Foreword

THE University of Oregon is something more than a group of buildings and a campus. It is something more than a curriculum of studies and a faculty. It is something more, even, than a student body. It is a spirit which we feel, but cannot see; which was breathed into the University at its very birth, which has grown through all the years of its usefulness to the state, and which will live on when Deady Hall becomes a memory and when we who are here now have ceased to worry about "posts" and "flunks."

Even had the blows struck at the University in the past proved more potent; had its enemies succeeded in closing its doors, they could not have wholly killed its spirit, burning still in the hearts of its graduates and animating the thought and action of the commonwealth.

To put onto paper this spirit—"Oregon spirit"—has been our difficult purpose in these pages. To you who do not know the University and have never felt its spirit, what is to follow may not appeal. But you who love and revere the University as Alma Mater, who have been a part of its red-blooded democracy; who have fought on its teams or prayed for the men who did long after you were too hoarse to cheer,—you will read and understand.

Greeting

Ye college studes of all degrees!
 Ye boners and ye sons of ease;
 Ye Seniors, sober and sedate,
 Who grind, and sometimes graduate;
 Ye Juniors, mighty, wise, and great,
 (Who did this volume perpetrate);
 Ye Sophs, who labor to appear
 As if ye were not Frosh last year;
 Ye lowly wearers of the green,
 Who should be neither heard nor seen;
 Ye co-eds, radiant as the sun,—
 (At least, they are at Oregon)—
 With whom we spend our happiest hours,
 And rhino, too, for cabs and flowers;
 Ye piggers, who wear collars tall,
 And never stag it to a crawl;
 Ye roughs, who don't attend pink teas,
 Nor call upon sororities,—
 (Except it be to mooch the eats)—
 Who lamp the shows from front row seats,
 And cause the actor folk to duck
 By beaning them with garden truck;
 Ye athletes bold, who strive for fame,
 And draw fat "posts" before the game;
 Ye orators with silver tongues;
 Ye rooters, too, with leather lungs;
 Ye highbrows and ye classroom sharks,
 Who play in luck and pull high marks;
 Ye thirty-three who "also ran,"
 And last semester got the can;
 Ye cruel profs with stony phizzes,
 Who lay for us with dreaded quizzes;
 Ye kind and humane profs as well,
 (Long may such few among us dwell!)
 And last, ye gentle readers all,
 Whose careless glims may chance to fall
 Upon the pages of this book:—
 We trust that to give us the hook
 You'll not be in too great a hurry;—
 But if you do,—well, we should worry!

The University

Historical Sketch of the University

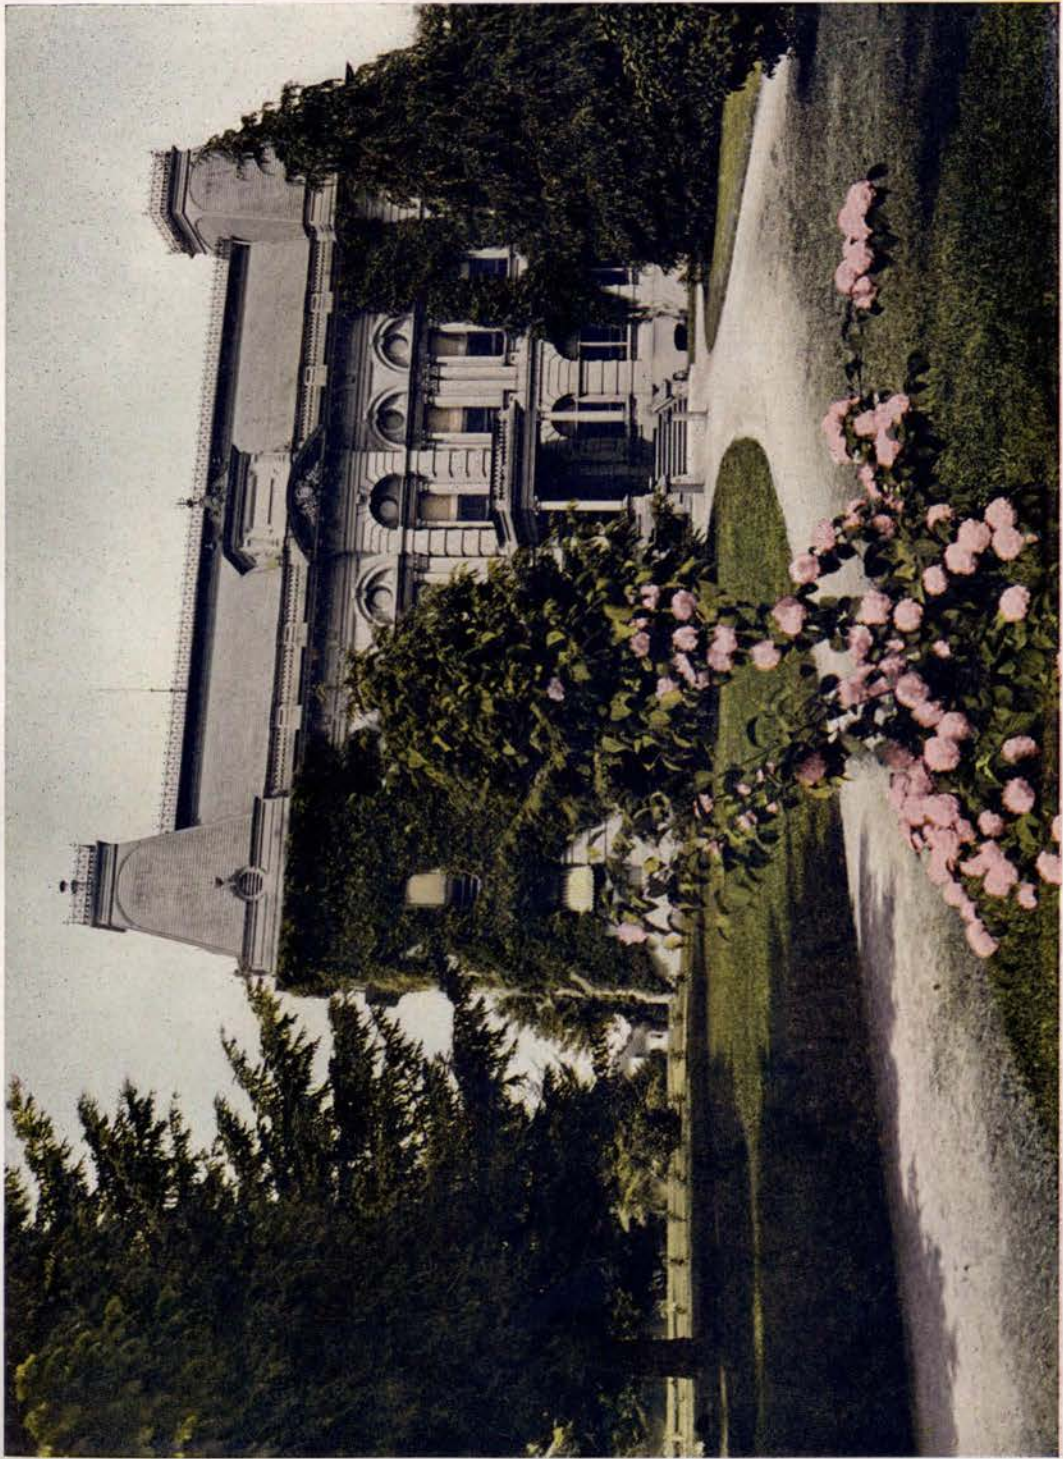

NO one can justly accuse Oregon students of lack of loyalty to Alma Mater, but in the matter of reverence for the past we are, perhaps, open to reproach. We spend our allotted time at the University and attend our classes,—at least, some of them; we try to do our part in her activities; we rejoice at her victories and lament at her defeats; but how often do we stop to consider and appreciate the events which were responsible for the existence of the University, and, indirectly, for our being here?

First of all, be it known that the history of the University of Oregon, rich as it is in noble traditions and associations, is neither ancient nor hoary. Fifty years ago there was no University. On the ground which is now occupied by the campus and buildings stood the log cabin of Hilyard Shaw, an agent of the Hudson's Bay Company, and one of the first settlers in Lane County. The cabin was located near the present site of Villard Hall, beneath the great oaks which stand at the north end of the campus. But this is anticipating somewhat.

Most of us know that there is a suburb lying south of Eugene called College Hill. We have waited down town for a street car, (on days when we were not in a hurry to get home), and wondered why the only car which passed, and the one we didn't want, was labeled "College Crest." In the natural fitness of things, that name should be given to the part of the city in which the University is situated. But long before the University of Oregon was established on the present campus, there was a flourishing institution of learning on College Crest. We say flourishing, because at that time 125 students was a goodly number for a state in which there were scarcely fifty thousand inhabitants all told.

This old college was established by the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in 1855. A two-story wooden building was built to accommodate it on College Crest, then known as College Hill. During the first three years of its existence, however, the college was twice "burned out." The third building was of stone, larger and more substantial than its predecessors. It served as the home of the college until the outbreak of the Civil War in 1860. The financial stringency prevalent at that time, coupled with internal dissension in the church, necessitated the discontinuance of the pioneer institution, but "College Crest" still remains a memorial to an educational movement now forgotten, but which contained the germ of the present University.

Rev. E. P. Henderson had been the President and most of the Faculty of the Presbyterian college during its precarious life, and soon after its dis-offered by the Union University Association. The bill creating the University passed October 19, 1872. Its main provisions were that a board of nine directors was to be appointed, six by the Governor and three by the Association; the University was to be supported at first by the interest from the sale of the 72 sections granted by Congress; and the Association was to provide a site and construct a building for the University, to be turned over to the state January 1, 1874. It was further provided that the value of the property thus conferred by the Association should be not less than $50,000.00, and that it must be accepted by the State Board of Land Commissioners.

The part of the old homestead claim of Hilyard Shaw on which the trader's cabin had stood was selected as the most available site by the Association. The eighteen acres which were purchased had been obtained from their original owner by J. H. D. Henderson, from whom the deed was received.

Now began a campaign of enterprise and sacrifice which reflects enduring credit on the fathers of the University. The legislature had authorized the Lane County court to appropriate thirty thousand dollars toward meeting the terms of the bill. However, strenuous objections were raised in some quarters over the proposed taxation. Accordingly the members of the Union University Association decided to ask no aid from the county, but to rely on their own public spirit and that of their neighbors to raise the amount.

The response showed the patriotism of the pioneers. They contributed not only money, but household articles, farm produce, live stock,—anything which could be turned into cash. In collecting these contributions, Hon. B. F. Dorris and Hon. T. G. Hendricks, the only two living members of the first Board of Regents, were mainly active. Theirs was the difficult task of satisfying the demands of the contractors for money with which to pay the workmen and continue the work of construction. An incident showing the way in which these demands were often met is told by Mr. Hendricks.

“One morning Mr. Dorris and myself arrived at the building to find that the men employed in its construction had refused to go to work unless they were paid their over-due wages. Finally we persuaded them to go to work that day by promising to have sufficient funds to pay their wages in the hands of the contractors before night. Accordingly, Mr. Dorris and I set out in opposite directions, each with a horse and buggy. Before evening I had collected a load of farm produce, and when we met at the building at the appointed time, I found Mr. Dorris leading a cow behind his vehicle. With the proceeds we were able to tide over the pay-day and keep the work moving.”

Mr. Dorris says: “Many farmers willing to help us, but having no money to give, turned over eggs, chickens, vegetables, hogs, sheep, beef cattle, horses and grain in great abundance. We appealed to the several organized granges in the county and received liberal gifts from them. Even the school children were asked to contribute, and I believe they subscribed over $1,000."

In spite of the utmost efforts of these men, the enterprise would not have succeeded had not the legislature extended the time for the completion of the building to January 1, 1877. The Association submitted statements and photographs showing the progress of the work and proving that it was acting in good faith, and had no trouble in obtaining the necessary concession.

In June, 1876, the building being nearly completed, and sufficient subscriptions having been pledged to pay all contracts, the Association invited the State Board of Land Commissioners to make the inspection provided for in the bill. Accordingly, on July 30, 1876, the board inspected and accepted the property.

The first building, Deady Hall, was named in honor of Judge Matthew P. Deady, of Portland, the first President of the Board of Regents. It is still the most striking object on the campus. Perhaps we may not admire its peculiar style of architecture, nor its appointments, but we cannot but revere it as a monument to the sturdiness of the fathers of the University.

The Regents now met to choose a Faculty and provide courses of instruction. John W. Johnson, of Portland, was named as President, and Mark Bailey, of McMinnville, and Thomas Condon, of Forest Grove, as professors in the College of Liberal Arts. In the preparatory department, Mrs. Mary E. Spiller was chosen Principal, and Miss Mary E. Stone, Assistant.

Although the University was now duly established and in operation, it was by no means free from encumbrances. The Association was unable to collect about seven thousand dollars which had been subscribed, and consequently the contractors still held claims against the property for this amount. The visit of Henry Villard, builder of Northwest railroads, solved the problem.

Mr. Villard came to Oregon in 1877 to investigate the possibilities for further development of this country, and he was invited by Judge Deady to inspect the University. Being deeply interested in higher education, he accepted the invitation, and was given an enthusiastic welcome by the Faculty, students, and townspeople. Inquiring into the financial condition of the institution, he was informed of the seven thousand dollar debt, with the result that he cancelled it and enabled the Association to fulfill its pledge to the state.

The story of the first commencement, in 1878, is graphically told by Mrs. Ellen Condon McCornack, the only woman in the first graduating class of five, and still a resident of Eugene.

The exercises, she says, were held in the third story of Deady Hall, which was at that time fitted up as an "auditorium." They were held in the evening of June 14, 1878, and were attended by six hundred people. The program consisted of orations by the students and an address to the class by Judge Dedy. Diplomas were awarded the following: Robert S. Bean, now President of the Board of Regents; Matthew S. Wallis, now living in Eugene; George S. Washburne, deceased; John C. Whiteaker, deceased; and Mrs. McCornack.

1915 OREGANA 1915

What the first Faculty lacked in numbers it made up in personality. President Johnson, during his long administration of seventeen years, made himself a dominant force in the educational field. He was a man of marked mental attainments and pronounced eccentricities. His students tell many stories which demonstrate both characteristics. He could not brook stupidity in his students, and was capable of sarcasm at the expense of offenders which would have shamed the efforts of the most dreaded masters of invective on the present Faculty. He also had a habit which is now, perhaps, more prevalent among students than instructors,—that of chewing tobacco in the class room.

President Johnson at first taught Latin and Greek, but after 1882 confined his attention to Latin. In 1893 he retired from the presidency, but retained his chair in the Faculty. His final retirement in 1898 was the occasion for universal regret and tribute from the thousands of students and friends who had come in personal contact with him.

Equally famous was Dr. Thomas Condon, the first Professor of Geology and Natural History. Before his appointment to the University Faculty, Dr. Condon had been for many years active in the ministry in this state. At the same time he had engaged extensively in geological study and research, and had gathered the valuable collection of specimens which he later presented to the University, and which is now known as the Condon collection. Dr. Condon's eminence as a writer and authority on geological matters is too well recognized to need mention here. He retired from active service on the Faculty in 1895, retaining, however, the position of emeritus professor.

To revert to our historical sketch, we again meet with the name of Henry Villard as a further and even greater benefactor of the University. Not content with his original gift of seven thousand dollars toward eradicating the debt on Deady Hall, in 1882 he gave one thousand dollars toward the establishment of a library. The next year he made his largest gift of fifty thousand dollars toward the endowment fund.

Meanwhile, the student body had far outgrown the capacity of Deady Hall, and the legislature voted the money necessary to erect a second building. It was completed in 1885, and in recognition of the generosity of the University's benefactor, was called Villard Hall.

Important changes in the curriculum were also taking place. The Law School was established in Portland in 1884, and in the same year the normal department in Eugene was abolished. In 1887 the Medical School was established in Portland.

The next building erected was the Men's Dormitory, completed in 1893. The brick citadel now used as a Women's Gymnasium, but formerly monopolized by the men, was built in 1897. The third recitation building, McClure Hall, was finished in 1900. It was named in honor of Professor S. E. McClure, who was a member of the Faculty from 1887 until his death in 1897.

Another important step in the raising of the standard of the University was the abolishment of the preparatory department in 1904. Until that year the "preppers" rubbed elbows with the regular collegians in the class-room and on the campus, but the growth of high schools all over the state made it no longer necessary to offer preparatory courses here.

Important additions to the equipment of the University have been made in the last eight years. The Library building, now officially known as Johnson Hall, in honor of the first President, was finished in 1906. In 1908 the large additional tract south of the old campus, on which Kincaid Athletic Field is now situated, and where future expansion in buildings and grounds will take place, was purchased. Engineering Hall was built in 1909, and the present Men's Gymnasium in 1910.

Three men have occupied the presidential chair since the retirement of President Johnson in 1893. Charles Hiram Chapman served from 1893 to 1899, and is now an editor of the Portland Oregonian. Frank Strong succeeded Dr. Chapman, and in 1902 left to accept the presidency of the University of Kansas. Prince L. Campbell has held the position since 1902.

No history of the University, however brief, would be adequate without mention of the legislative crises through which the institution has passed. We will not here rehearse the numerous fights, successful and otherwise, which have been waged from time to time in the state legislature to supply the bare necessities of the University. However, the two important referendum campaigns in which the very life of the University has been at stake, and in which she has been victorious, should be recalled.

February 11, 1908, the legislature passed a bill introduced by Representative Eaton, of Lane County, appropriating $125,000.00 annually for the maintenance of the University. Opponents of the bill, many of whom were sincere in their conviction that it was inexpedient or that the state should not support higher education, and many of whom were actuated by motives of sectional jealousy and personal prejudice, circulated petitions invoking the referendum on the appropriation. The campaign was hard fought, but the alumni and friends of the University succeeded in justifying the measure in the eyes of the voters, and it carried by a safe margin June 1, 1908.

But this appropriation barely provides for the running expenses of the University, and makes no allowance for its natural growth. The last legislature, recognizing the handicap under which the institution was laboring in comparison with other state universities through lack of facilities, voted an appropriation of $75,000.00 for repairs on the old buildings and another of $100,000.00 for the erection of a modern fire-proof administration building.

Immediately the enemies of the University adopted their old weapon, that of the referendum, to annul these appropriations and thus eventually destroy the institution. The issue in the late campaign, therefore, was in reality whether the state should continue to support higher education or repudiate it altogether and consign its sons and daughters to other states or to private schools for their training.

In the campaign, citizens, alumni, and students, rallied to the cause of the University as never before. It would be impossible to enumerate all the forces which combined to win the victory. The Oregon Educational League and the People's Higher Education League, two powerful organizations of representative citizens, with headquarters in Portland, were largely responsible for the result. The Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs also rendered aid which was far-reaching in its effect on the vote cast by the newly-enfranchised women of the state. The Portland and Eugene Commercial Clubs stood by the University loyally.

The press of the state was almost unanimous in its support of the appropriations; so much so that it is estimated that 99 per cent of the publicity given the campaign was favorable to the University. Finally, the students themselves, by their personal work and their letter-writing campaign, did much toward saving their alma mater from disaster. The vote on November 4, 1913, proved that the people have at last awakened to the usefulness of the University to the state and the necessity for its preservation. Both measures carried by a vote of almost two to one.

Next year there will be another chapter to add to the history—the story of the enlarging of the facilities of the University by the addition of a splendid building and other much needed repairs, and of the opening of a greater era of prosperity and service to the state than it has yet known.

President Campbell

Prince L. Campbell, the fourth President of the University of Oregon, was born on a farm in Platte County, Missouri, near Kansas City, October 6, 1861. When he was four years old his family came west, travelling up the Missouri river by steamboat, and settling at first at Helena, Montana. They remained there four years, and then moved to Monmouth, Oregon.

President Campbell received his early education at the Christian College at Monmouth, of which his father was President, and which was later superseded by the State Normal School. From this institution the present head of the University received his Bachelor's Degree in Arts in 1879. During the ensuing three years he was a member of the Monmouth College faculty, and in 1882 went east to enter Harvard University. He attended Harvard three years, and was graduated in 1886 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. As an interlude to his college course, President Campbell spent one year, 1885, as a reporter on the Kansas City Star, and he looks back upon this experience as a profitable digression from his otherwise unbroken career as an educator.

Returning to Oregon after his graduation from Harvard, he engaged in the teaching profession until he was chosen President of the Monmouth Normal School in 1891, filling virtually the same position his father had held years before. From Monmouth he was called to the Presidency of the University of Oregon in 1902, and has served in that capacity continuously since that time.

In addition to his degrees earned in college, President Campbell has twice been awarded the honorary degree of LL. D., by Pacific University in 1912, and by the University of Colorado in 1913.

No tribute to President Campbell could speak more eloquently than the affection and respect in which he is held by those who have known him as a friend and instructor. His personal interest in the students is always kindly and sympathetic, and his loyalty to the University sincere. In every private and public act he stands for higher ideals of manhood and womanhood, for better citizenship, and for the type of intellectual life which shall be of lasting value to the state as well as to the individual.

IN MEMORIAM

CLAUDE BRYANT McDONALD

Born October 13, 1894.

Died September 28, 1913, as the result of an accidental fall in the University gymnasium.

Claude McDonald was a student of the University of Oregon scarcely two weeks, yet in that time he had endeared himself to all who knew him and had given promise of a career of credit to himself and to the University. His untimely death was the saddest incident of the college year.

