MEMOIRS OF THE COLLEGE YEAR

1911 - 1912

Foreword

In publishing this Oregana it has constantly been our aim to truly represent the life, standards and ideals of the University of Oregon. We have enlarged the scope of the book and introduced several innovations all of which but represent the growth and prosperity of that institution.

We have endeavored to present a full and impartial record of the University year. If in after years these pages shall recall to memory the happy days spent at Oregon—memories of victories won and friendships formed, of moments of idle recreation and profitable hours of study—our purpose shall have been fulfilled.

It is with the hope that we have in some measure attained this ideal, that we submit this volume to the University and to the state whose name it bears and whose culture and prosperity it should reflect.

To
JOHN STRAUB

Dean of the College of Literature, Science and The Arts,

who has been with the University since the beginning, whose counsel has always been timely and good, who has given a lifetime in the service of his "boys and girls," this volume is respectfully inscribed.

JOHN STRAUB

OREGON'S educational institutions were conceived in the hearts and minds of those fearless pioneers who crossed the plains with ox-teams, braving the dangers of the journey in order to found an empire on the western slope of the American Continent. Undaunted by their isolation and limitations, desirous of securing for their children suitable educational facilities, they founded in the Willamette Valley those splendid missionary colleges that made possible later Oregon's highest educational institution—the University of Oregon. The writer desires to acknowledge the debt which the State owes to "Old Willamette" and to "Pacific University" and to "Albany College" and the other denominational colleges of the State and to the noble men and women who at so much self-sacrifice taught in them.

But they were denominational colleges, and sectarian interests or division prevented them each from getting that mutual support that was necessary to build up a great institution that could take rank with similar institutions in the east.

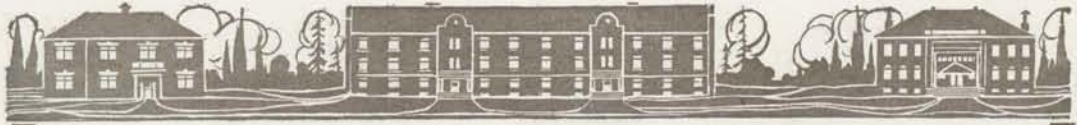

Gradually there arose a demand for an institution that could call to its support all the citizens of the State, regardless of religious or political affiliations.

Accordingly, about forty years ago, the Legislature of Oregon, following the example set by older states, determined to establish a State University, and agreed to locate the institution at Eugene, provided the city donated a plant to cost not less than fifty thousand dollars.

Eugene, though at that time containing only a thousand inhabitants, accepted the offer undaunted, and its citizens enthusiastically began the work of collecting the necessary sum. Men of small means repeatedly gave more than they could afford, laborers offered their labor, farmers brought in their stock, and it was sold to pay for the material in Deady Hall. The story of the hardships and the self-deprivation of the people of those days for their University is a pathetic one, full of inspiration.

We who are now reaping the benefits should not be permitted or desire to forget them and they are mentioned here "lest we forget." But few of the actors are left. Judges Walton and Thompson, W. J. J. Scott, A. W. Patterson and others have passed on, having done their work well. Two—

Hon. T. J. Hendricks and Hon. B. F. Dorris, are still with us, and to them should be accorded all honor for their tireless efforts in what often looked like a hopeless struggle.

For four years the people worked, solicited, prayed, and finally, in the fall of '75, the University opened in the few completed rooms of Deady Hall. 'Twas a motley crowd that first presented itself at the portals of Oregon's University, ranging in age anywhere from ten to twenty-three years. The Faculty consisted of President Johnson, Professors Condon and Bailey, Mrs. Spiller, and her sister, Miss Boise. None of them are now living. In the Fall of '78, the writer became a member of the teaching staff. The first class of five was graduated in '78.

What has always been the attitude of the University toward its students? That the most valuable assets of the state are not its mines, its farms, its forests, but its sons and daughters, the future citizens of the State, and that these are entitled to the best that the state can afford in every line of endeavor, and to the best preparation for life's struggle. The best efforts of the instructors have been for them. No student is permitted to lose his personality in the crowd. Personal oversight and care of each student are exercised, but not to the extent of interfering with the development of self-reliance or the feeling of personal responsibility for his actions.

No student body could be more loyal and ready to cooperate with the Faculty for the good of the University than ours always has been. Its alumni, wherever found, are a credit to their Alma Mater, their State, and themselves. The University has nothing to be ashamed of. With its limited resources, it has gone forward, sometimes slowly, but steadily, building permanently, having faith in the people of Oregon and feeling assured that when once the good citizens of this grand Commonwealth understood the loyalty of both Faculty and students to their State and to the high ideals of what a University should be, they would rally to her support.

The writer has no apologies to make for the University. Neither has he any fears as to the final results. In his thirty-four years here as an instructor, (and they have been happy years in association with his "Boys and Girls"), he has seen many storms arise and dangers threaten, but after the storm, "Old Varsity" stood there as she always has stood and always will stand, unmoved, with a silent dignity, an honor to her founders, a reproach to her would-be detractors.

—John Straub.

Senior History

ACCORDING to all previous customs the class of 1912 believes and therefore styles itself the best class ever graduated by the University of Oregon. In numbers it is fact that proves us greatest. In wisdom, despite the harrassing of "higher standards," new grading systems and similar "mental hobble-skirts," we have just claim to superiority.

Perhaps, however, our greatness may be due to the difficulties under which we were obliged to labor. Was it not the class of '12 that was the first and last to suffer directly from the indulgence in hazing? Has it not had to suffer longest the impertinances, the cockiness and the unbearable bravado of the freshmen classes? Have we not bowed our heads under the time worn and most serious yoke of the referendum, dampening our spirits to soothe the over zealous consciences of some grouchy state taxpayers?

Under these distressing circumstances what have we done to keep alive the University? List, kind reader, while we elaborate upon our many promulgations for the 'Varsity's needs.

In the midst of the cries from the powers above to let not our exuberant spirits lead us to bring disastrous publicity upon our Alma Mater, and thereby prolong our wait for our appropriation, our men of literary ability originated the famed "Midnight Doughnut." How did this help? Why, dear reader, that Midnight Doughnut was the essence of "pep" and with all its funny jokes, its sarcasms and compliments, it fostered that great necessity, "Oregon Spirit." One of the greatest, and most beneficial of leagues followed this publication, namely the "Doughnut Baseball League." It was originated by 1912 and through its efforts the league has later included basketball, track, and tennis. These league contests have developed Varsity material which otherwise might never have been heard of.

In all college activities, 1912 has kept her light constantly burning, nor has it been dimmed by comparison.

Naturally we "walloped" the class of the unlucky number in the annual struggle for supremacy in the football realm.

And have not the stars of 1912 shone brilliantly and numerously on the Varsity football teams? And in track, what have we done? We ask no better proof than our record of defeating all the classes combined and individually. In fact, we have carried athletics on our shoulders during our entire college career.

As to Society, each and every senior is a lion in the college social life. As a class we have proven ourselves capable of giving "the dance" of the year ever since we decorated the old armory for our Freshman hop.

Have we lost money? No indeed. The Senior class boasts of an overflowing treasury. We made the Oregon pay, we made the canoe carnival pay, in fact, everything has paid that we have laid our hands to, even going to college.

But all joking aside, we are sorry to leave old Oregon, the happiest place on earth,—the spot which has dealt us so much of good and has made us what we are, a class worthy of at least a little consideration.

And as we pack our trunks preparatory to facing the cruel world, we hope that the classes we leave have become so saturated with our spirit that they will follow in our worthy footsteps. And if, in later years, the University should need aid, we will be more than glad to leave our seats in congress and our private offices to set you again on the right way to success.

Junior History

IT seems to have become a custom here at Oregon for anyone who happened to be writing a history of his class, to become unbearably boastful and to attempt to conceal the fact with a lot of very questionable wit. Such is not the intention of this brief sketch of the more important events in the history of the class of 1913.

President Gillis, '11, writing of his class, said: "Our short stay has marked an epoch in the life of the University. We have lived through the days of reformation and seen the glory of the rare old golden days pass by. We have seen the last of hazing and the entrance of brotherly love. We were the last to enjoy the unrestricted privilege of hurling the neophytes into the icy waters of the mill race, and we were the first Seniors who tried to make the Freshmen (us) respect our dignity through the salve of soft words and honeyed smiles, instead of violence and fear."

Such was the entrance of the class of 1913. We were the first to suffer under the new regulations, which forbid the dress-suit and demanded the wearing of the freshman badge—the green cap, besides undergoing the last hazing at Oregon.

Although the floor was sticky and the ink on the programs a trifle fresh, our freshman dance—the first, by the way, in the new "Gym"—was "some party."

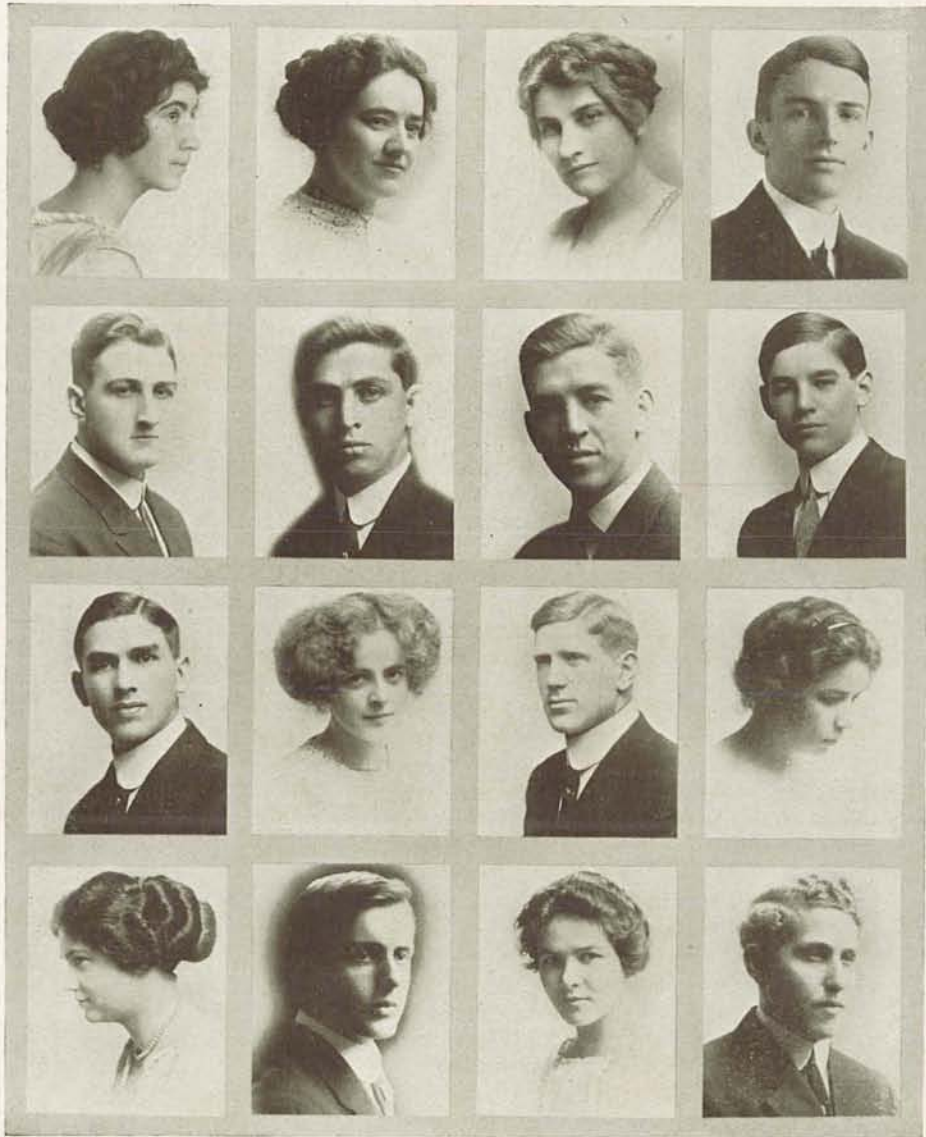

In our Sophomore year we won the Inter-Class Basketball championship of the college in a close and exciting series, besides giving the class of 1914 such a drubbing in football, as to fill them with a life long appreciation of our prowess.

