telephone orders*

THE news is a lot better for every one who's been waiting for a telephone.

We've put in more than 500,000 telephones in three months—and they're going in faster every day.

But there are places where we have complicated switchboards to install—even places where we must build new buildings for the new switchboards. In those places it will take more time.

We're working hard on that job and aiming to give everybody quicker and better service than ever before.

Alum Bankers Friends of University

RICHARD Shore Smith, '01, who for the past 14 years has been president of the First National bank of Eugene retired with the sale of the controlling stock to Transamerica corporation. Another University graduate, Lynn S. McCready, '20, was appointed to the presidency.

Mr. Smith played football for Oregon and also later for Columbia University, where he received the degree of L.L.B.

from the law school in 1904. He has always taken a special interest in the University of Oregon and in aiding projects for its welfare. He is widely known for advising and furthering many enterprises affecting the financial growth of Eugene and the state.

Lynn McCready was elected to the directorate of the First National Bank of Eugene in 1936 and president of the Oregon Bankers association in 1945. Mr. McCready has also been very active in the activities of the Oregon Alumni Association and in all-around support for the University.

Proverbial Sayings

The first report on Oregon's contribution to the Dictionary of American Proverbial Sayings, being prepared by the American Dialect society, has been sent in according to Randall V. Mills, instructor in English at the University. Mr. Mills, chairman of the project for Oregon, reports the work will go on for several years with every state taking part. Other University of Oregon faculty members working with Mr. Mills in the compiling of Oregon proverbial sayings are Thomas F. Mundle, instructor in English and Mrs. Alice Ernst, associate professor of English.

STUDENT UNION

Over seven pages of December's Old Oregon were devoted to Student Union pictures, facts and messages. In this issue we have less student union coverage, but our interest is growing. Important stories are in the formative stage and will be released in the February issue. Meanwhile, student union activity among Old Oregon's "Big Four" readers (alums, students, faculty and staff and parents) is growing steadily.

Roy Vernstrom, '40

In a letter sent to campus living organization presidents with their December Old Oregon, we said: "Student Union has been campus talk for 23 years. Effort and enthusiasm has fluctuated from year to year."

One example of a student union supporter was cited in December's issue, John MacGregor, '23. Another strong student backer of the union movement was Roy Vernstrom, '40. There are more.

Our letter to living organization presidents continued as follows: "This year student interest in Student Union has hit a low ebb. Yet, as our first post war year it should have risen to new heights. Student backing, particularly stimulation from ASUO leaders, can do a lot for us at this time. We should not permit this opportunity to pass."

Architect's plans are being formulated—an important ingredient of any building fund drive; but we also need over-all enthusiasm, spirit and lots of activity. There have been other MacGregors and Vernstroms. There is need for one now, on the campus, as there is need for them in all groups of Old Oregon readers.

Fraternities To Open Winter Term

Permission has been granted for the re-organization of the interfraternity council and re-establishment of the fraternity groups on the campus this term, through approval by the student affairs committee of a petition submitted by representatives of 15 fraternities. Six fraternities have been given permission to open their houses and two have been given permission to open a house and operate it jointly. These fraternities, with the others represented on the campus, will be allowed to pledge a maximum of 10 men each during the winter term.

Those fraternities which are opening houses independently are: Alpha Tau Omega, Chi Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Phi Gamma Delta. Delta Upsilon and Sigma Alpha Epsilon will open their houses to be occupied jointly with independents.

Old Oregon Has Three New Executives

G. DUNCAN Wimpres, senior journalism student, will take over as managing editor of Old Oregon in January for the February issue. Duncan will carry through as managing editor for four issues. The June issue will be handled by next year's student staff.

Anita Young, who has been managing editor fall term, will necessarily have to lighten her activity load in order to carry her regular winter term academic load and make up fall term work.

The appointment of Duncan as managing editor of the new Old Oregon was made in consultation with Doris Hack, acting alumni secretary; Anita Young; George Turnbull, acting dean of the Journalism school; and Bud Jermain of the Journalism school. He received their unanimous recommendation and approval.

Duncan was managing editor of the Emerald in 1942-43 and is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, journalism honorary; Sigma Upsilon, creative writing society; Druids, junior men's honorary and Sigma Phi Epsilon, social fraternity. He left the campus in the spring of '43 to join the army and was discharged last October. The 23-year-old managing editor was in five major campaigns and was awarded several battle and service decorations.

Duncan takes over Anita's duties as managing editor after a term in which Old Oregon's student readership grew by many thousand percent and alumni and other "big four" readership groups made tremendous strides.

