NEWS AND COMMENT

By the Editor

"Dumb Athletes"?

Just to test out our theory that the popular conception of a college athlete is that of a big dumb lumbering brute with brains conversely proportionate to brawn, we asked several casual acquaintances recently what their guess would be as to the scholastic ability of Oregon's athletes. Almost unanimous was the reply, "Oh, athletes don't go to the University to study. All the studying they do is just enough to assure their eligibility on the team." Is that so!

And so again, just to test out our theory that these person's estimate of a college athlete was wrong, (an estimate based probably on a conception of athletics that finds its roots in college movies, college stories and the writings of sports writers who seem more anxious to make a hero of the athletic dumbbell than the athletic scholar), we went up to the Igloo and asked Tom Stoddard, assistant graduate manager, to prepare for us a survey of the scholastic attainments during winter term of the squad members of Oregon's four major sports.

The most startling revelation from this informal survey was the fact that the 134 men who participate in football, basketball, baseball and track at the University maintain a higher scholastic average than that maintained by all men registered in the University and which is just seven hundredths of a point below the all-University average.

Above Average

Basketball, grades for which were taken during the playing season, were above the all-University average; baseball and track were just below; football was above seven of the larger national fraternities.

In fairness, of course, it must be admitted that there are a few on these teams whose grades are not all that could be desired. But scholastically, at least, those students participating in the Oregon sports program represent a fairly accurate cross section of the scholastic attainments of the average University male student.

Ability and Grades

Another interesting survey recently completed on the campus by Jack Cate, a senior in business administration, seems to us to show, at least partially, why athletes' grades are better than the average. In his study Cate attempts to determine what relationship there is between a student's abilities (determined by ratings of psychology entrance exam, prep school record and campus scholastic average) and his success or failure in extra-curricular activities.

Cate took fifty fraternity men as subjects for his study and computed their scholastic records, their preparatory scholastic records and their psychology entrance exam ratings. He arranged these in five groups, (high, above medium, medium, below medium, and low). Then he selected a jury of five persons, all of whom knew personally the fifty men being studied, and had this jury, members of which worked individually, rate the men as to value in extra-curricular activities. Three different divisions were used: value to the fraternity, value to the campus, and value to the activities in which they participated. These ratings were then computed and arranged into five similar groups, from high to low.

Good Students Active

A very close relationship was discovered between the high men in the first category and the high men in the extra-curricular value category. This same relationship remained, with little variation, on down through the scale. Thus men of greatest capacity (measured by the first category) were shown to be the most likely to succeed in extra-curricular activities. Another interesting fact that the survey reveals is that those persons who are most successful in their scholastic attainments are likewise the persons who carry the largest activity loads and are most successful therein. This would tend to prove that in the main activities are not detrimental to scholastic attainment, but more likely to be stimulating to such endeavor.

Both of these surveys, although neither are extensive and leave room, perhaps, for non-considered variable factors, are extremely interesting in light of recent controversies regarding the assessment and collection of student activity fees. Stoddard's survey should tend to answer those critics of the University's athletic program who berate what they believe to be the emphasis of athletics over scholarship, and Cate's study should tend to show, in light of Stoddard's findings, a definite correlation between scholastic success and success in athletics—and other campus activities as well. Cate's survey also would seem to back up with facts the contention of the state board that student activities are a definite and vital part of the educational program.

Two Kinds

Also, as in all studies where a mean or average is the basis of computation, it must be remembered that there will be found isolated cases that do not hold true to form. Thus, now and then, a good football player may be found rated as a poor student—just as good students are found now and then that are good for nothing else but grades. To many, a bespectacled, anemic bookworm who can make no application of his knowledge is as much a tragedy as is the dumb hero of the gridiron to others.

Missing Students

On page 10 of this issue we have reprinted an article appearing recently in the Eugene Register-Guard telling of the results of two separate surveys made by Clifford Constance, assistant University registrar, and John M. Rae, associate professor of business administration, showing the appalling decreases in enrollment in Oregon's higher educational institutions.

Both are extremely interesting and we must admit depressing pictures of what has happened to registration figures at the University and College as compared to other institutions. The Register-Guard comments editorially on the situation by stating:

"Some 2000 'missing students' are not in the schools of neighboring states; nor are they in private colleges of this state. Presumably they are merely 'out of luck.' No doubt many of them would be good students of the most ambitious and industrious type. The time is ripe for a study of the situation. There should be no blind scramble to boost enrollments. Possibly the processes of weeding out the inefficient and incompetent should be speeded up. But opportunity for those who will do most with it needs to be brought back."

