THIS AND THAT

By THE EDITOR

PERHAPS not since the semi-centennial celebration some years back has there been an affair of more significance to the University as a distinct institution than the commencement program this year. True, a great deal of the importance attached to the affairs planned for this June, has not so much the characteristic of immediate change as it has the aspect of recapitulation of events of the past few years.

* * *

Events affecting the University have rushed by in such rapid order of late that it has been difficult to grasp their full significance in light of other happenings. This situation is, of course, not dissimilar to what has been happening the world over. The comparison, however, merely serves to impress one with the importance of viewing the future in light of the events that have already transpired. Without any incriminating title such as an "Exposition of Progress," Commencement, 1933, takes on an informal significance that cannot be denied.

One mile-post along the road of progress and development envisioned by President Campbell and later Dr. Hall is the completion and opening to the public of the Museum of Art. Another, though in no way comparable, because it was inevitable, is the honoring of one of Oregon's great human traditions, Dean John Straub. It is such events as these, coupled with the myriad of institutional and administrative changes that will lend an air of importance to the exercises this June.

Unannounced and unheralded as this Commencement spirit of 1933 may be, it nevertheless will prevail. Contrary to an accepted conception, alumni of the institution, and especially those of the five reunion classes, will return to their alma mater, not primarily to relive the days of the past, but to grasp the full significance of changes that are being wrought and better acquaint themselves with the part that they can play in carrying out the "new deal" for Oregon's educational institutions. Backslapping will be relegated to the background. A genuine and active interest in education in Oregon will keynote the reunions and the commencement exercises.

Class of 1933 Honors Dean John Straub

THE NEW MEN'S DORMITORY, nameless since its erection in 1929, will be formally dedicated as John Straub Memorial Building, on alumni day, June 10, and henceforth will honor the beloved educator who gave more than 50 years of service to the University of Oregon.

At the same ceremony a bust of Dean Straub, donated by this year's senior class, will be unveiled. It is the work of Rex Sorensen, sculptor of the University School of Fine Arts. The bust is an excellent likeness of Oregon's "Grand Old Man" and has won high praise from all who have viewed it. The bust, lifesize, will be placed in the main corridor of the entrance to the building.

Another feature of this year's commencement week activities in connection with the naming of the building and the presentation of the bust, is the fact that Dean Straub was once made an honorary member of the class of 1903, which holds its thirtieth reunion on the campus this commencement. Members of this class are making a special effort to have as large a representation of the class on hand for the events honoring Dean Straub as possible. The ceremonies will precede the traditional University luncheon, at which members of the reunion classes and the graduating class are honor guests.

Dean Straub, during the 54 years of his career at the University, served as professor, dean of the college of arts and letters and dean of men. When the University was small, Dean Straub taught at one time or another practically every course offered at the University. The dormitory is considered one of the finest in the country.

Commencement Plans Complete

THE FIFTY-SIXTH annual commencement of the University of Oregon, together with the reunion of five of its finest classes, and a program full of events of unusual interest to University friends and alumni alike, will make the week-end of June 9 to 12 a memorable one in U. of O. history.

If the commencement exercises of 50 years ago, when the sixteen members of the class of 1883 walked forth from old Deady hall as alumni of the then very young University of Oregon, can be compared to the exercises planned for June 12 this year when some 400 to 500 seniors will be graduated, the result will be little short of being graphically representative of the growth of Oregon's state University. Also, representative in its own way, is the stately elm tree that towers up among the firs west of Villard hall today. That tree was planted by the class of 50 years ago. Then a mere sapling, now its branches spread far and wide, as have the influences of the University during the same period.

Two events of unusual interest this year will be the opening of the Murray Warner Collection of Oriental Art in its new quarters, the Museum of Art; and the dedication of the men's dormitory as "John Straub Memorial Building." Also, the unveiling of a bust of Dean Straub, the gift of this year's graduating class.

Of special interest to members of the reunion classes of 1903, 1908, and 1913, is the fact that the man who has been chosen to deliver the commencement address was a member of the faculty of the University from 1900 to 1920. He is Dr. Joseph Schafer, former professor of history and at present superintendent of the Wisconsin State Historical society. His son, Frederick Schafer, will receive his bachelor's degree this year.

But what of the traditional events of the week-end, alumni will ask. Of course, they still have a major part on the program. There will be the flower and fern procession, the twilight concert, the Failing-Beekman orations, and the University luncheon. Oregon tradition and University lore will still abound at these events—as always. Representatives of the 10, 25, and 50-year classes will speak at the luncheon, as will a member of the newest of alumni classes and administrative spokesmen. Members of reunion classes will be seated together at this affair.

But last, though not least to the alumnus, will be the special class reunion dinners, scheduled for Saturday night, June 10. It is at these events that the five different generations of University students will actually relive the history of their alma mater.

