OLD OREGON was a welcome sight and a pleasant surprise when I called for my first mail in Paris. I sailed from Victoria, B. C., July 9 and have been traveling through the Orient for over two months. The Sorbonne will soon open and I shall register there, and also go to a private couture school.

Dear Old Oregon:

I am glad to see Oregon's success in football this season and I hope the team continues to "go to town".

Built myself a home last winter and so spent the summer in continuing the improvements—always something to do on a new place.

I occasionally see Oregon grads—saw Vernon Motsenbacher in San Francisco during the summer.

Best wishes for continued success.

Sincerely yours,

V. P. HUSBAND, '21.

PS: Still on the job with Calaveras Union high school—my 13th year going along satisfactorily.

Camp Glacier,
Bellingham, Wn.,
October 17, 1938.

Dear Bill:

I was in Eugene the 16th and 17th for a couple days leave but didn't get a chance to look you up. I understand you or someone in your office were trying to find out about my trip east.

I am stationed at Camp Glacier, which is about 30 miles northeast of Bellingham, Wn. Our camp is in the Mt. Baker national forest, just 4 miles from the Canadian border and only about 25 miles from Mt. Baker. So as you can see I am really up in God's country, anyway up in the sticks.

I was ordered to Camp Dix, N. J. as train commander on October 16th. I had 275 CCC enrollees who were being returned to Camp Dix to be discharged. So along with another 2nd Lt., a doctor and 10 R.R. cars, I started east. We had field ranges set up in a baggage car to cook for all the men. So we had our trouble and really worked the cooks overtime.

Arrived in Camp Dix safe and sound on September 23 (5 days 4 nights on road). I then took a week's leave and went to the big city, New York, to see the sights.

I just missed that big hurricane, but was there in time to see the wreckage that it caused, which was plenty.

I brought a new group of boys west with me to eastern Washington, arriving there October 14. So you can see I really made a flying trip out of it, but had a good time.

So I am now sitting back here at Glacier pleasantly broke, but it was fun.

Sincerely,

FRED SMITH, '37.

1999 North Avenue,
Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Dear Editor:

Very much pleased to receive your card asking for information.

It may interest you to know that I have run across quite a number of people from Oregon—to mention two, McGowan Miller, Oregon '32, and Jim Sharp, '31, a very good friend. In fact, both men were very good friends and swam on Oregon's team in '31 together.

Plans are under way for a get-together and a bit of a rally at the Oregon-Fordham game in New York on October 2nd.

Incidentally, I am writing this note with the same fountain pen presented to me when a student body officer of ASUO 1930. One of my most treasured possessions.

Kindest regards,

JOHN J. ANDERSON, JR., '31.

George Hopkins, '21, went to the Juillard foundation in New York City following his graduation from Oregon. There he studied piano with the great Ernest Hutcheson and did work in composition under Ruben Goldmark.

Upon his return he joined the faculty of the University of Oregon school of music and is now professor of piano with a well-deserved reputation as a fine teacher. A talented performer, Mr. Hopkins has appeared in several concert tours throughout the Pacific Coast states. In 1935 he appeared as soloist with the Portland Symphony.

Last year listeners to Mr. Hopkins' regular radio program, "Pleasure Cruising Over the Keyboards," were occasionally treated with numbers of Mr. Hopkins own compositions. As he explained, they were modern "miniatures" intended to be small pictures of the present American scene done in the modern idiom. Great pains were taken to minimize technical difficulties.

Upon his return from New York City this summer, it was learned that Witmark and Sons publishing house in New York had secured the publishing rights to a group of five of these modern numbers. Appearing under the title "Suite Jazz" will be the selections "Dusky Rhythm," "Snake Eyes," "Hum, Black Boy," "Moondown," and a rumba, "Black Diamonds."

"Oregon Is Going Places"

Chosen as Homecoming Theme

A weekend of football, a real alumni get-together and mixer, old-fashioned noise-parade, a big bonfire and rally, Homecoming dance with Gus Arnheim's orchestra, and the annual meeting of the Alumni association. All this has been packed into the Homecoming program for the weekend of November 5.

