Dear Elmer Fansett:

An item which may interest you for the magazine is that Art Roseborough, '24, Sigma Chi, member of a leading law firm in Paris, and I (Arthur Rudd, '24) were guests recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jay C. Allen in New York. Jay came down from Washington State to Oregon. He married Ruth Austin, '22, Kappa Kappa Gamma, and after an exciting career as a foreign correspondent is now lecturing and conducting a course at the New School of Social Research.

Roseborough, by the way, flew over on the Clipper for a short stay and intends to live in Paris despite the war.

Keith Kiggins, ex-'19, Phi Gamma Delta, has been made head of the Blue Radio network.

My best to the gang.

Art Rudd, '24.

Alumni Secretary:

Here are a couple of clippings regarding Oregon people which might interest you. Vivien Kellems was in the class of 1918 and Lila Bell Acheson was in the class of 1917. (Stories pages 10 and 11.)

The Oregon basketball team made a great hit in New York and have already been invited to come back next year. I am very proud of Hobson and the clean-cut aggregation which he brings each year.

Wayne Morse wrote this week inviting me to lecture in his law school next summer. I am hoping to accept this invitation.

Please express my appreciation and that of my secretary to your office staff for the continuous cooperation they give us.

Yours sincerely,

John M. MacGregor, '23.

(Ed.: John M. MacGregor, "bell ringer" for Oregon Alumni chapter in Manhattan, has recently accepted Dean Wayne L. Morse's invitation to lecture in Eugene next summer. Cleveland, Ohio.

Dear Editor:

Thomas J. Fuson, Jr., of Medford is attending the school of medicine at Western Reserve university, Cleveland, Ohio. Fuson is also from the class of '38, a member of Chi Psi and Nu Sigma Nu.

Maurice N. Manning, '38, and his wife live at New Haven, Conn. while he attends the school of medicine at Yale. Manning is in his second year of medicine, a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Nu Sigma Nu. Bart Briggs, '32, and his wife (Marguerite Hunt, '31, Delta Delta Delta) are living in Boston, Mass. where Briggs is in his junior year of medicine at Boston university. He is a Sigma Nu.

Very truly yours,

Robert D. Fulton, '38.

Dear Mr. Fansett:

Received your card, filled it out and have sent it in to you some time ago.

Have wanted to write sooner but have been too busy. Would appreciate it very much if you would send me the back issues of OLD OREGON that I have missed this fall.

I am in Panama working for the Commissary Division, Panama Railroad, Commissary Assistant. Enjoy my work very much, it is all so new and different from what it was in New York last year. Have about sixty blacks working for me instead of about twenty white people to do the same work. Very interesting and I enjoy it immensely.

Sincerely,

JOHN H. ENDERS, '38

The Cover in Words

Two pats on the back go to ubiquitous Ted Kenyon, '42, for providing OLD OREGON with "Backboarders" and "The Fact Man" shots. The first was snapped during a busy Washington-Oregon game on the Igloo floor. The next was posed after several attempts to shoot Professor Turnbull candidly at his desk. Results of this sneak method were discouraging with the genial journalist conscientiously burrowing his nose for news near the multi-covered desk before him.

The spread, "Fledgling Flyers," is a staff photo shot with three Cubs on dress parade during a recent Saturday morning.

While shopping in a busy Hollywood store just before Christmas, I ran into Dan Olson, '36, a Theta Chi. Thought you would be interested to know he is on the writing staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. After leaving Oregon he took his masters at U. S. C. in French. He has been with M-G-M for three months.

I stopped in at the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood and had a visit with Ed Crowley, ex-'28. If we stay here I shall attend the alum meeting since the Los Angeles association has just been recently formed.

Editor's Exchange

December 1st, the Portland Oregonian lauded Professor Turnbull of the Journalism School editorially. Since OLD OREGON is strewing roses to mark the genial prof's progress, this exchange editorial is considered well timed. Here it is:

A HISTORY OF OREGON NEWSPAPERS

For nearly twenty-five years George S. Turnbull, professor of journalism, University of Oregon, was engaged in gathering the material which became his "History of Oregon Newspapers," published recently by Binfords & Mortis. The amazement is that in so modest an interval, comparatively, Professor Turnbull contrived to assemble the tremendous amount of information, from every region and town in Oregon, essential to the completed work.

The historian alone might well have been appalled by the scope of the task, but Professor Turnbull had the distinct advantage of being a practical newspaper man as well. This duality of authorship, in the one writer, alone made possible a complete and important addition to the increasing shelf of volumes of historic record which have the Oregon theme. As they would say in the news room, the assignment was covered by the right man. From the pioneer period to the present, by means of what must have been remarkable patience and pertinency, George Turnbull assembled the story of the newspapers of Oregon. It is told accurately and interestingly, as a good reporter should tell it.

