Foreword

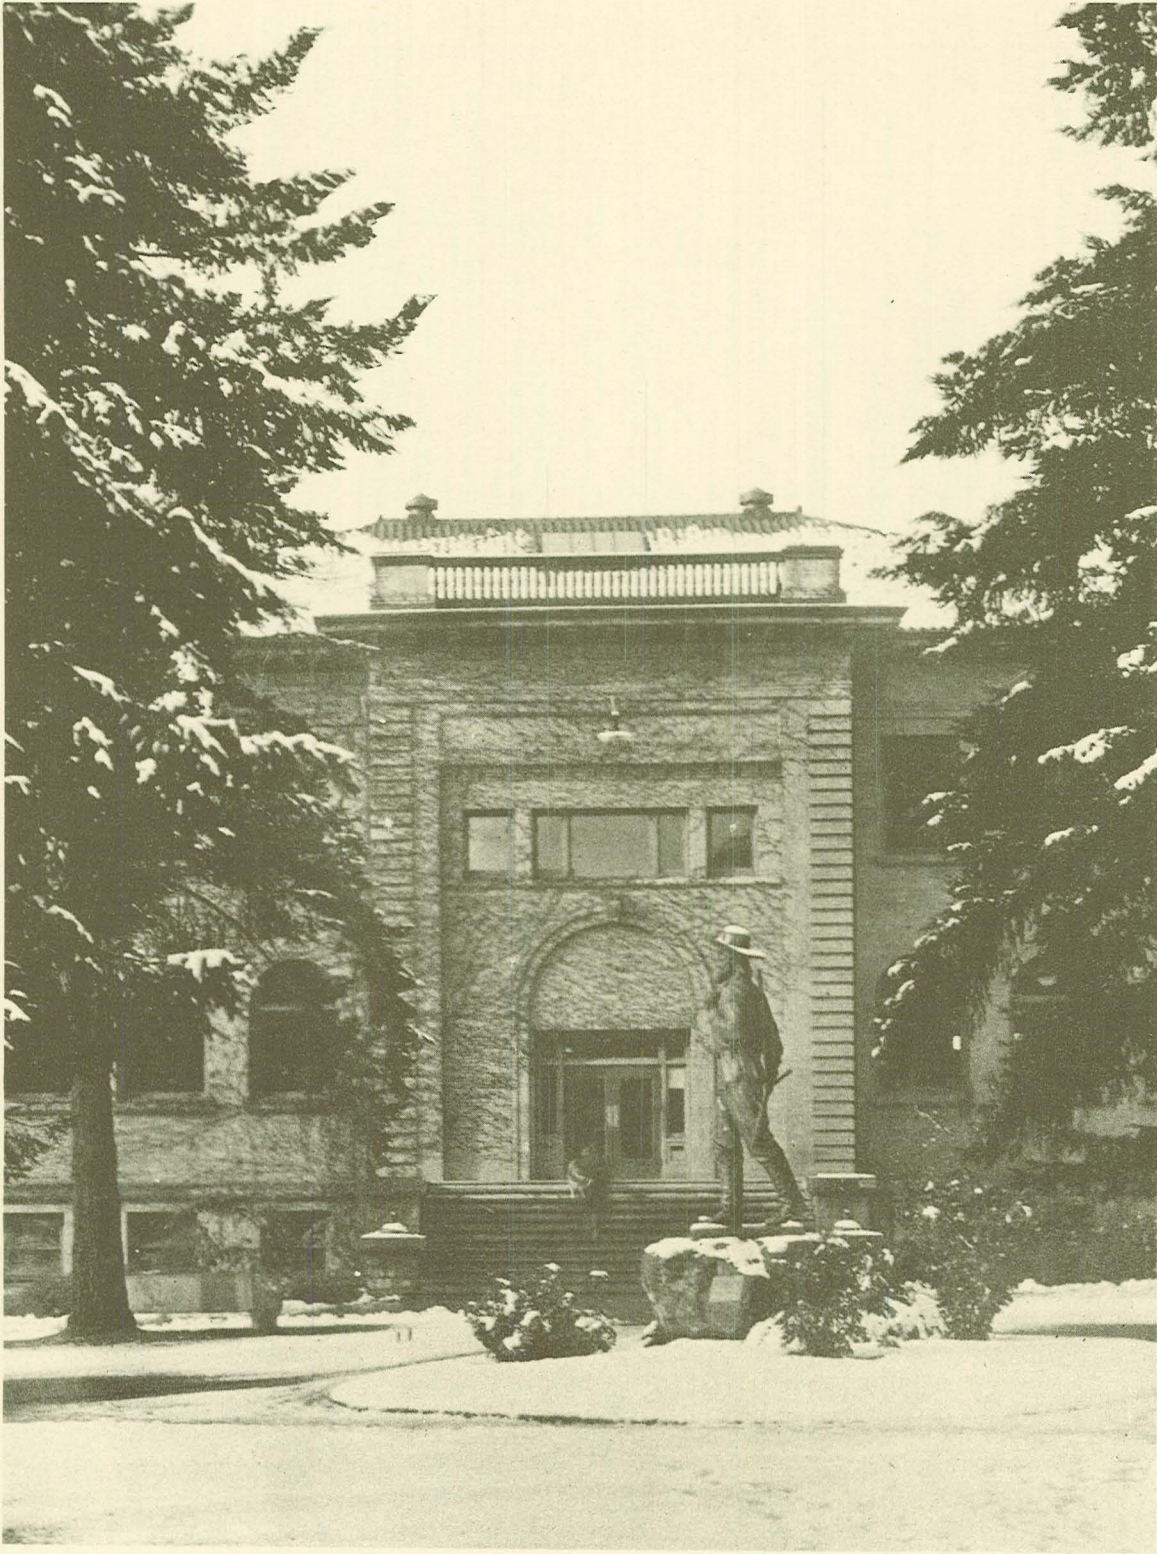

To reflect the spirit as well as to picture the life of the University of Oregon during the college year nineteen hundred twenty-seven and nineteen hundred twenty-eight is the purpose of volume twenty of the Oregana. No attempt has been made to polish or otherwise make bright that which is not deservingly so. . . . the Nineteen Hundred Twenty-eight Oregana goes forth as a mirror of the campus life of Oregon. Wherever the University has made steps in advance the Oregana has tried to keep pace. . . . As the University is, so it has been our attempt to make this volume of its yearbook.

Faculty Personality Sketches

THE ADMINISTRATION is generally charged with the responsibility for developing the University to its fullest possibilities. . . . I must, of course, depend upon the loyal cooperation of the deans, the sympathetic and devoted assistance of the faculty, and, above all, the loyalty and sympathy of the students. . . . For it is the enthusiasm, intelligence, idealism, and accomplishments of the students that reflect the efficiency of the institution. The administration can't make you have sane and laudable ideals, the deans can't compel the adoption of standards of fastidious self-respect, the faculty can't coerce you into habits of industry, intelligence, and enthusiasm for your work. . . . I think you will find all of us eager to do everything we can to advance every legitimate interest of our students, and we plead with you to share with us the common responsibility of our University. We invite you to share in the common task of realizing our ideals, of establishing even higher standards of scholarship, of developing a more splendid atmosphere of culture and formulating more adequate philosophies of life. . . . For in the achievement of these aims we are realizing the fullest mission of Oregon's ideals.

Board of Regents

THE Board of Regents of the University constitutes its official governing body. It is composed of three ex-officio members: The Governor, the Secretary of State, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and of ten citizens appointed for twelve-year terms by the Governor. Although the Board is responsible to the state for management of the University, it wisely exercises this responsibility, in the main, through the president and administrative officers of the University. It determines matters of general policy, makes important appointments, and is especially concerned with the budget.

A number of important decisions have been made by the Regents during the past year, among which the most noteworthy is probably the appointment of Mr. Burt Brown Barker as vice-president of the University in charge of Public Relations.

Dean of Men

ELMER S. SHIRRELL

Elmer L. Shirrell came to the University of Oregon campus this fall, taking the place of Dean H. Walker who is on a leave of absence while studying for his master's degree at Columbia University.

Dean Shirrell was graduated from the University of California in 1914. He studied law and political science there, receiving his M.A. in the latter from the same institution, in 1924. Later he went to Stanford to take graduate work and received his doctor's degree there.

Leaving Stanford he accepted a position as associate professor of political science and dean of men at the University of Arizona. He remained there until this summer when he accepted the offer of the University to become acting dean of men.

Dean of Women

Virginia Judy Esterly has been dean of women at the University of Oregon since 1923, coming here from the University of California.

Dean Esterly attended the University of California, going from there to St. Mary's school at Shanghai, China, where she was acting head of the department of music, from 1907 to 1910. She received her bachelor's degree at California in 1923, and that same year was dean of the inter-session at that institution. In 1924 she was dean of summer session at Berkeley. At the present time she is on the national board of the Y. W. C. A., as a member of the committee on Immigration and Foreign Communities.

During the first part of next year, Dean Esterly will study for her master's degree at the University of California. She will then go to Norway, Sweden and Denmark where she will write a thesis on phases of education for women.

VILLARD HALL ENTRANCE

Literature, Science, the Arts

College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, through its nineteen departments, intends to satisfy the demand for a liberal education. Its curriculum attracts in the main, three classes of students. To the first class belong students who are seeking the broadest foundation in literature, science, or social science, as a foundation for success in their chosen profession. The second, and perhaps the largest class of all, recognize in the liberal arts training an end that is worth while in itself and a foundation for leadership in the affairs of men. They are seeking to satisfy a love of learning and to cultivate powers of self-expression. A third class of students are seeking a specialized training in some liberal arts subject as an approach to some creative art like literature or the drama or an introduction to some field of public service.

Two important changes affecting organization and curriculum of the college will be introduced at the beginning of the next academic year, the junior college and the honors courses. The junior college idea implies that the curriculum of the first two years will be organized as a compact unit with subjects intended to lay the foundation for specialized study during the last two years of university work. The intention is also to put on a premium on methods of instruction more definitely suited to students passing through the trying period of transition between high school and the senior college.

The honors courses are designed to meet the needs of specially gifted students in the upper division. This selected group will be relieved of some of the exacting requirements which apply to students of less capacity or inclination, and, under the general direction and supervision of their instructors, honor students will pursue their investigations into the recesses of the subject wherever they may be led by scientific curiosity or the thirst for knowledge.

The College of Literature, Science and the Arts is comprised of the following departments: animal biology, plant biology, chemistry, economics, English, geology, Germanic Languages, Greek, history, household arts, Latin, mathematics, mechanics and astronomy, military science, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology and romance languages.

The two departments of biology are combined into a division of biology and a certain amount of instruction in the basic principles is given jointly.

Students registering in the College of Literature, Science and the Arts choose a major subject in one of the departments named above or in the division of biology, and proceed through a four-year course of study to the degrees of bachelor of arts or of science.

The departments of the college also contain numerous service courses in liberal arts for the use of not only the major students of the college but those in the professional schools.

The departments of the college include the pure sciences, literature and ancient and modern languages, philosophy, the social sciences, mathematics, and in general those branches that represent the traditional seats of culture and the foundations of technical science.

Architecture and Allied Arts

School of Architecture and Allied Arts is unique among similar institutions throughout the country. In few schools are the useful arts to be found grouped together with the possibility of contact with all, and specialization in any one of them. In perhaps no other school is there a freer spirit or greater encouragement offered for the full development of individual character. This spirit, and the methods employed to develop it, have been made the subject of special inquiry by Eastern institutions and national bodies on architectural education.

The special aim of the school is said to be "to create and sustain an environment in which the student's most worthy qualities, characteristics and capabilities are accepted as a basis for growth; an environment which will be conducive to the discovery of his own special and peculiar powers—intellectual, ethical and physical—and which will afford encouragement and stimulation for their free unfoldment and development."

Beginning as a school of architecture with service courses in fine arts, it has developed to the point where professional work is offered not only in architectural design, but in the special fields of structural and interior design as well. In addition, painting and sculpture are offered in full professional courses, as is training in normal art, craft work and industrial art.

DEAN ELLIS F. LAWRENCE
FACADE OF ART BUILDING

Graduate School

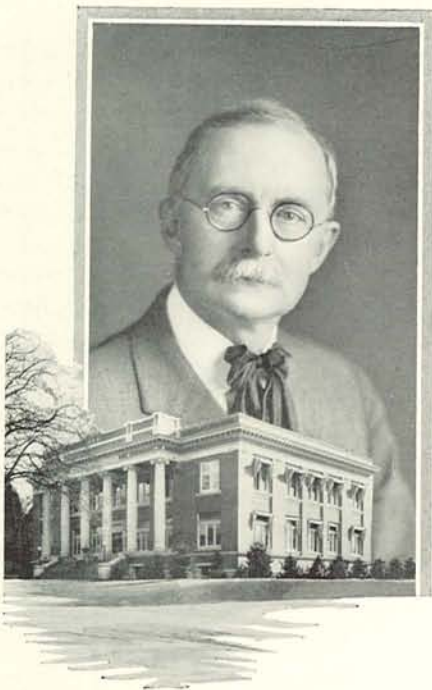

The Graduate School aims may be approximately described under four heads.

First, there is the endeavor to have the student both deepen and widen his scholarship. By having him put his energies into a major and a minor field of study, he is diverted from a loose scattering of his interests over things more or less in general, at the same time that the "taking of courses," which has played too large a part in his undergraduate years, even in his special subjects, is transformed into an approach on the whole body of those subjects, and the attempt is made at the beginnings of a real mastership in them.

Second, in place of the habit of obediently "taking" the contents of lectures and text books, and more or less faithfully giving them back in quizzes and examinations, the student is challenged and expected to take a critically active and investigative attitude towards knowledge and ideas.

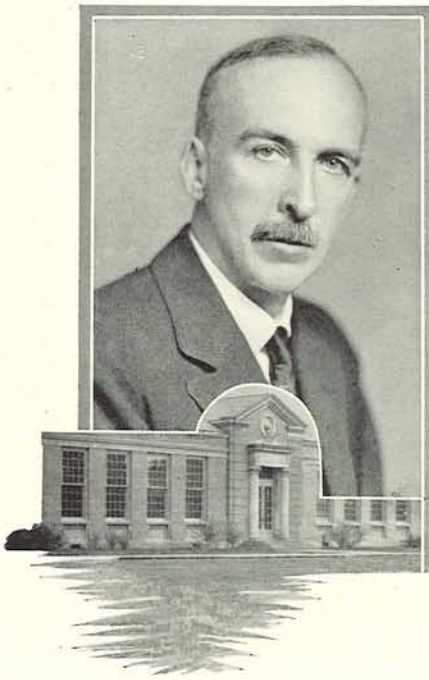

Third, and above all else, the Graduate School wishes to be animated by the idea of research in the very broadest meaning of that term.

Finally, the University of Oregon Graduate School, like every authentic graduate school connected with one of our mainly undergraduate American institutions, endeavors not only to build this active and creative habit of mind above, and as a supplement to, the ordinary college course, but strives to inculcate it within the undergraduate years themselves.

DEAN HENRY D. SHELDON
EDUCATION BUILDING

The school of Education has several important duties to the state. Its first and most important function is the training of teachers for the junior and senior high schools of the state. A large part of this preparation is gained through the mastery of the subjects which the students are to teach, which instruction is obtained in the different departments of the College of Literature, Science and the Arts. The School of Education endeavors to provide these future teachers with the general information and skills which they need in their professional activity. It has not only organized the usual undergraduate courses, but has a complete model and practice high school under its own immediate direction, being the only university on the Pacific Coast to possess this advantage. At present the University graduates 130 high school teachers a year.

Closely allied to the training of high school teachers is the provision of advanced training for experienced teachers, normal school graduates and others who are preparing for administrative and supervisory positions. The research side of education also received recognition.

A general service bureau for the schools of the state to supply information and guidance along modern lines of improvement has been established.

Business Administration

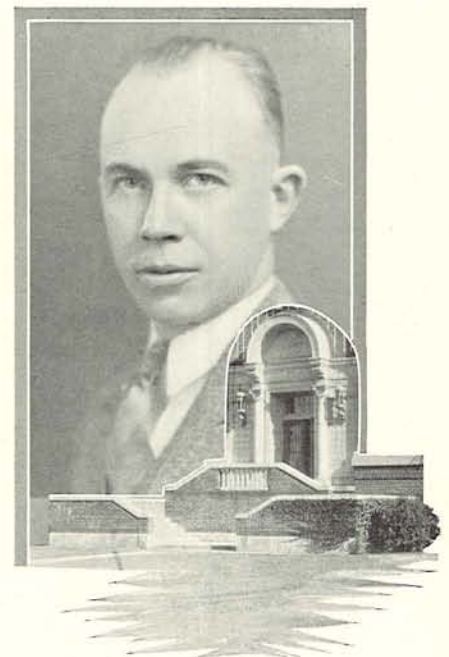

All the days of an oriental lifetime are dedicated to the preservation of "face." The traditional diligence of the Chinese student buried in his "classics" is bent on "making face." Why the years of unrelenting study? To foster an even handed justice, to relieve the pangs of an ancient civilization suffering from maladjustment, to assuage a knowledge, hunger? No. Solely to acquire "face," that curious mixture of public esteem, conceit and play acting.

All too occasionally the same germ is found in the mind of the American university men or women—college to "make face." Always form, seldom fact, less often action.

There are all about us two concepts of education. One teaches the man to know. Its process is a brief recapitulation of the accumulated objective experience of the human race. The results are remarkable in the grasp which the students obtain in the world's accumulated knowledge. The student has attended lectures. He has read much. He knows.

The second concept assumes that education must enable the individual to meet the ever new problems that arise from the kaleidoscope of an eternally changing environment. It is training toward action rather than toward knowledge.

In such a process there is no element of "face." Form gives way to fact and fact is worthy only in action. This is the aim of the School of Business. Emphasis is on doing. The problem is the thing. There is no time for "making face."

COMMERCE HALL DOORWAY

Extension Division

The Extension Division is that agency through which the University of Oregon renders service outside the campus. It makes available the opportunities of the University to the state at large, and does this in many different ways, including much actual class instruction.

For eleven years the Portland Center has been established and has now grown to such proportions that it offers 129 late afternoon and evening classes in Lincoln high school, the Portland library, the Chamber of Commerce building and the Dekum building, with an office at 322 Corbett building through which clears the many additional University activities in the City of Portland. Other extension centers, offering class work to regularly enrolled students, are located in Salem, Astoria, The Dalles and Hood River. During the past year, 4756 term students registered in these various centers. Work done in Portland and Salem carries resident credit.

As part of the Portland Extension Center, the Portland Summer Session is held each year simultaneously with the campus session and has an annual enrollment of nearly eight hundred students.

Students sitting by their own firesides in every county and in 359 communities in the state take the courses offered by the correspondence study department, which now has an enrollment of 1440.

With the Extension Division, "the state is the campus."

EAST ENTRANCE TO JOURNALISM BUILDING

School of Journalism

The School of Journalism is completing its sixteenth year this spring as a Department and its thirteenth year as a School. It has been sending out graduates into the newspaper world since the Commencement of 1916. Its alumni rolls now contain the names of 137 four-year major graduates, and many others who have profited by two or more years of the work without earning a journalism degree. In all, 257 of its students have entered newspaper or magazine work, advertising, publicity or printing upon leaving the campus. Eighty-nine per cent of the graduates who entered journalism were still true to their chosen profession in 1928, while 11 per cent had succumbed to the lure of matrimony or other competing ways of life.

The School of Journalism is one of the best equipped in the United States, was one of the ten chosen to initiate the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism, one of the five to be represented on the American Council for Education in Journalism, and is one of the half dozen that have received the most prominent national recognition from the profession and the public.

The School was one of the first to initiate the system of having each subject taught by a specialist.

DEAN CHARLES E. CARPENTER

School of Law

The Law School has as a minimum entrance requirement two years of college work. Most of the students in the school, however, have either three years of college work or a bachelor's degree. The Law School is a member of the Association of American Law Schools, an organization composed of all the high-standard law schools of the United States.

The Law School not only seeks to educate men and women for the practice of law, but to give them such a broad foundation of knowledge and training that they will be able to take a leading part in the social, economic and civic advancement of the state. For this reason primarily, a broad collegiate education is stressed. Research in the problems of Oregon law is encouraged and the results placed at the disposal of Oregon citizens. The law students in the practice courts held in the spring of each year, are given actual experience in procedural work as a foundation for their later practice.

The law students are organized into a Law School association which cooperates with the faculty and which promotes a closer association among the students during the Law School course.

The Oregon Law Review, a quarterly journal published by the Law School, is devoted to the discussion of problems of interest to the legal profession. It is sent out to most of the lawyers of the state and to the law schools and state libraries throughout the United States.

The School of Sociology

The School of Sociology has as its tremendous responsibility, the title role in conferring upon each human individual in the Oregon commonwealth the real possession and fullest enjoyment of the social and natural heritage that life in the 20th century in Oregon should make available. In part this responsibility involves most efficient agencies for social work with those who are not quite able to steer their life boat in the swift and turbulent stream of change of our land and times. This service of personality diagnosis and reorganization necessarily calls for clearest insight into human nature and conduct and the play of the conserving forces in the different associational groups through which the coordination and cooperation of human effort are realized and inspiration of human purpose enkindled.

The further and larger responsibility of the School of Sociology involves that service for the communities, small and large, of Oregon and for the people of the state as a whole in their flight into the future which is not unlike that afforded by the motor and pilot combined of an aeroplane. The maintaining of twentieth century height and ascending plane of progress is a critical undertaking. Nature does not equip the individual or the community to achieve this automatically. The science of sociology has the central responsibility with regard to it.

DEAN FREDERIC GEORGE YOUNG
SOCIOLOGY BUILDING

School of Music

Since 1902, there has been a school of music on the University campus, though previously there had been a department. Too, there was little or no place for music, due largely to the fact that the ordinary curriculum had too many demands upon it, and thus music was eliminated. However, music exists at the University in a regular course of study.

The music building, because it is so isolated from the campus, not only frees its students from any disturbances, but also has a very commanding position. It is equipped with a spacious auditorium, a magnificent organ, private practice rooms, a lecture room with a radio; besides, phonograph with complete libraries of records, including appliances for making records of student performances. Adequate provisions are made for the student intending to be a professional, but, students regarding music as a factor in broadening their education utilize it, also.

Men and women who have national and even international reputations are included amidst the faculty of the school of music.

The school of music provides for a large group of regularly matriculated University students who are expected to take a degree in four years and who will offer music either as a major or minor subject.

DEAN JOHN J. LANDSBURY
ENTRY TO MUSIC BUILDING

School of Physical Education

The School of Physical Education has a two-fold function. In the first place it is interested in the physical welfare of the entire student body. To a great many this means health or freedom from sickness, a very worthy ideal. One of the departments is the University Health Service, which is equipped with modern appliances, consultations rooms, X-Ray apparatus, and is conducted by skillful physicians and nurses. The need for a new hospital is keenly felt, yet by very efficient work in the old building the students are provided with comfortable quarters when sick.

Physical welfare takes on the larger aspect of providing every means for promoting the habits and attitudes that make for a physical well-being. Through departments for Men and Women, a training in fundamental bodily skills is provided, and through the hygiene courses the information needed to intelligently follow this program, both now and after college days are over, is taught.

One aim of the school is to provide adequate facilities so that every member of the university may find opportunities for a recreation program. The intramural program is made as extensive as possible so that any one who wishes to enter this kind of competition may do so. The Department of Athletics represents in its activities the flower of a program that permeates the entire student body. The second function of the School of Physical Education is that of teacher training.

Glimpses of Campus Life

*"But the sweetest dreams in all this world,
Are dreams of Oregon."*

—U. of O. song.

SO, INDEED, does it seem to the graduate and alumnus who turns the pages of Memory's book and lives over once again the events that crowd the college year. What a variety of moments it contained—moments of laughter, of friendly ties made stronger, and of serious study and endeavor.

There is the Frosh Parade—long lines of paint-smearing, brow-beaten freshmen stooping to kiss the seal in front of Villard Hall . . . the Frosh bonfire, flaming high in the night . . . and the Underclass Mix.

Then Homecoming . . . wistful-eyed alums viewing once-familiar scenes . . . the frenzy of the big game . . .

Next come campus dances, from the Frosh Glee to the Senior Ball . . . filmy gowns . . . cherished programs . . .

Junior Shine Day and gypsy maids . . . Dads' Day, and groups of interested fathers . . . Spring . . . pink magnolias against dark-green firs . . . Junior Week-end.

Last comes graduation . . . black-robed seniors . . . the pain of parting from Alma Mater. But the world beckons . . . "goodbye, goodbye."

The Associated Students

ALL regularly enrolled undergraduate students of the University are organized under the name of the Associated Students of the University of Oregon for the express purpose of promoting the best interests of the student body through the fostering and control of all student activities, which includes athletics, concert and lecture series, glee clubs, orchestra, forensics and student publications. This organization is incorporated under the laws of the State of Oregon and has all the authority and power granted a corporation by the State Legislature.

The A. S. U. O. elects its own officers and executive and student council representatives annually, and entrusts them with the direction of student government, through the aid of its executive agent, the graduate manager, and his group of assistant student managers. A long-established spirit of co-operation between the faculty and student administration is to be seen in all joint undertakings of the university and students.

This year's administration is accredited as successful, both from the standpoint of carrying out the work that has come to be a part of the traditional endeavor—Greater Oregon work, Homecoming and Junior Week-ends, High School Conference and athletic programs—and in the initiation of new programs of activity that promise to take their places annually in University life—the introduction of Dad's Day, the Campus Chest, and the provision for distribution of exam "blue books" through the administration.

