OLD OREGON
APRIL 1946

Alum Association Member Drive Gets Under Way

WITH the whole-hearted support of Oregon Alumni association President Ernest Haycox and the executive council, and through Old Oregon, your alum magazine, and county alumni meetings, the University Alumni association opened an all-out membership campaign last month. A University cannot properly succeed without enthusiastic support from its alumni. A large alumni association membership is the essence of this support.

During March membership meetings were held in Eugene and Hood River. Another confab is scheduled in Albany on April 12. Lincoln county alumni are also planning a meeting during April.

Groups of new memberships have been sent to the University from Portland by Don Moe, Charles Holloway, Ernest Haycox and Morris Rotenberg and from Eugene by Sid Milligan, Skeet Manerud, Virgil Earl, and Martha Jane Switzer.

Clip the application below!

These are the things we want. They represent the purpose of an effective alumni organization:

1. Promotion of the ingredients of a greater University—student body, faculty and staff, buildings and plant.
2. Scholarships.
3. Encouragement of research projects.
4. Encouragement of endowments.
5. Unity in efforts of alumni groups and alums and former students.
6. Opportunities for reunions and good fellowship among all alums and former students.

To achieve the six-point purpose outlined above, two things are essential: Increased membership supported by a larger membership fee. A careful survey of the alumni fund and a breakdown of publication and general office expenses has proved that under the old rate of $2.00 per year, we are not building a necessary reserve. A comparison of our membership dues with those of other schools of equal size proved that 81% of the others have larger membership fees. For those reasons the Oregon Alumni Association Executive Committee voted a new $3.00 membership rate for Old Oregon magazine and Alumni Association membership. This is your share in the future of the Oregon Alumni program and the University of Oregon.

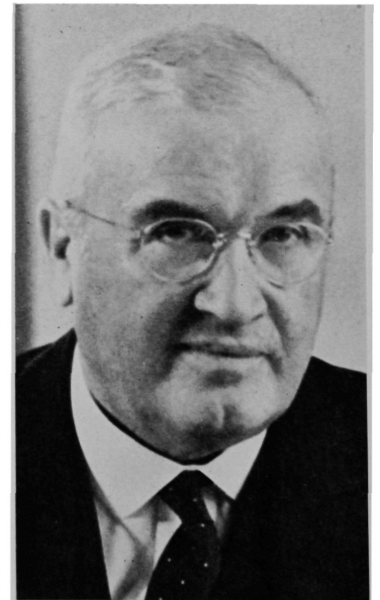

F. M. Hunter Resigns

CHANCELLOR Frederick M. Hunter, head of the Oregon state system of higher education, announced his retirement from office last month. The move will become effective July 1 of this year.

Dr. Hunter, who has held the chancellor's post since 1935, will go on sabbatical leave at half salary for the year beginning July 1.

Edgar W. Smith, member of the state board of higher education, expressed the thanks of the group to the 67-year-old educator for his years of service.

Dr. Hunter formerly was chancellor of the University of Denver.

... something for all of us to keep working on

Your University becomes greater with a large and active Alumni Association

The University of Oregon Alumni Association functions to continue and promote friendships and acquaintances among thousands of alums and former students. It further provides alums, students, faculty and parents personal and University news of interest and significance to Old Oregon readers.

A further purpose of your Alumni Association is to promote the ingredients of a greater University, and in that way benefit all groups and individuals. Your interest and support makes it possible to achieve these purposes for you and for your University.

There's plenty here you can't see

YOUR TRAIN RIDE of the future may be a more delightful experience because of something you can't see in this picture.

The thing you can't see is the customary gap between the ends of the rails. You can't see it because it isn't there. For the rails, instead of being bolted together, are welded together into lengths of solid metal sometimes a mile long.

This is done by pressure-welding... by forcing the rails together at their ends in the heat of oxy-acetylene flames until they become a single, continuous piece, uniform in appearance, structure, and strength.

Pressure-welded track is being used increasingly by railroads because it cuts maintenance costs and provides a smoother, quieter ride for passengers.

Pressure-welding also is used by many other industries. Some use pressure-welding for the construction of overland pipe lines... some for the fabrication of machinery parts... some for making oil-well tools... and some are using pressure-welding to make airplane and automobile parts.

Pressure-welding is a research development of The Linde Air Products Company and The Oxweld Railroad Service Company, Units of UCC.