Reviewers of the book have not failed to remark those touches of romance and humor, of whimsicality even, which distinguish it from the mere annals of unrelieved fact—not that the humor and the romance are fictitious, for they decidedly are not, but that a mere historian, if the adjective will be pardoned, might have neglected them in his pursuit of that very detail which Professor Turnbull obtained and illuminated. "The History of Oregon Newspapers" should have a far wider appeal than to the field of newspaper workers alone. It deals with an important factor of the growth and progress of the state, of its political and economic development, and is an altogether needful and admirable contribution to Oregon history.

Blackouts in Berlin By WERNER ASENDORF, ex-'38

Dean Eric W. Allen, Journalism School, received this letter recently from Mr. and Mrs. Werner W. Asendorf, ex-'38, (Signe Rasmussen, '38, Alpha Omega Pi.) Mr. Asendorf, a German subject, attended Oregon on an exchange scholarship majoring in Journalism. Following with several months in the Orient, he returned to Oregon, married Miss Rasmussen. The two toured across continent in an ancient jalopy to New York. After a short period they embarked for Berlin. Intelligent students, observing journalists, the Asendorfs make their epistle, censored by the Reich government, of current interest.—Ed.

Berlin-Halensee,
Joachim-Friedrichstrasse 3, Deutschland.

Dear Dean Allen:

We wish you and all of your family a very happy and healthy new year. On the sixteenth of December our family increased by one cute eight-pound daughter, Charlotte Christina, and that accounts for this somewhat belated letter, but our heart is in it.

The little one is fine. She does not cry too much at all. She usually sleeps until morning after she got her last meal at night. Signe is fine too. I was with her nearly all the time on the day of days. We went to the hospital at nine a.m. and the baby came at two p.m. Signe, how could it be otherwise, turned out to be a great mother. We both love our progeny with all our heart, and I want to thank you once more for all you have done to make this possible.

Fortunately, the state supplies mothers and children with certain extra rations and especially grade "A" milk so that we can buy about as much as we would have bought if there would have been no rationing at all.

WAR OF WORDS

Which plunges us right into the subject of the WAR. What a war, though! It is fought more violently in the propaganda offices than in the trenches right now. I am not in a trench but busily engaged in an anti-lie-bunker of that German ministry which disseminates shining words to make the winning weapons more shining and which succeeded in making the man in the street believe that he does not have to bother about this conflagration seriously as HE will fix 'em and everything.

Of course I do not know the woman in the home and what she thinks, but word trickled to me that she feels, a woman should have been present when the rationing system was figured out, but such an attitude is obviously ridiculous as this is a man's world and women should be glad to help, concentrating on things more worthwhile than stockings and lipstick, as the German male is ready to make greater sacrifices and will submit to pay homage to German beauty in spite of a scarcely concealed run in a silk stocking which does not show in the present blackouts anyway. Don't you think so? And as for the man in the street, he might change his mind upon receiving an invitation to join the nation in arms and next finding himself in the Siegfried line, but I don't think so.

GUN MUSTERING

Who does not want to forget his business troubles at the expense of the government, knowing that the dear better half is doing nobly in keeping herself out of trouble doing his business about which until then she had only criticized hubby; while self-same plays cards in a bunker where profanity is not scorned, drinking beer which patriotic societies donate freely. Occasionally, of course, our man has to muster a gun and crouching with hand-grenades stuffed in his pockets crosses into no mans land where the brave capture the French if the skies are damned cloudy all night, and who, I ask you, is not brave?

Mr. and Mrs. Asendorf thumb the globe reminiscing on trips of past year, then write of Germany.

Well, before going into details, I want to tell you all about this war that the English forced upon us and what I am doing in it.

In the middle of August, Signe and I made a trip to Denmark where we saw her relatives and had a grand time. The first advance royalties for my book paid for the trip and I was very sore that I did not find a chance to get some more foreign currency to take out as it would have come in very handy.

WRITES FOR U.P.

After our return, the crisis started. I felt somewhat isolated in my snug job as a press relation man, and soon enough I was hired by the Berlin office of the U.P. I had a grand experience. You might even have read one or two of the news items which I procured, but then, when things got to look serious and England got in the picture, I got a call from the aforementioned ministry and I could hardly say no. The chances were too good, and you know the odds.

From then on I have been a member of the foreign press section of the German government. My field is the American press and my main job is to contact and help the American correspondents in Berlin. It was highly exciting in the beginning, because names became human, big names and small names, and I try my best to give them whatever I can.