Surviving members of the graduating class of 1883 will gather on the Oregon campus this June for the 50th anniversary of their graduation. Above is a picture of the class, taken at graduation 50 years ago. They are, standing, back row: A. C. Woodcock, Wallace Mount, Woodson T. Slater, John Nelson Goltra, Thomas C. Judkins, Samuel Edgar McClure. Seated, middle row: Carrie Walker Mount, Minnie Evans Porter, Eliza Spencer Barbre, Alwilda Dunn, Etta Cogswell, and Jennie Spencer Luckey. Seated in front: Mary Dorris Condon, Anna Pengra Hill, Elma Lockwood Eakin, and Emma Cornelius Howell.

The "Thirty" Classes in Portland

By BARNEY MILLER, '32

IT IS OBVIOUS that to tabulate a full record of all alumni activities in Portland would require a volume as ponderous and formidable as one of Dr. James Gilbert's daily assignments. Therefore, I believe it sagacious to limit my newsmonging to the last three classes, namely 1930, 1931 and 1932.

* * *

I saw Brian Mimnaugh, '32, on a street car not long ago. Although tightly wedged between two corpulent ladies, he still looked every inch a student body president. He works at the Brice Mortgage company, where he's getting along great.

* * *

Another employee of the Brice Mortgage company is Arthur Potwin, '32. The former junior class prexy spends his time kicking poor widows and helpless orphans out of their homes. The red-headed Simon Legree is making good, and is attending night school at Northwestern Law.

* * *

Omar (Slug) Palmer, '33, is working for the Canada Life Assurance company. He puts in his time bedeviling his friends into buying policies.

* * *

TONY PETERSON, '31, the third member of the unholy trinity of Palmer, Potwin and Peterson, is in charge of display advertising for the financial and automotive sections of the Journal.

* * *

Another graduate who is making good in the advertising field is Janet Young, '32. She is affiliated with the Murray Direct Mailing house.

* * *

Raising my eyes from the bottom of a malted milk glass recently, I saw Hal Waffle and Don Ragen, both ex-'32, who work at the U. S. National bank, in company with Harold Blackburne and Paul Branin, also '32.

* * *

Following in the footsteps of his father, Joe Freck, Jr., '31, has been appointed chairman of the city-wide "clean-up" campaign, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Dapper and bustling, this lad is already one of Portland's publicized citizens.

With more than 3,000 alums in the Rose City, Mr. Miller, as this month's "Rambling Reporter," found a monumental task confronting him. He solved it by sifting the acorns from the oaks. We'll consider the oaks later on.

Clients of the Dunne company are overwhelmed by the famous Kibbee smile, which boosted Harriett to political eminence back in 1930.

Was agreeably surprised the other day when Walt Baker, '32, and Hal Fraundorf, '31, walked into the office. Walt just returned from Medford (Hum) and Hal recently came back from San Francisco.

* * *

Books, in times of depleted entertainment budgets are a distinct blessing. Located right in the midst of such blessings are Gladys Clausen, '31, at Meier and Franks, and Joy Herbert, ex-'33, who works at Berg's. Also Margaret Agnew, '30, who is engaged in library work.

* * *

Insurance is a noble profession and insurance agents are noble fellows (albeit persistent knaves) and few are nobler than Treve Jones, '32, Bob Cummings, ex-'31, Wally Baker, '32, and Chet Knowlton, ex-'32. Treve, incidentally, is quite a social tiger around the Multnomah club.

* * *

Maurice Kinney, ex-'31, has discarded his guitar and now picks out "dough" on ticker tape. He's reputed to be cleaning up.

* * *

Bill Graeper, '32, is in partnership with his father in the Egyptian theatre.

Anne Baum, '32, and Irma Logan, '32, who used to boss everything from A. W. S. elections to sales of stale doughnuts, are engaged in talking Mr. and Mrs. Portland into buying twice as much as they intended at Lipman Wolfe and Company.

* * *

Janette Gunther, '30, is now secretary to Mr. May of the Oregonian.

* * *

Karl Greve, ex-'32, is gainfully employed in his father's jewelry store. The former grand czar of the Oregon Knights says to tell his public that he is plump, well and happy, thank you.

Other bankers we forgot to mention a while back include Jack Meier, ex-'34, who is working in his father's bank, and Al Bean, ex-'32.

Jack Gregg, ex-'32, is selling typewriters and adding machines for the Burroughs company, and doing right pert at it too. He was married to Hester Hopkins, ex-'33, not long ago.

* * *

Art Schoeni, '30, adonis-like ex-editor of the Emerald, is married and working for the United Press in Portland.

* * *

Ed Fisher, '32, the Sigma Nu nightingale, is working for a law firm. Can be seen bustling about and humming "In the Good Old Summons Time."

