THIS AND THAT

By THE EDITOR

IF EVER a Homecoming committee set out with determination to give to returning alumni a royal time, this year's committee, headed by Jack Cate, certainly deserves the honor. Homecomings of the past have been pleasant affairs, but as the years went on alumni began to tire of the same things each fall—at least this is the view that Cate and his assistants have taken, and he has set out to alleviate this criticism and is doing an excellent job.

* * *

A NEW and novel experiment is being tried by the committee in the form of a rally parade. Instead of Homecoming signs and a noise parade, a gala procession of floats, which are already taxing campus ingenuity and firing competitive spirit among the living organizations, is in store. The parade promises to rival the historic canoe fete in interest, and bids well to take its place among honored Oregon traditions. Noise there will be—for after all it's a rally parade, but for originality in rally parades it ought to be a ringer.

SO MUCH for the festive spirit of the week-end. There is more serious business on hand. Nominations for new officers of the association will be made at the annual meeting Saturday morning. Aside from a report of the nominating committee, nominations will be in order from the floor. Alumni should consider carefully candidates for the positions to be filled, because beyond a doubt the alumni are just embarking on a spontaneous program of real and active service to their alma mater—a program that calls for leadership of the highest type.

* * *

"WHERE is the University headed?" Events have transpired with such machine-gun rapidity of recent years, that it is sometimes hard to sit back and discover where we really are headed. So the program committee has adopted the theme of this question as the idea for the alumni luncheon, to be held after the annual meeting Saturday. A member of the state board of higher education, of the associated students, of the U. of O. Federation and others will present their answers to this question at the luncheon in short concise speeches, and be through in ample time for alumni to settle down in the grandstand before the game starts.

* * *

The city of Eugene has issued an informal "challenge" to Portland alumni to send as many persons down to Homecoming as Eugene will send alumni and citizens to Portland for the Oregon State game.

MR. WILLIAM H. BURTON, '16

Who has attained national recognition as an educator and who is at present professor of education at the University of Southern California. Professor Burton has taught education at Washington State college, Minnesota State Teachers college, the University of Cincinnati, and the University of Chicago. In 1925 he was awarded the S. C. Rosenberger prize for the best research in elementary education. Aside from his teaching duties he is now engaged in several research projects and in the writing of a book. He is a member of several important educational commissions. During the past summer Mr. Burton was on the faculty of the University of Porto Rico summer school, and has promised to write an article for OLD OREGON on "Summer School on the Spanish Main."

"Back to Honor Oregon" Again

THE SPIRIT of the "new deal" in higher education—a spirit that has been markedly noticeable on the campus during the opening weeks of school—seems to have permeated the student directorate for Homecoming.

Out-moded features of the annual celebration have been willfully cast aside by Jack Cate, chairman, and his eight assistants, and in their place the directorate has substituted features and events that indicate that one of the liveliest, most interesting Homecomings in years is in store for returning alumni.

Not exactly abolished, but essentially changed have been the noise parade, the Homecoming sign contest, and the Frosh bonfire—all traditional features of past Homecomings. In their place the committee has decided to promote a huge rally parade, with floats, torches, noise and fireworks all combined, feeling that to consolidate the interests of the students on one main event rather than to divide their interests between three separate endeavors, would result in a Homecoming display that would rival any campus celebration of the past. Following this parade the campus journalists will hold open house at the annual Journalism Jamboree, reverting back to the old-time costume dance at the Igloo.

Assurance of a bigger-than-usual celebration this year is seen in the fact that Eugene alumni are taking a more active interest in plans than heretofore, and have pledged 100% attendance as near as possible.

Of special interest to alumni will be the annual meeting of the Alumni association to be held Saturday morning, November 4, at 10:30 o'clock in Guild theatre. Nominations for new officers of the association will be made at that time and a new constitution will be presented by the constitution committee appointed at the last commencement meeting last spring. The annual report of the Alumni Council will be unusually full, for many activities have been carried on the past year.

IMMEDIATELY following the annual meeting Saturday, alumni will gather at the John Straub Memorial building for the annual alumni luncheon. The campus luncheon of former years has been abolished by the student body, and the new affair is planned exclusively for alumni and faculty members. A short and snappy program is being planned.

Then comes the Homecoming game, beginning at 2 o'clock. Persons who have followed the Utah team this year predict that the Webfoots are going to be fooled if they think that this game is to be a "cinch." Utah is unquestionably the strongest team in the Rocky mountain conference and is coming to Oregon with gritted teeth and clenched fists in an attempt to show the coast conference a few things about football. Knowing dopesters say this game is no set-up for the Webfoots.

A series of "little Homecomings" will be held at fraternities and sororities after the game, when the campus living organizations will act as hosts to their respective alumni and alumnae.

"STRICTLY informal" is the edict of the Homecoming dance committee which is making elaborate plans for the annual dance. Several hundred Eugene alumni have signified their intention of attending this dance, as well as returning alumni. Paid-up memberships in the alumni association entitle alumni to free tickets to this affair.

Prizes have been provided for the men's and women's living organizations having the greatest number of alumni registered at Homecoming, and a determined effort on the part of the fraternities and sororities is being made to get their alumni members back to Eugene, as well as to get their Eugene members registered.

