Up from the Ranks

These are the presidents of the companies in the Bell System. They all started in the ranks.

Seventeen years ago the Bell System first published an advertisement like this. But there is a big difference today. Every one of the faces is new.

All of these presidents, like those before them, have had wide telephone experience—an average of 34 years in the Bell System and 18 years in upper management positions.

The Bell System is an up-from-the-ranks business and it aims to keep the opportunity for advancement open to all.

This has been true of the telephone business for many years and it is nowhere better illustrated than in the careers of the men who serve as presidents of Bell System companies.

Vol. XXXVI [XXXVI]

IT WAS quite a job, in a way, picking the two seniors you met on the cover of the last OLD OREGON for the year's cover series. From another angle, it was a snap. Both Dorothy Kopp's and Pete Williams' names kept popping up when we asked people around campus to suggest a couple of outstanding seniors for the job . . . being a real newcomer to Oregon, we thought that was the best way to find our models. Happily enough, Dorothy was working right in the Alumni Office, and Pete came to Eugene on the summer-school weekend we made the millrace picture.

Both Dorothy and Pete are, we think, people you'd enjoy knowing. Both are outstanding on campus: She was a Junior Weekend princess last year, won the Gerlinger Cup and counseled at Carson Hall. This year she's president of Kappa Alpha Theta, in Mortar Board, and a senior representative in ASUO. Pete, president of Phi Delta Theta, captained this spring's PCC champion baseball club. He's past president of Druids and a member of Friars and the Order of the O.

DID you notice anything just a little odd about that same cover on the August-September issue? For the esthetic effect of having our models facing toward the way the magazine opened, we did what is known in photographic circles as "flopping" the negative—that is, we reversed the negative so that the photograph was turned around backward. Admittedly, we were curious as to how many extremely sharp-eyed readers would turn up with comments. Be truthful, now; did you catch the "O" being on the wrong side of Pete's letterman jacket?

You'll remember that the millrace looked mightily cool and pleasant on that cover, too. We have another admission to make now: We looked long and hard to find the very nicest spot to take the picture in. Things aren't that rosy-looking all up and down the race, as you'll find in stories in the December issue. Also we'll have Leo Harris' description of a trip this summer.

THERE'S an interesting comparison lurking somewhere behind the reactions we got to requests for participation in our story on "wheels of the past." The ex-yell kings came through promptly and with enthusiasm; their letters and pictures started coming in a week or so after they got our notes. But the ex-student body presidents responded with return-mail notes of thanks, asking for a specific deadline on their material. Could you draw a conclusion there about enthusiasm and business-like promptness?

Anyway, that's our alibi for having to postpone the "they were your presidents" article until the December edition. You'll see it then for sure, with more than twenty past student body heads represented.—D.S.

It's an old Oregon tradition that freshman men get a free ride down the 'O' on Skinner's Butte when they paint it each year by the 'seat-of-the-pants' method. Here Skip Squires, freshman from Springfield, gets a helping hand from Lettermen Pete Williams and Bob Wagner as Dick Schlosstein handles the paint bucket. More bright new lemon yellow paint will flow freely Homecoming weekend, November 12 and 13.

Presidential Inauguration

DR. O. MEREDITH WILSON was inaugurated as the ninth president of the University of Oregon Tuesday, October 19, in ceremonies climaxing the first annual Charter Day, observed jointly with the inaugural this year.

"The University's Responsibility in the Tradition of Freedom" was the theme of the two-day celebration, which opened October 18 with registration of visitors and a concert by the Griller String Quartet from Berkeley, California. Dr. Julian Huxley addressed an assembly Tuesday morning.

A colorful academic procession in the afternoon preceded the formal inaugural. The 400 members of the University faculty, dressed in black academic robes, mortar board caps and colorful hoods, paraded into the court with the representatives of 300 other schools and learned societies. Dr. R. E. Kleinsorge, president of the State Board of Higher Education, installed Dr. Wilson, hailing the new president as a "man of many achievements."

Dr. Clarence H. Faust addressed the inauguration audience as second in the series of three distinguished speakers for the 82nd anniversary of the University's authorization by the Legislature. Speaker for the Alumni Association Charter Day dinner, closing the two-day program, was Dr. Zechariah Chafee Jr., on "If the Salt Has Lost Its Savor . . ."

and Charter Day

Dr. Zechariah Chafee Jr., Langdell professor of law at Harvard University: He criticized investigating committees and administrators of 'teacher oaths,' asking, 'Do we really want professors to follow the election returns?' Nearly 900 persons heard Dr. Chafee speak at the alumni dinner in the Union.

Dr. Clarence H. Faust, head of the Ford Foundation Fund for the Advancement of Education: He told the inaugural audience that the primary task of the University is the enrichment of the life of reason. 'My wish for the University of Oregon is that it be an increasingly bright beacon of reason and reflection.'

Dr. Julian Huxley, English biologist: He called for a new science, 'directed to investigation of man's possibilities,' along with a religion which holds that 'all men have opportunity of greater fulfillment than they now enjoy.' He addressed 2,800 guests in McArthur Court.

Mrs. Wilson and President Wilson greeted well-wishers at the inauguration reception.