* * *

Other sterling young barristers and barristeresses whom we bump into now and then are: Bill Berg, '31, Wm. Beatty, '31, Etta Belle Kitchen, '31, Amy Van Horn, '31, John Gantenbein, ex-'32, but if we started naming all the young apostles of justice it would take up the rest of this article.

* * *

Charles (Chuck) Jones, '32, is working for his brother and growing a moustache.

* * *

GREGG MILLETT and Hal Kelly, both '30, are at the Jantzen Knitting mills. As a magnet to lady customers and at the request of the management, Millett is cultivating a Lew Cody moustache.

* * *

Charles (Red) Foster, '32, former aquatic flash, is learning the steamship industry from the bottom up.

I realize that I have omitted many deserving names. However, I find myself in the same situation as the king's servant who was locked for a day and a night in his majesty's well stocked cellar. You know—a full page can hold no more.

Former Trackmen Honor Coach

With 29 years behind him as head track coach, trainer and "jack of all sports" at the University, Bill Hayward receives the acclaim of his former proteges as he begins his 30th year.

By BRUCE HAMBY, '34

BILL HAYWARD, for 29 years head track coach and trainer at the University of Oregon, was given a gala sendoff at the start of the 30th year Friday, May 19, when between 400 and 500 alumni, friends, students and townspeople jammed the dining room of the Eugene hotel for a testimonial stag banquet. The Order of the "O," varsity lettermen's organization, planned and sponsored the affair.

Members of every one of Colonel Bill's track teams from 1904, his first year at Eugene, were sent invitations. Practically all responded — some attending—others sending telegrams or letters of congratulations. The weekend of May 19-20 was designated as "Bill Hayward Week-end" and one of the greatest track and field programs ever held in Eugene was presented for the visitors and students.

FRIDAY afternoon the Oregon track team followed up a surprise upset of the University of Washington with a smashing victory over Oregon State 84¾ to 46¾. Records were smashed wide open as the Webfoot runners gave one of the greatest performances ever seen on Hayward field. On Saturday afternoon more than 200 of the state's finest high school athletes staged what was termed "the finest high school meet ever held in the state." Six state records were smashed, all by Washington high school of Portland, coached by a former Hayward pupil, Vere Windnagle.

But to get back to the banquet. From the day invitations were sent out, Paul Starr, Oregon's great sprinter and chairman of the affair, was kept busy in his moments off the track taking care of the reservations which poured in from all sections of the northwest. For a time the sponsors were worried as to the possibilities of finding a place big enough to accommodate all of Bill's friends. A constant stream of telegrams and letters of congratulation accompanied the requests for banquet tickets. Coaching associates, former pupils too far away to attend and countless other old-time friends of the Colonel kept both the telegraph offices and Starr busy.

With so many celebrated visitors attending the sponsors were in a dilemma as to how to arrange a program that would include the speakers and not last all night. Hugh Rosson, graduate manager, was chosen as toastmaster and he solved the problem. All speakers would be limited to three minutes. Chancellor W. J. Kerr started off the evening's entertainment with a message of felicitation from the state system of higher education. Then Alton Coates, who brought Bill to Albany college from where he came to Oregon, spoke and told some of the Colonel's dim, dark past. George Hug, superintendent of schools in Salem and captain of Hayward's first Oregon track team, was next. Frank Callister, Albany, and C. A. Brand, Roseburg, members of the state board of higher education, spoke on Hayward's value to the state as a coach and a man.

WILLARD MARKS, also of Albany, added sketches of Bill's short career at Albany. Frank Lonergan, former speaker of the house of representatives, added another page in Hayward's interesting history when he told of the great track team Hayward coached for the Multnomah club of Portland in 1906. That was the year when Oregon's famous Dan Kelly broke the world's 100-yard dash mark.

Virgil D. Earl, dean of men here,

"Colonel" Bill Hayward, the veteran of Oregon sportdom, honored as he begins his 30th year of service at the University.

told of the time Hayward was first employed at Oregon. Vere Windnagle, great half-mile under Hayward, spoke of Bill's achievement with the younger men who came under his wing. Henry (Hank) Foster, one of the greatest track stars ever developed at Oregon, came here from Seattle to pay his former coach tribute. Bill Reinhart and Prink Callison, heads of the Webfoot coaching staff, added pages to the long book about Hayward, as did E. P. Hoyt, managing editor of the Oregonian. Dave Graham, speaking for the "Board of Strategy" told the friendship of the down-town business men for Hayward.