The first annual Dad's Day was held on the campus January 28 with dads from all parts of the state making the trip to Eugene. A permanent organization was approved by the dads at their banquet, for which 700 covers were placed in the Woman's building. All departments of the University held "open house" for the inspection of the dads on their tour of the campus. The Campus Chest drive was launched during the first week of November as a "drive to end drives." This one drive of the year was planned to raise funds for the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., American Red Cross and the American Legion, their appropriations from the chest fund being based on what had previously been raised for them individually.

The student council also took action this year requiring the scheduling of serenades with the Dean of Men three days before the serenade is given, in order that the responsibility for serenades be shifted from city to university authorities.

Vena Gaskill, secretary, and Donald Beelar, president, represented Oregon this year at the national conclave of university representatives, held December 15-17 at Lincoln, Nebraska.

Student Council

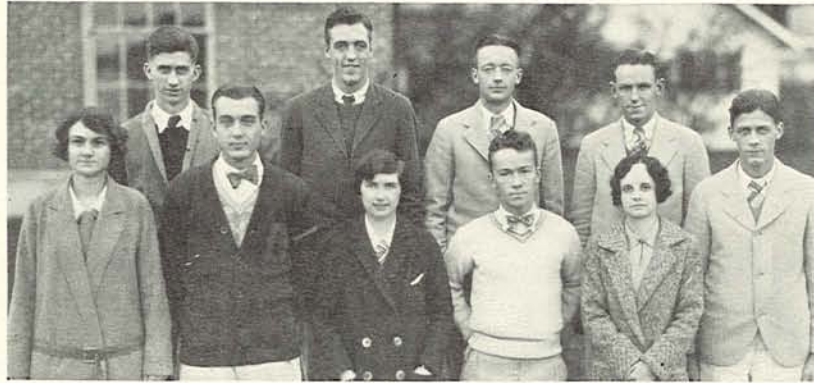

The administration of the University of Oregon has delegated considerable authority to the students and vested it in the corporate organization known as the Associated Students of the University of Oregon. These powers are exercised directly through the channels of the Student and the Executive Councils. The former of these councils is composed entirely of students, representative of various student groups, and cares for the relationship of students and faculty, the conduct of the student body at games and gatherings, of the relationship of the individual student toward the university, and matters of tradition. The Executive Council is composed of six students, the president of the university, three faculty members, a member of the board of regents, two alumni and the graduate manager. It has control over all student body activities, appoints the graduate manager, all coaches, trainers and student assistants, and must approve all budgets for student expenditures.

Homecoming and High School Conference

Homecoming, November 11-13, this year started off with a bang—the noise parade reincarnated. The “O” flamed on Skinner’s Butte. It thrilled all that sea of noisy life that surged down Willamette street—all, except the sleepy-eyed frosh who had worked and kept the vigil the night before. Rally yells at the armory soon took the place of screeching saws and lumbering steam rollers. An “old-fashioned rally” it was called, with team yells, talks of victory in the past and on the morrow, climaxed with “Mighty Oregon.” The next day was the day of the big O. S. C.-Oregon game. Lemon-yellow chrysanthemums blossomed at the luncheon in McArthur Court, with more of them in the grandstand. Oregon’s grand-army, the alumni lettermen, paraded, bands played, yellow and green streamers fluttered, yells echoed again and again, card stunts were flashed—and the game was played. As a feature of its 1927 meeting the Alumni Association of the University unveiled a portrait of Dean John Straub, done by Julian Lamar of New York, which they presented to the University and hung in the entrance-way to Alumni Hall. Other annual homecoming features on the program this year included the smoker, the dances and the showers of Oregon rain.

The High School Conference with its divisions, the High School Press Association, the Association of Girls’ Leagues and the Conference of High School Principals and Advisors, was held on the campus for the ninth annual meeting, January 13-15. “College Night,” designed to give the delegates a view of campus life, was revived this year, and the “Annualology,” a special session for year book editors and managers, was introduced by Mary Benton and Sam Kinley, editor and manager of the Oregana. The Press Association was divided into four separate groups, the editors and managers of papers and editors and managers of annuals. The style show, given by Women’s League, an athletic exhibition by W. A. A., a banquet and tour of the campus helped entertain the visitors between official meetings.

Greater Oregon

HAROLD SOCOLOFSKY
General Chairman

Students of the University of Oregon under a directorate of leaders representative of the thirteen districts into which the state has been divided work effectively, particularly in the summer vacation periods, for a greater Oregon. It is their work through promotion and goodwill to create an interest in the state university among preparatory school students of Oregon, to aid them in their selection of the institution of higher learning which will most effectively meet their needs, and to further assist them in choosing curricula best adapted to each individually.

Information cards indexing preparatory school graduates to ease the routine of A. S. U. O. office work, and programs put on in the leading high schools of the state during the Christmas vacation period were new features initiated by the committee this year.

Junior Week-End

Junior Week-end plans for this year included many well worked out features, some of which had never been introduced previously in the traditional event. Junior Vod-vil, under the direction of Billy O'Bryant this year, instead of being the usual musical comedy type of show took on the form of a revue, closely resembling large circuit productions in the elaborateness of its settings and inclusiveness of its cast. The canoe fete was revived after its death of one year and as presented by Roy Herndon was a feature of the celebration that will be remembered long for its beauty for none of the usual humorous floats were allowed. A new plan provided for only fourteen floats, and eliminated the tiresome length. Baseball, track, tennis and golf helped fill student time, and the annual events, the painting of the "O," the burning of the "green" and the tug-of-war across the race, came in for their share of excitement during the week-end under the direction of Bill Eddy. Jo Ralston saw that no one went away hungry from the campus luncheon, and then came the climax of the eventful week-end with a Junior Prom elaborately staged by Ed Winter.

Sea-Change

While I am lying here with the ocean before my eyes,
And one grey gull low-flying, where I to fall asleep,
The blowing sand would drift, and close above my eyes,
And I should sleep a long, long passive sleep.
Then my spirit, I know, would fly there with the sea-gull,
Though my body were part of the water, and part of the sand,
And I should hover about this spot as a wanton sea-gull,
With wings that skim the water, and feet that print the sand.

—John Scheffer.

Escape

Today, by the pier, were sailor men
Whom I passed when I want to walk,
Dressed in the garb of the swaggering sea,
And wrapped around in mystery,
And salty the drawel from their bearded lips
And ever and ever they talked of ships.

Today, in our cottage, the same old chores.
I cook and mend and sweep and mop,
My eyes on the street where the sailor men linger,
Ears for the chanty, heart for the singer.
Captains and mates and sailors go by—
At grey dawn tomorrow—so shall I!

—MAXINE BRADBURY

Old Memory

If some tomorrow I
Should lay aside my heart
And leave a void
Where pain had been before,
Would bitterness still cling
To its old hiding place?
Bitterness and more?
Beyond the end what comes?
What then? What then?
The howling winds of rushing space
Brushing me along eternity
Into the infinite,
Could they erase
Even the merest memory
Of your face?
And more and more

—ETHA JEANNE CLARK

One Jew

With nails of brass, and words—
Brass none too sharp,
The words with slashing fangs—
Mean sounds that snarl
And rend the shrinking flesh;
With word and nail
They wed me to bare wood.
Crashes of pain
Tore the grass,
Curved my lips
Around golden words—
“For they know not what they do.”

—JULIAN FISHER SMITH

Alcyone

Then she, whose hair enwheeled her
head like flame,
Ran quiv'ring through the copse of
swarthy trees
Which sought to snare those spinning strands, and tame
The troublous sighing that was fear's release.
A swarm of amber stars pierced
through the wood,
Their spindle-tips sharp seeking of her flesh † † † † (Transparent flesh which held a
scornful blood
Uncurbed by any gentle God-fraught mesh.)
The night, bright veined with fever,
coiled 'round her,
Who ran unheeding of all save the
cloying scent † † † †
The fragrance of the milk-white
unicorns, the stir
Of phantom hoofs still-hunting her
all ways she went.

—FLORENCE JONES

Orisons

To help me pray
I have no need
Of taper's ray,
Or wooden bead;

No sculptured saint
With pale, meek hands,
To hear my faint
Whispered demands;

No gray bells rung
To call my soul,
Nor incense swung
From long-chained bowl.

The things I want
Are only three:
The leafy flaunt
Of a growing tree.

The windy arch
Of sky and blue,
The white clouds' march
In slow review.

And then my prayer
Springs swift and strong,
As a bird in air,
As a winging song.

—SERENA MADSEN

A Sonnet

A rocket bursts and crimson wedges split
The blinding blackness of a moonless night.
And, with its flare is gone the earthly bit
Of seeing things, but in the mind the sight
Is still intact and drawn with scarlet oils
On vision-walls of darkness in the brain.
Each vivid line, each red that crooks and coils
Is etching deep and there it will remain.
The bursting flare a living fire of love
That never cools, yet does not hurl its spark
Again to have its scorching tongues above
The earth. It stays, yet steadfast in the dark
And cuts still deeper in the mind the thought
That love is all that man has ever sought.

Classes

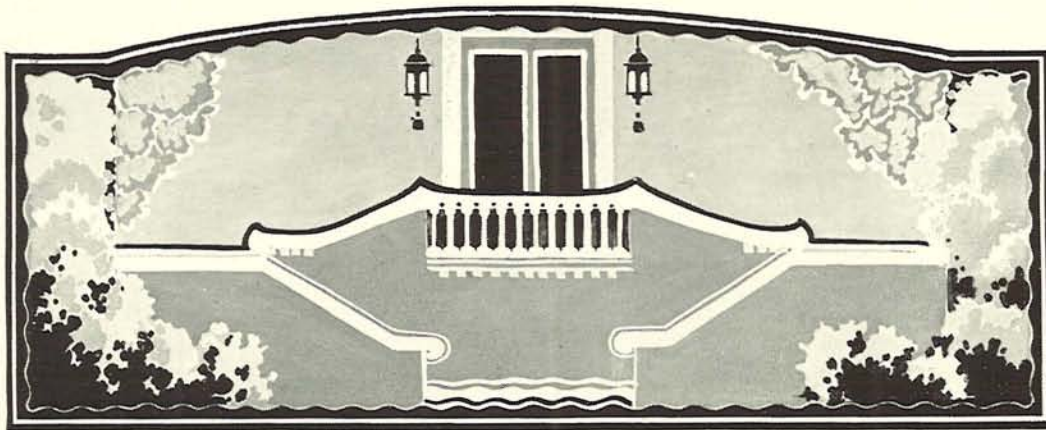

Seniors--Juniors--Underclassmen

Graduating Class

Undergraduate Activities

Portland Medical School

A TIMID FRESHMAN, round-eyed and green-capped; a cynical sophomore, wearing his moleskins and his boredom with a conscious proudness; a junior, heading committees, busy and active in his white cords, and finally a senior, mustached and given to long hours in the library—these are the four stages of an Oregon student's campus life.

The freshman, whose existence is haunted by the fear of the paddle, and the sophomore, who is busy being ultra-collegiate, have time for only a more or less minor part in the year's activities. The Frosh Glee and the Sophomore Informal are the main events sponsored by the two classes.

The juniors enliven the college year by a multitude of interesting affairs. There is Junior Shine Day . . . gayly-dressed gypsy girls and wooden shine-benches . . . the Junior Vodvil . . . last year's captivating "Creole Moon" . . . and Junior Week-end, culminating in the Junior Prom . . . laid in Aztec-land last year.

Honors and laurels to the seniors . . . the Gerlinger cup, won last year by Esther Hardy—the Koyl cup by Benoit McCroskey, the Alberts' Prize by Algot Westergren, and the Rhodes Scholarship by Theodore Ruch.

Finally, there are the medical students, who after four years at Oregon go to Portland, to the Medical school situated on beautiful Marquam Hill.

Senior Class History

On October 2, 1924, the class of '28 began its career. Conditions made it necessary to organize without a president, but the executive committee, composed of the vice-president, Maxine Edmunds; secretary, Donna Fleming; treasurer, Burns McGowan, and two additional members elected by the class, with the aid of Dean John Straub, handled the affairs of the class efficiently.

Although the class lost the Underclass Mix, the freshman participation was ably handled by Carvel Nelson, and the Mix was a successful one. The "biggest" bonfire was in charge of George Hill, and in spite of unfavorable weather conditions, upheld the tradition of improving the bonfire each year. Earl Olson was chairman of the Vigilance Homecoming Committee, and Arthur Priaux of the Frosh Parade.

The social activities of the year were conducted by Foster Rose, chairman of the Frosh Glee, and Ted Becker, chairman of the Frosh Picnic.

As sophomores, the class assumed the traditional air of confidence. Sophomore athletes made a noticeable showing on varsity teams, and scholastically the class held its place. Among honorary fraternities members of the class were extensively recognized. True to custom, an official garb was affected, and blue sweaters were the "rage" for a week, at least.

Class officers were: president, Benoit McCroskey; vice-president, Virginia Lee Richardson; secretary, Alice Douglas; treasurer, Robert Keeney. Burt Randall was chairman of the Sophomore Informal, annual dance at which the sophomores entertain the entire campus, and Bill McGregor chairman of the Mix.

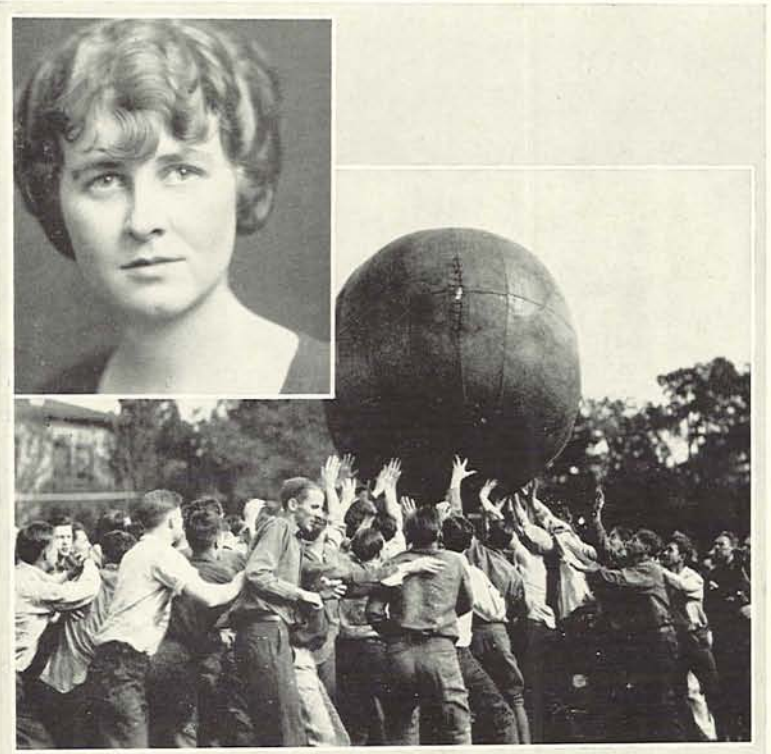

A dance and picnic were given during the year exclusively for sophomores. The committee in charge of the dance included Emerson Wright, Esther Hardy, Elizabeth Talbot, Pauline Stewart, Robert Knight and William Prudhomme. Conducting the picnic were Don McCook, Frank Riggs, Helen Manary, Nancy Peterson, Ed Crowley, Jack Renshaw and Edith Bain.

The leadership of the class as juniors was entrusted to Frank Riggs, president; Katherine Mutzig, vice-president; Marian Barnes, secretary; Ed Crowley, treasurer; Robert Warner, sergeant-at-arms.

The first class activity of the year was Junior Shine day. Over one hundred dollars was raised, and the sum, according to tradition, was given to Eugene charitable organizations.

A class dance was held fall term under the direction of Jack Renshaw, Paul Clark, Bill Pendergast, Pete Sullivan and Stuart Ball. The dance was a "Hick" affair, the swains calling for their fair ones in a large hay rack.

Don Beelar was general chairman of Junior Week-end. The Vodvil was probably the most outstanding achievement of this week-end. A musical comedy, "Creole Moon," was an innovation. The production, including the entire musical arrangement, was composed by students. The committee in charge of the vodvil included Benoit McCroskey, George Eisman, Billy O'Bryant, Paul Luy, Don McCook.

The Junior Prom committee included Bill Powell, Mark Taylor, Ed Crowley, Mary Benton, Don McCook, Katherine Mutzig. Pauline Stewart and Nellie Johns were in charge of the campus luncheon, Bill McGregor and Arthur Hamilton of Campus Day. The canoe fete committee was made up of Herbert Socolofsky, Don Robinette and Bob Benjamin.

The opening of the senior year showed progress in the financial management of the class, and in individual achievement. Two members of the class, Benoit McCroskey and Jack Hempstead were members of the initial around the world debate team. Vic Wetzel, captain of the track team, is the best all-around athlete. Wetzel is one of the outstanding point gatherers on the track team competing in the weight events and is among the aspirants for the 1928 United States Olympic squad. Virginia Lounsbury, senior star swimmer, will also try out for the Olympic meet.

The Seniors became young again in the gaities of Leap Week. Features of this were the "Bar Room Bust," the "Cat-Astrophe" and "The Co-ed's Revenge."

The Senior Ball was dignified with its architectural decorations of French style in black and white conceived by Abbott Lawrence.

The class has left a fitting memorial and the hope that its influence may have been beneficial.

THEODORE C. RUCH

Rhodes Scholar

Theodore C. Ruch, chosen to receive the Rhodes Scholarship in 1929, was graduated in psychology with a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Oregon with the class of 1927 and will be a candidate for a master's degree in the same subject at Leland Stanford University this June.

Mr. Ruch is a member of Crossroads, Agora, Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa.

ESTHER HARDY

The Koyl Cup

The Koyl cup presented each year at the Junior Prom to the best all-around junior man was won last spring by Benoit McCroskey. The award was made on the basis of scholarship, character and leadership.

Since his freshman year, during which he won the State Oratorical contest at Salem, Mr. McCroskey has been a prominent Oregon debater. This year he was an originator and participant in the first Round-the-World Debate tour completed April 21, and every year has been a member of the Varsity Debate squad. He is affiliated with Phi Gamma Delta and Delta Sigma Rho.

Gerlinger Cup

"For manners are not idle but the fruit of loyal nature and of noble minds." This inscription appears on the Gerlinger cup which is awarded each year to the junior woman who has most distinguished herself at Oregon. Esther Hardy last year was selected for the honor.

Miss Hardy, who during this college year has held the office of president of the Woman's League, is a member of Mortar Board, Kwama, Pi Lambda Theta, Pi Theta Upsilon, the Woman's Athletic Association Kappa Alpha Theta and Phi Beta Kappa.

BENOIT MCCROSKEY

Joseph H. Albert Cup

The Joseph H. Albert Cup won last spring by Knut Algot Westergren is awarded each year to "that member of the senior class, who during his college career, has shown the most progress towards the ideal in character, service and wholesome influence."

Mr. Westergren, who distinguished himself in basketball, being chosen three consecutive years as the All-Pacific Coast Conference guard, is a member of Beta Theta Pi, Friars, Order of the "O," and the Physical Education club.

Junior Class History

RONALD HUBBS
President

Now that it has reached the third and outstanding year of Campus existence, the Class of 1929 can well afford to pause and quietly reflect on the results of her activity. Numerical strength and genuine enthusiasm have been assets not always enjoyed by preceding classes, and accordingly this class can record the following accomplishments:

The Frosh Glee was unmistakably one of the best class functions ever presented by a yearling class. In an atmosphere of snow and icicles University collegians enjoyed every minute of an intensely real and successful dance.

The class again found itself united in a common cause in the annual Sophomore and Freshman tilt. But the climax of the class activity was found in the dazzling and brilliant Sophomore Informal. The elaborate and decorative marine scene has long been the cause for comment from those who were guests of the Class of 1929.

This year has found a strong Junior Class at the University of Oregon. Casualties in personnel were below normal, consequently the class was prepared in numbers and ability to continue a progressive program.

A class dance and a Junior Shine Day were conducted in usual Class of 1929 manner . . . successfully. Naturally, Junior Week-end was the triumph of them all. The musical comedy, the prom, the canoe fete, the campus luncheon, the campus day, the mothers' day reception . . . the entire week was a glorious pageant and interesting to witness.

And as Juniors, the class is looking forward to the Senior year and ultimate graduation. The class has no desire to shout its virtues from the house tops, but the members are sincere in hoping that it can soberly be said: "the Class of 1929 was progressive, strong, and successful."

Junior Shine Day

Colorful displays of Junior Gypsies, Junior Bootblacks and student shoes at large, marked February the fifteenth as the traditional Junior Shine Day of the year. Burr Abner, chairman of the shine day committee, reported that over ninety-two dollars were collected from the four stands located in places of vantage about the campus. Of this amount the Junior Class turned seventy-two dollars over to the Campus Chest, to be used for charitable purposes.

Dena Alm, chairman of the ticket sales committee, appointed thirty-two girls to don the flaming costumes of the silver-seeking, palm reading vagabonds of Southern Europe. The prize of an engraved tambourine, given to the girl selling the most tickets, was won by Etha Jeanne Clark.

Other girls on the ticket selling committee were Mae Tobin, Olive Banks, Edith Fenwick, Billie Martland, Alice McGrath, Sally Hughson, Grace Gardner, Josephine Ralston, Shirley McGuire, Thelma Mellien, Elaine Crawford, McKay Ricks, Frances Perry, Janet Pearce, Madge Normile, Charlotte Carll, Margaret Nugent, Ruth Bradley, Mary Lou Dutton, Florence Somerville, Ethel Lou Crane, Helen Smith, Alice Gorman, Rose Roberts, Marion Leach, Margaret Slusher, Edith Dodge, Vivian Blair, Maxine Paulson, Mary McLean and Bernyce Hensley.

Thirty-six Greeks were imported by Wade Newbegin, chairman of the stand committee, from the various Greek colonies about the Campus to insure the ticket buyers the best in professional shines. A prize was given in a lottery based upon the tickets.

Wade Newbegin was captain and had working under him, four lieutenants, William Dielschneider, Robert Dutton, William Crawford and Gordon Stearns, and the following shiners: John Gray, Ralph McCulloch, William Eddy, George Akers, Boone Hendricks, Phillip Holmes, Melvel Goodin, Roy Herndon, Tillman Peterson, Joe Roberts, Herbert Lewis, Thomas Montgomery, Vernon McGee, Clark Price, Bradshaw Harrison, Del Richmond, Robert Galloway, Robert Foster, Lester Johnson, George Stager, Louis Harthrong, Irving Flegel, Maurice Reavis, Marshall Hopkins, George Schade, Frank Hall, Art Anderson, Ray Jost, Austin Sheperd, Verne Dale, Palmer Schlegel and Frank Hallin.

Sophomore Class

The first year of university life is truly an experience, for it is initiation into something importantly different, acclimation to new atmosphere, a particular system of living, traditions, studies and social life. With the increasing numbers of each freshman class, it becomes more and more evident that effort to help the freshman rather than hinder him, must be put forth. Realizing this necessity, a new policy was adopted by the Sophomore class this year in regard to the hazing of freshmen. While many traditions were still respected, initiations, parades and mixes were organized and were more lenient than in past years. This was probably the most important achievement of the class of 1930. The policy was first set in motion at the "squarest underclass mix," which, quite according to custom, was won by the sophomores.

Other highlights of the year were the class dance, held during fall term, and the dance and picnic in the spring. The Sophomore Informal using a Chinese motif was a picturesque achievement. Carl Nelson, Paul Hunt, and Harold Kelly supervised the mix; Fred Schultze and Eleanor Poorman the class dance; Tom Stoddard, general chairman, Paul Hunt, Eleanor Flanagan, Arlen McCarty and Walton Crane the informal.

Besides the accomplishments of the class as a whole, individual members were prominent in campus activities. Seven men were included on the varsity football squad and a proportionate number on the swimming, basketball and other athletic teams and in other activities.

Setting a precedent, the men of the Class of '30 adopted and wore a class insignia, "moleskin" trousers.

Freshman Class

To the wearers of the green caps, the first year is a difficult one, but its gifts to the memories of a graduate are greater than the other three. It is recalled as one of the great experiences of college life, this first year, and although every freshman is the victim of hilarity, the recipient of blows from the familiar paddle, the denizen of the mill race, and the son of toil, it offers something that few would reject.

The largest class in the history of the University of Oregon entered in the fall of 1927. Its first formal introduction to school life was the under-class mix with the sophomores. The next event was the "Get Acquainted Party" which also brought the freshmen in closer contact with the rest of the school.

The class dance, always the most important achievement of any class, and in this case the Frosh Glee, was given winter term. The decorative scheme was that of a subterranean cavern, and the motif was elaborately developed. Kenneth Curry was general chairman of the Glee and Benjamin Weatherwax had charge of decorations.

Although the freshman football team did not win all of its games, the season was very successful. Interest was also displayed in basketball and other sports.

The "burning O," successor to the freshman bonfire, was another of the undertakings of the entire class, both men and women cooperating to make this a success.

The Medical School

Gratifying progress has been made during the past year in the medical center in Portland, of which the University Medical School is the nucleus. This is true with respect to all the functions of the Medical School, namely, research, the training of future practitioners, and the ministrations to the sick and afflicted.

Physical evidence of this development is made apparent by a visit to the campus which now comprises one hundred and eight acres on Marquam Hill, including Sam Jackson Park. Twenty-five acres in the latter were deeded by the University to the United States Government; a new road has been completed to that tract; and contracts have been let for the immediate construction of a three hundred bed Veterans' Bureau Hospital at a cost of $1,350,000. The grounds of the Medical School proper have been graded, terraced and seeded. The Doernbecher Memorial Hospital for Children is in full operation and all details of equipment and building have been completed.