Senior History

A GREAT epoch in the history of the University is drawing to a close. The illustrious class of 1914 is nearing graduation. We have surmounted many difficulties, attained the heights, and have arrived at that exalted position from which we may look back upon our accomplishments with a sense of satisfaction and pride, and modestly say of ourselves, "some class."

Since our earliest entrance within the portals of the University our course has been one of the greatest brilliancy, dignity and success. Our first act in that mysterious realm of college life, the donning of the verdant green, significant of our lowly position, was accomplished with much dignity on our part; nor did we feel as other classes have felt in the past, that the cap was a humiliation, but that rather it was an honor. The discarding of the caps was accomplished with equal credit, for in offering them up to be burned on a funeral pyre, we set the custom which has been followed every Junior week-end.

Early in the game we had gained the true Oregon spirit, in spite of the fact that as a class we, according to the decree of the Faculty, escaped icy baths in the mill-race and other forms of hazing. It was ordained by Fate that the first-year men of our sister institution, the Oregon Agricultural College, should come to Eugene and endeavor to show us the ins and outs of football. But, true to our reputation, we looked them over and decided that a score of 29 to 0 in our favor would be about right.

Our next chance to show the University the stuff of which we were made came when the Freshman bonfire was built, and although it may not have been the greatest of all fires, it is an undisputed fact that more classes were cut, more tar and oil spilled over the builders, and more profanity used in its construction than ever before or since in the history of bonfires. But, even so, such notables as Sam Friendly, Gordon Moores, and "Beauty" Robison, spurred on to greater efforts by its magic spell, brought tears to the eyes of the multitude and determination to the hearts of the team, which bore fruit in another victory over O. A. C. the following day.

Our presence has always been felt in student activities. During our four years we have furnished seven letter men to football, seven to baseball, five to basketball, and three to track. Three of our members have debated on varsity teams, and the class has contributed fully half of the total strength of the Glee Club each year. Nor have the women been outdone by the men. In co-ed activities, the 1914 women have always played a prominent part.

All three co-ed debaters last year came from the 1914 ranks. It was due to the efforts of our fair contingent that the Women's Glee Club, which was so successful in its recent stormy expedition into the haunts of Mr. Parkison, was organized.

But is that all? Nay, not so. Just look at our last year's Oregana. When has Junior Week-End so successfully been carried on as last year? And when has there ever been such a relay team as represented the Senior class last spring? The Women's League was organized under the guidance of our worthy representatives. The Student Council, which is the first step toward a greater Student Body, a greater Oregon, and "for the ultimate good of the University," was promulgated under our watchful care.

But enough of idle fancy. The real strength of 1914, after all, lies in its internal harmony. Good fellowship, freedom of thought and expression, and loyalty to Oregon, have characterized our associations with one another from beginning to end. Truly, our strength has been in organization, and with the same spirit we are looking forward to our different class reunions. Our loyalty and interest in the University will not cease with graduation, but we will always be ready to assist in any way possible toward promoting the welfare of Alma Mater.

—ALVA R. GROUT.

OH, OREGON

There's a pretty little village
 In a valley in the West;
 Past the village runs a river
 Fed by snows on mountain crest;
 By its banks there stands a college,
 Full of dignity and fame,
 And the 'Varsity of Oregon's
 The institution's name.

Chorus:

Oh, Oregon! Oh, Oregon!
 The 'Varsity, the only one!
 It takes you as a Freshman in,
 And changes all except your skin,
 Then shakes you freely by the fin,
 And turns you out in life to win,
 Oh, Oregon! Oh, Oregon!

For her sons are just as noble,
 And her daughters just as fair,
 As the noblest and the fairest
 That e'er breathed the living air;
 And her spirit's always loyal,
 And we'll have the world to know,
 That the bonds can ne'er be broken
 Formed in dear old U. of O.

—Irving Mackay Glen, '94.

ALMA MATER SONG.

When the spell of youth is o'er us,
 Through our college days so bright,
 Alma Mater stands before us,
 Pointing upward to the light.
 There's a pride and love that fills us
 As we view her noble past,
 And her famous spirit thrills us
 To defend her to the last.

Refrain:

Oregon, thou fairest daughter
 Of the western sea!
 Loved and honored Alma Mater,
 Hail, all hail, to thee!

Every freshman knows the story
 Of the vict'ries she has won,
 And the teams, that for her glory
 Gave their best to Oregon.
 When we thought they were defeated,
 Then the spirit seemed to stir,
 And the good old cheer, repeated,
 Made them fight and win for her.

When life's sterner duties call us
 From the scenes we love so well,
 In our hearts, whate'er befall us,
 Still the memories will dwell.
 Our devotion will be greater
 As the fleeting years go past,
 And the love of Alma Mater
 Will inspire us to the last.

—Lee Hendricks, '15.

THE TOAST

Here's to U. of O.!
 May she ever grow,
 Prosper and flourish, truth ever nourish;
 Through her may blessings flow!
 Here's to the varsity!
 May she ever be
 Loved by each son and loved by each daughter
 Through all eternity.
 Here's to our football, here's to our track team,
 Here's to each hero on the list;
 Here's to our spouters, here's to our shouters,
 Here's to the girls they've kissed.
 Olee mucke-i! Olee varsiti!
 Here's osky wow wow! Here's whisky wee wee!
 Here's Oregone-i!
 Flaunt her banners high and unceasingly;
 Bring trophies of cups and flags to lay on her altars;
 Honor be to her name increasingly,
 And cheer every onward step she takes.

HAIL TO OREGON.

There is a name most dear to us,
 On this far western shore,
 A name not old, though clear to us,
 Shall live forevermore.
 There is a college, too, we love,
 And so you all shall know,
 That when we sing for Oregon,
 We sing for U. of O.

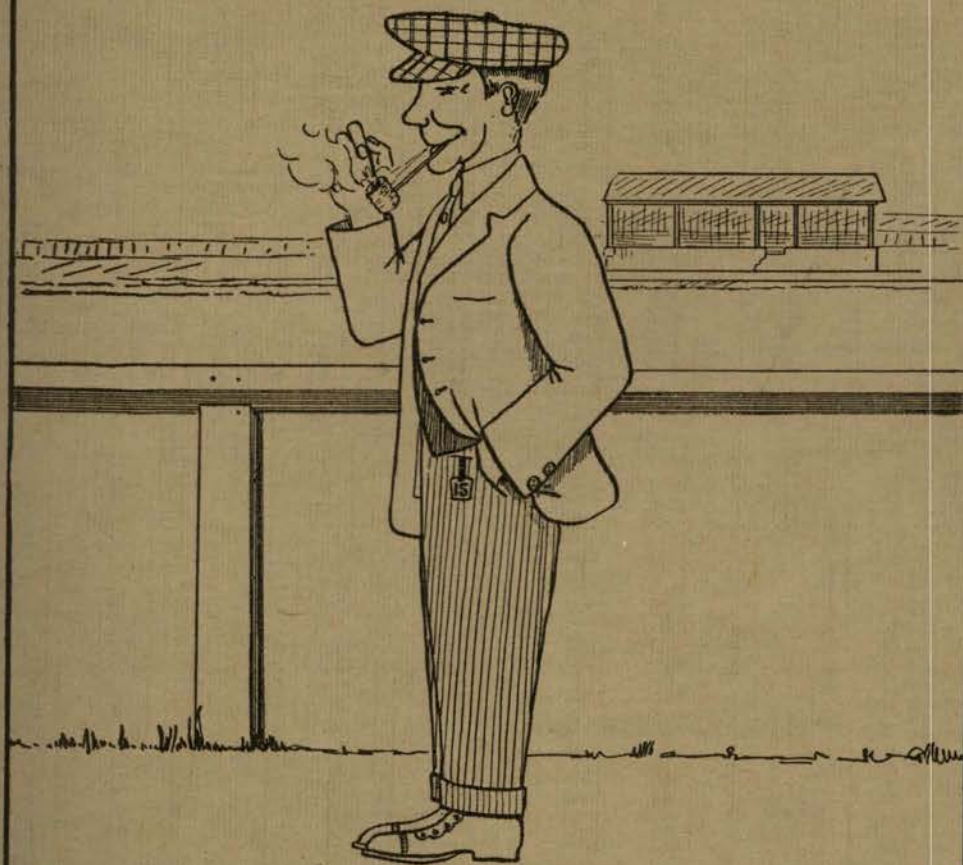

Chorus:

Then hail! Boys, hail! for old Oregon!
 And hail for the lemon yellow;
 We'll fall in line, and drink a stein,
 We like a jolly good fellow.
 So lift your voice, her praises sing,
 Let all with one endeavor,
 Give three long rousing rah, rah, rahs!
 For Oregon, our Alma Mater.

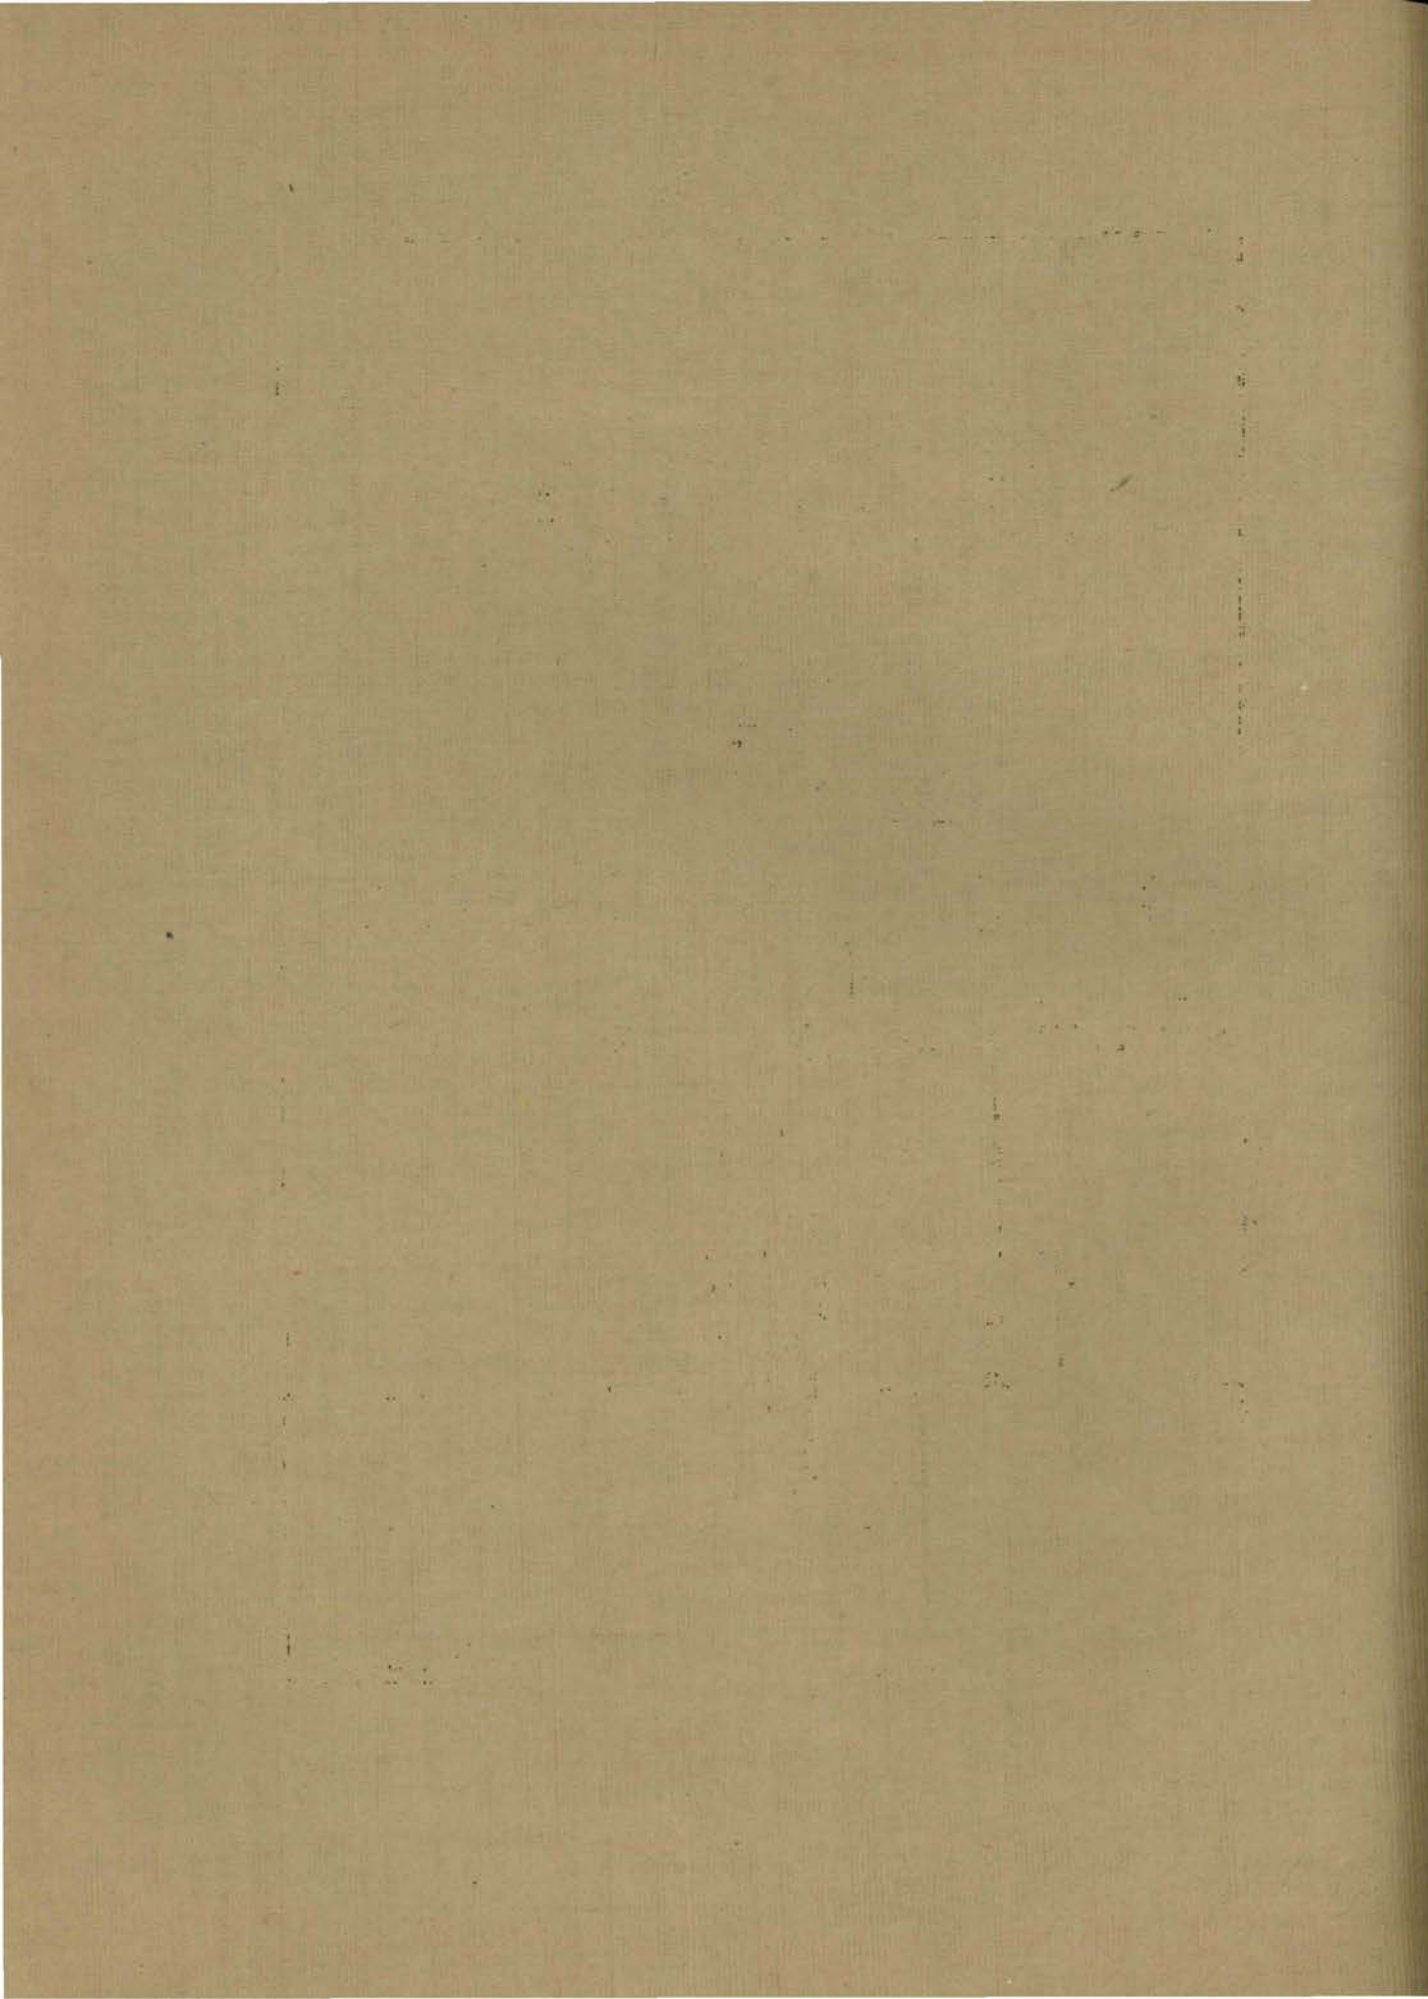

When college days draw near their close
 And students say their last farewell,
 Then memories most tender are
 For days they've loved so well.
 When sadly then they leave the halls,
 Which well they've learned to know,
 How sweet and true their thoughts will be
 Of dear old U. of O.

JUNIOR WEEK-END—(See Junior Week-End write-up.)

Junior History

WES, indeed; the Class of 1915 has been the recipient of many gifts in various forms to which we all point with pride. Was it not our good fortune to receive a beautiful floral tribute at our Freshman class hour, after our Frosh Trio had warbled its way to glory? This, too, was presented by a Junior girl,—one of those favored members of her sex whom God has so benevolently endowed with all the graces and virtues. Then did we not have a whole stock of groceries placed at our disposal during our class hour this year? But did we dodge the flying missiles and retreat? No! We stood our ground, as becomes heroes, and won out.

Verily, this is a world of give and take. As a class, we have given our full measure to the different activities of our beloved University. Although we are exceeded by all the other three classes in numbers, we yield precedence to none of them in ability. We are great in quality, rather than in quantity. Witness our athletes: not numerous, but all stars of the first magnitude. And no one will deny that our orators, debaters, and journalists, form a constellation which outshines all others in the college firmament. Three of this year's debating team are Juniors, and we are represented on the Glee Club by four nightingales.

As regards class teams, we have had no superiors. We won the class basketball honors in 1913, the inter-class football title in 1912, and tied the illustrious seniors when they arrogantly challenged us last fall. In the inter-class relay we won first place in 1912 and 1913, and were a close second this year.

We are the instigators of the Junior institution of the corn-cob pipe, and of the Junior masque, which was so successful this year.

All in all, we have an enviable record, and when we leave Oregon one year from this June it will be with a feeling of sorrow mingled with satisfaction; sorrow, inasmuch as we will be leaving the finest college on earth, and satisfaction, insofar as we will be able to say, "We have done our best,—angels could do no more."

—BERTRAND S. JERARD.

1915 OREGANA 1915

It is fitting that the alphabetical list of Juniors should be headed by Luton Ackerson, for he leads the class in scholarship, with no competition. Ackerson almost won a Rhodes scholarship this year. He is conspicuous as being one of the few Juniors who stand any show to grab a sheepskin.

We don't know much about Callie B. Beck, except that she came all the way from Eugene a few years ago to attend the University. She has been attending it ever since, and that's more than some of us can say.

Anson G. Allen owns the town of Astoria. When "Anse" walks down one of the streets of that Scandinavian settlement the mothers bring out their infants to receive his blessing. In Eugene Anse leads a quiet and orderly life, and can be seen taking the "rest cure" on the Sigma Nu porch most any sunny afternoon.

The next map in our rogue's gallery is that of Francis E. Beebe, another Eugene product. A quiet, reserved young man, he has won a warm place for himself in the hearts of the Faculty.

Roy C. Andrews is the worst flirt in the Junior class. Roy is "the glass of fashion and the mould of form."

Ah-ha! Here we have Morris, ("Buck") Bigbee, who came from Albany, and is still trying to live it down. "Buck" is very versatile, and is prominent in student activities, batting .095 in baseball and .998 in pigging. He is known as the Father of the Junior Masque, and Mother of the Delta Gamma house.

No, gentle reader, LaVerne Apperson isn't a girl, in spite of his front name. Appie is the official drummer boy of the class.

If there is one attribute of true greatness which the Juniors possess, it is stainless character. We used to point to John Black as one of our shining examples. Now, alas! John is our "Black" sheen. It all happened one night at the Rex, and a sprightly souhrette was the cause of John's downfall.

Earl, ("Spid"), Blackaby, known as the Human Sphinx, is the modest violet of the Junior garden. Nevertheless, like all A. T. O's, "Spid" has developed into a politician, and in a Junior meeting last March he ran for the position of Class Representative to the State Oratorical Contest, and was victorious by a vote of 5 to 0.

Ray Bryant is a product of Pacific University, but a perfect gentleman, Ray is one of our big athletes. He always plays in the backfield—both in football and in his studies.