Having worked for one of the agencies, I am happy to know, that they can work as freely as they could before this war started. There is no advance censorship except for the radio. Telegrams from Berlin to New York take twenty minutes and no official of the type that was famous in the old Roman administration casts so much as a glance at any of them. I am glad that I helped to bring this state of affairs about, and I hope that it will be kept up for ever and ever. There are direct teletype lines to Amsterdam and a correspondent can telephone to New York directly. Of course, there are ways and means to prevent a correspondent from misrepresenting the German scene of things, even these newspapermen are treated tenderly and we do our best to break them in so that none makes a mistake, see.

POST OFFICE CENSORS

We even supply a special post office for the correspondents which gets letters through to any country in as short a time as possible. This letter, for instance, I hand to our mail official who has it read by some English speaking person to prevent any military information from trickling out into newspaper space. After the letter is okayed, a deft-handed girl copies the whole story on government paper which of course does not show its origin. This copy is sent to AMERICA on the earliest possible clipper and passes the border without any delay. This is a most wonderful way of keeping yourself in touch with the outside world and it is apparent that the thanks one feels for such good luck inspire the mind to great efforts.

As far as politics is concerned I keep away from it as much as possible. I read the German papers, even though they might not tell all, they give a complete picture of what is going on. After reading them one feels sure that everything is done that needs to be done. The tremendous foresight of our leaders has even found a way of preventing any shortage of children that might occur as a result of enemy activities. Babies that are born by a mother who does not wear a ring get all the benefit of legitimacy if the creator has been a soldier that died in battle. This way no shame has to flush the pretty cheeks of a German girl if once the kid asks: "Mater, who is my father?" All she has to do is to answer with pride: "You had a war father, my son," and the birth records will prove it. No, nothing is forgotten and if once the citizens of Germany used to say: Where there is a will, there is a way (one of the first English proverbs I ever learned, incidentally) today, men and women in Berlin and Prague, in Vienna and Warsaw are saying with knowing appreciation gleaming in their eyes: where there is a will, there is the SS (black guards).

BOOK SELLS WELL

As far as my book is concerned: It came out in November and sold well. Book reviews were splendid. I'll send it to you at the earliest possible moment. My wife reads it now. Her German improves very much and she converses with the baby in sweet German.

I often wonder what you are thinking in this turbulent time. I am just reading Stuart Chase's latest book: The New Western Frontier. I agree with him very often. There is not too much new stuff in it, but I like his point of view, and not only officially, because you might think that I had to like any view that would keep America out of war.

EUROPE OVERCROWDED

Even though it is late, I acknowledge your last letter. It was good to get it just when the war broke out for it is good to know that there are people still living, who think like you do.

Now as for the future, I am convinced in my mind that Germany cannot lose this war. Great changes will be the result of this war but Europe will, no matter what happens, accept the same principles of economy that prevail in Germany now. The free for all capitalism is through in Europe and regimentation for the best of the masses is the necessity of the future. Europe is too overcrowded to end up otherwise.

As for life in Berlin right now, the streets are dark but new chemical lights are tried out which will make the blackouts more endurable. I still have a flashlight and there is still some current in the battery to lighten my roads home, but Bill Shirer, for instance, knocked his bean against a lamp post last night which fails to have any reason for standing where it is, dark as it is. Now Bill, who is the Berlin speaker for CBS, has a bump as big as an egg which will remind him that he has not eaten an egg for quite some time as the egg rations grant less than an egg a week. Me, I just had two eggs for lunch in the cafeteria of the building where I am working at this moment. All I had to give for those precious things was a piece of paper on which was printed the legend: 5 gr. Schweineschmalz (fat). I had to give some money too. The lunch, consisting of two eggs, mashed potatoes, tomato sauce and fruit salad, cost 60 pfennig or 24 cents. That's not so bad, or is it? The sauce was actually tasty.

REMINISCES

Often I wonder what the Oregon Emerald is doing! I wish I could write my column again. I sure have plenty of material. I wish, too, that Signe could write some pieces for the Oregonian, but I don't know how to approach them.

You see, Signe is going to have some spare time in spite of the baby for we are going to move into my father's

Fledgling Flyers

By CARLETON E. SPENCER, '13

Carleton E. Spencer, B.A. '13, L.L.B. '15, J.D. '26, professor of law, has as his hobby the directing of Civilian Pilot Training at Oregon. During World War I, Mr. Spencer was commissioned in the administrative branch of the air corps and attached to the school for aerial observers at Langley Field, Va.—Ed.

The old grad returning to the campus today discovers something that has never before existed, an air-minded student body. Sixty highly selected students are regularly enrolled for credit in the course listed in the catalogue as Civilian Pilot Training. Fifty of these are trainees of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Ten are taking the ground course as alternates. The fifty trainees are attending class four hours a week and each one is making from three to five flights a week.