OREGON IS GOING PLACES has been picked as the theme for the 1938 Homecoming. In every aspect of University activity the new spirit of OREGON IS GOING PLACES has become evident. Starting when Dr. Erb assumed the presidency, the new spirit heightened when "Tex" Oliver, the new football coach, reached the campus and brought his own spirit of optimism. The summer program work initiated and carried on by the students with the help of the alumni met with great success.

OREGON IS GOING PLACES became more evident when the 1938 varsity appeared on the gridiron. Here is a team that refuses to be licked, a team playing a beautiful, fighting, and interesting game of football.

The weekend begins on Friday afternoon, November 4. At this time registration will be opened in Johnson hall. All alumni must register if their presence is to count in the competition for the cups. Everyone is urged to register so that there may be a clearing house for the weekend to find out who is back on the campus. To help alumni find rooms, Mrs. Marcella Berry King, '24, housing secretary for the University, will be on hand with a list of investigated rooms.

The John Henry Nash Fine book collection, the Natural History Museum in Condon hall, and the Murray Warner art museum will be opened during the weekend for the benefit of alumni guests.

The big feature of Friday evening will be the old-fashioned noise parade which will form at the S. P. depot at the foot of Willamette street, parade through town to Nineteenth and Ferry where the traditional Homecoming bonfire will be burning. At the site of the bonfire a huge platform has been erected and the rally program will take place during the bonfire. Coach "Tex" Oliver will be on hand to give advance dope on the Homecoming game. Yells, songs, and talks by returning alumni will fill the program. Following the bonfire and rally there will be entertainment provided at the various living organizations.

Saturday morning the Oregon alumni association will hold its annual business meeting in Guild theater in Johnson hall. Election of officers is the main business. It is hoped that every alumnus present at Homecoming will attend this meeting.

The Oregon-Idaho game promises to be a real thriller. Both Oregon and Idaho started the season as dark horses and have lived up to their advance notices with surprising upsets. Both "Tex" Oliver and Ted Banks, the Idaho coach, play a wide-open, interesting brand of football. Many think that the Idaho game will be the most spectacular of all Oregon games this year. Following the usual custom, all Order of the O men will meet at the south gate of the west grandstand and march into the game in a group.

After the game, alumni and friends will gather at the Eugene armory for a big get-together. This was tried last year for the first time in many years, and more than four hundred alumni joined together for a real mixer.

At 8:00 Saturday evening Harry Barris and his orchestra will appear in concert. All paid members of the alumni association will be given tickets to this concert when they register. Then the annual Homecoming dance will follow the concert. Following long established tradition. Friars, senior men's honorary, will tap pledges at that time. The Gerlinger cup and the Koyl cup for the outstanding junior woman and man will also be presented at this time.

On Sunday morning, the Eugene churches will have services for returning alumni. The living organizations will have dinners for their alumni. In the afternoon the Murray Warner art collection, the Museum of Natural History, and the John Henry Nash collection will be open for use of the alumni.

OREGON IS GOING PLACES—come along with her.

"Flash" Comes Home

By VINCENT GATES, Old Oregon Sports Editor

Ten years ago in Portland a mere mite of a shortstop scampered around the diamonds with the vim and finesse of a big-league baseball player, as he stopped sizzling grounders and punched out home runs for the American Legion Junior champions of Oregon. They called him Joe, and his coach said someday fans would forget about Babe Ruth and Mark Koenig when this Joe "got up there." Meaning up in the Big Leagues.

Today Joe is "up there" and fans who followed the destinies of New York's Yankees three-time championship team this year have all but forgotten the heroes of yesteryear, as Joe Gordon from the University of Oregon sparked double-plays, cut off line drives, and poled out home runs. His boss, another guy named Joe (McCarthy), wouldn't trade the Gordon who plays the keystone sack at second base for all the Ruths and Koenigs of all time.