Lewis Alexander Bond was the youngest man (?) who ever entered the University. He has since discarded knee trousers and has begun to grow up. He is a member of a distinguished family of scholarship and tennis sharks.

Gertrude Buell is more or less widely known as Edith's kid sister, and former aspirant to the title of College Widow. However, she is settling down wonderfully and will soon be one of our most sedate maidens.

Tom Boylen Jr., otherwise known as the "Umatilla Jackrabbit," is one of the brightest lights in the class, both by reason of his hair, which is redder than the rag which they wave in a bull fight, and his "rep," which has nothing whatever to do with the Mexican sport. "Tommy" stars in basketball and track, acts as valet to Dean Walker, pigs at all the sorority houses in rotation, and runs the Pendleton Round-Up each fall.

John Clark Burgard is the next Junior who posed for Brother Tuttle. John is a shy, bashful lad, who abhors the company of the opposite sex.

Clarence E. Brotherton is noted for his amiable disposition and his gay, vivacious ways. "Bro" warbled his way to a berth on the Glee Club this year, and was one of the cogs in Hank Fowler's machine—until it slipped a cog.

Lucile Cogswell is something of a shark in her studies, but outside of that we don't know a thing against her.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Genevieve Cooper holds the distinction of being the whole Kappa Kappa Gamma Junior class. We can't say where she hails from, because she attended prep school in Independence, Albany, Salem, and Los Angeles, so we'll let those four burgs scrap it out among themselves.

Walter R. Dimm is the Richard Mansfield of the local stage. While still in his cradle he started repeating lines from Shaw, Ibsen and the other masters. We all like Walt, and would do anything for him,—except see him act.

You might think Georgiana Cross, but she really isn't. She is very diminutive, so we call her Georgie for short. (Get those puns? Aren't we the sly rascals?)

It was a sad day for Oregon when Lawrence Dinneen decided to cast his lot with Reed College at the end of his Freshman year here, and it was a great day when he returned to the fold last fall. All further eulogy is useless—ask Lawrence about it.

Ralph Dawson is the ladies' man of the class. They all fall for his curly hair. It really is too bad he is so dissipated.

Thomas G. Donaca comes from Lebanon, gol ding it, and was the Beau Brummel of that village. Thomas believes that variety is the spice of life, so he goes to college a year, and then lays off a year.

The accompanying picture does only faint justice to the charms of Bryant T., ("Bush"), DeBar. Bryant is a Sigma Nu, although a resident of Eugene. It makes it nice for "Bush," too, because on nights when he can't go home he can always find a haven at the Sig house.

James T. Donald needs no introduction to the public,—he speaks for himself. Like all Juniors, Jimmy is a glutton for work.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Ben F. Dorris Jr.

Carlyle Geisler first stuck around here three years ago. Last year he stuck around again. He is still sticking around, and we hope he will ditto next year.

Ben Dorris is Manager of the Oregoniana, and Ruth is manager of Ben. She also presides over the Chi Omega-Fiji annex on Ninth street.

"What's in a name?" said the poet. For instance, is Gene Good? Not to speak of. Gene earned an unusual distinction last spring, though. He was chosen as the roughest man in the class for the office of sergeant-at-arms over eight opponents, all very rough. And now they've impeached Gene for neglect of duty. Such is fate.

Francis Boyce Fenton is muchly related. Fentons of both sexes are thick at Oregon, and Boyce is the pride of the family. He is not as athletic as Carl, but when it comes to warming the upholstery in a sorority house, Boyce is invincible.

Marsh H. Goodwin has been busy all year at the pipe task of prying the Eugene business men loose from their iron wafers in consideration of a few inches of publicity in the Emerald. Incidentally, Marsh assisted at the birth of Iota Chi.

Ira E. Gaston—with the accent on the Gas—is another intellectual Sandow. It's too bad we can't all pull down "H" cards, but we're proud of Ira, anyway.

Fred A. Hardesty leads a busy life. He is constantly annoyed by friends who demand that he run for some office. Occasionally Fritz condescends to run,—about once or twice a semester.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Edna M. Harvey is not given to roughhousing, but you ought to see the racquet she raises in tennis. (There we go again.)

Maurice B. Hill is not a very big hill, but a hard one to climb. "Spud" is the original orator and statesman. Watch his smoke,—you can see it rising from the bunch around the car station almost any time.

Henry W. Heidenreich is known far and wide as the "guy" who almost grabbed Jack the Grabber. Hank can sing basso profundo, and throw the discus, too, and he's a regular devil among the wimmin.

Willard R. Houston is the next subject of the camera man's attentions. Willard came to us only this year.

Leland G. Hendricks.

This is Thornton ("Shorty") Howard, who possesses a marked artistic temperament. Like all true artists, "Shorty" has an aversion to menial labor.

William B. Heusner is noted for his musical ability and his delicious German brogue. If you live in a sorority house and hear strains of melody outside the window about 2:00 A. M., it's a safe bet that a bucketful of water or any similar token will reach Bill. He is the composer of the song, "There's a Girl in the Heart of Maryland."

The Oregana offers a standing reward to anyone who can pronounce this young man's name. He spells it Anthony Jaureguy. Anthony is Treasurer of the Junior class. Take a good slant at his phiz, fellow-classmen, and give him a wide berth.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Stop! Look!! Listen!!! We have before us the portrait of our mighty potentate, none other than Bertrand S. Jerard. Everybody in college knows Bert—although some of the sororities pretend they don't. Let 'er buck!

Carolyn S. Koyl is one of our brightest members. No, Mabel, she and Charley aren't sisters,—we mean she isn't a sister to Charley.

Roy Johnson, the pride of Gresham, is a quiet young man. "Still waters run deepest," though.

William E. Lackey is another of our demure members. "Bill" sure has "pep," though; you'll find him at every class meeting.

Florence O. Kendall is just that "uncertain, coy, and hard to please," that she has struggled along clear to her Junior year without giving her heart away—thereby establishing a record for Oregon, we believe.

Alfred L. Lee, ("Shorty"), has been hanging around college so long that nobody remembers when he first arrived. We like to have General Lee around, though, because he has the most winning smile you ever saw.

Katherine J. Kirkpatrick is a big name for a little girl, but it serves her right. Kate is a club woman, being a member of the Choral Club, the Eutaxian Society, the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, and about 'steen others.

If we were not naturally sober-minded, and above slap-stick comedy, and somebody asked us what is the Junior class flower, we might answer with a pun. Far be it from us,—but this is a likeness of Beatrice Lilly, anyway.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Herbert Webster Lombard is a well meaning youth, but a chronic orator. Bert will make a speech on the slightest provocation.

Millar McGilchrist came from Salem—and showed his good judgment in doing so. Millar divides his time between wielding the curling iron and bringing Emerald advertisers to bay.

The sight of Elton Loucks' countenance moves us to poetry:
 "Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
 Like a Colossus, and we petty men
 Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
 To find ourselves dishonorable graves."

Charley McMillan was a good boy, until he went to Garibaldi. There he fell for the temptations of a great city. Charley lives at the Delt house when he is in Eugene.

Here is a picture of the best Mann in the Junior class. Her other name is Margaret. (Here, here! This has gone too far.)

Sam Michael, manager of the Michael Collection Agency, is undoubtedly the busiest, best known and most avoided man in college.

Graham McConnel was bequeathed to us by the 1914 class. In spite of the fact that he looks like a preacher, Mac leads a fast life,—especially during track season.

Hood River is noted for its splendid fruit. For instance, here is Roger Moe. We shouldn't joke about Roger, though, because he is with us no Moe.

1915 OREGANA 1915

We claim we have one real athlete in the class, anyway. Vera Moffat is Dr. Stuart's pride.

Nellie Newland dotes on literature. She loves to absorb the nourishing thoughts which are so generously passed out in those courses.

Merle S. Moore lives in Eugene, gets his lessons regularly, and pays his class dues. We are overcome. We can say no Moore.

James A. Pack Jr., kept the co-eds in a nervous tension all the first semester because he did not return to college. However, James is with us once more, with his deeds of athletic prowess, his genial smile, and his two weeks' hirsute growth.

Josephine Moorhead must be awful bright. She comes down to Eugene every Monday and goes to college one day, and then beats it back to Junction City. Most of the rest of us have to attend five days, and then they tie the can to us. We wonder how Joe does it. Maybe she has Moorhead than we have.

"If you have tears, prepare to shed them now." We mourn for a beloved fellow-classman, a youth of promise cut off in his very prime. For a few brief months Donald P. Gue was among us, his cheery smile lighted our thorny path. And then,—boo, hoo! No, reader, he did not die. Far worse, he got married.

Edith Moxley is one of the fairest members of the class. We'd say something else, but we can't make a pun out of her name.

Hazel Barta-Pague was the other party in the above transaction. Seriously, we liked both Don and Hazel, and wish them all happiness and prosperity. Who'll be next?

1915 OREGANA 1915

Lois Parks, of Junction City. No, we don't mean she'll be the next, but her name happens to follow, according to the alphabet.

L. H. Purdy comes from Lewiston, Idaho, which is somewhere near the North Pole. When a man signs his initials, instead of his given name, he is an old leaguer.

Johnny Parsons is the idol of the sporting world, and the idle of the University as well. Johnny is about the best football player this University has seen for many moons, we claim, and like all Juniors, he's a good fellow. For the rest, we refer you to the Athletic Section.

Rolla E. Ralston was our class treasurer, but he has given up the position.

Harlan Peffly, of Boise, Idaho, is affectionately known as "Piffles." His specialties are distance running and photography.

Mary F. Ramage is another Eugenic product. We never knew there were so many families in Eugene until we started writing this collection of gems.

Robert A. Pratt is another of the Eugene delegation. Eugene furnishes us some of our best students.

Mildred Riddle comes from LaGrande, the place where Grady, Batley, and other local celebrities were nurtured. Also, she's the only representative of the class in the Beth Reah house.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Herbert ("Buddy") Ryan is the most distinguished Hibernian in the class. Bud, like his namesake of the Portland Beavers, is a wicked man with a baseball bat, as he demonstrated in the interfraternity games last spring.

Lila M. Sengstake is another present from the 1914 class. Verily, she is some Young lady.

Here is another of our modest, unassuming things, A. P. Scholl. But are we not all of a shy and backward nature? No one dares deny it, unless it be an envious Senior.

Velma Sexton's last name sounds rather grewsome, but when you know her she doesn't remind you at all of a cemetery.

Charlotte S. Sears is one of the Junior twins. A good pair to draw to.

J. Albert Shelton is another of the patriarchs of the University. Classes may come and classes may go, but he goes on forever. Stay with it, Al, you'll graduate yet.

Ruth W. Sears is Charlotte's sister. The Faculty will be glad when they graduate. They are both awful cut-ups.

We hereby propose Lucile Shepherd for class President; she ought to make a good leader of the flock.

1915

Gretchen Sherwood bravely came back to us this semester. Gretchen's favorite hymn now is, "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder."

Lyle Steiwer is a mere slip of a girl, but we couldn't do without her at that.

What shall we say in praise of Rose Sieler? We pulled that flower pun once before. Anyway, Rose would be an ornament to any garden,—and she isn't plucked yet, either.

We all look up to Augustus Jessup Strang. His thoughts are always lofty—at least, the place where they ought to be is. Gus is known and beloved by everybody in college,—especially the co-eds.

Franklin W. Staiger, the rotund and bewhiskered Spanish linguist, is a man of varied accomplishments. He plays the mandolin to perfection, and to several of the other girls as well. Franklin is also famous for his marked resemblance to Napoleon. Staig has had only one close shave,—and that was when he fell into the mill-race while risking his life to save some drowning friends.

Our springs of poetic fancy are running dry, but we'll say that Miss Cora Truman, of Eugene, is a typical Junior maiden,—which means that she's perfect.

Beulah A. Stebno is the Maude Adams of Oregon. She is one of the leading ladies with Prof. Reddie's troupe.

Ernest E. Vosper is the self-appointed jester of the University. Somebody ought to buy Ernie a cap and bells and a cloak of motley. Watch him at any large gathering, such as a basketball game or dance. He's just like a trained monk,—as soon as the music starts to play, he begins to cut up.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Lawrence E. Warner spends most of his time playing basketball in "Bill" Hayward's establishment. Cheer up, Larry, you'll make those Gym hours yet.

Thank goodness! We're on the last lap. It leaves a pleasant taste, though, to close this series of crisp and breezy biographies with one about Betsy Wooten. Her chief claim to notoriety is that she's Emma's sister.

James L. Watson is a studious and business-like lad who sets us all a good example. You've all seen James bustling about the campus with a young library under his arm.

J. Albert Baker donned a sombrero and a dignified air last fall and tried to pose as a Senior. However, the Faculty was next to J. Albert, and now he has changed his rank to that of a Junior, for which he is to be congratulated.

"Don't get fresh wit me, bo, see? I'm de toughest guy in de woild."—Quotation from J. Andrew Wells' line of talk.

Helen Werlein is a great "jiner." She is a member of almost all the societies to which a co-ed is eligible,—and that's several.

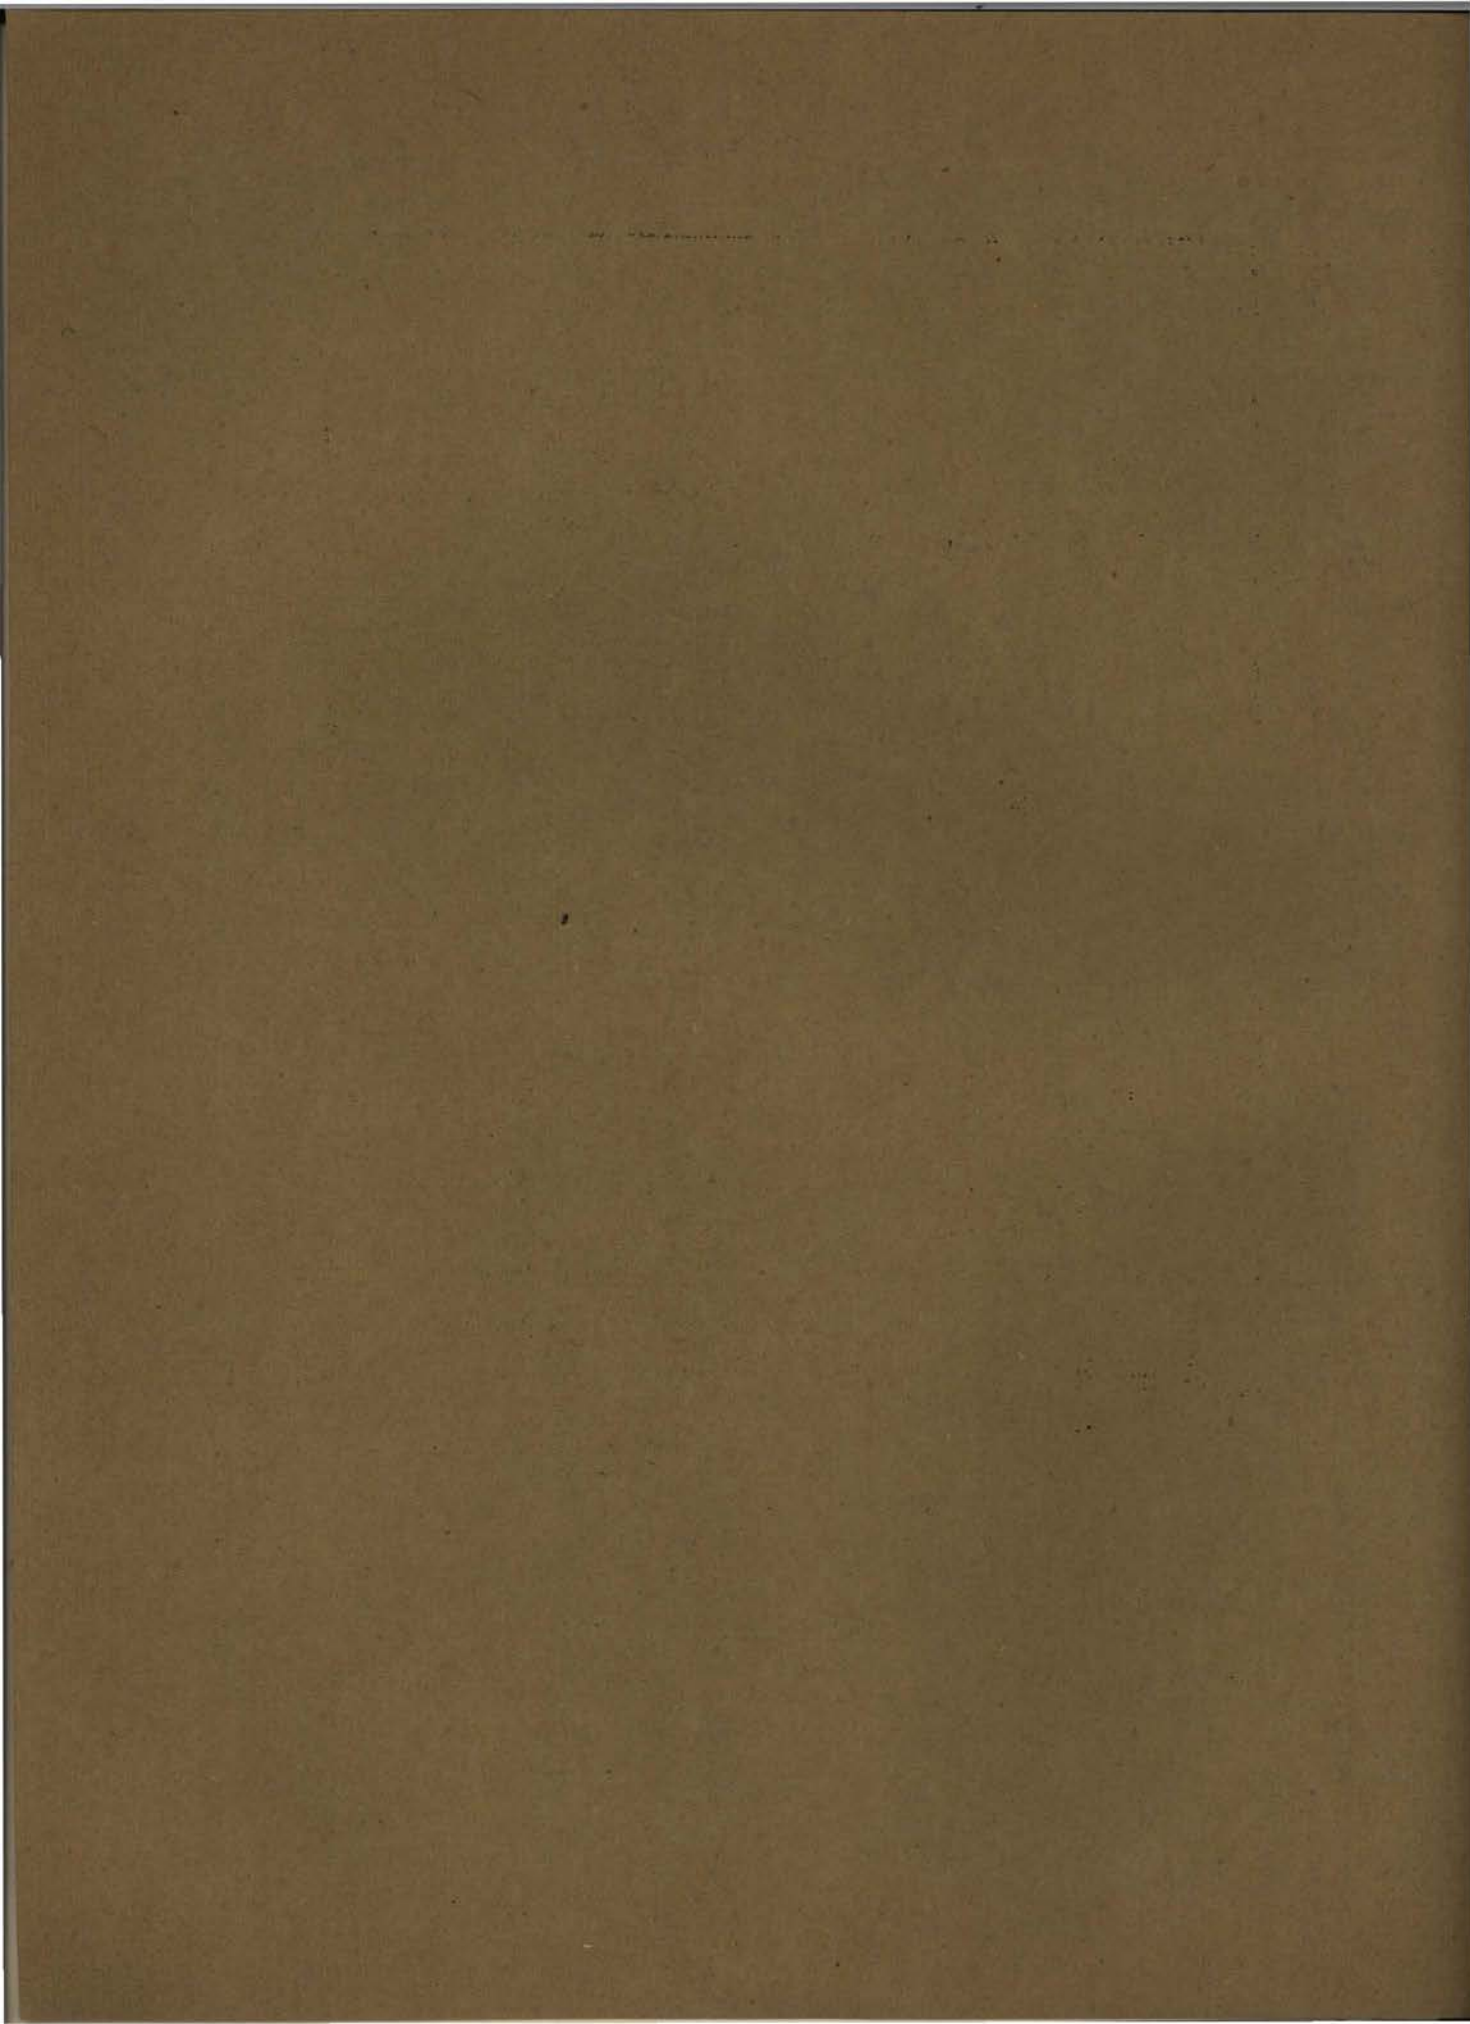

There! We've said something about every Junior. Please don't believe any of the above nonsense, and don't try to sue the compilers of this work for libel, for the editor has promised to withhold their names from the infuriated public. Anyway, the Juniors won't care,—they're good sports.

