Nationwide problem: With veteran librarians retiring en masse, new librarians are in demand. Where are they going? To jobs with fatter salaries. [link via Librarian Underground list] JB

"... I have found all the posts I made when I was 18. I cannot believe what an absolute, utter asshole I was back then." What do you get when Google acquires the Deja archives and motors it with a powerful search engine? More than 500-million archived Usenet messages available and online again. JB

Will P2P applications such as Napster be the key to untapping the hidden depths of the web? CB

Some readings and viewings on digital reference that have come our way:

- webcasts from the Library of Congress
- Virtual Reference Desk's bibliography
- bibliography by Bernie Sloan, a student at UIUC CB

We're honored to be selected as a powa girrl site by Netdiver Network. Netdiver's mission is to empower, educate and leverage new media professionals and promote excellence in new media projects. JB

Five books and five poems for an undersea library. Speaking of undersea, check out Radiohead's new underworld video JB

"... forgiving browsers have helped create a world of structural HTML illiterates." Read this if you teach web publishing. JB

5th Annual Webby Nominees are here with 135 quality Web sites. JB
26 apr 01

Interesting article by Douglas Rushkoff on the new text-only version of the web for wireless devices. [link via Scripting News] CB

Fighting censorship of the web by governments means staying one step ahead. CB

Make your Google searches even better with iLOR. Requires Internet Explorer 5+ or Netscape 4.73+. CB

Boomer bashing from an embittered Gen-HeXer. The rant may not be entirely valid, but I can certainly relate. JB

Selected Gay & Lesbian Titles 2001 from Publisher's Weekly. JB

Filling out your student loan applications? Here's another astounding example of insigrevious hypocrisy in the current administration. JB

If passed, this South Australian Bill will exact a $10,000 fine (max) on those who publish "matter unsuitable to minors" - that is, R rated - on the Internet. JB

New school archivists such as Prelinger and Rumsey are creating "open source" archives while preserving their collection's integrity. JB

25 apr 01

Job-seeking tips and "things to think about" for the dot-com generation. CB

EFF is sponsoring a panel discussion on Internet blocking in schools and libraries on May 6 in the Bay area. CB

Fighting online fraud gets international attention with a new web site for filing complaints when the fraud crosses international boundaries. CB

Ever wonder where those email emoticons came from? CB

More evidence of why social security numbers are dangerous in the hands of some folks. CB

Are we really surprised that a book that can't find its way into print found its way to the web? CB

E Ink for condensed, portable content: electrically charged particles divided into pixels. Each pixel can be independently switched between black and white using electrodes controlled by a transistor. [link via LISNews]. JB
Web Activist Chris kicks off a new resource section with people. Nice. JB

Marketing demographics for every U.S. neighborhood. Towns & Gowns read Glamour?? JB

BYU breathing life into charred classics (thank you Mount Vesuvius) with digital high-tech. This should make some historians warm in their pants. More here. JB

True or False: The Vatican houses the world's largest collection of pornography? JB

24 apr 01

Absolutely non-library related, but I just can't seem to pull away (say it in your best Captain Kirk). JB

"The City That Reads" might be closing five branches (budget... what else?), hurting kids, and the City itself, in the long run. JB

Google Anatomy [link via Digital Web] JB

The Boston T-1 Party: celebrating electronic literature at The Boston Public Library tomorrow from 6:30-8:30 PM. Free. JB

Happy Birthday to a very wonderful girl, Ms. Blue. JB

If you've chosen to write about Baker's Doublefold for your term project, ARL has put up a web bibliography of reviews, articles and responses just for you. [Thanks Ryan] JB

A couple from Library Stuff...
Librarian Linda Hughes of Wichita Falls will receive a prestigious Intellectual Freedom Award for her successful battle to keep two award-winning but controversial books on gay families in the children's section of the library.