For a number of years past the Federal Government has encouraged the development of commercial aviation. Private flying, however, has been on its own. Here, obviously, is a field of industry with infinite potentialities. Consider for a moment the part that privately owned cars play in the automotive industries. Widespread private flying will likewise call for the establishment of factories, the utilization of materials, and the employment of labor, as well as add to the transportation and recreation facilities of the people as a whole.

EXPERIMENTAL FIRST

Last year the C. A. A., experimenting with the idea of promoting private flying, conducted a course of training in thirteen colleges which proved so successful that in June the Lea Civilian Pilot Training bill was passed by Congress. Under the provisions of this act some 10,400 young men and women are now being trained. Approximately 400 colleges and universities are cooperating. The law provides that ninety-five per cent of those trained shall be college students. As many as ten per cent may be girls at the option of the colleges. It is planned to train 95,000 pilots during the next five years.

Last summer the University applied for and was granted participation in this program. It was allotted a quota of forty students, later increased to fifty. The student pays a total of $40 for the entire course. This covers his medical examination by a C. A. A. flight surgeon, insurance coverage for the year and such administrative fees as may be required by the University. The C. A. A. pays all other costs, totaling $310 per student.

Last fall 175 students applied. The problem of selection was worked out in the following manner: Applicants were rated first in the order of their seniority; that is, the number of hours credit toward graduation. They were then rated independently according to grade averages. The two ratings were then combined and, on the basis of this combination, a third rating was made and the 50 highest were selected to take the flight surgeon's examination. A number of those next on the list were selected as alternates, and this number has been drawn upon from time to time to fill the places of the few who failed the medical examination or who for some other reason did not continue with the course.

The ground work offered by the University covers 72 hours of classroom instruction and requires the usual amount of outside preparation. It covers history of aviation, civil air regulations, theory of flight, navigation, meteorology, parachutes, engines, instruments and radio. These subjects are taught by regular members of the faculty. This year the instructors are Percy P. Adams, assistant dean of the School of Architecture and formerly professor of engineering; H. Lester Barrett, Major, Infantry, assistant professor of military science and tactics, graduate of the Air Corps Tactical school; Albert E. Caswell, professor of physics and head of the department; and Will V. Norris, professor of physics, registered engineer.

Eugene Airport's Joseph Harrell and Director Carleton E. Spencer confer on C.A.A. training under a spreading Cub wing while the wind plays havoc with hair and coat.

Old Oregon

Flight instructors are Joseph Harrell, manager of the airport; Stephen Hathaway, Charles Mears, Robert Meany, Jerry Andrews.

FORTY-TWO HOURS

The flying instruction at the field consists of between 35 and 50 hours (average about 42) of private instruction in the air for each student. Each instructor has qualified under strict rerating regulations of the C. A. A. The course is taught under the direct supervision of C. A. A. inspectors working out of seventh region headquarters at Seattle. Regulations require one airplane and one flying instructor for every ten students. Upon completion of the course the student will receive a private pilot certificate.

The effect of this program within the next few years can be imagined. Each Oregon town will have its airfield and its ever-growing group of enthusiastic flyers. Mass production will bring down the cost of planes. Good dependable ships can now be bought for the cost of a medium-priced automobile. The light-plane industry has been placed on a stable basis. In 1931 only 97 of them were built. This year more than 3,000 will be made, and this is just the beginning. A plane can be maintained at less cost than an automobile. Motors are so good that they take 1,000 hours of flying before they need an overhauling. They will go 26 miles on a gallon of gas. It is easier and safer to drive a plane than a car—after you know how.

AIR IS SAFER

The Civilian Pilot Training program is providing the "know how." Not only are trainees under this program receiving instruction of high standard, but the quality and standard of flight instruction in private schools over the entire United States has been raised. Modern planes are practically fool proof; nevertheless the C. A. A. is determined there shall be no fools driving them. Statistics have shown that security in the air is increased 1500 per cent by thorough schooling in the fundamentals, and this is what Oregon's Flying Fifty are getting.

Backboarders

By GEORGE PASERO, '40

Throughout the nation, wherever Oregon basketball has been on exhibition (and there aren't many hotbeds of the hoop game in the United States which haven't been visited by Webfoot teams in the past two years) John Dick is known primarily as "that great University of Oregon forward."

But here on the campus, to students, faculty, and townspeople alike, John Dick is not recognized only as an athlete. Fact is, John has been called a "ubiquitous extrovert." Truly, he's quite a guy.

He's a scholar. An honor graduate at The Dalles high, he has maintained consistently good grades at Oregon. Next year he plans to enter law school.