If you are a bit technically minded or just want to know more about this subject, write for booklet P-4 on Oxy-Acetylene Pressure-Welding.

Need a Job? Students, Grads Welcomed

THE University Employment Service under the supervision of K. W. Onthank, dean of personnel administration, with Mrs. Jeanette Hahner and Mrs. Virginia Hathaway as office secretaries, has proved a valuable asset to students seeking permanent work after being graduated and part time work while in school.

Alumni graduates are also welcome to register with the office. Many requests come in for graduates of past years with practical experience to fill positions of importance. Dean Onthank stated that often another firm can offer a person an advanced position which will not be available for some time at his present place of work.

In charge of placing graduate students is Mrs. Hahner who has reported that calls are already coming in for qualified graduates. During spring term numerous personnel managers and other employers will come to the campus looking for University men and women. Those whose credentials are on file will naturally have first chance. To file credentials one may visit or write to the University of Oregon Student Employment Office. He will receive a personnel data form and blanks to be filled out by his teachers, former employers, or commanding officers if the applicant is a former service man or woman.

RECENTLY there have been calls for accountants, salesmen with opportunities to work up to sales managerships, costume designers, personnel officers, recreational supervisors and various others.

If teaching is the plan however, the student should register with the Teacher Placement Agency in the school of education.

Students who expect to work during the summer and return to school in the fall are urged to register immediately since resorts and other seasonal employers are already beginning to engage their staffs.

MRS. Hathaway is in charge of part time and seasonal work for students. To apply for this type of job one must fill out a personnel data form found in the employment office. There are calls for students to do work on the campus as well as down town. The jobs vary as do the wages.

Practically all colleges and universities have a student employment service, yet there are some students who do not realize its great value. Not only has it proved an aid to the job seekers, but it is much appreciated by employers who need able people in their organizations.

Veteran's Helper . . .

Emmet F. McGraw heads the University Veteran's Administration Guidance Center located in the Physical Education building. The center offers assistance to vets in deciding upon future vocations as well as registration in the University.

Aid Offered Returning Veterans

SERVICEMEN who contact the United States Veteran's administration at the University of Oregon Veteran's Guidance Center located on the campus in the Physical Education building, may receive help in determining their future vocations. Vets receive careful and individual attention in either Public Law 10, which provides for vocational rehabilitation of disabled veterans, or Public Law 346, which is concerned with the education and training of veterans whose education was impaired by military or naval service.

Veterans who intend to register in the University receive additional assistance relative to registration and housing through the University's own facilities designed to help them begin or renew their college careers on the Webfoot campus.

The Veteran's Administration guidance center is under the direction of Emmet F. McGraw; and the University's veteran's services are directed by Virgil Earl, dean of men. He is assisted by George Hall, assistant dean of men.

DOROTHY Marshall, receptionist secretary at McGraw's office, informs each visiting veteran of the benefits for which he is eligible. The veteran is then assigned to a counselor, who discusses the veteran's past experience, interests and ambitions with the applicant. This background information is used as a basis of tests to determine a major objective field, which is in full agreement with both counselor and the veteran. From 8 to 10 hours of the counselor's personal attention is granted to each veteran.

The Veterans Administration Guidance Center was established in April, 1945.

Education . . . Essence of Democracy-- Oregon School Leads the Way

Written for Old Oregon
By BARBARA GILBERT, '48

IN 1900, when the University of Oregon was a young, struggling institution, Dr. H. D. Sheldon arrived on the campus from Clark college in Massachusetts to offer Oregon students their first instruction in philosophy and education. His interest in education culminated in the establishment of the school of education, the fourth professional school to be created at the University, in the winter of 1909. From that day on, the school of education grew until today it is receiving from all parts of the United States, more requests for teachers than can possibly be filled and providing Oregon high schools with over 25 per cent of their instructors.

The board of regents created education as a separate school because of its extension connections. Dr. Sheldon was the school's first dean. In 1911 Dr. Sheldon resigned his position and was replaced by Dr. C. J. C. Bennett, who died shortly afterwards. Two years later the University recalled Dr. Sheldon from the University of Pittsburg, promising rapid expansion of the education school. At that time the school's staff was composed of Dr. Sheldon, and professor of history and principles of education Fred C. Ayer, school administration; F. L. Stetson, secondary education; and B. W. DeBusk, educational psychology.

The first classes in education were held in the Oregon building which was built for the school in 1915. In 1916 the new University high school began operation for the practice teaching of future teachers. In 1921 the present education building was constructed adjoining the high school and the school of education moved its headquarters to the new building.