ERIC W. ALLEN Hall, a journalist's dream come true, was formally opened on the University of Oregon campus in ceremonies Saturday, October 9.

Some 400 alumni, educators, journalists and friends attended the opening ceremonies of the $600,000 structure. Twelve distinguished representatives of journalism and education addressed a dinner in the Student Union ballroom after a day devoted to "open house" at the new building.

Illustrating the part that more than 1,000 alumni of the School of Journalism have played in "paving the way" for Allen Hall, Dean Gordon A. Sabine announced at the dinner that a $2,000 fund drive to furnish the seminar room of the building had reached a total of more than $4,000—344 separate contributions, most of them from University alumni.

The Eric Allen Memorial seminar room is carefully patterned as a close reproduction of the living room of Dean Allen, founder and first dean of the School of Journalism at Oregon, where he met often with his students. Dean Allen headed the School for 28 years, from 1916 until his death in 1944.

The room, which will be used for senior and graduate seminars, has a corner fireplace, beamed ceiling and oak parquetry floor. It is furnished with a leather lounge chair, davenports, television set, antique-polished seminar table, bookcases and carpeting. Over the fireplace is a reproduction of the wood carving that hung over Dean Allen's mantel. His portrait hangs in a niche between the bookcases.

Most of the above-goal contributions will be used for scholarships to students of journalism. Dr. Sabine announced at the dinner, with the approving applause of the audience.

ONE OF THE largest journalism education buildings in the United States and one of the few buildings planned and constructed especially for journalistic training, Allen Hall is a modern three-story, brick-faced structure, built in the shape of a T. Classrooms and laboratories will accommodate a total of 517 students, with space designed especially for higher student enrollments predicted nationally for the 1960's. Complete lab facilities are available for advertising copywriting, communications research, typography, copyediting and news-writing and photography. Also included are a radio-television broadcasting studio, reading and reference room and an auditorium with motion-picture projection booth. The School's historic Washington hand press is displayed on the main floor.

Offices of the Oregon Daily Emerald are on the third floor of Allen Hall, as are state headquarters of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association and Oregon State Broadcasters Association. On the first floor is the University Press.

Nine colophons and watermarks of famous printers and typographers decorate the limestone-faced, picture-frame front of Allen Hall. They range from the 15th to the 20th century, with the most modern the mark of John Henry Nash, who was a member of the Oregon journalism faculty under Dean Allen.

A year-long program of dedication, featuring distinguished speakers on a theme of "The Responsibility of Journalism and Journalists," was continued October 23 with an address by J. R. Eyerman, chief of the Los Angeles photo bureau of Life magazine. Other speakers will include Palmer Hoyt '23, editor and publisher of the Denver Post; Thomas d'Arcy Brophy, founder of Radio Free Europe; Don Belding '19, of Foote, Cone and Belding; Max Ascoli, editor of The Reporter; Dore Schary, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Dr. H. K. Newburn, president of the Educational Television and Radio Center at Ann Arbor, Michigan; Walter Lippman, author and columnist, and Elmer Davis, author and news commentator, whose original appearance Nov. 18 has been postponed because of illness.

Allen Hall was a hope and a dream for many years, three years in the actual planning; it was completed ahead of schedule, built in only 13 months. The structure was designed by Architect Walter Church '16, stepson of Dr. Prince L. Campbell, former University president.

But above all, Allen Hall honors a man who was "a great and positive force during the formative years of journalism education in the United States." Eric W. Allen was saluted in the February 1952 OLD OREGON; he was honored nationally, was revered by his graduates. For the decades ahead, Allen Hall is a living memorial to him.

This quonset hut housed the School of Journalism office last year. The sign above the door late this summer replaced one reading 'Wait 'til next year!'

After the builders tore down old McClure Hall and built the walls of the old journalism building into new Allen Hall, there was still landscaping work to be done.

Truckload after truckload of furniture and equipment had to be moved in to make the University of Oregon's new J School the finest, most up-to-date in the country.

But still, watching the quonset that once had been the Emerald 'shack' being hauled away, you knew that the staffers who had labored there would remember it fondly.

Charles H. (Chuck) Mitchelmore, a freshman in pre-journalism, talks with Dr. Gordon A. Sabine at the dean's '12-foot-desk.' He's the son of the Rev. Lawrence Hugh Mitchelmore '29, who in 1930 received the first master's degree in journalism awarded by the University.

Especially planned and completely equipped, the large darkroom in Allen Hall has eight enlargers on partitioned shelves, and small darkrooms with sinks for film loading and developing. Here Chuck Mitchelmore watches as Paul Snider, who took most of the pictures for this story, illustrates a photographic point.

Prof. Warren C. Price checks a reference in his new office, typical of faculty offices. The modern built-in bookshelves are a striking feature of the rooms.

This portrait of the late Dean Eric W. Allen, founder of the School of Journalism and its dean from 1916 until his death in 1944, was painted by David McCosh, associate professor of art. It hangs in the Eric Allen seminar room.

He Manages Famed Bear Creek Orchards

By Evelyn Nill Osterhout '50

CHANCES are that you've read a story in some national magazine about the founding and operation of the Bear Creek Orchards of Medford, Oregon. But did you know that an Oregon alumnus manages the multi-million-dollar corporation, the world's largest gift fruit packing company?