ASUO PRESIDENT

He's an activity man, oh, yes. Elected president of the Associated Students last spring, Big John has carried the load of student affairs on his shoulders for two terms now. Last summer he toured the state, building good will for Oregon.

He's a campus personality. Athletes boost him, everyone knows him, and he knows everyone . . . or so it seems. A Sigma Nu man, himself, he's equally a friend to fraternity men, independents, and coeds.

Yes, he's all the above, and more, but first of all he's an athlete, a great competitor. Last year, he teamed with Laddie Gale, "Slim" Wintermute, Wally Johansen and Captain Bobby Anet to bring Oregon a national basketball championship. Husky and rugged (he weighs 195 pounds and stands six feet, four inches), Dick was the Webfoot's outstanding performer in late season championship games last year and won western NCAA all-star honors.

NUCLEUS OF SQUAD

Possessor of an accurate one-handed shot, Dick is the one-man nucleus of this year's hoop squad. In eight conference games, five of which the Ducks have won, he has scored 95 points for an 11.87 average. This pace, if he keeps it up, is good enough to crack Wally Palmberg's 16-game scoring record of 187 points.

On the night of February 3, Dick was in the spotlight all evening as Coach Hobby Hobson's team tried vainly to halt the Oregon State championship drive at Corvallis. Dick was the key-man in "set-offensive" strategy designed to open the Oregon State defense, and to top it all he had the chance to tie the ball game by dropping a free throw with two seconds of the game remaining and the score 28 to 27 in Oregon State's favor.

With the pressure definitely on, John was cool as he attempted his shot. It was true but just a bit hard, bouncing on the rim, then bounding away and with it Oregon's chances.

DIVISION STANDING

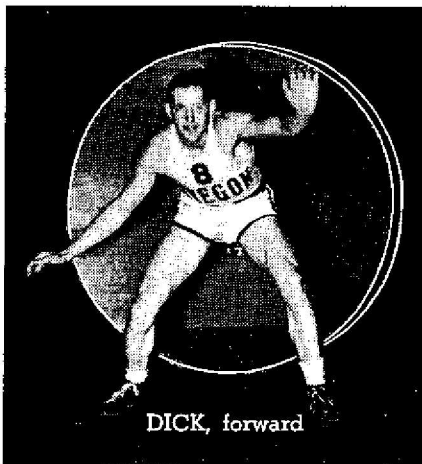

In this year's Northern division campaign, Oregon has won two games from Idaho and three out of four from Washington. Despite John Dick's 22 points in the final Husky game, the Ducks had to overcome a first half Husky 20 to 6 advantage to win in the last few minutes, 50 to 43.

Only five points have separated the Oregons and Orangemen of Oregon State in two games, the Beavers winning the first, 35 to 31, and the second, 28 to 27.

Present Oregon varsity lineup features John Dick and lanky Hank Anderson at the forward berths; Archie Marshik, six-foot-seven Eugene boy, at center; and George "Porky" Andrews, Canadian lad, and Vic "Slick" Townsend, transfer from Compton Junior college, at the guard posts.

Matt Pavalunas, Paul Jackson, Red McNeeley, Ted Sarpola, Toivvo Piippo, Earl Sandness and Bill Borchert are the front line reserves.

John Warren's frosh club, victor in 13 out of 14 games, tipped the rooks in both "Little Civil War" series.

DICK, forward

Pride of Hobby's ball club is John Dick, '40. The athletic ASUO president made news for Oregonian's L. H. Gregory, ex-'12, recently with a revealing epistle on the last Beaver-Duck "stalling" game.

The Fact Man

By JAMES BANK, '43

Nobody loves a "fact" man, yet George Turnbull, whose devout creed is making certain that only irrefutable facts as undeniable as Gibraltar are ever printed under his by-line, is not what one would call a friendless man. The acclaim showered upon the smiling, mild-appearing professor of journalism at the recent publication of his "History of Oregon Newspapers" is evidence of his popularity although he would be the last man to admit it.

"When you put something into print, it's got to be right," he affirms in his gentle tones. "The reverberations from an error may be unpleasant."

TWO YEARS' LABOR

"On the fire" since 1924, material for his history began piling up on his desk so that in 1928 he began to develop the idea seriously. Sandwiched between summer school sessions and regular terms, he estimates that two full years of work went into the making of the book, involving thorough, comprehensive research.

Sixteen years of spare time work is coming off the presses, but there is no let-up in his activity. Increasing University enrollment has brought larger classes, and George Turnbull's are always filled to capacity. More and more students besiege his door in the lower floor of the "shack." It may be past time to shove aside the work on his desk for the day, but he is usually there, high in his chair, making little marks on any piece of paper in hand's reach of his pencil while a student listens to his quiet, low voice explaining, advising or just talking.

