other surveys cover purely local issues: street-car transportation, parking meters, control of vice and gambling. Not all of our subjects are deadly serious, either; we have asked whether the Santa Claus myth should be perpetuated and whether bald-headed men have as good a chance in business and romance as their well-thatched competitors.

INTEREST IN SELVES

It is a truism that newspaper readers are more interested in themselves than in anything else. And newspapermen are beginning to realize that local opinion polls can be one of their most effective means of feeding this interest. They are beginning to see this as a field in which they can nail up a "No Trespassing" sign, a field that is closed to the radio and to rival periodicals competing from the outside.

And yet, reliable local opinion polls make use of a technique that was unknown and undeveloped as recently as a year and a half ago. National polls had been operating successfully on a scientific basis for three or four years, but local polls came considerably later.

The question which logically presented itself was this: could these scientific polling techniques—which if accurate would make the best, local feature in any newspaper—be adapted successfully to the local community? Our results during the past year and a half and particularly during the recent presidential election have answered this question with a decisive "yes."

To my knowledge such a technique never had been employed for newspaper publication prior to the fall of 1939.

Realizing the tremendous value of such a program to local newspapers, I entered Stanford university to study the possibilities of adapting the opinion polling technique to local communities.

I made extensive research studies with Dr. Chilton R. Bush, director of the division of journalism at Stanford, who for many years has been studying the psychological and mathematical aspects of opinion polling. We made experimental surveys for the Palo Alto Times and the Redwood City Tribune—the first time any such strictly local surveys, based on a stratified, statistically corrected sample, ever have been regularly published in local newspapers, in so far as I have been able to determine.

Dr. Bush and I reached the conclusion which since has been proven entirely correct: opinion polls can be adapted to local communities.

If conducted by men and women qualified for such work by proper training in psychology, mathematics, statistics, and good common sense, such polls can be accurate in a great majority of cases—as accurate, or more so, than many polls conducted on the regional or national basis. And, they can be made decidedly more interesting to local readers.

How, exactly, did we reach this conclusion? First, we studied the techniques of the successful national polls—the same polls, incidentally, that General Hugh S. Johnson said we "wouldn't hear any more about" after the election. Then we developed what we thought was the correct formula for application of accurate opinion polling to the local scene.

Next, we put our formula to the test in two California communities, Palo Alto and Redwood City, where elections were coming up. Our formula was proven entirely correct. In Palo Alto, we predicted the vote on Ham-and-Eggs, and in Redwood City we predicted the vote on a local question—both with an error of less than eight-tenths of one percentage point.

APRIL ALUMNUS

Professor W. F. G. Thacher will provide Alumni readers with his interpretation of Edison Marshall, '17, in the April issue.

How was all this done? From the experience of Eastern polling agencies, we found that the size of the sample no longer was the prime factor in surveying opinion on major public issues of economic consequence. For many years a "random sample" probably was sufficient basis for predicting elections and other issues. Divisions in the voting public were vertical. The lumberjack and the sawmill worker were quite as likely as not to vote for the same man as did their millionaire employer.

These were the years in which the Literary Digest was gaining a widespread reputation for accuracy with its mail-ballot survey. Because of this vertical alignment, the Digest's method of sampling appeared adequate—ballots were sent almost exclusively to automobile owners and telephone subscribers. Those who did not have telephones or own automobiles were missed almost entirely, but they had not yet begun to vote as a group.

Even in 1932, the country had not yet begun, to any great degree, to vote according to economic status. Bankers who had lost their shirts under Herbert Hoover were quite as likely to vote for a first term for Franklin Roosevelt as were the longshoremen or members of the unemployed. The Literary Digest, using its time-tested random method, predicted the 1932 election within one and four-tenths percentage points.

ECONOMIC GROUPS

By 1936 people had begun to vote according to the economic group to which they belonged. Members of labor unions and members of the unemployed were beginning to vote alike—as a self-conscious group—instead of voting for a man just because their grandfathers happened to be members of his party.

The Digest apparently failed to sense this change. After sending out millions of ballots, it predicted a decisive Landon victory. This survey cost perhaps a half-million dollars. It missed being correct by 19 per cent. And yet, newer organizations, sampling on the basis of as few as 60,000 persons, hit the election with less than six per cent of error and were on the right side of the fence.