A new position was created for winter term with the appointment of Lola Kirbyson, sophomore, as office manager. Lola carried the duties of acting office manager during the latter part of fall term. She has been responsible for most of the organization work necessary to expedite and make more efficient the functions of all Old Oregon departments. Lola is a member of Alpha Xi Delta sorority.

Last department head position to be filled was negotiated just in time to meet this issue's copy deadline. Gloria Grenfell, sophomore in journalism, was named advertising manager. Gloria was advertising manager of the Emerald fall term, and is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Kwama, sophomore service honorary. This appointment was made in consultation with the appointee and members of the journalism faculty.

Vital Postwar Message to All NO Supporters

THE following is an excerpt from a report by the University of Oregon Alumni Association Executive Council. The council met on the campus fall term. This is only a small part of the report on their two-day visit, but it conveys an important message to all Old Oregon "Big Four" readers:

"The University has in its new president an exceptionally fine leader. We could not ask in any man a better blend of scholarship, poise, vigor and blunt determination. He has a well-defined program which points toward a greater faculty, more adequate facilities and buildings to accommodate a tremendous post-war enrollment, and a University of increased usefulness to our community.

But we must frankly say that the University faces several actually critical problems. As a plant, it is strained to meet its existing load (particularly in the item of housing). This load is less than half of what it will be two years hence.

The straight truth is that our University needs help from its friends in a greater degree now than at any other time if it is to serve this state properly, if it is to be a vital force, if it is to stand ready with those educational opportunities our youngsters ought to have."

The report from which the above quotation was taken was signed by Charles H. Huggins, '22, president; Mildred Bagley Graham, '12, vice-president, and presidential-appointed members of the executive council Ernest Haycox, '23; Gordon Wilson, '25 and C. R. Manerud, '22.

ON THE CAMPUS

Sign of the Times . . .

Pi Beta Phi sorority won the homecoming sign contest with this giant portrayal of a newspaper's front page. All men's and women's living organizations participated in the sign contest as "the ducks revived in forty-five."

Frosh Blaze . . .

All 1945 homecoming events were not staged on a pre-war level, as shown by this frosh bonfire scene which is "miniature" compared to some of the two and three-story fires kindled in former days.

THE biggest and most thrilling event of fall term was Oregon's "Homecoming" celebration this year. The traditional two days set aside for the festivities were packed full of activities which were planned especially for the enjoyment of Oregon's alumni and returned veterans.

Mary Lou Hill, gracious blonde freshman, winner of the contest for "The Girl You Want Most to Come Home To," presided over the activities and welcomed alums back to the campus.

Among the outstanding events of the Homecoming program was the return of the old "Order of the O" men. Appearing at the Oregon-Oregon State game between halves, they paraded in single file around the edge of the field to a reserved section in the grandstand where they introduced themselves to the crowd of spirited spectators.

On the completion of "Homecoming" activities, the closed week before finals was begun. This restrictive ruling is campus-wide and abided by on the part of all living organizations.

"PUDDLES," the amazing little duck that is the Oregon rally squad's beloved mascot, has attained quite a following on the campus. Appearing at all of the football games to remind the spectators that the University of Oregon "Ducks" are on hand, is her main job.

While attending the Oregon-Washington game in Portland a while back, "Puddles" somehow lost her green jacket. Her keeper, Jim McClintock '49, has been searching for it ever since, worrying about his pet's health during the cold Oregon winter.

MORE than 20 students from foreign countries were enrolled at the University of Oregon for the fall term. From Canada, 13 students are in attendance; Czechoslovakia, 2; Portugal, 1; Germany, 1; Mexico, 1; Russia, 1; India, 1; Jamaica, 1; Peru, 2; and Columbia, 1.

THE Oregon High School Press Association held its nineteenth press conference at the University of Oregon, November 25, with 159 students and faculty advisors representing 52 Oregon high schools participating. Among the activities for the day were registration, a general session and election of officers followed by a luncheon for all delegates at John Straub hall. The afternoon's program included a film and several forums.

Oregon students assisting in the discussion were: Mary Margaret Ellsworth, senior in journalism; Jeanne Simmonds, sophomore in journalism and news editor of the Emerald; and Doris Spearow, junior in liberal arts, who was vice-president of the press conference when she was a senior in high school.

AN architect's start has been made toward the completion of the long-planned Student Union building which will some day be a central meeting place for Oregon students—a spot where they may find recreation, conclude student affairs, and hold meetings. According to Wally Johnson '47, chairman of the Student Union committee, the plans are now in the hands of Lawrence and Lawrence, Portland architects, and should be completed in January.