The Eugene newspaper further states that whatever the reasons for the lack of students, the situation calls for careful studies by those in charge of the institutions and for corrective meaasures, since confidence can best be restored by restoring the institutions'

RAMBLING REPORTER

POLITICS

Many In Race

Instead of choosing another alumni population center for this month's contribution, OLD OREGON'S "Rambling Reporter" decided to check the list of state political aspirants for Oregon alumni in an attempt to discover which alumni had been bitten this spring by the "I choose to run" bug.

Results show an exceptionally large percentage of alumni in the cigar-offering baby-kissing ranks for the May primaries. Oregon alumni constitute about one per cent of the state's population, yet they constitute more than 16 per cent of the 375 office seekers this year.

So that OLD OREGON readers may know which of the 375 aspirants are fellow alumni, "Rambling Reporter" herewith presents its yearly alumni political review.

Congress Attracts

For Congress one finds James W. Mott, ex-'07, seeking re-election as representative from the first district on a republican platform. Mott is now completing his first term in the national law making body. He was an Oregon attorney for several years, served in the legislature, and later as state corporation commissioner. Seeking the same post, but under the democratic banner is R. R. Turner, ex-'22, superintendent of schools at Dallas for twelve years. Turner did part of his collegiate work at Oregon State College.

use. The newspaper assigns two causes as probably the most important factors for the steep declines; first, the controversies which have been prevalent in Oregon higher education during the last few years, and second, the depression, which happened to coincide with these controversies.

From all parts of the country come remblings of discontent with the present relationship between the schools of higher learning and the many new and absorbing problems of the New Deal when interpreted in their broad social significance. Perhaps Oregon, through its recent educational reorganization, has experienced ahead of its contemporary institutions, the pains of "setting its house in order" for the new and bigger job that education now confronts. And with that problem being started on the road to solution, Oregon now has a chance to be in the van of those institutions quickest to grasp the relationship that education should hold in connection with the new social order. At least a careful study of this challenge, stimulated by the necessity of answering the enrollment enigma, gives to the Oregon institutions a golden opportunity of making something more than a functional contribution to educational progress.

From the second district Jay H. Upton, LL.B., '02, of Bend seeks nomination to the lower house of Congress. He is a republican, and has behind him a long record of service in the Oregon senate.

Walter B. Gleason, LL.B. '11, seeks a democratic nomination from the third congressional district. Gleason has practiced law in Portland since graduation, with the exception of several years of service during the war.

Three Seek Job

Two democrats and a republican, all former Oregon students, would hold down the chair of Superintendent of Public Instruction at Salem. Charles A. Howard, M.A. '23, republican and present incumbent, seeks nomination and re-election. He has served in this capacity since 1926 and is a former ex-officio member of the University board of regents. The other two aspirants for this position are: Forrest E. Dunton, B.S., '12, of Molalla, and John W. Leonhardt, B.S. '29, of La Grande, where he is principal of the Central grade school. Leonhardt is former superintendent of Milwaukie schools.

Togamen File

Nine alumni are seeking nominations as state senators from seven districts. They are:

Third District—L. L. Ray, '12, Eugene attorney, democrat.

Fourth District—Elwin A. McCornack, ex-'08, Lane county farmer, grandson of Dr. Thomas Condon. McCornack has served several years in the lower house at Salem. He is a republican.

Sixth District—George W. Dunn, '86, M.A. '93, of Ashland. He represented Jackson county in legislature for many years as a republican.

Ninth District—Dean H. Walker, '13, hop grower of Independence. Former dean of men at University and head of physical education department. Has served one term as state representative. Republican.

Tenth District — Eugene E. Marsh, ex-'22, McMinnville attorney. Republican. And for the democratic nomination, same district, is Kenneth E. Shetterly, ex-'18, Willamina merchant.

Thirteenth District—Roy K. Terry, '10, Portland attorney. Married to an Oregon alumna (Ruth Elton, ex-'21). Republican. On the democratic slate is Austin F. Flegel, ex-'12, Portland attorney.

Fourteenth District—Carl A. Appलगren, L.L.B., '10, Republican, Portland attorney.

Many From Portland

For the thirteen positions to be filled in the House of Representatives from the Fifth district, Portland, are 18 alumni aspirants, both democrats and republicans. The republicans:

Homer D. Angell, '00, former alumni president. Has formerly served two terms as legislator. Was candidate for Congress last election. Member law firm of Angell and Fisher.