David Holmes, '45, a big, blond fellow in his early thirties, is president of Bear Creek Orchards corporation. He first worked there the summer he was nine, when the business was operated by his father, the late David Holmes Sr., and his uncle Harry, who is still active in the operation.

David's continuous employment began in 1945. He became co-manager three years ago after the tragic death of his father in an auto accident, and now has first-hand say-so in running a business which last year grossed $6,000,000.

Harry Holmes and David's father began their gift fruit packing business in earnest back in 1932, when prospects for Rogue Valley pears looked as bleak as other business ventures did in the middle of the depression. But the clever pair left for the city one rainy fall day to sell the tons of choice Du Comice pears which waited idly in their storehouses—no chance of sale in sight.

David went to San Francisco, Harry to New York, each with samples of their now famous trademark pears, Royal Rivas. The ingenious brothers picked from each city phone book the names of prominent citizens to whom they sent messages heralding the momentary arrival of the world's finest fruit. The messages also declared that a Holmes brother would be standing by his phone to receive orders to send out similar gift boxes.

The scheme paid off in both cities and Harry and David returned to Medford with orders for 486 boxes of luscious pears.

Those first few hundred orders have grown to the singular total of last year, when more than one million orders were sent from Bear Creek. And their mail orders include everything from mixed fruit in attractive baskets and myrtlewood salad bowls, to glad bulbs and ivy baskets.

Under young David's management, the plant employs more than 1,200 persons during the peak pre-holiday season and sends its interesting and amusing advertising to hundreds of thousands of Americans, as well as to many persons abroad.

And Bear Creek continues to grow! This fall will see in operation a new packing house, larger and more convenient than the old one and equipped with the latest devices to speed and ease fruit packing. There is a new and larger warehouse, plus cold storage plant facilities which house 300 railroad cars of fruit.

David is also responsible, as manager of Bear Creek, for their 800 to 900 acres of pears and peaches. "Harry and David," as their gift shipping service is known, has a long-established reputation for top quality products, and has listed among donors and recipients many of the world's notables.

Running a close second to David's interest in "Harry and David" and Bear Creek are his ranch properties, where he operates a dairy herd of about 30 cows and raises about 200 head of beef cattle. There he and Mrs. Holmes, the former Susan Vilas of Medford, and their two youngsters, Scott and Bonnie, hunt and fish together. He and Susan also are proud of the purebred Labrador retrievers they raise at the ranch. Mrs. Holmes attended Oregon in 1943 and 1944.

At Holmes' instigation, the corporation recently granted to the University an endowment fund to provide $250 annually for an entering freshman. First student to profit from the fund will be Curtis Holzgang, a top graduate of Medford High School last spring. A similar fund went to Oregon State College.

The scholarship is typical of the community service and interest which Bear Creek renders under the young manager. He has been active in Community Chest work, the Red Cross and the Jackson County Public Health association. An air force veteran, David was a pilot during World War II. He was a member of Phi Delta Theta at Oregon.

Nation-wide attention has been turned to the Medford area through the company's appealing, well-done advertising. And it has been said more than once that the economy of the Rogue Valley's pear industry depends a great deal on the prosperity of Bear Creek Orchards and its "Harry and David" gift service. The alert young Oregon alumnus and his enthusiastic staff plan to keep things humming.

Nineteen Pass Bar

All nineteen students from the University who took examinations for the Oregon state bar this summer passed, to score a rare 100 per cent record. From colleges all over the state, a total of 138 applicants took the examinations and 88 passed. The successful Oregon graduates, who took oaths of office in September, include Clarke C. Brown '44, Jackson Buckley McCann '49, Thelma Chapman '49, James Kelly Farris '51, James Lawrence Hersher '51, Joseph B. Richards '51, Joe Phillip French '51, Bernard Paul Kelly '52, Donald Forrest Dunn '52, Robert Douglas Puckett '52, Roger Garnett Rose '52, Roger Theodore Doolittle '52, Donald Francis Bach '52, Gordon Hobart Price '52, Malcolm Francis Marsh '52, George Norman Gross '52, Anthony Eugene Piazza '52 and William Vernon Deatherage '52.

Disciples Name Neill

Ralph C. Neill '49, public relations director from the Oregon State Industrial Accident Commission at Salem, is heading a new public relations department for Disciples of Christ Christian Church. He assumed his new duties at the Disciples' convention at Miami, Fla., in October.

Neill, 31, directed the press room at the group's international convention in Portland last year. His offices will be at Indianapolis. His wife is the former Nola Laverne Lee '44.

Sets Up Lectureship

William H. Burton '16, nearing retirement as director of the Graduate School of Education of Harvard University, has set up a lectureship program at the school. It will stress the importance of education from kindergarten through the first six grades. Dr. Burton plans to teach at the University of Oregon summer session of 1955.

Portland Duck Club Members Support the Webfoots

By Art Litchman

For six months a year, the Duck Club of Portland is the linking organization between the University and alumni in the city; all year long it serves as liaison between the University and prospective students.

The Duck Club was founded many years ago but has been an active and effective force particularly in the years following World War II. Although interested principally in the athletic program, it has on occasion assisted worthy students financially and is always on the lookout for outstanding students in the state's only metropolis.