Some sports writer who reads the funny papers called Joe "Flash," because Flash Gordon sounded good. Now, they call him Flash Gordon because he is good. You doubt it—then take a look at his record in the 1938 world's series.

It's a far cry from the championship of the Northwest Conference with the Oregon baseball team in 1935 to the championship of the world with the Yankees in 1938, but that's the path Gordon took in his meteoric climb to fame. Not content to just be a member of the world's champions, Joe started showing up the veterans early in spring training by clouting home runs with the regularity of Dimaggio and darting around the second base area in errorless fashion. Not content to just come through with a bang, with he and Crosetti pulling double plays faster than a versatile confidence man. Not content to enter the World Series against the Cubs' old timers with a darn good chance of being a "goat"—a tradition set aside exclusively for rookies—Joe stumped the baseball world with some of the outstanding plays of the season and led the "murderer's row" in hitting with an astounding .400. Aside from that he handled 26 chances with but two errors. If that isn't playing second base in big-time fashion then Ty Cobb was downright slow.

Joe Gordon's baseball days date back principally to his early boyhood in Portland, where he was a star even then of sandlot teams. Following this he stepped into the shortstop post at Jefferson high school, and also found time to play a couple of years of first-rate football. When Joe entered the University of Oregon in 1931 it was quite natural that he should find a place on the baseball team. With big-league scouts eyeing him for three years Joe, despite the handicap of approaching fame already staring him in the eye, literally burned up the conference as he led the Oregon nine to a championship his last year of inter-collegiate play. By the way, before he took the baseball business too seriously, Joe edged in a season of football for the Frosh, and Mr. "Prink" Callison, then coach of the Webfoots, was a sad man when Joe declined to help out the varsity the next year.

Joe "Flash" Gordon, ex-'36, Oregon's "local boy who made good" will return to the campus to receive his degree.

After disposing of college shortstop pastures at Oregon, Joe tripped over to a little place called the Pacific Coast League and rounded out a season of successful play with the Oakland (Calif.) club, batting .300 and fielding in his same precise manner. Then in 1937 he looked over the eastern field and showed his wares to Newark of the International League, where his batting average was about the same and his fielding was good enough to get him a try with the Yanks.

"Mrs. Joe"

Highlight of Joe's first season with the Yankees was not the increase in salary offered him after a great year, nor his name on the roster with such greats as Crosetti, Selkirk, Gomez, Dimaggio and others, nor the acclaim that was given him for his World's Series playing, but his marriage early in the season to Dorothy Crum—Mrs. Joe Gordon to you. The University of Oregon's loss was the Yankees gain—or Mrs. Joe's gain.

The star second baseman of the Yankees will enroll again at Eugene this winter term to complete three hours of study for his degree in physical education.

New Swimming Coach

Ned Johns, former Stanford pole-vaulter and star athlete, has been named to take "Mike" Hoyman's place as swimming coach for the University of Oregon. Hoyman is on leave of absence doing graduate work.

Johns has been track coach and physical education instructor at the Palo Alto, Cal., high school, for the past four years and has been doing graduate study at Stanford.

Homecoming Committee

Alumni members of Homecoming committee will be Flossie Radabaugh Steckmest, '28; Joe Freck, Jr., '31; Robert Mautz, '27; Roland Davis, '28; "Baz" Williams, ex-'19; and Claire Kneeland, '27.

No definite schedule of workouts and trials for the Cross Country team applicants has yet been made.

Famous Writers Plan for Homecoming

It will be a real Homecoming this year for Professor W. F. G. Thacher. Twenty-five years ago he taught his first short-story writing class at the University. In that class was a husky, tousle-haired student with a curious, quick, nervous way about him. That student was Edison Marshall. Since that time, "Eddie" has become famous for his many short stories and novels of far places.

Robert Ormond Case, '20

Professor W. F. G. Thacher will meet his three famous students when the "big three" return to the campus for Homecoming.