An hour of concert music Sunday afternoon is being planned for alumni who can stay over.

By MARIAN LOWRY FISCHER, '28

TO JOURNEY about the busy streets of Eugene is like attending a campus Homecoming, daily, there are so many Oregon alumni to greet with "hello." . . . Announcement was made recently of the appointment of Elma Hendricks, '03, as librarian at the Eugene public library. . . . Attending the Eugene Kiwanis club luncheon on Monday we noted among alumni, R. S. Bryson, '99, city recorder, and his son, Roy G. Bryson, '26, teacher of voice on the campus. William Bartle, '30, attorney, is also in the club.

Visiting Rotary the next day, we found Oregon's Dean "Jimmy" Gilbert, '03, an officer and active worker in the organization, and as his "Rotary Brothers," J. W. McArthur, '08, Eugene's water board superintendent; another Oregon dean, Karl W. Onthank, '13; T. I. "Nish" Chapman, '21, who is in the printing business here; Richard P. Dixon, '25, who is in the heating business in Eugene; John W. Anderson, '23, managing editor of the Eugene Morning News.

At the Lions club luncheon the next day, among others were Wayne Akers, '22, a teller at the First National bank; L. L. Ray, '12, an attorney, and Sam Lehman, ex-'21, an appraiser, both with the Eugene office of the Home Owners Loan Bank corporation.

THEN on Thursday at the Active club's meeting we saw Wade Kerr, ex-'23, who is in the used car business in Eugene; Dr. W. E. Buchanan Jr., ex-'25, local dentist; and Keith Fennell, ex-'28, who recently went into the drug store business here.

Graham B. Smith, ex-'19, is one of Eugene's prominent architects. . . . Earl Ludford, ex-'23, is in the paint store business with his father. . . . Among the younger alumni in the law profession, we find Frank Reid, '28, Eugene V. Slattery, '26, William G. East, '32, John Bryson, '26, who is deputy district attorney in Lane county.

The newspaper profession claims many former Oregon students. At the Register-Guard office is Walter J. Coover, ex-'25; Sidney A. King, '31; Grace Taylor, '28; Robert K. Bertsch, ex-'29; Harry Schenk, '33; Robert M. Fischer Jr., ex-'30; George Harrington, '32; and George Brimlow, '33.

As society editor for the Eugene Register-Guard, this month's Rambling Reporter probably knows more about the alumni of Eugene than any other individual, and she packs her article with a record number of names.

Just across the aisle from my desk is Betty Anne Macduff, '33, who "covers" Springfield for the paper. At the Morning News, besides John W. Anderson, '23, you will find Fred Guyon, ex-'23, Helen Reynolds Wadleigh, '27, Margaret Bean, ex-'33, Juanita Hines, ex-'29, Josephine Stofiel, '31, Gertrude Koke, '29, Ruth Gaunt, ex-'32, Richard C. Horn, '31, business manager.

AMONG Eugene authors is Dorothy Cox Hesse (Mrs. J. L. Hesse), ex-'22, who has been selling stories steadily although busy with social and civic interests and home where there are two children, John and Virginia. . . . One of Eugene's well known fuel companies is owned by three prominent Oregon alumni, C. A. "Shy" Huntington, '24, Lawrence W. "Pink" Manerud, ex-'23, and C. R. "Skeet" Manerud, ex-'22. "Shy" is very busy these days as one of Lane county's representatives in the legislature and one of the leaders in devising plans for tax relief at the approaching legislative session.

President of the Lane County Pioneers' association is Miss Anne Whiteaker, '81, while the secretary is Judge E. O. Potter, '87. . . . Looking over women's activities of the city, we find Ella Travis Edmunson, '03, serving as one of the committee heads in the local NRA group, and her daughter, Margaret Edmunson Norton, '30, secretary of the campus Y. W. C. A.; Pauline Wheeler Spencer (Mrs. Carlton E. Spencer), '20, president of the Welfare league; Elizabeth G. Bryson (Mrs. R. S. Bryson), '99, president of the State Association of University of Oregon Women as well as being deputy county clerk; Elise Schroeder, '30, a national committee woman with the Young Democrats' organization (having just returned from the national convention of the group in the Mid-West); Jennie Beattie Harris (Mrs. Lawrence T. Harris), '96, Bertha Comings, '10, and Edith Kerns Chambers (Mrs. Frank L. Chambers), '95, all active workers and officers in the State Association of University of Oregon Women; Mary E. McCornack, '82, teacher in music and an active member of the local Music Teachers' association.

J. Frank Reinhart, ex-'27, is on the staff of the DeNeff's store here. He and Mrs. Reinhart (Mary West, ex-'27), have two sons. . . . After spending some time on the Register-Guard as sports editor, Roy D. Craft, ex-'33, is now with the district headquarters office of the civilian conservation corps and you address him as Lieutenant Craft. . . . Ramey Rugh, ex-'24, is in the real estate business in Eugene.