Arthur B. Baines, B.S. '30, L.L.B. '31. Attorney.

Harvey S. Benson, L.L.B. '31, attorney. Lyle Brown, '12. Attorney. Has distinguished army record. Formerly deputy district attorney for Multnomah county.

Judge Howard K. Zimmerman, '13, of Astoria is in the race to succeed himself as circuit judge of the Twentieth district. Before ascending to the bench, Judge Zimmerman was city attorney in Astoria. He has practiced law there for many years.

RESEARCH

Latin Not "Dead"

Latin did not become a "dead" language upon the decline and fall of the Roman Empire, but continued to grow in both use and number of words. This is an interesting fact pointed out by Frederic S. Dunn, head of the Latin department, who found in the Latin writings of Robert of Avesbury, a contemporary of Edward III about 1340, more than 300 non-classical words, or words that came into use in Latin since the days of the Roman empire. Professor Dunn has just completed this work as a part of the British Latin Mediaeval dictionary, a volume to be published soon in London.

College Towns

Cities in which higher educational institutions are located have a tremendous advantage over other communities in education, it is pointed out by H. Eari Pemberton, former graduate student at the University, whose study "A Local College as an Educational Opportunity," recently appeared in the Common- wealth Review. He found that while but 25 per cent of high school graduates from the state at large go on to college, in the average college or university city the number jumps to approximately 50 per cent. The writer recommends some form of scholarship to compensate for this advantage accorded the student who can live at home while going to college.

Another Grant

For the past six months municipalities of Oregon have been aided in many ways in solving such problems as raising revenue, applying for CWA, PWA and other federal funds, by the field consultant of the University's bureau of municipal research and service and League of Oregon Cities. So effective has this work been carried out that an additional grant of $2500 has been voted by the American Municipal Association for an extension of another six months. Herman Kehrli, director of the bureau, and W. M. Briggs, field consultant, will continue the work.

ALUMNI

New Educational Goal

Dr. C. V. Boyer, newly confirmed president of the University, was guest of honor at a large gathering of Portland alumni for their monthly meeting, held at the University club, April 24, at noon.

"The economic depression is gradually bringing us to a new point of view," Dr. Boyer declared, "and this is the value of a liberal education in enriching the life of the individual as opposed to the standard of commercial success which has been placed on education for years."

"In fact," Dr. Boyer said, "we are getting back to a 12th century viewpoint. If higher education is to mean anything in these days of doubt and fear, when graduation from a standard college is no guarantee even of a livelihood, then we must make it fit the need of the time. The ideal of service, for example, must be a part of man's being. The social sciences today are becoming of increasing importance, and, as man expands in his social environment, liberal arts training must serve in cultivating the new values that will help the relationship of individual and state."

Dr. Boyer discussed the responsibilities of modern education and the sharp changes in educational outlook that have come about as the result of a vastly changed economic picture.

"It is up to us to meet these responsibilities," the president declared, "but to do so our system must be adequately financed. We must keep the pace, our standards must be maintained. I can tell you that the university is in no condition to sustain further curtailments of income.

"The liberal arts course of today greatly emphasizes the spiritual values," Dr. Boyer continued, "I do not mean necessarily the religious phase, but beauty and its expression. It must develop individual curiosity. It must develop imagination and imaginative sympathy. It must develop the ability of the individual to find his place in the scheme of things. It must develop appreciation of the arts, of nature and of altruism. It must develop character and courage, courage to face the world.

"The era of cash values on higher education is waning," the educator continued, "Today the values of living are being stressed. The value of health and comfort and how to enjoy them; the value of ambition, always heavily emphasized; of duty, religion and altruism and of beauty and its appreciation. And the values of knowledge and information without which altruism cannot well serve."

COMMENCEMENT

Class Reunions

Graduates of 10, 20, 25, 30 and 50 years ago will gather on the campus June 9, for their respective reunions.

Plans for the events of Alumni Day, held in connection with the Commencement exercises, are well under way, and secretaries of the reunion classes are now at work writing letters and preparing programs for various anniversaries. The tentative program:

Friday, June 8—Failing and Beekman Orations.

Saturday, June 9—Annual breakfast of University of Oregon Women; Semi-annual meeting of Alumni Association; the University luncheon; the president's reception; individual class dinners; the flower and fern procession and twilight concert; and class social activities.

Sunday, June 10 — Baccalaureate Service.