STUDENTS were entertained by the melodic strains of the violin in a recent concert by George Boughton, assistant professor of violin and conductor of the University symphony orchestra. Among the outstanding numbers of this brilliant performance were Brahms "Sonata Op. 78" and Glazunow's "Concerto Op. 82." A very commendable job of accompanying was done by Mrs. Boughton.

THE University Women's Athletic Association recently held its initiation and final meeting for the term. All women not already members of the W.A.A. and who participated in intramural volley ball or hockey this term were invited to join. Virginia Scholl '48, vice-president of the W.A.A., was in charge of a program consisting of previews of winter term activities.

Making a definite impression on drama-minded students was the Saroyan comedy, "Time of Your Life," presented by the Guild theater players as the second play of the year. Stars, Estelle Shimshak '48, and Lewis Vogler '48, under the direction of Horace Robinson gave admirable character portrayals in this delightful and fantastic panorama of people.

TRADITIONAL of every fall term, six senior students who have shown exceptional scholarship were elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic fraternity. The new members include Louise Montag, journalism; Pauline L. Sulflow, business administration; Charles F. Cunningham, English; Shirley A. Rubenstein, mathematics; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson Merrifield, sociology; and Barbara Lucas, biology.

New officers of the Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa are as follows: president, F. M. Combella, assistant professor of Greek and Latin; vice-president, John Stehn, acting dean of the school of music; and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Helen Soehren, '35, instructor in English. The executive committee head chosen was Robert Leeper, associate professor of psychology, and the membership committee head will be Shirley Anderson.

THE University radio-variety show, "Campus Headlines" went on the air for the second time this year over KEX and KOAC. Vocalists, dramatists, and interviews constituted the program with Stub Bonewell '47, as script writer and prompter. Interviews of the evening were "Shy" Huntington, all-coast quarterback in 1916 and Oregon football coach 1918-1923, and Jake Leicht '48, University of Oregon quarterback of 1945.

The University vesper choir, directed by Johnette King, '47, presented a Thanksgiving vesper service in the music school auditorium Nov. 18. Barbara Ward was featured as vocal soloist. She sang "Beautiful Saviour" with the choir, and "O Rest in the Lord," from Elijah. "Psalms of Thanksgiving" was given by Robert Miller, and Olive Oldfield played "Adoration" by Bonowski as a violin solo.

APPEARING as the guest speaker on the university lecture series, Rabbi Feinsilver, rabbi of the Temple B'nai Israel of Sacramento, California, addressed a group of students, faculty, and townspeople in Friendly hall Nov. 20.

Noyes Appointed Dean Of New Dental School

DR. Harold J. Noyes, Chicago dentist and head of the department of orthodontia at the Northwestern university dental school, was chosen in December by the state board of higher education to be dean of the University of Oregon dental school in Portland. Dr. Noyes visited Oregon recently and was enthusiastic about the problems as well as the possibilities for development of the school here. The Chicago dentist and educator, who is also a physician, is recognized as a leading Chicago specialist in orthodontics.

Dr. Noyes received his Ph. B. degree from the University of Chicago in 1923, and his B.S. and D.D.S. degrees from the University of Illinois in 1928. In 1933 he received an M.D. degree from Rush Medical college of the University of Chicago.

DR. Noyes, at the present time, is dental consultant for the Children's Memorial Hospital, having been appointed to this position in 1942, and in 1943 he was made a member of the medical staff of the hospital. He was appointed to the attending staff of the Wesley Memorial hospital in 1943 and in 1945 was made a member of the senior attending staff. He is listed in "American Men of Science."

He will take over his duties as head of the Oregon school not later than July 1, 1946. At that time Dr. Noyes will make his home in Portland with his wife and 16-year-old daughter.

Basketball Season Opens

UNIVERSITY of Oregon varsity basketball, after an early-season winning streak of five straight triumphs and a less-successful transcontinental tour of the mid-west and east, buckles down for the important northern division, Pacific coast conference season at McArthur court January 7-8.

Coach Howard Hobson's Webfoots open their title defense against a highly-touted University of Idaho quintet in the first two games of the formidable 16-game schedule.

Hoop critics were of the opinion that

Oregon, with the seven lettermen that carried the emerald-green and lemon-yellow colors through the pre-season schedule, wouldn't have more than an outside chance to repeat for the northern pennant. Two lettermen were lost during the early stages of the campaign. Jim Bartelt, regular guard last season entered the army just before the opening game of the season, and Ed Allen, two-year letterman reserve, dropped from the squad because of the pressing duties of student body president and studies.