Sophomore History

THE CLASS OF 1916 is nearing the half-way post in its career at Oregon. Next year we will be initiated into the mysteries of upper-classhood. Our history is short, but we feel proud of it. We are not egotistical enough to think that our achievements are extraordinary. We have only done what other classes before us have done. But we believe that we have played our part well.

According to the poet, "Judge a man by what he does, not what he says." This is the criterion by which the Class of 1916 can be judged. In football, basketball, track, baseball, debate, and, in fact, in all branches of college activities, we have not been found lacking. Since we entered college, a total of thirteen letters have been granted to our representatives in football, baseball, track and basketball, not including those won this year except in football.

The women members of the class have also done their part. In all branches of women's activities, 1916 has been well represented. It will be remembered that the Freshman basketball team won the inter-class championship last year.

All in all, we believe we have "made good."

Freshman History

FRESHMEN are to be seen and not heard," is the oft-repeated admonition of the upper-classmen. The wearers of the green caps, the victims of all hilarity, the recipients of clubs, brickbats, and similar favors, the denizens of the duck-pond and the mill race, and the sons of toil, we have timidly tried to steer the ship of 1917 out of the ocean of oblivion toward the feeble and distant light of recognition. The Class of '17 has always endeavored to contribute its share in upholding the honor of Oregon.

On the football field we have been represented by three regular men on the 'varsity, and two men from our ranks made the first basketball team. The 'varsity baseball and track teams have not yet been chosen, but the Class of 1917 is practically certain to have men on both line-ups.

Our speedy basket-shooters won the interclass championship, and our star distance team captured the interclass cross-country run. Tradition forbids the Freshmen to win the underclass mix, but a dogged fighting spirit was not lacking on the part of 1917 this year.

Not in athletics alone has the class been successful, but also in dramatics, debate, oratory, and the Glee Club. Four men and three women from the 1917 ranks made the Dramatic Club, seven men made the Glee Club, and eight women the Women's troupe.

Our rally bonfire was the largest and highest that has ever been built in the history of the University, according to the "old-timers." The Freshman Glee has been conceded the foremost place, in every respect, among formal dances given in the University gymnasium. We aim to establish a record in the financial world by leaving college at the end of the present year, without owing a single debt. So far all debts are paid, and there is money in the treasury.

Our sentiment is: Oregon spirit—may it always be clean, forceful and uplifting.

SENIOR CLASS

IN THE hazy dusk of an Indian Summer evening, one of those for which the Rose City is far famed, they descended upon the Law School in September, 1911,—a horde of individuals known as “Frosh,” who gazed with wonder upon each other and upon their surroundings. The gaze of wonder was caused by the glitter of new desks, class rooms and library, for they were the first class to meet in the new quarters in the Central building. It was also a cause for wonder that such a large number of bright, intelligent faces should be seen in one gathering. For, as has been later demonstrated, the Class of 1914, has had among its numbers some of the most alert and progressive students ever enrolled in school. Thus the Class of 1914 had its inception.

With such an auspicious beginning the class forged ahead through the years of hard study, always maintaining its place in the front rank both in scholastic ability and class spirit.

As Juniors we gently, but firmly, instructed the Freshmen as to their rights, duties and place in the affairs of school life, at the same time mastering the most difficult principles of jurisprudence.

As Seniors we have forged the final link in the chain which will cause the Class of 1914 to be looked upon in future years as the Great Class of the Law School, and we approach graduation with the satisfaction of knowing that our record will be the proudest monument. —McKINLEY KANE.

Junior Class

THIS school year finds the 1915 class at the height of its scholastic activity. A class composed almost entirely of painstaking and efficient students; their versatility is displayed to advantage by the exceptional amount of interest taken in all Student Body activities.

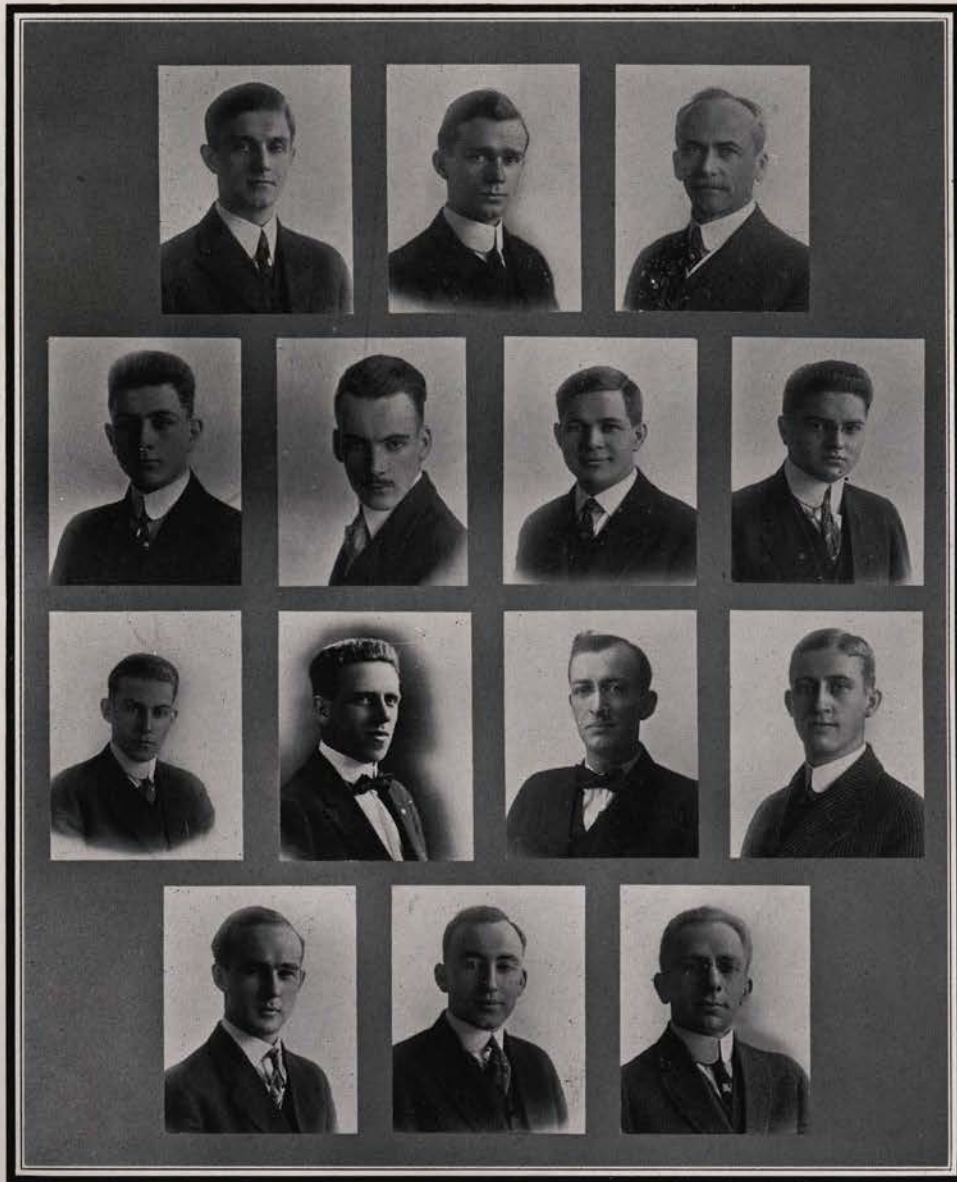

This class has done more to promote and foster athletics, which were not considered practical in a night school of this class prior to our action along this line, than the rest of the school combined, and has had the distinction of being able to furnish the majority of the successful candidates for baseball, basketball and football honors.

The year 1915 will find them dignified Seniors, a credit to the Law Department, the whole University and the principles for which it stands. The Department of Law is attended by young men and women who are ambitious, and whose minds thirst for the knowledge of the law, while their eyes are continually cast upon those great gates through which they will ultimately pass and become members of the highest and most honorable of professions.

Being composed of students of this calibre, the Law Department must necessarily flourish, and although the growth has been somewhat slow, it has maintained a steady pace, not forgetting, in the glory of its own progress, its pledge of loyalty to the great institution of which it is a branch.

Freshman Class

With the beginning of the 1913 school year the members of the Freshman Class were duly rushed by the upper classmen and put through the customary "stunts."

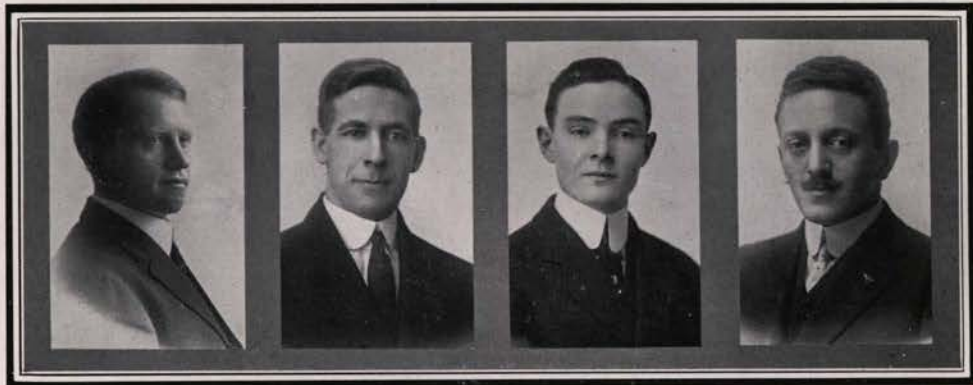

Shortly after this we organized, and, after electing officers, proceeded to take an interest in the affairs of the Student Body.

Realizing that the Freshman Class organizations of previous years were nothing more than formalities, we pledged our aid to the Student Body, and endeavored in every way to help its activities.

We entered upon our duties as Freshmen in full appreciation of the efforts needed on our part in maintaining the integrity and high standard of the Department of Law, and extend to both Faculty and students the feeling of GOOD FELLOWSHIP.

Associated Students

DID anybody ever hear of a student organization which had no troubles? If so, we of the Law Department would like to know where the fortunate organization exists; and, furthermore, we do not believe any student organization in this great and glorious land ever encountered more obstacles than has our Association.

Whether or not college life in general is as care-free a proposition as it is sometimes painted, it is a certainty that the path of a larval Blackstone plodding along toward the distant goal of admission to the bar is neither easy nor strewn with roses. After "boning" all day over his lessons, or mayhap "flunkeying" in some office, and then attending his recitations at night, he is generally in no frame of mind to organize. Hence the difficulty of closely uniting students of the class which is found at the Oregon Law School, however great their enterprise and school spirit.

The members of the Association, as has been stated, are all pretty busily engaged during the day. They live in divers parts of Portland, and never see each other, excepting at recitations. Nevertheless, several years ago, an organization was effected which thus far has survived all vicissitudes.

Shortly after the first term opened last fall, a meeting was again called for the purpose of electing officers, and the following men chosen: C. W. Hohlt, President; Charles Coston, Vice President; E. J. Gillespie, Secretary; J. Leonard Krause, Treasurer.

One of the first troubles that confronted the executive body was the financial situation, and it may be added that even at this writing entire relief has not been experienced. However, much has been accomplished in the way of making the Association more permanent, and there is no doubt but that a greater and more effective Student Association at the Law Department will be the result of this year's labors, and this is a particularly gratifying outlook for a night school.

The time is not far distant when a day school will be necessary, and the new regulations with reference to admittance to the bar will probably hasten the time. These regulations will raise the standard by requiring more work on the part of the students in preparation for the state examinations, and in turn the school will not be able to offer the required work exclusively in night sessions.

At this writing the members of the Senior class are very studiously applying themselves to review work to a great extent, on account of the new bar examination regulations. However, as the class is exceptionally brilliant, no failures are anticipated.

This year's graduating class will be the largest in the history of the school, and among the graduates will be eight young women, which is the largest delegation of the fair sex yet graduated.

The proportion of near-graduates which will enter the practice of law is not ascertainable at this time; but whether the majority do or do not follow the profession, a great many will be heard from favorably in years to come.

Our Junior class is also exceptionally large, exceeding the Senior class in size. The Junior squad is divided, one section holding its sessions late in the afternoon, and the other at night. In spite of this handicap, a very good Junior class organization was effected, and much help has been given to the officers of the Student Association by this class. Their officers are among the "live wires" of the school.

The annual banquet which the Juniors tender the Seniors will be an event of some moment this year; at least, this is the impression that is being created by the Juniors themselves, and therefore the noble Seniors look forward to it with keen anticipation.

Last, but not least, (at least, not in numbers), our Freshman class must receive some recognition. We are proud of our "Frosh." Their first distinction is that they have the largest class ever; another is, that they "put it over" on the Juniors when the latter attempted to put their first-year rivals through a few initiation "stunts" last fall. Furthermore they are all alive and active in student affairs, and indications are that they will be more so in the future. They have elected a splendid body of officers, and with such a beginning class no apprehensions need be felt concerning the Student Body.

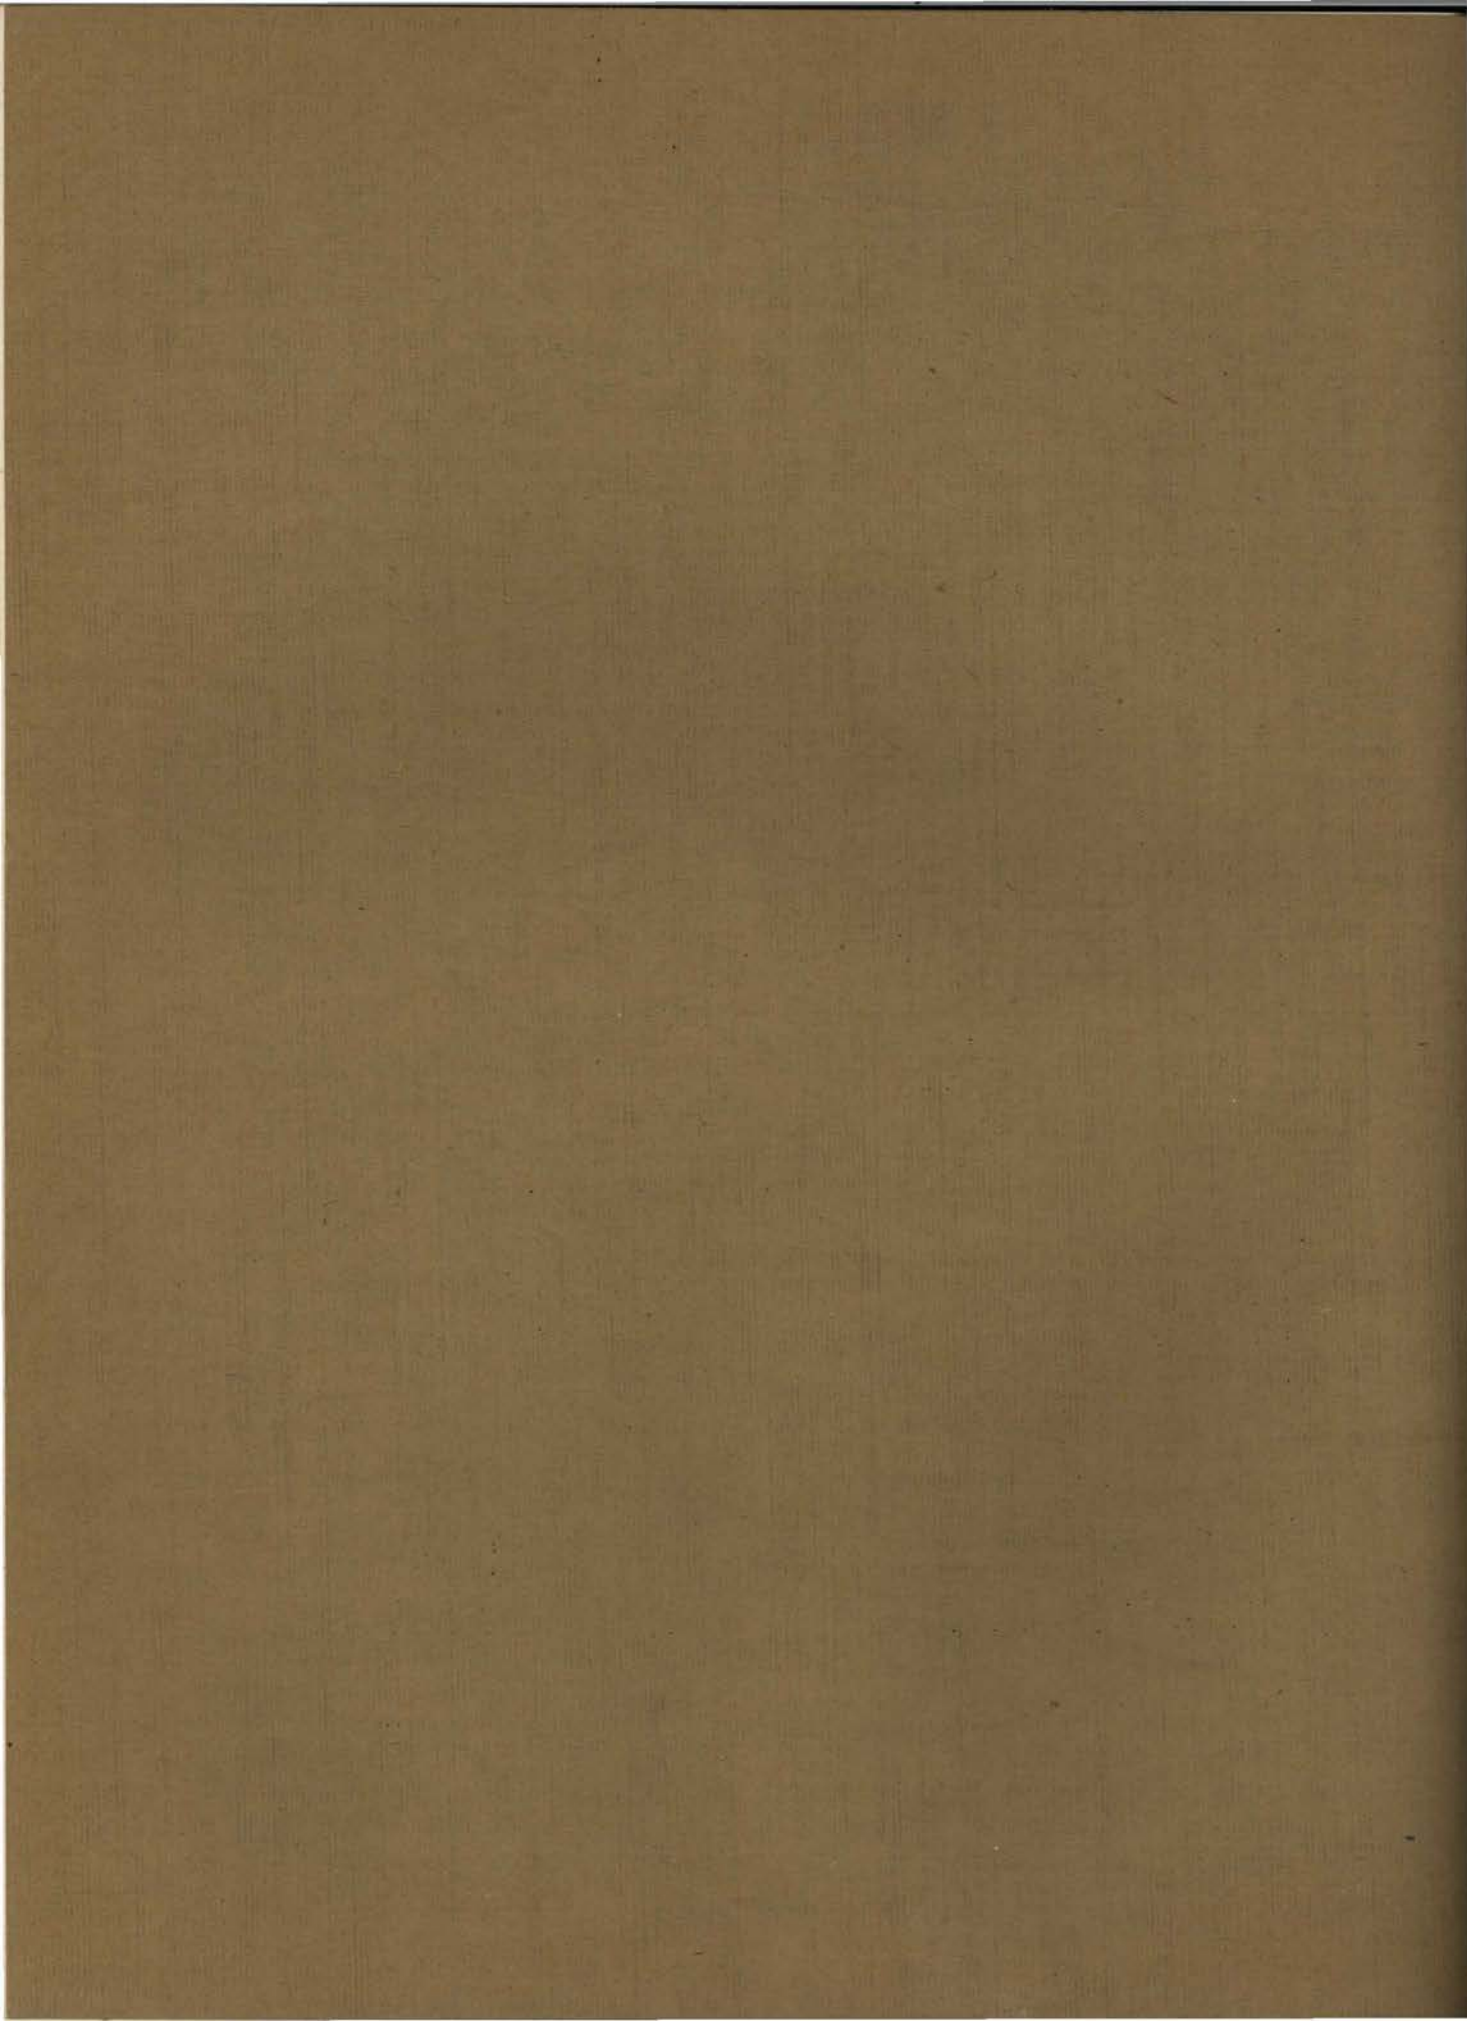

As a rule the Laws do not come in very close contact with the students on the campus at Eugene. However, we feel a keen interest in the fortunes of Oregon, and whenever it is possible for us to attend an athletic contest in which an Oregon team is concerned, you will find us on the side-lines doing our part in the "rooting." The Oregon-Washington football games held in Portland in 1911 and 1913 will bear witness to this statement.