Other considerations, of course, were objective questions clearly worded and questionnaires correctly timed. But the principal and determining factor that became necessary as a result of this change in American voting habits was the stratified sample.

By this term "stratified sample," I mean a cross-section that is scientifically determined to represent in proper proportion all age, sex, political, and most important of all, income groups that make up the total population. The stratified sample, thus, is really a miniature electorate. Find out how this miniature electorate feels about a given subject, expand the result to the size of the total population, and you have a scientific measurement of the opinion of the whole community.

That, in brief, is the key to our successful local opinion polling technique. And, as we proceed to develop our between-elections audit of public opinion on important political and social issues, we are developing a valuable social instrument that can be important in furthering the democratic process.

A Finnish Fisherman to GEORGE A. LUOMA, '41

"Mina menen koulun etta saan lissa tietoja," Jaakko Paakkola, '42, 53-year-old Finnish fisherman and University of Oregon student replied, when asked why he had chosen to return for a sixth year of University education. Translated, Jaakko's reply was, "I attend school to obtain more knowledge."

Occupied as an expert gill net salmon fisherman on the Columbia and Siuslaw rivers during the fishing season, Jaakko takes time out for college each winter term. He has probably taken President Erb's oft-repeated statement, "The University of Oregon is not a country club," more literally than any other student on the Oregon campus. Jaakko has made class rooms and the massive 300,000-volume Library his "home" on the campus.

Leaving his father's farm and fishery in Finland at the age of 17, Jaakko moved to Astoria where he found jobs in lumber camps. Later, like many another Astoria Finn, he chose to "net" a livelihood from Columbia's gold mine of fish.

Years of hard work as a lumberjack and fisherman have not aged Jaakko. He has retained a youth's agility and an interest in education. Finding it difficult to pursue studies in America after leaving his home in Finland, Jaakko concentrated on getting a better understanding of the English language.

He attended Oregon State college for two years, and found college a haven for one so intent on further learning. But finding the University of Oregon and equally-meritorious institution of higher education, and "Eugene a far better place in which to live," he chose to make Oregon his alma mater.

Since making his choice of a University

Fifty-three-year-old Jaakko Paakkola, '42, majors in journalism each winter term, fishes during salmon season out of Astoria. Characteristics of the ruddy-faced vegetarian are revealed in "Finnish Fisherman" story.

city, Jaakko has taken related courses in economics, sociology, English, journalism, public speaking, and psychology.

Jaakko employs an unusual method of increasing his limited English vocabulary. This system includes a room-length chart, across the top of which he has lettered the alphabet at regular intervals. Every evening before retiring, he places on the chart new and difficult words which he has encountered in his studies during the day.

Jaakko does not limit himself to textbook reading, for he spends most of his time with books of special interest. Last year, to quench the thirst for knowledge, Jaakko purchased a $200 set of books written in Finnish, covering the studies of history and science.

For extra-curricular activities, writing and speech-making are of primary interest to Oregon's elderly student. For 20 years he has been a regular correspondent for the Industrialist, a daily Finnish newspaper of Duluth, Minn., and last year he made practical use of his academic public speaking study in discussing the Russo-Finnish conflict before various groups.

As persistent as Jaakko is in his studies, he is equally persistent in living a simple and healthful life. This 53-year-old college student has the appearance and physique of a young athlete and possesses a copper-colored complexion as a result of his constant exposure to the sun on the Astoria wharves during hot summer days.

He has been a consistent vegetarian more than a score of years and, like India's Mahatma Gandhi, he has experienced periods of fasting, during which times he has lost as much as 45 pounds within 38 days.

His sleeping habit is as regular as clock work: to bed by 10 and up at 7 except during the fishing season when there are no regular sleeping hours. When asked why he pursues this unusual diet and daily routine, Jaakko quite simply answered, "Mina haluan olla terve ja ela vanhaksi." Translated, Jaakko's Finnish expression means, "I like to be in good health and live a long life."

Law Student George Luoma, '41, is assistant educational activities manager for Oregon's ASUO and former Emerald business manager. He authored article on a fellow Finn between mornings of classes and afternoons of promotional work.