At this writing, however, it is expected that the three additional lettermen will supplement the present squad when the new term opens—and will be available for the opening games of the conference schedule. Del Smith, a regular forward during most of last season, returns to school at the start of the winter term, along with Forward Roy Seeborg and Guard Stan Williamson, freshmen lettermen with the 1942-43 squad. The latter two have just returned from the service. Another promising addition will be Marvin R. "Rass" Rasmussen, a war-veteran freshman who played basketball at Franklin high in Portland. The 6-foot, 3-inch hoopster has been working out with the squad most of the season and is expected to be a strong contender for a starting berth at forward with Dick Wilkins.

George Bray will probably be moved back to center as an alternate with Ken Hays. Captain Bob Hamilton appears to be a permanent fixture, but there are a host of candidates for the other starting guard berth, including Reedy Berg, Frank Hoffine and two classy freshmen—Walt Kirsch and Al Cohen.

OREGON opened the season in mid-November with a pioneering air trip to Vancouver, B.C., where the Webfoots downed University of British Columbia, 58-50 and 49-35. A two-game series against the Klamath Falls marines followed, with 46-37 and 70-44 victories. A 49-30 victory over Portland University completed the victory string.

Playing in the DePaul University invitational tournament in Chicago, Oregon suffered a 66-48 loss to Indiana State Teachers in the opening game, and then dropped a 44-41 decision to the University of Washington in the consolation series.

A 60-50 victory over Long Island University in Madison Square Garden was the only victory in the five barnstorming tilts—but the most sought after. It was the first time in five tries the Webfoots had been able to score a victory in New York's gigantic basketball pavilion.

The Webfoots dropped a 57-41 decision to Ohio State and suffered a smashing 78-36 defeat to Bowling Green (Ohio) in other team tilts.

Basketball Expert . . .

Coach Howard A. "Hobby" Hobson, the University's nationally known basketball chief.

Hobson's Coaching Record Is Tops

COACH Howard A. "Hobby" Hobson's hard-driving, fast-breaking and point-conscious Oregon quintets have made names for themselves in nearly every basketball capital in the nation and have always played to capacity crowds at Madison Square Garden.

Hobson, who has been head coach at Oregon since the 1936 season, returned to the University last summer after a year's leave during which time the team was coached by John A. Warren, former freshmen mentor and now assistant football coach. Hobson assisted with the Navy V12 program and took graduate work at Columbia University until he was appointed a civilian sports expert for athletic clinics sponsored by the U. S. army in Italy.

Hobson is recognized as one of the nation's outstanding coaches and during his 17 years of coaching has produced 21 championships—including the 1943-44 team that placed second to Washington's navy-civilian Huskies in the northern division but rated tops on the Pacific coast as a civilian quintet. His best season was 1938-39 when the Webfoots defeated Texas, Oklahoma and Ohio State in post-season play to annex the NCAA title. Four of his six All-Americans came from that team—Bobby Anet, Lauren "Laddie" Gale, Urgel "Slim" Wintermute, and John Dick, the latter winning his honors the following season. Two other All-Americans were Vic Townsend in 1940-41, and Wally Borrevik, who finished during the 1943-44 season.

HOBSON, an Oregon hoopster himself and a 1926 graduate, has an all-time coaching record that shows 317 victories against 138 defeats for a .696 average. In northern division competition, Hobson's teams have won 20 series, tied nine and lost eight.

A product of Franklin high in Portland, Ore., where he was a four-sports letterman, Hobson entered the University of Oregon. After graduation he took his first coaching position at Kelso, Wash., high.

Duck Club

The Oregon Duck Club, with a membership of Oregon alums and former students who are enthusiastic sports fans, have been meeting regularly in Portland to keep up with their mutual athletic interests and to help the University's athletic program. Those wishing to join can contact Chuck Holloway, 1703 N. W. 16th avenue; Ron McCreight, 411 N. E. 19th avenue; or Craig Povey, 210 N. W. Broadway.

From there he went to Columbia University where he gained his master's degree in physical education. In 1929-30 he coached at Cortland (N. Y.) State Teachers and then returned to Portland where he produced a city championship quintet at Benson Tech. From high school he went to Southern Oregon Normal (now Southern Oregon College of Education) and his quintets won 68 and lost 15 in three seasons.

In 1936, when William J. "Bill" Reinhart moved to George Washington University in Washington, D. C., Hobson took over at Oregon, and since that time the Webfoots have become popular with basketball followers from New York to Honolulu.