Alumni guests at the banquet from Portland were: Sam Wilderman, ex-'29, H. H. Hargreaves, '20, Ruben T. Ross, '29, Rodney Keating, '28, William B. Heuser, ex-'15, Carl M. Knudsen, '25, Sydney B. Hayslip, '23, Dick Sundeleaf, '23, L. V. Windnagle, ex-'16, E. P. Hoyt, '23, L. H. Gregory, ex-'12; those from Salem were: W. J. Mulkey, Jr., ex-'20, Carl D. Gabrielson, ex-'18, Hollis Huntington, ex-'17, Oliver B. Huston, '10, George Hug, '07, John J. Elliott, '17; those from Eugene were: Wayne M. Akers '22, Thomas "Nish" Chapman, '21, Herald W. White, '20, John Kitzmiller, ex-'32, Lawrence W. Manerud, ex-'23, Paul D. Green, ex-'17, Frank Hill, ex-'22, George H. Godfrey, '29, Claire McKennon, '32, Robert Officer, ex-'27, Earl F. Ludford, ex-'23, W. H. Banks, ex-'20, "Shy" Huntington, '24, Del Starnard, '14, Dick Dixon, '25, Lynn McCready, '20, Gaven C. Dyott, M.D., '20, Harold G. Edblom, ex-'21, Clarence Hill, '30, Cotter Gould, '30, Basil Williams, ex-'19, Orville Lindstrom, '32, Bob Callahan, ex-'22, Tom Stoddard, '30, Belden Babb, ex-'28, Ed Bailey, '18, Karl Onthank, '13, "Skeet" Manerud, ex-'22, James Harding, '27, "Les" Schwering, ex-'21, R. F. Stehn, '32, Orlando J. Hollis, '26, Dave Graham, '05, Dean James H. Gilbert, '03, Marion McClain, '06, Virgil D. Earl, '06, "Prink" Callison, '26, A. Orville Walter, ex-'05, Waide J. Adams, ex-'01; C. G. Phillips, ex-'23, from Boise Idaho, and Henry M. Foster, '26, from Seattle.

Summer Sessions Open June 19

SUMMER session of the Oregon State System of Higher Education will not only offer students ample facilities for continuing regular studies, but will present an opportunity for study in a wide variety of courses that can be obtained at no other time. Regular courses will be given at the University of Oregon at Eugene in art, business administration, drama, economics, education, English, German, history, home economics, journalism, law, library methods, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, Romance languages and sociology.

Portland courses will include anthropology, art, bacteriology, biology, botany, economics, education, English, home economics, German, history, journalism, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, political science, psychology, public speaking, Romance languages, sociology, and student nursing.

The fifth summer platoon demonstration school will be held in Portland and will extend over the full six weeks period.

Of special interest at Eugene will be courses in art for teachers in public schools, the clinic for atypical children, and courses in library methods. For the fourth successive year, the Carnegie corporation of New York has selected the University as its western headquarters, and has appropriated $6,500 for the work here. This provides for several scholarships and for an adequate teaching staff. The courses are especially valuable for art teachers in colleges, normal schools and public schools. The only other place in the United States that such work is offered is Harvard university, which is the eastern center for the corporation.

THE CLINIC for atypical children, which has won national attention and which draws pupils from all parts of the country, will again be at Eugene under the direction of Miss Grace Fernald, associate professor of psychology, University of California at Los Angeles. Not only does this clinic greatly aid atypical children, but it gives teachers the opportunity to study and learn methods used in this advanced type of teaching.

Work in library methods will be given by Miss Marion Horton, assistant in the city school library, Los Angeles, and by regular staff members of the University and college libraries.

State Board authorizes summer sessions at all Oregon institutions with wide variety of subjects being given by capable staff members. Eugene and Portland centers have attractive offerings for teachers in public schools.

At Oregon State college in Corvallis courses will be given in bacteriology, botany, business administration, secretarial training, chemistry, drama, economics, education, English, entomology, geology, history, home economics, industrial arts, industrial education, journalism, mathematics, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, public speaking, religion, sociology and zoology.

WORK at the normal schools at Monmouth, Ashland and La Grande will include courses in education and subjects regularly included in their curricula.

Students may earn a maximum of nine hours in the six weeks term at any of the institutions. Six hours may be obtained in the post session at Eugene, thus making it possible to earn 15 hours, the equivalent of a full term, during the summer.

For the benefit of those in summer session in Eugene, at Corvallis, at any of the normal schools or at Portland, a post session of four weeks from July 31 to August 25 will be offered in Eugene. Courses in continuation of many of those given during the regular six weeks will be included, and special attention will be given to the needs of graduate and advanced undergraduate students.

Courses will be given in economics, education, English, history, law, physics, psychology, and sociology.

A school for athletic coaches, which will serve all institutions, will be held on the campus of the Oregon State college June 19 to July 1. Students in attendance at Eugene and Monmouth may go to Corvallis for this special work. The school will alternate between the University and college, and next summer will be held in Eugene.

Football theory and practice will be given under the direction of Alonzo Stiner, head football coach and track coach at Oregon State. Basketball theory and practice and baseball will be given by A. T. Gill, basketball and baseball coach, whose Orange basketball team this winter won the Pacific coast conference championship.