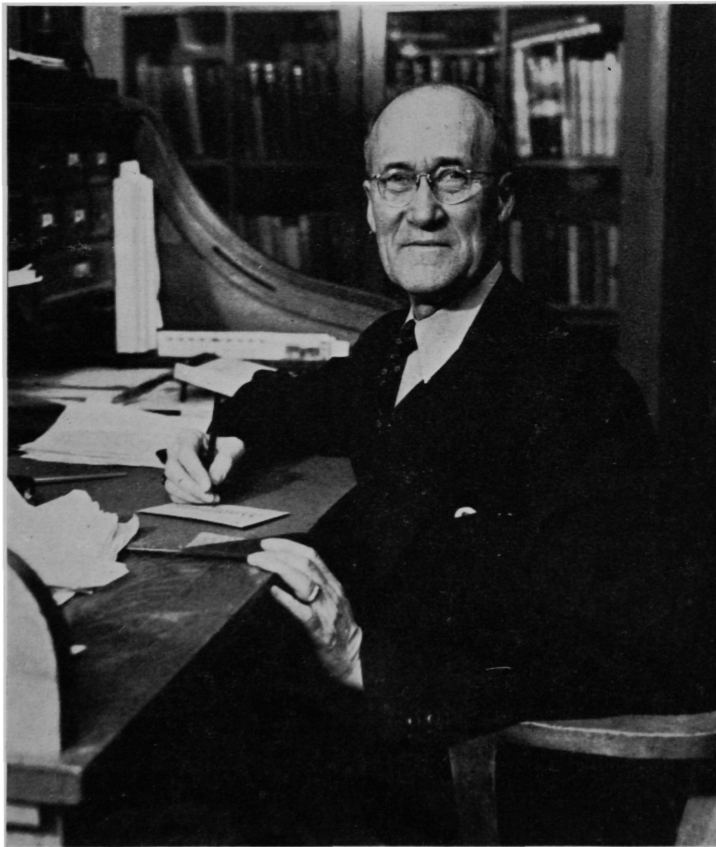

IN the summer of 1928 Dr. B. W. DeBusk of the school's faculty, began conducting a reading clinic. Out of this clinic grew the DeBusk memorial clinic for exceptional children which is maintained by the school of education to help children with learning difficulties and to train teachers for remedial teaching in public schools.

Confining its work to the treatment of children of normal intelligence who have special disabilities in reading, spelling, and arithmetic, the clinic, now under the direction of P. A. Killgallon, is carried on in cooperation with the division of speech and dramatic arts. The clinic places at least one specially trained teacher in each county in Oregon for work in the public schools.

In 1937, Dr. F. G. Macomber, professor of education, started the curriculum movement throughout the state by establishing the curriculum laboratory in the school of education. The laboratory provides excellent facilities for specialized study of public school curriculum and for practical research on curriculum problems. Consultant services on curriculum problems are provided by the education school through this laboratory to school systems of Oregon by means of extension courses, curriculum and evaluation surveys and curriculum conferences.

Noted Oregon Educator . . .

Dean James R. Jewell has headed the school of education faculty since 1932. He is now head of the education schools of both the University and Oregon State College. At present, Dean Jewell is working on the development of the University extension center in Portland.

BECAUSE the school emphasizes mastery of subject matter and a broad, liberal education as two of the three essential qualifications of a good teacher, the number of students actually enrolled as majors in education is small, with the greater number of future teachers registered in the various other departments of the University while taking their required education courses. In this way the school of education adequately prepares students for teaching literature, languages, social sciences, biological sciences, general sciences, physical sciences, mathematics, arts, business administration, music, physical education, and approved combinations of subjects. The school also offers general education courses, professional work in education administration and prepares teachers for work with atypical children.

The school of education provides opportunities for supervised high-school and junior high school teaching through the facilities of University high school and Roosevelt junior high. Supervised teaching is offered in all fields in which the University offers major work. After observing expert instructors and working out their own lesson plans under guidance, the student teachers conduct high school classes under close supervision.

BBETTER known for its instruction in school administration, the school of education has awarded master of arts degrees in this field to almost every person now serving as a high school principal or school superintendent in Oregon.

A bureau of educational research is maintained by the school which enables faculty members to investigate educational problems at the request of school officials. The bureau offers advice concerning educational tests and makes building and financial surveys in various cities and counties in the state.