Hobson has been an official of the National Basketball Coaches' Association for some years and is now in the process of writing a book on basketball skills and coaching.

- ACTIVITY ROOMS
- BANQUET HALL
- HOTEL FACILITIES
- STUDENT GOVERNMENT OFFICES
- STUDENT LOUNGE
- SODA FOUNTAIN
- ALUMNI OFFICES
- and space for many of the essential student educational activities

Physical Education School Serves Health-Conscious Nation

Written for Old Oregon by
RALPH RIGGS, '48

FOLLOWING up our University department series we shall discuss the School of Physical Education this month. The School of Physical Education was founded in 1920 by the Board of Regents with John F. Bovard, head of the department of zoology as the first dean. The new school also included the University health service with its physicians and nurses, instruction in hygiene, physical education for men and physical education for women. Consequently, it was one of the most complex units in the University's administration. The new school also looked abroad and aimed to exert a strong influence in the way of securing better athletic and play facilities in towns and schools of the state. Under the energetic leadership of Dr. Bovard, the new school rapidly assumed a position of prominence on the Pacific coast and sent its graduates into important teaching positions throughout the country.

DEAN Ralph W. Leighton, heads the physical education school at the present time. He has been at the University for seventeen years and with the school for eight years. He received his B.A. at the College of Idaho in 1926, and his Ph.D. at Oregon in 1932 besides an honorary doctor of science degree from the College of Idaho which was conferred upon him in 1941. Dean Leighton was formerly a professor of education and the executive secretary of research for the University. His many activities would fill volumes. He began as track coach and line coach at the College of Idaho. He spent thirteen years in high school work at Caldwell, Idaho and other Idaho high schools.

Dean Leighton is a member of the National Education Committee; the American Association for Health and Physical Education; consultant of the Educational Policies Commission and a member of the National Research Division of the American Association for Health and Physical Education. He serves on such state committees as, chairman of the Advisory Board for Parks; member of the Oregon State Teachers Association and chairman of the State Joint Committee for Health and Physical Education.

THERE has been a great growth in the demand for physical education teachers since 1930. There have been five or six calls a year for qualified men and women. Last year the enrollment of the school totalled 261 students, but before the war in 1941 there were 265 majors with 95 freshmen entering. During the war years the number of entrees dropped to fifteen and sixteen freshmen entering every fall. This year the number jumped to 70 with graduate work showing a jump in enrollment. Enrollment in women's service courses has now totalled 1100 students.

Of the six schools of physical education in the United States, only Oregon and Washington State College grant degrees in physical education in the West. U.C.L.A. grants degrees in the teaching of physical education. Oregon is the only school in the West that grants an M.A. in physical education. At the present time there are a number of candidates for their doctor's degrees. As to the efficiency of the school, Oregon placed a high record in the manner in which the ASTP physical education program was conducted.

Among the graduates of the school of physical education, there are many who are directors of physical education throughout the United States and Canada. Maurice Van Vliet, B.S. from Oregon in 1936, and M.A. in 1940 is the director of Physical Education at the University of Alberta. Rachel Yocom, who received her B.A. from Willamette University and her M.A. from Oregon in 1941, is now the director of Physical Education for Women at Utah State College. Delbert Oberbauer, who received his B.A. from Oregon in 1923 and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1924 and 1929 respectively, has been director of physical education at Ohio State. Josephine Yantis, who received her B.A. from the University of Colorado and her M.S. from Oregon in 1944, is now the acting chairman for women's physical education at the University of Michigan. Clifton White, who received his M.S. from Oregon in 1941, is now director of athletics and physical education at Henderson College, Indiana. Mary Joe Shelly, who received her B.A. in 1926 at Oregon and her M.A. at Columbia in 1929, is now a Lt. Commander in the WAVES, and is in charge of physical education.

THE staff of the school is outstanding.

Of the faculty members two have recently returned from the armed services. Paul Washke, professor of physical education, has been serving as a director of V-12 programs in the Thirteenth Naval district. Earl Boushey, professor, has been serving as director of recreation in the Thirteenth Naval district. The other faculty members consist of Miss Harriet Thompson, professor, who has been with Oregon since 1914 and is in charge of correctives. Miss Janet Woodruff, associate professor, is in charge of training women majors.