As Juniors we originated the Underclass Mix. It will undoubtedly be made an annual affair, because it proved such a valuable means of arousing class spirit, introducing the freshman to college life and unifying their interests, as well as affording unlimited amusement to all concerned. We feel justified in being proud of having given such a happy and beneficial institution to our college.

While our list of achievements compares favorably with that of any other class, we are not yet satisfied. We are only Juniors and have a whole year—and a big year ahead of us. Next year, when we graduate, we hope to be satisfied.

Sophomore History

NO class probably ever made a more inauspicious beginning, or more meekly bore the abuse and insults heaped upon them than the Class of 1914. We permitted the Sophs to line us up on Kincaid Field, give us a football as a disguise and trample us into nothingness. We served as the "goats" at smokers and rallies, and when we resisted, we were properly "keyed down" and told that it was a part of our "college education." But a common enemy united us, we awoke, began to work and did the deeds which are here briefly recorded.

As Freshmen we invited the O. A. C. "Squallers" to our city and trailed them in the dust on the small end of a 26 to 0 score. In the interclass basketball series we defeated every team but the Sophomores. This year we advanced a step and won the cup. Last fall we vanquished the Frosh in football, 29 to 0, and in the Underclass Mix we again trimmed them by a score of 113 to 48. Our girls have both years won the basketball cup.

Our contributions to the Varsity teams and organizations deserve particular mention. In football we have furnished such men as Fenton, Fiser, Bradshaw, Jones, Grout, Cobb, Caufield, Viereck, and Annunson. Two of Oregon's championship basketball tossers, Fenton and Bradshaw, come from our ranks. Roberts, Fenton, Houck, Cobb, Annunson, and Peet, have won their letter in baseball. In track, Huggins, McConnell, Brooks, Grout, Fiser and Miller have done yeoman service for Oregon. But not alone in athletics have we been prominent. To the Glee Club we have furnished such men as Lai, Stannard, Fortmiller, Lamb, Bratager, Giles, Skei, Cowden, and Motschenbacher, while in debate both Crockatt and Motschenbacher have won the gold "O." Norma Dobie and Lucile Davis, this year's co-ed debaters, are both sophomores.

We are proud of our achievements, but not satisfied. We have discovered our abilities, and we know that we shall always be found foremost in every undertaking which means honor for our University and a step towards the realization of a Greater Oregon.

—Vernon T. Motschenbacher.

HOMER WHELDON
Vof O. 111-12.

Freshman History

LAST September, of 1911, three hundred and twenty-six would-be college students wended their way to the stately portals of Villard Hall, entered therein and recorded their names beneath the numerals 1915. With this act, the present Freshman class was brought into existence—a class, which prides among its number students from every county in the state and almost every state in the Union, a class whose members, by choice and not by accident, look to Oregon as their Alma Mater.

As a class, we believe that we have established a record which following freshman classes will be forced to strive to their utmost to surpass. We placed our numerals on Skinner's Butte and we most humbly displaced them; we sent forth a fearless football team to do battle with the Sophomores; our quintette of clever basketball players won second place in the interclass series; we were trampled upon in the push ball contest; ten wearers of the green cap were unmercifully dragged through the duck pond; our bonfire was the largest ever; the 1915 relay team won by a big margin, and the Freshman Glee was a grand success.

As individuals we believe that we have made good. We have representatives on the 'Varsity in football and basketball. Early in the season Coach Warner picked Virgil Noland and Bill Heusner to fill important positions on the first eleven, and Don Rader has proved himself the cleverest first year man who ever wore the stripes for Oregon. We have the material with which Bill Hayward expects to build his future track teams. We have been represented in debate and oratory. The bright smiling faces of the Freshman girls have brought joy to many a lonesome heart and awakened several of the upper-classman to the fact that they are alive.

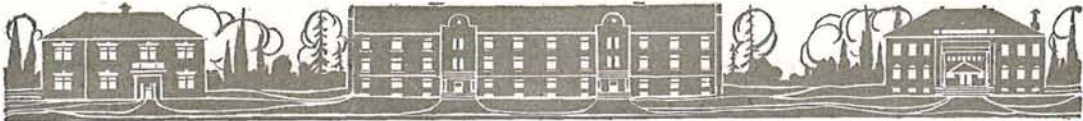

Now, as the first year of our college work is about to come to a close, a feeling of joy and one of sadness comes over us;—joy that the entire year has been such a happy and successful one, filled with incidents which shall always be remembered with pleasure; sadness that the best days of our college career have passed so rapidly. As Freshman we have solemnly pledged ourselves to love, honor, and respect the name Oregon. The spirit of our Alma Mater has grasped us, heart and soul and whatever we may accomplish in this life, we hope that it shall be for the good of Oregon—a Greater Oregon.

Leland S. Finch.

FROSH AND THEIR GUARDIANS

Virgil Noland

Born December 22, 1890, at Astoria, Oregon

Died November, 1911, at Eugene, Oregon

Virgil Noland was the only son of Judge George Noland, of Klamath Falls, Oregon, who is a graduate of the University of Oregon of the class of 1880. He did preparatory work in Shattuck Military Academy of Missouri, Boone Preparatory School of California, and Portland Academy, graduating from the later institution in June, 1910. He enrolled in the present Freshman Class here last September.

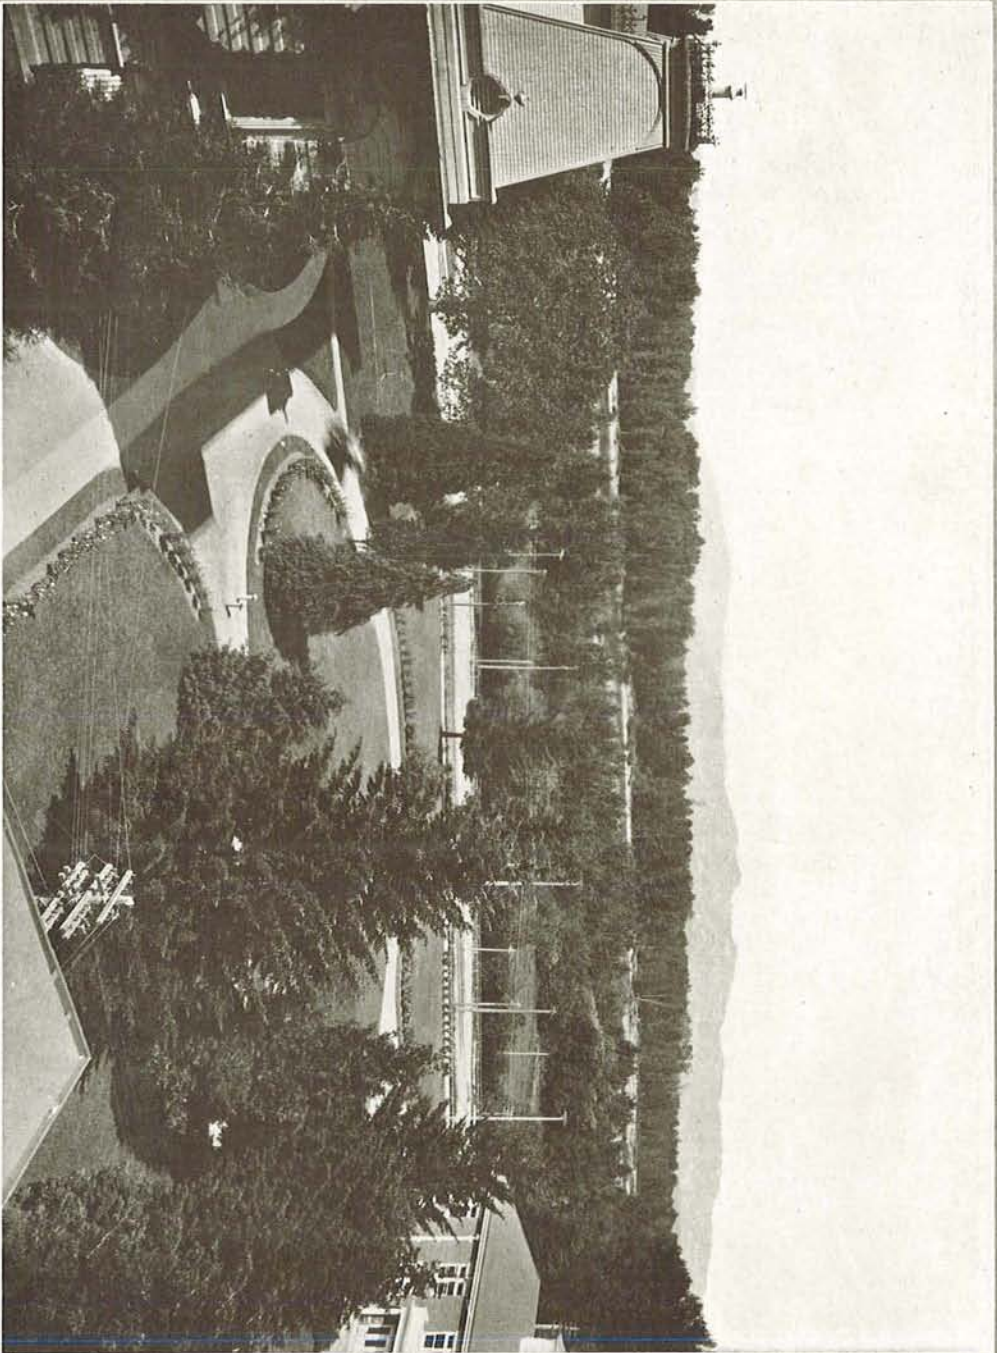

Noland was a young man of exceptional qualities, and in the brief time he was with us, won an enviable place in the esteem of his fellow-students and the University faculty.

He was a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity. He was not only a good student, but by hard and consistent work he won a place at left guard on the Varsity football team and played that position in the games against the Vancouver Barracks, Washington State College, Whitman, and the University of Washington.

Virgil Noland has departed from this life forever, and we can do naught but honor his memory. In doing this, we remember him a man among men, and as a man he made good.

BANQUET COMMITTEE—John G. Schroeder, Jr., William H. Sibbald, and George A. Cobb.

Junior activities lose a considerable part of their zest, earnestness and strenuousness when you transfer them from the campus to a night school in a large city, where you meet thrice a week, and then only for an hour at a time. No chance to get acquainted like in the "good old college days," no "Junior Proms," no "Junior Week-Ends," no "Skips," no hilarious good times, no moonlight perambulations amid the hallowed associations of the good old Alma Mater; only the cold and cheerless atmosphere of a class-room in a metropolitan building to greet you. Oh Fudge! What's the use of comparison? Might just as well compare a buttermilk shake to a gin fizz, or the cold grey dawn of an early morn' with the glorious rising of the morning sun.