Two still-active Duck Club members were ardent supporters in the early days of the group—Hollis Johnston '21, who was president of the Alumni Association in 1941, and Bill Hazeltine '38.

At one time, the two early members recall, six or eight Webfoot alumni might gather at the Imperial Hotel during the week before a football game. Now as many 400 members, more during joint meetings with followers of other schools such as Washington, have packed ballrooms at the Multnomah Hotel or the Columbia Athletic Club at weekly Duck meetings during football and basketball seasons.

The Club's principal purpose is to assist the donor program; it works to raise money for the grant-in-aid program and to acquaint interested students with Oregon's academic and athletic facilities.

Athletically speaking, the Club has worked to attain deserved national recognition for individual players. In 1948 its members spearheaded the movement which resulted in a Cotton Bowl bid for the Ducks.

Walter Grebe '18 was president in 1946 when the Club was "reactivated." Charles (Chuck) Holloway '35 succeeded him; Budd Jones '36 followed in 1948, and Harold Weston Jr. '39 served in the second half of that year. Don Kennedy '38 was president in 1949; James Rathbun '42 in 1950; John Y. Lansing '44 in 1951, and Milton Rice '28 in 1952.

Last year's president was Bill Harrow '40; leading the group this year is Dr. Don Hood '26.

Weekly meetings of the Duck Club are usually attended by sportswriters from Portland and other cities, as well as radio and television sportscasters. All coaches in the city are Club members; so are representatives of the press, including radio and TV. A non-alumnus member is Bart Macomber, an All-America football player from the University of Illinois.

Speakers are featured at the weekly meetings. A highlight of recent years was the appearance of Brutus Hamilton of the University of California, who told an overflow audience of his experiences with the U. S. track team in the Olympics.

Visiting scouts are always on hand during football and basketball seasons. Oregon hoopsters aren't neglected by the Club, which presents graduating senior cagers with wristwatches at a special meeting each year.

Two years ago the Duck Club helped introduce the Crow Award, made to the loser of the annual Oregon-OSC football game. President Milt Rice had the dubious honor of receiving the award then, and Bill Harrow was unable to give it back to the Oregon Staters last year at the joint award meeting. Don Hood is hoping he'll not have to "eat" crow this season.

Housing Alumnae Elect

Mrs. Velita Estey Durland '46 took office as president of the Portland chapter, University of Oregon Co-ed Housing Alumnae, in September at the group's first fall meeting. The Oregon State Co-op Alumnae group were guests at the meeting.

Other new officers of the organization include: Mrs. Dorothy Mills Burke '43 and Mrs. Marian Smith Grieve '51, vice-presidents; Mrs. Vivienne Fraser Somerset '40, secretary; Mrs. Barbara Murphy Negron, treasurer, and June McConnell Routson, publicity chairman.

The annual potluck dinner was November 5 at the Oregonian Hostess House with Mrs. Golda Parker Wickham '31 and active house presidents as guests. A spring tea, a fashion forum, and speakers from various fields are scheduled for coming programs.

The state organization will have its annual meeting and dinner November 13, during Homecoming, at Highland House, 1490 Moss Street. All co-ed housing alumnae are invited. Frances Dunn '52 and Mrs. Marian McBride '34 are in charge of arrangements and reservations.

Southern Ducks Named

James William Frost '47 and Edward J. Crowley '28 have been elected first and second vice president, respectively, of the Southern Duck Club. Visitors at the fall election meeting were Herb Kimball '31, guest of Wayne Veatch '29, and William T. Green '49.

Enrollment Is Up By Eleven Percent

With an increase of 28 percent in the freshman class, an enrollment of 4,341 students was tallied at the end of the first week of fall term.

Registrar's office figures showed total University enrollment up 11 percent from last fall's total of 3,923 after one week.

The big increase is in the freshman class, with 1,344 students this year as against last year's class of 1,052. Although men still outnumber women by some 2,751 to 1,560, the percentage slowly is changing in favor of the men. This year the ratio is slightly fewer than two men for every woman. Two years ago the ratio was two and one-half men for every woman.

The School of Health and Physical Education showed the biggest enrollment jump among the professional schools, with 169 this year against 1953's count of 108 for a 56 percent gain. The School of Journalism has a 33 percent increase with a total enrollment of 52. Enrollment in the College of Liberal Arts has increased by 11 percent.

Homecoming Planned

The 1954 Homecoming celebration Nov. 12 and 13 will include the traditional bonfire, dance and luncheon. The theme, in a light vein, will be the popular song "Sh-Boom, Hello, Hello Again."

A noise parade at 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 12, will be followed by the bonfire and a rally. The annual alumni meeting will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Dads' Lounge of the Student Union, with President O. Meredith Wilson as speaker. Scheduled for 11:30 a.m. is the alumni barbecue-luncheon in the Union Ballroom; tickets can be ordered by mail from the alumni office at $1.25 a plate to avoid standing in line.

"Order of the O" men will gather at the luncheon for a parade to Hayward Field, where the Homecoming game with Washington State College will begin at 1:30 p.m. Living organizations will hold open house at 4 p.m. for alumni and guests, and the dance at 9 p.m. in the Union will close Homecoming festivities.