E. R. Knollin, assistant professor, is teacher of activities such as tumbling. Howard H. Hoyman is an associate professor and an outstanding health authority. Miss Rosamond Wentworth, assistant professor, is a graduate of the University of Washington and has taught at Ellensburg and the University of Colorado. She is in charge of dancing. The new member of the staff has had quite an interesting background. She is Miss Margaret Brewster, instructor, who is in charge of swimming. She served in India in the Women's Army Corps with Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters, and after returning to the United States was placed in charge of physical education at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. Wayne W. Massey, assistant professor, achieved distinction while serving as the director of rehabilitation at Jacksonville Hospital, Jacksonville, Florida, and is still on leave of absence. N. Paul Anderson, M.D. and associate professor, is still serving with the Navy and has served through most of the Pacific campaigns. Lloye McGee, assistant professor is still serving with the Navy.

The school of physical education is fulfilling the demand of the people of Oregon and the United States for trained men and women in physical education. As the American people have become more health conscious Oregon's School of Physical Education has been building for the future by providing skilled men and women for high schools and colleges.

Alums Meet in San Francisco

Over 200 alums turned out for their first reunion since the war at a pre-game reception held at the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley prior to the Oregon-California game November 17. Top—the oldest alum who came to the reunion, Mary Bonette Brown, '86, is telling Doris Hack, '41, acting alumni secretary, about some of her class activities during the early days of the University's existence.

Center—Alumni packed the Blue and Gold room of the Claremont Hotel to reunite with friends that many had not seen since pre-war days. A special section on the 50-yard line was reserved for Oregon rooters at the California Memorial Stadium and approximately four hundred alums and friends gathered there to witness a thrilling game and a 20-13 win over the California Bears. Captain Frank Hallin took these pictures. Reprints may be obtained for 50 cents at the Alumni Office, Friendly hall.

Below—The committee responsible for the success of the San Francisco reunion party were, first row, from left to right. Donald D. Davis, Mrs. Frank Hallin, Mrs. Kenneth Reeves, and Captain Reeves. Not pictured, but assisting with arrangements, were Major and Mrs. Fred Ehlers, Lt. Sally Ray, and Captain Frank Hallin.

Dean Orlando John Hollis of the University School of Law is responsible for interpreting and enforcing the rules of the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference for the University. He is also secretary of the faculty representatives of the ten universities and colleges who make up the conference.

PCIAC Amendment

FACULTY representatives of the ten universities and colleges belonging to the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference met December 10, 11 and 12 in San Francisco to discuss present and future college athletics. The University of Oregon's representative, Dean Orlando John Hollis, returned as re-elected secretary of the conference and with news of an amendment to a provision in chapter six of the "Athletic Code of the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference," which sports writers frequently refer to as the "Atherton Code."

A pertinent provision of the amendment provides: "An alumnus, student or representative of a member institution may interview prospective college students, whether athletes or not, subject to the conditions and restrictions set forth in this section, and in section 6.01 ("Entertainment Prohibited"), 6.04 (listing "Prohibited Institutional Practices"), 6.05 (stipulating conditions under which "Complimentary Tickets" are permitted), and 6.06 ("Trips for Recruiting Purposes Prohibited"). When in the judgment of the Commissioner or the Conference, the activities of an individual or group of individuals indicate persistent, repeated or offensive efforts to induce a student with athletic ability to attend a member institution, the Commissioner shall request the institution involved to abate such activities. If they are not abated promptly, the member institution involved shall be subject to such penalty as the Conference may prescribe."

BEFORE the recent amendment was adopted, the code provided an alumnus of a member school was prohibited from interviewing prospective students except a high school or junior college athlete when

Council Formed to Work For Higher Education

SPRINGING from the combined efforts of students, parents of students and alumni of the institutions of higher learning and prominent citizens in Oregon to back the important building measure last spring is a new movement by friends of higher education to form a permanent organization for cooperative effort.

Now known as the United Citizens Higher Education Council of Oregon, the representatives of all the schools and citizen members have formed the new group, set up the constitution for the council and elected an executive committee. Standing committees on legislative and educational matters will also be appointed.

The first organization meeting took place October 27 in Portland at which time the constitution was amended and accepted. Membership on the Council is constituted as follows: Charles H. Huggins, president of the Oregon Alumni Association and his appointed delegate, Ralph Moores; Gene Vandeneynde, president of the Oregon Dads and an appointed delegate yet to be named; Mrs. Perrie Dolph and Mrs. Ralph Huestis for the Oregon Mothers; Ed Allen, Associated Student HIGHER ED COUNCIL, Body President and Mary Margaret Ellsworth, student delegate.

REPRESENTATIVES for Oregon State College are Urcel Narver, Al Bauer, Claude Palmer, Will Henry, Mrs. W. Raymond Kinser, Mrs. George Hugg, Bob Stevens, student body president and Helen Harstad, student delegate.

