the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation, 1999). The prevalence of mental health problems has increased in all age groups, but the increase has been most marked in the young (Mental Health Foundation, 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the mental health needs of young people (Mental Health Foundation, 1999). The National Institute for Mental Health (NIMH) in the USA has estimated that 10% of the population under the age of 18 has a mental health problem (NIMH, 1999). In the UK, the prevalence of mental health problems in young people is estimated to be 12% (Mental Health Foundation, 1999).

The Mental Health Foundation (1999) has identified a number of factors which are thought to be associated with the development of mental health problems in young people. These include: genetic factors, environmental factors, and psychological factors. The Foundation also identifies a number of risk factors for the development of mental health problems in young people. These include: family factors, social factors, and individual factors.

The Mental Health Foundation (1999) also identifies a number of protective factors for the development of mental health problems in young people. These include: family factors, social factors, and individual factors. The Foundation also identifies a number of risk factors for the development of mental health problems in young people.