Monday, June 11—Commencement Exercises.

The annual meeting and breakfast of the State Association of University of Oregon Women will be held Saturday morning, June 9, at the Osburn hotel. Fifty cents per plate will be charged. All alumnae planning to attend are urged to make reservations early either by writing or phoning the Osburn hotel.

Class secretaries in charge of reunions are:

1884—Dr. Caspar W. Sharples, 700 Stimson Building, Seattle, Washington.

1904—James O. Russell, P. O. Box No. 362, Salem, Oregon.

CLASS SECRETARY
Merle Chessman, '09, who is preparing plans and promoting the 25th anniversary of the Ought Niners this June.

1909—Merle Chessman, c/o Astorian Budget, Astoria, Oregon.

1914—F. Harold Young, 599 East Broadway, Eugene, Oregon.

1924—Frank G. Carter, c/o Montgomery Ward and Co., Inglewood, California.

All communications regarding Commencement and class reunions should be addressed to respective class secretaries or to the Alumni Office on the campus.

Leaves Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Margaret Edmunson Norton, '30, secretary for the campus Y. W. C. A. for the past three years, has announced her resignation to become effective July 1. She is leaving the campus to join her husband, Dr. Henry Norton, M.D., '33, who has just completed his internship and has accepted a position in the south. Mrs. Norton is the daughter of Mrs. Ella Travis Edmunson, '03. No successor has as yet been named.

Artist Returns

Henry Abbott Lawrence, '28, who has been studying painting and drawing in Europe the past year as the second holder of the I. O. N. Lewis scholarship from the University, has recently returned to his home in Portland. His work is now on exhibition in Portland and later will be brought to the campus. Lawrence, who received a master of fine arts degree in architecture from the University in 1931, is the son of Ellis F. Lawrence, dean of the school of architecture and allied arts.

Enters Politics

Walter Lincoln Whittlesey, '01, professor of political science at Princeton, has tossed his hat into the political ring in New Jersey. He has entered his name in the May primaries for the Democratic nomination for representative in Congress from the fourth New Jersey district. Professor Whittlesey was an instructor in economics on the campus for two years after receiving his degree. He then went to Princeton, where he has built an enviable reputation in the field of political science. His writings and political researches have become established authority in this field.

Best Write Ups

News stories written by two Morning Oregonian scribes, both Oregon graduates, rated "News Stories of 1933," Iowa school of journalism publication containing some of the best newspaper items picked from all states during the past year. A terse, colorful report of the frontier classic, the Pendleton Round-Up, in which the mighty bucking of a wild 1100-pound bronco, "Gone Wrong," was described as the highlight of an outstanding program, won the national honor for Palmer Hoyt, '23, managing editor of the Portland publication. Two youths who killed Burrell Milo Baucom, state policeman, near Grants Pass, July 1, were interviewed by Webster A. Jones, '26, Oregonian staff writer, and the story of their plans for a crime career gave the writer "best stories" honors.

Wood-Carver

Creative artistic wood-carving is the new-found ability of Robert E. Harbison, Jr., ex-'28, who lives in Eugene with Mrs. Estella Mays Harbison, ex-'32. "Whittlin'" away at sticks of wood until fanciful trinkets and toys take shape, has for long been Bob's hobby, but only recently did friends discover in his carving a talent valued by the world.

Cats, elephants, squirrels, deer, cougars, horses, paraded from his gifted hand, and Eugene art lovers as quickly snatched them up. Recognizing that Bob "has something," CWA commissioned him to carve a series of Oregon animals for the University's art school building. The figures, done in pungent Port Orford cedar, his favorite material, will stand about 15 inches high. Marionettes have also attracted Harbison's interest, and he has won praise for his likenesses of several Eugene people in this work.

On Furlough

"Siam is depression struck," says Glen Morrow, '24, on furlough after four and one-half years in education work in the land of rice and teak and tin. Mr. Morrow, with his wife and small daughter, Glenna Jeanne, are visiting his mother, Mrs. Zelda H. Morrow, in Eugene. For two and one-half years on the Bangkok college faculty, and since educational director of seven schools in Chiengrai, city of 5,000, Mr. Morrow describes Siamese education as rapidly improving under government aid.

Politically, Siam is quiescent under a year-old constitutional monarchy, with Phya Bahol playing the role of Mussolini. Seventy-eight people's representatives met recently in the country's first assembly. A shattered export trade and high taxes has brought to Siam the woes of the rest of the world, and the natives are likely to continue to ride bicycles for lack of an improved highway system. Few more than 100 Americans live in Siam, land of the travelling king.