With respect to research during the past year, the Medical School has made substantial contributions from several departments, the most important of which are:

studies in the departments of Anatomy and Medicine with reference to the use of liver in the treatment of pernicious anemia; nutritional studies to determine the relationship between foods and health and certain diseases, in the department of Physiology and in the Collins Nutritional Research Laboratory; studies in the physiology of the gall bladder, in the department of Physiology; and, in the departments of Pharmacology and Dermatology, investigations into the cause and prevention and cure of yeast infections among fruit pickers and in the canneries. There has been widespread acknowledgement of the merit of this work in the Medical School.

In the training of physicians two accessions have materially augmented the Medical School facilities; (1) The completion of the Doernbecher Memorial Hospital for Children and its organization for teaching purposes has placed the department of Pediatrics upon an exceptionally sound and complete basis, affording unusual opportunity for the training of future practitioners in diseases and disabilities of children. (2) A contractual agreement between the County Commissioners of Multnomah County and the Regents of the University with reference to the Multnomah County Hospital has enabled elaboration of services therein for teaching purposes in all departments of clinical Medicine and Surgery.

The total registration in the Medical School this year numbers two hundred thirty. The applications for admission to the first year still continue to exceed the available places, and the scholastic standing maintained by the Medical School assures unquestioned recognition from educational foundations.

In the matter of ministrations to the sick, the number of patients receiving benefits of the Medical School services far outnumbers any previous year. Approximately twenty thousand separate individuals received medical and surgical attention in the various hospitals and clinics part of or affiliated with the Medical School. Approximately twelve thousand were ambulatory patients attending the Portland Free Dispensary, approximately two thousand were children at the Doernbecher Hospital, and approximately six thousand were hospital patients at the Multnomah County Hospital.

The appropriation by the General Education Board of New York amounting to $128,500 has permitted extensive improvement in point of equipment, $63,500 of this sum having been appropriated for that purpose, and $55,000 to aid in salaries. The latter has resulted in the establishment of residencies in Medicine, Surgery and Obstetrics in the Multnomah County Hospital, positions which afford excellent opportunities for advanced training for students who have completed the usual internship.

Upon the campus of the County Hospital the new nurses' home is completed. This will make available approximately forty new beds for patients in the hospital. One of the outstanding recent developments is the affiliation of the nurses' training schools throughout the state with the Medical School.

A Precise Review of Plays

LIGHTS flickering down Thirteenth Street through the rain . . . lights from Guild Hall beckoning through the rain . . .

Up the steps of the Administration Building . . . dripping umbrella in the rack . . . into Guild Hall to find a seat among the friendly, familiar faces . . . an instant's hush . . . the curtain's up and the play begins!

The wit of Oscar Wilde, or the grotesques of R. U. R. . . . the rich drama of Eugene O'Neill and Edgar Lee Masters . . . all flashed across the footlights by voices grown strangely thrilling and unfamiliar. MISS FLORENCE E. WILBUR
Director of Drama

THE DRAMA DEPARTMENT of the University has just completed one of its most successful years. This was Miss Wilbur's third year as head of dramatics, and she had made it one that will be remembered not only by students in the department but also by the playgoers of the University.

The plays produced this year were selected upon their merit and not by the degree of facility with which they could be produced; consequently each play was distinguished by its individuality and quality. Students in drama are given opportunity to assist with the choosing of the plays under the guidance of the director.

The second of the annual state high school play tournaments, inaugurated by Miss Wilbur last year, was held in May under the auspices of the drama department.

In April the department had a "week of repertoire" in which all the plays presented during the year were repeated.

Producing Staff of Guild Theatre

When the average person witnesses a play he does not think of the people who have made the background of the performance. Those who do this are the unseen hands of drama and are as artistic and creative as the seen hands, the actors. Their work is as much responsible for the success or failure of a production as that of the players.

All the plays presented by the drama department are staged by students in the regular classes of stagecraft and play production. They do their own lighting, painting of scenery, and costuming. Artistic stage sets are frequently suggested by students who have had training in fine arts; musical scores are arranged by those educated in music, thus other departments of the university assist that of the drama.

The state of Guild Theatre is small and plays are chosen without taking this fact into consideration, causing many persons to often be on the stage at the same time, hence, the furniture and other setting has to be most carefully arranged. A small stage and many actors make the work doubly hard for the producing staff. There is a tendency to crowd a stage of this size, and this has to be guarded against by the staff. The students have to do much of their own planning of sets for the ones given with the lines of the play are often intended for much larger stages.

In the same way that the production staff is handicapped by small stage space their work is also made more difficult by very little room back stage. When three one-act plays are put on, as is frequently done, there must be a complete change of set and idea and this is difficult when there is little room in back of the stage to store the property. However, even with these difficulties Guild Hall productions are noted for their showmanship. The curtain rises on time—and for this the production staff is largely responsible.

Students are appointed by the director to the positions of business manager and publicity manager to take care of financing and advertising the plays. In fact, everything about the productions except the actual directing is handled by students, and through Miss Wilbur's encouragement toward the players criticizing each other, they may ever be said to have a part in the direction of plays.

Advertising of the plays is done both in the newspapers and by artistic posters. Also, the business manager arranges brief speeches about coming plays given at the different living organizations.

The producing staff for University plays includes: Miss Florence E. Wilbur, director; Helen Barnett, stage manager; Juanita Babbit, technical art director; Louise Storla, Maurine Brown, lighting; Mary Duckett, properties; J. Alden Woodworth, business manager; Alice Gorman, publicity manager.

SCENE FROM "TRIFLES," PRIZE WINNING PLAY PRESENTED BY ROSEBURG HIGH SCHOOL

State Drama Tournament

The first week in May, 1927, the drama department of the University launched a new idea in the interest of dramatics. This was in the form of an annual state high school play contest, and was the first of its kind to be held in the United States. Inspired by the success that attended the English method of adult community one-act play contest, Miss Wilbur believes that these contests should be successful in this country once the idea has become firmly established. It is believed the tournament will take place every year until it becomes a tradition at Oregon.

The drama tournament committee of faculty and students last spring was composed of Dr. James Gilbert, Dr. C. V. Boyer, Dr. Dan E. Clark, Miss Florence E. Wilbur, Ralph D. Casey, Constance Roth, Arthur Anderson. Its purpose was to select the judges, place the plays, accommodate the visiting casts, and offer general information. There were also many minor committees appointed by the governing body to assist during the rush of the final week.

Three plays were presented on Wednesday, the first night of the tournament, four on Thursday, and three on Friday. The seventy-five participants were guests of the University for the three-day period. There was a luncheon given for them and the sophomore drama students presented "The Trysting Place" at a matinee also in their honor.

The judges for the contest were: Miss Elizabeth Barnes, Mrs. Jack Day, Miss L. May Ranch, S. Stephenson Smith, Don Skene.

The purpose of the contest is to foster good drama and to emphasize the advantage of the one-act play for high schools over the customary three-act production. The cities having high schools entered last year were: Milwaukie, Newberg, Lebanon, McMinnville, Portland, Eugene, Roseburg, Corvallis. Invitations were sent to a large number of schools in the state, but only the first ten to answer were admitted to the contest so it was only the most interested and alert schools that were in the race. The University offered its stage, lighting and scenery, but each school did its own selecting of play, casting, directing and actual staging.

Roseburg high school was awarded the silver cup which will be given to the winner each year until one high school wins it three times, and thus is allowed to keep it permanently.

Summer School Play

Not content with producing a number of plays in the regular school year, the drama department presented "The Cradle Song," by Gregario Martinez Sierra, during the six-week summer session of the University.

The Spanish portico of the Art Building made an ideal setting for the Convent of Dominican Nuns. The play also afforded opportunity for unique lighting and costuming.

"The Cradle Song" is a beautiful story of life in a nunnery. In the first act a baby is left at the convent. The sisters have no idea who has deserted the baby and after much discussion decide to keep it and care for it themselves. The second act takes place eighteen years later when the child is grown, thus necessitating most of the characters in the play portraying two different ages.

“Sister Beatrice”

“Sister Beatrice,” a fantasy by Maeterlinck, was produced by sophomore students in drama. The scene is laid in the corridor of a convent in the neighborhood of Louvain during the thirteenth century. It is the story of a nun who forsakes her vows to run away with her lover. After twenty-five years she returns broken in spirit and body, believing the sisters will turn her away for her sin. She finds that the Holy Virgin herself has taken her place while she was absent, so that none know of her deceit.

There are twenty-five characters in the cast for this play and each one has an individual part. Mary Duckett as The Holy Virgin and Florence Grimes as Sister Beatrice had the leading parts. The other sisters, the poor folk, and the pilgrims, all did excellent work. Anna Kathryn Garrett, Emily Williams, and Edward Best assisted with the music for the production.

Center picture—Joy Ingalls and Cecil Matson.

“The Swan”

“The Swan,” by Franz Molnar, is a sophisticated comedy of royal family trying to regain the throne. The plot centers around a princess whose mother is attempting to marry her to a prince in order to restore the prestige of her family. A tutor to the younger brothers of the princess is used, to arouse the prince’s interest in the girl. It complicates the situation when the professor is discovered to be in love with the young woman and she greatly fascinated by him.

Joy Ingalls and Cecil Matson are shown here in a touching scene as he tries to comfort her in her sympathy for the poor tutor. The difficult role of the tutor was well enacted by Arthur Anderson. Especially fine portrayals were also given by Joy Ingalls as the princess, Grace Gardner as the designing mother, and Glenn Potts as Prince Albert. The play abounds in bright and clever conversation, psychology and philosophy about life.

Three One-Act Plays

The drama department this year presented three one-act plays written by students of the University. They were "The Young Dane," by Coral Agnes Graham (above), "T'Other Side," by Eugenia Strickland (left), and "The Making of Mr. Ig," by Mary Kessi (below). The first is a love story of a young Danish girl and boy; the second, a tale of an old woman of the Tennessee Mountains and her daughter; the third, a satire on Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

The last three years, classes in play-writing have had the privilege of witnessing those original productions best adapted to the needs of the drama department. It is inspiring and enlightening to the writers to see the results of their efforts; it is also interesting to the actors to work in plays which are written by classmates. It is a revelation to the audience to see plays written, produced and acted entirely by students.

"Beyond the Horizon"

"Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill, is a story of family life in a rural community. Its realism and frankness are astounding. It gives a stark presentation of life as many live it without any beauty or romance. The first act is the only one in which there is any element of love or beauty. The next act takes place three years later after the sweethearts of the first scene have become disillusioned and unhappy in their married life. The last one is five years later by which time the husband is near death.

The play is unusual but its very morbidness cannot help but attract. Constance Roth, as the wife, had a difficult role but proved equal to it. Laurence Shaw as the husband portrayed his part unusually well. Gordon Stearns as Captain Dick Scott gave a splendid interpretation of an old sea captain and offered the only bit of comedy in the play.

"Arms and the Man"

by Bernard Shaw, is commencement play for the Class of 1927.

Grace Gardner as Raina and Lawrence Shaw as Major Saranoff have leading parts.

Shaw demonstrates again in his "Arms and the Man" his belief that it is the woman who pursues the man, her assured prey. This idea runs throughout the play, which is a story of life and love in a Bulgarian home during war-time. The main intellectual action is the exposition of certain mental peculiarities of the professional soldier. An idea of the humdrum elements of military life runs through the play.

A Bulgarian girl helps a Swiss soldier to escape from the Bulgarian regiments and although she is already affianced, falls in love with the soldier and sets out to win him. She does not see him again until the close of the war, but accomplishes her purpose in the same way as her maid succeeds in getting her mistress' former lover to marry her.

"R U. R."

"R. U. R." by Karel Capek, embodies romance, futurism, fantasy, and a tinge of gruesomeness in one melodrama. It is a sharp satire on industrial society.

The play introduced an altogether new phase into the drama department's history, in that it offered unusual opportunities for individual acting and initiated a decidedly futuristic idea. The robots demand a different type of acting, since their parts call for a mechanical performance in keeping with the manufactured men. Miss Wilbur stated that the elaborated staging for this production was the best ever done for a Guild Theatre production.

The robots are mechanically perfect and will last for about twenty years, maintained at one-half cent per day. As long as emotions and feelings are not involved, their abilities are unlimited and they can be taught anything. Since the nationalization of the robots, shipments of Chinese, German, Irish, Negro, or any nationality are sent out from the island every week. Countries employ them in warfare and business men buy them by the thousands.

Perfection of the mechanical men reaches such a height, however, that their organization overpowers man and the continuance of the human race is endangered. The climax comes when only one man is left on the island. All the scientists, the officials, and the workers have been killed.

The play ends with a charming epilogue in the chemist's laboratory where Primus and Helena, robots, assist Capek in the solution of the unique play. Grace Gardner and Arthur Anderson had the important parts of the robots in this last scene and played them with artistic skill.

Music Organizations

Art Students and Their Work

MUSIC, it has been said, is the soul of art . . . and art is the wine of life . . . the creating of beauty.

Students at the University of Oregon have been fortunate in hearing this year great musical artists—Ignaz Friedman, Polish pianist; Georges Enesco, violinist; Madame Schumann-Heink, famous singer. Too, there have been faculty and student recitals, presented in the softly-lit auditorium of the music building . . . glee club concerts on tour—stirring band concerts.

For the students who appreciate and enjoy painting, sculpture, design . . . there is the art building with its sheltered courtyard and flagged walk . . . and the little art gallery, with its sky-light and walls hung with tapestry, landscapes in oil, and delicate water colors.

Next year there will be erected on the campus a memorial museum to Prince L. Campbell, who in his life was devoted to art, and created beauty by his high ideals and his ready and sympathetic friendship with students and faculty. Two stone graven sphinx will flank the entry . . . at the rear will be a memorial court, with a pool and fountain.

In this structure will be housed the Murray Warner art collection, donated by the kindness of Mrs. Murray Warner . . . green and white jades . . . Chinese ceremonial robes, dragon-embroidered . . . curios from foreign lands.

Student Music Managers

THE STUDENT MUSIC MANAGERS supervise the concerts given each year in which well-known musical artists and companies appear on the campus under the auspices of the University of Oregon student body.

The managers also have charge of all musical affairs sponsored by the A. S. U. O., and they plan concerts and trips taken by the men's and women's glee clubs, the University orchestra and the University band.

Ronald Robnett was general music manager during the year 1927-28; Ronald Kretzer was manager of the Men's Glee Club; Edward Best of the University Orchestra; Albert Cousins of the Women's Glee Club; Lawrence Ogle, of the University Band; and Herbert Lasselle was business manager of the organizations.

Men's Glee Club

JOHN STARK EVANS
Director

The Men's Glee Club started on its concert tour on Friday, March 16, the last day of winter term examinations, and appeared in Albany, Salem, and Portland. Friday evening the glee club gave a concert at the Globe theatre in Albany; the next day the group appeared at the Capitol theatre in Salem, and Sunday gave a radio concert from Portland. Monday morning the members sang at assemblies in several Portland high schools. March 19, 20, 21, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the men's glee club fulfilled a three days' contract with the Broadway theatre in Portland. The performances at the Broadway, which were given this year because last year's run was so successful, concluded the spring tour.

The program of the concert tour consisted of both part songs and special features. George Barron and Ray Burt featured in a piano fight; and Cecil Matson, Jack Dennis, Orris Page and Clement Shafer gave a feature in old-fashioned crinolines. A quartet consisting of Ronald Kretzer, Don Ostrander, Harold Socolofsky and Edward Fisher gave the main skit, and a group of choruses concluding in a unique climax formed the finale of the concert. The remainder of the program included the regular glee club numbers, and Oregon songs. John Stark Evans, director, accompanied the members on the concert tour.

During the year the Men's Glee Club entertained several times at assemblies, took part in both the Oratorios, "The Messiah" and "Elijah," presented by the Eugene Oratorio Society, and with the Girls' Glee Club formed the vesper choir for Sunday vespers.

Girls' Glee Club

The Girls' Glee Club, under the direction of Eugene Carr, went on the annual concert tour March 4 and 5, and presented its last program of the year in the home concert at the Woman's building Thursday evening, April 5.

The program for both the performances on the concert tour and for the home concert was the same. A variety of songs, features and stunts made the concerts successful and pleasing. The program consisted of chorus groups, a soprano solo by Anna Kathryne Garrett, a harp solo by Doris Helen Patterson, a garden feature—"In An Old Fashioned Garden," sung by Richard Adams, tenor of the Men's Glee Club, a quartet composed of Anna Kathryne Garrett, first soprano, Stella Fishburn and Evelyn Dew, second sopranos, and Nancy Thielsen, first alto, and a French character stunt by Margaret Holbrook. The final scene was from the "Mikado," "Three Little Girls From School," sung by the trio, Evelyn Hollis, Janet Pearce, and Louise Storla. The concert ended with a grand finale of the entire Glee Club.

The first appearance of the Glee Club on its concert tour was in Portland Sunday evening, March 4, when the girls sang over radio KEX. Monday evening, March 5, they appeared in a full program at the Mount Hood Masonic Lodge in Portland.

In addition to the concert tour and the home program, the Girls' Glee Club participated in both the oratorios, "The Messiah" and "Elijah," which were presented by the Eugene Oratorio Society during the year, and, together with the Men's Glee Club, formed the vesper choir for Sunday vespers in the Music building.

University Band

WALTER L. FERRIS
Leader

The University band had just finished a most successful year, appearing in trim green and lemon-yellow uniforms at all important events on the calendar. The members have been on hand to play at home football and basketball games, at the Dad's Day banquet and in numerous parades.

In addition to playing at the home football games fall term the band went to Portland for the California-Oregon game. There the members played for the Rally Show, marched through the streets, and entertained over Radio KEX.

When the team left for California to play Stanford the band was at the train to participate in the rally.

Friday night, before the Homecoming game against the Aggies, the band marched in the big rally and on November 11, Saturday, furnished the music for the Armistice day parade.

When Sousa's band was in Eugene the boys played, upon Sousa's request, at his concert, and were awarded a silver loving cup.

Saturday evening, January 28, the boys entertained at the Dad's Day banquet for University dads. During the basketball season the band played for all varsity basketball games held in McArthur Court. Spring term the band participated in the military reviews held on Kincaid field and played at track meets in which the University entered. The membership of the band the entire year was almost fifty. Walter L. Ferris is conductor of the University Band.

The performance was excellently given by the members, and ably directed by Rex Underwood. A selection from Victor Herbert's "Fortune Teller" incorporating the "Gypsy Love Song" began the performance. Gwendolyn Lampshite Hayden, accompanied on the harp by Doris Helen Patterson, played a violin solo. "Overture to Mignon," was the third number on the program, and Doris Helen Patterson then presented "Welsh Melody" in a harp solo. The last number was Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody."

The concert tour began March 19, of spring vacation, when the members of the orchestra appeared in three half-hour concerts daily at the Antler theater in Roseburg, the Rivoli in Grants Pass, the Vining in Ashland and the Craterian at Medford. The closing concert of the tour was given at the Pine Tree theater in Klamath Falls, Friday, March 23.

During winter term the orchestra played at the annual Elks Memorial service Sunday, December 4, and gave a home concert at the School of Music Auditorium, Sunday, February 5.

The personnel of the University Orchestra was selected in November, after a period of extended tryouts during which each member was given opportunity to prove his worth.

Faculty Recitals

The School of Music faculty this year sponsored a series of recitals during winter term in which both faculty members and students entertained.

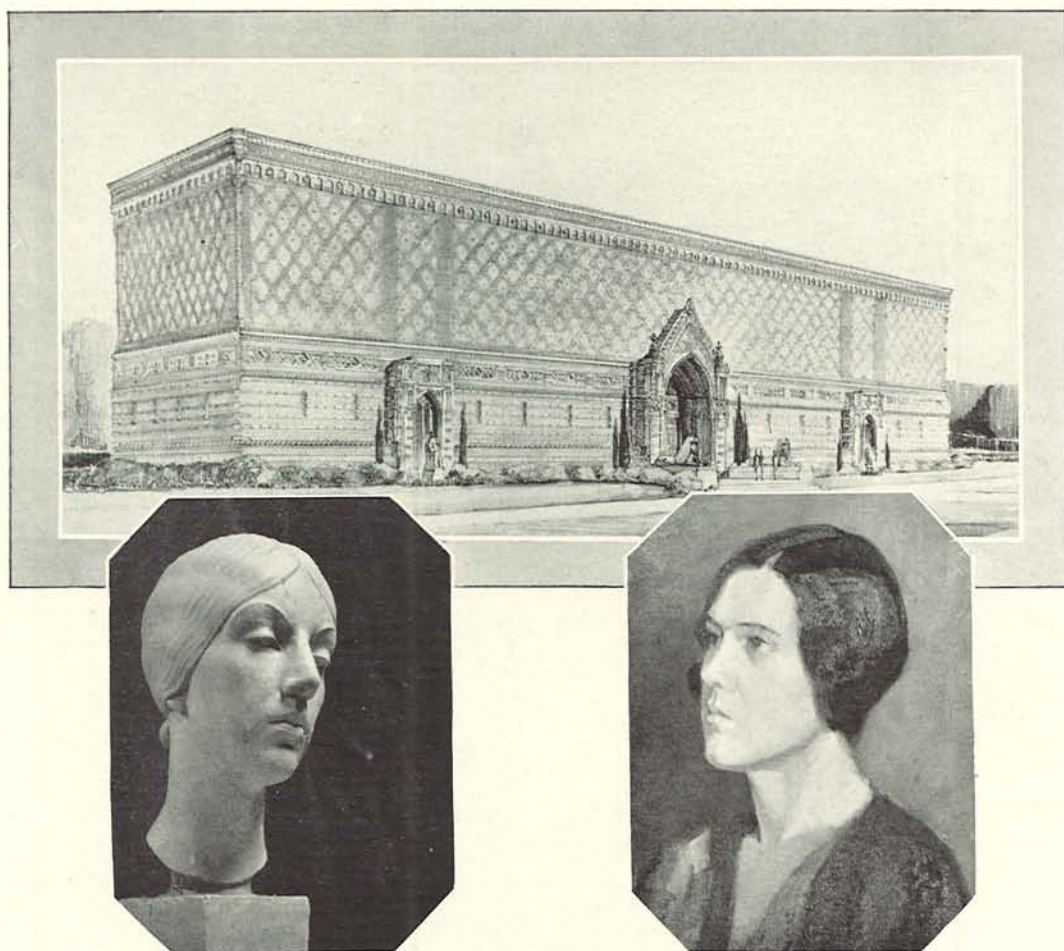

Rex Underwood, violinist, and Aurora Potter Underwood, pianist, presented the first faculty recital Wednesday evening, January 18. Two sonatas were played by Mr. and Mrs. Underwood, the Sonata in C Minor by Grieg, and a sonata by Cesar Franck. Preceding the piano group, Mrs. Underwood commented upon the numbers she was to play. Included were two compositions by the famous French harpsichord player, Rameau.

The second recital of the series was given by Eugene Carr, baritone, accompanied by John Stark Evans, January 25. The opening group consisted of "Nina" from the Italian, "The Pretty Creature" from the old English, and Handel's "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves." The second group included "Feldeinsamkeit" by Brahms, "Stille Sicherheit" by Franz, and "Zueignung" by Strauss. The third group was made up of negro songs: Strickland's "Run On Home," the spiritual "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Robinson's Waterboy," and Deppen's "Oh Miss Hanna." The concluding group included Rachmaninoff's "At Night," "Captain Stratton's Fancy", by Deems Taylor, "A Page's Road Song," by Ivor Novello, and Stickle's "Take All of Me."

The first student recital composed the third program of the series, on February 1. Esther Wicks played the opening number, the violin concerto of Vivaldi-Nacher, accompanied by a string orchestra composed of members of the University orchestra. Violet Grek sang two vocal solos, Sanderson's "My Jewels," and Curran's "Dawn." THE EMERALD copy desk in busy evenings . . . with its diligent circle of copyreaders under the green-shaded lights . . . the tense expectancy when the big story comes in . . . the quick click of the typewriters in the reporters' room . . . staunch friendships made in hours of work together.

Long rolls of paper winding into the hungry press, coming out stamped in black and white, the pulsing life of the campus threaded through those square black words.

Changing faces recorded in the pages of Old Oregon . . .

These are the records of the life of the campus, and it is not only as records that they will be cherished, but as memories of work, of friendships, of a life made larger and richer during years at Oregon when the beat on the Emerald, or the section in the Oregana was all-important.

Varsity and Freshmen Debates

THE FULL forensic calendar for 1928 testifies to the increasing popularity and importance of argumentation and persuasion at the University. The policy of the school has been to debate state universities and colleges where debating is sufficiently recognized to have a chapter of Delta Sigma Rho, national public speaking honorary fraternity.

Cambridge University representatives debated with an Oregon team in the only local foreign debate of the season. The men took two road trips, one team debating Idaho at Moscow and Montana at Missoula, and the other debating California institutions. The women made one road trip, and met the University of Idaho at Moscow. The freshmen participated in six contests with Oregon colleges.

The highlight of the forensic program was a tour in which three University men sailed around the world debating with foreign institutions. The realization of this tour was due to the efforts of J. K. Horner, coach, and Jack E. Hempstead.

The debaters returned to the United States early in the Spring and participated in contests in sixteen American institutions, arriving at Eugene the first of May. Three thousand feet of film were taken on the trip, and the men plan soon to give illustrated lectures throughout the state.