Allen Fellow Named

Ray C. Anderson, advertising manager of the La Grande Evening Observer, began work in September as an Eric Allen Memorial Fellow, doing advanced study through the University's School of Journalism.

He is the first advertising man chosen under the program initiated by the Eugene Register-Guard in honor of the first dean of journalism at the University. He has had 35 years of professional advertising experience. On the campus for fall and winter terms, he will do advanced research in business and advertising management and economic policies and problems. The Allen Fellowship program provides a unique opportunity for working newspapermen to return to the campus for independent study in fields related to their work.

Counselor Appointed

Bradford B. Blaine has been appointed counselor for men in the Office of Student Affairs. He is a graduate of Stanford University, where he received his baccalaureate degree in history in 1952 and his master of arts degree in 1954. He has been freshman resident adviser and acting assistant chief counselor for men at Stanford.

ASUO Head Honored

Robert S. Summers of Halfway, president of the ASUO, has been named for the Reginald F. Colley award as outstanding undergraduate member of Theta Chi fraternity in the nation. President of the Oregon chapter of his fraternity last year, he was awarded the Koyl cup last spring as outstanding junior man. Summers has been recipient of the Standard Oil of California leadership scholarship for three years.

Wins Fulbright

William B. Johnston of Eugene, a fifth-year student in architecture, has been awarded a Fulbright scholarship for study in Finland. Using one of 14 grants for study in that country, he will do work in architecture at the Finland Institute of Technology at Helsinki.

Ziebarth Named

Dr. Charles F. Ziebarth, professor of business administration, has been named chairman of the education division of Eugene's United Appeal. Active in both University and community affairs, he is vice president of Emerald Empire Kiwanis Club and was chairman of the UO division of the Community Chest last year.

Biologist Elected

Bayard H. McConaughy, assistant professor of biology, was elected to a four-year term on the council of the Pacific division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at a recent conference in Pullman, Wash. He also served as chairman for the meeting of the Western Society of Naturalists during the conference, and presented two papers before related societies.

Three other Oregon staff members presenting papers at the AAAS meetings were Instructors Gordon Ballmer, Albert J. Bernatowicz and David L. Jameson.

Articles Published

Three members of the faculty have authored articles published recently.

Dr. Dan E. Clark, professor emeritus of history, wrote an article on Oregon for the 1954 Encyclopedia Americana Annual, including statistics on state industries with a listing of principal events in the state in 1953.

Dr. Samuel H. Dicken, head of the Department of Geology and Geography, contributed two chapters to a reference book on the Pacific Northwest, including information on manufacturing and on the physical setting of western Washington and Oregon. The book was edited by Otis Freeman and Howard Martin and published by John Wiley of New York.

Dr. Alfred L. Lomax, professor of business administration, authored articles on foreign trade for two business periodicals. His "Asiatic Trade Big Factor in Well-Being of Northwest," published by the Oregon Business Review, also was the keynote paper of the Trade and Commerce Panel of the Pacific Northwest Trade Association meeting in Portland earlier this year. "Pacific Coast Foreign Trade Zones Show a Deficit" was published by the Pacific Coast Business and Shipping Register.

Wilson Addresses APSA

University President O. Meredith Wilson addressed the opening session of the American Political Science Association convention in Chicago Sept. 9. He warned the delegates of "dangerous indications of crumbling and decay" in the protection afforded individual Americans by their Constitution.

Fulbrights Awarded

Two Fulbright awards for study abroad have been awarded to Oregon faculty members. Dr. Frederick Combella, associate professor of classical languages, will go to Greece; Patricia M. Gathercole, instructor in romance languages, studied in Italy this summer.

Dr. Combella's fellowship, one of two granted in that country for the 1954-55 school year, will cover study of modern excavations which have uncovered structures believed to have been built during the time of the Greek poet Homer. His study will also cover the poet himself, and the relationship between Homer's two epic poems, the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey." The American School of Classical Studies in Athens and the University of Athens will be Dr. Combella's headquarters, though his study will take him through Greece and the Mediterranean islands. He is accompanied by Mrs. Combella.

Miss Gathercole, one of 20 teachers given awards for summer work in Italy, studied the Italian language and civilization at the University of Siena. She also traveled throughout the Italian peninsula and was received by the Italian minister of education in Rome.

Joins Theatre Staff

Dr. Daniel S. Krempel, formerly of the University of Illinois, will be designer-director for the University Theater and an instructor in speech for the present academic year. His position is a new one, created by a shift in staff responsibility.

Dr. Krempel holds degrees from Brooklyn College, Ohio State University and the University of Illinois. He has had professional theater experience with the Rockaway Harbor Theater on Long Island and with the Brooklyn College Light Opera Guild.

ROTC Staff Changes

Three new Air Force ROTC officers will be UO faculty members for the coming school year. They are Col. Robert Forbes, transferred from Korea; Maj. Lewis E. Tiffany from Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala., and Sgt. J. J. Palmer from Oxnard AFB, Calif.

Officers who ended their AFROTC duty at Oregon this year are Lt. Col. Sam N. Sheffield, Maj. Grant R. Smith, Capt. R. A. Laurence, Sgt. J. O. Bateman and Maj. N. N. Mihailov. Army officers who have left are Capt. Harry A. Buckley and Sgt. W. J. Harder.