Stiner will also give a course in track coaching. Work in the coaching school will be under the direction of Carl A. Lodell, director of athletics at the college.

STUDENTS desiring to enroll only in the coaching school may do so for a fee of $5. Regularly enrolled students in the Corvallis, Eugene, or Monmouth schools may enroll in the coaching classes for $5.

Excellent living accommodations will be available for students at each of the summer sessions this year, it is stated by Alfred Powers, director. At Eugene and Corvallis students if they desire will be housed in the dormitories, where board and room will be offered for $6.75 per week, or $7.75 for board and room if the student wishes a room alone.

At Eugene the new men's dormitory, an ideal home for students, will be utilized. All students who desire may take their meals in the spacious dining hall, whether or not they reside in the dormitory.

Alfred Powers, for a number of years director of summer sessions for the University at Eugene and Portland, this year will be in charge of all sessions for the State System of Higher Education.

Students Combatting Depression Evils

The writer, whose job it is to advise and direct student life on the Oregon campus, presents here in the first of two articles some of the problems being faced by students of the "depression generation" and how they meet them.

By KARL W. ONTHANK, '13
Dean of Personnel Administration

IN THE train of social and psychological consequences of our well known economic depression is a full measure of trouble for higher education. Budgets have been cut in two. Serious disturbances in the life and activities of college students have been inevitable. Nearly all have less money. Some, to whom expenses were of no consequence a year or two ago, are now faced by the stark necessity for earning their own way. The intimate contact which the University through its personnel staff maintains with individual students has prevented, at Oregon at least, those pathetic cases of students' starving themselves to stay in college which are occasionally reported in the newspapers, but it is inevitable that economic distress and political and educational disturbances which have forced out of the University nearly a fifth of its normal enrollment have brought serious discomforts and anxieties to the students left in the University.

STUDENTS worry not only about their own difficulties and uncertainties but also about trouble, actual or impending, at home. A college campus is not insulated from the forces which have produced the state of mind common this last winter. Indeed, in some respects it has had more than its share of disturbing influences, since, added to the universal economic anxieties, was first the threat of the "school moving bill" and later the uncertainties of legislative and board action. Through all this the faculty has maintained its traditional loyalty and morale. But personal anxieties of faculty members, unavoidable in such a situation even if unexpressed in classroom, are bound to be felt to some extent by students. Add to these influences those of threatened serious curtailment of recognized activities, as a result of decreased A. S. U. O. income and the serious financial troubles of the living organizations, of which approximately half of the student body are members, and one has a situation all set for serious demoralization of confidence and normal activity. The fact that this demoralization did not occur is due in part to the intelligent and courageous spirit with which Oregon students are wont to meet their problems, in part to foresight and careful planning by staff and student leaders. This article is intended to sketch, necessarily only briefly and superficially, some of the more important and interesting aspects of how the problems of adjusting student living and activities to hard times were solved.

ONE OF the most difficult situations to meet was that of student employment. As never before students have been thrown on their own resources for college expenses and this at a time when Eugene had its full quota of unemployed, many of them men with families being aided by Red Cross or similar agencies. Students seeking employment came into competition with the already acute local need. But tact and cooperation with the local agencies, the helpful attitude of Eugene people and an extraordinary amount of zealous effort by individual students, with help from the employment secretary, resulted in finding a surprising amount of remunerative work for students. The ingenious and toilsome ways students have found to earn enough to go to college is an inspiring, and sometimes pathetic, story in itself. Measured in dollars the amount earned this year is less than normal; measured in terms of students kept in college it is greater than ever. But that is not saying that all the students who need such help have been provided for. Not a few have been forced to drop out for lack of opportunity to earn. It is hoped that help from R. F. C. funds toward providing work on needed campus projects may be had next year. So far the ruling that students are not "unemployed" has blocked such aid. It seems absurd that keeping students off the unemployed market by helping them with a little work toward maintaining themselves in college is less essential than helping them after they have been forced to quit college.

STUDENT loan funds are always an invaluable source of assistance to students who are able to manage most but not quite all of their expenses. Here also as never before, calls were made for help from these funds. But the funds, never wholly adequate, had been loaned to needy students graduating last year and the year before and many of these were unemployed and unable to repay. Appeal for payments was made to all recipients of loans whether or not they were yet due. This appeal met with gratifying response. Former beneficiaries of student loans have earnestly sought to pay up and pass the aid along to present students. By reducing the amount of loans to an absolute minimum and by spreading them in installments through the year so that collections would cover them, it has been possible to get through the year until very recently without refusing loans to students genuinely in need. Emergency loans to take care of fees and immediate expenses have been the means of keeping a large number of students in college. Over ten per cent of the students registering at the beginning of the spring quarter had to get an emergency loan to pay their initial fees. Permission to pay fees in installments, granted in worthy cases, has also been a great aid. But before another year substantial additions must be made to the loan funds or they will fall far short of the needs. Collections will inevitably be inadequate. Outright gifts cannot be expected in large amounts. The one gift, barring small amounts, received during the year was that of $500 from the class of 1933. Here again it is hoped that help will be had from the R. F. C. It is difficult to see where R. F. C. money could be utilized to greater advantage than in keeping students in college and off the market of the unemployed. Incidentally, loans to students as administered by the University, are safer than nearly any other investment which can be made. The loss during the entire administration of these funds has been less than one per cent of all loans.