THE LARGEST forensic program in the history of the University, including eight debates for varsity men, two for varsity women, one foreign University debate, four freshman men debates, two for freshman women, three oratorical contests, and a three-man team world tour, was undertaken this year.

The teams were successful in winning a majority of the debates in which they participated. Oregon won the Northwest Triangular debate, duplicating the victory of two years ago. Veteran debaters met the University of Idaho at Moscow in this contest, while the representatives who faced the University of Washington at Eugene were newcomers in forensic circles.

The fifth radio debate, in which Oregon has taken part, was heard over Radio KEX, Portland, Oregon debating Washington State College. All who listened to the contest were eligible to act as judges, and the audience returned a decision for Oregon. Oregon won from the University of California in the first radio debate of the institution in 1924. The next year, Oregon won from Stanford University, and in 1925, there was a no-decision contest with the University of Southern California. University representatives met the University of Sydney, Australia, team, when it was touring the United States last year, and defeated it over the radio.

J. K. Horner completed his second year as coach of debate at Oregon. He came to the campus from the University of Oklahoma where he had an enviable record as head of public speaking. A. Holmes Baldrige coached oratory. This was his first year at Oregon, after being at Harvard University.

Walter Durgan was general manager of forensics, and Roy Herndon acted as assistant manager. Florence McNerney managed women's debate, Joe McKeown had charge of men's debate, and William Knight headed freshman debate.

World Tour

A world tour debate trip, the first of its kind sponsored by an American institution, in which three University of Oregon debaters encircled the globe and participated in speaking engagements in eight countries with fifteen English speaking universities abroad, was the outstanding feature of the 1927-28 forensic program.

The team included Benoit McCroskey and Avery Thompson of Salem and Jack E. Hempstead, Oregon City, experienced debaters who succeeded in winning a majority of the contests.

The men debated in Hawaii, Philippines, China, Japan, India, Scotland, Ireland, England, and the United States, and visited eighteen countries. They won a silver loving cup in the first International oratorical contest held in Japan.

Oregon-Cambridge Debate

DECEMBER 5, 1927

Question: "Resolved, That the power of the press has increased, is increasing, and should be diminished.

Cambridge—affirmative: M. A. B. King-Hamilton, Herbert Lionel Elvin, Hugh Mackintosh Foot.

Oregon—negative: Hugh Biggs, Donald Beelar.

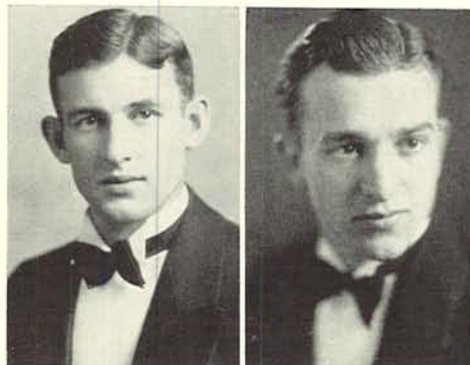

The informality and wit of the Cambridge debaters won over logic and deduction, the characteristic American style of debating, in the first home debate of the year. The audience judged the debate, and cast a majority of ballots for the Englishmen, the result being 212 to 96.

Hugh Biggs and Donald Beelar, representing Oregon, stated their case, building on facts and deductive reasoning. The Englishmen, M. A. B. King-Hamilton and Herbert Lionel Elvin, depended on their personalities, replying to the Oregon debaters with humorous, clever remarks ignoring dry facts and figures.

The Cambridge men based their principle argument against the power of the press on the statement that newspapers are continually playing up and sensationalizing news, giving it prominence far out of proportion to its importance and value to the public.

The Oregon men maintained that the evil in modern newspapers is far overbalanced by the good, and that to limit the power of the press would curb the good qualities of newspapers much more than it would the bad.

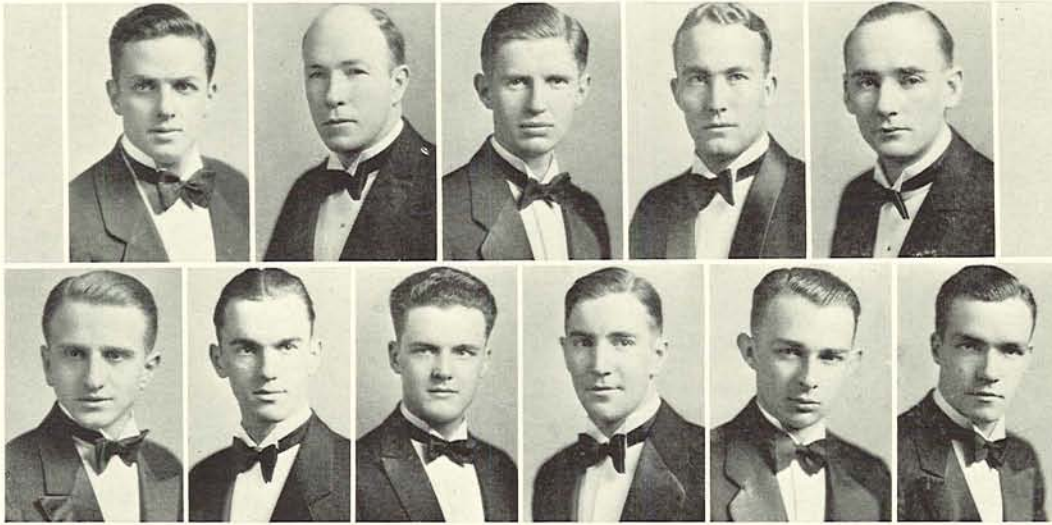

The debate was the best international contest witnessed on the campus, according to a consensus of opinion.

Question: "Resolved, That the United States should refuse to give military protection to property that is owned by her citizens but located on foreign soil."

Members of the team: Walter Durgan and Joe McKeown, negative.

Place: Eugene. Decision: two to one vote for Oregon.

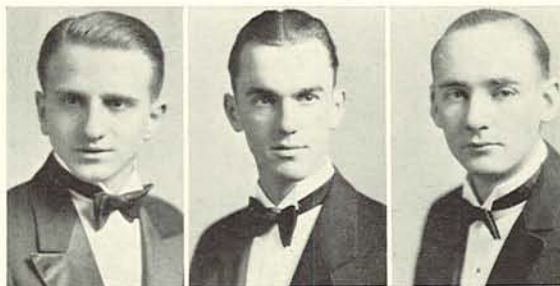

This contest was the first varsity debate of the 1928 season. The Utah men were experienced debaters and met the teams of the leading colleges and universities in Oregon, Idaho, Washington and Montana, on a tour of the Northwest. The Oregon representatives were also veteran debaters, having served on the varsity squad the past two years.

The Oregon team also upheld the negative of the foreign investments question at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles; and Stanford University, Palo Alto; on the Southern road trip. Oregon won from the latter by a critic's decision and lost to the former by a two to one vote.

Eugene Laird and Ralph Geyer upheld the affirmative of the foreign investments question in the only radio debate of the year. They debated with Washington State College over radio KEX, at Portland, April 4, winning the decision of the audience.

Ernest Jacketta and Ellsworth Plank argued the affirmative of this question against Southwestern University of Los Angeles at Eugene on the same day.

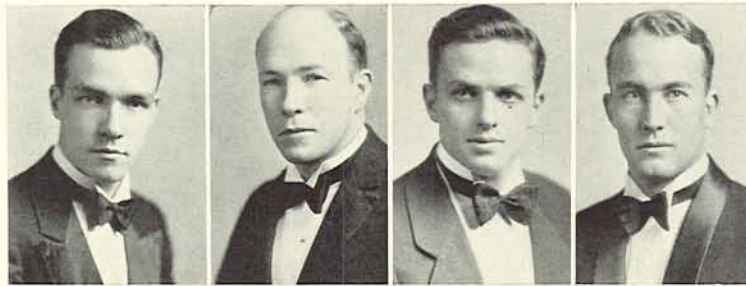

The Southwestern team, backed by the Monroe Doctrine and the promotion of the welfare of Latin America, won the tilt by a two to one vote of the judges. The Oregon men exhibited a powerful offense charging that the United States is becoming more and more a dominating factor in the life, government, and politics of the small Central American countries; that through her actions and continued intervention, the United States is losing her position of influence among her neighbors, and is becoming mistrusted and hated, and that the intervention is harming rather than aiding American trade.

Oratory

Oregon participated in three oratorical contests during the past year. The State Old Line contest was held in Eugene March 29, and G. Allan Belloni represented Oregon. Every institution of collegiate rank in the state was eligible, and each one was represented. This is the oldest oratorical contest held in the state, the first one occurring more than a quarter of a century ago.

Herbert Socolofsky was the University representative in the State Peace contest at Albany April 9. The same colleges entered in the Old Line contest were eligible. The Peace contests are held each year in every state of the Union. Their origin is unique. Two wealthy Boston spinsters lost a brother in the World war. To demonstrate their opposition to international conflicts these two maids offer a hundred dollars in prizes in each state, sixty dollars for first place, and forty dollars for second place. The winners of first and second prizes send their orations to Boston and the donors of the prizes select the national winner.

Joe McKeown was the Oregon entrant in the National Intercollegiate Oratorical contest on the Constitution held at Portland April 27. Representatives were entered from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Utah and California. The winner of this district contest entered the national finals at Los Angeles in June. This contest was inaugurated in 1924 by the republican administration at Washington in an attempt to counteract the radical movements in this country, and to encourage constitution worship by students in America.

Reserve Officers Training Corps

Summer Encampment

THE RESERVE OFFICERS TRAINING CORPS has been in existence at the University of Oregon since 1919. From a small unit with an organized membership of one hundred fifty the local Corps has developed into a superior organization boasting of over five hundred well-trained cadets. Faculty and students have contributed interest and support to an ever increasing popular Infantry Unit until it can be said that the University of Oregon is in possession of one of the best in the Ninth Corps Area.

The R. O. T. C. is a vital element of our National Defense System which under the National Defense Act of 1920, as amended, contemplates that the "Army of the United States" shall consist of a small Regular Army, the National Guard, and an Organized Reserve. In case of a national emergency by far the greater part of this army will again, as in the World War, come from the reserves. The R. O. T. C. trains students for the duties of Junior Officers in the "Army of the United States." Successful graduates are offered commissions as officers in the Organized Reserve. The acceptance of these commissions is purely voluntary.

This year will witness the last of Colonel Sinclair's stay at the University of Oregon. As commander of the local R. O. T. C. unit he has devoted a great deal of energy and enthusiasm towards the building of a sound and strong unit. It is with a great deal of regret that the University of Oregon relinquishes its claim to the staunch and able Colonel.

CAPTAIN MOORE

Executive officer and instructor of second year advanced course; teaches military history, infantry weapons, administration and tactics.

COLONEL SINCLAIR

Head of Military Department and all military instruction; now serving twenty-ninth year of a very colorful military career.

CAPTAIN BRAGG

Director of rifle marksmanship and first year advanced course; teaches military field engineering, mapping, machine guns and tactics.

SERGEANT CONYERS

Staff sergeant and assistant to director of basic course of instruction; connected with local R. O. T. C. since 1920.

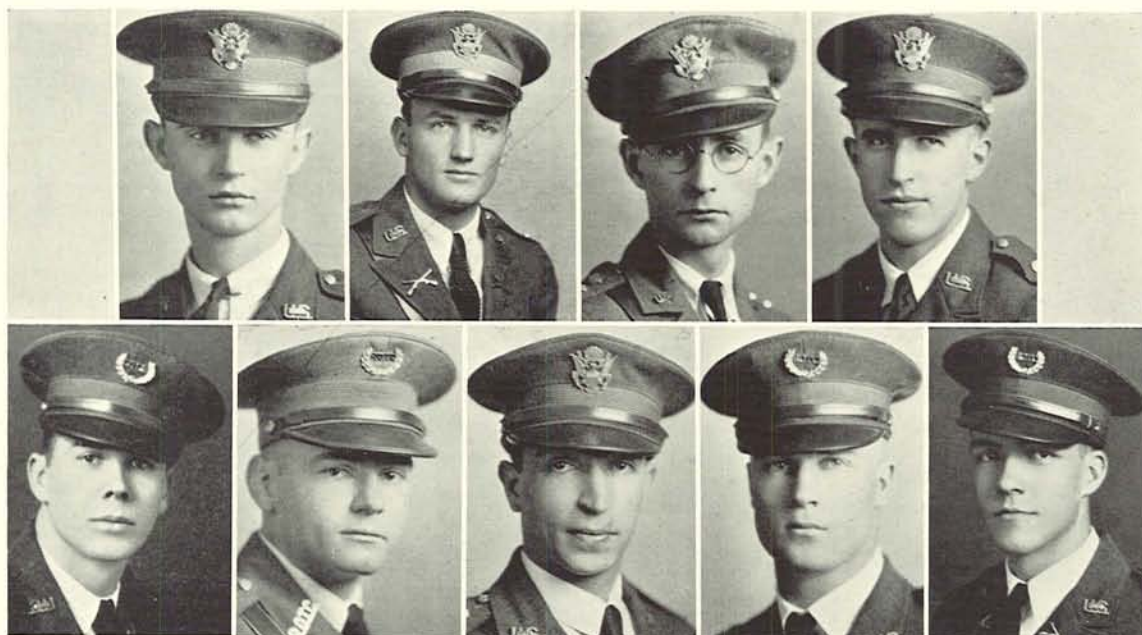

LIEUTENANT HERBERT

Director of basic course of instruction; recently transferred from the American forces in China to the University of Oregon.

FIRST SERGEANT AGULE

Chief of clerical staff; has served the Oregon R. O. T. C. for nine years.

FOLTS READ RUTHERFORD RAESS CONE HALL MARTIN HOWE TAYLOR

The Cadet Officers

In order to give practical application to the schooling received by the cadet officers, an opportunity is granted them to actually handle the infantry batallion. Nine cadets with the rank of Captain are appointed by the regular army staff at the beginning of spring term. The remainder of the appointees hold the tentative rank of first lieutenant. Ability to command men and knowledge of military science are the general qualifications these cadet officers must satisfy. This system has been enthusiastically received by the student soldiery, and has done a great deal towards increasing the interest in the Reserve Officers Training Corps. These cadet officers command and execute a series of spectacular reviews and parades in the spring term of the school year as well as assisting in the everyday routine. The appointed officers are: Captains Kenneth E. Martin, Mark M. Taylor, Henry W. Hall, William C. Rutherford, W. Elwood Read, Marvin M. Cone, Eugene C. Howe, Verne O. Folts, Earl J. Raess; Lieutenants Wade A. Rutherford, Walter R. Padrick, Robert F. Benjamin, J. Rodney Keating, Walter O. Erickson, Francis DeWelt, William R. Brown.

The Military Ball

ROY HERNDON

One of the most celebrated and interesting events of the campus social season is the Annual Military Ball sponsored by the advance students in military. This is strictly an invitational affair, and limited to local cadet officers, instructors, and guests from the University and nearby colleges.

This outstanding event was held this year at the Eugene Hotel on January 27th under the direction of Roy Herndon. In a setting of imposing military armaments, the formal Military Ball was a very pleasing spectacle. Cadets dressed in their military finery and visiting officers in their customary tuxs completed a striking scene.

The list of the patrons and patronesses included the following: President and Mrs. Arnold Bennett Hall, Dean and Mrs. James H. Gilbert, Colonel and Mrs. W. S. Sinclair, Captain and Mrs. F. M. Moore, Captain and Mrs. Clarence H. Bragg, Lieutenant and Mrs. George F. Herbert, Dean and Mrs. Elmer L. Shirrell. The sponsors were: Colonel W. S. Sinclair, Inf. (D. O. L.), Captain F. M. Moore, Inf. (D. O. L.), Captain C. H. Bragg, Inf. (D. O. L.), First Lieutenant G. F. Herbert, Inf. (D. O. L.).

The Rifle Team

Rifle marksmanship is an essential asset of any infantryman. As well as providing instruction in the use of the basic weapon of the infantry, it has developed into one of the keenest and finest of competitive sports. In the Olympic games and in national sports it has attained universal attention.

Under the tutelage of Captain Bragg, who has seen service at the National Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, the University of Oregon has developed an enthusiastic rifle team. During the preliminary weeks of rifle instruction, the team was selected from students who held the highest scores. Membership on the team depended entirely on ability and skill. After several weeks of local and intercollegiate matches, a permanent team was selected from the most consistent point gainers.

Telegraphic rifle matches have been scheduled with teams in all sections of the United States, and meets are held on each Saturday. Each team shoots for collective and individual honors.

During the spring quarter, instruction is given on the outdoor range in Eugene, the students using the regulation army rifle. This particular practice is designed to give preliminary training to those cadets who are contemplating spending their summer vacation in an army camp.

SUMMER CAMP

The Summer Encampment

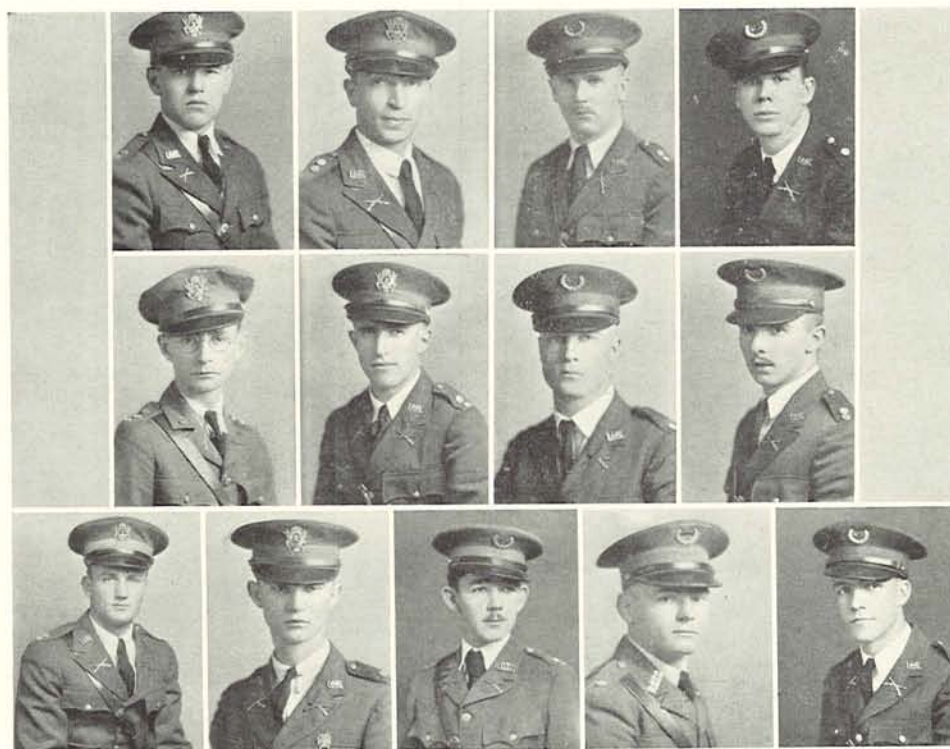

In order to receive their commissions as Second Lieutenants in the Officers Reserve Corps, cadets of the advanced military sections must attend at least one summer encampment at a particularly designated Army Post. This year the encampment will be held at Vancouver Barracks, Washington, with a representation of at least fifteen from the University of Oregon. The entire six weeks of students' stay at camp is filled with continuous activity. Close order drill, military tactics, demonstrations, parades, lectures, entertainments, bivouacs, dances . . . this is only a partial list of what the cadet finds to do. The work, while very intensive, is extremely enjoyable and beneficial and enthusiastically received by the embryo officers.

The Officers Club

The Officers Club is composed of a select group of advanced students in Military. It takes a very active interest in the affairs of the local Reserve Officers Training Corps, and has done a great deal towards promoting a strong esprit-de-corps among the cadet officers. The Officers Club is at the present time petitioning Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military society. William C. Rutherford is Captain of the Officers Club, with Mark M. Taylor and Marvin M. Cone acting as First Lieutenants. Earl Raess is First Sergeant of the organization.

WORK which is better done—a little more finely and carefully thought out—with more sincere devotion than the average, should be accredited some recognition. This is the belief of students at Oregon.

It is to fulfill this purpose that honorary organizations have been formed on the campus, some of them with local chapters only, and some with chapters in societies national in scope.

The professional honorary organizations serve a double purpose. Besides giving recognition to work which deserves notice, they do a very real service in promoting the aims of the various schools and departments, and of raising the standards of many professions. Some of them do research work, conduct surveys, and contribute to the solving of modern problems. They also promote better relations between the instructors and the students, and between the students themselves.

Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi, the two scholastic honoraries at the University, do a great deal toward inspiring earnest endeavor, and a truly scholarly devotion to study. It is to their high ideals that we owe much of the excellent work being done at Oregon.

In the following pages is the role of those who have given of their best to Oregon, and to the ideals for which she stands.

Sports Year in Review

WITH athletic teams ranging from good to bad and indifferent the sports situation at Oregon is in a position to be improved in the years to come. Some major sports rated the top or near top in conference standings while others went the way of all losers. Minor sports, for the first time in many seasons, became known on the campus and in honors won ranked even higher than the more prominent major activities. The sport situation at Oregon seems to run in a cycle. When one team rises to supreme heights another suffers and must undergo a process of rebuilding and strengthening.

Football, the king of all intercollegiate major sports, failed to show more than a future foundation in the season just passed. However, it would measure up to recent previous fall campaigns. King football has been near the bottom rung in final conference standings during the entire present collegiate generation. It has been five years since a winning combination has been placed in the field. In this time Webfoot elevens have won just exactly three conference games.

Last fall was no exception. In five games played Oregon lost four and tied one for a naught percentage. After three years of ill luck in football a new coach was appointed on a long time contract. Captain John J. McEwan was the man named to do the seemingly impossible. He now has been through two campaigns and his ability is about to bear fruit although he has little in the way of material with which to work, considering the abundant supply of athletes against which he must compete in the coast circuit.

With the showing last fall the King's crown may some day return to Oregon. A foundation has been built that should withstand the strain of competition.

In basketball, under William J. Reinhart, coach, who has now completed his fifth year of service at Oregon, the cycle has shifted from the bottom, as in football, to the top. Before the Reinhart regime started, though, the hoop sport was nil. From 1915 to 1917 the sport was not even on the program. Oregon, with its poorest prospects in years, placed second in the northern section of the Pacific Coast Conference last winter. It now is favored to win the gonfalon next season.

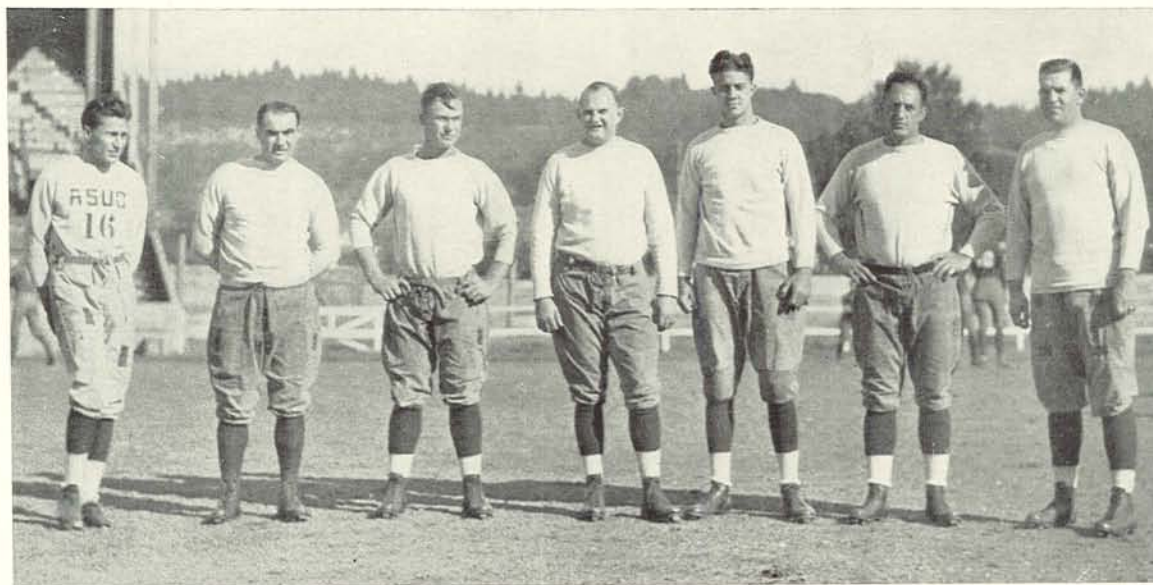

Track and baseball, in recent years, have been in a more or less indifferent stage. Interest in both sports declined over a period of years and as a consequence they suffered in popularity both from a standpoint of spectators and actual participants. A move is afoot on the coast to bring them back to the position held in former years. William L. Hayward, veteran for 26 years, is track mentor while Reinhart keeps busy in the spring with the diamond cohorts.

Tennis and swimming, classified as minor sports, have come from nothing to a place high in Oregon's athletic endeavor. Swimming for the first time has reached championship form. This season, the third with Edward F. Abercrombie at the head, Oregon won the Northwest Conference championship.

The net game, too, has risen from oblivion to a position where it will demand attention in the future. In fact this sport reached the place where it forced itself into major ranking.

Golf came into its own last year, with a two-man team winning the Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate championship for the first time. The divot digging sport has not as yet been given minor sport rating but is of titular calibre.

It's the sport cycle—one sport up, another down. This carries through a period of years. A change soon is to be expected in football, track and baseball.

Oregon Coaching Staff—VIDAL, WILLIAMS, KERNS, LESLIE, MAUTZ, REED, McEWAN, Head.

