PORTLAND STREET NAME CONVERSIONS TO CURRENT NAMES

(Interim List)

compiled for use in

AN INDEX AND SUMMARY OF OREGON BUILDING INFORMATION
IN THE PORTLAND DAILY ABSTRACT (1906-1910)

by Michael Shellenbarger

University of Oregon (1992)

Hundreds of Portland's streets have changed names since 1906-1910, the years included in this database. To facilitate use of the database, a list was compiled of the old street names as reported, and their current names and section designations. No reasonably complete list of street name changes previously existed. A city ordinance of September 1931 adopted the current section designations and renumbered virtually every address in the city. These changes are detailed in a two-volume directory published by Crane Direct-Mail Service; this directory is available at the Oregon Historical Society Library and the Portland City Archives. OHS also has a late-nineteenth century directory of street name changes. This earlier directory predates the database for this project and was not included in the following list. The changes made in the years between these two directories and in the years that followed are not easily documented. New additions to the city commonly used street names that were uncoordinated with existing street names. These names were usually soon changed to match the names of existing streets with which they aligned, or to continue the city's pattern of numbered streets. The map collections at the Oregon Historic Society Library and the University of Oregon map library were used extensively to identify name changes (see list on following page). A card file at the Portland City Archives contains hand-written records of street name changes, and few errors were found in it. Its use was discontinued in recent decades. City Guides, such as Pittmon's Portland Guide of 1912 also listed some name changes. Many streets changed names more than once, such as the east/west streets in SE Portland that became numbered avenues, then reverted to earlier names.

The following list is compiled from the above sources for streets that were reported in the 1906-10 Portland Daily Abstract. Information was often minimal however, and this list must be used with some caution until a more complete list is available. If accuracy is essential, the conversions should be independently confirmed. Some streets listed as "unknown" may be due to inaccuracies in reporting street names in the Portland Daily Abstract. Some spellings and designation as "St." or "Ave." were not consistent in various sources, so more than one version of the same old street name may be listed. Some popular names were used more than once and have multiple conversion possibilities. The right-hand column in the following list includes comments that were developed to assist in selecting the appropriate choice.

The computer database for this project contained 3674 records of name changes. Current names were entered automatically when the old names were keyed. If more than one choice was possible, the appropriate choices were displayed and selected manually, assisted by displayed comments. Section designations were automatically assigned by the computer by reference to cross streets or other features.

The section designations in the following list include "_E," "_W," and "N_" for streets that can exist in two adjacent sections ("_E" for NE and SE,) ("_W" for NW and SW,) and ("N_" for N. and NE.) The specific section designation for these streets cannot be determined without additional information, such as a cross street.