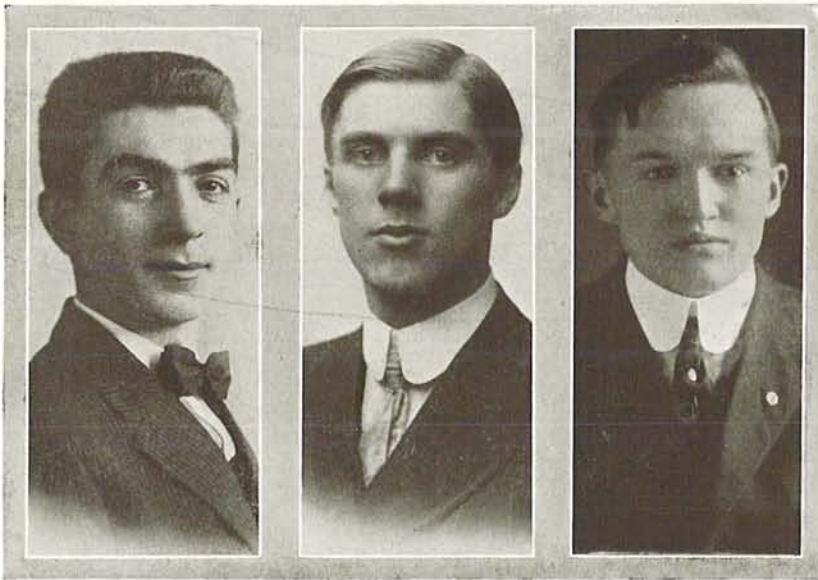

Most of us "Laws" are actively engaged in the world's busy affairs and our association with a night school law department comes at the close of a strenuous day when our energies are pretty well dissipated. So it can be seen that but little opportunity affords itself for extraneous activities. We content ourselves in the memory of "by-gone days" and try to find what joy is left in some frigid and pulseless treatise on Real Property, Torts, Negotiable Instruments, Equity and Corporations. We do have a smoker now and then and this year the Junior joys will be supplemented by a banquet to the seniors, a new step, but a good one in the right direction. May none of us ever forget the glorious days of yore, for remember, it is a far cry from a university campus to a law night school.

In the early part of October, 1910, in keeping with an ancient, if not honorable custom, the old students of the Law Department assembled the Freshmen, in a hall rented for the purpose, to instruct them in the practice of parlor house hazing. When the rough work was over, and the Freshmen, in order to forget their stings and ailments, were lighting their pipes or partaking of other refreshments arranged for the occasion, speeches were in order. It was during these speeches that the student leaders came to the conclusion that it was folly to get together but once a year. They expressed their sentiments to the assembly. Every person seemed to be of the same mind. As a result, the Associated Students was formed.

Two years have not elapsed since then, but great good has resulted to both the students and the school. On the second Friday of each month a regular meeting is held within one of the recitation rooms or in a hall rented for the occasion. In the early part of the year these meetings are chiefly smokers, where the new and old men mingle, get acquainted, and have a good time in general. Then the students get down to work. Debates are held, prominent men are called to address them, and a touch of the deeper college spirit is shown.

It was these meetings that worked up enough interest to get the Faculty to give us a "Moot Court," to be held each week. Here the student gets the practical work with his theory.

On the night before the Oregon-Washington game, the law students started what promises to be a custom. A smoker was given to the other departments of the University. All departments were well represented by both alumni and students. Many speeches were made by men now prominent in their professions. What an enjoyment to hear these speeches and know the "Oregon Spirit" never dies; and what an effect on the underclassmen to know that the alumni never forget Oregon and are always willing to come out, mingle with and teach them that that spirit they acquired in the days gone by is still with them. From the success of this meeting, the Law Department will always give a big smoker and rally the night before the annual game in Portland.

Being a night school, with all its students working in the day time, the Law Department has never turned to athletics, but has used its energy in pulling for the teams from Eugene. Could the students from Oregon proper step in at one of our meetings some night and see the spirit shown by our "night school," they could probably appreciate the work the law students are doing to build up an important branch of the University of Oregon. We have no ambition to be removed to Eugene; we wish to stay in Portland, where conditions better fit us, and here we are trying to build a law school that will be a credit to any university.

School of Medicine

Situated in Portland, so far from the mother school, the Medical Department enjoys little of the college life so dear to a student of the University. There is no strolling on the campus down "Hello Lane," or quiet paddling on the "Mill Race," to break the monotony of a day's classes. The upper-classman spend the few minutes between periods in a hurried walk from the college building to one of the hospitals to attend a clinic, and then as hurriedly rush back to college for a lecture or quizz.

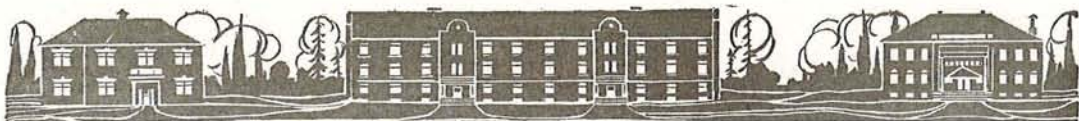

The lower classmen, alas, have not even this small respite from their grind, but from eight in the morning till six in the afternoon, they endeavor to solve the mysteries of the human body, either in the lecture hall, or in the laboratory, industriously modeling the bones of the body, or carefully tracing an artery in its many ramifications.

Since last year, two professors have been added to the faculty, one in anatomy and allied subjects, the other in materia medica and pharmacology, thus making four instructors who devote their entire time to their respective branches. The instruction of the freshmen and sophomores is practically in the hands of these four professors, thus insuring them a solid foundation for the junior and senior subjects taught by lectures and clinics from practicing physicians and surgeons of the city.

The custom of conferring the degree in Portland has been abolished and the present medical seniors will be the first class to receive their degrees at the University at Eugene, at the regular University Commencement exercises. At first this new order of things was looked upon with great disfavor, but the feeling is gradually growing in the Student Body that this will bring about closer and better relationship between the various departments, which in the past has been sadly lacking.

Question: "Resolved: That the various states should adopt Woman's Suffrage."

Oratory and Debate at Oregon

In order to secure the greatest result in the way of renewed effort, a series of victories should be interspersed at rare intervals with defeat. This is why the next few years are certain to be fruitful in forensic victories for Oregon. During the year 1909-10, Oregon won three unanimous decisions in debate against Utah, Washington and Idaho. In 1910 Washington and Stanford were beaten with unanimous decisions, and only by a two to one decision did Utah finally score victory. However, it is only natural that such a series of forensic triumphs could not continue, and the season of 1911-12 has brought us three bitter defeats. Adopting a new system of extensive rather than intensive development of men, three teams were chosen. A question upon which strong sectional opinions had been formed, together with an unusually strong opposition, left Oregon without a victory in her three contests.

Debating interest is now centered upon Oregon's co-ed debaters, who will oppose the woman's suffrage measure against the University of Washington on May 3rd. In the year 1909-10 the Oregon girls lost in a two to one decision to Washington, but the following year Oregon carried away a unanimous decision. This year's debate will be the determining event, and it is upon this we rely for the retrieving of our lost glory.

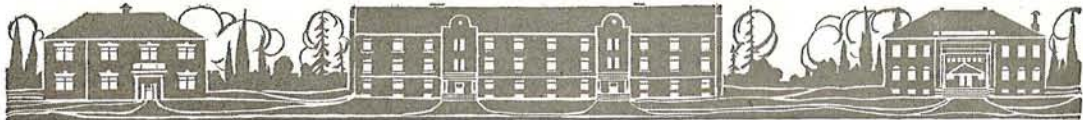

Recent oratorical history is merely a chronicle of victories. In 1909-10 Oregon won second place in both the inter-collegiate and the inter-state contests, but in 1910-11 both these events were captured with first place. This year the inter-collegiate contest has already been added to Oregon's laurels, and the inter-state contest is yet to take place at Missoula, Montana, on May 24th.

Besides the contests mentioned, the University has her annual Junior Orations, and during Commencement week the Failing and Beekman contest open only to Seniors, and carrying prizes of one hundred fifty and one hundred dollars.

In no other activity is real Oregon spirit better demonstrated than in forensics and oratory. The number who enter the preliminaries, the staunch supporters, the encouragement and backing of the student body, and the untiring work of coaches and participants, insures Oregon's high status along these lines in the years to come.

A Trip with the Glee Club

"It is a short life, but a gay one."

The above expression would, in the simplest manner, describe a trip with the gayly plumed troupe of barn-storming nightingales and meadow larks, which represented the Varsity Glee Club on its recent tour of Southern and Western Oregon.

Oakland was the first place victimized by the alighting of a detachment of the troupe. Here Burns Powell made a speech, in which he quoted Scripture to the natives to back up his sincerity,—the effect of which was to delude a village Priscilla into enquiring, "Isn't that Mr. Powell awfully religious."

In Roseburg, the boys spent a quiet day and a quieter evening. At this place Harry Ding and Chu Chu Rolf were severely reprimanded for attempting to victimize the mayor in a shell game.

The covey flitted out of Roseburg by request and did not tarry in their wild flight until the state line was approached at Ashland. Here Josh B. Billings, '76, by the dint of persistent advertising and vouching for the sterling qualities of each character on the club, succeeded in turning out the Modoc Indian war veterans, the local Spinsters sewing circle, and the W. C. T. U. The result was that at the concert Martin's stock jokes didn't take, and in the funny parts of the entertainment the audience was moved to tears.

At Medford the whole town turned out to see the boys perform. It was a full house, with a drummer friend and sympathiser filling the whole front section. After the show the boys were entertained at the University Club, where they were treated to an exhibit of ex-collegers from Texas to Saskatchewan.

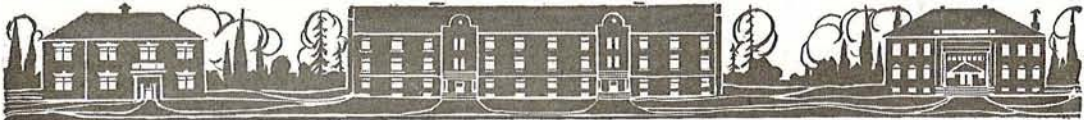

The girl's basketball team from Grants Pass was leaving Medford on an early train, so the boys tramped down to the city, where General Grant is said to have participated in the great national game. From Grants Pass the club jumped back to Eugene, where a concert at Springfield was boosted but failed to materialize.

Going on to Albany the entire club took a ride on the street car, at their own expense. The town hotel man refused to rebate, but attended the concert in person, wishing to do well by the boys.

Leaving Eugene

At Medford.
The Dalles

At Salem, on December 24th, was held the grand finale of the trip. Due to weary lungs and strained throats the melody offered approached more nearly a spirited saw filing contest. In final despair leader Ic Ogden sent the Old Guard out to save the day. The heroes of a thousand stages failed to dislodge the jeering Willamette warriors from their entrenchment. The veteran trumpeter Burns Powell sounded the last retreat, and the members of the 1911 Oregon Glee Club fled to their several homes about the state.

In Portland every one attended the concert, and even the Oregonian correspondent was favorably impressed. Ogden, failing to comb his repertoire for a come back after the Schuman-Heink solo, furnished the audience with a silly grin.

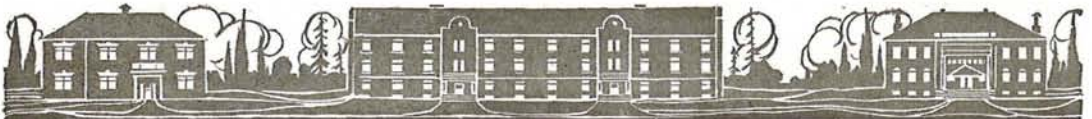

At Hood River they grow fruit that explains why Adam fell for the apple gag, the concert went off very smoothly. Motschenbacher later lost his fraternity pin by default, and a squaw from the reservation tried hard to kidnap Freshman B. Dixon—"Wantum skookum pale face papoose."

Following the destruction of The Dalles, the club commenced their famous retreat back to Portland.

At St. Johns they gave a benefit to the mill employees.