Albert Applegate, ex-'05, continues to own and operate one of Eugene's big furniture stores. In the Applegate home now are two sons and a daughter. . . . Among alumni in the insurance business we find James G. Harding, '27, and Floyd Westerfield, ex-'17. . . . Belden Babb, ex-'28, is in the hardware business with his father. . . . Among those with the local banks we find Lynn S. McCready, '20, assistant cashier at the First National bank; Walter Banks, ex-'20, teller, First National bank, and William W. Porter, '23, teller at the United States National bank. . . . A very busy man these days is Edward F. Bailey, '13, manager of the Eugene branch of the Home Owners Loan Bank corporation, in addition to continuing in the practice of law and taking in Oregon's football games.

DAVID M. GRAHAM, '05, in addition to owning the oldest shoe store in Eugene, continues to be one of the most active of Oregon's alumni. He and Mrs. Graham (Mildred Bagley), '12, have two children, Billy and Anne Linden. . . . Beatrice Milligan, '30, Evelyn Hollis, '30, Maxine Lamb, '26, are among those teaching school in Eugene. . . . Grace Williams Gordon (Mrs. Harry F. Gordon), ex-'20, is living in Eugene now, her husband operating a women's wear shop here.

Vivian Harper Pitman (Mrs. Philip Pitman), '26, is among alumnae living in Eugene, her husband being on the state police force. . . . Henry-Etta La Moree Moon (Mrs. Francis T. Moon), '31, moved to Eugene from Portland to live following her marriage to Mr. Moon, '32.

Football Season, 1933, at the Crossroads

With two or three potential all-Americans in the field, and the Huskies safely tucked away, Webfoot grid history is now in the making. O. S. C. and the Trojans will be major threats and Utah and UCLA look ominous.

By JACK BAUER, '32

"WELL," said the old lineman through his broken nose, "we should whip Oregon State and score on the almighty Trojans this year."

Which is leaving the Ucla Bruins and Utah to take care of themselves, and makes no mention of the bulky Gaels, Coach Prink Callison's Thanksgiving turkey meat.

But the old lineman, who sacrificed his Grecian profile for the glory of Oregon many years ago, has a keen eye to probabilities.

While Oregon moves on against her opponents, the "Mikulak for all-American" club gathers supporters throughout the Northwest. For Iron Mike turned in the game of games against Jimmy Phelan's vaunted Huskies at Seattle. And Co-captain Mark Temple, his head swathed like a story-book sultan's, drove his mates to the most stirring triumph in many seasons. For the first time in recent history, an Oregon team loosed a sustained offensive that would not be denied a scoring finish.

Coach Callison has been building just such an offensive since the first night of the season, when the Webfoots scored 40 points on 38 plays in 30 minutes, against Linfield college.

Co-captain
Bernie Hughes, center

Four times the battered Gonzaga Bulldogs stopped that thrust, that surge of power, at Spokane. But twice they failed, and twice Oregon scored.

Five times an inspired Columbia university eleven stopped Oregon drives. Then Callison unwrapped Maury Van Vliet, who will succeed Mark Temple in the backfield next year. With a peculiar halting stride, Van Vliet skirted the ends and slithered through tackle and over the line.

Oregonians sighed with relief — then gasped, for Murel Nehl, as accomplished a young man as ever fought against our Ducks, started throwing passes. There seemed no way to stop him. The fourth toss was across the goal line and into the arms of a Cliffdweller.

That moment was the turning point of the 1933 season for the Oregon football team.

Pepper Pepelnjak returned the kickoff to the Oregon 34-yard line. Van Vliet dove into the line for two yards. Mikulak crashed to a first down through center. And Van Vliet stepped through a hole made by Butch Morse and Alex Eagle, dodged two tacklers, outran three, and scored on a 56-yard run. That meagre 14 to 7 victory awoke the Webfoots, as well as a defeat might have done.

OREGON FIGHT!

The 1933 football season presents a problem to Coach Callison and his squad of Lemon and Yellow warriors that has not had an equal in years. Oregon has the material for a coast championship team. It has the coach to do the job (that was proved by the Washington game). The Trojans have been proved vulnerable by under-rated O. S. C. Yet Oregon faces both these teams within a week. Highly touted are Utah and UCLA and St. Mary's is always a bug-a-boo. Can Oregon ride through the remainder of its schedule unscathed? Great games are won by inspired football — such as was displayed against Washington. The problem faced by the Webfoots is: "Can 'Oregon Fight' (and you grads know what that means) carry Oregon through the season?" Here's to the Webfoots, may they show the world what real fight is!

Though the Webfoots gained 355 yards to Columbia's 125, it was the missing something in the Oregon attack that stirred Callison's players. The scare deflated them, put them in a fighting frame of mind for Washington and the balance of the schedule.

The story of the Webfoots' resounding victory over the Huskies will echo in the dens of Oregon grads for many years. The game brought the "Mikulak for all-American" club into activity; it demonstrated the highest courage of the year — Mark Temple, bloody and bruised, directing a slashing, battering, bewildering offensive.

Through a dismal first half, the Webfoots appeared doomed. It was only Prince Gary Callison's way of beating down a confident assault. It was his way of testing the real defensive greatness of Mike Mikulak, Bree Cuppoletti, Butch Morse and Bernie Hughes. Gardner Frye had changed over from guard to tackle in five days, to fill the gaping hole Biff Nilsson's knee injury had caused. That first half played entirely on the defensive tested these men, wound up steel springs of desire for victory. And wasted Husky stamina.