BIG WEEK-END

Mother Guests

Mothers of University of Oregon students, and the students themselves, will join forces on the campus May 11, 12 and 13, for the annual Junior Week-end and the seventh annual Mothers' Day. William Davis, Portland, is chairman for the week-end, and Nancy Archbold is chairman for Mothers' events.

Since this is the 75th anniversary of Oregon's statehood, the "Diamond Jubilee" theme has been chosen for the entire week-end, and events will honor early Oregon pioneers. The canoe fete this year for the first time will have a central theme, and each float will depict some pioneer phase of Oregon, or some stage of progress of the state.

The statue of the Pioneer, donated several years ago by Joseph N. Teal, and the Pioneer Mother, the gift of Burt Brown Barker, university vice-president, are to be prominent features about which the festivities will center. Part of the exercises will take place around the Pioneer Mother.

The week-end events will start on Friday, May 11, with campus day. Installation of new student body officers and the campus luncheon, with its ceremonies of pledging to Friars and Mortar Board, senior honor societies, will be features of the fore part of the day. This will be followed by the coronation of the campus queen, athletic contests, a tea for mothers, and the annual junior prom in the evening.

Saturday will be a busy day for mothers and students. In the morning the freshmen will be marched to the huge "O" on Skinner's Butte and made to paint it. The annual Frosh-Soph tug-of-war, mass meeting for mothers and other events will take place early in the day. Athletic events, another tea for mothers, the annual Mothers' Day banquet and the canoe fete will be other events for this day. On Sunday special services will be held for mothers in all churches and living organizations will honor their guests at dinner.

Fee Study Group

Following action of the state board of higher education at its last meeting, at which the former $5 fee for student body activities was re-established as a definite part of the regular tuition fee, Chancellor W. J. Kerr has appointed an inter-institutional committee to study ways and means whereby this fee may be collected and disbursed in accordance with the recent ruling of the attorney general. The attorney general's decision stated that the state board of higher education could not collect or make mandatory the fee for the A. S. U. O. The action of the board, in which it reaffirmed its stand that activities are an essential part of the educational program of the University, makes it necessary to devise some plan whereby the disbursement of the fee is under the supervision of the board and not under the A. S. U. O. corporation.

The committee appointed by Dr. Kerr is composed of the following persons: H. A. Bork, comptroller for the educational system, chairman; Dr. C. V. Boyer, president of the University; Dr. George W. Peavey, president of Oregon State College; J. A. Churchill, president of the state normal schools; U. G. Dubach, dean of men at the College; Virgil D. Earl, dean of men at the University; Fred E. Sailing, president of the Associated Students at the College; Thomas Tongue, president of the Associated Students at the University; Carl Lodell, graduate manager at the College; and Hugh E. Rosson, graduate manager at the University.

New Prexy

In the student body elections for 1934-35, held on the campus last week, Joe Renner of Portland was named president of the A. S. U. O. for the coming school year. He was chosen over Malcolm Bauer of Pendleton by the slender margin of 25 votes. Renner has been prominent in athletics and is affiliated with Kappa Sigma fraternity. Vice-president of the student body association next year will be William Berg of Eugene, captain-elect of the varsity basketball five. Nancy Archbold of Portland was elected secretary, with Elizabeth Bendstrup of Astoria being named senior woman. Another basketball star, Bob Miller of Eugene, was named to the position of senior man. Cosgrove La Barre of Portland won the post of junior finance officer.

Journalism Awards

Sterling Green, Portland, editor of the Emerald, Elinor Henry, Eugene, Emerald feature editor, and Joseph Saslavsky, Portland, managing editor of the campus daily, have been named for Sigma Delta Chi scholarship awards for this year. They represent the highest 10 per cent of the senior journalism class.

Student Scholars

Just an even dozen students earned "perfect" grade standings for the winter quarter at the University, while 97 in all earned places on the "honor roll." Those making all "A's" in their grades were Frances Brockman, Lucy Howe, Edwin Pitt, Eugene; Geraldine Hickson, Elizabeth Patterson, Portland; Carl Davidson, Vernonia; Sherrill Gregory, Westport; Dessa Hofstetter, Heppner; James Kennedy, Multnomah; Norman Swanson, Ione; Margaret Wagner, Salem.