Glimpses of the Race and River

The Canoe Club

The University of Oregon Canoe Club was formed last spring to promote the interests of what is probably the most widely participated in of all our spring recreations. The membership includes fifteen men and fifteen women students, selected with the aim of enlisting those most deeply interested in canoeing; canoe owners, if possible. The club has laid out for itself an ambitious program of accomplishments, which will require several college generations for completion.

The Club hopes to make the favorite spring pastime more attractive by providing a boat house—which is under way—by beautifying the race and providing landings. Also, the Club will co-operate with the Junior Class in holding a spring canoe carnival and regatta.

The social side of canoeing hardly needs to be emphasized or stimulated, but it will be recognized by a number of club picnics, parties and trips.

The typical canoe enthusiast is characteristically individualistic. He instinctively shuns all crowds and clubs, but once this tendency is overcome, the Varsity Canoe Club hopes to make its existence aggressively known and to prove to a sceptical world its title as one of the most "worth while" organizations in the University.

The First Touchdown of the Season

THE SQUAD

Football

Review of Season of 1911

In looking back over the events of the season just passed, it seems that the year 1911 was a most disastrous one for Old Oregon, at least as far as football is concerned. Many things had much to do with the outcome. The coaches and trainer had to look forward to a long season, with the hard games at the end, and therefore had to go easy on the training for fear the men would go stale. Also luck, and bad luck at that, had much to do with keeping back the development of team work; one after another of the first team men were injured in practice, and owing to the shortage of material there were none to take their places. To make it worse, the injured men were mostly from the backfield, and if there is anything necessary to a team's team work, it is the working together of the backfield men, night after night until each knows what the other man will do almost as well as he himself knows. But the biggest obstacle in the way of a good team was the vast shortage of material. If the first team men had been made to fight for their places by ambitious scrubs, Oregon would have undoubtedly made a far better showing. Hard work and plenty of it, in practice, is an essential element in making a good eleven.

The first game of the season was with the soldier team from Vancouver Barracks, who were coached by Dudley Clark. With several of the first team backfield missing, the Varsity won easily, running up a 36 to 0 score. This was simply a practice game to get the team in some sort of shape for the hard game with the W. S. C. eleven, scheduled for the following week.

On the 28th day of October, on the Pullman field, the Oregon team got away with a 6 to 0 score over the Washington Staters, upsetting the theory that the Pullman team would win easily. In this game the Varsity men showed the stuff of which they were made, for it was a hard, heart-breaking contest, both teams fighting for every inch, with no scoring until the third quarter, when Oregon got away on an end run, scoring the only points of the day. On the next day, Saturday, the men saw the Washington eleven defeat Idaho in Spokane, and after the game every man in the Oregon team felt that we could defeat Dobie's warriors, for in this game they showed weaker than at any other part of the season. Perhaps this was because the wily Dobie knew that the Oregon team was watching.

On November 4th, the ever surprising Whitman team met the Varsity on Kincaid Field, and for the most of the game the University supporters were threatened with heart failure. Except for occasional spurts, the Varsity played listlessly while the Whitman eleven were up and going every second of the game. Oregon scored one touchdown, which was soon duplicated by the Missionaries and as neither side kicked the goal the score stood 5 to 5, until just before the end of the game the Varsity added three more points through a place kick, making the final score 8 to 5 in favor of Oregon.

Manager Johns

After this disappointing game, the team was put through some strenuous licks, several of the old stars returning to help instill team work in the eleven. Great improvement was noted and when the team went down to meet Washington on the 18th (the fatal 18th) the team was conceded to have at least a chance. However the Seattle-ites showed their superiority from the start, and the final score stood 29 to 3 in their favor. The team fought to the last giving a splendid example of what a team can do, even though hopelessly out-classed, for Dobie had perfected a wonderful machine, a team that was worried but a few times during the entire game by the Oregon onslaughts. Too much credit cannot be given the Washington men, for they proved the cleanest and best of players and more than one Oregon man was heard to remark after the game, "That team would give Harvard and Yale an awful rub."

Assistant Coach Hunt

Then came the cancelling of the Idaho game, through the death of Virgil Noland, left guard on the Varsity. It was finally decided to play the Multnomah game, although the players had no heart for it after the tragic death of their team-mate. This game was another disappointment to the University supporters, the clubmen winning out 17 to 6. Luck played a large part this day, but the club had a fine eleven, and they won on their merits. Thus ended the season of 1911.

Three Oregon men were chosen in the All-Northwest selections. Kellogg was universal choice for center, Bailey for Tackle, and Main for half-back. Washington had five men selected, W. S. C. one, O. A. C. one, and Whitman one, so that in this, as well as the percentage rating, Oregon stood next to Washington.

William S. Main

LYLE BROWN, Yell Leader

Lyle has exhibited ability to yell ever since his days of Mellin's Food and Soothing Syrup, at which time he kicked the slats out of his trundle bed and led the family hoorah.

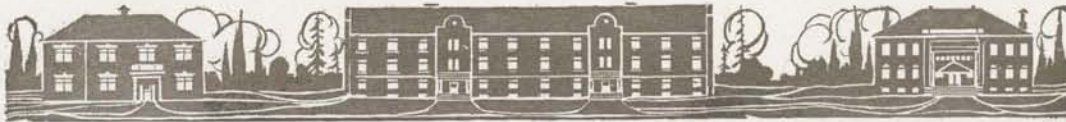

Lyle's mamma liked the Sigma Chi boys pretty well, so when it came time to send the family pride and papa's joy to Eugene, it was a simple matter to change the safety pin to the blue shield with the white cross.

Bush has pulled off a number of startling things during his college career. In his Sophomore year he was naughty to the 1913 Frosh, and in his Senior year he announced the "cowboy ranch" pictures at the Folly.

THE TEAM
Hayward Roberts Bradshaw Fenton Chandler Jones Hall Main Heusner Kellogg Latourette Fariss Balley Walker Johns

BILL MAIN—Backfield—Captain 1911

Bill came to Oregon from Alameda four years ago because the California style of football was too much like drop the handkerchief. The Sigma Nu boys induced Bill to come around to the house, and he liked the fellows, and didn't think he'd regret the step, so the deed was did.

During his football career Main has beaten a maze of paths across the goal lines of Oregon's enemies. When Bill got the ball, it was "My God, there he goes again! Catch 'em!"—but on the defense, when he speared his man, there was no response, and not a sound save a dull thud of falling bodies, as he carried the runner back toward his own goal line.

EARL LATOURETTE—Quarterback

Sap came to Oregon with the handicap of having been preceded by an illustrious brother. The Kappa Sigs took him in on condition that he serve frosh duties for two years.

Latourette got away for the touchdown, which took the pip out of O. A. C. in the 1910 game at Corvallis, and for the week following, Con Dillon reported rush sales of dainty black court plaster to Varsity co-eds. Sap landed All-Northwest quarter for two or three seasons. He learned the principles of football with the Chicken Alley team in Oregon City.

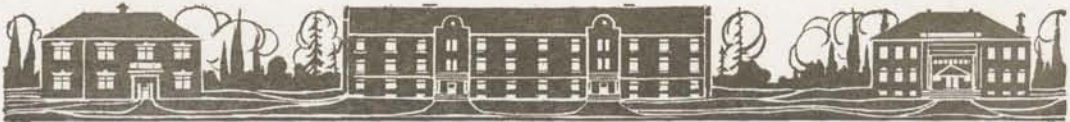

DEAN WALKER—Backfield—Captain Elect

Dean came up from Independence in 1910 and promptly decided to air his blankets on the Sigma Nu back porch.

Dean has gone into football and basketball with a spirit which works out the old principle that a man gets out of a thing just what he puts into it.

Walker will lead Oregon's hopefuls on their pilfering expeditions about the Northwest next Fall.

BOB KELLOGG—Lineman

Lots of great men come from Baker City, and when Bob Kellogg headed for Eugene, the mayor of Baker and the sheriff of the county breathed a sigh of relief.

The Sigs decided, Bob was not wholly incorrigible, so they kept him chained in the basement for a week. Because his howls disturbed the neighborhood, it was decided to give him a try out with the Glee Club. He performed up and down the scale like a monkey on thirty feet of grape vine. The next year they turned Bob loose on the football field, and when he learned to distinguish a friend from an enemy, it was duck soup for the home team.

Kellogg's three year's football record comprises one season All-Northwest center, and the reputation of one of the best players who ever donned an Oregon moleskin.

ED BAILEY—Lineman

Ed Bailey, Oregon's spritely tackle, just grew up, and the time and place all this happened is of no consequence now, because like all great men, appreciation comes only after the preacher has been paid for the final rites.

Ed was corralled by the Delta Sigs two years ago, and by tearing out a section from the side of the house, the boys succeeded in backing him in backwards and blindfolded.

Bailey's three years on the team has won for him the reputation of having been tried and never found wanting.

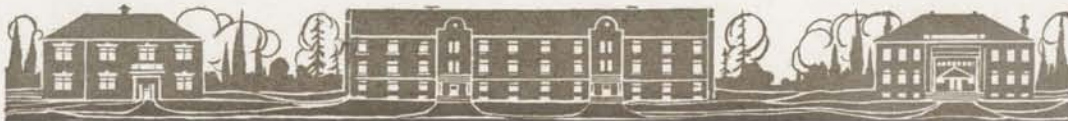

BEN CHANDLER—End

Ben was captured on the head waters of Coos river some four years ago, and brought to Eugene at great cost. Some Sig high brow asked Chandler, if he wanted to become a Neophyte, and liking the liquid sound of the word, he took the bait without a quiver.

Ben has gone into baseball and football each of his four years in college, and his achievements have been responsible for wholesale ink splashing on the roster of famous men in his College.

CARL FENTON—Lineman

Carl dropped in from Dallas a couple of years ago, the Betas thought he was a pretty nice boy, and a fellow who can play football, baseball, basketball, and split kindlin' when he's restin', ain't to be sneezed at, and is pretty handy to have around, so they took him in and gave him food and raiment.

Carl was a mainstay on Coach Bill Warner's 1911 line, and the big fellow can be depended upon to move whole sections of the opposing formations.

ROBERT FARISS—Lineman

Mrs. Fariss' little boy appeared on the Oregon campus about three years ago, with his sunny countenance beaming from sheer exuberance and a recent application of the maternal scrubbing brush. All the girls fell for Robbie, but Bill Hayward, who has a reputation for saving boys with the tendency to go hog wild in society, took a kindly interest in the boy, and finally induced him to turn his attention to the more legitimate pastime of football.

Last year Bob Fariss won the reputation of a hard, clean, and dependable player.

ELMER HALL—Lineman

Hall comes down out of the Baker County wilderness when the snow flies in the fall, and he goes back when the deer are coming out of the "big blue" in the spring. On his first prospecting trip to Eugene, Hall decided to accept a grub stake from the Sigma Nus.

In football his free gold ability assays innumerable ounces to the long ton, and the big fellow is billed to land All-Northwest tackle next year.

JOE JONES—Backfield

Joe is the quiet and unassuming little fellow who showed up at Oregon two years ago, broke bread with the Fijis, and finally accepted their permanent hospitality.

In football he went into the game with speed dash, and an Irish glory for mixing in a fair fight, where the best man always wins. For a light man Jones plugs the line with marvelous force.

BOB BRADSHAW—End

Brad hails from The Dalles, at which sand and sagebrush locality he grew up to manhood, and to a degree which would keep a less favored individual growing until he reached his second childhood. Bob is line up with the Avavas at Eugene.

Brad made end on the Varsity in his sophomore year, and pitted against Wayne Sutton, the star Washingtonian, in the Washington-U. of O. game, Bob played a never dying and clean grit style of game, the glory of which could not be clouded in the slightest degree by defeat.