When Marshall left the University in 1915, another to-be-famous writer enrolled at Oregon. Robert Ormond Case was a tall, slim, straight collegian. He was a varsity javelin-thrower and still looks it. The war interrupted his college career and he spent two years overseas before he was able to return to complete his work. The year after Case left another boy enrolled.

He was Ernest Haycox, who, following his enlistment in the war, had attended Reed College in Portland. "Ernie" wanted to see the world—but after spending some time on a side-door Pullman tour he decided to enter the University of Oregon and continue his education.

It is interesting that Oregon's "Big Three" should bunch so closely: Case entered Oregon the year after Edison Marshall left and Ernest Haycox followed the year after Bob Case graduated. It is also interesting to note that all three were members of Delta Tau Delta.

Robert Ormond Case

Robert Ormond Case was born in Dallas, Texas, on October 8, 1895. He came to Oregon in 1910 and entered the University in 1915. As mentioned above, the war broke into his schooling so that he was not graduated until 1920. He joined the Portland Oregonian immediately after graduation and later became publicity director for the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

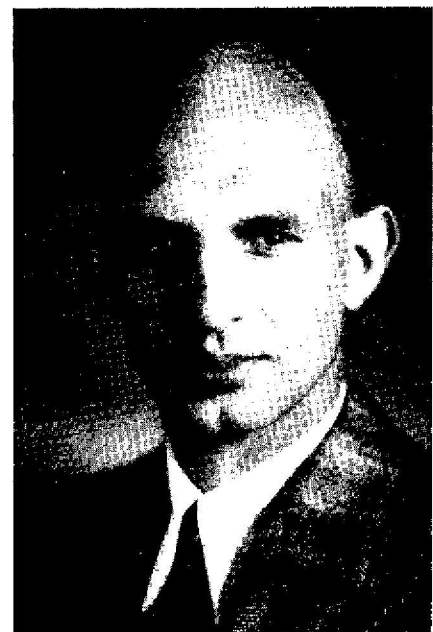

He did not begin writing in earnest until 1923 when he read a magazine story and told his wife, "I believe I could write a better story than that." Mrs. Case agreed with him and urged him to try. He sold that first story. He quickly graduated from the "pulp" to publications such as The Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, and American. Since then Case has written nine novels to date and some of them have been translated into five languages. His serial, "Wings North," ran in the Saturday Evening Post this year and is now in book form.

Edison Marshall

Edison Marshall was born in Rensselaer, Ind., on August 28, 1894. His family later made their home at Medford, Ore., and it was only natural that Marshall should attend the University of Oregon. He was at Oregon from 1913 to 1915 before entering the World War as a second lieutenant. During his period of enlistment he met Miss Agnes Sharp Flythe, whom he persuaded to become Mrs. Marshall in 1920. Edison and Nancy are their two children.

When Marshall won the O. Henry Memorial prize of $500.00 in 1921 his already great fame became even wider. The story was "The Heart of Little Chikara," a story of a small African boy and his experiences with the great white hunter. Edison Marshall has traveled

Medical School Given Research Gift

Gift of 171 acres of land in Lane County, valued at approximately $30,000, to the University of Oregon medical school has been made by Gertrude D. Widmer, '97, and her sister Margaret Widmer, '97, according to Richard B. Dillehunt, dean of the school.

The income from the gift will be a memorial fund in honor of their parents and of their brothers, Joseph M. Widmer, '90, and George C. Widmer, '97. Miss Margaret Widmer recently established a $2,000 loan fund at the University in honor of George C. Widmer. Under stipulations of the gift, income from the tract is to be devoted to research in cancer and heart disease.

"The Widmer Memorial Research fund of the University of Oregon Medical School will be established," Dr. Dillehunt stated, "and, inasmuch as the donors are deeply interested in the economic and humanitarian problems associated with the prevalence of cancer and heart disease, it will be devoted to experimental research and directed to the acquisition of knowledge that may alleviate these disorders."

J. Farmer Hill, '80

The University lost one of its first students when death came October 2 to J. Farmer Hill, A.B. '80. Mr. Hill was 83 years old at the time of his death.