Jaakko is an avid hiker, for he is frequently seen as a pedestrian between Astoria and Seaside; and, on one occasion, he walked from Astoria to Portland. At the age of 48 he won acclaim for a 6-mile swim in the cold Columbia waters.

This man is truly unique in intense interest and painstaking persistence for the acquiring of further knowledge and education. To the University of Oregon Jaakko represents sublime consistency of untiring search for academic learning.

"Hobby's Boys to Sail" Says BOB FLAVELLE, '41

Jubilant is a nation of sportswriters and fans for Oregon hoopsters! Soon the maple court men will have a chance to spread University fame beyond the borders of the United States when they embark on an 18-day barnstorming tour of the Hawaiian Islands, March 28, as guests of the University of Hawaii.

The Webfoot players hold some sort of a record in that they have performed in more sections of the nation, and against stiffer opposition than has any other college team in the country. This trip, however, will mark the first time that they have been invited to leave the mainland to demonstrate the efficiency of Coach Howard Hobson's now-famous fast-break style of basketball.

FIRST BOAT TRIP

This will also mark the first time that an Oregon hoop squad has traveled by boat. Coming as it does at the end of the regular northern division playing season, the trip will serve more as a reward for a season of strenuous activity than as a tour in which victories are the main objective.

"Hec" Edmundson, veteran coach of Washington basketball teams, whose squad made the Island barnstorming trip in 1938, is reported to have stated upon return to the mainland that he felt the trip was "well worth a term of school to the players!" The Ducks will not be gone for much over two weeks and will miss comparatively few class days.

Hobson is using the Island tour as a spring practice session in preparation for next season and figures the boys will gain much experience by the trip. "This trip should be of extremely educational value to the boys," Hobson declared, "There is a lot of activity going on in the Pacific at present and the boys should profit by this trip."

In recent years, the Islanders have become conscious of athletics on the mainland and interest in basketball has developed to such an extent that Theodore "Pump" Searles, University of Hawaii graduate manager, has annually imported an American collegiate team to meet the Island aggregations.

TWO TEAMS

The American collegiate teams have in the past been far superior to the Hawaiian quintets and, as a result, Searles is this year attempting to have two Pacific coast teams make the trip, and play a series of games together as well as meet the Island's best. As yet, Oregon is the only team that has been contacted. Its opponents will be selected shortly.

Oregon's traveling Ducks are scheduled to sail from San Francisco on March 28, arriving in Honolulu on April 2. The next nine days will be spent touring the Islands in the day time and playing ball at night. Then on April 11, the Webfoots will board a Matson steamer and return to Oregon and studies, arriving on April 16.

This trip will boost the wandering Webfoots' mileage of travel for the present hoop season up into the 15,000 class... far above any other collegiate team in the nation. The fact that fans throughout the nation consider Oregon a "power" in the national basketball world is a tribute to the coaching genius of Hobson. It indicates that his stampeding style of play, featuring two small men for speed and three sky-scraping players to control the backboards, is the type of basketball that the public likes to witness. Win or lose, Oregon teams always add dash and fire to a contest and the spectators have learned that the Webfoots never disappoint a person who pays to see a fast, high-scoring, game.

With Seniors Vic Townsend, Hank Anderson, Bill Borchert, and Evert McNeeley playing their final season under the Lemon and Green colors, Oregon fans are beginning to speculate as to how successful a year Hobson will have in 1942. With George "Porky" Andrews, Paul Jackson, Don Kirsch, Warren Taylor, Ralph Fuhrman, Wally Borrevik, and Archie Marshik returning for another season of competition, the Oregon outlook is fairly bright. All those named have been in the starting lineup at some time or another this year. Add to the list Quentin Sidesinger, Joe Triano, Walt Reynolds from this year's varsity squad; Bob Newland, Bob Wren, Bill Gissberg, Rog Dick, Ken Simonsen, and Bob Sheridan from Frosh Coach John Warren's high-flying yearling squad, and it appears that Hobson will have much to look forward to in the way of material when the 1942 northern division basketball pentance chase begins.