Should 11 yr olds be reading The Color Purple? JB librarians.about.com: the About folks include categories on

23 apr 01

1. switching careers to librarianship
2. jobs
3. distance learning

and lots more. JB
Nicholson Baker at Powell's in Portland tonight. JB

"Mom, you fought with flowers. We're fighting with gas masks." Today's activists. [link via Follow Me Here] JB

Content Protection for Recordable Media. CPRM for unlicensed copying. It's in the making. [link via webactivism] JB

How do you make standards on a budget out at the elbows? JB

Library director put in computer courses, children's day programs, worked one-on-one with folks new to computers, and got fired by the board. Why? "Poor performance, and because of an unauthorized letter she wrote... criticizing an Internet filtering law." At least the community is behind her. [link via Library Stuff] JB

22 apr 01

Poplin pyjamas and beatings with hairbrushes from the late university librarian, Philip Larkin. JB

20 apr 01

Tracking e-mail, forbidden Web sites, Internet police divisions, crackdowns and arrests: welcome to China. JB

The Onion AcademiCorner presents: Choosing a College. Heh... and imagine having Fauntleroy for a name. JB

4:20? Some possible sources. Personally, I like Rosemary's although it seems pretty far fetched. JB

There's a delectable new entry in Uncle Frank's Diary on guess who? "Saving everything, regardless of its merit, is not a choice, but an obsession." Oh baby, off the hinges - check it out! JB

Props to that Rouge Librarian for my latest, sweetest bookmark! JB

But what happens after July 31, 2002? ... and is the filter on or off? JB

Library Science Jeopardy [link via LISNews.com] JB

19 apr 01

New ALA scholarship on the Spectrum roster. CB

ALA teams up with Verizon and others to promote literacy. CB
Hallelujah! There's still hope that my Dad will learn how to use a computer. CB

In bad need of a redesign (and a whole lot more): Family Friendly Libraries. Be sure to check the commentary on FFL at Kuro5hin. JB

Dot-Gone phenomenon topical art show. [link via k10k] JB

Wear 'em for all they're worth, baby! [link via Textism] JB

Such an ass. JB

More low-rent logic: Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee eliminates all state support to libraries to provide $3000 pay raises for teachers. JB

The new book Internet and Computer Ethics for Kids includes chapters on hacking, passwords, phreaking, privacy, viruses, spam, software piracy, online stalking, pornography, plagiarism and hacktivism. huh. hinkie-huh. JB

Where today's well-read woman goes to have fun. Didn't we already know this? [link via Library Stuff] JB

Digitized records of the 1964 Free Speech Movement of the '60s find a home at UC Berkeley. [link via NewPages] JB

---

18 apr 01

Really Plugged-In People Reveal Really Useful Web Sites [Thanks Andrew] JB

If it's posted to Usenet it's in the public domain" and ten more big myths on copyright. [link via Negetivland] JB

Negativland on changing copyright. For more, check out their Intellectual Property page. JB

For prospective employers: Put A Buffalo In Your Library, a directory of students from Buffalo completing their MLS degrees this May, August or December. JB

---

17 apr 01

You've got books! - a new e-mail service at Virginia Commonwealth University that alerts users about new materials that match their interests. JB

Gilded Rage: Anarchy in the New America, an exhibit on view from 4/18 - 6/16 at the Queens Borough Public Library. JB
16% raise increase negotiated for New York public librarians. "Half of all new city librarians leave within three years, library officials said, adding that nearly half the branch libraries in the Bronx do not have children's librarians, and that the city has not been able to hire any new librarians for Staten Island in more than a year."

Well, if they could afford rent and groceries, perhaps they would stay. JB

What is Print? from MoMA. Amazing. [link via Surfstation] JB

16 apr 01

I've had it with Nicholson Baker: a pimpin' rant from a young librarian. [link via 'brary blog]. JB

Alrighty then: some discussion over this ad going on at LISNews. Bring up stereotype, and librarians are always going to chime in. BTW, Eugenie Prime rocks - her attire is secondary and alright cause it's her. JB

The Rogue Librarian offers 5 hot tips for becoming a librarian. Nice to see this kind of recruiting going on. JB

15 apr 01

Are we losing the ability to communicate effectively because of recent increases in speed and convenience of communication? This writer thinks so; most others (check out the poll on the right) don't. JB

The Semantic Web by Tim Berners-Lee, James Hendler and Ora Lassila. "The first steps in weaving the Semantic Web into the structure of the existing Web are already under way. In the near future, these developments will usher in significant new functionality as machines become much better able to process and understand the data that they merely display at present." Very interesting and important article. [link via Digital Web] JB

Usable Web, over a thousand links on web usability. Simple, efficient, and informative. [link via Signal vs. Noise] JB

13 apr 01

Searching the Internet is "more stressful than in-laws," according to a British study on Internet rage. The study also notes that it takes an average of 12 minutes for users to become frustrated with an unsuccessful search. CB