Not a single first down did the Ducks make until the middle of the third quarter. Not once did they take the ball on Washington turf until Ahonen's quick kick went out of bounds on his own 45-yard line.

That was the release, the signal for the attack. Little Bob Parke, whose fine kicking had kept Oregon out of serious trouble, made nine yards. Mikulak made an Oregon first down. Every man perked up. Temple passed for another first down. Gee made a splendid run for 13 yards. Temple and Mikulak carried the ball to yet another first down. Battering his way to the goal line, Mikulak fumbled a high pass from center. Washington recovered the ball. It was not Mikulak's fault. It was not Hughes' fault. Bernie Hughes had already played most of the game with a wrenched thumb! And it was his first bad pass!

Mikulak really got mad. He wanted to score—and his teammates wanted him to score. And 40,000 spectators wanted him to score.

Ahonen kicked out from behind his goal. Temple returned the ball 17 yards, to the Husky 23-yard line. And the drive began again, to end with Iron Mike crashing victorious through the entire Husky forward wall.

A third great thrust found Oregon on the Washington 11-yard line as the game ended.

Callison has begun to come into his own at Oregon. His players are only now beginning to grasp the spirit of winning football, which is Callison football.

Idaho, in spite of vast improvement over previous years, was no obstacle. Strong on defense as they were in previous games, polished in running and passing attacks, and just as determined to win, Oregon subdued the Vandals by a score of 19 to 0.

Board Elects New Appointees to Office

WITHOUT a dissenting vote, the eight members present at the October 16 meeting of the state board of higher education elected Roscoe C. Nelson, Portland attorney, to the presidency, to succeed C. L. Starr, resigned. The other new member on the board, Willard Marks, was elected to the vice-presidency, left vacant by the resignation of C. C. Colt.

The acceptance speech of the new president, which was unanimously adopted by the board as a statement of policy, was heralded throughout the state as an indication of the new spirit that is beginning to permeate higher educational affairs, and was looked upon by all concerned as distinctly fair and encouraging.

Mr. Nelson's statement follows:

"I have neither preconceptions or prejudices which should give concern to any except those who plan the dictates of partisanship or the persistence of vendettas above the statewide institution which we are to serve. The articles of my creed are brief and readily comprehensible:

"1—The people of the state have dowered the board with plenary power in the future of higher education and the board must honorably and courageously execute this sacred and important trust.

"2—In the exercise of that trust the board has selected a chancellor who is the board's chosen and trusted chief advisory officer. The board has the right to ask, and as far as I am concerned, will demand a full and unequivocal loyalty from those who in turn serve under the chancellor's directions. This does not involve the loss of cherished academic freedom, it does suggested, there should be inter-institutional councils in which the chancellor's presence and participation should promote understanding and mutual confidence. The scope and contents of their proceedings should be constructive and helpful and should leave no room for the type of devious undermining and sapping which endangers the successful operation of a sane and wholesome system created by the will of the people of the state.

"Intelligent and fairminded men will recognize that this does not involve subservience to the personality or identity of any specific chancellor who may hold office tenure, but it does mean that the board regards the subtle negation of his efforts, attempts to weaken, minimize and hamper his efficiency, as inevitably tending to defeat achievement of the purposes of the board which is responsible for him and to which he is responsible.

"Unreasonable and irrevocable feudists should, accordingly, be relegated to a theater of combat beyond the walls of state institutions, whose permanency and growth is a matter of such grave concern to the commonwealth."

not limit or abolish open and fair discussion; but it eliminates subversive tactics.

New Building Projects Progress

By BETTY ANNE MACDUFF, '33

IF NOT by Homecoming this year, by at least a week or ten days later, announcement will have been made by federal public works officials as to whether the Public Works Administration has accepted the request of the state board of higher education for a $350,000 library and $100,000 infirmary for the University of Oregon.

In event that approval is given the projects (and every indication is given that such will be the case) it will be a matter of only a few days before ground will be broken and actual construction commenced. Complete plans for the infirmary are already in the hands of the Oregon public works advisory committee, and except for a few changes in the proposed library, plans are complete for that project also, and will be turned over to the committee within a few days.

The fact that final and complete plans are available for both projects gives to the state board's request much weight, as PWA officials are anxious to get as many projects under way as soon as possible.

A DEFINITE site for the library has not yet been chosen. However, two locations are proposed; (1) Between Condon and Johnson halls on Thirteenth street. (2) On the east side of Kincaid street near Fifteenth. The building committee of the state board of higher education was given power to select the site and approve final plans. The northeast corner of Fourteenth and University streets has long been singled out for the infirmary.

Final approval by Public Works Administration on proposed new library and infirmary for University expected soon. Plans for both projects are near completion and work will start immediately upon receiving final okay.

Of the money which the University is asking as a loan from the government, 30 per cent will be an outright gift, and the remaining 70 per cent will be repaid over a period of years by the institution.