Request for Names

To prevent living Alumni from becoming "dead" subjects in the Association's files, readers are requested to read the following names and notify OLD OREGON if the whereabouts of any are known.

The list of lost Oregonians includes: Robert Ades, '34; Ed Albritton, '38; Desmond G. Anderson, '32; Georgia F. Barton, '37; Robert Gordon Beal, '36; Richard N. Bohowitz, '40; Miss Marjorie Chagnon, '32; Fred W. Chatterton, '39; Frank Depinto, '38; Kirk Edmonson, '38; Alexander Elbasani, '33; Jack Fischer, '37; James B. Goodwin, '40; Fred O. Harrison, '26; Kenneth B. Hills, '39; John W. Hogan, '38; Junior Hopkins, '42; Fred Mariner Hunt, '23; Perit Huntington; Alex Kashuba, '30; Robert William Lowry, '36; Kenneth Lichty, '39; Everett McAdams, '43; Ben Marty, '39; Miss Marie Meissner, '36; Miss Harriet McLeod, '30; Hazen Olsen, '40; Charles Patterson, '38; R. B. Pennington, '36; Eldon Platt; Dean E. Ricks, '32; Miss Della Rush, '34; Miss Martha Russell, '40; Edward Simpson, '35; Elston A. Smith, '35; Gilbert Ross Titus, '39; Donald Van, '39; Thomas F. von Blankenburg, '34; W. A. Wagner, '39; and J. Alan Wilson.

Scenes such as this will beckon Oregon's band of nationally known basketball players when University of Hawaii welcomes them in early April. Coach Hobson's "fast break" style of game will insure Islanders excitement during the barnstorming tour.

Fenton's Philadelphia Lawyers With JOHN R. HAY, '39

Law School student body president is John R. Hay, dubbed "The Judge" by fellow workers at Fenton Hall. Stressing attainments of Oregon's Law School, Writer Hay indicates Alumni may become bigger boosters by better acquainting themselves with the University's ranking branches, especially law. Late hours, penetrative thinking, four-hour finals, and the inevitable bull-sessions make up a law man's life at Oregon. Worth of the School was evidenced last July when 100 per cent of its 1940 graduates passed state bar examinations in Salem. Administered by famed labor arbiter, Dean Wayne L. Morse, the School was admitted to Association of American Law Schools in 1919, its standards were approved by the American Bar Association in 1923, and in '34 it became a chapter for Order of the Coif—only purely legal scholastic honorary in nation. With but 30 of the 80 ABA and AALS members invited into Order of the Coif, the Fenton Hall faculty has established its plant decisively as an above average class "A" law school.—Ed.

To educate is the primary function of a state university. Judging the University with an objective standard, one finds the individual schools are nobly playing their part in fitting students for professional and business life. This is emphatically true of Oregon's School of Law.

Established in Portland in 1884, the Law School was moved to Eugene in 1915 so the campus might be better knit together. 'Til 1938 it was housed in the Oregon building, then moved to its present site at Fenton Hall. Now its students boast for the first time adequate physical equipment plus a 26,000-volume library, the nucleus of which was given by William David Fenton and his family in 1921.

FACULTY FAMED

Recognized nationally is its eminent teaching faculty. Oddly enough this quality has been achieved with deplorably low salaries and heavy teaching schedules for every professor on the staff. Dean Wayne L. Morse has devoted much time in serving the State of Oregon and the nation. His work in labor arbitration speaks for itself. All those who have read his opinions, who have met with him in labor disputes on the Pacific coast, voice nothing but praise for him. His work on a national grand jury survey frequently has been quoted as the most authoritative study in this branch of the law.

Able led by Professor Charles G. Howard, the Oregon Law Review staff has gained nation-wide recognition for producing a top-notch legal periodical. Contrary to a policy practiced in most law schools publishing similar reviews, the majority of Law Review articles are written by students of the School, and the editors are students. Any student article meeting requirements of the faculty and editorial staff may be published.

Two-fold is the Law Review function: to give students experience in legal research valuable for future practice, and to benefit the present practicing attorneys residing within the state who are aiding in the search for true legal principles.