BILL HEUSNER—Backfield

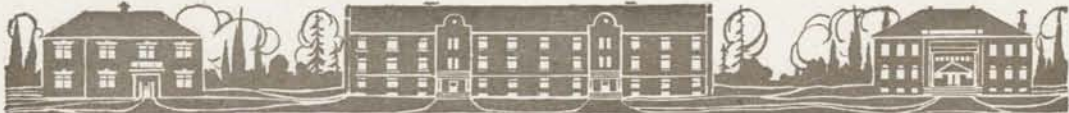

Bill is a German by necessity, according to Dr. Schmidt, who has the upper hand on Herr Heusner's college destiny.

Bill cast his chances at the Kappa Sig boarding house, and submits to frosh duties on account of the arctic influence of the convenient mill race.

In football Heusner hits the line hard and picks holes better than the average player with much greater experience.

The 1911 Season in Baseball

The Oregon baseball nine finished the season of 1911 with a percentage of 572, winning eight collegiate games and losing six. The various collegiate series the Varsity lost to Washington with two defeats, tied Washington State College with two games each, tied the University of California with one game each, won from Whitman College with two games, and won from the University of Idaho three games of the four played. Two games were also played with the Multnomah Club, the first going to the Varsity 9-1, and the second to the Club 0-5.

The annual trip was taken through the Conference circuit. Coach Lynch carried the following men on the trip: Catchers, Taylor and Word; pitchers, Peet, Cobb and Houck; first base, Jamison; second base, Fenton; short stop, Annunsen; third base, Roberts; left field, Chandler; center field, Mount; right field, Barbur; utility, Newland. Washington, Idaho and Washington State were played on the tour, which resulted in two victories and four defeats. Whitman, Washington State, Idaho and California invaded the Oregon campus, with the result of six victories and two defeats.

COACH LYNCH

CHARLES TAYLOR—Catcher

It would take enough ink eradicator to swim the "Great Eastern" to erase Taylor's athletic achievements from the Sigma Nu log book.

Chuch landed baseball and football honors with the ease of the proverbial big kid in the small back lot. He caught for and captained the Oregon nine for the 1911 season.

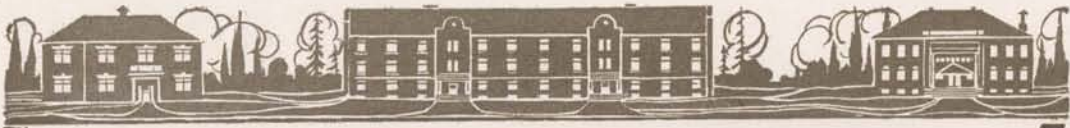

HOMER JAMISON—Infield
Captain 1912

For the ordinary scribe to attempt to tell of Jamie's true baseball worth and achievements, would be like expecting a Doctor of Divinity to shine at golf.

Jamie leads the Sigma Chi flock to church on Sunday and presides at the Monday evening's Bible study. For real knowledge of inside baseball, Hoyle doesn't stand ace high to a club flush alongside the greatest Oregon infielder and 1912 captain.

TOM WORD—Catcher

T. Word, on his favorite charger, threw wide the portals of his Phi Gam redoubt, and cantered over the slip and across the outer moat, with lance poised arest, like Sir Lancelot on his favorite quest.

Though handicapped with a reputation for poetry, Tommy can glare through a catcher's mask, and stenograph signals on the big pad which, with the proper compliance, brings home the pork bosom.

WALLACE MOUNT—Outfield

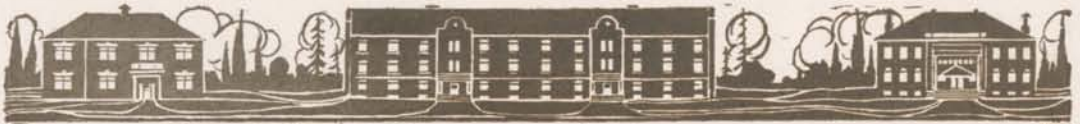

Beany Mount is one of the illustrious Junior crew and he claims the Beta corner for his "Illiheer." In baseball Beany claws the high ones off the blue vaulted canopy back of second and first. He is a good sticker and an all around number one exponent of the great national game.

BEN CHANDLER—Outfield

Ben is a veteran of many battles in the history of baseball at Oregon. Off duty he hangs around the Sigma Nu "Old Soldier's Home."

On the diamond Chandler is a dangerous baserunner, a clever fielder, and at the bat he picks his favorite seam, and laces the sphere a mile or more.

HERBERT BARBUR—Infield

Barbur came to Eugene after a protracted seance at West Point. The Sigs needed a man who could swear at their infantry without offending the ladies who gather on their corner for the pre-initiation ceremonies, so Herb was welcomed.

Herb has taken out "sumacums" in baseball and pigging. In baseball he is a bear at second, and at the Chi Omega house he plays first.

BYRON HOUCK—Pitcher

Byron is said to have shown big league tendencies before cutting his milk teeth. Last year he dropped into Eugene, hung his "fedora" on the Kappa Sig pianola, and rushed out to play "antie over" with Miss Mummy.

Houck, in action, is a big, strong fellow, and has speed and all the other requirements on the ball.

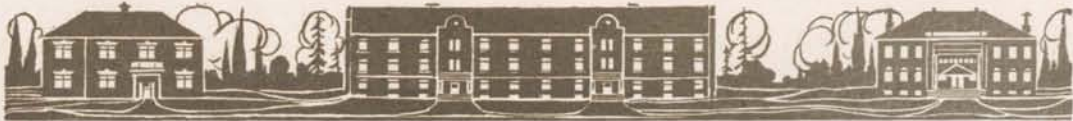

CARL FENTON—Outfield

Carl keeps his ultra-violet star constantly at the zenith of the athletic world. Baseball follows football and basketball in such a way that the big fellow has the grandstand craning its neck from registration to commencement.

In baseball Fenton plays outfield or first base, and invariably performs in luminous style.

LOUDIN ROBERTS—Infield

They have no vocal qualifications to be passed at the Kappa Sig house, so Cadie's falsetto has been permitted to blend with the basses and baritones at the regular "evening prayer services," when the boys devoutly assemble in their nighties.

Cadie, on the ball diamond, is five feet nine inches in his darned socks, and at bat he flourishes a mighty flail which would put Jack, the Giant Killer, in a class with Little Red Riding Hood.

EARL COBB—Catcher

Ty. sprinkled herpicide on the Kappa Sig lawn, and served the heavy role of general utility man on the baseball team last season.

Cobb is a dependable sticker, a good catcher, and carries no excess thickness of ivory in the plated construction of the shell about his think tank.

FRED ANNUNSEN—Infield

Dutch was short stop on Coach Lynch's galaxy of baseball jugglers last season. In his pre-season workouts he developed phenomenal speed for running down second, by legging it from the mill race to the Tawah house, with his pursuing brother club men in full cry thirsting for a second immersion.

Annunsen is a dependable hitter and a number one infielder.

WALTER DOBIE—Infielder

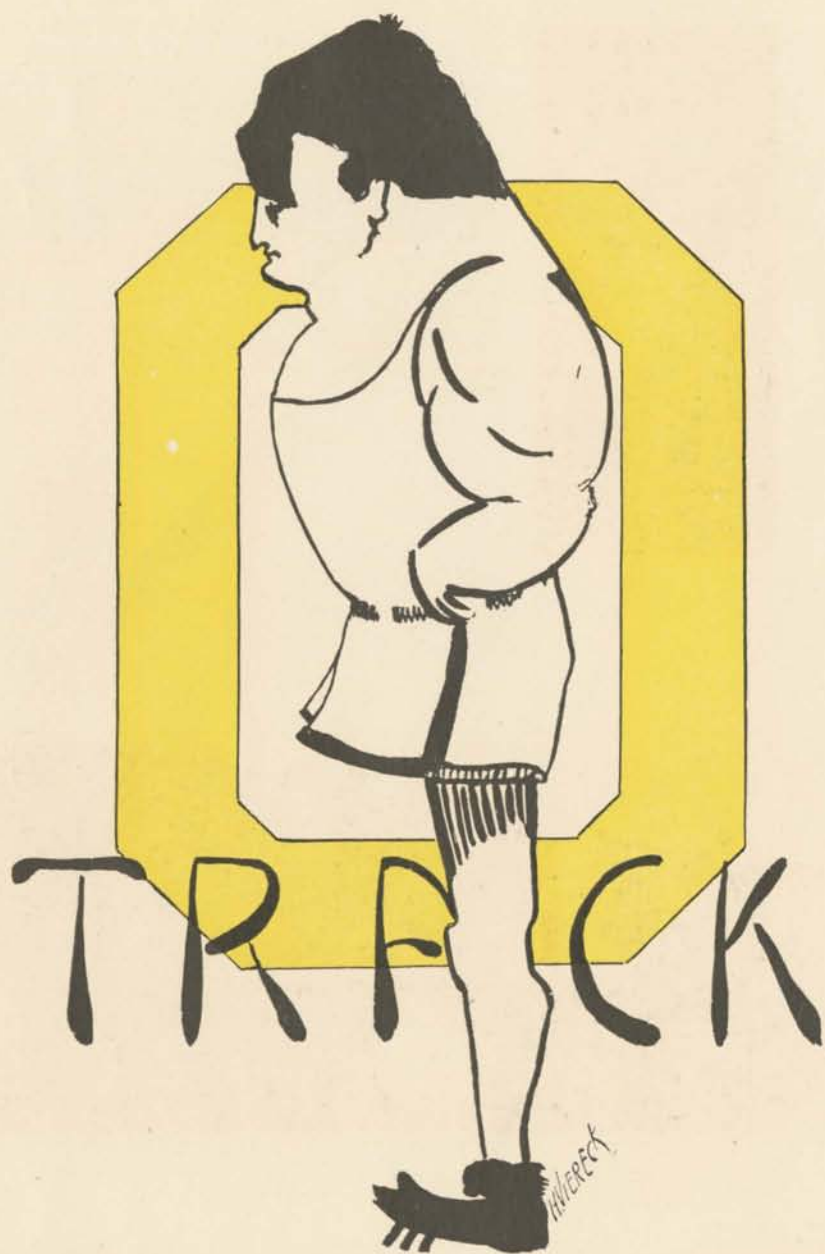

Wallie Dobie is a brother of the famous Crazy Snake Dobie, who played short stop with Father Tom Kelley's 1910 aeronauts.

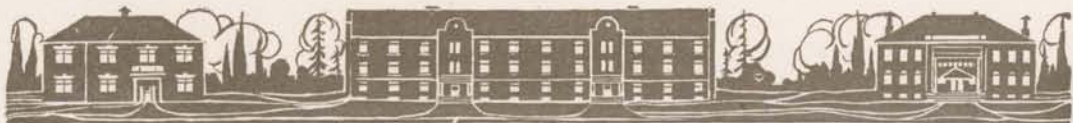

Avava Club is the terrestrial beakon which illumines his righteous path. In baseball Wallie is a fast, heady little player, and though not filling the shoes of a regular on the 1911 team, he fairly "slopped over" in the No. 10 moccasins of a hard worker and dependable recruit.

In the Bleachers

Track

Oregon did not fare very well in the California meet last year, due largely to the fact that it was early in the season and the men were in poor condition. The beating probably did us good, because we came back exceptionally strong, winning all our other meets.

William H. Hayward
Trainer

By the time of the triangular meet, Bill had developed a few freshmen, who rounded out the team and helped materially in ringing up a score of 72 for Oregon to Washington's 51, and Idaho's 17. In this meet four college records were broken, one of them tying the Northwest record. The records broken were as follows: The 220 low hurdles, won by Hawkins in 25 1-5 seconds, tying the Northwest record; the discus, won by Kellogg at 123 feet 6 inches, and the 440 yard run, won by Johns in 50 3-5 seconds. All of these are records that will stand for some time.