Hilton Winners

Carl E. Davidson, Vernonia, speaking on "A Proposal to Abolish the Doctrine of Election and Remedies," was awarded the Hilton prize of $50 in the annual forensic meet held under the auspices of the school of law. Second place and $25 went to James T. Landye, Portland, third prize of $15 was won by Carl H. Coad, Cove, and fourth prize of $10 was taken by Charles D. Dolloff, Portland.

Editorial Heads

Douglas Polivka, Portland, has been named editor of the Emerald, student daily, for next year. Grant Thuemmel, Portland, was again named manager. Barney Clark, Eugene, was made editor of the Oregonian, and William Phipps, Medford, was chosen manager.

Miss Eleanor Patten, graduate of the school of architecture, and C. J. Fulton, Eugene artist, also contributed paintings.

House Grades

Kappa Delta sorority, with a grade point average of 1.7865, topped the University living organizations scholastically for winter term, according to recent Registrar's figures. Sigma hall, which held first place last term, took second with 1.7361 points, and Alpha Xi Delta, another sorority, earned third position in the ratings.

Topping the fraternities, although placing twelfth in the list, was Chi Psi, followed by Delta Upsilon six steps down.

The all-University average of 1.3952 was almost one decimal point over that of fall term average of 1.2981.

The complete list of house standings, arranged in order, follows:

Kappa Delta, Sigma Hall, Alpha Xi Delta, Phi Mu, Alpha Omicron Pi, Hendricks Hall, Alpha Delta Pi, Sigma Kappa, Kappa Alpha Theta, Chi Omega, Susan Campbell Hall, Chi Psi, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Sherry Ross Hall, Beta Phi Alpha, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Upsilon, Pi Kappa Alpha, Alpha Phi, Theta Chi, Delta Gamma, Zeta Hall, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Tau Omega, Zeta Tau Alpha, Gamma Phi Beta, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Kappa, Omega Hall, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Delta Zeta, Kappa Sigma, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Chi, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Alpha Psi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Kappa Psi, Delta Tau Delta.

Military Exemption

Students may be excused from compulsory military training on any one of the following: physical unfitness certified to by the university physician; non-citizenship; age beyond 30 years; previous military service; conflict with essential class periods; conflict with essential working hours; definitely established grounds of conscientious objections. Carlton E. Spencer, professor of law, heads the exemption committee.

Student Workers

Two cheerful news items for U. of O. students: Part time ERA jobs for approximately 200 students, giving them an opportunity to earn from $10 to $20 each monthly, will be continued for the remainder of the year, following a brief suspension April first. Sufficient money for all students who need aid is now on hand in the student loan fund, since repayment has been faster than anticipated, and requests somewhat lessened due to CWA and later ERA work for students.

BASEBALL

League Leaders

Oregon stands at the top of the Northern division of the Pacific Coast conference to date, with two victories over Oregon State, no losses. First game at Eugene was not as easy a victory as the score of 5 to 1 indicates. Oregon had but a 1 run margin up to the eighth, when Ray Koch, who may top all hitters in the conference, batted out a homer, scoring two ahead of him. In the third inning Koch's double scored the winning run. Out of four times at bat he hit three times. Don McFadden, coming sophomore pitcher, cool and steady throughout the game, allowed but 5 hits.

Next day at Corvallis enthusiastic fans saw an old-fashioned game with all the thrills commonly associated with the national game. Joe Gordon, sophomore shortstop, after a spectacular catch in the 12th which resulted in a double play that kept the Beavers from scoring, came through with a home run in the 13th to win the game.

After leading the Webfoot team seven innings, O. S. C. saw the score tied in the seventh, remain tied until Gordon's winning swat in the 13th. Ike Donin, two year vet, relieved Ron Gemmell in the third for Oregon, held the Corvallis nine to but five hits during the next 10 innings.

Reinhart's team is functioning smoothly, playing excellent ball. His hurling staff is strong, and his infield combination is one of the sweetest in years. Oregon, with this aggregation, is definitely headed for the northern division pennant this year.

Track

Col. Bill Hayward's track men not only sing "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," but gymnastically, they imitate this daring young man. Trapeze work, gymnastics, and Bill's own brand of exercises are a definite part of the routine, and are being pursued with unusual vigor in preparation for the Oregon-Washington dual meet at Eugene, May 12.

The Varsity track season officially opened April 29, when Oregon and Oregon State tied with four victories each in the annual relay meet. Iron man of the meet was Oregon's crack negro sprinter, Walt Hopson, who took part in four events, all victories for Oregon.