Mentors

Captain John J. McEwan, head football coach, had one of the largest staffs ever gotten together in the Webfoot camp. McEwan himself was serving his second year at the helm, having been appointed in 1926. He came from West Point where he was head coach for three seasons. In 1916, while playing center for the army, McEwan was named on the late Walter Camp's all-American eleven.

Eugene Vidal, backfield, arrived with McEwan from West Point. Vidal played under McEwan at the army institution and later acted as his assistant, holding the same position as here.

Basil Williams, ex-Oregon star, was line coach of the freshman aggregation. Bert Kerns, another Webfoot varsity star, ending his playing with the 1926 team, acted as assistant yearling mentor.

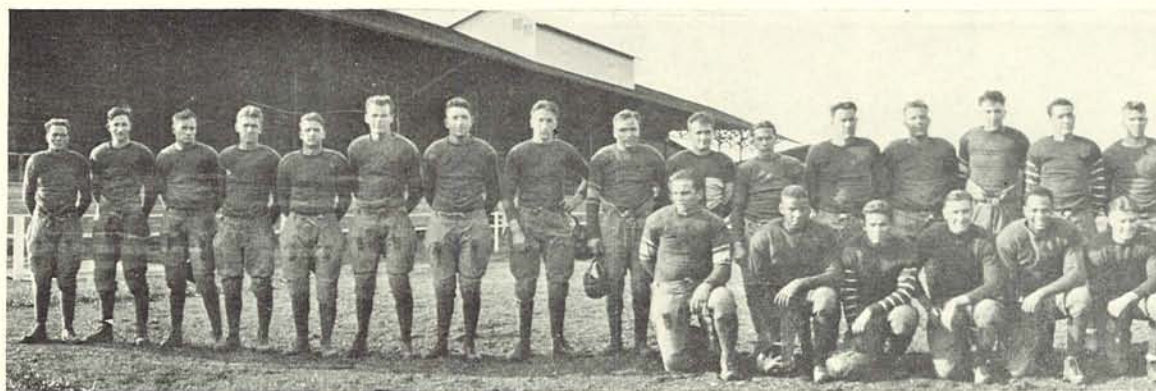

Earl E. Leslie, another varsity star, was super-varsity coach and helped as scout.

Robert Mautz, end coach, played for Oregon three years, being captain in 1925.

Richard Reed, line coach, was an Oregon captain in 1924.

Gridiron Season

In keeping with the previous four years football, the king of intercollegiate sports, rested without its crown at Oregon this fall. In fact the grid sport here gained a position of a pawn for other teams, with one exception.

The Webfeet started out the season in great fashion, defeating Linfield and Pacific and looking like a coming combination.

And with the opening Pacific Coast Conference game against University of Idaho here the Oregonians played spectacular ball to hold the Vandals to a 0 to 0 score. The Idahoans came with a husky and powerful lineup and was favorite to down the Webfeet. But after sixty minutes of torrid work on Hayward field the Vandals went home without victory although undefeated.

CAPTAIN BERYL HODGEN
Guard

Then Oregon went to Portland to tackle the University of California eleven, a team that stooped to defeat before the Webfeet in 1926. But the Golden Bear had a new attack, coupled with a powerful defense, that mowed Oregon under a 16 to 0 count. Oregon's attack went awry with several misplays being costly.

Stanford came next on the program. Oregon trekked to Palo Alto to take a 19 to 0 defeat in the California sunshine. By this time the Webfoot team was not functioning properly and the loss was expected although the large score came as a surprise. When Oregon went onto the field at Palo Alto the Cardinal coaches sent in a combination composed of first, second and third string players, and yet won handily.

Oregon returned from this game and started preparation for the Oregon Aggie invasion. A new life seemed to grip the athletes and they went to work with a vim and vigor that raised hopes of supporters. However, the day of the game another repetition of the California game was staged. The attack went awry and the unexpected strength and power of the Aggies easily gave them a 21 to 7 victory. This was the only game in which Oregon was able to shove over a touch-down.

Washington came last on the list. And as in former years the Webfeet proteges were in a carefree frame of mind, expecting to take a drubbing but feeling that it won't be so hard after all.

Oregon 7 Linfield 0

In the first practice fray of the season the Webfeet tried out three plays to defeat Linfield college's eleven 7 to 0 on Hayward field. Captain John J. McEwan, coach, used 27 men during the hour of play. Only three plays were used, one of these a forward pass that resulted in the lone score. Scouts who expected to see Oregon uncork something spectacular were turned away without much knowledge.

The fray was staged less than two weeks from the opening of practice and the Webfeet aggregation was in a formative stage and little action was expected.

The following week the Webfoot eleven displayed a dashing power and forward passing attack and swept the lighter Pacific machine aside 32 to 6. Oregon started out slow in this fracas, pushing across but one touchdown in the first period. But after the rest and a snappy talk by the coaches, the Webfeet came back with a surprise and using a forward passing attack swept down the field for four touchdowns.

Ends figured heavily in this game. Riggs and Handley counted three scores by grabbing passes and tearing across the last white line. Gould plunged over for one while Ord slipped through the line for another. Wetzel booted two tries for point.

In its first conference fracas the Webfeet put up a bulldog battle against a much heavier and slower Idaho team to battle the Vandals to a scoreless tie. Five times Idaho had Oregon back to its own goal line, but the staunch although light Oregonians battled and withstood the powerful charges of the Vandal backfield men. Captain Beryl Hodgen and George Stadelman were largely responsible for stopping these furious charges.

With a fleet outfit of backfield men California downed Oregon 16 to 0 in the Portland stadium to make up for the defeat the Webfeet gained last year 21 to 13 at Berkeley. The Golden Bear fleet backs tore in wide sweeps around the Oregon flanks, threw long passes, which their ends pulled out of the air for startling gains, and riddled the line in short, powerful smashes when they needed a few yards, to gain the victory. Also the Bear took advantage of Webfoot blunders to register a later safety.

The better team won decisively and for the most part the Oregon backs were downed in their tracks. Except on occasional passes and a brief flash of fire in the second half, the California line was impregnable to the Oregon spinners and reverse play offensive.

It took California but nine minutes from the kick-off to plunge over for the first touchdown. It followed a sensational march the length of the field, marked by beautiful end runs and long passes that the receivers held. This brilliant offensive swept Oregon off her feet. Benny Lom, Bear clever halfback, proved the dynamite that blew up the Webfeet. In the first quarter he stood on his own goal line with every indication that he would punt, but instead he suddenly dashed around right end, running 30 yards before downed.

Bobby Robinson, Oregon quarter, went into the fray for a few minutes in the second period and nearly broke up the ball game. He gained 50 yards in three runs but failed to score although coming within four yards of the line. He entered the game with an injured arm, and after his trio of sensational runs had to be taken out. Oregon started its strongest attack in the third period, running up 83 yards from scrimmage. California at this stage of the game played safe and awaited breaks.

DAVE MASON
Half

With a substitute eleven that played football far better than even its coaches predicted Stanford downed the Oregon machine 19 to 0 in the sunshine of Palo Alto and gave the Oregonians their second defeat in three conference starts.

After a scoreless first period in which both teams battled almost even although the Cardinals were never in danger of a scoring threat, the Oregon defense weakened and Stanford pushed over two touchdowns in the second canto. Lud Frentrup, Stanford back, who failed to get much notice during the season, proved a battering ram against the Webfoot line and marched down the field in the second period to put across the first score.

Joseph, substitute fullback, plunged his way through the Oregon line for the second score in the same period. His final lunge was for two yards over the line. In some way the Oregon line failed to function properly and was leaving a hole just large enough for the Cardinal backs to slip through.

After the rest at half time the Oregonians came back and tried again. The effort was weak and during this third period the Cardinals slipped over a forward passing attack that accounted for the final score. Muller, end, caught a 36-yard heave, turned and ran nine yards for the counter.

Burnell and Woodie, backs, and Weems, line, looked the best for the Webfeet in playing but couldn't stop the husky charges of Stanford.

Stanford tried nine passes and completed four for a 49-yard gain. Oregon tried 12, completed four and gained 97 yards. The Cardinals proved their strength in scrimmage by gaining 162 yards to but 85 for Oregon. Stanford also gained 11 first downs and held the Webfeet to six.

BURNELL CATCHES MAPLE BEHIND LINE FOR A LOSS IN ANNUAL HOMECOMING FRAY

Oregon 7 Oregon State 21

FRANK RIGGS
End

Playing before a crowd of 18,000 spectators the Oregonians met defeat at the hands of their ancient rivals, Oregon State, 21 to 7, in the annual homecoming fray held on Hayward field. The Aggies displayed a dashing offensive and superior defensive to stop the Webfeet in their tracks and put across the victory.

For some unknown reason everything Oregon tried failed to materialize and the Aggies not only took advantage of these misplays but played errorless ball to make the victory decisive.

And on top of the registered win the Aggies counted two additional touchdowns but they were called back because of penalty inflections.

Oregon had one moral victory in this game. After trying all season to make at least one touchdown, they finally completed a play that sent Burnell scampering across the final white line. It was the only points the Webfeet gained all fall in conference games.

The Oregon line was weak. This coupled with an astonishingly strong passing attack of the Beavers accounted for the miserable showing. Outplayed in every department, including the aerial route in which the Webfeet were supposed to be masters, the Oregonians were no match for the vicious visitors.

The Aggies started the game with a line plunging attack in the first period that pushed aside any Oregon defense. The most brilliant work of the fracas was the run of Maple, Aggie quarter, when he caught one of Woodie's punts, dropped it, caught it up again on the run, sidestepped three Oregon tackles, slid in behind perfect interference and dashed for the goal line. He ran 70 yards to complete this score.

BOB ROBINSON GETS OFF A LONG KICK

FOOTBALL

In the last period Oregon made a final try for honors. Two chances to score failed when passes were dropped. The lone touchdown came in the final two minutes of play on a long pass that was completed. Woodie stood on his own 30-yard line, called for the pigskin, took careful aim and sent a 40-yard pass into the waiting arms of Burnell, who turned and outran three Aggie men to cross the goal line. He raced 30 yards to score.

Oregon 0 Washington 7

HARRY WOOD

In closing its gridiron season the Oregon eleven came to life and played the Washington Huskies to a 7 to 0 game in Seattle in what is called an upset. Doped to lose by a much larger margin the Oregonians displayed a polished attack and air-tight defense that took the Huskies by surprise and nearly stopped their power attack.

As in former years Oregon and Washington put up a battle throughout the full sixty minutes. On the opening play Burnell dashed around the Husky right end for 10 yards. Surprised by its ability, Oregon, instead of throwing all football knowledge to the winds and playing in a manner that called to take chances when least expected, turned the tables and after the first play turned to the style of game taught by Coach McEwan.

It worked. Time after time the Webfeet backs slipped around or through the strong Washington line for gains. And not only this but the Oregon line stopped the famous off-tackle smashes of the highly touted Husky backfield.

Through three periods the teams battled evenly. Finally the power of Washington's backs and the reserves which Coach Bagshaw sent in, wore down the staunch Webfoot linemen and gave the Huskies a chance to drive over a touchdown. It came late in the fourth period and only after every first string lineman had been taken out. The Oregon athletes played brilliantly until worn down and forced to retire.

First Riggs, then Pope, Stadelman, Dixon, Warren, Hodgen, Wetzel, Hagan, went out, one by one. Replacements could not hold up, and Washington with a long pass and concentrated line drive went over for the score. It was a defeat, yet the showing promises well for the future. Captain Hodgen, Warren, Dixon, Riggs and Wetzel played their final game for Oregon. They will be graduated.

Washington accounted for 162 yards from scrimmage compared to 111 for Oregon. The Huskies tried 14 forward passes, completed 12 for a total yardage gain of 203 yards. The Webfeet tried 23, completed five for a total of 165 yards.

BURNELL STARTS THE HUSKY GAME WITH A 10-YARD END RUN

In the firstdowns Washington made 12 compared to nine for Oregon. These figures prove that the game held but slight advantage for either eleven.

Duckling Prospects

George Chappell, duckling center, is another fine prospect. Chappell will find it hard trying to break into the varsity pivot post now held by George Stadelman. But with his size and strength he should find a place somewhere on the line.

Backfield men also will come in for a lot of looking over. Johnny Kitzmiller, halfback, is being groomed for the varsity fullback. Kitzmiller is one of the flashiest prospects coming up from the yearling squad. He not only is a deadly tackler and strong defensive player but can carry the pigskin, pass and kick when needed. Edward Moeller, a promising fullback, will not be eligible for competition. This will leave Cotter Gould, regular, and Kitzmiller battling it out for the varsity job.

William Parke is a quarterback that will bear watching. Although Bob Robinson and Ira Woodie, veterans, will be back they will have plenty of work trying to keep Parke from taking their place. Parke is a heady signal caller but lacks weight.

Others probably will be heard of before they become ineligible through the three-year playing rule.

Season Review

Some of the boys who spill the "inside" basketball dope on Pacific Coast conference teams—most of them, in fact—suffered a few surprises in the 1928 hoop season, which wound up in spectacular fashion on February 25 when Oregon toppled the conference champions at Seattle in an overtime game, 41 to 39. Washington retained the northern section championship despite the defeat, for Oregon had previously been twice defeated by other teams, but the Huskies at least learned a few things about the Webfoot style of play which they did not know before—and the basketball critics learned even a few more things.

At the first of this season Oregon was ranked by those who are generally considered experts as a cellar aggregation or as a team which with good luck stays one step out of the basement in the northern section standings. Many salty tears were wept, figuratively of course, in the columns of the daily press because of the sad fact that Roy Okerberg, Algot Westergren and Jerry Gunther—all-coast luminaries—had to graduate and could not play again this year. Gord Ridings and Scott Milligan, forward and guard, respectively, were the only veterans left to the poor Webfoot quintet.

JOE BALLY

Oregon 29, Idaho 23; Oregon 33, W.S.C. 16

Oregon opened its season at McArthur court on January 21 against Idaho, feeling a trifle shaky. Whitman college had just a few days previously proved that the Webfeet were by no means unbeatable. However, Oregon soon snapped out of it and squeezed out ahead of the Vandals to introduce the season in an auspicious manner. A second game, that against Washington State, followed close on the heels of the first. The Cougars, luckily, didn't show a lot of stuff on the ball and fell by the one-sided count of 33 to 16. By this time Oregon was rarin' to go and fans were beginning to get out their pencils and scratch pads to figure comparative scores.

Washington Huskies handed Oregon its first defeat of the season when the invaders hung up a 24 to 17 victory in a loosely played fracas in McArthur court. Neither the Webfeet nor Husky hoopers were adept in connecting field goals which accounted for the low final score. Ridings led in scoring for the Webfeet with Bolstad and James tying him with six points each.

"Wild Bill" Burr, Aggie scoring ace, drew scoring honors with 12 points. Ridings gave him a run and gained 11 counters for his game's work. This was one of the most exciting games of the home series.

Oregon 32 Idaho 30

The Webfeet opened their annual road trip at Moscow this season by nosing out the Vandals 32 to 30 in one of the most exciting encounters of the jaunt. With the Idahoans on their own home court, a small structure, they are hard to defeat but by this time Oregon was ready for its tour; the machine was playing a fast brand of ball. It kept up the pace. Ridings, as usual, led in scoring by connecting for 10 points.

Washington State was still smarting from the defeat which Oregon handed its hoopers early in the season when the Webfeet and Cougars tangled in a return fray at Pullman on February 20. For awhile it seemed that Washington State might really turn the game into a surprise for the invaders from Oregon, but the Webfeet soon drew away from the Staters.

Minutes Played Recorded

Gordon H. Ridings, leading scorer of the Pacific Coast Conference with 111 points, played throughout every conference game in which Oregon participated in the northern conference to lead the Webfeet athletes in total number of minutes played. Ridings played through 405 minutes in the 10 conference frays. This includes the five-minute overtime period of the Washington contest in Seattle, the last fray of the schedule.

The Oregon ace easily was one of the outstanding players of the conference although he rated but the second all-mythical five. Besides being a leading scorer he was a clever guard and held the key position on Reinhart's quintet.

Scott Milligan, only other veteran, proved almost as much a workhorse as Ridings. Milligan missed playing all games by dropping four and one-half minutes of competition.

The Oregon offense was centered in Ridings and Milligan, a pair of veterans, with the remainder of the athletes counting the odd shots.

Oregon's Coach

W. J. REINHART

WILLIAM J. REINHART, Oregon's baseball coach, is one of the best known mentors on the Pacific Coast and although he has failed to win coveted championships in the league he has inspired his proteges with the spirit of willingness to play the game to the end, even though the outcome is bitter.

Bill is a former student at Oregon and while an undergraduate he was a stellar performer in athletics.

After leaving Oregon, Bill played football with the Multnomah club in 1922. His baseball career was with various ball clubs including the Salem Senators, Caldwell City team in the Idaho State league, the Bellingham nine in the Northwest Washington league, and last summer he was manager of the Eugene club in the Willamette league.

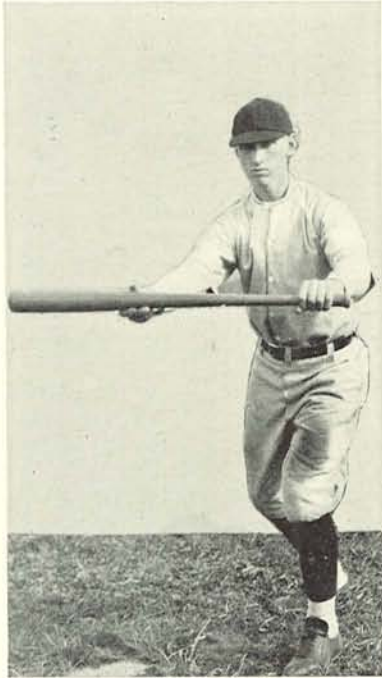

Reinhart's coaching career started at Oregon in 1921 after he successfully had coached at Salem high school. His first duties at the Webfoot camp were tutoring freshman football, basketball and baseball. In 1924 he was named head basketball and baseball coach, the positions he now holds. Bill also teaches baseball and basketball in the annual summer sessions held at the university and his knowledge of the sports has materially helped build up athletics in the state.

Baseball Review

Oregon's 1927 baseball campaign was unsuccessful, terminating with the Webfeet placing low in the cellar in a three-team league, the size of the western section of the Pacific Coast conference. Status of the Oregon team, though, cannot be blamed on the weakness of the nine as much as the strength of Washington and Oregon State teams, which ended the season in a tie for first place.

Three of the six games lost were by a one-run margin, proving that the play was close, yet far enough away to put Oregon on the short end.

Pitching strength of the Webfeet was accountable for the weak showing in a way although the hitting power in pinches also was paramount. With William Baker the only veteran on hand, Coach Reinhart was forced to shift Fred West from shortstop to the hurling staff. Later in the season he added Jerome Gunther, which gave him three flingers. West developed a sore arm during the season and was handicapped considerably. Gunther had nothing on the ball but speed. His fast ball was so fast that he couldn't control it and in one game, the Oregon State fracas here, he walked 13 men, hit two, struck out five and allowed five hits, in two innings.

The crew gained plenty of experience and with exception of Lynn Jones, West and George Mimnaugh, all will be available for the 1928 campaign. And plenty of freshmen also will be on hand for positions on the nine.

Ira Woodie proved a capable catcher and relieved Mimnaugh who moved to the outfield. Les Johnson worked well at first base. Second proved a puzzle early in the season until Gordon Ridings turned out and cinched the berth. Don McCormick and Lynn Jones alternated at third, with McCormick taking over the regular duties late in the season and Jones going to the outfield. Bill Eddy held the shortstop position. Arnie Kiminki alternated at short.

Dave Epps, the slugging ace, Jones, Mimnaugh, Cotter, Gould and Harry Dutton covered the outfield territory in creditable manner.

Weak at the Bat

Baseball statistics that last long after the actual happening bring forcibly to light the reason that Oregon slipped far into cellar position in 1927, winning but two games in eight starts.

Individual batting averages fail to bring glory to the Webfoot hitters with possible exception of six of the leading swatters. Gordon Ridings, who entered his career late in the season, tops the list with the high average of .583. However, he didn't swing into the campaign until late. But when Gordon started he clouted right and left. William Baker was a hitting pitcher but couldn't be expected to work every game, thus his bat power was missing on many occasions.

Dave Epps, outfielder, led the regulars with a grand average of .361 and also went to the box more often than any teammate. Epps featured in every melee.

Freshman Season

Under the able tutelage of Coach Earl "Spike" Leslie and with two outstanding pitchers on hand, the Oregon freshman baseball aggregation had a successful season, winning eight games in nine starts. After a 7-to-5 defeat by the Salem high school nine, the Webfoot ducklings came ot life and drubbed their ancient rivals, the rooks, on four successive occasions, a feat that seldom has happened in recent years.

Harold "Curly" Fuller and Reynold MacDonald, a southpaw, proved a combination of hurlers that threw curves and speed balls at their opponents in such manner that they were invincible. Both should be of material help to the varsity in the following three seasons.

The freshman hitting power also was strong. In the nine games the ducklings clipped a .419 average. MacDonald was the slugger and closed the campaign with a .695 average in 23 times at the plate.

Tennis

The Season

E. F. ABERCROMBIE
Coach

WITH a combination of players that at times seemed over-balanced as the leaders were much superior to the lower ranking men, the University of Oregon tennis team of 1927 under Edward F. Abercrombie, head coach, played through the season to place third in the Pacific Coast Conference and second in its northern division. The Webfeet won two and lost two conference meets, defeating the Oregon Aggies twice and dropping one each to Stanford and Washington.

Although Oregon failed to win either of the championship honors, a foundation was started that in years to come should bring supremacy in this sport.

In pre-season matches the Webfeet fared much better, taking the majority of individual singles and doubles matches. Led by the diminutive Henry Neer and Roy Okerberg, two outstanding players, Oregon defeated Reed college in the opener 9 to 0. Then Multnomah club fell 6 to 3 and Willamette was drubbed 6 to 0.

The Oregon Aggies furnished first conference competition when on May 14 the Webfeet traveled to Corvallis to down the Beaver men 6 to 1.

Then on May 20 and 21 Oregon entered the P. C. C. meet staged here and although defeated by Stanford, champions, and Washington, the players again defeated the Aggie men. Competition in this meet was keen as the leading collegiate aces on hand included Mel Dranga, Washington, who until that time had never lost a singles match, and R. T. McElvenny, Stanford ace.

Henry Neer, playing his first season under Oregon colors, was the outstanding singles player in the tourney. Alone he won the singles championship of the Coast. It was Neer who defeated the great Dranga and McElvenny. Neer defeated Dranga 6-1 and default. McElvenny went down under one of the hardest tests of the meet, 0-6, 6-4, 11-9.

Teamed with Okerberg and Neer for the Webfeet was Clare Hartman, Richard Edge, Melvin Cohn, Thomas Cross and Hal Hutchinson.

Of the seven, Okerberg and Hutchinson were missing from the 1928 spring squad. Okie hung up his racquet after three seasons of inter-collegiate competition.

Several new men, including a trio of the best on the Coast, will be on hand next season. Bradshaw Harrison, who won the University singles championship in the fall of 1927, perhaps is the best prospect of the lot. Stanley Almquist and Sherman Lockwood constitute another pair of stars in the offing.

Freshmen had a disastrous season, losing to the Oregon Aggie Rooks 6 to 1 in the only meet staged. J. Perry looms as the only varsity prospect from this aggregation.

HOW THEY RANKED

Neer.....No. 1	Hartman.....No. 3	Cross.....No. 4
Okerberg.....No. 2	Cohn.....No. 4	Edge.....No. 4

Coach Abercrombie put forth his greatest effort to bring the Pacific Coast Conference Championship tennis tournament to the Webfoot courts May 20 and 21 and in so doing established a precedent that may take years to again realize.

Since the fall of 1926 when Abercrombie was appointed head tennis and swimming coach, these sports have rapidly gained a prominent place in Oregon sport annals. In his first season as mentor of tennis, Abbie took two stellar performers, Roy Okerberg and Harry Coffin, on a summer tour of eastern circles. This pair entered the National Inter-collegiate and fought into the quarter-finals.

His greatest accomplishment to date, though, was in bringing the championship tourney here. Handling such a series of matches, singles and doubles, was a big job and Abercrombie did it in a big way. All participants were pleased with the manner in which the meet was staged.

The conference tournament probably will be a fixed feature and will close the seasons each spring. This will bring together the leading singles and doubles combinations of all institutions in competition to decide a championship team, singles and doubles title holder.

Last spring Stanford won the coast title, Washington the Pacific Northwest with Oregon coming third in the coast circuit and second in the northern division. Singles championship also came to Oregon when Henry Neer defeated all leading players to take the title. He defeated Mel Dranga, Washington ace; McElvenny, Stanford, and Thomas Atkinson, Oregon State, in the two days.

Future Luminaries

Three tennis players of earned reputation have registered in the university and will be members of the varsity squad in 1929. And these three should bring national recognition in the near future.

Leading the list is Bradshaw Harrison and with him are Sherman Lockwood and Stanley Almquist. Harrison already is well established in Coast tennis. He holds the singles championship of Oregon, California, Washington, and Pacific Northwest. Teamed with Lockwood, Harrison also holds the doubles titles in these states and district.

Swimming Season

WITH the Pacific Northwest Conference swimming championship tucked away safely for the 1928 season, Oregon held its first titular year in this sport. Risen from nothing to something in coast circles, swimming in the Webfoot camp now looks promising as a future minor sport.