When the doors of the University were first opened in 176, Mr. Hill registered as a freshman. In the 1890s Mr. Hill moved to Davenport, Wn., where he became publisher and editor of the Davenport Times-Tribune.

Mr. Hill continued to be actively engaged in the newspaper profession until two years ago when he retired. Following a long tour of Arizona, California, and Oregon, Mr. Hill took up residence in Seattle, Wn. Interment was at the Riverview Cemetery in Seattle.

A. B. Hall Biography

A biography of Arnold Bennett Hall by Dr. H. D. Sheldon professor of history and education, is nearly complete according to the author. Dr. Hall, president of the University from 1926 to 1932, was greatly loved. Under his direction the University enjoyed one of its greatest eras.

The biography will be published in booklet form and will contain in addition to the biographical material, Dr. Hall's inaugural address, an address on Democracy, and two letters which the former president wrote to prominent Oregon men. Dr. Hall's addresses and letters contain his educational policies, aims and ideals.

Following his resignation from the University, Dr. Hall became head of the Brookings Institute in Washington, D.C. He was engaged in this work at the time of his death in June, 1936.

UO Men Head State Bar

Rupert R. Bullivant, LL.B. '26, has been elected president of the Oregon state bar for the coming year. Assisting him as vice-president will be Harvey H. DeArmond, LL.B. '10; treasurer will be Arthur H. Lewis, LL.B. '11.

Mr. Bullivant is now living in Portland. He is a member of Sigma Nu and Phi Beta Kappa. Mrs. Bullivant is the former Norma Jean Wilson, '25. Mr. DeArmond is practising in Bend and Mr. Lewis in Portland.

Dr. Bossing to Minnesota

Dr. Nelson Bossing, professor of education, will leave the University of Oregon on January 1 to become head of the department of secondary education at the University of Minnesota. The school of education at Minnesota is one of the largest in the country.

Dr. Bossing came to Oregon in 1927 from Simpson college in Indiana. He is the author of a number of standard textbooks and articles for education journals. From 1928 to 1932 he was editor of "The High School," a magazine published by the University.

Rae Becomes NEA Head

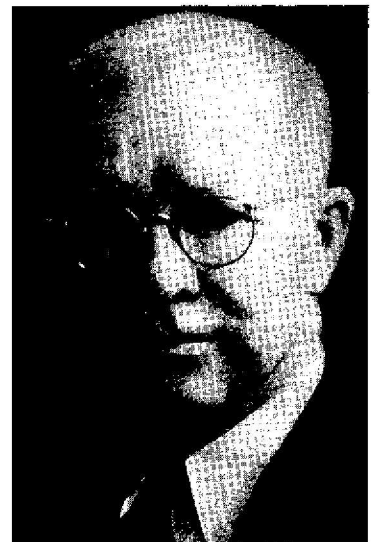

Arne G. Rae, '22, will assume the post of executive secretary of the National Editorial Association on January 1, according to advice reaching the campus. The announcement of this honor came on the heels of Rae's election as President of the national Newspaper Managers Association.

Mr. Rae has been associate professor of journalism, and manager of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' association since 1929. Previous to that time he was co-publisher of the Tillamook Headlight-Herald.

Mr. Rae and his family will move from Eugene to Chicago where Mr. Rae will make his headquarters.

Miss Brockman Travels

Miss Frances Brockman, '35, young violinist who is rapidly gathering fame and musical distinction throughout this country is now traveling in Europe doing advanced study on a Beebe scholarship awarded her by the Beebe foundation for her outstanding musical achievements.

Arne G. Rae, '22, will leave the University campus to become executive secretary of the National Editorial Association, made up of nearly every newspaper in the United States.

At the present time Miss Brockman is in Switzerland where she is studying under Karl Busch, famous German violinist. Miss Brockman has been spending some time in Florence, Italy, and plans to spend the winter in Paris studying.