FIRST CALL: PRINTER

Some kind of a benevolent fate must have been working overtime the day that George Turnbull walked into the print shop of the Marysville Weekly Globe to get some type case measurements for his grandfather, who did carpentry work in the little Washington town. He was seized by a fascination so great and so obvious that the editor put him to work after school and the industry gained a new member.

It was a natural evolution from shop to front office, and from the Globe he went to Bellingham. For three years he had charge of the local paper as managing editor. At Seattle, he was on the staff of the Post Intelligencer for more than ten years, working and studying at the University of Washington until graduation.

HERE 23 YEARS

Twenty-three years ago, George Turnbull, on an offer from Dean Eric W. Allen, came to the University of Oregon Journalism School. The summer sessions of his first few years on the faculty were filled with more newspaper work, on the San Francisco Chronicle, the Oregonian and the Seattle Times.

"Students today are the same as they were when I first came," he declares. "Personalities, appearances, ambitions, all are the same. The only thing that changes is clothing style. They are, perhaps, a little more determined and more anxious to make good."

A host of students through the years remember George Turnbull as part of Oregon, and he can recall most of them. The small, rather retiring professor has a prodigious memory but one suspects that the unfeigned interest he takes in each of his students is the reason they are remembered.

The Dalles, Hood River

President Donald M. Erb addressed the Hood River Principals' association and University of Oregon Alumni members at a dinner in the Hood River cafe January 8th. "The University Looks at the School" was his subject. Some 60 attended the affair, which was arranged by John Mohr, '28, county director of the Alumni Association.

The next evening, Wasco and Sherman county Alumni members dined with Dr. Erb at The Dalles hotel. Here the president discussed recent developments of the University. The meeting was for the purpose of organizing a permanent Alumni Club and planned by George Stadelman, ex-'30, county director; Lay Carlisle, '20; Paul McCulloch, '23, superintendent of schools in The Dalles, and T. Lester Johnson, '29, from Wasco.

Alumni Secretary Elmer Fansett outlined purposes of the Association after the presidential talk. The group present then voted to formulate an organization for the two counties. Elected to office were George Stadelman, president; T. Lester Johnson, vice-president; and Mrs. William Dielschneider, '30, secretary.

Second Generation

Ninety-seven students indicated on their fall term registration material at least one of their parents attended the University before them. Since then six more have informed the Alumni office of their qualifications.

They include Elizabeth Earl, '43, Gamma Phi Beta, a daughter of Dean of Men Virgil D. Earl, B.A. '06, M.A. '32, Kappa Sigma. Marguerite, '43, and Mary, '41, who are daughters of David Campbell, '30, Phi Beta Theta. Lillyan, '40, Alpha Phi, and John, '42, Beta Theta Pi, are children of John Veatch, '07, Kappa Sigma and former president of the Alumni Association.

Betty Lou Swart, '40, Gamma Phi Beta, is the daughter of Henry A. Swart, LL.B. '11, Kappa Sigma. Mr. Swart is president of the National Bond and Mortgage Co. in Portland.

Oregon's School of Architecture and Allied Arts was recently chosen western center for normal art instruction the 11th consecutive year. Dean Ellis F. Lawrence announced the center will have 20 teachers as students, financed by the Carnegie corporation. Scholarships covering expenses are granted to the students who spend six weeks here under faculty members of the school.

Old Oregon

Directors Appointed

Dr. Delbert Stanard, president of the Oregon Alumni Association, recently announced appointments of directors to constitute the Alumni Council. Generously spread, they represent all 36 counties of the state.

Twelve were picked as three year directors with terms expiring December 31, 1942. They include LaVerne Van Marter, ex-'12, Heppner, a merchant; Donald B. McCormick, ex-'32, Portland, employee of Liberty Fuel and Ice Co.; Dr. Asa B. Starbuck, M.D. '06, Dallas, physician and surgeon; Lester Johnson, B.A. '29, J.D. '31, Wasco, district attorney.

A new set-up, offspring of the constitutional revision last Homecoming, this council will conduct the Alumni program. Dr. Stanard plans a meeting of the 36 members soon to outline their functions and discuss ways to render more service to the University.

Editors in Headlines

Mrs. Dorothea Carr Miller was recently appointed managing editor of the Chinese Digest, according to Dean Eric W. Allen, Journalism School. A graduate student at Oregon during 1931 and '32, Mrs. Miller now manages the official organ for the Chinese Culture Society of America.