Sabine Heads AASDJ

Dr. Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the School of Journalism, was elected in September as president of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism. His election marked the third time an Oregon journalism dean has headed the 37-year-old AASDJ; the late Dean Eric W. Allen was twice head of the group, which includes the 39 accredited schools of journalism in the nation.

Meeting simultaneously with the ASSDJ at Albuquerque's University of New Mexico, the Association for Education in Journalism elected Warren C. Price, associate professor of journalism to a four-year term on its research committee.

The scholarship on which he attended the workshop was one of 30 financed by the Ford Foundation and awarded through the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. It was the only one given for work at WOI-TV, the nation's pioneer combination commercial-educational station, sponsored by Iowa State.

Dr. Sabine also worked with commercial stations in Chicago and Los Angeles as further background for the rapidly-developing television news and advertising curriculum in the journalism school.

Animal Research Set

Effects of brain operations on monkeys with emotional problems will be studied by a team of University psychologists under a grant made in September by the National Institute for Mental Health of the U. S. Public Health Service. The grant of $14,970 will cover a year's research and experiments that are designed to give science a clearer understanding of the effects of lobectomies on the mental capacities of animals.

Active research will begin this fall with 12 rhesus monkeys in a quonset hut on campus. Dr. Robert W. Leeper, head of the Department of Psychology, said. Dr. J. M. Warren, assistant professor of psychology, will head a team of four graduate students on the project.

Study Grants Made

Grants totaling nearly $14,500 have been awarded to 29 Oregon faculty members for research projects on the campus during the coming year. Recipients are: Ewart M. Baldwin, associate professor of geology; Roland Bartel, instructor in English; Quirinus Breen, professor of history; Calder T. Bressler, assistant professor of geology; O. K. Burrell, professor of business, and Bernd Crasemann, assistant professor of physics.

L. S. Cressman, head of the anthropology department; Howard E. Dean, assistant professor of political science; LeRoy E. Detling, curator of the herbarium; Paul S. Dull, associate professor of history and political science, and E. G. Ebbighausen, associate professor of physics.

Phillip A. Goldberg, assistant professor of physics; George Gorin, assistant professor of chemistry; R. R. Heustis, professor of biology; David L. Jameson, instructor in biology; William S. Laughlin, associate professor of anthropology; Richard A. Littman, associate professor of psychology, and Walter T. Martin, associate professor of sociology.

Bayard H. McConaughy, assistant professor of biology; Marion Dean Ross, associate professor of architecture; L. G. Seligman, assistant professor of political science; J. Arnold Shotwell, curator of the Museum of Natural History; Arnold L. Soderwall, associate professor of biology, and Theodore Stern, assistant professor of anthropology.

Leona E. Tyler, associate professor of psychology; Norman D. Sundberg, assistant professor of psychology; John M. Warren, assistant professor of psychology; Christof Wegelin, assistant professor of English, and Jack Wilkinson, assistant professor of art.

Starlin to Michigan

Glenn Starlin, assistant professor of speech and former administrative assistant to the University president, has joined the staff of the Educational Television and Radio Center at Ann Arbor, Mich. On a year's leave of absence, he will work in the areas of program planning, development and procurement for educational television.

He is the third member of the University administration to join the Ford Foundation program. Harry K. Newburn, former president, resigned last September to head the Center. Lyle Nelson, former director of University public services, designed to become Newburn's assistant at Ann Arbor.

Eleven Oregonians
Visit the Orient as

Ambassadors of Basketball

They laughed when J. Orville Lindstrom sat down to bring his diary up to date on the Webfoots' Far Eastern adventure. Now members of the team, school officials and the press are eager readers of the 100-page chronicle. Here are the highlights as told to Don Tacheron, OLD OREGON staff member who has traveled widely in Asia.

SOMETHING NEW blew into Bangkok with the monsoons this August. A barnstorming Oregon team was in town for a game or two of basketball, one of 21 appearances scheduled on a spectacular good-will tour of eight Far Eastern cities. Nine players, Coach Bill Borchert, and University Business Manager J. Orville Lindstrom waved goodbye to friends August 6 at Eugene Airport. On the trip they traveled 22,000 miles by air and made friends in 11 countries. They won 18 games, lost three, against teams in Tokyo and Kobe, Japan; Seoul, Korea; Taipei, Formosa; Manila, P.I.; Hong Kong; Bangkok, Siam; and Singapore.

Lindstrom says, "Our troupe performed for all kinds of audiences and in all kinds of pavilions—under the lights and under the stars."

From notes taken on the trip by the business manager, from remarks by the coach, and from players' comments may be surmised—among other things—the following:

(1) Asians are scrappy basketball players, somewhat inaccurate from outside the key and hampered under the boards by lack of height.

(2) It is difficult, but possible, to play basketball while being treated without apparent results for diarrhea.

(3) There is much room for improvement in U.S.-Asian relations through mutual exchange of information about differing cultures, philosophies, and social structures.

(4) Borchert can't resist a bargain—even in haircuts.

(6) Coca-Cola bottles are the same everywhere. It's what goes inside that undergoes marked change from place to place.