In order to guarantee its qualified graduates positions in secondary schools, the

'Nuthin's too Good fur the Kids', But U. S. Teacher Shortage Still Acute

Written for Old Oregon
By DR. HUGH B. WOOD

"SHORTAGES" have hit education as hard as any other business. The housewife complains of the lack of butter and bacon and of rationed sugar. Father complains of the lack of tires and automobiles. The trailer veteran complains of the lack of housing and the materials for new housing. But none of these shortages will affect our future society as the present crucial shortages in education.

The most serious educational shortage is teachers. Teachers are scandalously low-paid. We pay the bank teller who safeguards our money more than the teacher who safeguards the future of our children. In many instances we pay the street cleaner, the garbage collector, and the janitor who safeguard our health and comfort more than the teacher who safeguards the well-being of our children. We pay a dollar or more an hour for common labor; we pay the teacher a peasant's wage and frequently begrudge him that! Three hundred and sixty-five thousand teachers received less than $1200 last year!

In terms of the professional training required, there is no more poorly paid occupational group than teachers. The result: a shortage of 500,000 teachers today and nearly a third of our children being taught by teachers who fail to meet the minimum qualification standards of normal times! Consider this in light of a total teaching staff of only slightly over a million teachers in normal times in the United States and the implications take on new significance.

To make matters even worse, enrollments in teacher training institutions showed a steady decrease throughout the war period. Even now, small gains are lagging far behind the overwhelming increases in other departments of our institutions of higher learning.

What can we do? The answer should be obvious to all. We must put the teaching profession on a financial plane comparable to the importance of the responsibilities entrusted to the teacher. We must give the profession a chance to compete financially for promising and able persons in the professional field. We must consider the relative importance of the guardianship of our health, our money, our homes, the education of our children—we must establish values and act accordingly.

The following story was told to me several years ago while teaching at a southern college—let it serve as our moral. A newspaper editor was called upon to deliver a dedication-commencement address at a newly erected school building in a remote section of the state. As he drove up the state during the late afternoon, he thought of what he should say to a group of students and their parents whose sacrifices had made possible a new educational outlook in the little community. Particularly, he cast about in his mind for a suitable theme. On his arrival he was somewhat dismayed to find a small log building of two rooms set in the middle of a clearing of not more than two or three acres, rather than the more pretentious edifice that he had expected. But as he walked around the building and returned to the front, his eyes were riveted on a motto above the door. He knew that he had found his theme, for there, roughly hewn on the portal log, he read, "Nothin's to good fur the kids." school of education maintains a placement service which compiles and makes available to school officials full information about its graduating teachers. It also furnishes to students information concerning requirements and school laws in other states and recommends its graduates to other states.

Charles J. Elliott, '43, recently received his discharge as a lieutenant in the army. Elliott spent 14 months overseas in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, and was awarded the Silver Star medal at Sealsdorf, Germany.

In 1945 there were received through the placement service, offers for teaching positions whose salaries would have amounted to $3,200,000. The 1,993 positions offered to University of Oregon graduates in the field of education came from 29 states and territories, and exceeded the number of offers ever before received. Most of the calls were for high school teachers. 74 of these were for school administrators. The greatest number of calls are for teachers of English, social science, mathematics, physical education for men, commerce, physical education for girls, home economics, science, drama and language in that order.

THE present staff of the school is headed by Dean James R. Jewell. Dean Jewell came to the University in 1927. Prior to coming to the University he headed the school of education at Oregon State College. With the revision of the state educational system he became dean of both the University and the State college schools of education. He came to Oregon from the University of Arkansas where he was dean of the college of education. He has also done work with the United States Bureau of Education in Washington D.C. In addition to his duties in the school, Dean Jewell is working on the development of the University of Oregon extension center in the greater Portland area.

The University school of education is housed in the Education building, built in 1921 adjoining University high school. Here future educators are given the insights of the teaching profession.

In addition to the classes in teaching procedures, an opportunity for actual experience in instruction is offered students in the classrooms of the high school.

So great is the demand for teachers that the school of education now has more calls for instructors than it can possibly accommodate.

WHAT WE NEED

The State Legislature has authorized a bond issue to raise $600,000 when we have raised $400,000. When this has been accomplished, funds will be available for the construction of a Student Union Building which will be in keeping with the eminent position of the University among the schools and colleges of the country. A suitable Student Union Building is one of the more important of the University's post-war projects.