The University of Oregon medical school will be represented by Dr. Carl Ashley and the Dental School by Dr. George W. Redpath. The Colleges of Education by A. L. Beck, Southern Oregon College of Education; Wendell Van Loan and the Oregon College of Education student body president.

Three citizen members, E. C. Sammons, Randolph Kuhn and Wendell Van Loan were elected at the first meeting. Two others will be elected later.

The purpose of the Council as stated in the constitution is to inform the people of Oregon on matters of higher education particularly in connection with state-supported institutions, to support all of these institutions in a complete program of instruction and research, looking toward a quality program through adequate facilities and staff.

Newburn Announces University's High Rating

The University of Oregon has been rated among the highest institutions of higher learning in the nation for acceptability in the proposed program for the army air forces R.O.T.C. according to word received by Dr. Harry K. Newburn, president, from Lt. Col. Bryson R. Bailey, area chief of the educational demonstration training liaison office in San Francisco. A survey of all United States colleges and universities was made in order to ascertain the possibilities of establishing an air force R.O.T.C. program.

Law School Adds Two Professors to Staff

DEAN Orlando John Hollis of the University School of Law announced in December that the law school faculty will be increased by two full time professors and one part-time professor for winter term. The increased faculty will enable the law school to handle an increased enrollment and provide returning veterans the opportunity to resume law study without delay.

Major Charles Howard, who has been on leave of absence during the war emergency, has returned from his military government work in Germany to his former position as professor in the law school. Captain Arno Denecke, a University of Illinois graduate who practised law before entering the service, has joined the law school's faculty. Professor Denecke is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honorary and Order of the Coif, legal scholastic honorary.

Claude W. Stimson will be an associate professor of the University, devoting two-thirds of his time to the School of Business Administration and one-third of his time to the School of Law.

Lt. Comdr. Hugh B. Wood, former professor of education and director of the curriculum library at the University, has been relieved of his duties as commanding officer of naval V-12 units in the Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas area and will be discharged soon.

The executive committee elected by the United Higher Education Council of Oregon consists of the above members. Seated, left to right: Mrs. W. Ramond Kinzer, Oregon State College Mothers, Mrs. Perrie Dolph, Oregon Mothers and secretary-treasurer of the committee. Standing left to right, James McMenamin, representing Gene Vandeneynde, president of the Oregon Dads; Urcel Narver, Oregon State College alumni; A. L. Beck, representing the colleges of education; Claude Palmer, Oregon State Dads, and vice-chairman of the committee; Dr. Walter Redpath, Dental School, Ralph Moores, University of Oregon alumnus and citizen member. Dr. Carl Ashley is also a member of the committee. E. C. Sammons was elected chairman of the committee.

What's Going on in Student Government?

--- "Congress" Is Latest Wrinkle

At the U of O, as in most colleges, enthusiastic campus "politicians" frequently propose revolutionary changes for student government. Last spring's ASUO election brought forth a "student congress" plan. The committee appointed fall term to crystallize the plan into constitutional form met, talked, wrote for ideas, argued and put on paper a revised constitution for the ASUO. The following article reports the birth, growth and future of this newest idea of student government.

Written for Old Oregon by
MARILYN SAGE, '47

LAUNCHED in the manner traditional to spring term elections at Oregon, the 1945 ASUO presidential campaign produced a plan which may revolutionize student government at the University.

The beginning of the campaign was marked by little more than the customary posters, Emerald ads, and platforms as laid down by student candidates since Oregon began. Generalizations as to more representation, greater activity, and more power in the student government were voiced.

Four days before balloting, the Greek candidate, Ed Allen, introduced a plan of government which caught the imagination of interested and disinterested Webfoots alike.

Allen called his "ace in the hole" the Student Congress, and proceeded to elaborate on a proposed legislative body patterned after the United States Congress. With the subsequent election of Allen to the ASUO presidency, the Student Congress is well on the way to reality.

SINCE its beginning in 1900, the construction of the ASUO government has been similar to that of the majority of colleges and universities throughout the country.

The executive, and many of the judicial and legislative functions of the ASUO have been carried out by a small body known as the Executive Council. Acting for Oregon's several thousand students, it is composed of 12 students and an adviser, the dean of men. Each year students elected or appointed to the offices of president, first vice-president, second vice-president, and secretary-treasurer of the ASUO; sophomore, junior, and senior representatives; Emerald editor and AWS president take their seats in the Executive Council.