THE TWO new buildings, if constructed, will fill long-felt needs on the campus. The capacity of the main library is 150,000 volumes, necessitating scattering some 90,000 other books in four or five other libraries on the campus. The "old libe" was built in 1907, and seven years later an addition had to be made to house the growing number of books.

The inadequacy of the present infirmary has long been felt. Thirteen beds are provided and the infirmary itself is merely an old house unsuited to the use to which it is being put. During one influenza epidemic 50 patients were cared for in the infirmary and an annex, and even then all who were sick did not receive medical attention.

Leaders in the drive for a new infirmary have been the Oregon Mothers, whose activities toward this goal have been tireless over a period of several years.

The library when completed will be one of the finest buildings on the campus. It is to be in the same architectural style as Gerlinger hall, Commerce and Oregon buildings. The main section of the building will be flanked by two one-story wings. The rest of the structure probably will be two stories, although the plans allow for a third story to be added later.

On the main floor of the library will be ample reserve reading rooms, a large reading room for magazines and reference volumes, a generous lobby which provides for later expansion, and a browsing room. The browsing room is one of the most modern features of the proposed building, and is in line with the best university libraries in the country. In this room, which will extend across the front of the structure, will be placed books of many kinds and on varied subjects. The room will be intended primarily for recreational reading—in fact, in some university libraries students are not allowed to study in the browsing room at all. The volumes in this room will be changed from time to time, as the interests of its users vary.

ALL freshmen and sophomores would use the first floor of the proposed library exclusively, while on the second story are rooms intended for the use of the upper division and graduate students. Here will be reserve reading rooms, several seminar rooms for small advanced classes and classrooms for library courses.

The third floor which probably will be added later, is to the librarian and academician probably the most interesting, for it is intended solely for the use of graduate students and professors doing research work. Graduate reading room and several individual studies would be included on this floor.

Architects' preliminary drawing of the proposed new University library for which the state board is applying to the public works administration for funds.

In the basement would be the newspaper reading room, stack room, and small rooms for blind students and their readers. Five other levels of stacks are provided in the plans. In each level there are small "stalls" for graduate students who wish to do their work undisturbed by the coming and going of the reading rooms and close to the books they need in their studying.

The proposed library would house 442,420 volumes, and would have a working capacity of 365,360 volumes.

It would bring all of the reserve libraries together under one roof, and would simplify the administration of the libraries. It is pointed out that the actual staff of the new library would not have to be increased over the force now employed.

The proposed infirmary will include dispensary facilities as well as the "hospital" unit. The present dispensary is now in a small one-story building over a block from the infirmary.

The hospital unit of the proposed building will have rooms for about 45 beds, or approximately two for every 100 students in the University. The architects, Lawrence, Holford, Allyn and Bean of Portland, who also drew up the library plans, have suggested that the second floor of the unit be used only when epidemics send an unusually large number of students to the infirmary.

The first floor would include seven two-bed wards and three four-bed wards, with five bathrooms, a kitchen, dining room, store-room, property and linen rooms, a nurses' station, and dressing room.

The second floor would have two large wards containing 18 beds altogether, one ward with four beds, and three single-bed wards for the isolation of patients with infectious diseases.

The dispensary unit of the proposed building would include waiting rooms, nurses treatment and work room, hydrotherapy and electrotherapy rooms, laboratory and X-ray unit, surgery-minor, and offices for staff physicians.

Oregon Dads Hear Memorable Speeches

PROBABLY the most significant and certainly the most successful Dad's Day since the custom was started seven years ago by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, came to a close on the campus Saturday evening, October 21, with the annual banquet in John Straub Memorial building.

Sons, daughters, dads and faculty members completely filled the banquet hall of the dormitory, where two significant speeches were presented, one by Mrs. Cornelia Marvin Pierce, member of the state board of higher education, and the other by Dean Wayne L. Morse of the University school of law.

Fathers of Oregon students were called upon by Dean Morse to aid faculties, administrators and students throughout the country to restore universities to their original place as "a congregation of scholars and students organized for teaching and study in the higher branches of learning."

Politics in higher education, over-emphasis of student activities and what he termed the "industrial plant" system of organization of colleges and universities were soundly scored by the dean in his frank and vigorous address.

Declaring that "mass production" in education has brought about a serious evil—politics in education—Dean Morse said, "Fat budgets, extensive plants, large congregated economic groups of students and faculty have been juicy fillings for political pies. If those finest scholastic traditions of university training and culture are to be preserved, politics, and all the nefarious practices that go along with it, must be kicked out of higher education. We must protest the practice of small groups of city and state politicians proposing to speak for a university and its faculty and students.

"A university is not a factory or a department store and cannot be organized as such and retain the characteristics of a university. A true university does not consist of a general manager, a superintendent, a general foreman and a host of assistant foremen, and then a large body of faculty employees. The conception that faculty men and women are mere employes must not go unchallenged, because that conception is devastating to faculty morale."

Dean Morse pointed out that the legislative act of 1872 entrusted the faculty of the university, consisting of the president and professors, with the immediate government and discipline of the university and was empowered to recommend to the board of directors a course of study.