This is the second of a series of Student Union pages supported by campus living organizations.

THE University symphony and choral union appeared in a joint All-American music festival, February 19. Representative works of American composers were offered by the groups. Soloists for the choral union were three returned veterans, Albert Dunn '49, Robert Wardwell '49, and James McMullen '49.

Delta Delta Delta sorority won the Norblad trophy for the largest percentage of dads attending the Annual Dad's Weekend. They also won the A. G. Laurgaard trophy for the most freshman dads. The Paul T. Shaw trophy for second place honors went to Pi Beta Phi.

"PICANINNY Prance" was finally selected as the theme of the annual Frosh Glee. "Temptation" was the theme originally selected, but because of the objection of University authorities, it was changed. During the week before the dance, a mysterious ghost roamed the campus searching for his friend, "George," who was finally discovered at the dance as a scarecrow.

In reply to the proposal of Governor Earl Snell to use the marine barracks at Klamath Falls as a junior college or extension center for student veterans, several hundred veterans signified their disapproval by signing a petition.

Under the auspices of the Eugene Civic Music association, John Charles Thomas presented a concert at McArthur Court, February 21. One of the largest crowds of the season attended.

THE world premiere of the full length drama, "Out Flew the Web," was presented by the University Theater Guild, March 8. The play was written by Elenore Gullion, '35. Opening night was a gala occasion with the audience in formal dress.

The Oregon Daily Emerald made its radio debut, February 20. The entire show was participated in, and managed by journalism students. The program included variety numbers and an imaginary account of a typical day at the Emerald office. An interview with the editor, Louise Montag, '46, explaining publishing procedures, concluded the program.

AN ASUO assembly was the first of a group of lectures given in conjunction with the current "Love and Marriage" series. Following this, faculty members, ministers, and men and women well-versed on the subject, spoke informally at the various campus living organizations. Pamphlets and books on the subject were purchased by the library and are now available to all students.

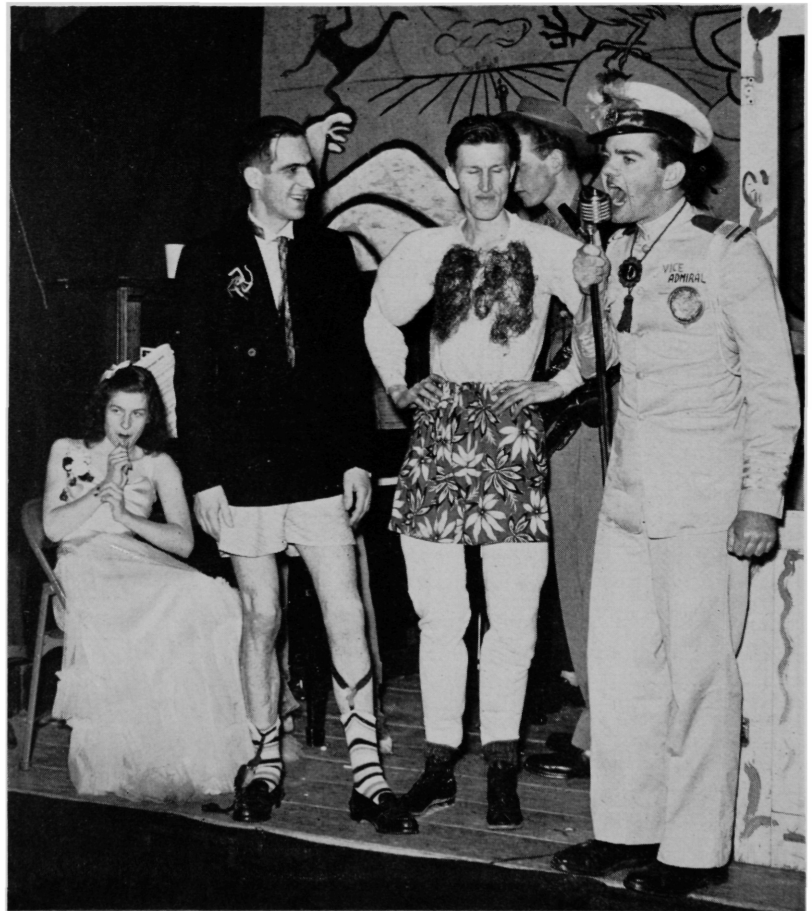

The first annual international festival to be held on the campus was presented February 23 at the YWCA and YMCA. The main feature was a conference with "Students of the World" as its theme. Foreign students from the University and other Oregon colleges participated in the discussion.