Thus endeth the chapter; and our hope is that all the activities of the University will meet with success, and that none of them will have quite as stony a road to travel as has our Student Body organization.

C. W. HOHLT,
President Associated Law Students.

Senior History

IN September, 1910, there were matriculated in the Medical Department of the University of Oregon, sixteen Freshmen. This was the first class required to present evidence of the successful completion of one year of college work, as demanded by the elevated standard of admission. They entered upon their work in a manner which indicated thorough fitness for their chosen study, and instructors in authority conceded at once that exceptional ability was manifested by this class as a whole.

The general interest of this class was well attested by the fact that frequent voluntary conferences were held in Histology and other subjects; that the course in Microscopical Anatomy developed real artists; that the modeling of bones in Osteology brought forth sculptors, for clay modeling was conceived in the mind of none other than our instructor, Professor Roberg; and what member of the class does not cherish the memory of the visit of Anderson, Hampton and others, to the Pottery, and their strenuous efforts to deliver the initial barrel of clay to the Osteological Laboratory for this purpose? No doubt the thought of an occasional shower of clay pellets stimulated their hitherto latent energies.

The following session found the class with only eleven members, a small band indeed, to guard the interests and guide the destinies of eighteen husky Freshmen. In view of this fact, the usual initiating functions were suspended for a year.

Two more full time professors arrived. Dr. Franklin C. McLean, Professor of Pharmacology, and Dr. Richard B. Dillehunt, Professor of Anatomy. This permitted Professor Roberg to assume the Professorship of Pathology. With four full time professors, this year saw a most healthful organization in the departments of Anatomoy, Pharmacology, Pathology and Physiology.

The beginning of our Junior year witnessed other important changes in the Faculty. Professor S. E. Josephi, who had so ably fulfilled the office of Dean for twenty-five years, resigned, and Professor K. A. J. McKenzie had been elected his successor, and his administration has been most successful, because of his insistence upon a high standard of work, and because of the more direct supervision of the affairs of the college, by the Assistant Dean, Professor Richard B. Dillehunt.

Our class, which now consisted of only nine members, reaped the benefit of many valuable changes in the curriculum. The whirl of changes which we had seen up to the beginning of the Senior year was not destined to subside; for upon our return, we found our number increased from nine to twenty-six; a change brought about by a merger of the Medical Department of Willamette University with our college.

This augmentation of our ranks was readily welcomed, and has proven most agreeable to all concerned, and undoubtedly has been a great aid to elevated standards of medical education, in which we are all interested. The amalgamation of the classes from two schools, which were formerly rivals, was not only done by the terms of the merger drawn up by the two Faculties, but was cemented by sincere friendship and unity of purpose on our own part.

The division into small groups, necessitated by the increased size of our class, has proven most fortunate indeed, for thereby we have each been able to see and study, personally and intimately, many interesting clinical cases, both medical and surgical.

As our final year draws to a close, we cannot refrain from expressing our sincere gratitude to the Faculty for its untiring interest in our welfare, and we shall all be proud to be registered as loyal alumni of the University of Oregon.

Junior History

ALTHOUGH situated as we are, at some distance from the University proper, the "Oregon Spirit," for which the University is justly celebrated, is not lacking in the Medical Department as a whole, nor in the Junior class as a class, as was shown prior to the last election in the good work done to further the interests of the institution.

Now that we are still in school, and expect to be for another year, we will continue to take a special delight in doing anything that will be conducive to the upbuilding and strengthening of our alma mater.

Let us say, by way of apology, that, inasmuch as we are barred from the student activities of the University, by reason of our being located in different cities, and on account of the increasing work of our studies, we have little time for athletics or social activities, and have not made a great deal of history.

As a class, we do not claim to be the best the school ever enrolled, but we do feel that we have a representative body of men. At least, we are striving earnestly to fit ourselves as thoroughly as possible for the faithful discharge of the obligation society is placing upon us, by granting us the right to guard the physical welfare of its members.

The University of Oregon Law School is proud to claim one of the four chapters of the only Women's Legal Fraternity in existence. That young women are taking an increasing interest in the profession in this state is shown by the fact that no class in the Oregon School has been without women members. The number in each succeeding class becomes larger, and the showing of eight women in the present Senior class is the largest yet made.

Emerald History

The first student newspaper at the University of Oregon was the Oregon Weekly, founded through the efforts of Clifton N. ("Pat") McArthur, in the spring of 1900. Mr. McArthur became the first editor, and was re-elected the following fall, being the first and only chief scribe to hold the office on the paper more than one year.

The Oregon Weekly proved a lusty infant, and it rapidly outgrew the nursing bottle stage and began to make its squall heard upon the campus. For nine years it continued to enjoy the ups and downs to which all college publications are subject. During this time it waxed somewhat fatter in size and circulation, but it continued to be known as the Oregon Weekly and to appear but once a week.

It was W. C. ("Skipper") Nicholas, editor of the Oregon Weekly for the year 1909-1910, who transformed the paper into a semi-weekly and re-christened it the "Oregon Emerald." The name was suggested by the poems of Joaquin Miller, the Lane County poet, who constantly refers to this as the Emerald State.

In 1912 Karl Onthank, editor, and Andrew Collier, manager, in response to the demand for a greater Emerald to keep pace with the growth of the University, changed it from a semi-weekly to a tri-weekly publication, and increased the number of columns from five to six. This form the Emerald still retains.

Oregana History

The Oregana has had a somewhat more checkered career than has its steady-going contemporary, The Emerald. The first year book published at the University appeared in 1901, being the monument of the class of 1902. Allen H. Eaton, also editor of the Oregon Weekly, was the first editor of the year book. It was a volume of 160 pages, and bore the title "Webfoot."

Another Webfoot was put out the next year, but the class of 1904 did not undertake the venture. The 1905 Webfoot appeared per schedule, and was larger than any of its predecessors, but the class of 1906 again sidestepped the responsibility. The class of 1907 offered a compromise in the shape of a rather slender paper-covered pamphlet, known as the "Bulletin." Another and somewhat more corpulent "Bulletin" appeared the next year, and the 1909 class dubbed its mouthpiece the "Beaver."

It was in 1909 that the present name, "Oregana," was chosen by the Junior class for the annual. Oliver B. Huston was the editor in that year, and the book was full of "pep," but modest in size. Since that time the Oregana has appeared regularly each year, and its size and scope have grown with the University.

The Tour

At 4:00 P. M., December 26, 1913, eighteen regular Glee Club men, six tenors, Director Ralph H. Lyman, Soloist Albert Gillette, and last but not least the O. W. R. & N's. special agent, Fred Love, left the Union Depot in Portland on the seventeenth annual tour of the University of Oregon Glee Club.

With the Christmas spirit still permeating it, and anticipating a ten days' trip, every day filled with thrills, and hampered by no severe training rules, this can of college pepper everywhere made its presence surely but not obnoxiously felt.

Hood River, the scene of the first performance, was reached in time for a hurried meal before the concert began. Having been assigned to rooms, Bob Fariss and Vern Apperson eagerly sought the dining room, where they hoped to renew old acquaintanceships, but they were doomed to disappointment. As an opener, the concert at Hood River was exceptionally good, and after the performance—which was given in Heilbronner Hall—the floor was cleared and the Oregon Club of Hood River entertained with a dance. Merlin Batley temporarily lost his heart. The lure of the Hood River valley and its incidental attractions were too great for "Motsie," Larry Mann, and a few others, but it is a fact that they returned to the Hotel Oregon in time for breakfast.

The Dalles, the next stop, proved to be the Club's Jonah, for when playing before the characteristically large audience the Club flatted superbly, the stunts went badly, and the curtain refused to work. Everyone felt that all the things that could go wrong in a whole series of concerts had gone wrong in a single one.

On the way to Baker, the Club encountered a wreck near Haines, and as time had already been sacrificed because of the deep snows, Ira Staggs lost his temper and about ten pounds of weight trying to bribe an engineer into making up a special, as he had a dinner engagement that had to be filled. Arriving in Baker Sunday evening, the Club appeared at the First Presbyterian church for a couple of songs, and after the services was entertained by the Baker Bernices. On Monday afternoon a sleigh was chartered by the Club, and some very efficient advertising was done through the collaboration of Freshmen and the small boys of the town. The warblers left Baker Tuesday morning, after the train was held up for an extra fifteen minutes to allow "Ole" Skei to make his third trip to the postoffice. The Baker bus driver, a modern hold-up man, made more money out of the Club than the Club made at Boise, the scene of the next concert.

Arriving at Boise, "Breezy" Lowell's face was among the first to be seen. After everyone was installed in the Owyhee Hotel, the "Nat," for which Boise is far famed, was visited. Some of the boys wanted to go out to the penitentiary, but wiser heads considered it an unnecessary exposure. The Boise concert was artistically one of the best, but financially by far the worst. After the concert the Boise University Club banqueted the Glee Club members.

From Boise, the song birds went to Caldwell, one time home of Norton Cowden. Everybody cursed his fate at having to spend to spend New Year's Eve in such a town, but a dance, to which the entire Club was asked, proved a welcome diversion, and an indescribable riot of color in the form of a dress and worn by one of Caldwell's fairest, was an irresistible attraction to Bert Jerard. After the departure of the Club the Caldwell stationery shop became immensely popular, and the postal receipts at the Caldwell postoffice increased considerably.

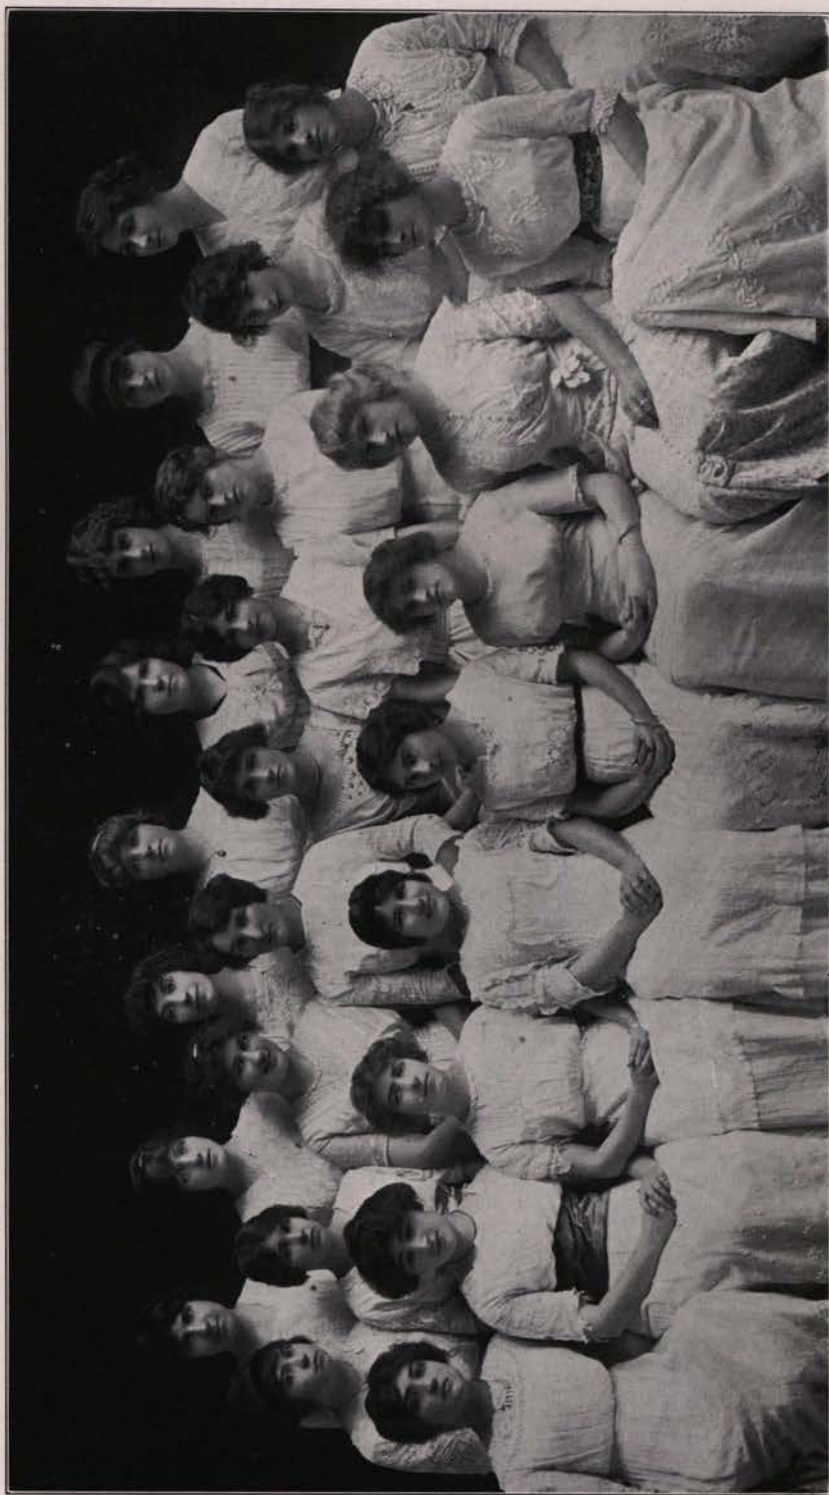

In Ontario, a dance was also the main attraction, beside the concert, of course. As the boys had nothing to do in the afternoon, most of them paraded the 500 feet of main street and tried to convince themselves that "Spid" Blackaby's and Harry Stine's town was a sure winner.

LaGrande, the town famed for the live people it has contributed to the University student body, was the next stopping place. It might be said in passing, that the largest and most enthusiastic audience to which we played on the entire trip was contributed by LaGrande. Whether it was because of the "home" boys on the Club, or because of the appreciation the audience had for the concert, does not lessen the kindly feeling the Club members have for the people of the town that has given us Merlin Batley, Gene Good, Heinie Heidenreich, Ray Williams and others too numerous to mention. A matinee dance in LaGrande brought out a bevy of town girls, so numerous and charming that even the boys who were responsible for the dance were surprised. Those who did not care to dance took advantage of the Commercial Club's kind offer to make themselves perfectly at home in the billiard parlors.

The last concert of the trip occurred in the "Round-Up" town, and after the last song had been sung, everyone "cut loose" and put whatever ending he wished to to a most enjoyable series of entertainments. "Feeds" were very much in vogue, and a chosen few got a taste of what Indians can do when on the warpath.

Financially, the seventeenth annual tour of the Glee Club might not have been so successful as previous ones, but the tour was made in a new country, and practically every mile of the 1,500 traversed was well advertised. The Club's success—and press reports point to the fact that this year's Club was the best ever turned out at Oregon—is due to an immeasurable degree to Ralph H. Lyman, "good" fellow and peerless director.

Associated League for the Study of the Drama

Never before has so great an interest been shown, nor such results accomplished in dramatics at the University of Oregon, as during the present collegiate year. This revival dates from the arrival of Professor A. F. Reddie to take charge of the University Department of Public Speaking two years ago. Previous to that time the students had depended largely on their own initiative in matters theatrical. The usual number of plays was produced each year, most of which were satisfactory from the amateur standpoint, but no serious effort at correct interpretation or artistic production was made.

Professor Reddie has attempted to improve the number and quality of the student productions, and to encourage an appreciation for what is worth while in dramatic literature. To this end the University League for the Study of the Drama was organized October 14, 1913, largely through his efforts and those of Dr. George Rebec, of the Extension Department. The purpose of the League is indicated by its name.

The advisory committee consists of President P. L. Campbell, Mrs. P. L. Campbell, Dr. George Rebec, Professor Herbert C. Howe, Mr. Allen Eaton, and Miss Julia Burgess. The committee on production consists of Professor Frederic Stanley Dunn, Professor Edward Allen Thurber, Dr. Bertha Stuart, Miss Winifred Forbes, Mrs. Minnie Washburne, Mrs. Lischen Miller, Mrs. A. F. Reddie, Mrs. Albert R. Sweetser, Professor Ralph Lyman, Mrs. E. S. Parsons, Mrs. Mary Perkins, and Professor Eric W. Allen.

The management of the plays given under the League's patronage is placed in the hands of the students. The castes for the various productions are selected from Professor Reddie's class in Dramatic Interpretation. Special scenery is built by the students; the University Orchestra furnishes the music, and all other details, such as the original "Dance of the Starving Women," which introduced the play, "Strife," are provided by the students under the direction of University instructors.

The League does not conflict with purely student enterprises, like the productions of the Dramatic Club and the annual Senior play. Its object is to foster general interest in the drama at the University. A further object is to encourage similar interest throughout the state, and this aim the League accomplishes by the extension work of Dr. Rebec and the lectures and readings given by Professor Reddie in all the larger towns of the state throughout the year.

COACH PRESCOTT

In view of the fact that less than half of the scheduled forensic contests for this year have as yet taken place, it is too early to set the stamp of "Victory" or "Defeat" upon the record of the University for the season of 1913-14. Judging, however, from the ability of the members who are at present working upon the various teams, a banner year for Oregon seems to be assured.

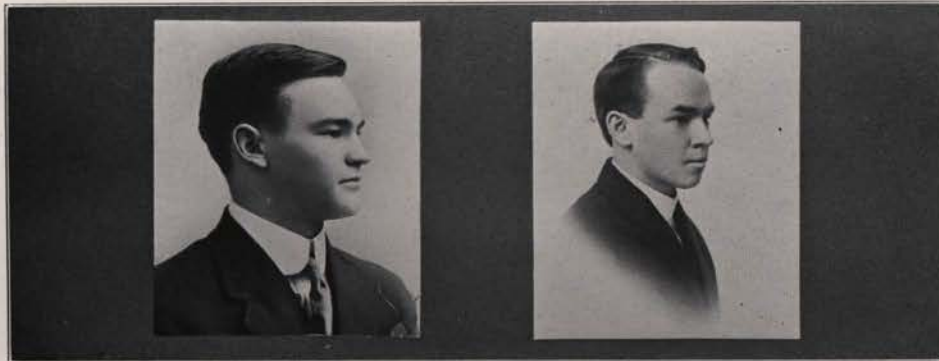

So far this year, although the University lost in the State Oratorical Contest, she has tied Washington and Stanford for the championship in debate. The remaining contests for this year include the women's debate with Washington, the dual oratorical-extempore contest with Washington, and the nation-wide peace oratorical contest, the finals of which will be held at Lake Mohonk, New York.

With the advent of Coach Robert W. Prescott last season, Oratory and Debate have taken on a new lease of life at Oregon. Professor Prescott's success as a trainer is attested by the fact that last year the co-ed team scored an unanimous victory over Washington, Oregon won the Cost championship by defeating Stanford and Washington, and this year tied for the championship, in spite of the fact that with but one exception the members of the team were inexperienced men.

Coach Prescott develops his debaters and orators largely from his classes in Public Speaking, which he conducts along his own lines. It is here that the ground work is laid that is developing future forensic material for Oregon. The recently-established annual Freshman-Sophomore debate also serves as a means to this end.

The added interest that is being displayed each year in forensics, the ever-loyal support of the Student Body as a whole, and the untiring work of both coach and participants, insures the retention in the future of Oregon's present high status in Debate and Oratory.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Review of 1913 Season

Taken as a whole, the football season of 1913 was a success from an Oregon standpoint. True, we did not finish the season with a clean slate, but we proved that we had easily the second strongest team in the conference, and gave Dobie's champs the closest call they have had in many a day.