But isn't knowledge in perpetual flux? Is the earth still flat? Does getting it in print make it permanent? And has anyone said that the printed book will go away? This article on the implications of ebooks is full of holes. Electronic books have their usefulness as do print. It doesn't have to be one or the other. [link via librarian.net] JB

Looking for the Best Student Paper of 2001. 5000 words. Award: 500.00 USD, publication, and a yearly subscription to LIBRI. Deadline: May 31, 2001. JB

Holy linkage Batman! Some great lib-related web sites over at [link via M&aring;ndens tips](Månedens tips)... if only I could read Danish language. JB

A beastly meta-search engine, SurfWax, found more hits on NewBreed than four others I tried. [link via M&aring;ndens tips] JB

Impacts of the Internet on Public Library Use [link via M&aring;ndens tips] JB google (verb): To use an Internet search engine such as google.com to look for information related to a new or potential girlfriend or boyfriend. JB

---

12 apr 01

Perhaps the best antidote to hate is education, but placing tolerance pop-ups on Yahoo keyword searches related to hate crimes is taking the moral highground a little too far from free speech and equality on the Web. JB

The award-winning TILT (Texas Information Literacy Tutorial) is now available as open source for any library to adopt and adapt. CB

More Leaves from Textism. For me, this discussion underscores the importance of providing access to the entire collection... even if it means lengthy retrospective conversion projects or hiring someone to create an accessible, intuitive interface because you can't.

It also brings up the real risk of developing vanilla collections, where libraries all start resembling each other because they're buying from the same (commercial) publishers. This is why I'm not a fan of approval plans. I would rather go through publisher's catalogs myself that best reflect the research interests of the faculty/students I buy for, making this collection useful for the community of people who use it.

And yes, a resounding YES: don't ignore the digital landscape - just make sure your electronic resources are accessible and not hidden under a mammoth layer of links that will only be found by the person who linked it there. I call this the "blackout link"... how did I get here? Again, accessibility is key.

Commercial interests will inevitably become the portal for news, business information, current events and the like, not because librarians are intoxicated with perservation issues, but because they allow publishers and vendors to make all the calls. Unless we begin discussing and take action when a publisher constitutes absurd licensing policies, or take notice when major vendors make deals with publishers to have exclusive rights and a 12 month embargo to the full text for an obscene amount of money, a two-fold effect results: it forces other vendors to do the same in order to compete and raises the cost for content all the way around. Additionally, the market fractures, making it more difficult for libraries, forcing them to buy from several general indexes (lots of overlap) or go without.

It's all about money. When you operate from the soul, can you win? JB

Richmond Public Library's Ironwood branch "designed to be intuitive," focus on display and efficiency - geez, what a concept. [link via LISNews.com] JB

How to Determine When a Work is Public Domain. [link via Zeldman's Exit Gallery] JB

I'm lovin' the clean of library_geek. JB

---

11 apr 01

Studying U.S. College Sites - four sites that may help with deciding where to go. JB

"Recent generations have been trained to learn from digital interfaces (e.g. games, educational CD-ROMS), and display a high dependence on concept rather than core information for the acquisition of new knowledge - this is the "point-and-click generation." Excellent feature article on Visual Architecture at the new issue of Digital Web Magazine. If you create web material, read this. JB

NewBreed Librarian gets linked up in Zeldman's Exit Gallery: whiskey wow wow, I think this smile is going to be on all day! JB

"Or should libraries focus on what they do well: cataloguing the whole huge morass of recorded thought. Isn't the format and location of the morass irrelevant?" Dean Allen's blog on libraries... I read him everyday. I've been waiting for this. JB

Sandy Berman and Jim Danky will be at the UW-Madison, School of Library and Information Studies to discuss Alternative Library Literature on April 23, 2001, 3:30-5pm. Free and open to the public. [from NewPages] JB

Webzine 2001: I attended this event last year and found it extremely worthwhile, completely engaging, and got to meet some great people doing interesting things on the web. JB

---

10 apr 01

"Ayn Rant as boring as airline food" JB

First Amendment protection and keeping customer's book purchases private: one-up for Tattered Cover owner Joyce Meskis -- "This issue is not about the Tattered Cover standing in the way of a police investigation; it is about the First Amendment rights that citizens have in our democracy." JB
I suppose if there was one issue that academic libraries could resolve in this generation of librarians, I would select to establish a fair and ultra-efficient model of scholarly publishing. [link via Library Stuff]

JB

How Do Blind People Use the Internet? What about Dyslexic Users? [links via Textism] JB

09 apr 01

Is U.S. History Becoming History? An interesting article on how the government's electronic correspondence hasn't been successfully archived, resulting in a huge information gap.