Professor Orlando J. Hollis, '25, J.D. '28, also Professor Kenneth J. O'Connell and Howard have done voluminous work annotating the restatement of the law of conflicts of law, torts, administrative law, contracts, and trusts. Heavy teaching schedules emphasize the sacrifices made by the School's faculty to aid the state and nation through legal research.

Men of quality in their profession have been graduated from this School. Innumerable names prevent mention of all who deserve honor in OLD OREGON. Following are listed a few to illustrate why Oregon compares favorably with other law schools of the nation:

William Arthur Roseborough, '24, J.D. '24, was a Rhodes scholar for three years, receiving another degree from Oxford in '27. Today he manages the Paris branch of Sullivan and Cromwell.

Colonel Clarence R. Hotchkiss, LL.B., '11, has been an active member of the bar with a distinguished military record. He served two years as United States marshal.

Yosuke Matsuoka, LL.B. '00, is today foreign minister for Japan. He has served in many positions in the Japanese diplomatic corps.

A. C. Spencer, LL.B. '95, is today general western counsel for the Union Pacific railroad. His offices are in Omaha, Neb.

Clarence M. Eubanks, LL.B. '11, is a lawyer and corporation counsel in New York city. He is also executive vice-president of the National Reserve corporation (mortgage banking), and member of New York Real Estate Securities exchange.

CUSTOMS JUDGE

Judge Walter H. Evans, LL.B. '05, is judge for the United States Customs court in New York city. His address is 201 Varick street in Manhattan.

Paul S. Dick, LL.B. '02, is president of the United States National Bank of Portland. For the second term, he was appointed to the federal advisory council of the federal reserve system in 1940, an honor never before accorded a Pacific coast banker.

Arno Dosch-Fleurot, LL.B. '00, has worked as a newspaper correspondent in France, England, and Russia. He established a personal newspaper syndicate in 1939, called "The European Background," which is used by many American dailies.

Joseph K. Carson, LL.B. '17, retired as mayor of Portland in January to practice law once more. He had served two terms.

It's a long, hard road that conditions law students of today to become lawyers of tomorrow. Part of the integrated training for University of Oregon seniors is a spring term series of moot court trials. Each member of the graduating class participates as a defense or prosecuting attorney. Setting furnished is the well-worn Lane county court room near the city center of Eugene. Cases are tried under the penetrating legal eyes of "Judge" Orlando J. Hollis, professor of law.

Not real, but realistic, is the atmosphere in which Oregon law seniors debate pros and cons of their mythical cases, with each determined to serve his client best. The moot trials provide practical training necessary for future court room problems. Only the finished product is viewed by the audience of students and townspeople. Before every trial the aspiring barrister "bones" for hours over legal references, planning a course of attack to insure a sound case in the eyes of the "law."

Enrollment figures have varied between 70 and 125 students yearly during the past decade. Attempting to train only the best, the School has established and maintained high standards, resulting in less than 30 per cent of the original freshman classes completing the three-year course. Cruel as this policy may seem, it is justified when statistics reveal that 90 per cent of Oregon's law graduates have passed the state bar examinations during this decade. Oregonians have never failed to pass bar examinations in California, Nevada, and Washington during the entire history of the School.

Young attorneys who have been graduated from Oregon during the past 15 years are already proving themselves. Again limited by space, this article will reveal only those graduates receiving the doctor of jurisprudence degree which requires a grade average of "B" in addition to an acceptable thesis.

In 1926, the first year J.D.'s were granted, 16 graduates received the degree honors. They are John Bryson, David Husted, Randall Jones—all Portland attorneys; and Paul Patterson, Hillsboro assistant district attorney; Donald Husband, Eugene barrister; Ralph McClaffin of the McClaffin Menu service in Portland.

BONNEVILLE COUNSEL

1927—Ed C. Kelley, assistant general counsel for the Bonneville power administration, Portland; Frank Mayer, attorney, Lebanon; and Judge Ernest Robertson of the 89th judicial district of Texas, at Wichita Falls, Tex.

1928—Ronald Beattie, head statistician of the administrative office for United States courts, Washington, D. C.; Forrest Cooper, Lake county Alumni director, chamber of commerce secretary, attorney in Lakeview; Harry J. De Francq, Edwin Hicks, George Joseph, and Paul A. Sayre, attorneys in Portland; Professor Orlando J. Hollis, Law School, Eugene; Herman Hansen, attorney, Everett, Wash.; Margaret Woodson, attorney, Pasadena, Calif.; and Captain Eugene Slattery, judge advocate general's department, United States Army, Washington, D. C.