Erb to Meet NY Alumni

Final arrangements have been completed for the University of Oregon Alumni banquet to be held in New York city on November 17. John MacGregor, '23, president of New York alumni, has been responsible for arrangements. All Oregon alumni in New York and surrounding districts have been cordially invited to attend.

The dinner will be held at the Town Hall club, 123 West Forty-third street, New York city, and will begin at 7 P.M. The affair will be informal.

All Oregon alumni and friends are urged to take this opportunity to meet Dr. Erb. Further details about the dinner may be obtained from Mr. John MacGregor, 70 Pine street, New York city.

George Goodall, '02

George Goodall, '02, died in Eugene on October 13. Mr. Goodall had been in poor health for a number of years, but his last illness was of brief duration.

Born near La Grande, Ore., in 1877, Mr. Goodall came to Eugene in 1897. He was graduated from the University in 1902. While at Oregon, Mr. Goodall was a member of the football team, the Order of the O, and of Phi Beta Kappa.

Following graduation he settled in Eugene where he was active in the insurance business. For several years he was secretary of the Lane county democratic committee.

He is survived by his widow, Margaret Goodall, '04, and two sons, Robert, '33, and Donald, '35.

UO Symphony Honored

Rex Underwood, director of the University of Oregon symphony, has been notified that the University symphony has been invited by the National Association of Music Educators to be the demonstration organization for the northwest gathering in Tacoma, Wn., next March.

This comes as an added honor to the University symphony which has appeared over several coast-to-coast radio broadcast hookups during the past year.

Fritz Kriesler, above, will appear on the University campus on November 7, as the first attraction of ASUO fall concert series. The famous violinist has never appeared in Eugene before. The Don Cossack chorus will appear on November 16th. This will be the third campus appearance for this group who have always been favorites.

Monday Quarterbacks

To help Oregon "go places," the Eugene Junior Chamber of Commerce has formed the "Monday Morning Quarterbacks." This breakfast club of Oregon rooters meets every Monday morning to "quarterback" the games of the previous Saturday. More than 100 quarterbacks roll out early every Monday to root for Oregon.

When the Webfeet are at home "Tex" Oliver is always on hand to explain the fine points of the play of the preceding Saturday. If the Webfeet are on the road other members of the coaching staff fill in.

Through the work of Ed Monteith, president of the Junior chamber, four baseballs autographed by every member of the World Series winning New York Yankees have been obtained for use in raising money for the athletic fund.

The Portland Alumni association will be given one of the baseballs which it will dispose of for the benefit of the fund.

Ducks Lose to Stanford, Fordham

By VINCENT GATES

Definite proof that a football game isn't over until the final whistle has blown was demonstrated October 15 by Stanford's Indians at the expense of Oregon football team. Stanford of Tex Oliver's powerful but disillusioned football team. Stanford 27, Oregon 16, said the scoreboard and therein lies a tale of a blocked kick.

Leading quite comfortably by a 16 to 13 score with only a half quarter of the game left, the Webfeet who had just piled through the Indians defense from their own territory for a touchdown which gave them a lead, relaxed for just one second and in that second a horde of Stanford linemen broke through and blocked Ted Gebhardt's attempted kick from midfield with Willard scooping up the crazily-bounding ball to score. That made it 20 to 16, and from then on the astounded Webfoots did almost everything wrong. A bad pass from center on fourth down lost the ball for Oregon on her own 39 and the Indians fooled around with short punches into the line just long enough to push over another score.

The Stanford Reds knocked Oliver's team out of the Coast conference lead with two touchdowns made on long forward passes, the blocked kick episode and the post-mortem touchdown in the last few minutes. The swift-rolling tide of Green started out early in the game to amass a huge total of yards gained by rushing, 238 to Stanford's 75, but a weak forward pass defense nullified the showing.

Emmons Big Gainer

With the game just started, Emmons, fullback, cracked through tackle for 37 yards to the Indian 45, Nicholson and Gebhardt pounding on to the 21 from where Nicholson booted a field goal. Just after the second quarter opened Graybeal, the midget back from Pendleton, darted back with a Stanford punt to midfield and then broke through the line for a 54-yard dash to a touchdown, with beautiful down-field blocking by the entire team.