More important discussion on library digitization initiatives and issues here. JB

NEVER CARRY A TEXTBOOK AGAIN... an ad on this morning's coffee sleeve. And for the first time, ebooks - specifically, e-textbooks - make a lot of sense. JB

06 apr 01

Japan Ref - Your links to Japan, including pop culture. JB

Even though 23% find porn the Net's worst feature, and 65% don't find it "sexually fulfilling," pr0n sites grew from 22,100 in '97 to 280,300 last year. JB

Rogue Librarian, Carrie Bickner, writes a kick-ass article on new legislation that will hurt the poorest of the poor on A List Apart. (Nice title Carrie). JB

05 apr 01

The digital divide between the computer enabled and the computer disabled... working with the public, I see this everyday. For instance, not everyone knows how to use a mouse. JB

Perserving wildness in space, an environmentally balanced aesthetic. JB

Building websites with recycled code. That's how I learned mark-up; not design-theft. JB

A prime responsibility for academic librarians is bibliographic instruction. Here's a course topic that would be fun to teach. JB

Computer Almanac, for internet stats: "59 percent of young American adults say they get more useful information from the Internet than from newspapers." JB
US Bureau of Labor Statistics found that people average 8.6 jobs from ages 18 to 32. MLR: The Editor's Desk. 13 October 1998. JB

04 apr 01

How do managers feel about tattoos or body piercings? If you care diddly about surveys, you may want to cover 'em up before an interview. JB

Imagine having all your course work freely available online. This is the direction MIT is headed in its promulgation of knowledge. [more at NYT] JB

Feeling the love from Digital Web. JB

Street Librarian Chris Dodge is more than inspiring with his column in the Utne Reader Online. This, I believe, is at the heart of librarianship. JB

Going High Tech: Opportunities, getting the credentials, and the ideal high tech librarian. [link via Library Stuff] JB

03 apr 01

Update: "When the library refused to take the magazine off the shelves, Sbrocco resigned." Ah, too bad... hope it wasn't a teary goodbye. Well, at least it prompted the Willowick Public Library to take a close look at content and its collection policy. [link via Library Underground listserv] JB

Check out this live chat series: features case study sessions on building new information services. (Thanks, Robin) CB

LiveHelper and Human Click are free software packages that some libraries are using to offer virtual reference service. CB

"Librarea is a destination, a world, within the ActiveWorlds Universe, where individual librarians build virtual (3-D) environments, with objects that can be linked to web-based resources." Some forward thinking ideas and projects from librarian Jack Colbert. JB

John Simm, librarian, and Christina Ricci geisha girl dominatrix, all business, all that, star in a low-budget heart-warmer. JB

E-books as ads for the print: "Click to buy the paperback." JB

Death of distance: a trendspotter's guide. JB

"Generation Xers will be the first generation to look beyond the borders of their own country and see the entire world as an opportunity." From Developing Information Leaders: Harnessing the talents of Generation X by Marisa Urgo. JB Meet OPAL: an eighteen month Online Personal Academic Librarian research project based at the UK Open University Library providing 24/7 reference service for distance students. JB

*spark-online: "It is quite fascinating that the leaders of the world's most powerful countries can get by quite well without ever touching a computer. This is what one could term the other side of the digital divide." Should Parliamentarians get hooked up? JB

Why do you need an MLS? JB contenu.nu, a content consultancy in Toronto, NUblogs a piece on academic publishing. JB

01 apr 01

The April edition of NewBreed Librarian is out. We've got

- FEATURE: A librarian's account of 14 days in Cuba
- INTERVIEW: Jeffrey Zeldman on web standards
- TECHTALK: A showcase of tools and trends CB picked up while at ACRL
- PEOPLE: Urbana-Champaign students on why they went for the MLS
- ASK SUSU: advice on interviewing

Check it out! JB

© Copyright 2001-2002, NewBreed Librarian. All rights reserved.