Few Oregon squads have been composed of better material than that of last fall, but we started with a new coach, who was totally unfamiliar with the conditions he had to meet. The fact that many of the first team men were tardy in reporting for practice was a further handicap, and, as the coach expressed it, we were "a week behind" in the development of team work all the early part of the season.

In spite of this, we won our first three games with ease, and showed such strength against Idaho that the rooters began to hope that their long-cherished dream of a conference championship would be realized. At this stage, however, the team seemed to suffer a mid-season slump. The game with the Oregon Agricultural College, although a splendid exhibition of Oregon spirit and "come-back," was not a real indication of what the team could do. One week later, however, we came into our own, and I believe no Oregon supporter need be ashamed of our showing against Washington.

In Coach Bezdek we have a man who knows the game and can teach it to his players, and at the same time inspire them to do their best. It takes time for a new coach to perfect his system, but if Bezdek remains he will yet defeat Washington, as surely as he once accomplished that feat back in 1906. Notwithstanding the graduation of a number of first team men, the prospects for next season are bright. The Oregon team last fall showed it was willing to work, and that it knew how to fight. With these two qualities, it is bound, sooner or later, to win.

—ROBERT C. BRADSHAW, Captain.

Three Hundred Eleven

Coach Bezdek

Few men have won the respect and confidence of Oregon students so completely as has Coach Hugo Bezdek in the brief time in which he has been with us. Although he had served Oregon as coach once before, in 1906, a new generation of students had risen in the meantime, and he came here practically a stranger. However, Bezdek is not the kind of a man who would remain long in obscurity, no matter where he might be, and he quickly became a campus celebrity, not as a football coach alone, but as a man who is broad enough to mix with everybody, and to think and talk about other subjects besides athletics.

Bezdek is not a "man of mystery," and he has no desire to pose as a sphinx. He loves a good-natured argument or a "fanning bee," as many a man who has sat with him around a fraternity fireside can testify. However, he does not care to talk about himself, and for this reason the local newspaper scribes wore blisters on their brains last fall, trying to fathom the secret of his nationality. "Bez" was accused of belonging to every race from the Hibernian to the Mongolian.

As a matter of fact, he is of pure Bohemian descent, and was born in Prague, Austria, April 1, 1884. The football star and mentor came by his athletic ability honestly, for his grandfather and great-grandfather were both gymnasts of note in their native city, and his father was the best gymnast in his class at the University of Prague. Hugo Bezdek's training from his boyhood was along the same lines. When he was seven years old his parents moved to Cleveland, Ohio. The future coach attended the public schools of Cleveland until he was twelve, and then the family moved to Chicago. In the Windy City he finished his public school education and attended the Lake High School for three years. He then entered the University of Chicago.

Bezdek had played basketball through his high school course, but previous to entering the University he had never wriggled into a jersey and moleskins. Coach Alonzo Stagg, of Chicago, saw football possibilities in the stocky, well-knit Freshman, and "Bez" had been out only a few weeks when he was playing in the first team backfield. The rest of his gridiron career is familiar to the sporting public. He starred for Chicago for four years, from 1902 to 1905, playing half and fullback the first two seasons, and fullback the last two. He was picked on the All-Western Conference team in 1904 and 1905, and was mentioned prominently by Walter Camp for All-American honors in the latter year.

During his first three years at Chicago, Bezdek also played second base on the Varsity nine, and the fourth year he tried basketball, making the team at guard. He is a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Fresh from his athletic triumphs, and with a college sheepskin under his arm, Bezdek came to the University of Oregon as football coach in 1906, and turned out one of the strongest teams that ever represented the lemon yellow. He returned to Chicago the following year for graduate work, and acted as assistant to Coach Stagg. In 1908 he accepted the Directorship of Athletics at the University of Arkansas. Here he remained for five years, until his second call to his first post at Oregon last spring.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Robert C. Bradshaw, '14, captain and right end of the 1913 team, possesses the ideal qualities of a football leader. From his cleats to his tow head he is every inch a fighter. Wherever the strife was thickest, there would you find "Brad." He played his best game of the season against Washington in Portland. His wonderful defensive work in this one game caused several critics to pick him for an All-Northwest end position. It was his covering of Fenton's long kicks which kept the Washington safety from making any brilliant runs.

John F. Parsons, '15, right halfback and captain-elect for the 1914 season, plunged, twisted, and squirmed his way to a position on the All-Northwest team last season. He was given an equal rating with "Hap" Miller, of Washington, these two men standing out clearly as the two best ground-gainers in the conference. Johnny's long runs against O. A. C. and his touchdown and great defensive work against Washington featured his playing.

1915 OREGON 1915

Elmer E. Hall, '14, right tackle, is another bad man in an argument. Hall is the owner of six feet one inch of stature, and close to 180 pounds of beef, and along with these assets he has plenty of speed. Furthermore, the word "quit" is missing from his vocabulary. Like many of his team-mates, he distinguished himself against Washington, holding up the right side of the line against Dobie's human battering ram.

In Carl B. Fenton, '14, right guard, Oregon has the best punter and one of the best place-kickers in the conference. Carl topped off his remarkable athletic career with a brilliant fourth season on the gridiron. In addition to being a high-class toe artist, he is a wizard at either end of a forward pass, and played his position last season better than ever before. For the second time he was unanimously chosen as guard on the mythical All-Northwest team.

Three Hundred Fourteen

1915 OREGANA 1915

Wallace B. Caufield, '14, had it on every center whom he faced last season. There are a good many things going on, as a rule, in the vicinity of center, and he does a lot of work which escapes the keenest bleacherites. Caufield's playing was not spectacular, but it was a big item in the strength of the team. He is a clever passer and a stone wall on the defense.

William F. Holden, '16, formerly known as "Eagle Eye," and lately re-christened "Cougar" Bill, is a tender, delicate thing, weighing about 185 pounds in his Garden of Eden make-up. Bill's position is left guard, and he is a good man to leave alone, especially when he gets "het up." If there is one thing which tends to rile Bill, it is an orange and black jersey on the person of an opponent, and he played a bang-up game against O. A. C.—so much so that Coach Dobie, of Washington, who saw the encounter, placed Bill on his All-Northwest aggregation.

When 195 pounds of Sam Cook get into action, things are generally lively in the neighborhood of the aforementioned Samuel. Cook played fullback in his Freshman year, but last season Coach Bezdek decided to make a left tackle out of him. However, Sam's long suit is backing up the line in the fullback position, and when Bez gave him that role in the Washington game he smashed up Dobie's formations in a way which we will not soon forget. Sam is a member of the 1916 class.

John Beckett, '17, left end, was one of the three Freshmen who made their letters last season. Johnny clearly established his claim to recognition in the Frosh game at Corvallis and in practice scrimmages, and Bezdek found a berth for him on the left end. Although Johnny learned his football A. B. C's in the line, he soon adapted himself to his new environment, and played a hard, smashing game all season, although handicapped by injuries.

Three Hundred Sixteen

1915 OREGONA 1915

"There is a tide in the affairs of men," etc. Shakepeare's saying applies to Oskar Wiest, '17. When opportunity knocked at Oskar's door he was not slow in responding, and the result was that he was the only man outside the regular eleven to make his letter last season. He was an inconspicuous Freshman, plugging along on the scrub team, until Johnny Parsons hurt his knee just before the Idaho game, and Bradshaw was moved to the vacant half position. Bezdek liked Wiest's capacity for work, and put him in at Bradshaw's end. Wiest justified the choice by playing a clever game against Idaho.

Anson B. Cornell, '16, Oregon's miniature quarterback, is a big charge of football dynamite done up in a small package. Anse weighs 130 to 137 pounds, depending on the size of his dinner, and is short for his height. They couldn't keep Anse off the All-Northwest team last fall with a regiment of cops. He specializes in quarterback runs, generalship, handling kicks, cussing other players twice as big as himself, and telling the coach how to run the team.

1915 OREGONA 1915

When Raymond H. Bryant, '15, signed up with Bezdek's squad last fall, few of the rail-birds would have picked him to make the first team; not that he doesn't look like a player, but he had only just escaped from oblivion, or Pacific University, which is worse. Ray was stationed at end on the second team, and the way he mussed up the Varsity's plays appealed to the coaches at once. He was duly graduated and given Sam Cook's job at fullback. Bryant is fast and full of fight, and he made good.

Leo Malarkey, '17, left halfback, came down from Columbia University last fall and proceeded to show the public how to run 100 yards in nine seconds in a football suit. Having speed to burn and an Irishman's disposition to mix it, "Tick" soon got on steady with the Varsity. He was the big show in the main tent in the Idaho game, gaining most of Oregon's yardage. He also pulled off a couple of long runs against Willamette, but this exasperated the umpire, and he penalized "Tick" for his indiscretion.

DALLENBACH

OREGON 41; ALUMNI 3

As a curtain-raiser to the 1913 football season, Manager Walker scheduled a game between the Varsity and the Alumni. It was played October 4, and developed into a farce, due to the lack of condition of the old grads. The features of the game were the work of Parsons, who scored four touchdowns before he was taken out to give the new men a chance, and the successful place kick by "Khaki" Moullen, of the Alumni. Moullen's goal was a reminder of the days when the caress of his toe on the pigskin was feared from one end of the conference to the other.

Bezdek sent in every candidate with any pretensions of making the Varsity before the game was over. The last quarter was trimmed to a few minutes at the request of the wind-broken "vets."

The second event on the season's card was the Varsity-Bremerton engagement, October 18. The sailors had a line-up bristling with former stars, but they showed deficient training when matched with Bezdek's hardened eleven. The visitors obtained their touchdown by a fuke just after the game opened, Young, their left end, intercepting a forward pass and running 70 yards with an unobstructed path.

As before, Bezdek used his entire string of Varsity candidates during the game. There were no conspicuous stars for Oregon, Parsons again leading in the scoring.

With Parsons out with injuries, and several of the other men crippled, Oregon fans awaited with alarm the coming of the strong Idaho team October 25. The Northerners were better seasoned and had already tasted blood in a conference game. The result proved that Coach Bezdek had a machine which, when in good working order, was to be feared by every team in the conference.

Following orders, Oregon played a waiting game throughout the first quarter and a part of the second, allowing the visitors to take the ball and wear themselves out in a vain effort to batter down Bezdek's defense. When the lemon-yellow team did get started, it swept everything before it. Malarkey and Bryant led in the march for the Idaho goal. Fenton had a fat day making one touchdown, getting two place kicks, and converting his three trials at goals from touchdowns into points. Bradshaw, in Johnny Parsons' shoes at right half played a good game, as did Caulfield at center and Cornell at quarter. Lockhart starred for the Moscovites.

WILLAMETTE 6; OREGON 3

The less said about the farce at Salem November 1 the better, for it does not reflect much credit on either winners or losers. Suffice it to say that the wily Methodists slipped it over on Bezdek and his cohorts in a way which was embarrassing, to say the least. Bez journeyed to Seattle to see the Washington team in action, confident that all would be well. Over-confidence on Oregon's part, the unexpected strength of the Methodists, weird rulings by the officials, a field which was largely under water, and the fact that Oregon at no time played anything like her regular line-up, are generally blamed for what happened.

Oregon's second team, bruised from their fracas of the day before with the Aggie scrubs, played the first half and finished three points to the good, Bigbee executing a place kick.

Oregon played a part of her first team in the second half, but it could not get started. Every time a mud-coated Bezdekite made a good gain, one of the officials proceeded to bring the ball back and inflict a stiff penalty on the team. The shades of night had fallen and there were two minutes of play left when Small, the Willamette halfback, pounced on a fumbled kick behind Oregon's goal-line. That's all.

OREGON 10; OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE 10

We approach the annual game with O. A. C. with caution, fearing that we will suffer heart failure in recalling it. To put it mildly, the game at Albany, November 8, was a nerve-killer. At the same time it was one of the greatest exhibitions of gameness and uphill fighting ever furnished by an Oregon team.

We all rode, walked, or beat it down to Albany fairly confident that history would repeat itself and Oregon would win, despite the defeat of the week before by Willamette.

The game had not been born long before the team began to show symptoms of the slump from which it had suffered at Salem. Right off the real Blackwell, the Aggie captain, made a successful place kick. Then, along in the second quarter, Robertson, the farmers' end, intercepted a forward pass and sprinted 50 yards to the goal line without molestation. It isn't every day that a man receives a ball in the pit of the stomach with a clear field before him,—but let that pass.

The second half, or rather, the last quarter, made amends for what had gone before. The crowd knew that Oregon was beaten, but the players didn't. Throughout the second half it was merely a question of whether Oregon would have enough time to win the game. They tied it,—and missed a victory by a foot of space between the ball and a goal-post.

Soon after the beginning of the last quarter Cornell worked the same stratagem with which he had scored on Idaho. He shot three plays at the line, and by this means sucked in the Aggies' right end. Then, on a delayed pass, the midget ran the unprotected end for a touchdown. A few minutes later Fenton evened matters with a goal from the 20-yard line, and there the scoring ended.

Parsons, with his wonderful offensive work, Cornell, Fenton and Holden, were the Oregon stars. May, Abraham, and Christian, shone for the Aggies.

The score fairly represents the comparative strength of the two team in the game. If either team is entitled to a shade, as some spectators say, is it not better to make a bad start and finish strong than to start with a flourish and blow up in the stretch? In the first half the Aggies made yardage seven times to Oregon's four; in the second half Oregon made yardage six times and the Aggies not once.

WASHINGTON 10; OREGON 7

November 15, in Portland, Bezdek's team showed what it could do, and incidentally threw the biggest scare into the Washington camp which it has experienced since Coach Cobie became owner of that institution.

Outside of the first quarter, in which Miller, almost single handed, bucked the ball over Oregon's line, there was little to choose between the two teams. Oregon and Washington each had an excellent chance for a field goal in the last quarter,—Washington got hers and Oregon didn't. Smith, quarterback, was the man who turned the trick.

Oregon's touchdown came when Parsons smashed clean through the Washington line in the second quarter and ran 40 yards to the line. Every man on the Oregon team covered himself with glory—Captain Bradshaw, playing the greatest game of his life; Cornell, practically a cripple; Hall, Cook, Bryant, Malarkey, and, of course, Parsons; while for Washington Miller was easily the star.

Oregon closed the season with the annual Thanksgiving game with M. A. A. C., in Portland. The Club was represented by one of the greatest aggregations of stars which it has ever collected, and on the muddy field the faster collegians were no match for them. Bezdek's team showed flashes of its latent strength. Twice Parsons corkscrewed through the Multnomah line, only to slip and fall in the mire.

Francis, Rodes and Conville played a wonderful game for the Clubmen. Cook, Beckett and Cornell starred for Oregon. Injuries were numerous, and Bezdek used all his available substitutes.

OREGON FRESHMEN 7; O. A. C. FRESHMEN 7

On October 1 the Oregon Freshmen played their first-year brethren from O. A. C. to a standstill at Corvallis. It was another case of an Oregon team transforming apparent defeat into virtual victory by outfighting the Aggies on the showdown. Stewart's aggregation was composed of heavy men, several of whom had starred for other colleges for years. The Oregon yearlings were swept off their feet in the first half, but they came back and tied the score in the last minute of play. It was Oregon's ball in the middle of the field, when Bigbee shot two forward passes to Hendricks, the last one over the line. Huntington kicked goal.

Beckett, Bigbee and Malarkey starred for Oregon, while Lutz, Blackwell and Hayes excelled for the Aggies. Oregon's line-up was: Ross, Wiest, right end; Tuerck, right tackle; Spellman, right guard; Ensley, center; Dudley, left guard; Easterwood, left tackle; Hendricks, left end; Bigbee, quarterback; Beckett, right half; Malarkey, left half; Huntington, fullback.

Review of 1914 Season

THE 1914 basketball season was the most disastrous Oregon has encountered for years. Captain Fenton's followers finished on the lower rung of the percentage ladder in the western division of the conference. Nevertheless, Oregon's team this year was not below the standard of past championship quintets, and with better luck it would have held its own with its rivals.

The main accomplishment which Bezdek's pupils seemed to lack during the past season was that of winning games. They fought consistently all season, but they generally finished a few points in the rear. This fact is partially accounted for by the fact that forwards, those gentlemen whose function it is to do most of the scoring, were few and far between on the Oregon squad. At the beginning of the season Bezdek found himself without a single first team man for either of these positions, Walker having graduated, and Boylen and Brooks having decided to quit basketball. Bez made the best of the situation by trying to convert his guards, of which he had a large supply, into forwards. He also gave a number of new men a chance. All showed plenty of promise, but the burden of the scoring was left largely to Captain Fenton, who made three times as many points as any other man on the team.

Next year, in spite of the graduation of Fenton, Sims, Bradshaw and Rice, Oregon should come back with a strong team, for players like Koch, Wolcott, Wheeler and Lyle Bigbee, together with this year's fast Freshman five, ought to make a winning combination with another season's experience.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Another little thing that Carl Fenton does is to play basketball. Carl was captain of this year's team. He made All-Northwest center for two years, and we allow as how he deserved the job again. The big fellow knows the game by heart and can shoot baskets blindfolded. This year he had his most consistent season, contributing the majority of points to Oregon's sum total.

Clifford M. Sims is another player who was raised on a basketball diet. He was captain of the 1913 team, but returned to serve out his fourth year. Ole is one of the foxiest guards in the business. He is about as elusive as the celebrated Jack the Grab, and he can drop the ball into the net with regularity.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Robert C. Bradshaw, '14, wades into a basketball scrimmage with the same freedom and abandon with which he smashes the interference in a football game. After colliding with "Brad" a few times, most opponents stop and ponder before they attempt a spectacular dribble down the floor. On account of his shock-absorbing powers and his staying qualities, "Brad" is one of the most valuable players on the Oregon team.

Donald B. Rice, '14, is both a guard and forward, although he played the latter position most of the time last season. Rice makes up for his lack of weight by his speed. He is in the game every minute, and is the cleverest dribbler on the team.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Chester Wolcott, '17, was the only Freshman who played regularly on the Varsity. Wolcott played guard before entering Oregon, but Coach Bezdek was overriden with good guards and shy on forwards. Accordingly, he converted Chet into a forward, and the husky Silvertonian came through with his share of baskets all season, and in addition played a scrappy game on the floor.

Glenn Wheeler, '17, alternated at forward last season. He went on a basket jag in the preliminary game with Washington State College and scored half or Oregon's points. On the strength of this showing he was given a baptism in conference basketball, and he stuck. Wheeler has one of the most accurate pegs to the basket on the team.

Lester Koch, '17, made a rather late debut, joining the squad in mid-season. For this reason he did not see a great deal of conference milling, but he showed class whenever given an opportunity. "Slim" is rangy and aggressive, and likes to take an active part in the argument when it warms up. He should make a strong bid for the team next season.

Review of 1913 Season

THE race for the championship of the western division of the conference in baseball last spring ended in a draw. All three teams, Oregon, Washington and Oregon Agricultural College, finished with a percentage of .500, and consequently none of them qualified to meet Washington State College, the winner in the western division of the conference.

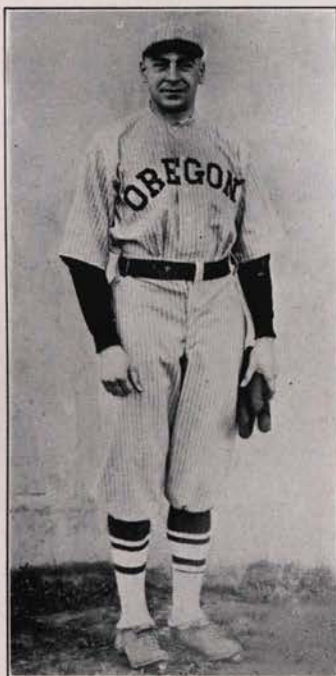

At the start of the season Oregon's balloon took an upward shoot, and apparently was headed straight for the championship, but O. A. C. put a puncture in the bag in the last two games at Corvallis. The season opened with the northern trip, on which Ayer's nine won every start, defeating Washington State College and Washington in their own yards. Returning to Eugene, Oregon met Washington twice on the local campus, and broke even with the northerners. The same thing happened with the Oregon Aggies. However, when the battleleld was transferred to Corvallis, as already noted, the drop came.

Only two letter men, Chandler and Mount, passed out through the diploma exit last year, and Coach Bezdek's bunch this season look like sure-enough pennant grabbers.

The big leagues were deprived of a promising recruit when Ben R. Chandler, '13, captain and left fielder of the 1913 team, decided to abandon baseball for the more exciting game of matrimony. Ben led the team in swatting and was one of the fastest men on bases who ever "hit the dirt" hereabouts. He also fielded his position to a queen's taste. Benjamin will be sadly missed on this year's team.

The framers of the conference ruling that a man may participate in only three major sports in a single year must have had it in for Carl Fenton. Had it not been for this limit, Carl might have made a track star, but as it is, he prefers to gambol about the diamond. He presided over first base last season, and swallowed most everything that came his way. When his batting eye is properly focused, Carl is one of the heaviest stickers on the team.

Three Hundred Thirty-eight

1915 OREGANA 1915

Wallace Mount, '13, center fielder, played four years of college baseball and received a diploma from the Faculty in recognition of his services. "Beany" could cover several acres of ground, and his specialty was clawing them out of the atmosphere. He robbed many a batsman of a good hit.