Reduction of expenses has, of course, been one of the chief means of helping students. University fees have been equalized as to departments as a result of which most students pay slightly larger fees than hitherto but on the other hand a considerable number pay less. This has been a great help, particularly to students in those departments hitherto charging high fees. Required book purchases have been reduced to a minimum.

Living expenses in Eugene have been reduced in response to the times. Furthermore, Eugene people, many of them families who would not under ordinary circumstances consider renting rooms, have offered room and board to students at prices which have helped materially toward putting college within the reach of many an impecunious boy or girl. Good board and room has been offered through the year for as low as $15 a month and during the spring quarter one establishment has offered satisfactory service at $12 a month. Upon showing of necessity students have been permitted to move out of dormitories and living organizations to take advantage of savings to be had in approved private houses.

Dormitory charges were reduced in the fall quarter and at the beginning of the winter quarter a further reduction to $26 a month for board and room was made. So far as students can afford to live in the dormitories or living organizations, it has been the policy of the housing committee, of which the writer happens to be the chairman, to encourage if not to require them to remain in these groups. In the organizations students have the advantages of individual and social guidance, and usually more adequate and, at least in the dormitories, more nearly fire-proof quarters. Furthermore dormitories were built and fraternities permitted to build in order to provide suitable student housing facilities necessary in normal times and entitled to reasonable protection during an abnormal period.

Museum of Art to be Opened June 10

THE OFFICIAL opening of the Museum of Art on the University of Oregon campus, the massive structure which contains the famous Murray Warner collection of Oriental Art, has been definitely set for alumni day, June 10, it has been announced by Mrs. Gertrude Bass Warner, donor of the collection and director of the museum.

The Murray Warner collection was donated to the University of Oregon in 1920 by Mrs. Warner, in memory of her husband. Promotion of better relations between notions of the Occident and Orient, through increasing interest in arts and culture, has been Mrs. Warner's aim. Since 1920 she has devoted her time to adding to the collection, and to arranging it for the most effective display.

Mrs. Warner has aimed to represent the finest types of Chinese Japanese, Korean, Cambodian and Mongolian art. Among the articles from Japan are lacquer, prints, paintings, embroideries, armor, guns, swords, kimonos, pewter and porcelain. Chinese articles include long roll paintings, wall paintings done on silk in delicate water colors, bronzes, pottery, furniture, jade, crystal, rose quartz and various types of jewelry, textiles, and sculpture.

The museum, completed two years ago, is regarded as one of the finest museum buildings in the country. It is two stories in height and is without windows or openings of any kind except massive doors. This is because natural light and sudden changes in humidity are detrimental to the delicate objects on display in the oriental art collection. The building was dedicated last year as a memorial to Prince Lucien Campbell, president of the university from 1901 to his death in 1925, and it contains the Campbell memorial court.

The Museum of Art, gift of hundreds of friends and alumni of the University, to be formally opened this commencement on June 10.

The dedication ceremony will be held at three o'clock, and the doors will be thrown open to the public. The museum will thereafter be open daily except Monday from two to four o'clock during the month of June.

The Campbell Memorial court will be open through the lobby of the Museum of Art on Sunday and Monday of Commencement from 9 to 11 in the morning. The court will be open daily from 8 in the morning to 10 at night by way of the campus entrance at the southeast. The rooms of the museum will never be open at the same time as the doorway to the court, as drafts through the building may harm the museum pieces.

ON AND ABOUT THE CAMPUS

JUNIOR week-end, combined with Mother's day, practically stole the show for interest on the campus during spring term. Without the usual ballyhoo of political campaigns, and with poor weather a great part of the time except during the week-end festivities, Junior week-end was the "event of the term."

"Old Woman and the Shoe" Wins

Gamma Phi Beta sorority and Sigma Nu fraternity, presenting a highly artistic and amusing float, "The Old Woman and the Shoe," won the first prize at the annual canoe fete, the gala event of the Junior week-end-Mother's day observance on the University of Oregon campus. Honorable mention was given to Pi Beta Phi and Alpha Tau Omega, and to Beta Phi Alpha and Theta Chi.