With a ten point margin against them, the Indians took to the air, Paulman passing to Stockovitch for 25 yards in Oregon playing areas. The additional 30 yards to the goal was a mere formality, the long end outrunning the Oregon safety man. Taking advantage of Oregon's weakness the Stanford quarter, Paulman, shot another bullet to Graff, an end, after intercepting Gebhardt's pass on the Oregon 34. Then Stanford led 13-10 but the Oregon eleven with replacements Stenstrom and Gammon punching the Stanford line full of holes completed a long drive with a four-yard pass to Reginato for a score. Then that blocked kick started the fireworks, and the rest is history.

Statistics, a comforting, but unpaying factor in analyzing a football team, favored Oregon by a big margin, except on yardage via passes.

Nicholson, Gebhardt and Graybeal were outstanding performers and Giovanini and Cadenasso in the line, were stalwarts.

Fordham 26, Oregon 0

Fordham's unbeaten Rams of New York put the skids on Oregon's transcontinental ambitions last week by rolling up a 26 to 0 victory at the Polo Grounds.

Held to a single touchdown gained by an 80-yard run early in the game, the Rams pounded time and again at the Webfoot's touchdown barriers and only succeeded in collapsing the Duck defense after a barrage of heavy penalties opened the way. Three times in the final quarter they crossed the Oregon goal, after the Webfooters went to pieces following a Herculean series of defensive stands.

The first touchdown came within four minutes of the game when Holovak intercepted an Oregon pass and in two plays scampered through right tackle and down the sidelines to the Oregon goal.

Offensive clicking regularly, the Ducks came back to threaten twice in the second and third periods but Len Eshmont's running and line-bucking tore the Oregon line to shreds in the last quarter and saw a game of thrills turn into a rout for the Rams. Principe, fullback, crashed over from the one-yard mark after Oregon was penalized the fourth time for roughness and again for pass interference; Hearn, reserve, went over on a double-lateral from the 13, following a drive from midfield that found Oregon's pass weakness, and Eshmont scored after a Statue of Liberty play had fooled the Webfoots for a 22-yard gain.

Oregon's brilliance rose to high flame in the second period with Gammon throwing long passes to Graybeal from his own goal line but a fumble nullified further efforts.

Frosh 26 SONS 13

Opening the 1938 season in Grants Pass, a heavy Frosh team outplayed and outscored the light teacher's eleven from Southern Oregon Normal school to the tune of 26 to 13.

The Frosh scored a brace of touchdowns in each of the second and third quarters. Pat Smith caught a 20-yard pass over the goal line for the first score, but the SONS tied it up by scoring shortly afterward in a sustained drive that culminated with a four-yard pass from De Sordi to Barnes.

A "break" for the Frosh was responsible for another touchdown for Johnny Warren's first-year men when Warren of Normal intercepted Dyer's pass on his 44-yard line, the ball slipping out of his hands into the waiting arms of Bill Regner who ran for the score.

Jensen scored again for the Frosh in the third quarter from the 4-yard line after the heavy Frosh line pushed the Normals down the field in an uninterrupted drive. The final score was made on a long pass from Jensen to Fowler who lateralled to Harris as he was tackled, Harris scoring.

The SONS' final score came in the last quarter when Bullion intercepted a pass in mid-field.

Standouts for Warren's Frosh were backs Fowler of Ashland high, and Caven, and linemen Regner of Portland and Wilson, a Nebraska product.

Frosh 0 Rooks 0

The first of the annual little "civil war" games was played in Portland's Multnomah Stadium October 15 and resulted in a scoreless tie, after both Rooks and the Frosh had each scored touchdowns that were nullified by penalties.

In the final quarter Peters, Rook left half, intercepted Caven's pass and ran 35 yards for a touchdown, but officials ruled he had just nicked the sideline mark on the 4-yard line. Here the Frosh held the Rooks for downs and a few minutes later the Rooks kicked from their own 20 to Doug Caven, a Eugene high product, who ran through the entire opposition for a touchdown. An offside against the Frosh nullified this play.