Martin Hawkins
Captain, 1911.

In our other meet we got away with a total of 106 points to Whitman's 37. In this meet Neill set up his own record to 149 feet 4 inches.

For this year the prospects are very good. All of last year's men are back, with the exception of McConnell and Kay. With the advent of pleasant weather the new men are coming out, and the old men rounding into shape. The old backbone of the team is back strong, with the addition of another veteran in Williams, and a stronger backbone than Hawkins, Johns, Kellogg, McClure, Bailey, Huggins, Williams, Neill, Latourette, and McGuire, could not be wished.

Among the promising new men who are out are Briedwell, Stuller, Henderson, and Miller of past experience, and Freshmen Boylen, Hawley, Heidenreich, Morton, and Pack. With this bunch, good weather, and good luck, Bill promises to bring home the Northwest championship again, and have a few points to spare.

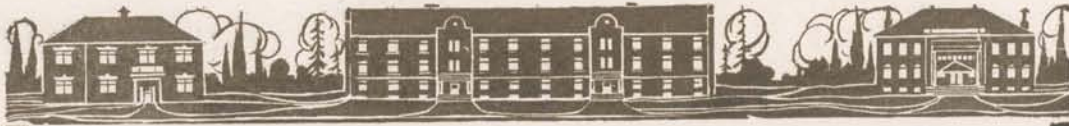

The meets this year are the Columbia meet, April 13, in Portland, a meet with Multnomah, April 27, at Eugene, the Coast meet, at Berkeley, May 4, a dual meet with the University of Washington, May 25, at Seattle, and the big Conference meet in Portland, June 7. There is also some chance of a meet with O. A. C.

The winner of the Conference meet, which takes place of the old triangular meet, can claim undisputed championship of the Northwest. And with Old Oregon spirit booming ahead in the good old way, the Varsity will probably have another championship to adorn its memory book.

—R. N. Kellogg.

Review of the Season of 1912

The basketball season of 1911-12 was probably the most successful ever experienced by an Oregon team, though the doubtful result of the championship race somewhat marred an otherwise favorable series. Oregon, Washington and O. A. C. stood head and shoulders above all the other teams in the Northwest. Oregon and O. A. C. bested Washington in the percentage column, though the games played between the Washingtonians and the two Oregon institutions resulted in a tie-up of two games each in both cases. As Oregon and O. A. C. defeated all their conference opponents, with the exception of the tie with Washington, the championship was, and always will be, in doubt. O. A. C.'s percentage claim was somewhat marred by the fact that some of their games were scheduled after the conference season opened. Oregon's claim was strengthened, on the other hand, by their defeat of Gonzaga, a team which bested the Aggies, and by the fact that they repeatedly attempted to bring the two contending teams together.

With four of the regular five in college at the beginning of the year, Oregon looked like a sure winner. Only the position left vacant by "Doc" Elliott at left guard was left to be filled. Rader, a Medford Freshman, was picked for the place by Trainer Hayward. As preliminaries to the regular season, Harrisburg, Willamette, the combined Portland High Schools, and Whitworth, were in turn defeated by large scores. The first conference game was with Washington, in Seattle, and here the Oregon team met their first defeat, 30-18. The second game also went to the Seattle players by the close score of 10-11.

Leaving Seattle, the five started on the tour of the Inland Empire, with Captain Jamison out of the game on account of injuries received in the first Washington game. Rader was shifted to forward, and Bradshaw filled the vacancy at guard, where he remained during the rest of the season.

The tour resulted as follows:

Oregon 29; Gonzaga College, 22.

Oregon, 18; Washington State College, 13.

Oregon, 30; University of Idaho, 13.

Oregon, 33; University of Idaho, 11.

Idaho was the first conference college to invade the Oregon campus. The Gem Staters were followed by Washington State College and Washington, with the following results:

Oregon, 27; University of Idaho, 9.

Oregon, 26; Washington State, 11.

Oregon, 19; Washington State, 7.

Oregon, 17; University of Washington, 14.

Oregon, 17; University of Washington, 13.

In the conference games the team scored 215 points to their opponents 132, winning eight of the ten contests, and finishing with a percentage of 800.

Fenton and Jamison were placed in all selections for All-Northwest team, and Sims was picked in some of the selections. Jamison, Fenton, Sims, Walker and Bradshaw were granted the official Varsity emblem for work during the season. The future of the game is promising. With the exception of Captain Jamison, Captain-Elect Sims will have a veteran team at his service. With Sims, Bradshaw, Fenton, Walker and Rader in the harness. Trainer Hayward should be able to develop a team which will maintain the high standard already set by the fives of the past two seasons.

Tennis Championship, 1911

The tennis season of 1911 was the most successful ever experienced by the University of Oregon racket wielders. Interest in the game was more widespread, and the competition for places on the team was keener, than ever before. The Freshman championship, which was played off early in the season, was won by E. Y. Yaden, of Klamath Falls; and the handicap tournament for the possession of the Laraway Trophy was won by Professor Arthur Michell.

The Varsity team, composed of R. P. Newland, of Palo Alto, California, Harry Stine, of Monmouth, Howard Gray, of Portland, and Paul Bond, of Eugene, overwhelmingly defeated the University of Washington team, winning four of the five matches played. The Oregon team, to a man, played heady ball, and won the tournament on the strength of their superior generalship.

The tournament opened May 19th. at Eugene, with Stine, of Oregon, facing Febriger, of Washington. Stine played a careful and consistent game, allowing the Washington player to defeat himself, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. Newland and Gray then took the court, opposing Moncrief and Goetz. Oregon took the first set with ease, playing a slow, careful game. During the second set they were more closely pressed by the Northerners. The third set was won by Washington. The opening of the fourth set, however, found Oregon taking the offensive instead of the defensive, and playing a hard, smashing game, which threw their opponents completely off their guard. The final score was 6-2, 6-4, 4-6, 6-0. This match closed the day's play with Oregon leading, with two matched against Washington's none.

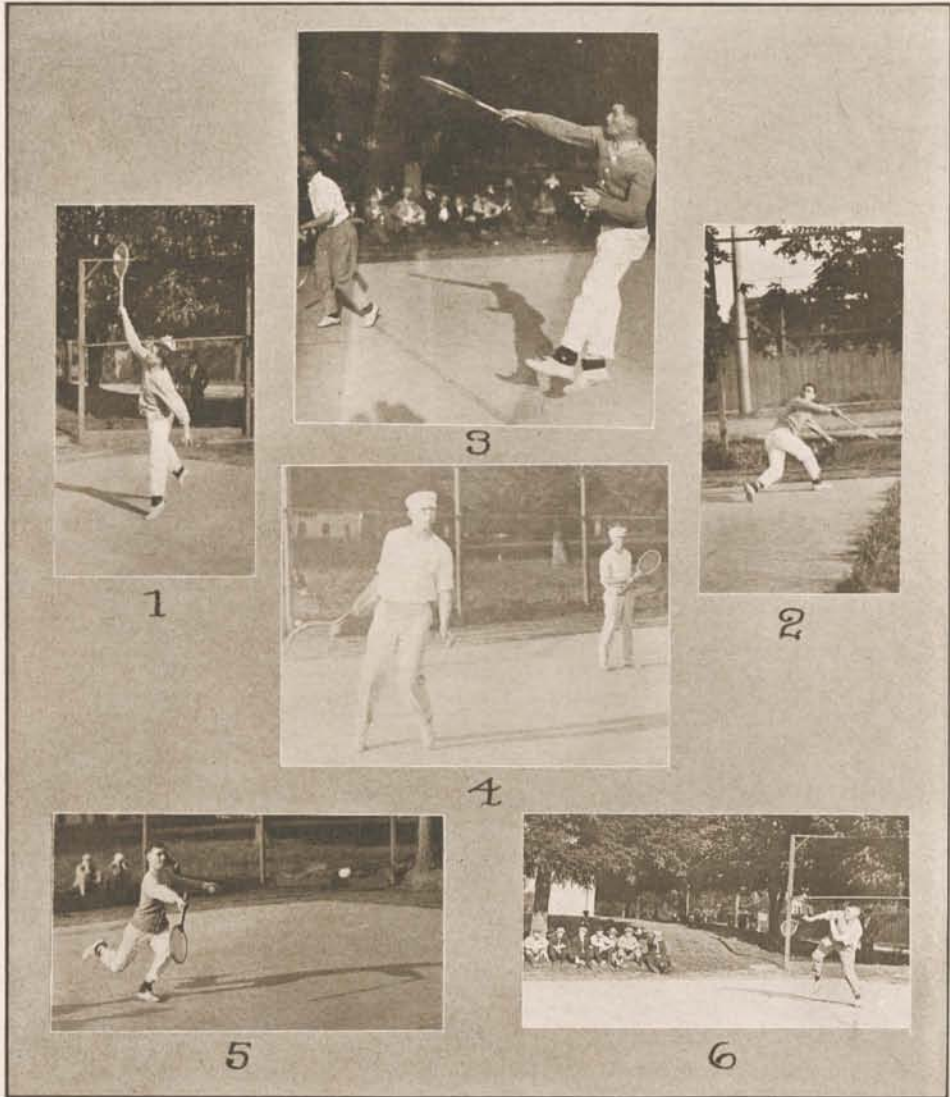

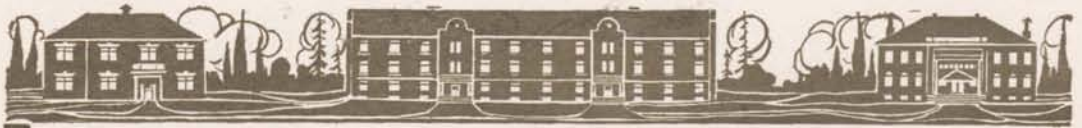

Play opened the following day with Newland, the Oregon leader, pitted against Harold Moncrief, leader of the Washington team. Moncrief played a fast, hard game, but was erratic at critical times. The match went to the Oregon player, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3. Newland and Stine followed, opposing Moncrief and Febriger in the hardest fought match of the tournament. Practically every game went to deuce, but the superior steadiness of the Oregonians won for them, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3. Washington followed with their only victory, when Goetz defeated Bond in the closest match of the series, the final score being 3-6, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5.

The final result of the tournament showed Oregon the victor, 4-1. A resume of the two days' play shows Oregon to have taken fourteen sets to Washington's four, and one hundred and two games to Washington's fifty-eight. The inter-collegiate record now stands as follows:

	Oregon	Washington
1908.....	1	1
1909.....	0	2
1910.....	2½	3
1911.....	4	1

Interclass Track

Intra-Collegiate track events during the past year have largely taken the form of inter-class relay races and cross-country runs. The only inter-class track meet held so far this year was a dual meet between the Sophomore and Freshman classes, from which the Freshmen emerged the winners of the handsome cup donated by Trainer Hayward.

The cup for the annual inter-class cross-country run, March 30, was won by the Freshman team, composed of Blackaby, Hardesty, Pack (Captain), and Wagner. First, second and third place medals were taken by McClure, Huggins and Pack respectively. The inter-class relay held December 9 was also won by the Freshman team, adding another cup to their collection. The inter-class four-mile relay held April 6 was won by the Junior team, composed of McClure, Reynolds, Martzloff and Zimmerman.

Interclass Basketball

The inter-class basketball championship was won this year by the Sophomore quintet, composed of Roberts, Brooks, Viereck, Rice, and Bradshaw. A full series of games was not played, as the Christmas Holidays interfered, but enough contests were held to settle the winners satisfactorily.