Led by Johnny Anderson, Coast Conference record holder in three events, the Webfeet twice defeated the Oregon State Aggies and in pre-season meets defeated the Multnomah club of Portland a like number of times. Not since the water sport was introduced on the campus has such a brilliant line of individual performers been developed. The present rise in this sport dates back to the appointment of Edward F. Abercrombie as head coach.

Since Abercrombie took over the tutoring of the mermen, swimming has risen suddenly to championship calibre. As Oregon did not meet Stanford, University of California, Southern California or other southern institutions, the coast championship is doubtful. However, because of its performances in the past and individual record holders, Stanford is conceded the coast title.

Swimming in the Northwest is in infant days as yet. Only Oregon and Oregon State have teams in the field. Other conference members, though, are soon expected to take up the sport as a minor activity and when they do the Webfeet will have several years head start in development and should remain at the top in final standings.

Of the championship aggregation this winter only three men will be lost by graduation. Donald McCook, three-year veteran, LaMont Stone, diver, and Julian Smith, breast stroker, will be lost. Promising material from the freshman team is coming up to fill these ranks.

Anderson was the individual scorer of the team, and as he only is a sophomore this season, has two years yet to perform. In his first year he won five first places in two conference meets, to gain 25 points and consequently set three Pacific Coast records.

Charles Silverman, another sophomore, counted three firsts in two meets to place second to Anderson. He scored 15 points, a first counting five. Others and their individual scores follow: Robert McAlpin, 10; LaMont Stone, 8; John Allen, 8; Willis Fletcher, 7; McCook, 6; Wade Newbegin, 6; Julian Smith, 5; James Sharp, 4; and G. Thomson, 4. Sharp and Thomson failed to score enough to gain a letter but received recognition for their efforts.

Following the regular season Anderson was sent east to enter the National Intercollegiate individual championship meet held at the University of Pennsylvania. He placed fourth in the 150-yard back stroke and fourth in the 100-yard free style. His Coast records are 40-yard free style, short course, :18.9; 150-yard back stroke, short course, 1:49.5; 100-yard free style, short course, :56 flat.

MINOR SPORTS

OREGON 44; OREGON STATE 25

OREGON 51; MULTNOMAH CLUB 27

The Webfoot swimmers opened their pre-season schedule by trouncing the Multnomah club of Portland 51 to 27 in the Rose City pool on January 28 and then went to Corvallis February 18 to defeat the Oregon State mermen 44 to 25 in the opening Pacific Coast Conference competition.

The strength and possibilities of the Oregon aggregation came out in the club meet when Johnny Anderson, Webfoot ace, displayed rare form in the water. This was the first time an Oregon team has been able to defeat the Winged M aggregation in its home pool.

SILVERMAN

Johnny Anderson, Oregon swimming star, broke two Pacific Coast Conference records while the Webfeet aquatic team defeated the Oregon Aggies 49 to 26 in its last meet of the season held here March 5, to win the Pacific Northwest championship.

Anderson bettered his own time in the 40-yard free style by covering the distance in :18.9. His previous mark was :19.1, set on February 4. In the 100-yard free style he cracked the record of Orville Peterson, set a year ago while Peterson was competing for the Aggies, by a full second. The old mark was :57 flat, the new mark :56 flat.

The surprise of the meet was the winning of the fancy diving event by LaMont Stone, Oregon. The Aggies have for a long time been considered invincible in this event, owing to the expert coaching of Hap Kuehn of Olympic fame.

Charles Silverman won the 400-yard free style handily, taking a long lead over all opponents and then going on alone to set an unofficial Northwest record of 5:41.5.

OREGON PLACES SECOND

Following the regular season and the return from the east of Johnny Anderson where he won individual recognition in the National Intercollegiates, six Webfoot swimmers, including Anderson, went to Portland April 14 to enter the annual Oregon State aquatic meet staged by the Multnomah club under supervision of Jack Cody, coach and prominent in swimming circles of the state.

In this meet the Oregon athletes scored 24 points to place second to the Winged "M" outfit which amassed a total of 27. The meet was held in the club pool.

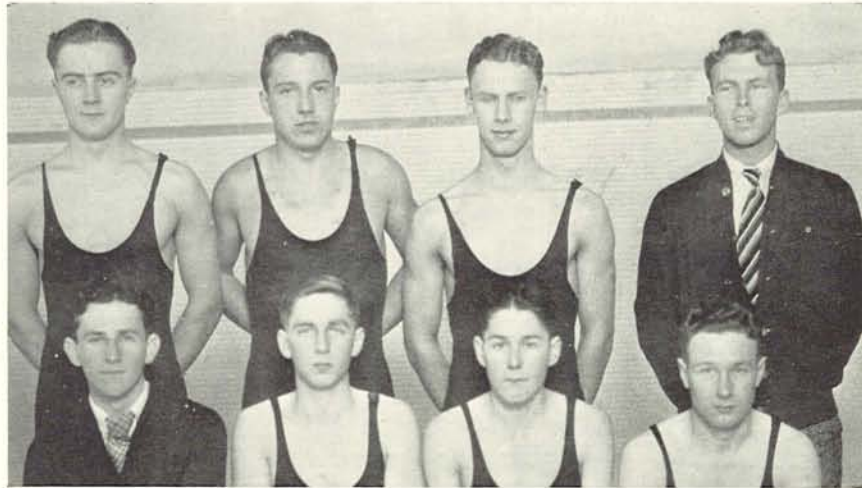

Anderson kept up his season's successful march in gaining points by taking two firsts in this meet. He took the initial place in the 50-yard free style and then turned in a first in the 150-yard backstroke.

Chet Floyd, freshman, promising varsity material, gained first in the 220-yard free style and then entered the 100-yard free style immediately afterward to come in third.

Charles Silverman, distance star, was nosed out in the 440-yard free style when Dana Thomas, Multnomah ace, finished ahead of the field to set a new Northwest record. Thomas set a new mark of 5:42.8. Silverman broke the record early in the season only to see it shattered while he tried to defeat the club star. The points Thomas gained in this event resulted in Multnomah outscoring the Webfeet in final figures.

Duckling Season

The Webfoot yearling swimming team met defeat and victory once this season, staging a comeback with the Oregon State rooks in the pair of meets. In the first encounter the ducklings trekked to Corvallis to meet the rook aggregation and were turned back 20 to 19.

Overconfidence and poor manipulation of men in the events was the downfall of the Oregonians. The ducklings went on their trip lacking enough men to fill the list needed on the program, thus being nosed out by the lone point.

But in the meet held here the yearlings proved their superiority over the rook squad and handed the visitors a 36 to 23 drubbing. Enough men were on hand to insure filled entry list in each event.

In this contest the Oregon 160-yard relay quartet set a new freshman Pacific Coast Conference record, bettering the former mark held by Stanford. The new record now reads 1:24.9 with the former mark at 1:26.

Chester Floyd, 50 and 100-yard free style swimmer, and Donald Neer, diver, were the outstanding performers on the freshman team. Floyd won four first places in the two meets with Neer scoring the highest average in diving of any counted in the Webfoot pool. Both will be future varsity luminaries in the opinion of Edward Abercrombie, head coach.

LLOYD BYERLEY

Oregon, represented by two men, walked off with the Northwest Conference golf championship in the spring of 1927 although the sport did not rate as a minor activity. This pair, Lloyd Byerley and Edward Crowley, trekked to Corvallis to enter the Northwest tourney and defeated some of the best intercollegiate performers of the year.

All told, the season was one of success as the Oregonians put their institution on the golfing map and set a foundation for a bright future.

Three Pacific Coast Conference tournaments were entered by the Webfeet and their showing was of the best. Oregon Aggies and Oregon broke even in a home-and-home series. The Webfeet won the first 8 to 2 and dropped the second 8 to 3. Washington also was met in a team match, Oregon losing.

The varsity squad consisted of Byerley, Crowley, Robert Giffen, John Gray, William Palmberg and Myron Gray.

Byerley and Crowley led the field for Oregon. Of the 1927 squad only Byerley was lost via graduation.

Scores tell how Oregon won the Northwest medal title on a rainy day—May 28, 1927—in a 36-hole match.

	SCORE	TOTAL
Lloyd Byerley, Oregon	79-78	157
Barney Savory, Washington	80-80	160

Harrier Run Revived

A revival of the grand old hill and dale racing was staged at Oregon this fall and although the Webfeet dropped a close dual meet with the Oregon State Aggie cross country men 334 to 486, it wasn't because of the inability of the Oregonians to run but more the result of lack of individual runners.

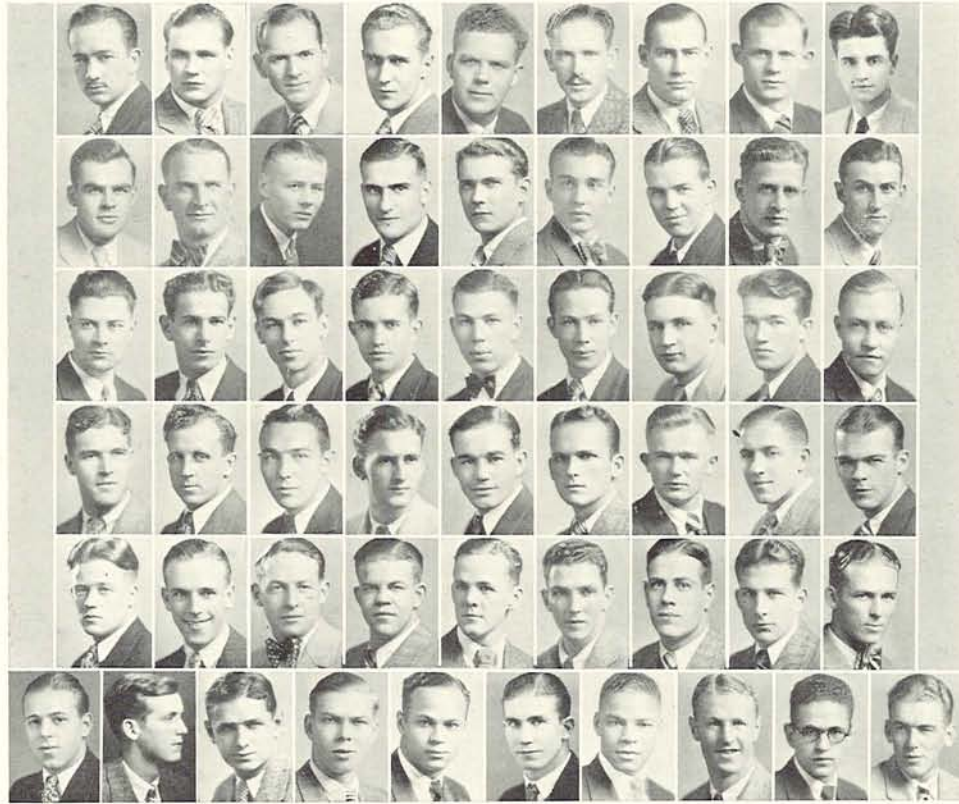

The Oregon-Oregon State marathon was the only one scheduled this fall and the outcome, which gave three out of the first five places to the Webfeet, forcibly brought out the fact that a foundation has been laid for future meets.

Clarence Hill, versatile track performer, jogged ahead of the field in this meet for Oregon and was closely followed by Joe Standard. Gilmore of the Aggies gained third position while Marion Beal, Oregon, took fourth and Young and Hines of the Aggies fifth and sixth.

Because the Webfeet entered the meet short four runners they were forced to take the last four places. William L. Hayward, veteran coach, started revival of the sport but as only 16 men answered the first call and trained for the jaunt, Hayward was short four men for his 20-man aggregation.

The meet was staged as a preliminary to the Oregon-Oregon State football fray on November 11.

Oregon aspirants follow: Clarence Hill, Joe Standard, Marion Beal, Ruben Ross, E. Manning, R. Barnes, N. Kimball, Wade Rutherford, W. Eshelman, A. Frohmayer, R. Curry, W. W. Hayes, E. McKittrick, F. Rink, W. Kuykendall, W. Winter, and A. Suranen.

New System Tried

Frank German, senior manager of athletics, favored a change in personnel of assistants this year, and changed the old method to one based on the principle used at University of California. The new organization had five assistant junior managers who had charge of specific departments. The sub-heads consisted of a manager for training quarters, care of field, visiting team, field practice, and general manager.

Each of the junior assistants chose five underclassmen to act as assistants to him in his department and to handle the detail work.

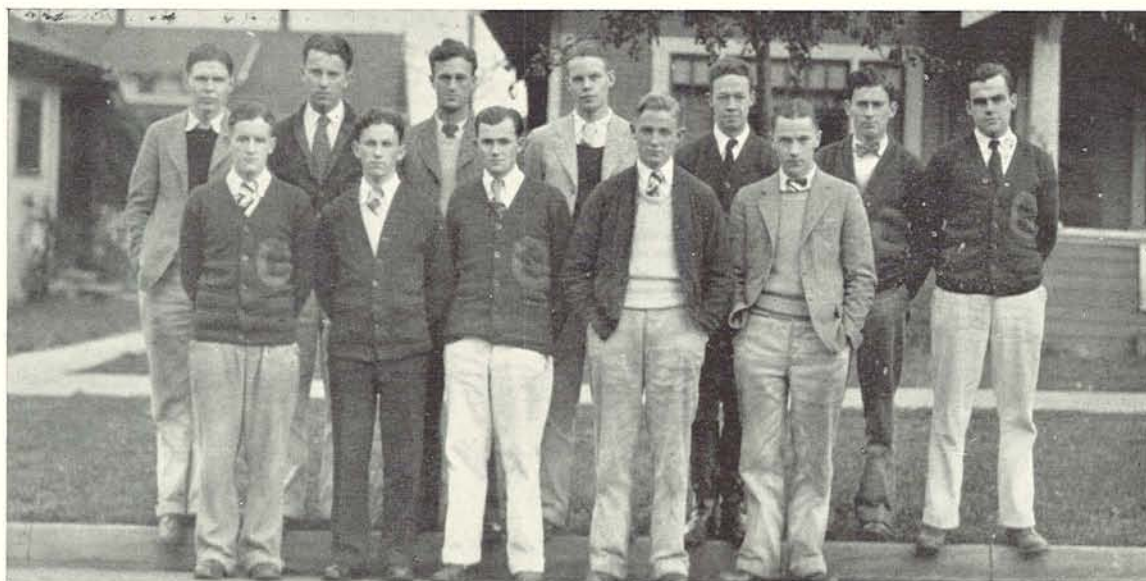

Under the former system there was one senior manager and seven assistants, but when the change became official two of the regular assistants were promoted to right-hand assistants to German and the remaining five given a sub-division. Al Boyden and Ronald Hubbs were named to assist German while the remaining five were departmental managers. These included Burr Abner, Tom Montgomery, George Schade, Gordon Miller and Austin Shephard.

Bert McElroy was basketball manager and was assisted by Phil Holmes.

Gordon Stearns handled the baseball work. Carroll Williams headed the track managers with Wade Newbegin head of minor sports. Ron Hubbs was named assistant in minor sports.

ATHLETIC COACHES WHO LEARN AT OREGON

Coaches as Students

With its origin coming from Virgil D. Earl, director of athletics at the University, an annual summer coaching school for mentors and students of various sports is held here in conjunction with each summer session. At first University officials called upon outside coaches to instruct the classes but this was soon found unnecessary as Oregon has a coaching staff second to none on the Pacific Coast and one whose reputation reaches even to the far eastern shores of this nation.

Now the Oregon head coaches, specialists in their fields, are called upon each summer to teach the classes.

Earl handles a class in athletic directorship.

Captain John J. McEwan holds forth in football.

William J. Reinhart, an Oregon graduate, teaches basketball and baseball.

William L. Hayward, head track coach for 26 years, offers instruction to cinder mentors.

Achievements of Women at Oregon

Mrs. Irene H. Gerlinger

Woman's Building

League and Associations

WOMEN at Oregon have given abundantly of their efforts † † † in many ways † † † in work and in play.

Furthering a better international feeling, and a better understanding of the women across the sea, the Women's League has established a fund for the purpose of bringing girls from France who are anxious to study in America. The venture has proved most successful both for them and for us. Contacts have been made in this which could never have been made through the leaves of a book.

It is only through the untiring work of Mrs. H. Irene Gerlinger, regent of the University, that it is going to be possible for Oregon to have a Fine Arts Museum. She has labored ceaselessly, willingly always toward that goal, and she asks no thanks. But Oregon extends to her thanks—gladly, appreciatively.

In other activities, too, women have found their place at Oregon † † † on the field, swinging an apt hockey club or baseball bat † † † on the tennis court, a flash of brief white skirt in the sun † † † a glint of paddles up the race † † †

IRENE HAZARD GERLINGER

Irene Hazard Gerlinger was appointed by Governor West as the first woman Regent of the University of Oregon. She has since been reappointed by the three succeeding governors and is commencing a second regular twelve-year term.

The woman Regent has as her special field of activity the interests and welfare of the women students. Already the two women's dormitories and the beautiful woman's building are proofs of her interest. At the present time she is fulfilling a promise made to late president Prince Lucien Campbell, to make possible a Fine Arts Building.

Last year, to express affection and appreciation of her fine loyalty, her far-seeing wisdom and her devotion to the beauties of life, the Mortar Board Society of the University elected her to membership.

WOMAN'S BUILDING

Although the Woman's Building has as its main function, service to women, it also performs many additional services. Alumni hall, gathering place of Oregon alumni, and scene of many honorary groups' social functions, is probably the most beautiful room on the campus. Dances for the entire campus and assemblies are held in the gymnasium, and small rooms are provided for group meetings. This building also houses the Murray-Warner Art Museum.

The pool, the large gymnasium and the locker and shower facilities provide for the athletic training of women. The sun porch is used for weekly teas given by the Women's League.

Women Leaders

ACTIVITY is an essential quality of the Oregon woman. In the development of alert minds, in the increased demands on character and personality, in services given to the university, it is the alert woman who is outstanding. By popular vote, by election to groups which concentrate on those who best meet their high standards, the following six women have distinguished themselves as active on the Oregon campus.

Marian Barnes is the representative of the senior class on the executive council. She has been on numerous campus committees, was a class officer in her junior year, and as treasurer of the Women's League contributed her services to the advancement of the league.

Vena Gaskill holds the position of secretary of the Associated Students of the University of Oregon, probably the most important elective position that the entire student body awards to a woman. By virtue of this position, she serves on the executive and student councils.

Esther Hardy in her capacity of president of the Women's League is the recognized leader of the organization which includes every woman registered in the university. As chairman of the big sister committee when she was a junior, she did much to aid freshmen women in their first year.