Gerlinger, Koyl Winners

Helen Binford, junior from Portland, was awarded the Gerlinger cup as the outstanding girl in the junior class at the Junior prom this year. Sterling Green, editor-elect of the Emerald, was named winner of the Koyl cup, an award for the outstanding man in the class.

Mortar Board Elects

Junior girls elected to Mortar Board during Junior week-end were: Helen Binford, Caroline Card, Jean Failing, Virginia Hartje, Nancy Suomela, Geraldine and Eileen Hickson, Dorothy Marsters, Lois Greenwood, May Masterton, Ida Mae Nichols, Eleanor Coombs. Mrs. Gertrude Bass Warner was taken in as an honorary member.

Honorary Elects Six Members

Friars, honorary service group, elected six new members at the traditional ceremony during the campus luncheon, on Junior week-end. Those elected were: Sterling Green, editor-elect of the Emerald; Thomas Tongue, student body president-elect; Charles Wishard, Otto Vonderheit, Ned Kinney, and Neil Bush.

Mothers Vote Confidence

Mothers of Oregon students, meeting on the campus during the annual Mother's day, held this year in connection with Junior week-end festivities, expressed confidence in the administration of the University by resolution passed at the meeting and commended officials for the high moral and social standards of students. Under Mrs. Arthur M. Dibble, Portland, new president, the organization is planning another year of cooperative work with University officials in promoting the interests of the University and the students.

Stanford Calls Donald Erb

Dr. Donald Erb of the economics department has accepted a position at Stanford university, beginning next fall. Dr. Erb came to Oregon from Harvard university in 1927. It has been known for some time that Stanford officials were anxious to find an opening for the young Oregon professor, who has become one of the popular staff members on the Oregon campus.

Law Summer School Offered

Law students and lawyers who wish to "brush up" on some phase of their profession will be given that chance at the University this summer. Two sessions of a law summer school will be held from June 19 to July 28, and from July 31 to August 25. Classes will be conducted by Dean Wayne L. Morse and Professors Orlando J. Hollis and Charles G. How-ecutive council; and Myron Pinkstaff, Eugene, junior man on executive council.

Major Back Named

Major R. H. Back, professor of military tactics in the R. O. T. C. unit at the University of Oregon at Eugene, has been selected as commander of the Eugene district for President Roosevelt's conservation corps reforestation work.

Publication Heads Chosen

Appointments of editors and managers for the Oregon and Oregon Daily Emerald for next year were completed recently by the publications committee. Sterling Green of Portland was named editor of the Emerald and Grant Thuemmel, also of Portland, was made business manager. Madeleine Gilbert, Eugene, will edit the Oregon for next year, and Ed Cross, Salem, will manage the business affairs of the yearbook.

25 Join Phi Beta Kappa

Twenty-five seniors were initiated into the nation's highest scholastic honorary—Phi Beta Kappa—at recent ceremonies. The list follows: Margaret Ansley, Portland; Willard Arant, Forest Grove; George Bailey, Grants Pass; George Brimlow, Rainbow; Elinor Clark, Portland; Leslie Dunlap, Portland; Edgar Good-nough, Eugene; John Halderman, Astoria; Marjorie Halderman, Astoria; Robert Hayter, Dallas; Irvin Hill, Cushman; Jane Kanzler, Portland; Sister Gregory Kelly, Mt. ## Contest Winner Named

Janet Fitch, Eugene, senior in Romance languages, has been declared winner of the Edison Marshall short story contest, which carries with it an award of $50. Her winning story was entitled, "Mother Perrell." Honorable mention went to Roland McMasters, Berkeley, California, for his story, "Backwash," and to Altine Rogers, Eugene, for "The Forgesi Tea Set."

Wilderman Leaves Campus

Sam Wilderman, ex-'28, for the last 10 years publicity man for the University of Oregon athletic teams, will sever his connection with the school next month to go into the practice of law in Portland. His offices are 400 Oregonian building. Sam was the first publicity man of any western school. In the fall he will assist Bruce Hamby in handling the University football publicity.

ard. Eight different courses will be offered during the two sessions.

Emerald Rated High

Scoring a total of 910 points out of a possible 1,000, the Oregon Emerald, student daily of the University of Oregon, has been given an "All-American" award for excellence by the National Scholastic Press association, with headquarters in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Albert Cup Winner Named

Cecil Espy, Woodburn, president of the senior class of the University of Oregon, has been elected by his class to receive the Albert cup award. The trophy is given each year to the senior who stands first in points of character, service and wholesome personality. It is the gift of Joseph H. Albert, of Salem.

Student Officers Chosen

For the first time in the memory of anyone around the campus of the University of Oregon, all candidates for major offices of the Associated Students won their posts unopposed. Only one "ticket" was nominated.