The annual Red Cross drive was launched February 26. Total campus donations totaled $1200.00 with Kappa Kappa Gamma receiving the 1946 Red Cross contribution cup for donations averaging $4.78 per person.

COMBINING forces in the latter part of February, the Eugene Chamber of Commerce and the University co-sponsored a drive to secure housing accommodations for an additional enrollment of 500 veterans expected to register spring term.

Veterans of World War II have organized as a group on the campus to more capably distribute veteran's information, to carry out any veteran's suggestions acceptable to the majority of the group, promote and extend the social life of the veterans and to provide an opportunity for men and women with like purposes, aims, and desires to get together. The organization will be for the benefit of veterans only and they will not enter politics as a group.

The two publications are part of Jaffe publications of Los Angeles, Calif. Before joining Jaffe publications Alyce was with the University News Bureau.

Providing entertainment during the intermission at the hilarious Beaux Arts Ball last month were Bob Springer, Paul Bogan, and Neil Koch. The theme of the annual affair was "Suppressed Desire." Lynn Smith, band vocalist, and Herb Widmer, leader of the orchestra, can be seen in the background.

Green Oregon Squad Unlimbers

Baseball Starts; Coach Hobson Calls Aspirants

Webfoot Sports

Written for Old Oregon
By TOMMY WRIGHT, '48

BACK to the Oregon athletic scene after two years of dormancy comes the clacking of bats, the clicking of cleats, and the American sporting tradition—baseball.

Not since 1943 when the war forced discontinuance of baseball at the University of Oregon, has the turf of Howe field welcomed the horsehide and the hickory. Coach Howard "Hobby" Hobson has taken over baseball as the basketball season came to a close. On March 29 some 45-odd diamond prospects trotted out of the dressing rooms for the first regular practice of the new 1946 season.

The only note of pessimism lies in the fact that among the near half a hundred players reporting, there are no returning lettermen to form a nucleus for the 1946 conference race.

WITH the large number of players reporting all without previous experience at Oregon, Coach Hobson is faced with the difficulty of cutting the squad to fit the limited facilities and equipment in a few short weeks. Unable to devote much time to teaching of fundamentals, he will be forced to skim the cream by watching the players in action. While there were no eligible lettermen registered at the time of the initial practices, it is possible that several will be enrolled in school and on hand for the opening of the conference schedule.

Whitey Lokan, Hal Saltzman and Ray Carlson all lettermen on the last edition of Oregon nines in 1943, are expected back. Billy Calvert, little mainstay catcher of the 1940 and '41 teams, has announced his intentions to return. And Al "Lefty" Wimer, who tossed his southpaw slants for the 1942 team, may be available again this year.

Many of the new candidates have several years of American Legion, high school and service baseball behind them, so the picture for the Webfoots is anything but gloomy. To give his green team plenty of experience before the April 17 opener against Washington State College, Hobson has scheduled 16 non-conference engagements.

The brightness of the 1946 season, however, cannot blot out the record of Oregon's past seasons. In the past ten years the Webfoots have won the conference title seven times. Five of these crowns have been won under the tutelage of Mentor Hobson. In the last three years of baseball competition for Oregon—1941 to 1943—Duck nines captured the title three times. The 1943 season ended with the University and Oregon State college tied for the league, but the Beavers declined a play-off.

Many of Oregon's diamond dusters of the past few years have gone on to play professional baseball. Leading the list of Webfoots who have made good in pro competition are Joe Gordon, second baseman for the New York Yankees; Bill Carney who is currently carving a spot for himself in the Portland Beaver lineup; Dick Whitman, Wimpy Quinn, Bob Hardy, Ford Mullen and many others.

Lt. (jg) Donna C. Davies, '40, was recently transferred to the naval landing forces equipment depot at San Diego, Calif. from the Bureau of Ships, Washington, D. C.

Webfoot Casaba Season Shows Balanced Sheet

Written for Old Oregon
By FRED BECKWITH, '46

Coach Howard Hobson switches from basketball to baseball this spring and heads a green, but willing Webfoot horsehide squad. Hobson was recently elected second vice-president of the National Basketball Coaches' association.

Casaba Coaches Meet; Hobson Elected to Post

HOWARD Hobson, University basketball mentor, was elected second vice-president of the National Basketball Coaches' association at a meeting held in New York last March 22.