Quoting the statement made recently by Roscoe Nelson, new appointee of the state board of higher education, and which was adopted as a policy of the board, Dean Morse declared, "If I interpret that language correctly we are about to enter upon a new era in higher education in this state, an era in which the board is going to do something it has not done enough of—namely, recognize that if a university is to execute its functions properly and to the best interest of the state, academic freedom must be preserved and the views of faculties on educational matters as well as those of the administration must be taken into account.

"Open and fair discussion on matters of educational policies and principles participated in jointly by the board, the

Intramural Sports at Oregon

A comparatively new idea in supervised physical education is the Intramural athletic program as it is conducted on the Oregon campus. In this article the director tells how it operates at the University.

By PAUL R. WASHKE
Professor of Physical Education

THOUGH the primary interest of the faculty of the school of physical education is the teaching program, another valuable endeavor is made—namely, intramural athletics.

Realizing that only a small percentage of male students receive the benefits of intercollegiate athletic participation and being also aware of the fact that the general upper-classmen are not required to study physical education activity courses, the University has seen fit to foster and promote an extensive intramural sports program, conducted by the department of physical education for men in co-operation with the department of athletics. This program is designed exclusively for the rank and file of students who desire to participate in competitive athletics, but who are unable to "make" a varsity team or squad.

Each year competition is held between living organizations and individuals. Each organization participating in the intramural program is required to appoint a representative who acts for that group at all intramural meetings. Rules for participation and dates of the various contests are distributed at the initial meeting of the intramural representatives in the fall, and are always available at the physical education office.

The school of physical education believes that there should be somewhere a place for every man to engage in some form of sports and it has an earnest desire to extend its facilities as rapidly as possible so that every student can find a recreational activity in which he is interested and desires to play. A real intramural sports participation is one outcome of a successful university physical education program for men.

Where many engage in any activity some rules are necessary in order that all may compete on an equal footing. A Handbook of Intramural Sports sets forth the regulations for carrying out such a program, not with any idea of curtailment of activity, or of limitation of events, but that all may enter these contests with the expectation of the maximum of pleasure and uniform eligibilities.

All men students regularly enrolled in any department or school of the University automatically become eligible to enjoy and participate in all the tournaments, contests, and events that are promoted. That status of eligibility is retained until a student withdraws from the University or when he fails to comply with the special rules of eligibility which are set down in the annual Handbook of Intramural Sports.

A Modern Sports Program

THE MODERN university sports program for men may be properly considered as being composed of three component parts, namely: 1. required physical education or service courses, 2. intercollegiate athletics, and 3. intramural sports.

Intercollegiate athletics at the University of Oregon are governed by the Associated Students' organization. With the guiding influence of such men as Graduate Manager Hugh E. Rosson, Professor Herbert C. Howe, chairman of the Faculty Athletic committee, and others, this phase of athletics at Oregon bids fair to achieve its just place in the educational picture.

The required physical education service course set-up is a teaching program. During the freshman and sophomore years a regular class-man is taught a wide variety of activities such as: field hockey, handball, basketball, volleyball, boxing, wrestling, swimming, running, and several more. The effort is made to have a definite teacher-pupil contact at all times, with the instructor illustrating technique of the game, teaching principles of behavior, pointing out the history and place of the specific activity in modern life, etc. Furthermore, hygienic facts and health attitudes are fostered during the course of the activities' instruction. A student is allowed to elect any activity he wishes during any term, but he must make his selection so that at the end of his sophomore year he will have completed a standard swimming test; study of three sports concentrating on one sport for at least two terms; and six terms of actual participation.

The third point of this three-point athletic program is fully described in the accompanying article by Paul R. Washke, head of intramural athletics at the University.

departmental promotion and also student voice in the conduct of the program.

At present there are 15 sports on the intramural program; there is a possibility of adding a few more sports in the near future if the demand, time, and space are available.

The total entry list for the past year, 1932-33, came to 800 students. The average number of men on the campus for the three terms of 1932-33 was 1,280. Thus 62% of the men on the campus participated.

The past year has seen an increase of 12% in participation, 800 men having participated 1,714 times in the 15 different sports; that is 800 men participated in two or more sports. These same 800 men participated 2,281 times in 24 tournaments; that is, 800 men participated nine or more times during these tournaments.

This would indicate that a large number of these men were all-around in their physical abilities and interests.

Besides the directly supervised activities mentioned before for each season, there are many sports and impromptu games which are directly or indirectly stimulated by the formally organized intramural program. The better teams in the various sports usually hold many practices and unscheduled games in addition to their regular schedule of contests. Challenge contests between different groups are frequent and for these the department furnishes officials and equipment whenever requested.

Statistics are kept of the participants in each of the organized activities of the department, but it is impossible to estimate accurately how many more are influenced less directly by the program. More students are taking part in intramural activities at present than at any time since the formation of the department.

The department of physical education for men feels that promotion and the proper functioning of both required physical education courses and voluntary intramural sports is proper and justifiable toward attaining that educationally potent slogan of "athletics for all."

ON AND ABOUT THE CAMPUS

UNIVERSITY faculty members who during the summer spent their time in research and writing, are now receiving copies of their published works. Several books, and many magazine articles have appeared on the campus during the last month as evidence of the work of the University people during the summer.