1929—William Adams, attorney, Portland; Helen Crosby, attorney, San Francisco; Lester Oehler, attorney, Corvallis;

Maurice Tarshis, deputy district attorney, Portland; Orval Yokum, attorney, John Day; and Donald Templeton, deceased.

1930—Ingvar B. Ansnes, professor, Columbia university law school, New York city; Glenn Hughes, deceased; Ellis Reiter, attorney, Los Angeles; Carl Rodegerdts, attorney, Sacramento; Leland Shaw, Richard Morris, Clifford W. Powers, William Powell, and Roland Davis, Portland attorneys. Davis served recently as president of the Portland Alumni Association for two terms.

1931—Professor John Berg, University of South Dakota law school; Hugh Biggs, attorney, Portland; Francis Coad, assistant professor of law, Montana State university; Walter Durgan, assistant district attorney and Benton county Alumni director, Corvallis; Fred Finsley, state director of parole and probation, Salem; John Gale, attorney, Medford; Lester T. Johnson, district attorney and Sherman county Alumni director, Wasco.

1932—E. M. Amundson, attorney, Long Beach, Calif.; Fred Duell, attorney, Medford; Howard Green, internal revenue agent, estates division, New York city; Roy Herndon and Delmas R. Richmond, attorneys, Los Angeles; William Kuykendall, attorney, Klamath Falls; Joseph McKeown, attorney, Marshfield; A. Walter Norblad, attorney, Astoria; Merrill Swenson, manager of claims department, Mutual Compensation Insurance Co., San Francisco; Wu Tang, professor, political academy of Wen Wa university, Nanking, China; Malcolm Wilkinson, attorney, The Dalles.

1933—Otto Bowman, attorney, Salem; Otto Frohnmayer, attorney and Jackson county Alumni director; George Layman, attorney, Newberg.

1934—Carl Coad, attorney, Nyssa; Karl Huston, attorney, Corvallis; James Landye, attorney, Portland; Josephine Rice, now Mrs. Douglas Polivka, Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.

1935—Bertrand Isaminger, deputy clerk for supreme court, deputy clerk for U. S. district court, U. S. commissioner, and city attorney, Pendleton; Wilbur Riddlesbarger, assistant professor, School of Business Administration, University of Oregon.

1936—Ralph Bailey, attorney, Salem.

1937—Richard Devers, examiner for state corporation commission, Salem; Robert S. Miller, attorney, instructor at Northwestern college of law, Portland; Orval Thompson, attorney, state representative, 41st session; Thomas Tongue, legal adviser, wages and hours division, department of labor, Seattle; Anthony Yturri, attorney, Ontario.

1938—Herbert Galton, attorney, Portland.

1939—Stanley Darling, legal department, Bonneville power administration, Portland; Bernard Kliks, attorney, Portland; Orval Etter, legal consultant, Bureau of Municipal Research, University of Oregon; Frank Nash, attorney, Portland.

1940—Betty Brown, attending Columbia university, New York city, scholarship award from American Association of University Women; Donald Marshall, also attending Columbia university, New York city; Sheldon Parks, special agent, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Detroit, Mich.

Look again upon the names just enumerated. From your knowledge of their reputations in your community, judge these men and women. Careful study will reveal they are lawyers of high standards, well able to serve in legal relations, and more than willing to be of service to their local community, state, and nation.

In the Mail Bag

15. Woodrow Everitt, '39, transferred from here to the Navy supply school, Philadelphia, for study.

I hope to see you and all the "boys" during my leave before reporting for active duty. Give our regards to Elmer. I am looking forward to the next issue of your mighty fine magazine.

Jim Pickett, '40

June Celebrants

intendent of operations at the Portland General Electric Co.; and Charley Epeneus Wagner, retired, former shop foreman at Portland General Electric Co.