Hobson had formerly held the position of secretary-treasurer of the organization and had served on the board of directors. He still is a member of the basketball rules committee.

In addition to the basketball coaches' association, Hobson is also a member of the National Baseball Coaches' association.

THE curtailing of the advantages of basketball's "giants" was the object of most of the major rule changes suggested at the March 22 meeting. An informal vote, taken after a two-hour discussion, indicated that some form of legislation to place a further check on the effectiveness of extra tall players would be recommended to the rules-makers.

Blair Gullion of Connecticut was elected president of the association and W. H. Browne of Nebraska was named first vice-president.

Most of the proposals for tightening the handcuffs on the big boys advocated a change in the dimensions of the free-throw lane, thus enlarging the so-called "three-second" area and forcing the tall players farther back from the goal.

Oliver, Mikulak Feted At Duck Club Meeting

COACH Tex Oliver, University football mentor, officially opened discussion of the 1946 pigskin season last March 18, when he reviewed plans for Webfoot spring training and prospects for 1946 before a meeting of the Oregon Duck Club at the Imperial Hotel, Portland.

Other featured guest was Mike Mikulak, Webfoot backfield coach, recently returned to the University from the army.

WITH the right sense for a proper climax, the Oregon varsity basketballers concluded their season with a 42-41 overtime win over Oregon State last month. This effort rang down the casaba curtains for the year, and it left the men of Howard Hobson in the middle of the league ladder: eight wins and eight losses. How the Ducks emerged with a .500 average for the season has been told before, but for the purposes of recapping, the individual series results went like this:

The locals opened the Northern division fight with the role of 1945 defending champs. An old knee injury caught up with Captain Bob Hamilton and he watched the greater part of the season games from the bench, entering the picture only in late season. Dick Wilkins, one of the nation's leading scorers a year ago, picked up a case of flu, and was ineffective in the early weeks of the cage campaign. The reserve problem was rather acute and gangling Ken Hays, multi-purpose center, had few breathing spells.

IDAHO, invading the Willamette Valley circuit, dropped a pair to Oregon State, and Oregon was expected to trip the Vandals when they came to the Igloo. Such was not the case. The men of Babe Brown barely lost a 46-45 finish on the first night and came back to win the second contest rather handily. Oregon then broke even in a pair of games with Oregon State, and finally the Ducks took to the road for a twin billing with Washington at Seattle.

The fifty-fifty business continued there, the clubs splitting the two games.

Oregon lost another one to the OSC boys, and then played host to Washington here. Playing their best brand of ball, the Ducks moved back into the championship picture by tripping the Huskies in both of the local frays. The club was all keyed up for the Inland Empire jaunt. But preceding this junket, the Hobsonmen ran into Gail Bishop and his Washington State playmates. Again the balancer of odds emerged with a decision, and it was one for the Cougars and one for the Ducks.

Out on the road, via airplane this time, sped the victory-hungry Oregonmen. Bishop and company proved poor hosts, for they kicked the Ducks' chances down the hill by soundly administering a pair of defeats to their visitors. Out of the race at that time, Oregon was content to confuse the title battle by splitting again with Idaho. It was Idaho and Oregon State neck-and-neck down to the finish line, but Oregon's closing triumph over the Aggies, gave the photo finish to the Vandals. Idaho lost to the University of California, two-games-out-of-three in the Pacific Coast Conference play-offs.

Daniel R. Dimick, '37, has been appointed regional attorney of the 19th region of the national labor relations board. This area includes the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, and the territory of Alaska. During the war, Dimick served as an officer in the navy and was recently placed on inactive duty as a lieutenant commander. He served overseas in the Pacific area for 18 months.

The 1945-46 basketball squad poses after winding up the season with a spectacular 42-41 win over Oregon State. The Webfoots ended with a .500 season average, having won eight and lost eight. Front row: Rick Wilkins, Stan Williamson, Capt. Bob Hamilton, "Reedy" Berg, Bruce Hoffine, Leslie Wright, Walter Kirsch, and Roy Seeborg. Back row: Coach Howard Hobson, Del Smith, Bob Kehrl, Ken Hays, George Bray, Marvin Rasmussen, and Manager Nick Weddle.

Capt. Harold V. DeMars, '41, is now on terminal leave following his recent arrival in the United States from Okinawa, where he has been since the invasion of that island last April. He has been in the service since August, 1942.