Vernon T. Motschenbacher, '14, Oregon's Teutonic backstop, is a most versatile young man, being a statesman, debater, orator and ball player. Motsy's oratorical gifts stand him in good stead on the diamond, for he can cuss the umpire like a gentleman and get away with it. He is a first-class receiver and has a peg to second which keeps stolen bases at a minimum.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Morris S. Bigbee, '15, is the oldest member of a family of baseball sharks. "Buck" played the utility role in his Freshman year, and last season staked out a claim at the keystone bag. He is a fast infielder and good all-around player, and knows the game from A to Z.

John W. Welch, '15, was rated as Oregon's leading pitcher last season. He acted as dealer in the majority of games, and met his Waterloo only once, which was in that regrettable affair at Corvallis. When Johnny is right, the opposing batters can't understand him at all. He works his gray matter all the time, and fields his position cleverly.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Fred Annsen, '14, has played at the difficult corner for three seasons. "Dutch" can dig 'em out of the dirt, no matter how hot they come, and he has a pretty throw to first. He has improved every year and ought to make an enviable record during the present season.

Anson B. Cornell, '15, is as much at home on the diamond as on the football field. Anse is an infielder and last season had good success in handling the duties of shortstop. He went after everything that came under his observation, and generally closed his hooks on it. Anse also led off in batting, and the opposing pitchers found it difficult to shoo him back to the bench.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Lyle R. Bigbee, '16, is the only pitcher besides Welch who made his letter last season. "Babe" had something on the ball which looked good to "Mister" Ayer, and when the coach gave the big fellow a chance at Seattle, he showed his appreciation by shutting out the Washington nine. Thereafter "Babe" worked regularly, and got away with his share of the games. He has one virtue which is rare in a pitcher—he frequently clouts the ball out of the lot.

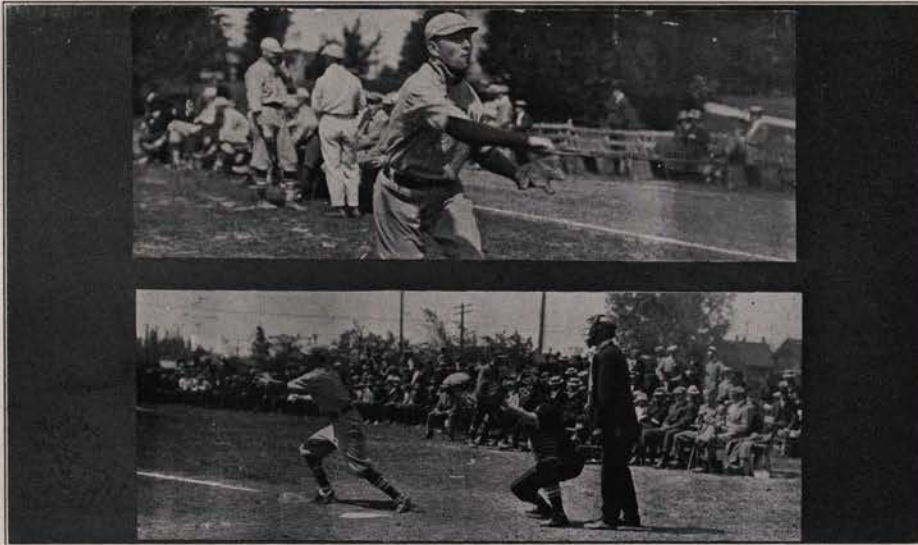

Gordon A. Billings, '16, utility man on last season's nine, was one of the three Freshmen who made their letters. "Josh" is a valuable adjunct to a baseball team, being qualified to play the outfield, or, if necessary, to cover first base, formerly his regular position.

"Bill" Hayward

Maybe you've heard of "Bill" before. Every embryo athlete in the state, from the time he begins vaulting over the back-yard clothes-line, knows him by reputation. When the Oregon trainer arrives in town to deliver one of his well-known moving picture lectures on athletic dos and don'ts, the preppers scrap for the right to carry his moving-picture outfit and the kids follow him at a worshipful distance.

There is nothing incongruous about Bill's fame, either. It is but a manifestation of a human trait—to pay homage to success. "Bill" is a success,—he has made good in his chosen profession, and today he is recognized as one of the leading athletic trainers and coaches in the country.

This is Hayward's eleventh season at Oregon. He came here late in the spring of 1903. He was an importation from California, where he had already completed the coaching of the Berkeley team of that season. Although "Bill" has enjoyed his greatest era of prosperity since taking charge of Oregon's athletic destiny, he already had an athletic reputation. He had held the position at Berkeley since 1900, and the year before had been assistant trainer at Princeton. Previous to that he had turned out winning lacrosse, rugby, hockey and track teams in Toronto, Canada. And, still farther back, in the late 80's and early 90's, "Bill" had been an athlete of note himself, a ten-second man in the hundred, who was known throughout the West and Canada for the races he ran, when track and field athletics in colleges were almost unknown.

In 1909 "Bill" came up to Forest Grove, after he had finished his spring work at Berkeley, and coached a championship team at Pacific University. The next season he put in a few weeks late in the season at Albany College, and again his pupils won the Northwest championship. Oregon could not afford to let his services go to waste, and the next year he was engaged to train the team here after the California season had closed.

"Bill" continued to train the Oregon teams on the same plan until 1906, when he left Berkeley for good and cast his lot with the lemon-yellow, being made Director of Athletics here. Since that time his achievements are too well known to need recounting, being duly set down in the dope book of Northwest athletics. Suffice it to say that the championships which Oregon has lost during his regime may be counted conveniently on the digits of one hand.

So here's to "Bill" Hayward! He's for Oregon, first, last and all the time; and we're for him! Long may she wave!

REMARKS—Washington State College established a new conference record in the mile relay.

Clyde, of Washington University, established a new conference record in the mile run.

Windnagle, of Oregon University, lowered the 440 conference record 1-5 of a second.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Walter R. McClure, '13, is the most famous Oregon athlete that "Bill" Hayward has turned out since Dan Kelly. He easily qualified for the American team which walked away with the Olympic games in Stockholm in 1912, won his heat in the semi-finals for the mile, and finished seventh in the finals. Mac did his best running in the spring of 1912, when he easily ranked as the best distance man on the Coast. The records he holds are too numerous to mention here.

Chester Huggins, ex-'14, was handicapped throughout his three years on the track by the fact that he was McClure's understudy. Chet can cover a mile himself under 4:30, and two miles in less than 10 minutes, which would be good for first place in most company. The two stars differed in their style of running. There was a long, easy swing to McClure's stride, which carried him over the ground with a minimum of effort, but Huggins was generally found plowing along at Mac's elbow.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Ercel W. Kay, '14, was the fastest sprinter developed by Hayward since Oliver Huston. Kay was elected captain of this spring's squad, but illness will prevent him from acting. When right, Erce is one of the fleetest short-distance men in the conference. He is at his best in the 220. He was a member of the swiftest relay team which ever represented Oregon, and which set a new Coast record of 3:27 2-5 in that event.

"One thing at a time, and that done well," was the maxim of William T. Neill, '13. "Bill" never saw a javelin until he came to Oregon, but he took to that reapon like a fish, (or a Frosh), to water. "Bill" was the best javelin thrower Oregon ever had, and for four years he was good for five points in any conference meet, until the meteoric rise of "Buck" Phillips, of Idaho, last season.

1915 OREGANA 1915

Graham E. McConnel, '15, was one of the most reliable point winners on Hayward's squad last season. Mac started out as a half-miler in his Freshman year, and held the college record of two minutes flat until McClure broke it the next year. Later Mac became more of an all-around athlete, but his specialty is the quarter. He dogged Windnagle's footsteps all last season in this event. Mac has been elected captain for this season to succeed Kay.

Track is something of a side issue with Johnny Parsons, '15, but the star halfback has one accomplishment which he practices in the spring. In the broad jump he can cover 22 feet in most any old meet, his official mark, made last season, being 22 feet 1-2 inch.

Three Hundred Fifty-four

1915 OREGONA 1915

Henry Heidenreich, '15, bears the distinction of being the only Glee Club man who is a bona fide athlete. Heine is a good all-around weight man, but his favorite toy is the discus. Heine has heaved the Grecian pancake past the 120-foot mark.

Samuel Cook, '16, was Oregon's king-pin in the weights last season. Sam divides his time between the shot, the javelin, and the discus, but his best bet is the shot put. He won this event last year in the dual meets with Washington and O. A. C. and in the conference meet at Walla Walla. This season he has already tossed the sixteen-pound pill past the 42-foot mark.

1915 OREGONA 1915

Chester A. Fee, '17, is a jack-of-all-trades, and therefore a handy man to have around the Hayward ranch. Chet runs the 120-yard hurdles, throws the javelin, and essays the high jump and pole vault. He won the 120-yard hurdles from the O. A. C. and Washington steeplechasers, and took the pole vault at Corvallis at 11 feet. In the local Interfraternity meet he threw the javelin 152 feet.

No Freshman ever succeeded in smearing his name over the pages of athletic history at Oregon so prominently as did Linus Vere Windnagle, '16, in his one brief year here. Although "Windy" has chosen Cornell as the scene of his future exploits, the rooters will not soon forget the races he fought and won for Oregon. At any event from the quarter to the cross country, Windnagle was invincible. His wonderful endurance and gameness made it possible for him to win many points in every meet he entered.

This was the first year Oregon ever put a team on the mat. At a meeting of the representatives of the various conference colleges last fall, it was decided to establish wrestling as a conference sport, and to hold the first general meet in Portland, March 20 and 21. Although having no chance with the other Northwest colleges, which have been featuring this sport for years, Oregon entered a team.

The meet resulted in a tie between the University of Washington and Washington State College, each college winning three matches. None of the Oregon representatives survived their elimination matches. However, they made a good showing, considering their inexperience, ignorance of the rules in two cases being alone responsible for the defeat of the Oregon men. No doubt wrestling in time will become a student sport here, and with this year's work as a foundation, Oregon will turn out winning teams in future seasons.

 March 14, in Portland—Oregon, 0; Columbia University, 0.

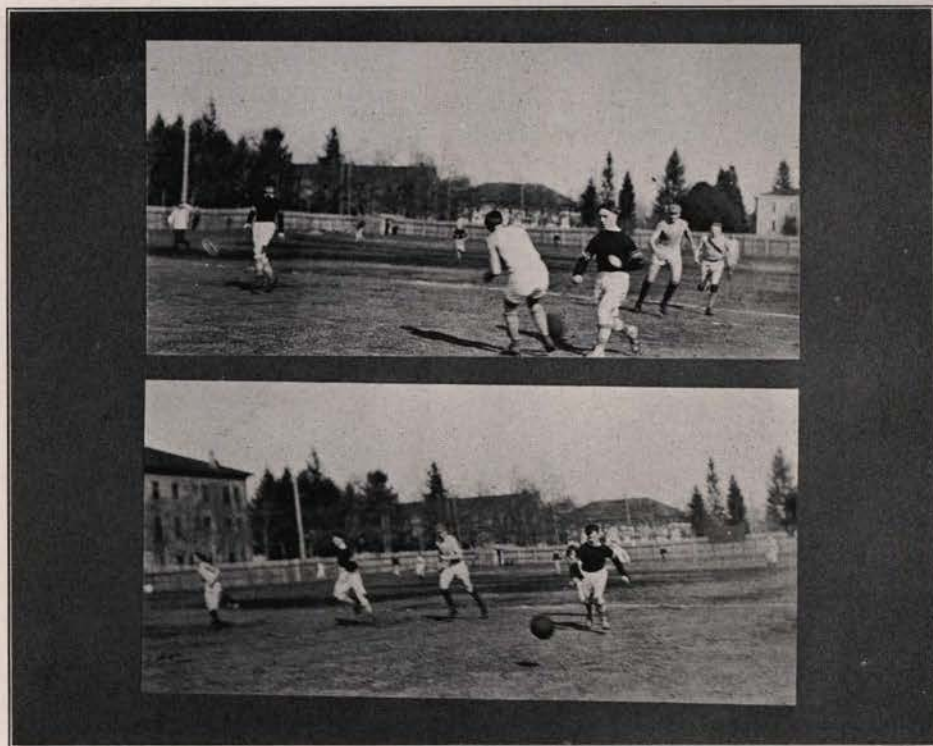

Previous to the fall of 1913, Association Football, or "soccer," was unknown at Oregon. Credit for its introduction here belongs to Professor Colin V. Dyment, of the Department of Journalism, who starred for the University of Toronto, and later for the Multnomah Club, of Portland. Dyment began by teaching the game to the Freshman and Sophomore gymnasium classes. Soon sufficient interest was developed to warrant the formation of a Varsity squad.

Finally a demand was created among the students for an opportunity to see a real contest. Columbia University, champion of the Portland Interscholastic League, was challenged, and two games arranged. The showing made by the inexperienced Oregon team in these games was remarkable, and the fact that it was twice able to hold the Portland preppers to a draw speaks well for the tutelage of Professor Dymont.

The game in Eugene was attended by a good crowd of students, who were roused to the extent of contributing some genuine American rooting to the bloomin' British sport. Next year will undoubtedly see an increase of interest in soccer at Oregon.

This fall the two upper classes revived the custom of the Senior-Junior football game. The Seniors took the initiative, believing their aggregation of former stars to be invincible, and hurled a challenge at the Juniors. It was defiantly accepted, and the game was played October 25, as an anti-climax to the Oregon-Idaho game. The result was a scoreless tie, neither backfield having enough wind to carry the ball over the enemies' goal-line.

SOPHOMORES 3; FRESHMEN, 0.

The annual Sophomore-Frosh game was played October 18, as a preliminary to the Varsity-Bremerton match. True to tradition, the Sophomores won, although by the close score of 3 to 0. The victors gleaned their three points on a field goal by Fee near the end of the game. More real football and less hand to hand fighting than has been usual in contests between the lower classes was noticeable, due to the vigilance of the eagle-eyed officials. Contrary to past history, at no time were more than three balls used in a single scrimmage. Fee and Bob Bean starred for the Sophomores, while Furney and Sheehan scintillated for the Frosh.

The Frosh this year committed the unpardonable offense of defeating the other three classes in the series for the interclass championship. However, they atoned for their crime by accomplishing the laudable feat of treating the O. A. C. rooks to a double massacre. In the last game, played in Eugene, Stewart's future stars did not get a single basket from the field. The Oregon Frosh had a lusty crew, and several of their players are certain to bob up on the Varsity line-up.

The race for the Hayward cup in the Interfraterniy Athletic League was as close this year as in the past, and a new winner came to the front in the Oregon Club. The series was started before Christmas, when the elimination games were played. At the end of these three teams remained for the finals: Oregon Club, Avava Club, and Sigma Nu. An adjournment was taken until after Christmas, when the three survivors engaged in a round-robin series to decide the championship. As a result, Sigma Nu was eliminated, and the Oregon Club won handily from the Avavas in the final contest, finishing the season without a defeat.

The holders of the Hayward cup have been as follows:

1911—Beta Theta Pi.

1913—Phi Gamma Delta.

1912—Kappa Sigma.

1914—Oregon Club.

The Interfraternity Baseball League each spring brings out a large crop of has-beens and might-have-beens, and furnishes amusement to both players and fans. The league serves to unearth and develop much promising material for "Bill" Hayward's track squad, if not for the baseball nine. Much experience in sprinting is obtained by the fielders in going after the numerous flies which are hammered out, while the base runners receive equally valuable training in distance running while the aforesaid flies are being fielded.

Last year's series furnished the unusual amount of comedy, with some pretty ball playing thrown in. Phi Gamma Delta succeeded in defeating the Avava Club in the final struggle, after a see-saw contest. The Fijis won by a great slugging bee, in the course of which Pitcher Walter Dobie was driven from the box, and Allie Grout stepped into the limelight as a second Hans Wagner. By winning this game, Phi Gamma Delta gained permanent possession of the second championship cup offered since the league was started, the first having been won by Sigma Nu in 1910.

The annual interclass cross country run this spring was won, as usual, by the Freshmen, who took all the first places. Floyd Payne led the field over the entire course of approximately three and one-half miles, finishing one minute and five seconds in advance of his nearest competitor. Payne's time was within five seconds of the record for the course, established by Windnagle last year, and had he been pressed he could undoubtedly have bettered that mark. Heavy mud in sections of the route also hindered the runners. The Seniors upheld their reputation for buffoonery by running the first lap, walking around the outside of Kincaid fence, and finishing well in advance of the field, carrying the extra weight of lighted "Fatimas."

The annual Interfraternity track meet last spring was won by the Zeta Phi fraternity (now Delta Tau Delta), by a single point over Sigma Nu. The meet was a see-saw affair until the last event, the mile relay, in which Vere Windnagle's speed turned the tide in favor of the Zeta Phis.

By winning this meet Zeta Phi gained possession of the Hayward cup for one year. The cup was held the year before by Sigma Chi, and must be won twice in succession by any fraternity to remain in its possession permanently.

Andrew Collier and Russell Calkins represented the Oregon Club last year, while Chauncey Casebeer and Harry Kuck were this year's duo. Greater interest has been developed in handball by its adoption as an Interfraternity League sport, and this year's tournament was marked by keen competition. The finals were especially exciting, Phi Delta Theta, the runners-up, forcing the winners to an extra game to decide the championship.

The Women's Athletic Association of the University of Oregon was organized in the spring of 1913, for the purpose of encouraging a further interest in athletic sports among the women of the University, and of developing greater physical efficiency among Oregon women here and throughout the state.

At present the organization consists of about 75 members, including the membership of the Tennis Club and Canoe Club. The sports now represented in the Association, and in which an increasing interest is being shown, are basketball, tennis, canoeing, walking, golf, archery, hockey, baseball, and track and field. As interest is shown in other sports, they will become organized and represented in the Association.

The Oregon Trail Girls

In the course of the Physical Training work for women at the University of Oregon, it became apparent that the majority of the women entering lacked in physical strength in some measure. Upon investigation, it was found that nearly all had, at ages from ten to twelve, ceased playing out of doors, or playing games of any sort except basketball.

To help correct this weakening tendency in the daughters of Oregon, Dr. Bertha S. Stuart, Director of Physical Training for Women at the University, has instituted an organization called The Oregon Trail Girls. It aims to interest every girl and woman in the state in out-of-door life and in organized play, because of the immense physical and mental benefit to be derived therefrom. It would seem to be one of the chief economies for the state that its young women become physically more efficient, and hence mentally more alert.

For the first time in the history of Oregon the girls have met representatives of another college in an athletic contest. Last June Oregon Agricultural College accepted a challenge to play on the Oregon courts, and after a hotly contested tournament, was defeated.

Frances Adams and Bess Cowden wielded the racquet for Oregon, while Ann Rutledge and Esther Hartong defended the orange and black. Miss Adams met Miss Rutledge the first day of the tournament, and was defeated 2 sets out of 3. In the doubles which followed, 3 sets out of 5 were awarded to Oregon, and next day Miss Cowden clinched the championship by taking 2 out of 3 in singles with Miss Rutledge.

In the return tournament at Corvallis this fall, Oregon lost with Bess Cowden and Edna Harvey pitted against Ann Rutledge and Ruth Shepherd. O. A. C. took both the singles and doubles.

All tennis matches are arranged and managed by the Women's Tennis Club which had been an independent organization since 1908, and but recently became a part of the Women's Athletic Association.

The Tennis Club hopes to make the tournament with O. A. C. a semi-annual event, and even aspires to meeting Berkeley in the near future, as the prospects of a Class AA team are very bright this spring.

Although in past seasons all the women's organizations have taken part in the Interfraternity series, the race this season lay between only two teams. Kappa Alpha Theta had already once won the Emerald cup, and the Oregon Club was the only other organization to dispute its possession. The Emerald cup was offered in 1910 as a trophy for these games with the provision that the team winning it the second time should keep it permanently. In two well-played contests the Thetas were victorious, and the cup will therefore remain a fixture on their mantle.

Commencement

COMMENCEMENT is coming more and more to be an event of importance on the college calendar and one in which the students generally participate. Time was when no one thought of staying over for Commencement, unless he was due to receive a diploma. As soon as the last examinations were over, the students caught the first train out of Eugene, and left the graduates to graduate by themselves.

The change has been brought about by the modification of the ordinary cut-and-dried Commencement program, so that it presents sufficient attraction for a large and increasing number of non-combatants to remain. Such features as the campus lunch, (which, by the way, did not happen last year), the open-air dramatic productions, the fern and flower procession, and the Senior Ball, together with the high class of music and the eminence of the speakers provided, have served to revolutionize Commencement week here.

Last year rain interfered with a part of the program, but it did not prevent both students and visitors from enjoying its many good features. The 1913 Commencement program was arranged with a special view of luring the alumni back to their old haunts, and that it accomplished that purpose was proved by the large number of old grads who were present at the alumni meetings Tuesday and the banquet and reunion Wednesday.

One of the most impressive sights during Commencement is the procession of Seniors in caps and gowns, as they file into Villard Sunday morning for the Baccalaureate sermon, and again Wednesday to receive their diplomas. Last year's class, containing 125-odd members, was the second largest which was ever graduated from the University.

This year it is planned to make Commencement even more interesting and to provide added incentive for the students to remain. Take the advice of those who stayed last year, and do likewise. You'll find it well worth your while. Besides, in the dim vista of the future you yourself may climb the steps of Villard stage to receive your sheepskin, and if you do, you'll appreciate seeing not only father and mother, but some of the boys as well in the audience.