Fans were turned away at each of three games played before 7,000 spectators on a high school outdoor court. The playing surface was cement, sprinkled lightly with fine sand. The climax of one game came unexpectedly when a section of the stands collapsed; play continued, and those nearest the disaster patched up their seats without missing a shot.

The Koreans are a hospitable people, and the Duck contingent was hosted at luncheons, breakfasts, and a tea party, as guests of the mayor in a city park.

The first "good will" problem developed at a luncheon. Local delicacies graced the tables, but the Ducks had been advised to avoid eating vegetable dishes.

The host's "face" was involved. Some member of the party must make the supreme sacrifice, must eat every last vegetable. The health of the players was of critical importance, so Borchner rose to the diplomatic challenge. He began a policy he followed throughout the trip, eating heartily of every national dish encountered along the way. The first of many diarrhea "cures" was purchased two days later, before taking off for Free China's headquarters on Formosa.

The flight to Taipei was uneventful, but the game almost ended in an international "incident." At game's end the score was tied, 42-42, and the Nationalist Chinese All-Stars walked off the floor while 8,000 watchers cheered their moral victory. Chinese rule books do not mention overtime periods. Off the Oregon bench and armed with a U. S. version of the rules came Borcher. There was a meeting of minds in mid-court, and the tie was resolved into a Webfoot victory in one overtime.

Other difficulties were overcome by the Duck visitors. Formosa's pavilion has a fine floor, glass backboards, and a good roof, but there are no sides on the building. "The lights hang from the roof," Guard Bob Hawes explains, "and when the wind blew, the lights swung back and forth. There were times when you couldn't see the basket."

OREGON'S toughest series of the trip opened in Manila's Rizal Stadium. More than 7,000 fans watched the Ducks lose their first game to an expert Republic Supermarket team. Basketball is an important sport in the new republic, and the crowd was very serious until the closing minutes of play. Then the store president, a man in his late thirties, entered the lineup and promptly dropped a spectacular long shot. Rumor the next day held that he gave the player who had passed him the ball 100 pesos ($50 U.S.).

Oregon bounced back with a win over the Philippine national champions the next evening before leaving for Hong Kong. Four more Manila games were played on the Ducks' return from Southeast Asia.

Even the game officials apparently were overwhelmed by Oregon's stop at Hong Kong. The visitors won a game without being charged with a single personal foul. However, this agreeable novelty was slightly offset by the water shortage.

After the game, the team put street clothes over sweaty uniforms to ride back to the hotel. There they found one tub full of water for the three players in each room, with the taps shut off for the night.

From Hong Kong, the Ducks flew to Siam for an uneventful opening game before a small crowd, mostly Chinese expatriates. The Siamese seemed more enthused over "The French Line" at the local movie palace.

The second game also was ill-attended for several good reasons. There was a "boxing" match underway, and Siamese can't resist the chance to see the blood that their version of the sport usually produces.

With seven minutes gone in the first quarter of the second Bangkok game, the monsoon arrived. Play continued for several minutes while warm rains swept the outdoor court.

"I didn't mind the rain," Center Max Anderson recalls; "it was the first time I had taken a refreshing shower and played basketball at the same time."

After a 20-minute delay, play was resumed with a rubber ball. Then the lights failed. Investigation revealed a wet raincoat, placed on the pavilion's generator to dry, as the cause.

THEY BROUGHT out the band for the team's arrival in Singapore, and 8,000 fans heard a 20-piece ensemble play "Marching Through Georgia" before the game that evening. The stop in the international capital of intrigue proved relatively uneventful, except for Ray Bell's black eye and a visit with the Crown Prince of Johore. Bell's eye shouldn't count for much, intrigue-wise. He got the shiner during the game from a member of the Press All-Star team.

However, Johore and the crown prince's hospitality exceeded Hollywood's standards, according to Lindstrom.

"The display of wealth was unbelievable," he says. "The sultan's old home is now a sort of museum, and we were taken into one room which had several cupboards filled with plates, cups, and saucers, and urns, big ones—all of solid gold."

The team also toured the prince's private golf course, race track, and rubber plantation. His garage held some 15 cars, including two Cadillacs, two Packards, four Mercedes-Benz', and two Jaguars.

From Singapore, the team flew to a two-game return engagement in Hong Kong.

This scoreboard, from a game with Chosun Christian College, shows one of the difficulties with which the Webfoots had to deal.

The next stop was Manila for four more games, and the Webfoot players began speculating on Borchers' hairdo. The genial coach had been getting a haircut in every port of call.

"Barbers charge so little in the Far East; you just can't pass up bargains like that," Borchers explained.

Rizal Stadium was sold out for the Ducks' return to Manila and more than 9,000 watched the visitors split the series with the cagey Island team. The Webfoots learned something about game psychology in the process.

Nationalistic feeling ran high as the All-Stars won the opener. The crowd wasn't friendly on the following evening either and a shower of lighted cigarettes followed the final gun with Oregon ahead by a single point, 65-64. Meanwhile, the stock of good will between opposing teams was ebbing. Captain Ken Wegner momentarily lost control and threw the ball at a grinning, baiting opponent.

Later, after apologies were exchanged, it developed that the ruckus was all part of Asian game strategy. Philippine basketball fans love a fight. The All-Stars were baiting the Ducks into rougher play—and more personal fouls.