Those elected are: Thomas H. Tongue, III, Hillsboro, president; Neil Bush, Vernonia, vice-president; Nancy Suomela, Portland, secretary; Helen Burns, Portland, senior woman on executive council; Richard Near, Eugene, senior man on ex-

End of Homestead Strike

In the summer of 1892, while financial panic swept the U. S., the most bitter and bloody labor dispute of U. S. history focused public attention on the Homestead steel mills, near Pittsburgh. There Amalgamated Association, powerful steel unit in six-year old American Federation of Labor, clashed in a finish fight with labor's Number One Enemy, Carnegie Steel's Henry Clay Frick.

Rejecting all of the Union's demands, tycoon Frick declared a general lockout in the Homestead mills, next day found the town an armed camp in the hands of the workmen. After several pitched battles between strikers and strike breakers, militia men were ordered in, established martial law. Newspapers filled with stories of strikers privations fanned public sentiment against Frick and Carnegie Steel Company to white heat. Weeks dragged by, mills remained idle, and iron fist Frick was forced to play a waiting game.

As TIME, had it been printed three weeks after the first outbreak, on July 28, 1892, would have reported subsequent events:

For weeks screaming headlines have focused popular attention on the Homestead Strike, battle between organized steel workers and individualistic Henry Clay Frick. Nowhere throughout the U. S. had the newspaper headlines screamed louder than in a small ice-cream parlor in Worcester, Mass.

There the owners, two dark haired excitable anarchists, Emma Goldman and thin slavic Alexander Berkman, awaited impatiently each new dispatch from the strike center. In each new outbreak they

Impulsively they started for Pittsburgh, ran out of funds in New York. Emma Goldman unable to raise money soliciting on the streets, begged, borrowed Berkman's train fare to Pittsburgh. As all negotiations between strikers and Frick collapsed, Berkman appeared at the Carnegie Steel offices, describing himself as the representative of a New York employment agency.

Five times last week Berkman tried to interview Scot Frick. Five times he was refused audience. The fifth time, starting to leave the waiting room he wheeled suddenly, pushed past the colored attendant, marched straight into the private office of Carnegie Steel's Chairman. Grizzled, unimaginative Frick rose from a conversation with one of his assistants, turned towards the door.

Berkman took two steps forward, drew a pistol from his pocket, fired point blank. As Frick fell to the floor, like a flash his assistant grappled with Berkman. More shots, cries for help, brought attendants running to find Frick shot twice in the neck, stabbed several times with a poisoned file.

Frick, streaming blood, braced himself against a desk. As Berkman rode off to jail, he continued to work until an ambulance arrived. Immediately he wired to Scotland—sojourning Carnegie. "I am still in shape to fight the battle out."

Later in the afternoon Homestead strikers were dazed by the news of the terroristic act in which none of them had any part. Said Hugh O'Donnell, leader of the workers, "The bullet from Berkman's pistol went straight through the heart of the Homestead Strike."

Meanwhile the U. S. public, partial to all martyrs, read new screaming headlines making Frick a new hero, turning public opinion against strikers.

THE FAMILY MAIL

To the Editor:

Since receiving my degree from Oregon in 1932 I have been studying at the Art Student's League of New York. Do you know of any Oregon alumni now in New York who may be driving to the west coast this summer?

My winter here has been very interesting. I was down to my last $3.00 when I managed to get a position teaching art in the Italian quarter of the upper east side. I found out later that it was through an Oregon grad that I got the job. Her name is Mildred Jerome, ex-'27.

I have been studying sculpture, and am now in Hoffman's class in drawing. They will have Steinhoff here next year. I understand he will teach in the Oregon summer session again. He is by far the finest teacher in America. I would like to write more but am going to take my landlady to the Music hall. She is Mike Mueller's God-mother. (Mike Mueller was a painting professor at Oregon. He died not long ago).

The more I see of New York the happier I am that I am an Oregon grad and now I see what a really good school is.

Walt Pritchard, M.F.A. '32,

New York City.

To the Editor:

Am enclosing herewith my alumni dues for 1933. I greatly enjoyed a visit with my old classmate, Yosuke Matsuoka, at Chicago, on April 3 last. I notice by the April number of OLD OREGON that the University authorities and members extended a hearty welcome to my old classmate, Matsuoka. Best wishes for the success of OLD OREGON!

DOES your car ever exhibit technocratic tendencies . . . slow on the start, cylinders taking long week-ends, motor knocking on hills, gorging on ergs that tear it down socially?

Theories are O. K. anywhere except under your throttle. It's fun to be fooled about ergs and octanes, energy-units and end-points — it's more fun to know that your car is running better than it ever did before you switched to Texaco Fire Chief Gasoline.

Fire Chief is made to surpass the U. S. Government's specifications for an emergency gasoline, simply so you can enjoy the quick-starting, power, pick-up and dependable performance that a Fire Engine has to give. You'll find it at the station with the big Red Star and Green "T" trade mark.