Crack Shots

Last week the University of Oregon R. O. T. C. rifle team competed in the W. R. Hearst national telegraphic rifle meet, scored 951 points to take second in the entire United States. Only three points separated them from University of Washington, the winners. Harlan Thompson, crack rifle shot for Oregon, added another national second, by scoring 96 out of a possible 100. For some reason his score was "docked" one point, or he would have tied with the winner at 97.

For this excellent showing the University of Oregon team will receive a shield, and each man a silver medal. On the team are Thompson, Horace Neely, Harold Price, B. J. Cross and Harlan Atterbury.

Next year Oregon will definitely point toward the championship with high hopes. Only four men will be lost out of the highest 15 shots in the unit. Of those scoring highest this year, only Neely will be missing.

Oregon's fine showing has aroused new enthusiasm in rifle shooting as a sport, declares Coach Sergeant Harvey Blythe, who looks forward to a great season next year.

Frosh Track

Hayward's first year squad started off the season nicely by defeating Pacific 63 to 59. Many races were close and exciting, with the outcome in doubt until the final event, the relay, which Oregon won.

Golf

Oregon's divoteers lost their first golf match to Washington 16 to 11, but came back to swamp Columbia University (Portland) 25 to 2 in the second meet. Under the tutelage of Thomas Stoddard the Oregon team is steadily improving, with hopes for victory over O. S. C., and other opponents this spring. Don Olsen, Jack and Phil Mulder, Bob Miller, Bill Meissner and John Boyd have represented Oregon to date.

Tennis

Oregon's tennis team went to McMinnville last week and easily defeated Linfield, six matches to one. The team is steadily improving and hopes are now higher for victories over a number of teams to be met this spring. Playing against Linfield were Tom Mountain, Fred Fisher, George Economist, Jonathan Almon Newton, Cosgrove La Barre, Harlan Thompson, Norman Winslow and William Hutchison.

Setback

Oregon split even with Idaho in a baseball double-header in Oregon's third and fourth games of the season. Idaho took the first game in the eleventh inning by a score of 6 to 4 after tying the score at 4 all after McFadden had held the invaders to but one hit up to the ninth. The second contest went to Ike Donin, Webfoot hurler, who held the Vandals to three hits. The final score was 6 to 2.

FACULTY

Work Lauded

In recognition of his contribution to architecture and to the development and growth of the Oregon Building Congress, this organization on April 3 presented Ellis F. Lawrence, dean of the school of Architecture and Allied Arts of the University, with an engraved certificate. Dean Lawrence was the first president of the Congress 14 years ago, and later he served four years as secretary. The certificate bore resolutions commending him for his contribution during the past year to the Work Promotion committee as well as for his long years of service to the organization and to his profession.

Bovard Honored

On April 18, some 2,000 people who engage professionally in physical education work met in Cleveland, Ohio, and paid special honors to 13 outstanding educators in their field. One of these was Oregon's Dr. John F. Bovard, dean and director of physical education for the state system of higher education. The occasion was the annual meeting of the American Physical Education Association.

Dean Bovard was cited for the splendid work he has done in building up the school of physical education here, which now includes graduate work, and whose graduates now hold important positions all over the United States. Dean Bovard is a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Epsilon Kappa, Sigma Delta Psi, Phi Delta Kappa, American Academy of Physical Education, and a fellow in the American Association for the Advancement of Science. An authority in his field, Dean Bovard is co-author of "Tests and Measurements in Physical Education," with Dr. F. W. Cozens.

Archives Study

Should federal funds be forthcoming for the project, R. C. Clark, head of the history department at the University, will head a group of students and historians in this state who will take part in the national survey of local archives. A letter asking that he accept the leadership for Oregon was received by Dr. Clark recently from Joseph Mayer, chairman of the Commission on National Archives Survey. The project would take approximately eight weeks and would employ 2708 people in various parts of the country. Cost is estimated at $585,444. Material

MISSING STUDENTS

Institutions of higher education in Oregon suffered a decrease in enrollment of 27.1 per cent between the years of 1931 and 1933, while college and university attendance throughout the United States has fallen but 8.2 per cent in that time. In 1929-30 the University of Oregon enrolled 6.74 per cent of students attending higher educational institutions on the Pacific coast, and Oregon State Agricultural College had 7.73 per cent. In 1933-34 the university here had 5.04 per cent of the total for the coast, and the state college at Corvallis had 4.66 per cent.