Moll Writes New Book

Based on the theory that anyone can be taught appreciation of poetry, rather than the few who are literary or poetic minded, a new volume on appreciation of poetry, the result of methods discovered during his career as a poet and teacher, has been completed here by Dr. Ernest G. Moll, assistant professor of English. The book is the result of study in a special class sponsored on the campus by the Carnegie corporation of New York.

Jameson Writings Appear

The July-August issue of the Sociology and Social Research magazine contained an article written by Prof. Samuel H. Jameson, of the University's school of social science, and his wife, Mrs. Armen Jameson. The article entitled "Musical Therapy in Social Control" pointed out and gave illustrations of ways in which music influences man's actions and suggested that music might be made to play an increasingly important part in man's life.

Williamson Article Printed

An article entitled "The Restoration Against Enthusiasm" was printed in the October issue of Studies in Philology, one of the outstanding American journals devoted to the study of literature. Dr. George Williamson, assistant professor in the English department of the University, is the author of the article. Dr. Williamson returned to the University this year after a two years' leave of absence, part of which he spent on a Guggenheim fellowship in Europe.

Cloran Named Editor

Timothy Cloran of the University Romance languages department has been appointed one of the two consulting editors of Italica, a quarterly bulletin of the American Association of Teachers of Italian. The bulletin is published at the University of Illinois.

Morse Named Delegate

Dean Wayne L. Morse of the law school has been elected the University's representative to the summer conference serves as a coordinating agent for inter-institutional research programs.

Journalism Budget Enlarged

An increase of $500 to the budget of the school of journalism was voted at a recent meeting of the state board of higher education. The addition to the budget was made necessary by an increase in enrollment in the school this year, necessitating the addition of a part-time instructor.

Registration Figure Given

Registration at the University is 2,113 students for the fall term, it has been announced. This is a decrease of 7.2% from last year. The figure for the entire system was given as 5,502 as compared to 6,104 last year. At the State College 1,945 were registered, a decrease of 13%. An increase from 1,375 to 1,639 was reported in extension classes.

Daly Fund Helps Eleven

There are 11 students in attendance at the University this year as beneficiaries of the Daly fund, provided by the late Dr. Bernard Daly of Lakeview. The fund is used to help pay the expenses of worthy students, both men and women, from Lake county, Oregon.

Lawrence Attends Conclave

E. F. Lawrence, dean of the school of allied arts and architecture, left recently for Chicago to attend the meeting of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture, of which he is president. The purpose of the conference is to develop a plan for the preparation of young architects to practice from the time of graduation to the period when they have taken their state examination.

Morris Heads Commission

Dr. Victor P. Morris of the University economics department has been named as chairman of an educational commission on the finances and organization of the elementary and high school system of Oregon by Governor Julius Meier. The commission was created by the 1933 legislature to make a report at the 1935 session.

Comish Author of Book

Dr. N. H. Comish, professor of business administration, is preparing for publication a book on the marketing of manufactured goods. Professor Comish spent the summer in gathering material for the book. It is the third textbook he has written, the other two being: "The Standard of Living" and "The Cooperative Marketing of Agricultural Products."

Dr. Norris Named Fellow

Dr. Will V. Norris, head of the department of physics at the University, has been named a fellow in the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The honor was conferred for outstanding research work and contributions in the field of teaching. The society is regarded as the leading one in its field in the United States.

Dr. Lewis Returns to Campus

Dr. Leslie L. Lewis of the University English department faculty has returned to the campus after leave of two years, spent in research and travel. He took advanced work at Cornell university for a year and then went to England where he pursued his studies of the life and works of George Robert Gissing, famous English novelist. A major part of his time in England was spent in the British museum, where he found valuable material on the life of Gissing.

administration and the faculties will raise morale, increase professional incentive, re-establish academic pride and result in a university which can truly boast 'We train men and women to raise above the ranks.'

Mrs. Pierce called upon the Oregon

Dads to carefully study the problems of higher education, and assured them that as one member of the board she would heartily welcome carefully thought out suggestions and criticisms of the policies of the board. She further presented some vital questions that the board must eventually decide, and urged the public study of these problems. Among these problems was the possible reasons for the decline in student enrollment, the advisability of offering highly developed specialized schools while teachers' training is confined to two years, and the part the press of the state has played in the present problems confronting higher education.

Mrs. Pierce urged co-operation and understanding among the various groups and factions involved in education.

W. Lair Thompson of Portland was again elected president of the Oregon Dads at the annual meeting held Saturday morning. This will be the third successive year Thompson has held this office. Other officers elected were J. Roy Raley, Pendleton, vice-president; Earle Wellington, Portland, secretary, and Merle R. Chessman, Astoria; Arthur L. Fields, Walter M. Cook, Rev. John W. Beard of Portland, and Thomas H. Tongue, Hillsboro, members of the executive committee.

The dads also amended their constitution so that "once an Oregon Dad, always an Oregon Dad," and members henceforth will not become inactive when their son or daughter graduates.

Alumni Represented in New Federation

FORMAL announcement was made at the annual Dad's Day banquet this year of a new organization that has taken the field in the interests of the University of Oregon and higher education.