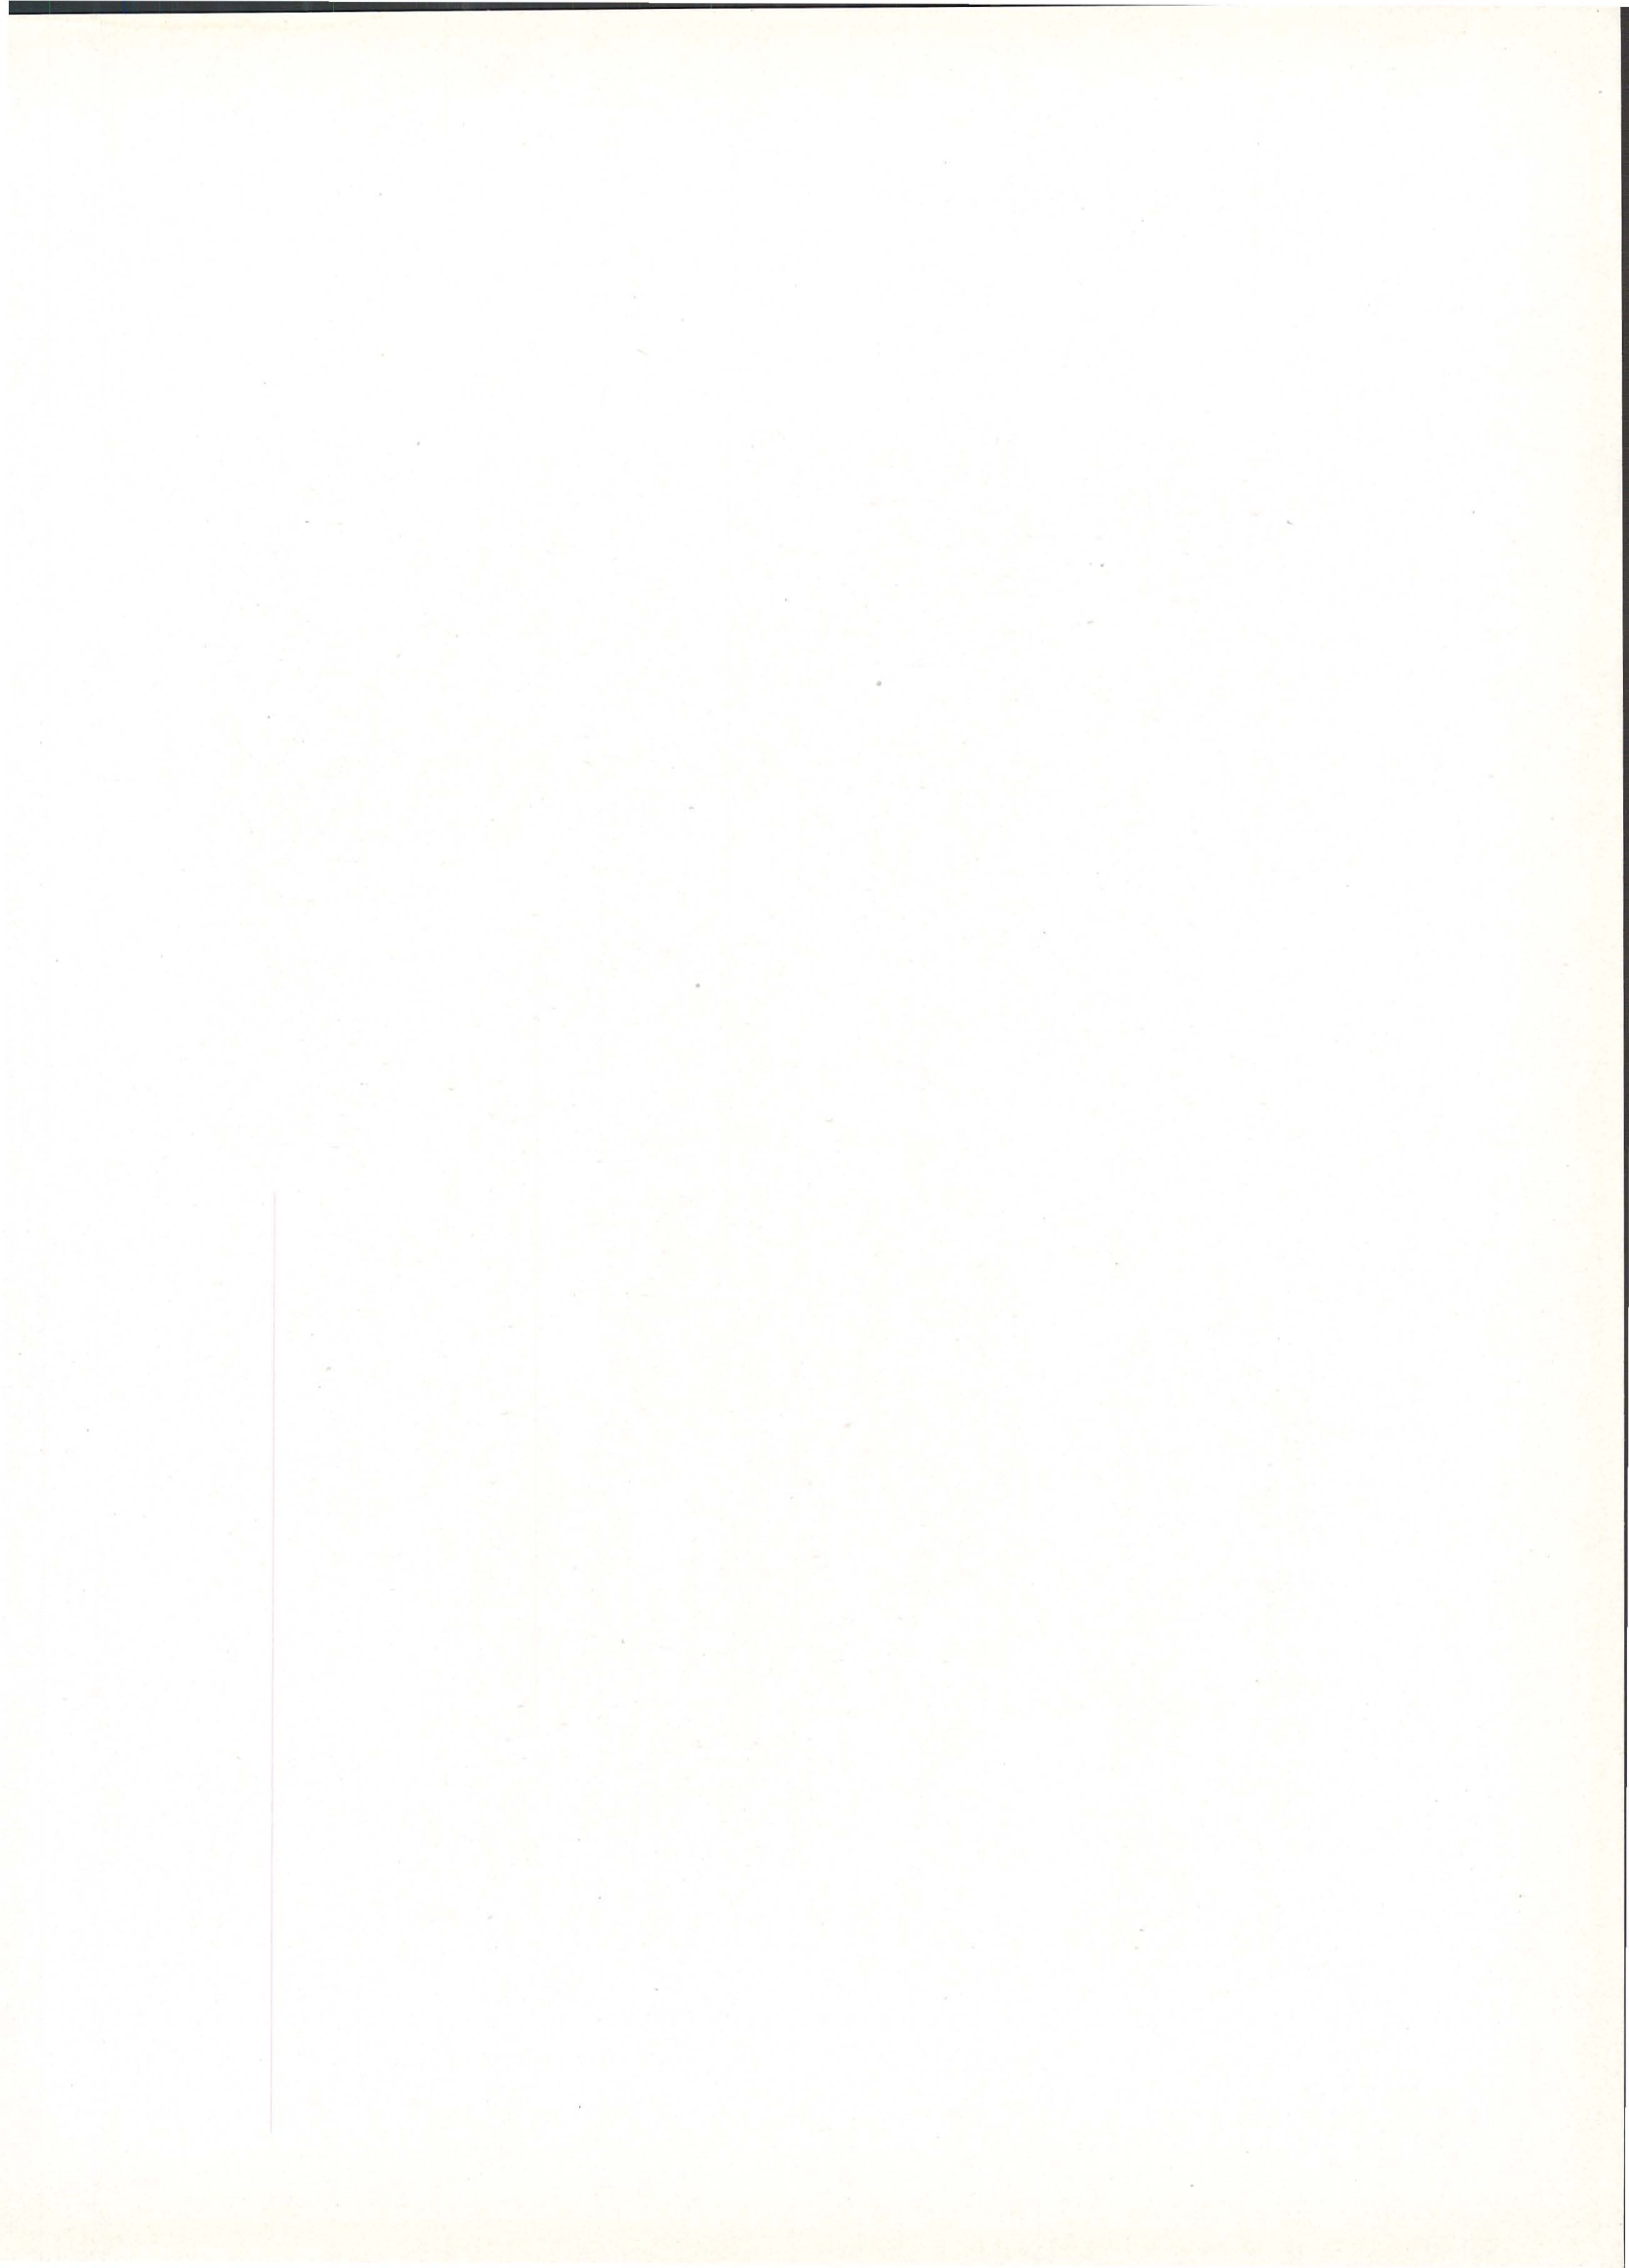

Nellie Johns, president of the Women's Athletic Association, heads that branch of women's work which deals with physical development. In choosing her for president this side of the life of Oregon women has made her its representative.

Maxine Koon holds the highest scholarship average for women. Her achievements in the intellectual world at Oregon have been recognized by election to Phi Beta Kappa and Pi Lambda Theta.

Pauline Stewart as president of the Young Women's Christian Association, as a member of many campus committees which have carried on the work of the university and the associated students, has given her services to Oregon.

Women's League and Y. W. C. A.

BETTER provision for acquaintance and friendship among women than is furnished by general contact is provided on the Oregon campus by Women's League and the Young Women's Christian Association.

Under four standing committees, much of the work of Women's League is carried on. The Big Sister committee helps new students to become adjusted to the life of the university. Through the Foreign Scholarship committee a foreign scholar is brought to the campus each year, and money is raised for the scholarship. The Activities Committee works with the chairman of the Associated Students' Activities committee in keeping the books and records of activities. The Women's Building committee provides for care of the Women's Building.

Acquaintance among women students is promoted by the work of the Big Sister committee, by teas held every other week, and by the annual April Frolic.

It is the policy of Women's League to stimulate the interest of women students in modern problems, and for this purpose Dr. Anita M. Muhl, director of special education in California, was brought to the campus to speak and hold conferences.

The work of the league this year includes a vocational research for the purpose of making a study of the professions of graduates and the bearing university education has on the preparation for such professions, raising money for the Fine Arts building and to furnish a room in a new infirmary, and selling tickets to the student lecture series.

The headquarters of the Young Women's Christian Association is "The Bungalow." Miss Dorothy Thomas, campus secretary, is in actual charge, but general work of the organization is carried on by the cabinet members who form the nucleus of all Y. W. activities.

A few of the traditional activities of the Y. W. C. A. are the yearly pennant sale for the benefit of the Women's League scholar; the annual membership banquet; the Mothers' Day banquet; the provision of employment for girls; and the bringing together of independent girls.

Women's Athletic Association

OMEN'S Athletic Association has existed on the Oregon campus for many years, evolving from an organization sponsoring inter-collegiate contests, through a combination of intra-mural and class competition, to class competition alone, placing emphasis on mass participation.

The purpose of the association is to interest Oregon women in sports, and to accomplish this purpose a variety of sports are made available. Volleyball, speedball, basketball, swimming, hockey, baseball, tennis, archery, dancing and hiking are included in the year's program.

Membership in W. A. A. is open to anyone earning a specified number of points in one or more sports. Small letters and sweaters are the rewards for further achievement.

Through mass meetings, demonstrations at the annual "Get Wise Party" for freshmen women, publication of the W. A. A. Bulletin and the work of the intramural sports committee which consists of one member from each living organization on the campus, an effort is made to arouse the interest of Oregon women in athletic activities.

This year a cabin near the braes was obtained by W. A. A. The cabin has been used for the parties of the association and individual members.

Some of the achievements of the association during the past year were the sponsoring of open discussions and addresses to the annual high school conference; the annual banquet of the association at which elections for the coming year were announced; the sending of the old and new presidents of the Oregon association to the sectional conference of the American Conference of Athletic College Women at Tucson, Arizona; the play day with Oregon Agricultural College; term parties and the Strawberry Fete.

WOMEN

The unusually favorable swimming conditions afforded by the excellent tank in the Woman's Building, makes swimming one of the most popular sports at Oregon. Several exceptional swimmers have been developed. Most of these are members of Amphibians, honorary swimming group.

Speedball

Fall term saw the inauguration of Speedball, a new sport for University of Oregon women. Speedball is a field game combining the technique of soccer and basketball. The players were enthusiastic over the sport, and reported to practice in slickers and sou'westers to follow the ball in the rain. The juniors proved to be the truest Webfeet and in a second game with the sophomores, played off a tie to win the tournament.

Eleanor Marvin was head of Speedball, and Miss Mary Jo Shelly was coach. The all-star team selected from the teams of all classes included Ruth Burcham, Marjorie Goff, Ruth Jaynes, Marjorie Landru, Eleanor Marvin, Naomi Moshberger, May Moore, Virginia Mynard, Eva Nelson, Genevieve Swedenburg and Dorothea Lensch.

Volleyball

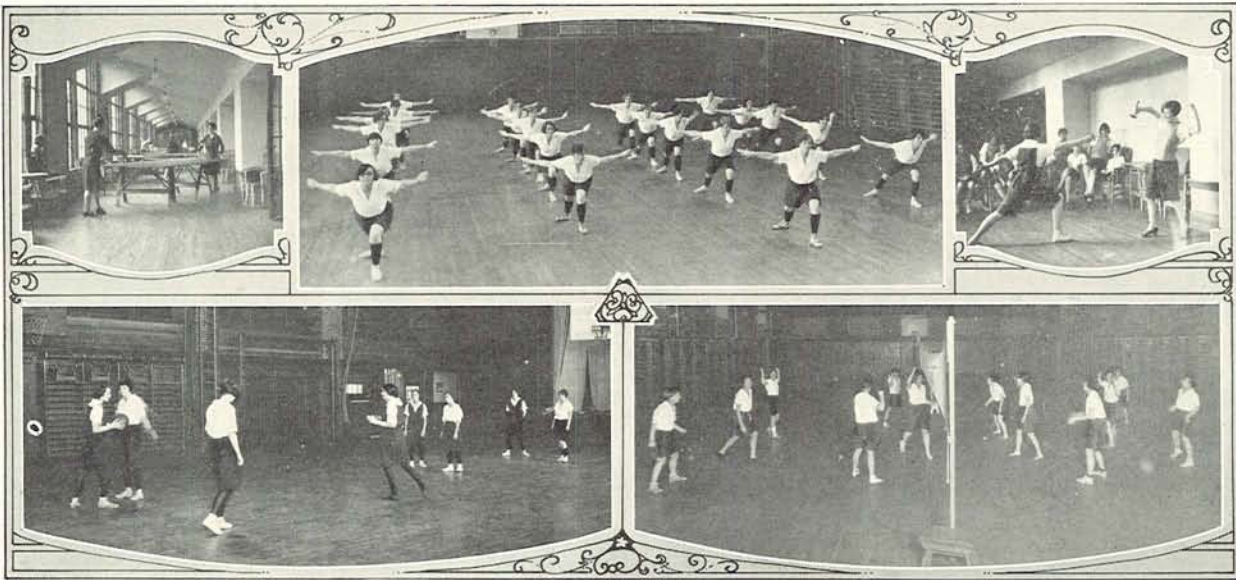

Volleyball is one of the important fall term sports, since it is a game that anyone can learn, and is interesting even to beginners. Every girl who turned out made a team. Class competition formed the basis of this sport. The volleyball all-star team was composed of Johns, Horton, Marvin, Zimmer, Lensch and Alm. Miss Constance Dunne was the coach of volleyball, and Genera Zimmer was head of this sport.

Basketball

Beginners were barred from participation in intra mural basketball fall term, because of lack of space and personnel, but this did not materially reduce the number who turned out for the sport. Practice on technique occupied the first few weeks of the season, and class practices the remaining weeks of the practice period.

Two teams from each of the three lower classes, and one senior team were selected. A round robin tournament was arranged in which every first team played six games, and every second team four games. The first teams were closely matched throughout the season, the deciding game for the championship going to the seniors with a two-point margin.

The all-star team as announced by Margery Horton, head of sport, and Mary Jo Shelly, coach, was: forwards, Nellie Johns and Editha Barthel; guards, Dorothea Lensch and Eleanor Marvin; jumping center, Marjorie Kelly; running center, Marjorie Landru.

Swimming

Class tournaments, inter-collegiate telegraphic meets, every girl on a team, points toward a W. A. A. sweater, honors, and all-star team . . . those were a few of the attractions which added to the lure of the popular winter sport, swimming, which was begun the second week of winter term.

The University of Oregon all-star team, which was chosen at the close of the class tournaments, last year was champion in the telegraphic meet. The team scored over the University of Montana and Ohio Wesleyan.

Under the guidances of Hazel Kirk, head of sport, and Ernestine Troemel and Mary Jo Shelly, coaches, an excellent opportunity to improve speed strokes, racing turns, racing starts and form diving was provided.

The all-star team for this year included Virginia Lounsbury, Florence Hurley, Myra Belle Palmer, Elise Sundbom, Dorothy Davidson and Alberta Rives.

Hiking

Two hikes to Spencer's Butte during fall term, and one to Mount Baldi, winter term, were the most notable trips made by hiking groups last year. Besides these major expeditions, small groups covered the territory around Eugene, as well as making trips up the McKenzie and Coos rivers. During winter vacation several Oregon women accompanied the Mazama hiking party to the government camp on Mount Hood.

The W. A. A. cabin was used as a resting place for hikers on the Brays. W. A. A. members in groups hikes up to this cabin for the fall term awarding of letters and sweaters. Ione Garbe was head of hiking.

Hockey

At five o'clock each night, the hockey aspirants met on the women's field for a strenuous workout. The first of the season was devoted to practice of technique such as dribbling, shooting, and learning how to handle the stick and the latter part to a tournament to decide class championships. Beginners were encouraged to turn out for this sport. Josephine Ralston was head of hockey, and Miss Constance Dunne was coach.

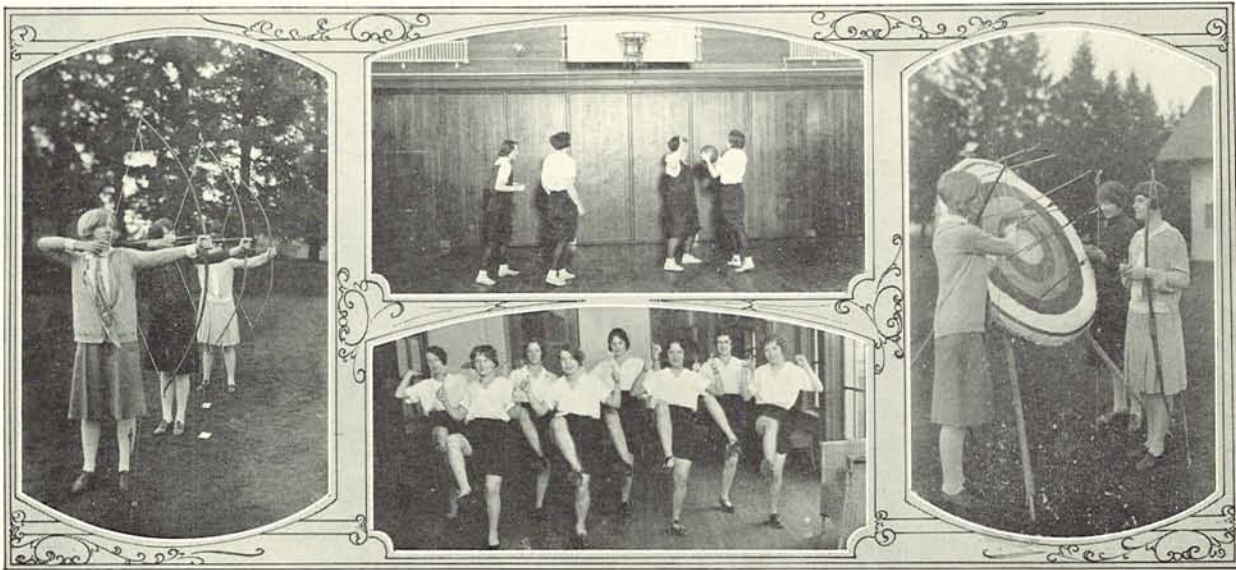

Archery

Archery took its place among W. A. A. major sports this season. Considering that it is an infant among the major sports family, there was an amazing display of interest. Inter-class competition disclosed several good archers on the campus, and developed new ones. The increasing participation in archery is due in part to newer equipment, and in part to the revived national interest in this sport. Ruth Jaynes was head of archery.

Tennis

During the first two weeks of spring term, coaching to improve technique was under the instruction of Mahalah Kurtz, head of sport, and Miss Ernestine Troemel, coach. Selection of class teams was aided by class ladder tournaments. Inter-class competition began after the ladder tournaments were completed.

Practices were held on courts reserved for the purpose, or on rainy days in the main gymnasium in the Woman's Building. Class managers were: Grace Vath, freshman; Augusta Gerlinger, sophomore; Marjorie Landru, junior; Genera Zimmer, senior.

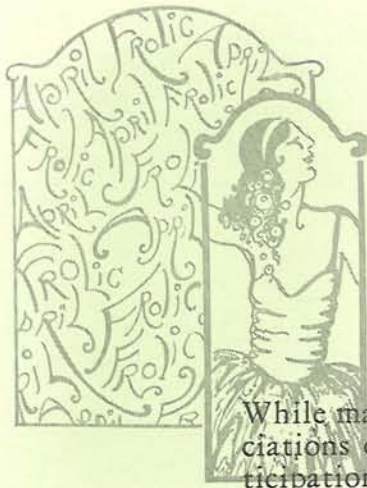

Baseball

Girls' baseball, which had formerly been played with a small diamond and a large indoor ball, was completely changed this year with the inauguration of a large diamond, a nine-inch ball, and rules very similar to men's. Practices started in April, striving at first to develop technique and later to perfect class teams. Head of baseball was Anona Hildenbrand.

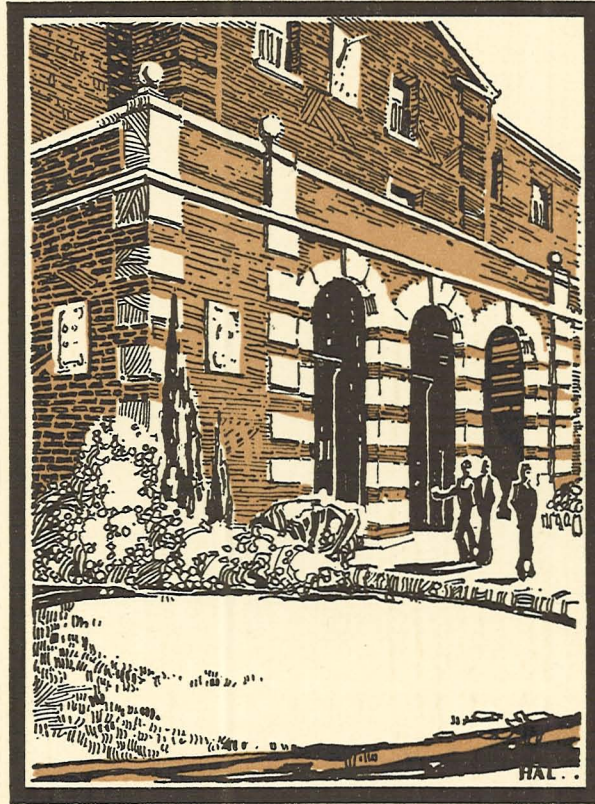

Horseback Riding

Standing on top of some mountain ridge and telling the wobbly, old world to get along as best it may; smelling sizzly, crisp bacon sputter and pop in a frying pan over a crackling camp fire; galloping at a break-neck pace down a hard, mud road with the wind and mist in your face—that is what riding means to an Oregon girl. At any rate that is what two hundred and twenty-five girls made it mean to them the last school year.

A few of that number wanted not only the glories of riding but also the distinction of earning honors in riding and thus securing for themselves fifty W. A. A. points. In order to do this they were obliged to saddle and bridle a horse, mount and dismount, know the principal parts of the saddle and bridle, be able to post, to trot, to gallop, and to handle a horse under ordinary conditions. Head of riding was Eleanor Poorman.