The Sophomore team finished with a perfect score, having defeated both the Freshmen and the Juniors. The Freshman won over the Seniors in their second game, closing the series, and leaving the Sophomores in possession of all principal honors, but with prospects of running them a close race next year.

Interfraternity Basketball

The teams in the Inter-Fraternity League were from the following organizations: Phi Gamma Delta, Kappa Sigma, Delta Sigma, Sigma Nu, Acacia, Dorm Club, Sigma Chi, Avava, Oregon Club, Tawah, Alpha Tau Omega, and Beta Theta Pi.

Those surviving the first elimination round were: Sigma Nu, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Chi, Beta Theta Pi, Oregon Club and Avava. The three winners of the semi-finals played a round robin for the championship. The Kappa Sigmas won the cup in these finals over their opponents, the Sigma Nus and the Beta Theta Pis, closing a very successful basketball season. The Kappa Sigma team was composed of Boylen, Roberts, Still, McAllen, Kimball and Cobb.

A Long Poke

Interfrat Baseball

The interfraternity organization popularly known as the Doughnut League, started out bright and early last spring to repeat its former success as a branch of intercollegiate athletics and a constant source of amusement to the sport loving University public. Owing to the lack of diamonds on which to play, the field had to be turned over to the Varsity team for practice soon after the series had begun. Immediately after Varsity season, however, the Doughnut League re-opened, and from then on the games were staged in rapid order. Some close and exciting games were played, especially the final game for the cup, between Beta Theta Pi and Sigma Nu. When the dust of this last and closely played game had cleared away, the Sigma Nu had won the Doughnut cup, for the second consecutive time, giving them permanent possession of it.

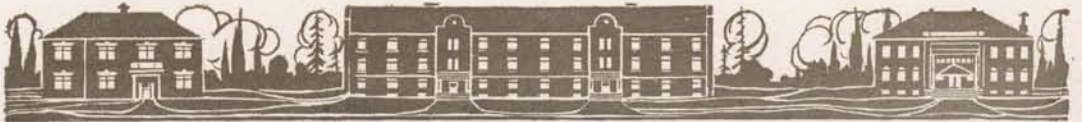

The now permanent Inter-fraternity Athletic Council has arranged a series of games for the present season, and all the prospective competitors for the cup put up by the association are preparing for the fray.

The Girls' Tennis Club at the University of Oregon was organized in the early spring of 1909. Immediately great interest was aroused in the game and definite steps were taken toward the raising of money for building courts. Through the generosity of the Board of Regents, a sum of two hundred dollars was appropriated for this purpose. Three excellent courts were built and were ready for use when the tennis season came.

In 1910 a tournament was arranged for the women of the Faculty and Student Body. Dr. Stuart offered a cup to the winner, who proved to be Miss Oberteuffer. A beginners' tournament was also held, which was never played off, but which created considerable excitement between the Freshmen and Sophomores. Last spring the regular tournament was held. Miss Mildred Bagley was the winner, with Miss Stowe a close second.

This year the membership of the club will be limited and a tryout will be held, which will serve as initiation. Arrangements are also being made to bring the Washington co-eds to Eugene some time next spring to play off a tournament with the Oregon women. This will serve to arouse interest and put the Tennis Club on an established and lasting basis.

Underclass Mix

Ever since that fatal day, now past, but oft recalled, when the "Immortal Twenty-two" of the present Senior class were yanked out on the administration carpet for attempting to place the yearlings of the class of '13 in their proper relations with the University, there has been a deep-felt need of some method by which the incoming class might be "keyed down" and made to "left foot high, you boob," or to "wipe off that smile Frosh."

The present Junior class took it upon themselves to supply this need, and all credit for the institution of the "Underclass Mix" is due that class. Dean Walker, president of 1913, and his committee, conferred with the faculty, and a complete programme was agreed upon.

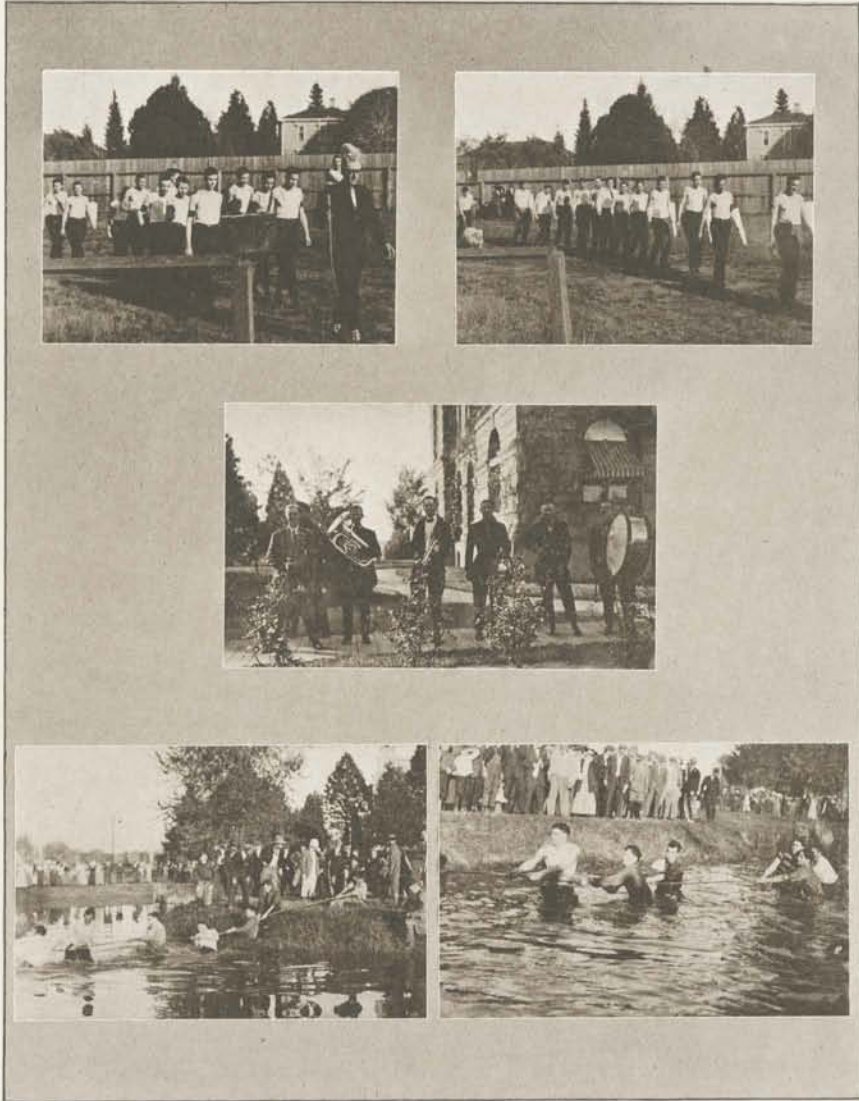

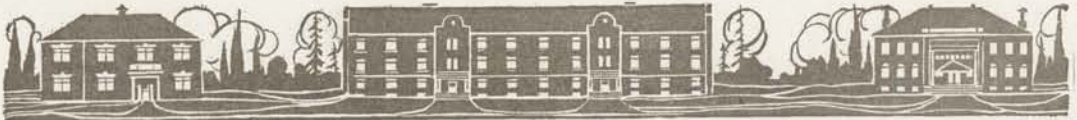

The affair was staged on Kincaid Field, before a throng of excited and enthusiastic onlookers. The "Frosh" entered the field by the Varsity gate, led by a "German Band." The motley crew carried megaphones of variegated colors, through which they punctured the atmosphere with hideous noises. The first year men were closely followed by the "Sophs," who were headed by a costumed funeral corps, bearing a black coffin labeled "1915." After a few yells by the contesting bodies, they took their respective places with the co-eds of the two classes, who had previously entered the decorated grandstand. Then the program began.

The representatives of the Frosh succeeded in winning the eight man half-mile relay race, the hundred yard dash, the potato race and the three-legged race, but they were beaten badly in the two main events of the day, namely: the push-ball contest and the tug of war. The push-ball contest was as spectacular and exciting an event as one would wish to see. The monster leather sphere was placed in the center of the football field, and thirty-five men chosen from the ranks of each class lined up on either side of the ball. At a given signal the scramble began.

The entire program of the first Underclass Mix was a grand success in every particular. So enthusiastic was the student body over the result of the eventful day, that the occasion has been booked on the regular college calendar for the second Saturday after registration in the Fall. Certain it is that this novel mix has firmly entrenched itself with the other distinctive traditions of the University of Oregon.

April Frolic

The April Frolic, the one time when the co-eds prove that they can do without mere man at social functions, is one of Oregon's yearly attractions.

The Frolic held last year was so far ahead of previous ones, and was such a pronounced success, that the April Frolic is now accounted one of the best times the college girl enjoys during her college year. A program, as original and varied as one could wish, was the form the 1911 Frolic took. The costumes were diversified, to say the least, while most of the stunts performed were clever in the extreme. The faculty women, sororities, clubs, and literary societies, each took their turn in entertaining with their particular stunt. After the program, the girls danced and were served with ice cream cones.

This year's affair is scheduled for April 29, and promises to be even better than that of last year. Extreme secrecy is being observed as to this year's event, but a few facts have leaked out before the Oregana goes to press. It has been learned that Frieda Goldsmith is general manager of the affair, Clementine Cutler is head of the refreshment committee, and that Florence Cleveland has charge of the stunts, so all expectations as to the success of the Frolic are very likely to be fulfilled.

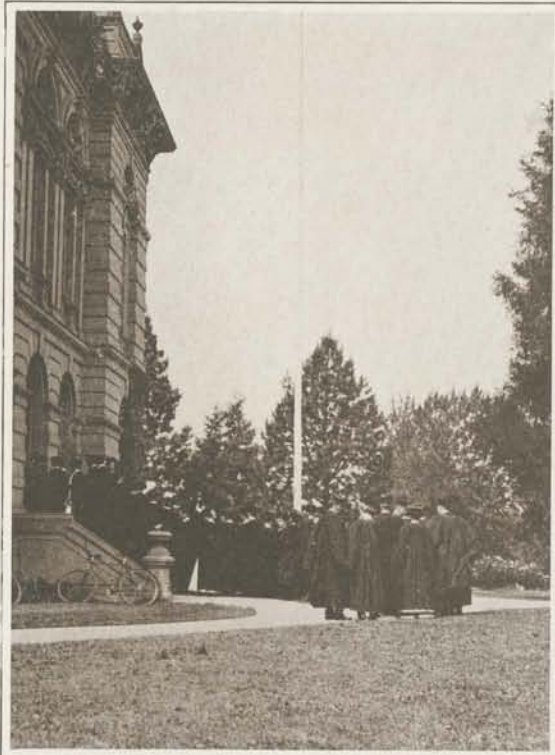

Commencement

Probably the most enjoyable and profitable week of the entire school year, to the faculty and students in general, and to the members of the graduating class in particular, is Commencement Week at the University of Oregon.

Some of the most interesting events of the week are the President's reception, the Failing and Beekman orations, the Senior Commencement Procession.

Ball, the Alumni Supper, and the Fern and Flower procession. The music, both vocal and instrumental, which accompanies these programs, is always of the highest order.

Two of the features of the Commencement exercises last year were the address to the graduating class by President Thomas F. Kane, Ph. D., of the University of Washington, and the piano recital by Miss Lila C. Prosser, presented by the University School of Music.

Plans and arrangements for Commencement this year are being made far in advance of the event. In addition to the regular schedule for the week as carried out in previous years, the University Dramatic Club, under the direction of Professor Reddie, will present, in the open air, Shakespeare's "As You Like It." The play will be staged on the campus on Monday afternoon before Commencement Day, which comes on Wednesday. The graduates from the Medical Department, in Portland, will attend the Commencement exercises in a body. These students and the Faculty will appear on the campus in cap and gown, as well as the Seniors of the University at Eugene.