These of '01 represent the Pacific coast in its near-entirety. The Evergreen state, Washington, is home of David Wolfe, who is county superintendent of schools in Kitsap county; and Luke L. Goodrich, Longview, president of the First National bank. An equal number of graduates chose the climate of California for permanent residence: Colonel Condon C. McCornack serves the United States Army in San Francisco, and Edward S. Van Dyke is an attorney in Burlingame.

When ex-students join forces with the graduate group for the review of the early days, five more may return. They are Michael Joseph Barry, sheep rancher of Lakeview; William Harrison Ross, Portland realtor; William Johnston White, assistant northwest sales manager for Crown-Willamette Paper Co., who now lives in Cottage Grove; and Cora Emily Wylie (Mrs. Geary Kimbrell) Portland housewife.

A rapid rise in Oregon enrollment started shortly after the turn of the century and a decade of growth ending in 1911 foreran a period of expansion which has continued to this day. Seventy-four were listed on Alumni records as graduates of 1911; 74 additional ex-students attended part of their four years only to drop out prior to graduation.

Many of this class, which may almost be included in the "younger generation" of Oregon graduating groups, will return for reunion time in June.

Celebrating the thirtieth anniversary since graduation, the University will honor these members of the year '11.

Edith Baker (Mrs. Sam Mosher), school teacher at University high school, Eugene; Helen Beach (Mrs. G. J. Mitchell), housewife in New York city; William Martin Beals, manager of a boys' boarding school in Michigan; Cecelia S. Bell, Reedsport; Beulah Bridges (Mrs. L. G. Fear) housewife in Portland; Phil Brownell, electrical engineer, Salem; from southeastern Oregon, Jessie Margaret Calkins (Mrs. F. T. Morgan) housewife, Nyssa; Sophie Catlin (Mrs. F. H. Spears) housewife, Salem; Maybelle L. Churchwright, San Francisco; Marshall J. Clapp; Lilah P. Clark (Mrs. Lilah Bradford) assistant professor at Fresno State college, Fresno, Calif.; Percy M. Collier, lawyer and extension worker for the University in Portland.

Mary L. Criteser (Mrs. Darrow) teacher at Bret Harte junior high school, Oakland, Calif.; Juliet Cross (Mrs. T. A. Burke) housewife, Scarsdale, N. Y.; Francis Day Curtis, dean of the school of education, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor; Mary Debar (Mrs. C. M. Taylor) housewife, Fort Meade, Md.; Gertrude Denhart (Mrs. Powell), Portland; Olive Starr Donnell (Mrs. G. M. Vinton), Portland; Howard W. Drew, special agent, Occidental Life Insurance Co., Sandlake; Claire A. Dunn, mathematics instructor at Grants Pass high school; Jessie Fariss, history teacher at Jefferson high school, Portland; Myron Warren Getchell, associate editor of decimal classification, Washington, D. C.

Verner Arthur Gilles, geologist, Billings, Mont.; R. June Gray (Mrs. W. A. Talbot) Myrtle Creek; Madge N. Hamble (Mrs. Robert William) housewife, Eugene; Mabel Hill (Mrs. Phil Brownell) housewife, Salem; Grace Hobbs, domestic science teacher at Washington high school, Portland; Gertrude Holmes (Mrs. L. E. Henika), teacher at Girls' Polytechnic school, Portland; Conifred Hurd, science teacher at West Seattle high school, Seattle; Virginia Meta Hurd (Mrs. E. D. Kahler) housewife, Portland; Eugene F. Hurlburt, electrical engineer; Hattie E. Hyde (Mrs. C. A. Gardner) housewife, Portland; Pearl Johnson (Mrs. H. E. Coleman) housewife, Roseburg; Dr. Laura Hall Kennon, educational psychology teacher at Brooklyn college, New York city.

Winifred Kerr (Mrs. H. J. Morton) clothing teacher at Girls' Polytechnic school, Portland; John Jerry Kestly, defense work for U. S. engineers, Honolulu, T. H.; Charles W. Koyle, Ashland; Maybelle Larsen (Mrs. Huggins); Effie Belle McCallum (Mrs. W. R. Bacon) Fort Smith, Ark.; Louis Edwin McCoy, assistant engineer, Bonneville project; Hazel McNair (Mrs. C. H. Hayden) housewife, Fort Snelling, Minn.; William Edward Moses, insurance office, Salem; Dr. William Boyd Mott, physician and surgeon, Salem; George H. Otten, Salem.