The new body, composed of representatives of five organizations, all closely associated with the University and representing a combined membership of some twenty or thirty thousand citizens of the state, is to be known as the University of Oregon Federation, and is designed to "represent the common interests of the Alumni Association of the University of Oregon, the Associated Friends of the University, the Oregon Dads, the Oregon Mothers, and Affiliated Living Groups, and to promote the interests and increase the usefulness of the University of Oregon."

Not consolidation but federation of the five participating organizations is the object of the group, which was formally organized with the adoption of a constitution and election of officers at a meeting held October 21. The Federation pledges itself not to promote any activity that is inconsistent with the policy of any one organization and encourages the active identity of each of the five member-bodies.

Officers of the new group are: Earle Wellington, Oregon dad from Portland, president; Lynn McCready, Eugene alumnus, vice-president; and Robert Allen, alumni secretary and a non-voting member of the board, temporary secretary. Other members of the board of directors are: Mrs. Walter Cook, Oregon mother from Portland; Dr. I. R. Fox, Eugene, president of the Associated Friends; and Jack Cate, Portland, president of the board of governors of the Affiliated Living Groups.

In the federation of these five groups is seen a greater opportunity for friends of the University to associate themselves together as a unit in promoting the cause of higher education. At the initial meeting Saturday it was pointed out that the Federation supplies the need for a unified body to which the state board of higher education or administrative officials of the University may appeal for support or counsel and pledged itself to support of the state system of higher education.

Appointment of Mr. McCready as alumni representative was made at a recent joint meeting of the Alumni Welfare committee and the Alumni Council.

THE FAMILY MAIL

To the Editor:

First, and perhaps to you the most important item of this letter, find my check for a coupla bucks, to wit, renew my subscription to OLD OREGON. Just received a fresh copy this morning of the August-September issue so work around the shop is being held up until I look it over. Glad to see the magazine back again after its threatened demise. I imagine most of us old (and growing older) alumni are all the more appreciative. Peculiar thing, the longer we're removed from the old college atmosphere the more important OLD OREGON becomes, the deeper the niche it fills. This morning on a restaurant counter I opened OLD OREGON and between hotcakes and ham I started to look it over. A transient gentleman to my left, having a breakfast of roll and coffee, looking out of tune with prosperity, asked me to see it. My breakfast was prolonged an extra 20 minutes but I didn't mind, so evident was the interest of my restaurant companion. Finally he finished, pushed OLD OREGON down the counter to me, crunched an old slouch hat down over unkempt hair, threw his frayed coat over his arm, started to walk out, then turned and with a quizzical and slightly bitter smile said, "You'd hardly suspect it, but I spent five years at that school." He hesitated, started to say something, apparently thought the better of it, then added, "It's a great life, eh, thank God some of us are endowed with a sense of humor." I would liked to have asked him his name, but somehow I felt he'd rather not. At any rate, he enjoyed OLD OREGON for a few minutes.

Harry Dutton, '28,

To the Editor:

I am herewith enclosing my check for five dollars for a three year renewal to OLD OREGON.

It was a great pleasure to me when the change back to the old form of publishing was made. Although smaller than formerly, it is nevertheless just as interesting and as eagerly looked forward to as formerly.

As yet I am chief surgeon for a gold mine in Ecuador, where I have been for the last four years. The mines are located in Portobelo in the province of El Oro, however our mail is received through Guayaquil. Means of travel are rather primitive as yet. In order to go to Guayaquil we must travel eight or nine hours by mule, four hours on a narrow gauge railroad, and an overnight trip on a small river boat. However, our opportunities for going out of camp on such a trip are so few that we do not mind the temporary inconveniences experienced.

Even though we are in a gold mining camp, nevertheless we have experienced some effects of the depression, or "la crisis" as the Ecuadorians call it. Fortunately there is little reason for any one starving to death in the tropics because of the abundance of food, which, of course, is not always of the most palatable variety.

R. E. Poston, M.D. '27,
Portobelo El Oro, Ecuador.

To the Editor:

After leaving summer school at Eugene this summer and before my school opened here at Orange high school quite a bit of important history has been written in my life's book. On August 12, Frances Lucher, ex-'27, became Mrs. Kenneth Baer.

Heading south from Walla Walla after the ceremony, we stopped at San Francisco a few days, and then went to Los Angeles, where we boarded the S. S. Antigua for a 17-day excursion voyage and honeymoon. Our first stop was Panama, where we saw the canal and the points of interest near there. On our way back we stopped at a banana and sugar cane plantation. We landed at Los Angeles a few days before the opening of school in Orange and fortunately had the good luck to find a comfortable home completely furnished, with two orange trees in the back yard, a cactus garden, and palm trees in front.

Orange, California.

To the Editor:

Enclosed please find my two dollars. That moratorium idea was a God-send to me. I went to library school at the University of Washington last winter, and after purchasing my diploma, there was nothing left for OLD OREGON.

Now I am working in the library department at J. K. Gill's here in Portland, and OLD OREGON is an important item in my budget.

I like your magazine—there's always interesting material—articles as well as the wealth of personal material you manage to include each month.