UO Art School Dean Passes After Heart Attack

SADNESS filled the hearts of University students and faculty last month with the death of Ellis F. Lawrence, beloved co-founder and long-time dean of the school of architecture and allied arts. Dean Lawrence died of a heart attack February 27. He was stricken at the University faculty club and died before reaching Sacred Heart hospital.

Together with Percy Adams and E. H. McAllister, both from the University engineering staff, Dean Lawrence founded the architecture school in 1914.

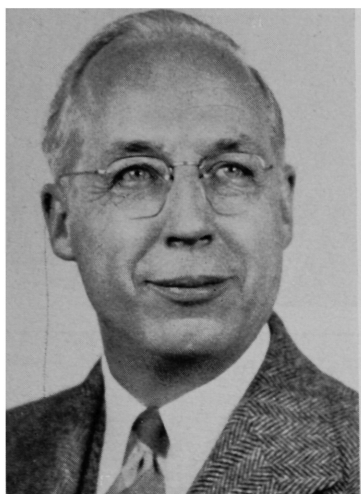

A noted practicing architect in Portland, Dean Lawrence was a member of the American Institute of Architects. At one time he had been vice-president and a long-standing member of the board of directors for the institute. He was also a past president of the Association of the Collegiate Schools of Architecture.

Brown Receives Post as Acting Architecture Dean

THE appointment of Eyler Brown, '16, associate professor of architecture, as acting dean of the University school of architecture and allied arts was announced by University President Harry K. Newburn last month.

Mr. Brown has served as budget officer of the school of architecture and allied arts for a number of years. He received his baccalaureate degree in 1916 and a baccalaureate degree in architecture in 1917 from the University and a master's degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1922. He has spent considerable time studying abroad, at one time on the C. R. B. Advanced Fellowship for Study in Belgium. He has been on the Oregon staff since 1922.

As acting dean he will fill the position left vacant by the February 27 death of Dean Ellis F. Lawrence.

Dr. George Redpath, president of the University dental school alumni association, who organized the alumni convention to be held in Portland, April 11-13. The convention will feature a talk by Dr. Harold B. Noyes, noted Chicago orthodontist, who will take over the deanship of the school on July 1.

Dental Alums Hold First Meeting Since 1942

Dr. George Redpath, president of the University dental school alumni association organized the alumni convention set for the dental school in Portland, April 11-13. Because of the war, the last convention was held in 1942. This year's final convention program includes lectures and clinics held each day of the meeting and fraternity and non-fraternity banquets, class reunion banquets and a final big banquet on the evening of the last day of the convention.

Dr. Harold B. Noyes, new dean of the dental school, who will officially take office on July 1, made early plans to come from Chicago to attend the alumni affair. He was designated the principal speaker at the closing banquet.

The following men headed various committees: program chairman, C. R. Kincaid; clinics, O. T. Howard; essays, Neal L. Zimmerman, '23, George Nygard; arrangements, C. H. Walrath; entertainment, A. G. Rossman; fraternity, M. R. Deiter; press, Wm. L. Barnum; class reunions, Bruce Southworth; alumni pool, Richard Keller; by-laws, H. C. Fixott; hotel reservations, Harold K. Isham and nominating chairman, O. T. Wherry.

Navy Honors James Mott

The pier area at the United States naval station, Tongue Point, Astoria, has been named by Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal as Mott basin in honor of the memory of the late Representative James W. Mott, '07, senior minority member of the house naval affairs committee at the time of his death.

Lt. Kenneth W. Cole, '38, is now on terminal leave after serving 47 months with the army. Twenty months of this time he spent overseas.

UO Fraternities Ban Traditional 'Hell Week'

"HELL Week," pre-initiation hazing period for pledges of fraternities, was abolished last month by vote of the interfraternity council.

The council's attitude parallels that of the national interfraternity council which recently passed a resolution against "Hell Week." The action on the part of the University group, however, was entirely voluntary, according to Dick Savinar, '48, council secretary-treasurer.

WHO OWNS THE BELL SYSTEM?

It belongs to people in all walks of life in cities, towns and villages throughout America.

The money comes from the savings of the many.

For only the many—that is, hundreds of thousands of small investors—have the money to own such a big business.

More than half of its 700,000 stockholders are women.

About one stockholder in thirteen is a telephone employee.

The average number of shares held per stockholder is 30. More than 210,000 stockholders own five shares or less.

No one owns as much as one-half of one per cent of its stock.

About one person in every 200 in the United States is a part owner of the Bell System.