Mohan V. Raj, M.A. '35, who edits the Indian Home monthly magazine in Bombay, India, sent Dean Allen his third anniversary number last week. Published in English, the periodical is considered the Ladies Home Journal of India. A member of Sigma Delta Chi, Mr. Raj received his B.A. in agriculture from the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Delbert Stanard, Alumni Association president, has picked his county directors. A Eugene man, he was active as an undergraduate.

Professor Passes

Dr. Max Sylvius Handman, '07, died December 26th at Ann Arbor, Mich. after a long illness. The 54-year-old economics professor had been teaching at University of Michigan since 1931.

A native of Rumania, he entered this country in 1903, was enrolled at the University of Oregon two years later. With a bachelor of arts degree he added a Phi Beta Kappa key, and a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. Before teaching at Ann Arbor, he was faculty member at the Universities of Missouri, Minnesota and Texas.

Blackouts in Berlin

house as soon as spring is near. Unfortunately, my father died of stomach-cancer in the beginning of November, one week before my book came out and a month before the baby came, but, of course, he knew about both these events and was so happy to have spent much of the summer with us. I am so happy about that too. It would have been terrible if we had been in New York at that time.

In a way, it is hard on Signe to be here at this time of our century, but we are going strong and can take it. Right now my mother is staying with us and she washes the diapers and cooks for us while Signe tends the baby and so things are not so hard for her, but it was not so easy for her to get along in these first months of the war. With all those new ration cards and stuff. I am so glad that I could take her out to lunch so often having her meet nearly every American correspondent in town this way. That's how we sent that telegram with Pinkley who is, as you know, an Oregon boy.

PREDICTS NEW BOOK

Right now, I feel like a new book is coming on. A book about America and my experiences there. I hope I can finish it. I started already.

I guess this is all the news I can scrape together right now. I hope that this letter gets through fast and I am looking forward to an early answer. The rest of this page I'll leave to Signe. With greetings from my heart, in the hope that this year sees the end of war and that I see you next year.

Yours,

WERNER.

Just all the best wishes in the world to you, Mrs. Allen, and the whole family for 1940.

SIGNE.

Speakers Travel State

Professor W. A. Dahlberg, symposium squad coach, reports that his group of undergraduate speakers have appeared before 18 audiences to date.

The traveling students have presented talks on "Distribution" and "Propaganda" to the Triangle CCC camp, Tillamook and Seaside high schools, Clatskanie high school and Kiwanis club.

The Westport and Warrenton high schools, Lebanon high school and Lions club, Raymond, Wash. and Seaside Kiwanis clubs, Dallas high school, Harrisburg Schoolmasters' club, Rickreall grange, North Bend high school and Kiwanis club, Bandon high school, and Eugene Central Labor council.

During the school year this squad covers a great number of Oregon's populated areas to present live issues before realistic audiences.

T.C.L.A.C.A. Quartet

In Bend lives the founder of Two Can Live as Cheaply Association which was conceived on the Eugene campus in the fall of '36. He is Howard Kessler, '39, who is a newspaperman on the Bend Bulletin.

Mrs. Kessler, ex-'37, and husband still discuss T.C.L.A.C.A. while their four-year-old daughter dashes around the rooms of their Central Oregon apartment. The other two making up the nucleus of this club are Mr. and Mrs. Reinhart Knudsen, graduate of '37 and an ex-'40 respectively.

Knudsen is in the advertising department of the Laredo Daily Times in Texas. They have lived in the Lone Star State a year. The Kessler family are recent arrivals in Bend.

Editors Elect

Verne McKinney, publisher of the Hillsboro Argus, was elected president of the Oregon Press conference when that body met in Eugene recently. Professor George Turnbull was re-elected secretary of the organization.

McKinney succeeded Harris Ellsworth, '22, editor of the Roseburg News-Review.

Dads 500 Strong

Over 500 fathers attended Dads' Day weekend this year. Shows, banquets and exhibits, basketball games and business meetings kept them busy during the two-day period.

Joe Reisch, Portland, was elected to succeed Loyal H. McCarthy as president of the Dads' club. William Tugman, Eugene, became vice president; Ed Averill, Portland, secretary.

Karl W. Onthank was re-elected executive secretary for the group. He reported the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority received the A. W. Norblad trophy for having the largest percentage of dads in attendance during the weekend.

Members Remember

Membership in the University of Oregon Alumni Association is open to all persons who have completed work for credit at the University.