Again in the last quarter the Ducklings threatened when Stevenson, of Eugene, snared a pass from Caven deep into Rook territory but the gun ended further efforts to score.

The Rook's second chance to score came in the second period when Busch, 15-yard line and sprinted down the field toward touchdown dirt, but was pulled down short of the goal when his legs cramped.

Gray's passing for the Rooks and Caven's pitching for the Frosh featured the game.

Game statistics were quite evenly divided in all departments.

22 Pass Bar Exams

Twenty-two former students of the University of Oregon law school successfully passed the Oregon State Bar examination this summer. Included in this group were sixteen of the nineteen graduates of this year, two former students taking the examination. Most remarkable was the fact that five of the six students who failed to earn degrees this year were able to pass the examination—regarded as the "toughest" in years.

This is a splendid showing for the University to make. The average grade of "C" is required for the grant of a degree, but certain students close to the mark are allowed to take the examinations. Preparation for the bar at the University of Oregon law school is so rigorous and thorough that five of the six were able to pass the examination, although only 42 of the 99 taking the examination were admitted to practise.

Oregon alumni passing the examination were:

Edward Wheelock, William K. Shepherd, Nathan Cohen, Herbert B. Galton, Edward McKeon, Errel L. King, Charles H. McGirr, Jr., Edwin O. Raudsep, all of Portland; Fred B. Hammond, Jr., and Norman K. Winslow, of Salem; Sidney A. Milligan, George Neuner, William E. Dougherty, all of Eugene; Andrew J. Newhouse, Broadbent; Tallant Greenough, Coquille; Harrison B. Winston, Roseburg; David C. Silven, Baker; Kenneth R. Schramm, Milwaukee; Robert M. Mulvey, Oregon City; Willard McInturff, Marshfield; and William Miller, Klamath Falls.

Frank Emmons, hard-hitting full-back, has been a consistent ground-gainer during the season.

all over the globe gathering material for his stories, which have dealt with Alaska, Siberia, Africa, Indo-China and other far places, but home is "Seven Gables" near Augusta, Ga.

His novels include "Voice of the Pack," "Snowshoe Trail," "Skyline of Spruce" and "The Doctor of Lonesome River." His novels appear in serial form in such magazines as Good Housekeeping, American, and Cosmopolitan.

Mr. Marshall was the original endower of the short story contest for students at the University of Oregon. This year the contest is being changed to the Case, Haycox, and Marshall contest and will be supported by all three of the men.

Ernest Haycox

If Ernest Haycox is not writing, you'll probably find him at the timberline of Mount Hood skiing—a sport that he has lately taken up. Haycox is a real Oregonian—born in Portland in 1899. When he was sixteen he was with the army on the Mexican border—and he received his high-school diploma after he had rejoined the army at the outbreak of the war. After the war Haycox roust-ed about seeing the country. He finished at the University in 1923. Like Case, he went to work for the Portland Oregonian, where his work as police reporter is still remembered.

"Ernie" had sold his first story while still in school and he kept at his fiction while on the newspaper. In 1924 he went east to buck the magazine market. During one trip east he met Jill Chord of Baker, Oregon, who consented to marry him in 1925. They now have two fine children, Mary Ann, and Ernest James, Jr. Portland is their permanent home. Mr. Haycox has written more than two hundred and fifty short stories and thirteen novels, nearly all of the west. His stories are currently appearing in Colliers.

It will indeed be a happy Homecoming for W. F. G. Thacher when he can meet with his three outstanding students and run through the years with them. On the Saturday of Homecoming day, members of that first short story class and the "big three" will have dinner together at the Anchorage and have a real Homecoming and reunion.

(OLD OREGON is indebted to Arthur J. Larson, '23, and to the Rainbow, national magazine of Delta Tau Delta for much of the material about these three Oregon authors.)