These startling figures are disclosed as the result of independent surveys conducted by Clifford L. Constance, assistant registrar of the University of Oregon, and John M. Rae, associate professor of business administration here. Constance has computed the attendance figures nationally, while Rae has worked out a table for Oregon institutions as compared to the rest of the Pacific Coast.

In analyzing his figures Mr. Constance says: "The implication seems unavoidable that the University of Oregon and Oregon State College are now under a special handicap in attracting and retaining students. Recent reorganization and unsettled conditions in the Oregon state system of higher education, with resultant difficulty in making adequate high school contacts, must be blamed to a large extent. Evidently education must search within itself to find reasons for its success or failure, and confidence and other intangible factors may be of prime significance."

Mr. Constance's survey, with an analysis, was published in full in the April 14 number of School and Society. Mr. Rae prepared a table, on which he has offered no comments.

Oregon's decrease far exceeds that of any other state, its closest approach being North Dakota, with a decrease of 19.2 per cent. Only six other states in the entire country had decreases of over 15 per cent, while more than half did not approach 10 per cent decrease.

The decrease came in Oregon in spite of the fact that the drop in business activity was actually less in this state than the national average for the two-year period. Business dropped all over the country on an average of 31.3 per cent, while in Oregon it was 28 per cent. The Oregon figures are also significant because even with the huge drop in this state, the three Pacific states considered as a regional division of the country, showed a drop of but 9.3 per cent in college enrollment. Washington showed a decrease of 10.8 per cent, slightly more than the national average, while California showed a decrease of but 4.5 per cent in the two years. California at present has 30,020 college and university students, while Oregon has but 5,481.

Professor Rae's figures show that practically all of the decrease for this state came at the University of Oregon and Oregon State College. In 1929-30 the University had 2993 students, and the State College had 3430. In the fall term of 1933-34 the University had dropped to 2122, or a decrease of 29 per cent, and the State College had enrolled but 1960, or a decrease of nearly 43 per cent. Linfield showed a gain from 332 to 420 for the period, Reed College increased from 364 to 432, Willamette dropped slightly from 579 to 527, and Pacific University dropped from 232 to 175.

During the five-year period studied by Professor Rae, two coast institutions, University of California at Los Angeles and University of California showed gains of nearly 10 per cent; University of Washington lost practically none, or only 3 students, to be exact, while the University of Idaho gained six students. Stanford lost less than six per cent, University of Southern California and State College of Washington lost approximately 15 per cent.

Constance's figures also show the two large state supported institutions the heaviest losers in Oregon during the past two years. In this short time the university lost 27.8 per cent of its enrollment, the state college 36.8, while four other non-state-supported colleges in Oregon dropped but 7.5 per cent.

We'll cruise 5000 miles on the S. S. Pennsylvania, California or Virginia—largest, smoothest sailing liners to NEW YORK

Let's spread the atlas out before us. Now suppose we start here from the coast on one of those big sea-going resorts.

Down the Pacific we cruise. All the while we're having a barrel of fun. We swim. We play at deck sports, meet interesting people... sometimes just loaf in the sun. Nights find us dancing or attending "talkies."

In a week we're about here—steam ing past tropical isles. We go ashore and browse around the colorful shops of Panama... spend the day seeing sights. We're up with the sun next morning—exciting day ahead—watching our boat take the canal "steps."

Then out here on the green Caribbean, bound for a merry day in Havana. New York from there. Then homeward across America. But wait!—why not stop over in Chicago and see the Fair?

Sounds interesting, doesn't it? Let's get more details on this trip.

Panama Pacific liners are the largest to New York. Hence smoother sailing, broader decks for play. Spacious cabins, luxurious dining salon and lounge. See your local agent about details and low rates, or write...

Let your own desires lead you to Cadillac or La Salle ownership

You have only to look upon the three magnificent new Cadillacs and the new streamlined La Salle to know that here are motor cars of incomparable beauty. And you have only to ride in them to know that they are supreme also in comfort and in performance. . . . May we not suggest, therefore, that you take these two pleasant steps; and then let your own observations, and your own desires, lead you to Cadillac or La Salle ownership. . . . There is a new Cadillac V-8, a new V-12, and a new V-16. Also, a dashing streamlined La Salle, with Flerwood Custom Coachcraft, which has set a new style and a new value in motor cars. Prices are substantially lowered—with La Salle almost a thousand dollars below last year's price. . . . So it is now most convenient, as well as most satisfying, to own a car by Cadillac.