Sigma Nu

This is a bunch of football players. If you are a possible football player or an athlete of any sort, you can be a Sigma Nu. All that you have to do is to let them know about you. If you were on any athletic team in high school and were not bid Sigma Nu, it was an oversight. It has been rumored that they sometimes play cards and drink ginger ale. This is a mistake; they don't. What they really do is to run a man for every possible student body or class office, whether or not he has any qualifications. Owing to this policy and to the fact that they have reduced pigging to a political science, they have got more class presidents and captains of teams during the past few years than all the other bunches put together. They have several active members who do not live at home. Chief among them is Erceel Kay, who is taking a course in pea pool. He will probably make a good alumnus, if his father pays the tuition for five or six more years. Many Co-eds wear Sigma Nu pins. This does not mean that they are Sigma Nus, but that they went to the Junior prom last year with a Sigma Nu and will probably go with one again this year.

Kappa Sigma

This is the bunch that belongs to Sap Latourette and the two Moores. They took it over three years ago and are the only things about it that have remained the same. They own their new house—that is they will in ten or fifteen years. This is undoubtedly the oldest college fraternity. It is so old that some of its members have forgotten how old it is. Some say that it was founded at the same time the pyramids were, others say that Noah built it when he did the ark, but the majority agree that it was founded at the University of Bologna some time before the flood. This bunch has more members than any other. It has three active chapters each year, one in their house, one coming, and one going. The most unique and convenient thing about this fraternity is their system of pledging men. Their alumni can get together at any time and pledge a man without the knowledge or consent of the chapter. The chief qualifications for membership are a tennis racquet, a set of golf sticks, and an allowance of a hundred per month.

Acacia

This is a wonderful organization. It is undoubtedly the most secret bunch in college. They live in an out of the way place, they are quiet, gentlemanly little boys, they never do anything which is wrong and very little of anything else. They are so secret that only one or two of their men have ever been heard from. They are known chiefly for their members and friends on the faculty, the high grades they get and the pipe courses which they take. If you see a man wearing a funny looking pin and do not know who he is, it is a safe bet that he is an Acacia. They have several good men, however. Funton, Huggins, and Punch Dunlap are all good men,—that is, they are good for nothing.

Beta Theta Pi

This is the finest bunch in college,—that is in its own estimation. There is nothing too good for them if they can get it. If you want to find out how good any of these men are, just ask another Beta and the chances are several thousand to less than one that you will get a complete answer. This bunch was originally organized several years ago in the dormitory and managed to sneak out the back door in May with all the principle student body officers and half the football and track teams. It is only during the last year or two that they have even thought of running a man for office. The Betas at Oregon are considered kleptomaniacs by some people, and it is said that they advocate a Pan-Hellenic to make pledge lifting more honorable. This bunch once thought that they could play basketball, but when they learned different, they quit the league in order to avoid further defeats. When there is any work to be done on the campus, the Beta freshmen are usually conspicuous by their absence. The most prominent member of this bunch is Prokos.

Alpha Tau Omega

This bunch is composed of Dutchmen, Swedes and Freshmen, mostly the latter, who are noted for their long hair and their inability to find green caps. Their one senior is absent most of the time and their numerous frosh are left to the tender mercies of a bulldog and two Jap cooks. Bath tubbing in this house has become a lost art. Their principle men are Alexander Martin III., who bought an automobile last spring, and H. Cohen Viereck, an enthusiastic Y. M. C. A. worker. In order to distinguish themselves from a literary society, the members of this bunch wear their fraternity pins on their ties.

Sigma Chi

This bunch of roughnecks is surrounded on all sides by sorority houses. To offset this influence, they lifted John Kelly from the Delta Sigs last fall. They are the most cosmopolitan bunch in college, with some fifty-seven varieties, ranging from Henrietta Fowler to Briedwell. It also is noted for its lack of freshmen and a little habit they have of taking in second, third, and fourth year men that everybody else has passed up. Last fall a Sigma Chi got off a Springfield car and entered the Gamma Phi house by mistake. To avoid a repetition of this the street car has kindly consented to stop directly in front of the house, where a new walk leads straight to the front door. The Sigma Chis manage to keep themselves prominent by judicious use of the Register, Emerald, and Oregon Journal. A large factor in their success this year has been the work of Mason Roberts, their advisory member, who took charge of the bunch soon after it became too obstreperous for Bob McKenzie.

Phi Gamma Delta

This is the most aristocratic bunch in college. They are a very old bunch, and all come from our very best families. They became a national just this year and have rapidly extended themselves in many directions. They now have more golf and tennis players than any other fraternity. They are also very good dancers. And as for pigging, well, Tom Yord has it all laid out for them on a chart. The schedule provides a date for each underclassman at each house at least twice a week. He has outlined a pigging campaign for them which will last for three years. When they go out with the girls, they are not allowed to talk anything but Fiji. All the girls are crazy about them. Most of the Fijis are down on some prof's class roll, but if you want to find them, do not look in a laboratory or lecture room, but up the race or in a sorority house. The Fijis have a great many distinctive features, which they tell to everyone. One of them is that they wear their fraternity pins day and night. One thing that they don't tell, however, is where they keep their dead soldiers since the school board tore up the Patterson school sidewalk.

Tauah

This is the bunch of Bakerites that have been worrying Bob Kellogg and the Sigma Nus for the last three years. It was organized several years ago through the efforts of Mr. Walls, and has since been reorganized two or three times each year. Its last revival is accredited to A. Evangelist Houston, who has now taken the place formerly occupied by Star Boarder Joe Rothchild. This boarding house is kept up largely by its fratres in urbe, who for various reasons do not care to go home.

Auava

This bunch is known to some as the Sigma Chi Annex. It was organized by Beauty Robison and Les Dobie several years ago. Since then they have spent most of their time in giving concerts, playing penny ante, and petitioning Delta Kappa Epsilon. This year they have been extraordinarily busy pledging enough freshmen to pay the cook's back wages. It is renowned as the home of the probation student Abe Blackman, who has lately donned a pair of spectacles in a vain attempt to look intelligent. It is the one house that still keeps alive the ancient custom of water bag throwing, the Sigma Chis having discontinued it last year subsequent to an accident to Bill Mott.

Delta Sigma

This bunch was originally a select few who joined themselves together under the caption of The Virgin's Club. Later, under the encouragement of a certain gentleman from Washington, they rented a house and established a new branch of the Y. M. C. A. They first attracted notice when Benefield began hanging about stage doors and smoking cigarettes. Last fall they caused quite a stir on the campus when it became known that they were drinking Shasta water in their new house. Since that time they have quickly traversed the stages of good, bad, and worse, and now Clarence Walls smokes three cigars, two pipes, and five cigarettes daily. With their coming nationalization as a topic for conversation, they are rapidly realizing many of their social-climbing aspirations.

Gamma Phi Beta

"Yes, Alonzo, this is a lovely bunch of girls. They live on the corner of Thirteenth and Alder streets, and are just near enough to college to make it possible to get to eight o'clocks and still wear marcel waves. It is also convenient to the fraternity houses and, thanks to their neighbors, they have no trouble keeping in the lime light."

"Yes, Alonzo, they are very kindhearted. Their house has always been known as an asylum for homeless Kappa Sigmas, and on Sunday nights when the crowd is too great, they find the waiting station convenient for handling the overflow. But they are good girls and always do what Mamma Pennell tells them to and never provoke Dr. Stuart by cutting gym. But they are a very shy bunch, Alonzo. Some of their girls are so shy that you have to have an ear trumpet to hear them speak and then you have to guess at what they say."

"If they ever invite you, Alonzo, you must be sure to go. Their Sunday evening dinners are famous for quantity and quality, and it is one of the few houses that does not stop at a pickle and a toothpick. It is a mooted question as to just who is head of this house, Jay Stanfield or Lee, the cook. Recent experience indicates that it is the latter."

Chi Omega

"Gee Whiz! Ferdinand, who are those girls over in that corner of the library, shivering and shaking as though they have the ague? Is there going to be a lawn party on the campus today?"

"Hush! Alonzo, not so loud. Those are the Chi Omegas, and this is their birthday, which they always celebrate on the fifth of April by appearing in conspicuous white raiment. But they are a sensible bunch of girls, even if they do flirt with the grippe and influenza once a year."

"But, Ferdinand, why do so many of them wear two pins? Do they all belong to the senior honor society?"

"Alonzo, my boy, what ignorance! They are all underclassmen and those are Sigma Nu pins. That is their method of getting acquainted with the Sigma Nus."

"And say, Ferdinand, why are those two girls over there always whispering and talking with each other?"

"My goodness, don't you know, Alonzo? That is the Chi Omega sub-fraternity, Nellie Hemenway and Cecil Miller."

"And, Ferdinand, who is that determined looking woman always hovering near with an alarm clock in one hand and a cudgel in the other?"

"Soft, Alonzo, soft! Beware of the Eye that Sees and the Terror that Flies by Night."

Kappa Alpha Theta

"No, Alonzo, it is mean to nickname this fraternity K. A. T.'s. They are nice girls and keep good hours and never fight except in rushing season, but all girls do that, you know. Of course, they get one or two girls now and then by a scratch. But they pick not many, but wisely. They were long distinguished for not having any Sophomores and for awhile it looked as though there would not be any Freshmen."

"Oh, yes, they are very ambitious, Alonzo. Their greatest ambition is to get the Secretary of the Student Body just once,—just to get it away from the Gamma Phi Betas, for they have had it three times and a Theta is just as good as a Gamma Phi any day, isn't she, Alonzo? Of course she is, and if you ask Pat Cecil or Vernon Vawter, they will tell you the same thing,—and they ought to know."

"No, their house hasn't much of a porch, Alonzo. In fact, they purposely neglected to build one."

"But why don't they want a porch, Ferdinand?"

"Why! Alonzo, my boy, they are all nice little girls and never use a porch, and besides, Twelfth is one of the darkest streets in town."

Delta Delta Delta

"No, Alonzo, that green backed book you saw in the library the other day, with three triangles on the cover, was not a treatise on geometry, but the Tri-Delt's magazine. They are so proud of their fraternity that they like to impress others with their superiority and so keep a copy of their magazine on the library reading table. This is not at all necessary, Alonzo, because one glance at the young ladies themselves is enough to convince anyone of their surpassing qualities."

"But, Ferdinand, who is that young chap in corduroys who was reading the magazine? Is he a Tri-Delt?"

"No! No! Alonzo. He is a junior from the Kappa Sigma house, who has only recently affiliated himself with the organization. He is working hard in order to become a more proficient rusher."

"Yes, they are a popular bunch, Alonzo. Lots of men go to their house every Sunday. And do you know, they have the dearest, sweetest house mother?"

Jones Gets Numbers Mixed

Joe—"Hello! Is this 729?"

Voice at Chi Omega House—"Yes."

Joe—"May I speak to Margaret Sheehey, please?"

Voice: "No, Joe, I think you have the wrong number."

"Take nothing from this and you have nothing left," said Dr. Leonard, patting the desert area on his head.

It is because they are so well tailored and such good materials that we can guarantee "every Wooltex" garment for two full seasons.

Hung Up On the Wire

"Hello! 729? Is this you, Miss Dorris?"

"Why this is Mr. Lingenfelter. Wouldn't you like to play golf this afternoon?"

"Oh, busy? Well, how about a show tonight?"

"Oh, yes, your sister will be down; that's fine. Now—is tomorrow night all right for the show?"

"Oh—sure—I see—I'm awfully sorry you're dated. Well—then would Saturday be good for the skating rink?"

"What? Engaged for that, too? Oh, well! Never mind! I'll call up later. Goodbye."