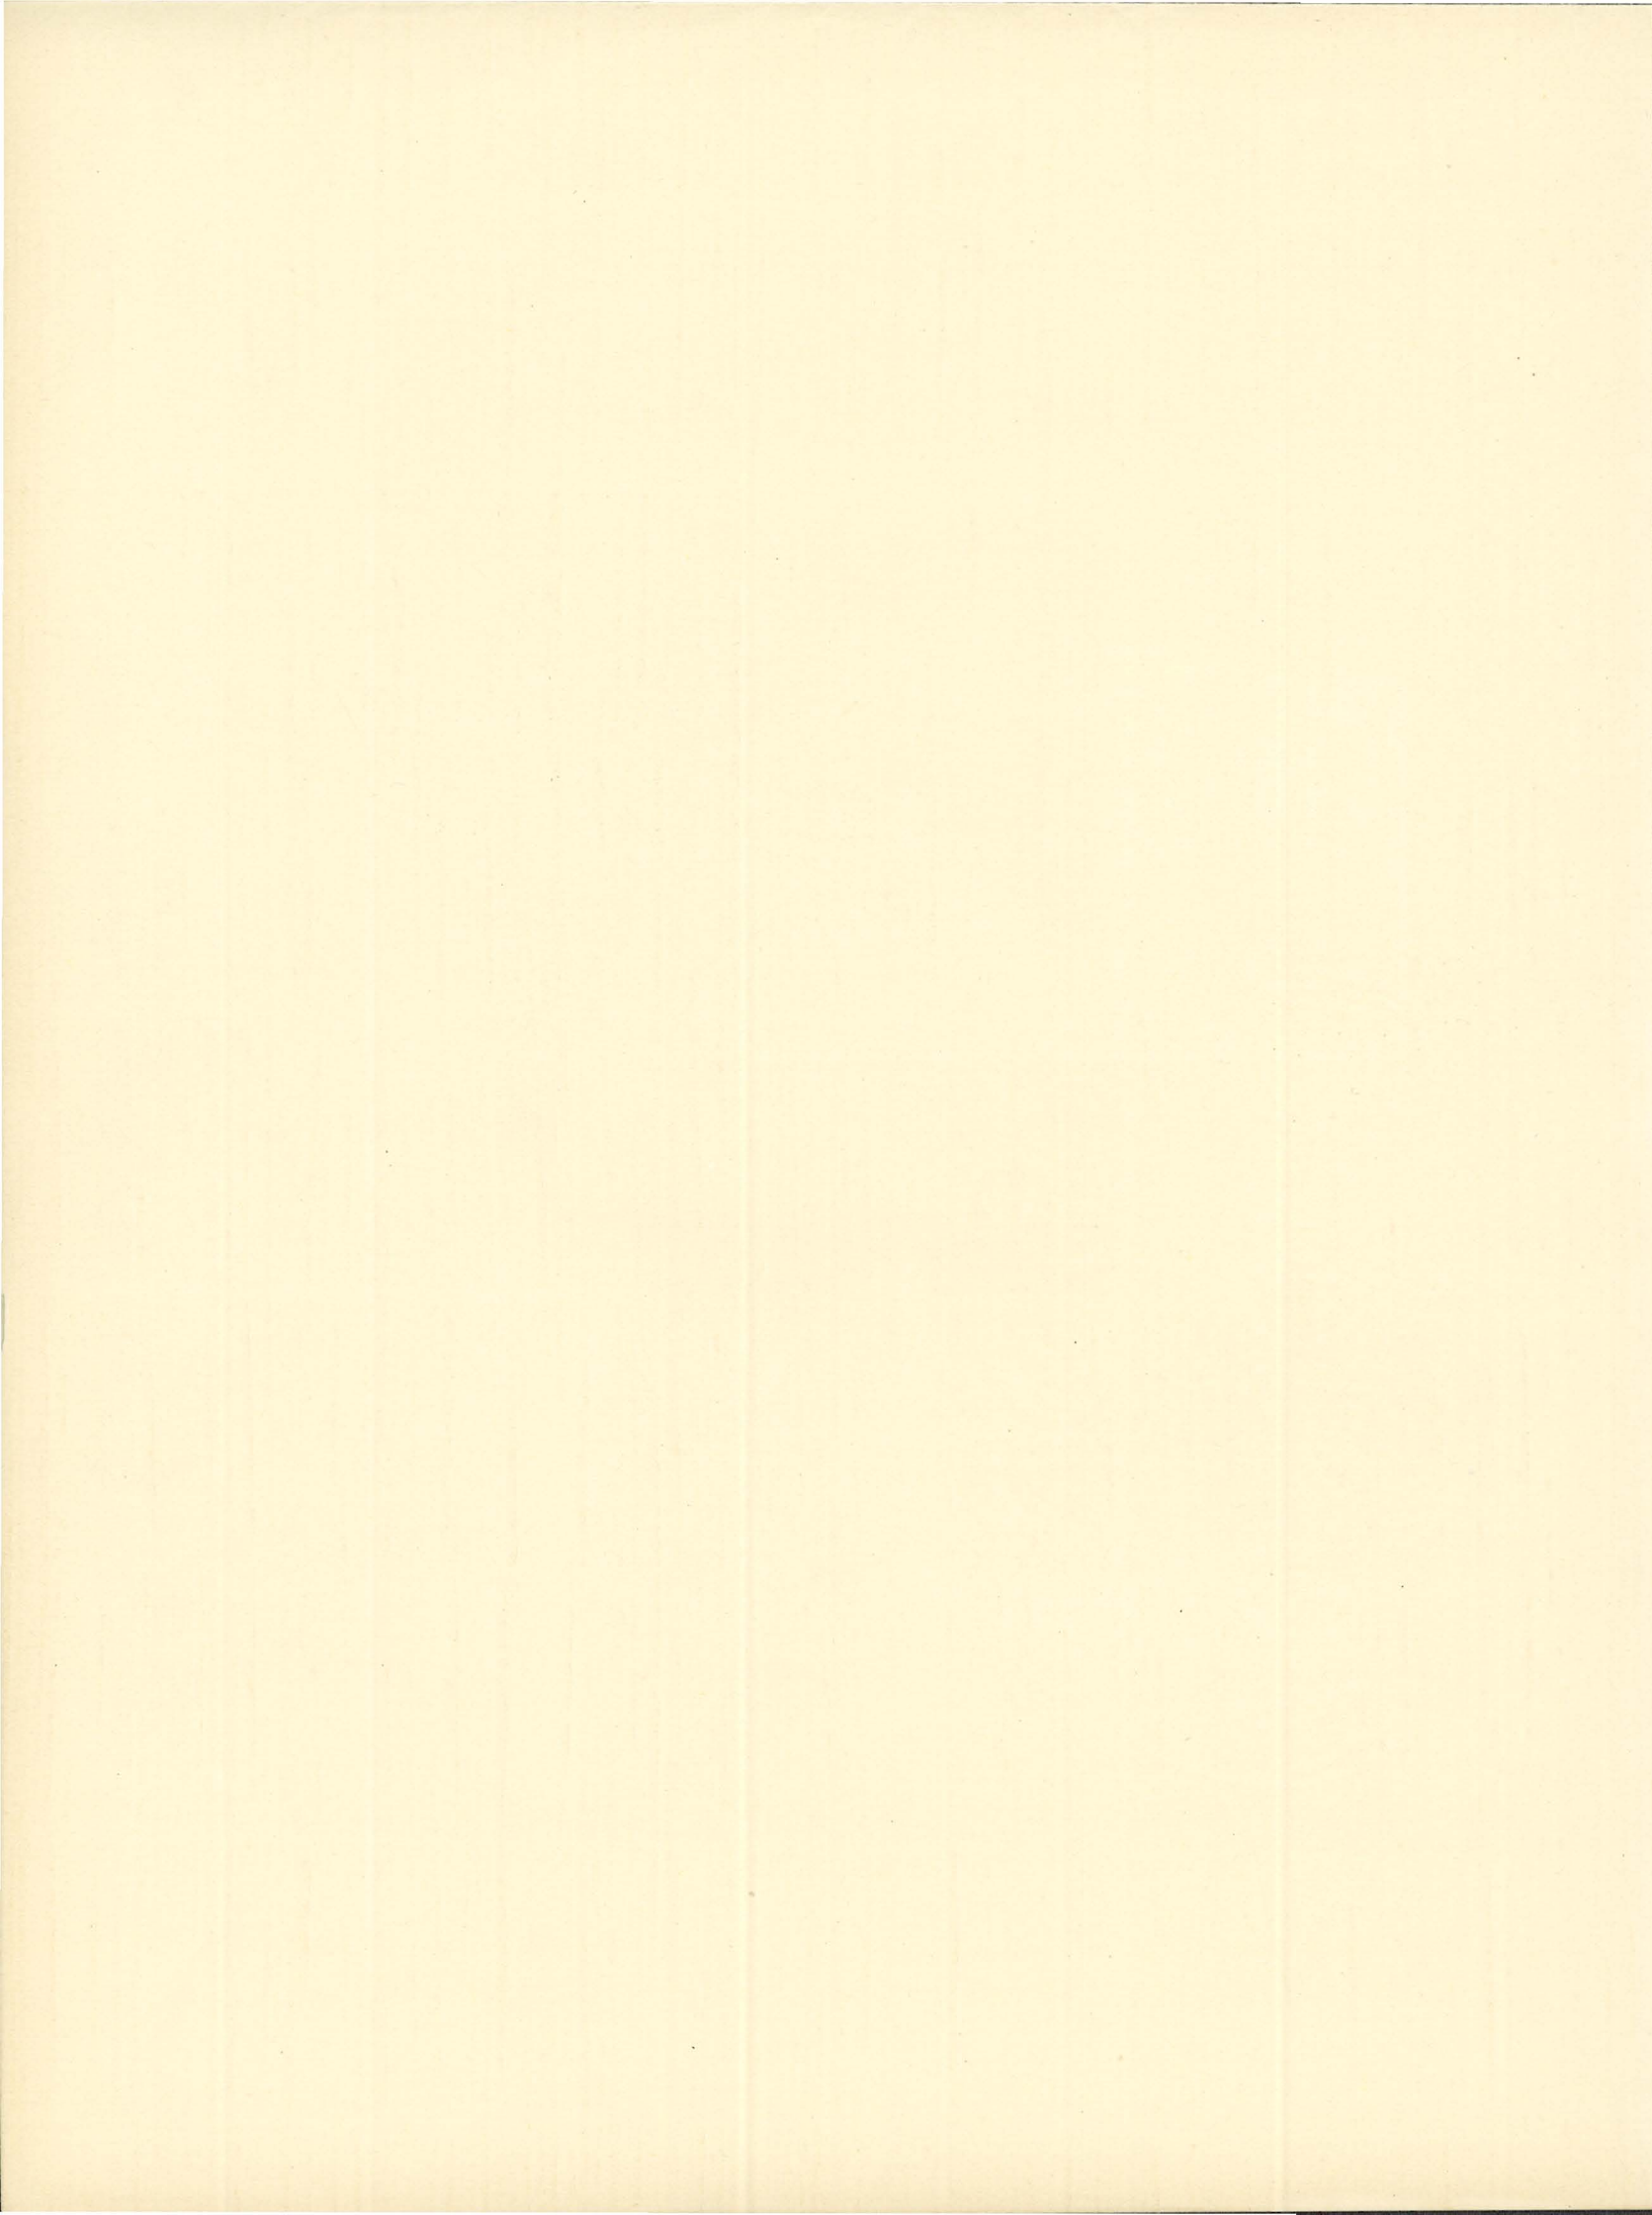

While many enriching associations come through participation in activities, it is, perhaps, in the more intimate contact of daily living that the most lasting friendships are made . . . in fireside conversations and work and play together.

Living Groups

Dean of Women's Message Pan-Hellenic Heads of Houses
National and Local Organizations

IN FOCUSING ATTENTION upon the more artificial phases of social group living one often loses sight of the real value to a university of the group idea. At the heart of the idea lie the principles of loyalty to the group, responsibility of every member to it, interdependence of its members and independence of organization and self-control which make a living group the best laboratory for self-government. To be held responsible for the quality of the group, scholastic, social and personal, makes for controlled and directed character. The establishment of these qualities within the group does not limit, but rather releases a greater loyalty to university ideals and traditions.

The development of coherent groups of alumnae whose loyalty to alma mater is intensified by devotion to the smaller group, whose interests through life may focus on a vital growing interest within the university, assures to the university the intelligent sympathy and co-operation of these graduates.

There should be within the pan-hellenic group a constant self-evaluation and modification and a self-direction always in line with the developing university. If this is intelligently directed the spiritual contributions to the university will be constant and valuable—attributes of respect for scholarship, good taste in conduct and integrity of character.

The Dean's Message

Interfraternity Council

National and Local Groups

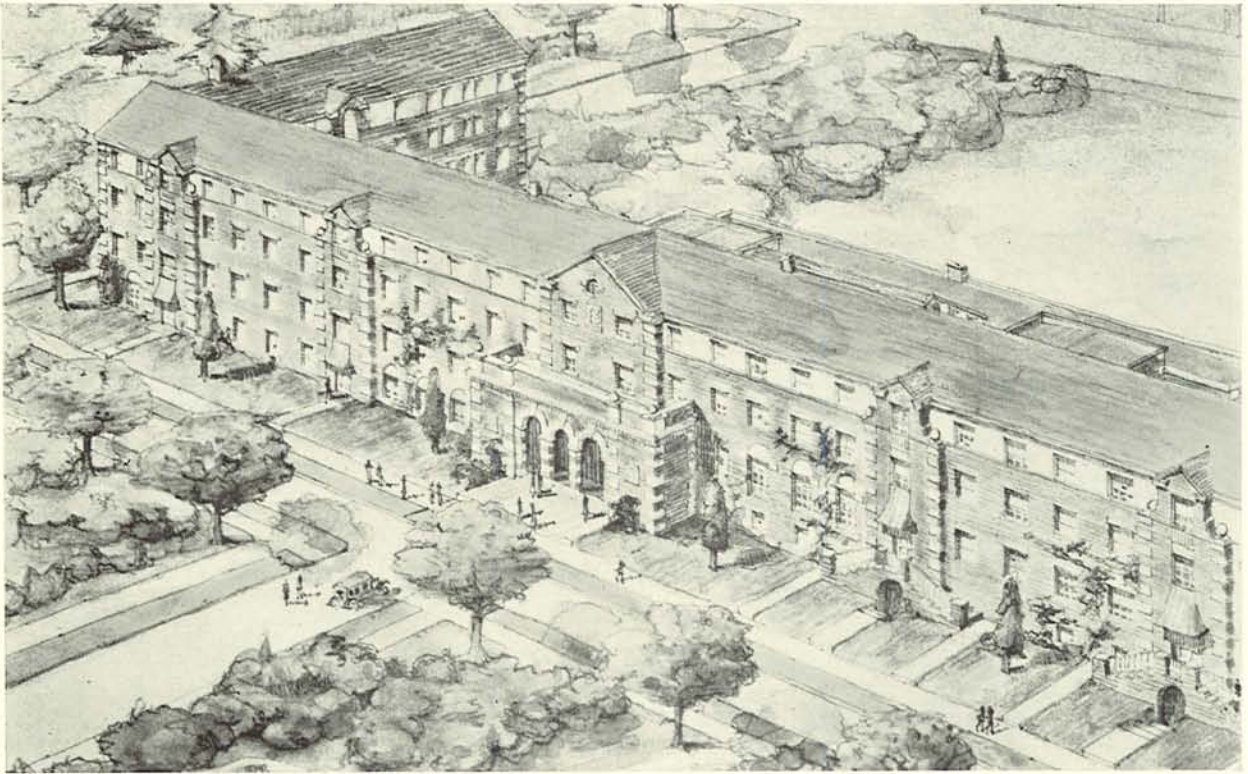

THE GREEK LETTER fraternity is now an institution well over one hundred years of age which has had an interesting development and a progressively strong influence on American University life. . . . The University of Oregon has been glad to have on its campus these institutions, both national and local. . . . They are fulfilling in an increasing way the ideals of their founders that they be part of the institution and an educational auxiliary in every respect.

Their housing facilities which contribute so splendidly to group life, their interest and solicitude for their younger members, their cooperation in all things which look toward the welfare of the University of Oregon, have been much appreciated by the University officials and the University patrons.

In guarding their own good name they guard the good name of the University and in striving for their own betterment they strive for the betterment of the University of Oregon, which after all is the purpose of each one of us.

Dean of Men

The New Dormitory

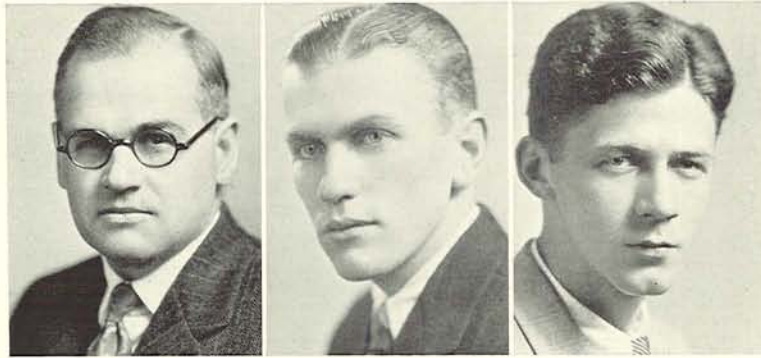

Construction of the first unit of the new men's dormitory, to be completed by September 15th, is well under way. The desire of the University administration to have more adequate housing facilities for the men students is about to become a reality made possible by the recent Enabling Act passed by the legislature. Under this act the University is authorized to finance this new structure by bond issues to be retired over a period of twenty years, from the rentals. This building is expected to pay for itself entirely and no state money will be used. This is the first time the Enabling Act has been used by the University of Oregon and the very satisfactory bids on the bonds to be issued will encourage the board of regents to believe that this will prove a solution to some of the problems financing buildings to be used for dormitory and student activity purposes.

The contract has been awarded to Hansen and Hammond of Portland for $310,000 and after completion the entire structure will cost approximately $375,000, including construction, lands and furnishings.

The plans were made by Lawrence and Holford, architects, who have had much experience in building dormitories and who have given much thought and consideration to the best type of building for the housing of students and have reached a very adequate solution for our student living problems.

The capacity of the hall is to be 278, to be built in six units, four units to hold approximately 60 men, the other two units to be somewhat smaller. The roof is to be of asbestos, floors and walls of concrete, and the entire structure is to be absolutely fireproof. The building will have its own large refrigerator plant and storage room. There will be a central kitchen and the dining rooms will accommodate 500 people, including those who now have their meals at Friendly Hall, and will be divided by folding doors, so it forms five separate rooms but also can be thrown together for a large banquet or dancing room.

Each of the six dormitory units will have its own living room, guest room for parents, and most of the study rooms will hold two men, while a few single rooms will be provided. Each floor will have sufficient plumbing facilities and hot and cold water will be installed in each room. Across from the study halls, on the inside of the court, will be the sleeping porches with only four men to a porch.

FAMOUS PLAYERS

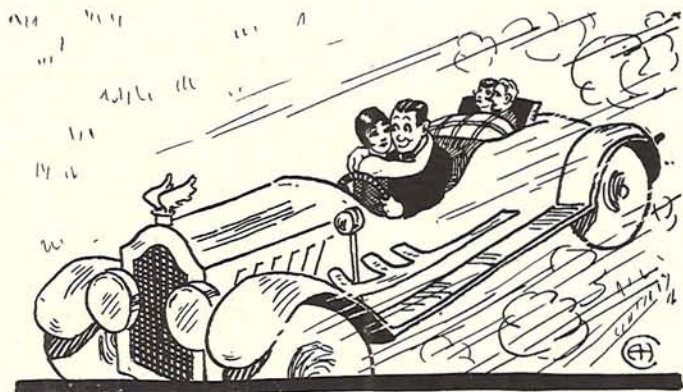

STELLAR ROLES

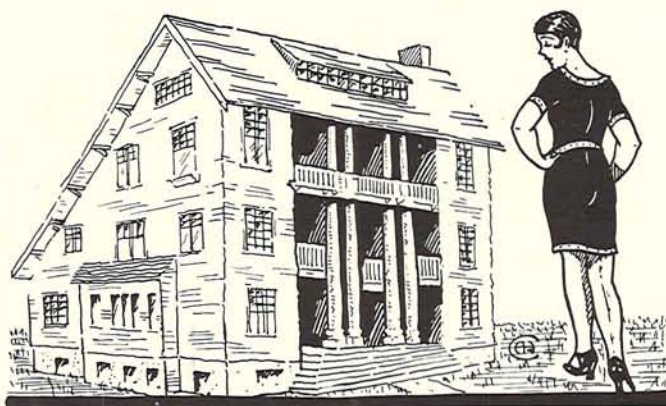

I'd like to be a Kappa.
I think it would be nice;
But I've lived so long in Juneau
I'm really tired of ice.

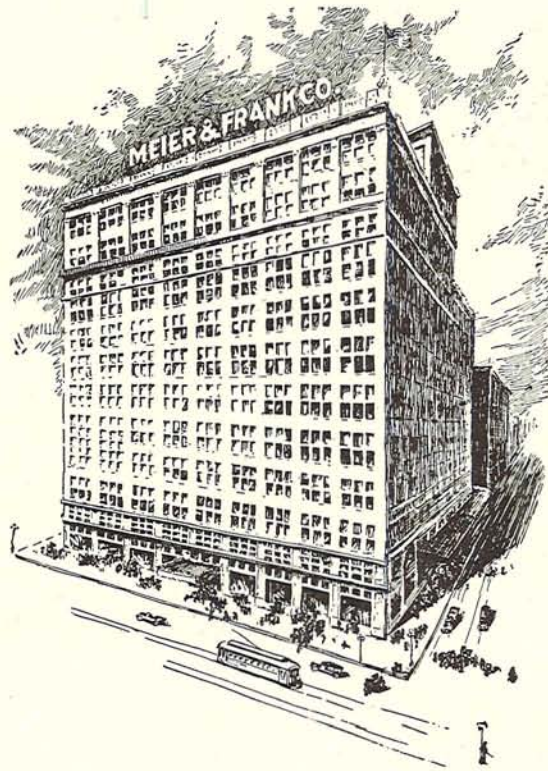

While I like the Pi Phi arrow,
There's something I can't see;
They're too wrapped up in Phi Deltas
To have appeal for me.

I'm really far too modest
To make an Alpha Phi;
I'd like to watch the Chi Psi's,
But they'd be watching me.

I like the Delta Gammas,
They think they're one of three;
But living in the shed they do,
Their anchor won't hold me.

The A. O. Pi's would suit me fine
 If I were a steppin' fool,
 'Cause I know the dean of women
 Could keep me here in school.

My mother was a Tri-Delt
 But I'll not miss their bid,
 For I'm not like my mother
 And she's not like her kid.

I've heard of Delta Zetas,
 Have heard their pace is fast;
 But no, I can't accept them,
 I'm afraid I couldn't last.

I've known a lot of Thetas,
 And while they could be worse;
 For downright isolation
 I think I'd choose a hearse.

As for the quill of Alpha Xi,
I could have it if I tried;
But I don't want to settle down,
I want to hit my stride.

Grown-ups think the Alpha Chi's
As nice as they can be,
But I'll be young a long time yet;
They'll have to wait for me.

The A. D. Pi's are puzzling,
I really can't be sure;
But I think that I'm too quiet
And I know I'm too demure.

I really wanted Gamma Phi,
Their pin would give me pride;
There's just one thing that holds me back,
They're too self satisfied.

EUGENE

SALEM

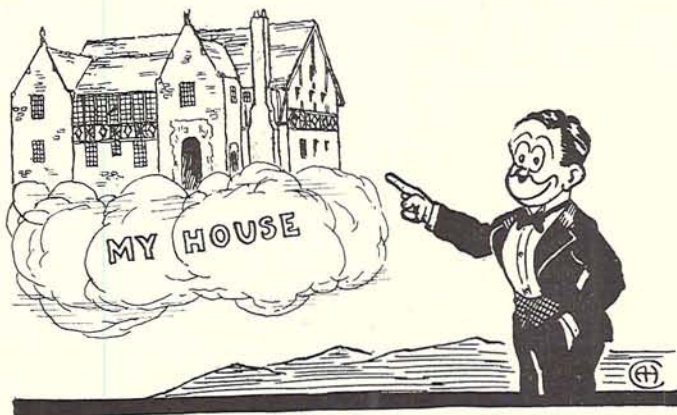

Alpha Tau Omega

People who live in stone houses shouldn't throw glass. The boys don't. There is a rebate on returned bottles. House motto is still, "Everything centers around Hubbs." In chapter meeting one night Bob Galloway, after a gruelling 3rd degree, confessed that there had been several days go by without Ron's name appearing in the Emerald. Nearly jerked Bob's pin before he explained that there are no Sunday Emeralds.

Delta Tau Delta

For some mysterious reason the boys suddenly pulled stakes and left Eugene. Bought a few acres south of Oregon and established Deltaville. Since then have been trying to argue their California chapter into going in with them on a new house. California brothers, however, think such a joint venture should not be located so near Berkeley.

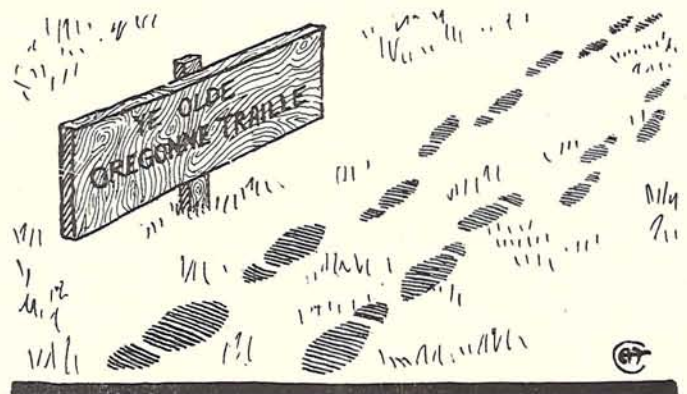

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Do we love our HOUSE? Not MUCH! Rented so many tuxes the night of their open house that they had to get along without a formal. Frosh are instructed to answer all questions with these words: "This is the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house. Come right in and I'll show you through. Yes, Sigma Alpha Epsilon. What? You've never heard of Sigma Alpha Epsilon?" (and so far into the night).

Chi Psi

To think we would ever live to write of the day when anyone would dare invade the sacred "Olde Oregonne Traille" of the Chi Psi—Sigma Chi tin scholarship cup. Now the last source of publicity is exhausted. Have recently asked the Order of the "O" for special permission to let different fellows in the house take turns wearing Bill Eddy's baseball sweater.

Sigma Nu

The dean of men this year isn't a Sigma Nu and the boys have had to watch the old step pretty carefully. As a result, they have had to be content with tamer things, such as having frosh call up the police while their own upperclassmen were out on a serenade. Whole house jailed, but good publicity nevertheless. And Beelar; you've surely been on at least one of his committees!

Beta Theta Pi

It didn't just HAPPEN that Soco Lofsky chapter of Beta Theta Pi built in a secluded spot "by the old mill race." Things go on down there that you never hear about. A summer or so ago the police found enough beer to supply Germany for over a year. It certainly pays to have lots of honest-to-goodness PULL with newspapers.

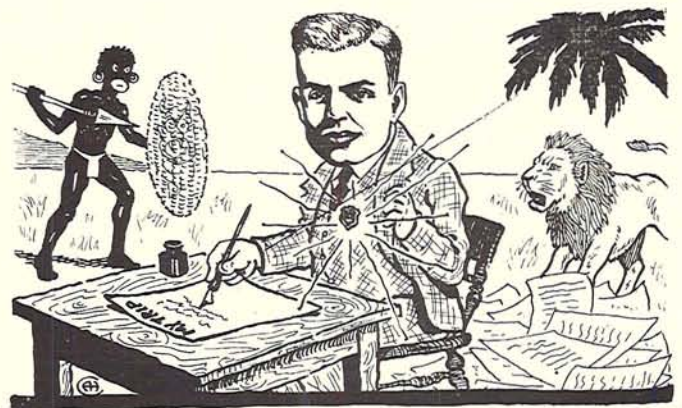

Phi Gamma Delta

If you are a good man but hard up, be sure to inquire about the Fiji charity offer. All the name implies and more—board, room and all school expenses paid as long as you care to stay. Famous "burning match" was abandoned this year in extending bids. Too many were blowing it out. Now the prospective pledge can think it over until the "rushing flivver" runs out of gas.

Phi Kappa Psi

Four years ago when the boys gathered around to congratulate Jack Hempstead after they had pinned the Aladdin's lamp in his lapel, he casually remarked, "I shall make of this a great fraternity." Today Phi Kappa Psi stands at its full height—a glowing tribute to Jack, who has carried the pin into the farthestmost nooks and crannies of the world.

In Appreciation

To accord all those who have aided in the development of the 1928 Oregon their due gratitude and praise here would be most difficult, but named below are those for whose assistance the members of the staff are particularly grateful.

Mr. Basil Louis McGann of the Beaver Engraving Company, who designed and directed the work of the entire book proved more tireless and successful in his efforts than anyone connected with the Oregon. To him the most credit is due. Mr. Fred H. Schoene, also of the Beaver Engraving Company, assisted considerably by his helpful advice and able handling of the mechanical part of the engraving work.

The staff is grateful to Mr. Sam Babcock of the Weber-McCrea Company of Los Angeles for his personal assistance in the selection and execution of the cover. Mr. L. J. Schoen, foreman of Koke-Chapman Printing Company of Eugene was considerate in his work on the book and the editor is particularly thankful for his aid. For the selection of the paper thanks are due Mr. Walter H. Hulitt, and Mr. S. H. Lee, both of Blake, Moffitt and Towne of Portland. The pleasant and willing cooperation of Mr. E. W. Ellis of Kennell-Ellis Portrait studio is also appreciated.

To the members of the School of Journalism faculty the staff is particularly grateful for their kindly and paternal interest. For their advice, sympathetic understanding and helpfulness in all phases of the work, thanks are accorded Dean Eric W. Allen, Professor Ralph D. Casey, Professor George Turnbull, Mr. Robert Hall and Mr. George H. Godfrey.

To Miss Jeannette Calkins for her considerate cooperation and sterling assistance all during the production of the book, the staff is appreciative. Dr. James H. Gilbert, Mr. Clark F. Waite of San Pedro, California, Mrs. Clara M. Fitch, Mr. S. Stephenson Smith, Dr. John F. Bovard, and Mr. Thor M. Smith of San Francisco have been most helpful because of their encouragement and valuable advice. To Mr. N. B. Zane the staff expresses its thanks for his assistance in the guiding of the art work, and to Mr. Eyer Brown for his aid in producing the pictures for the art section.

To Mr. Ben H. Miller of Kilham's Printing Company of Portland, the staff is grateful for his aid in the planning of the book.

It would be a real task to select the members of the staff who have worked most diligently in the producing of the book. All put forth their best efforts and their constant energy and loyalty was a true inspiration to those who were in charge of the work.