Leon C. Parks, vice-president and general manager, Gulf Power Co., Pensacola, Fla.; Alonzo Amos Perkins; Lila C. Prosser (Mrs. Kennedy) housewife, Haverford, Penn.; Merwin Rankin, lawyer, Portland; Charles William Robinson, attorney, Portland; Ruth Rolfe (Mrs. W. T. Neill) housewife, Portland; Blanche Ross, teacher; William Rueter, engineer inspector, Manette, Wash.; Arthur Hayes Sargent, minister, Wentworth, N. H.; Alfred Willard Scullen, Westinghouse Electric, North Braddock, Penn.; Harvey Maurice Slater, retired, Palo Alto, Calif.; Morris W. Starbuck, Federal Reserve bank, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Alice Erna Stoddard (Mrs. G. H. Bendshadler) housewife, Portland; Dr. Ferdinand Theodore Struck, professor and head of department of industrial education, Pennsylvania State college; Helen Washburne (Mrs. Helen Martin) housewife, San Francisco; George McDaniel White, Crown-Willamette Paper Co., Portland; Helena Pearl Wilbur (Mrs. R. W. Hall) saleslady in office furniture store, Oakland, Calif.; Cecile Wilcox (Mrs. B. R. Chandler) housewife, Marshfield; Lucia Wilkins (Mrs. H. C. Moore) housewife, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Naomi Williamson (Mrs. G. A. McNeill) housewife and private teacher in speech arts, Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Edith Verbenia Witzel, teacher and physician, Salem; Edith M. Woodcock (Mrs. F. J. Whittlesey) housewife, Portland; and Ray Woodruff (Mrs. Frank Jenkins) housewife, Klamath Falls.

The reunion invitation will likewise be open to the 74 ex-students of 1911. Because of space limits, however, they cannot be mentioned in detail here.

Short Appointed

Frank Short, '25, since 1937 a member of the University School of Journalism staff, has been appointed assistant province chief in charge of Oregon and Oregon State chapters of Alpha Tau Omega.

The first man to hold this job and title, Frank entered Oregon State college in 1916 and pledged Alpha Tau Omega at that time. After one year, he enlisted in the Navy for World War service, attending the University of California for one semester after the Armistice.

His last two years of undergraduate study were spent at Oregon where he presided over his fraternity as a senior. He has done advertising work with retail stores, newspapers, and advertising agencies for nearly 12 years.

George Hopkins, '21, demonstrates truth of his statement, "Piano Playing Is Fun." A University Music School professor, he teaches piano skills for relaxation as well as entertainment, especially for the beginner. Recently he wrote a quartet of books now being released periodically and captioned by the quotation above. First edition, "Fun With Harmonics," hit music markets late in January. Book two, "Fun With Chords and Tunes," will be available this month.

THE WORDS COME POURING IN! . . . .

Twenty thousand words an hour the news pours in—from Berlin and beleaguered Britain—from Athens and Taranto and Benghazi—from Rio and Tokyo and Washington, D. C.

It fills our newspapers with far more words than any of us has time to read. It brings us contradictory reports from every foreign news capital. It comes so fast and changes direction so often that today, more than ever, thoughtful Americans need TIME—

To save their time...to verify their facts...and to help them make the news make sense.

EACH CAN SAY

"I WAS A CLERK"

"I WAS A LINEMAN"

"I WAS A DRAFTSMAN"

THIRTY-SEVEN years ago, in 1904, the president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company went to work as a clerk in one of the Bell System companies.

About that time, the 18 men who are now the presidents of the Bell telephone companies were starting their careers. For, like the head of the System, they have worked many years in the business — an average of 38 years each. Each of them can say: "I was a clerk," "I was a lineman," "I was a draftsman"— and so on.

The "know how" is here — for the every-day job of running the telephone business or to serve you in emergency. Up-from-the-ranks management is doubly important these days.

THE BELL SYSTEM IS DOING ITS PART IN THE COUNTRY'S PROGRAM OF NATIONAL