Five weeks after stateside departure, the Webfoots wrapped up their Far Eastern adventure with a four-game series in Kobe and Tokyo, Japan. A comment by Gary McManus about the Land of the Rising Sun serves to point up the No. 1 problem of the trip.

"In Tokyo, we couldn't make the cab drivers understand where we wanted to go," McManus relates. "Once they copied the airline address wrong in Japanese—left out a couple of dots or something—and I ended up at a police station."

OREGON ALUMNI were introduced at nearly every city visited, with the largest membership turn-out experienced in the Tokyo area. Team members met one couple, Mr. and Mrs. Yasuo Kurata '53, who have collaborated on a book in Japanese telling of their experiences studying abroad. The book's frontispiece features an aerial view of the campus and a picture of Erb Memorial Union.

While the Tokyo papers headlined the Red Chinese feelers against Formosa, the Webfoot group spent a day sightseeing. Dicker for purchases in the public market they found both entertaining and an education in salesmanship.

One member of the party bought linen at a bargain price—1,200 yen. On returning to the hotel, he found an identical purchase made by a hardier teammate. Both started from an asking tab of 2,500 yen, but the latter's buying price was only 450 yen.

OLD OREGON has only a partial list of the many Oregon alumni who greeted the Duck basketballers on their tour. Besides those pictured, they included:

Back home in Oregon, Coach Borchers had a word of praise for the team: "Despite definite obstacles, the players did a fine job of creating friendly feeling and good will."

And at least one player may have found the key to the attitude of people in an area long held to be non-understandable to the Western mind. "It seemed as if the Asian people were trying to impress us more than we were them," explains Jerry Ross.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH GENERAL ELECTRIC

In the next ten years, there will be more progress in the electrical industry than in all the 75 years since Edison invented his lamp

THREE quarters of a century after the beginning of the Age of Light, you might think that the Age of Opportunity in electricity had pretty well ended.

Exactly the opposite is true.

So many promising new ideas are now being developed that at General Electric we expect to produce more in the next ten years than in all the previous 75 years of our existence. Electronics, home appliances, the development of peacetime uses for atomic energy—these are only some of the fields where great progress will be made.

Perhaps you will, in some way, contribute to this progress. We know, whatever your profession or your walk of life, that you will share in it.

The metal that makes time stand still

Thanks to chromium, steel now serves you with strength and beauty that lasts a lifetime

IN TIME, one of man's most useful materials—steel—is often the victim of such destructive forces as rust, corrosion, heat, or wear.

THESE NATURAL ENEMIES of steel now are mastered by the metal called chromium. When the right amount of chromium is added to molten steel, the result is strong, lustrous stainless steel that defies the ravages of time.

IN HOMES, TODAY, stainless steel is a shining symbol of modern living. It brings us care-free sinks, gleaming tableware and kitchen utensils—all with beauty that lasts a lifetime.

IN INDUSTRY—Food is prepared in super-sanitary stainless steel equipment. Streamlined trains and buses are made of this wonder metal. Vital parts of jet planes that must withstand both blazing heat and sub-zero cold are made of tough, enduring stainless steel.

SERVING STEEL... AND YOU—The people of Union Carbide produce alloys of chromium for America's steel-makers. This is another of the many ways in which UCC transforms the elements of nature for the benefit of everyone.

California Builds An Alumni House

PRIDE of the alumni of the University of California is their new Alumni House on the Berkeley campus, dedicated Sept. 18. Of contemporary design throughout, it is the product of three years of planning and construction. The $375,000 building is the gift of nearly 18,000 alumni to their alma mater and is dedicated to the service of the University.

Whenever alumni come to Berkeley, they will be invited to use the Alumni House facilities. There is a lounge for informal meetings, reunions, receptions, and a gathering place when alumni visit the campus on any occasion; this is their "home on the campus." Also included are a conference room, lobby and reception desk, kitchen, an office wing for the California Alumni Association and a basement for storage.

These facilities will also be used by students, faculty and administrative groups. Clark Kerr, chancellor at Berkeley, has hailed the Alumni House as "a focus for friendly, informal contact among all members of the University family." The California Alumni Association, with 43,000 members, is the largest alumni organization in the world.

Featured in the floor plan are two memorial fireplaces given in the name of graduates; an alcove and a court financed by individual classes, and a "Builders' Book" on permanent display.

Other universities with alumni houses include Harvard, Chicago, Stanford, Georgetown, Ohio State, Michigan, Smith, Vassar, Virginia, Mills College and the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. The $375,000 cost of the building with its floor area totaling 14,950 square feet included construction, fees, furnishing and equipping, and landscaping; alumni donations were in gifts ranging from a few dollars to several thousand dollars. The Board of Regents of the University made the site available for the house. Initial planning and fund raising began in the fall of 1951, and construction began in the summer of 1953.

The modern lounge of the California Alumni House is seen from the conference room. The copper-hooded fireplace on the far wall was donated by the Class of 1917, 'gratefully remembering their University years.'

Bookkeeping and accounting offices of the California Alumni Association are also in Alumni House on the Berkeley campus. Listed in the files at left are the Association's 42,000 members.

This is the main entrance, and a portion of the lounge wing, of the new California Alumni House. The building was dedicated in September.