To the Executive Council has been delegated the almost ultimate and only power in deciding questions of student policy, appointments, and activities.

With the present enrollment of the University there is doubt whether a group of this size can discover the actual opinions and needs of the majority.

Half of the Council is made up of representatives from the classes. Living under varied conditions, with varied interests and goals, the members of one class do not have the community of thought and opinion necessary to be represented as a group, it has been said.

Claiming their Council seats as officers of student activities, the other half is not a representative group, but one in which merely the office held by the student entitles him to membership.

Action taken by the Executive Council is not subject to control by the students as a whole.

These and others have been the criticisms made against the existing order. The Student Congress, still in the formative stage, appears to be a practicable answer to the long-standing request for greater and more equal student representation in the government of the ASUO.

DURING the election campaign, Allen's plan was proposed as an addition to the structure of the present government and outlined as follows:

"This congress, already largely in accordance with the present ASUO constitution, would consist of one representative for any living organization recognized by the University of from 10 to 50 students, and an additional representative for every 50 additional students or any major portion thereof. Organizations such as Ordes, Yeomen and veterans who wished special representation would be given a voice in the same proportion. Independents and Greeks alike would have representation according to number, not political viewpoints of influence.

In addition to the present 12-member council, there would be the congress composed of perhaps a hundred members. Students would be able to have a more direct contact with their representatives, and would be able to convey to them their ideas and wishes. In this way, the ultimate power on the campus would rest, not in the hands of a few, but in the representatives of all the students, the Student Congress."

IMMEDIATELY after his election Allen appointed a committee of six students to undertake the framing of an ASUO constitution which would provide for the Student Congress. The committee members found the actual task greater than had been expected.

As Allen's political platform, the Student Congress was to be an addition to the structure of the present student government. However, it has become more than an addition. A complete revision of the duties and powers of three of the governmental bodies in the ASUO was necessary.

Faced with the problem of integrating the proposed Congress with the Executive Council, the student body president, the faculty, and subordinate groups, the committee adopted as their guide the constitution of the United States.

Two months of discussion, legal advice, and work on the part of this student group has resulted in the following proposed changes and innovations in the ASUO government.

Legislative power will lie within the Student Congress as well as the ultimate voice in deciding issues, and regulating ASUO organizations, expenditures, and activities. It shall be the duty of the Student Congress to inform the administration of the University as to student opinion.

Chairman Jack Craig, '46, presents President Harry K. Newburn with the first draft of the student congress constitution, while other members of the drafting committee look on. Left to right: Phil Dana, '48; Ed Allen, '46; Anita Young, '46; Bob Campbell, '46; and Dorene Radford, '48. Missing from this picture are Hal Larson and Marilyn Sage, author of student congress article appearing on this page.

The president of the ASUO will act in the capacity of administrator. His duties and powers will be determined by legislation of the Congress.

The position and duties of the Judiciary Committee will remain unaltered.

Perhaps the most radical change which the new constitution provides for is that involving the functions of the now all-powerful Executive Council. The 12-member council will become merely an advisory board to the president. As such, the duties of its members will be under the supervision of the ASUO executive. Deviating in one respect from the theoretical idea of democratic government, the committee deemed it advisable that the members of the Executive Council be elected, (as in the past) rather than appointed to this advisory cabinet.

IN practice, the Student Congress will be presided over by the first vice-president of the ASUO. Meetings will be held monthly or upon the call of the presiding officer. A docket of such questions scheduled to be settled at the approaching meeting will be published in the Emerald several days prior to a session of Congress, in order that the students may at all times be acquainted with actions taken by the body.

The new constitution also gives to the Congress, "the power to create such subsidiary committees as are deemed necessary." Possible committees may be investigatory, financial, etc.

The theory of a representative student government has become a detailed, black-and-white plan. Framed under the advisement of Ed Allen, student body president, the new constitution is now being referred to the Executive Council for approval as a proposed amendment to the constitution. If this body refuses action, a petition signed by 100 students will place the Student Congress plan before the members of the ASUO. A general election will determine the students' acceptance or rejection of the Congress as a working reality.

With the three-fold purpose of "establishing a greater degree of active student representation in the student government, providing for the conveyance of student opinion to members of the University faculty and student body officers, and promoting a greater interest in the familiarity with the workings of a representative government," the Student Congress promises to be a decisive step in the progress of University of Oregon students.

A Silver Star Medal, the second highest award made by the U. S. Navy, was presented to Mrs. E. E. Leonard for her son, Lt. Julian E. Leonard, '42, who was killed in action on Guam on July 28, 1944.