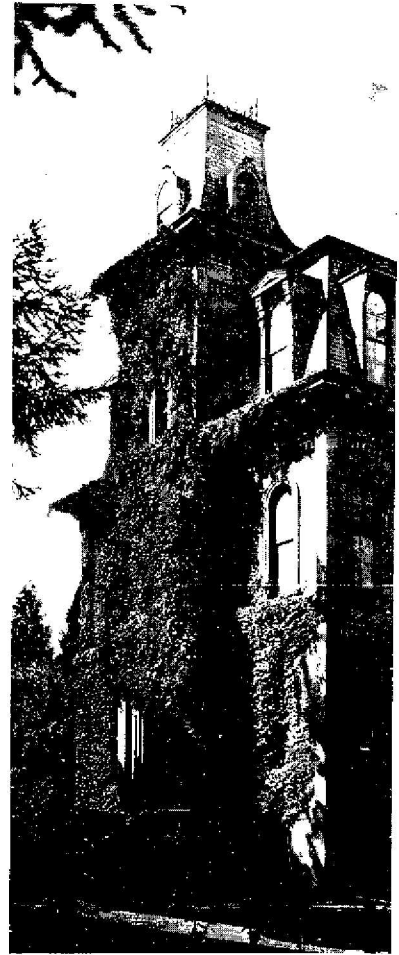

Meetings of the organizations are called semi-annually at Homecoming and Commencement. State of Oregon members are advised to read of the Association's County Directors appointed by President Del Stanard and mentioned in a current story.

Elective and staff officials for the Association include Dr. Del Stanard, president; Hollis N. Johnston, vice-president; Elmer C. Fansett, secretary-treasurer; and Roy Vernstrom, editor of Old Oregon.

Chancellor Speaks

Chancellor F. M. Hunter spoke at Lakeview and Klamath Falls February 13th and 14th, before combined groups of mothers, dads, alums from Oregon and Oregon State college. Alumni Secretary Elmer Fansett traveled with the chancellor.

Arrangements were made by Forrest E. Cooper, '27, and John H. Houston, '21.

East entrance of Deady Hall displays its clinging vine decorations well during winter months. Mild weather for Eugene has permitted no lasting snowfalls. An imitation silver thaw was dissipated by rain within one day. Home of the popular Deady bugs, this building hints a history back to the days when it was one of the two structures composing the University of Oregon physical plant.

Split by geographical lines, the nucleus of T.C.L.A.C.A. (Two Can Live as Cheaply Association) claim residences in Texas and Central Oregon. Making up the quartet who put six initial letters in national prominence during their student days in '36, they are, from left to right, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhart Knudsen, Mrs. Kessler and Howard Kessler, founder of the association.

50 EXCITING YEARS

OF SERVICE TO THE WEST ★ 1890 ★ 1940

1. 1886... Lyman Stewart and W.L. Hardison discover oil near Santa Paula. Solve transportation problem by building first Western pipeline to tidewater.

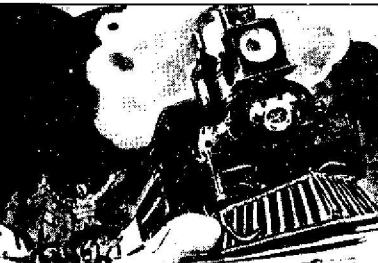

2. 1887... Bad luck... Four dry wells take all their capital. Los Angeles banker arranges one more loan. They sink it all in one well which comes in!

3. 1888... With finances assured, they turn to other innovations. Build the first oil tanker on the Pacific Coast.

4. 1890... Hardison and Stewart merge with three other companies—form UNION OIL COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA.

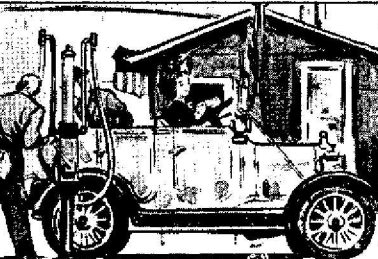

5. 1894... Union Oil men develop first successful oil-burning locomotive in U.S. — expanding petroleum market.

6. 1898... Union Oil Company sets up first geological department in U.S. Men discover many great oil fields, recover first fossils from La Brea Pits.

7. 1910... Company drilling crew brings in Lakeview No. 1 near Bakersfield—greatest gusher ever drilled in U.S.

8. 1913... Anticipating automobile era—Company opens one of the first service stations in the West.

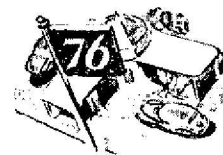

9. 1922... Union's independence threatened! Eastern combine buying up stock. Loyal stockholders save situation by uniting holdings.

10. 1932... Company engineers startle industry with 76—the pioneer, non-premium, anti-knock gasoline in the West.

11. 1934... Propane-Solvent process for refining Triton Motor Oil discovered. Produces a 100% pure paraffin base oil with low carbon-forming qualities.

12. 1940... Union Oil Company celebrates its 50th year of service to the West... still independent, still owned and operated by Westerners for Westerners. Look for Union's big orange and blue 76 sign.