1915 OREGANA 1915

1913 Junior Week-End

Old settlers, like Bob Fariss and "Red" VanMarter, who have stuck around the Oregon campus since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, aver that Junior Week-Ends come in rotation as to weather. If it is so hot one year that your collar wilts at the Prom, there is certain to be a visitation of Oregon mist the next, and vice versa. If this tradition is well founded, Old Sol will surely beam on this year's circus, because his old enemy, Jupiter Pluve, had everything his own way last May.

The gentle rain started to fall Friday noon, about the time the University Day laborers had lain aside their implements and Fatimas and had sat down on their shins to enjoy the co-eds' hand-out. As the day progressed the skies became more and more tearful, while Graduate Manager Geary sat in his lair tearing his hair as he visualized the coveted kopecks that were slipping from his grasp. By the time for the big Interscholastic Meet Saturday, there was a flood on Kincaid Field which would have caused Noah to jump off the ark in a life-preserver.

But did we let a little thing like rain dampen our enthusiasm? Nix! Or, to express it in the king's or Professor Thurber's English, most decidedly not. We sat in the grandstand and shivered ecstatically while some heroic prepper waded through the mire for the glory of Skunk Hollow High School, and in the evening we waltzed our affinity up to the Prom, holding the umbrella so that it dripped down her neck instead of our own, after lying about not being able to find a cab.

Verily, last year's Junior Week-End was a great show, in spite of the weather. The festivities started Wednesday with the baseball game with Washington. Thursday another game was played with the same team, followed by the finals in the State High School Debating League in the evening.

The real excitement of the early part of Junior Week-End, however, is furnished by the incoming preppers. The vanguard generally arrives about Wednesday. From this time until the exodus, which takes place Sunday, our young friends own the University. College men vie for the privilege of carrying their suit-cases. Co-eds admiringly gaze on their high school pins and other regalia.

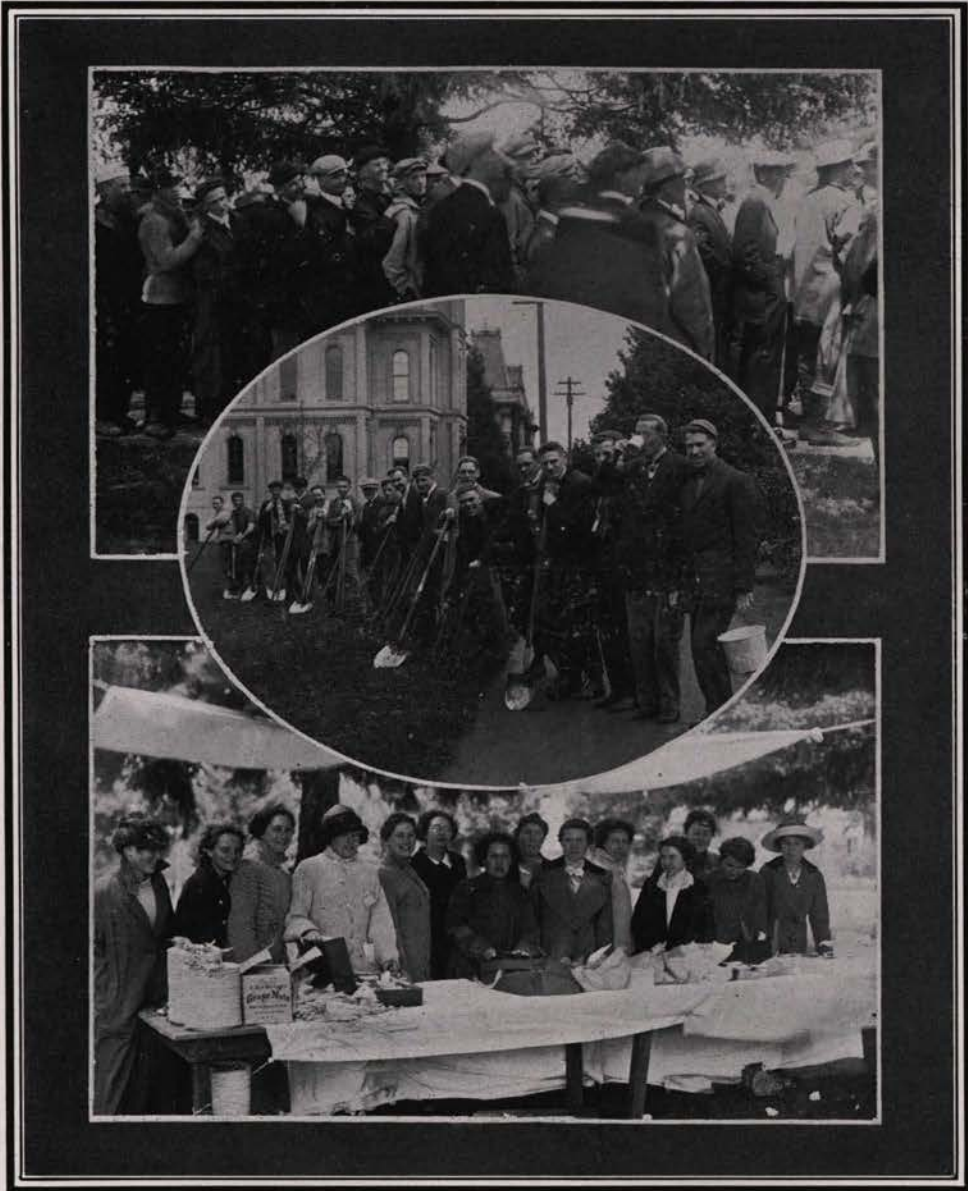

During Junior Week-End the prepper is king. He is wined and dined, flattered and fondled. On his tours of inspection of the campus he is attended by a train of solicitous followers. At night he sleeps between snowy linen, just washed for the first time in six months, while the owner of the aforementioned linen reclines on the floor or the top of the piano.

And it is altogether fitting and proper that it should be so. The prepper comes but once a year; he is our guest; and it is well that he should see the ravishing side of college life. He'll get enough of the other side later,—if he ever becomes a Freshman.

But to return to last year's Week-End. It is enough to say that it was a success. The track meets were exciting, the work on University Day was not too arduous, the campus lunch was delicious, and there were plenty of eats to go around; and finally, the Prom was as jolly and jammy as ever.

After all is said and done, we're glad it's over, but we wouldn't have missed it. Agitators may agitate for the abolishment of Junior Week-End, but no doubt it will be with us always, although its objectionable features will largely be eradicated. It's the only time when the University puts on its glad rags and plays the host and good fellow to everybody.

1915 OREGANA 1915

This year's Underclass Mix was a repetition of its two predecessors in that the Sophomores administered the usual chastisement to the Frosh, the final score being 60 to 29. In originality and number of thrills per minute, however, the 1913 Mix was a record-breaker, according to the concensus of opinion of the big crowd which saw it.

Promptly at 1:45 the blast of a bugle announced to the waiting spectators that the Mix was on. Immediately afterward the vanguard of the Freshman line serpentine through the east gate of Kincaid Field. Each Frosh wore a gunny-sack decorated with the numerals of his class in green paint, and his face was smeared a bright red. At the head of the phalanx was borne an unprepossessing dummy labeled "Soph." When the first-year warriors had halted in the center of the field and had given the usual yells, they lighted a bonfire and threw the dummy on it, thus burning the 1916 class in effigy.

No sooner had the audacious Frosh retired to the section of the grandstand reserved for them than their traditional foes and oppressors, the Sophomores, entered the field, led by their band. The Sophs executed the familiar "stunt" of forming an "O" in the center of the field and strewing confetti over it. The judges evitently were more favorably impressed with the efforts of the Freshmen, for they awarded the yearlings the ten points for the best "stunt." At the same time, however, the Sophomores received ten points for decorations, while the ten points for appearance and yells were divided between the two classes, so that the first arenic event, the cap rush, was started with both on even terms.

In this contest a prodigious cap, fully three feet in diameter, and made of heavy canvas and painted green, in imitation of the regulation Freshman bonnet, was put up as an excuse for the argument. At a given signal thirty picked men from each side made a rush for it, and after ten minutes of furious milling, a census of the hands on the cap was taken. It was found that the Sophomores led by a score of 26 to 15 hands.

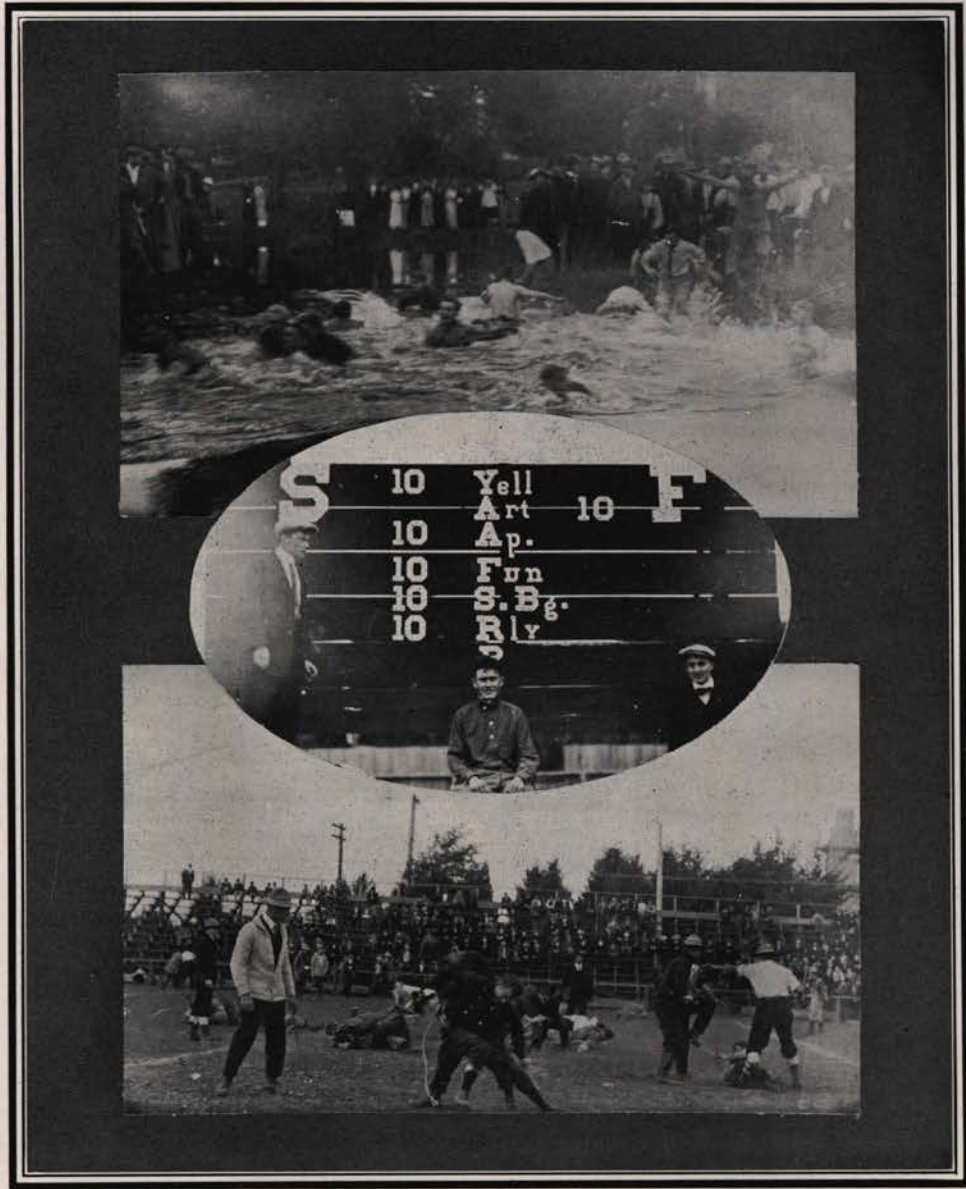

The next clash was in the tie-up contest. Fifteen huskies from each class were selected, and each given a piece of rope with which to fetter his adversary. After time had been called and the fifteen embracing couples had been pried apart, it was found that each class had tied up two opponents, and the ten points were divided evenly between them.

Now came the battle royal, the sand-bag contest. Forty-six men from each class were lined up at opposite ends of the field, and as many bags, weighing 50 pounds apiece, piled up in the center. The object was for each class to try to carry as many bags as possible over the opposing goal line. After heavy carnage on both sides, the Sophs were victorious by 14 bags to ten.

For the final event, the tug-of-war, the contestants and spectators adjourned to the banks of the campus pond. As usual, the Freshmen had the heaviest team and looked like winners, but, also as usual, strategy and outside aid carried the day for the Sophomores. While the spectators obligingly crowded together on the Sophomores' side of the pond so as to hide the wily second-year men from view, the end of the rope was attached to the rear axle of an automobile, and the astonished Frosh were ignominiously dragged through the pond.

Thus ended the third Underclass Mix. Victors and vanquished shook hands and went home to recount their feats and nurse their bruises while hazing—please get this, gentle reader—hazing, with all its attendant evils and abuses, ceased officially until next year.

Directions to Accompany Our Jokes

Gentle reader, or ferocious reader, as the case may be: we don't mean to cast any slurs at our jokes or your sense of humor, but we really ought to come to some understanding before we go any farther. To tell the truth, we think you ought to close the book here. It is possible that in the following pages you will find some mention of yourself. Now, way down in the innermost recesses of your soul you will be tickled half to death by the recognition, but of course it would never do to let your friends know it. You must pretend to be infuriated. You always did shrink from notoriety. Your sensitive feelings have been outraged. You shall have r-r-revenge!!

That's all right. Go as far as you like with that talk, but don't tell it to us. Tell it to Sweeney—you'll find him at the Fiji house. (First offense.) Anyway, don't tell us, because our heart is so hardened and our hide so tough and calloused by this time that we are alike incapable of pity or fear.

Besides, we have warned you. If you read on, it is at your own risk. However, if you are not a sorehead or a bonehead, we really believe you can digest it all and still suppress that desire to murder someone. Let this thought console you: How much morse it would have been if we had told the whole TRUTH!

"With malice toward none, with charity for all," we have tried to portray the lighter vein of college life. What follows was written for laughing purposes only. We have not tried to reform the University or smash its idols. If now and then we have touched upon some existing frailty or foible of students or faculty, it has been in a spirit of fun rather than ridicule. We have not intentionally singled out any person or any institution as a target. If you happened to be a likely subject, the chances are we have not forgotten you.

Peace be with you!

Many Thanks

Last fall we thought of a plan whereby the students might be given an opportunity to give vent to their sense of humor and at the same time help out our Feature department. We fixed up a nice tin box with a hole in the lid, labeled it "Oregana," and placed it in the Library. The Emerald was kind enough to announce for us several times where the box could be found and what it was for. We awaited expectantly the eventful day on which we would reopen it and the pleasant surprise that would be in store for us. The result proves both the effectiveness of the Emerald as an advertising medium and the eagerness with which the students take advantage of any opportunity to aid a good cause, and at this time we wish to thank all our contributors and to express our appreciation for their hearty support. When opened, the box was found to contain four jokes (?), one collar button, four ordinary trousers-buttons, one plugged nickle, two beer checks, and one Bull Durham tag.

Why Percy Flunked Out

If the Old Grandstand Could Tell

The old grandstand is still tonight, and through the mystic haze
 It seems to look on Kincaid Field and brood o'er vanished days.
 Its sides are marred and smeared with paint; its seats are warped and worn;
 And soon, so rumor says, by ruthless hands it will be torn
 To make way for the buildings we have needed many a day:—
 Ah, well! New things must come, of course, and old ones pass away;
 Yet, if its planks and rafters could but speak, before it fell
 I'd like to hear the story that the old grandstand would tell.

On that historic field, deserted now and wrapped in gloom,
 The specters of the old-time football heroes seem to loom;
 John Edmundson and Shattuck; Dick Smith of fullback fame,
 The Templetons and Latourettes, all wizards at the game,
 Old "Khaki" Moullen, who could kick a field-goal in his sleep,
 And Moores and Chandler, ends who made the rival rooters weep.
 Such men won fame for Oregon and fought her battles well;
 Their feats would fire our blood again, if the old grandstand could tell.

Where are the rooters who on yonder bleachers used to flock?
 And where the men who led the cheers that caused the earth to rock?
 Carl Loosly, "Art" VanDusen, "Tubby" Alton,—where are they?
 "Ike" Fountain, "Beauty" Robison, the Sousas of their day.
 The scions of another generation calmly perch
 Upon the bleachers now, too oft as if they were in church.
 Those old-time rooters had the "pep" which no defeat could quell;
 Their spirit might inspire us still, if the old grandstand could tell.

And sometimes, so 'tis whispered, when the twilight shadows fall,
 The victims of Dan Cupid pay the old grandstand a call,
 And many a lass there hears her swain vow he'll be ever true,—
 And wonders just how many others he has told it to.
 It's all a part of college education, but I fear
 If all the gossips knew, some studes would beat it out of here;
 For college "cases" change, and college lovers lie like everything,
 So perhaps it's very lucky that the old grandstand can't tell.

The Proverbs of Solomon The Younger

CHAPTER I

THE PARABLE OF THE TWO STUDES

1. My son, attend unto my Wisdom, and bow thine ear to my Understanding; for I have stuck around this Institution four years; verily, I am wise to the Game.

2. Lifting up mine eyes from the Shrine of the Great God Nicotine, which is in the Thirteenth street car station, hard by the campus,

3. I beheld among the Simple Ones, I discerned among the youths, a young man void of understanding; that is to say, a Freshman.

4. And lo! he was arrayed in a Coat of Many Colors; his Prep School Pin glistened on his Lapel like a Phoney Diamond on a Soubrette; yet was the Green Stetson absent from his Cupola.

5. Then spake the Old Leaguers one unto another: Pipe yonder Monstrosity; is this a Hop Dream, or have we an importation from the Neighboring Bovine Academy? In sooth, who left the gate open?

6. And it came to pass, in the twilight, in the evening, in the Black and Dark Night, that the Angels of Wrath descended upon this Freshman and nabbed him.

7. As an Ox goeth to the Slaughter, or as a Horseless Stude hasteneth to a Final Ex, so went he with them.

8. And when they were come unto the Mill-race, they baptized him with Water; divers times did they make him bubble, before they would suffer him to beat it.

9. And it came to pass that, whereas he had been a Fathead, now he became a sorehead as well; he refused to be put wise; he was sourballed on the institution.

10. And presently he arose, and shook the dust of Eugene from his Nettletons, and beat it to the Parental Fireside; and he was seen no more upon the campus.

11. And if any man asketh after this Freshman, speaking his name, the Wise Men shake their heads, saying, Who thell's he?

12. Hear ye, my son, the yarn of another Freshman who stayed in the Game and played his Hand, and copped a Slice of the Pot on the Showdown.

13. Now this Freshman, if anything, had a Shade on the first in General Verdancy; but he carried less bone in his attic and a trifle more along his Spinal Column.

14. And he pulled the usual number of Ivory Plays which, it seemeth, every frosh must work out of his System before he begins to grow up, and was duly immersed for his Coarse Work; yet did he keep his trap fairly well under control in the presence of his elders, neither did he pass up any Straight Tips that came his way.

15. And it came to pass that in his Sophomore Year he waxed somewhat bolder; he began to breeze around in a Quiet Way, as is becoming to a Last Year's Freshman, until gradually the college began to notice that he was alive; yet was he careful to key down when it was his cue.

16. And when he had become an Upperclassman, behold, he was numbered amonk the Wise Men; he sat in the Councils of the Mighty; he was something of a Noise upon the Campus; he was a Face Card instead of a two-spot.

17. And he copped a sheepskin, and went out to exchange wallops with the Cold World.

18. But nevertheless, when the Future Generations cast their glims over the dope-sheet of the alumni, they may not slip the label of our humble hero a Frappe Stare; perchance they will say: He has fought a Good Fight; he has finished his Course; he has delivered the Merchandise; he is an Oregon Man.

CHAPTER II

GENERAL ADVICE TO FRESHMAN

1. Therefore, my son, receive my Words, and hide my Comphandments with thee.

2. As a Full House on a Five-card Draw, or a Paid Admission at an Offering by the Class in Dramatic Interpretation, is a frosh who hath discretion; for verily he is a Rare Article and a Pearl of Great Price.

3. As a House Mother at a Rag Party, or a coat of orange and black on the cement "O," is a Frosh who lacketh understanding; he is an abomination.

4. Before a Frosh can enter the Kingdom of Tiffany, he must be born again.

5. If thou wert a Loud Noise in thy Home Village; if thou comest with something of a Rep, keep it dark; forget that thou ever hadst a prep school.

6. Be not deceived: ten to one the University has never heard of you at all, and does not realize what a Prize Package it is getting; nor will there be any Marked Distrubance in the Atmosphere when you breeze in.

7. Therefore be admonished, and do not look for a Rousing Welcome, nor make the mistake of trying to be your own Brass Band.

1915 OREGANA 1915

8. Perchance the members of the Glad Hand Delegation will be at the train to fall on your Neck and glom your Suitcase, which signifies that the Tappa Kega Ryes are game to take a Chance on you.

9. Nevertheless, let it not go to your Head; their joy at seeing you will end when you are pledged; remember, the higher thou fliest, the harder wilt thou drop.

10. When thou hast called on the Registrar and divorced thyself from the customary Eighteen Kopecks, tarry not until thou hast found a Joint where thou canst swap Fifty Centimes for a Green Shingle.

11. For it is easier for a Camel to pass through the Eye of a Needle, or a Four-flusher through Jimmy Gilbert's Course, than for a Frosh minus the regulation Awning to get by the Vigilance Committee.

12. A few other Commandments, set down by Moses the Younger in the Annual Proclamation against Freshmen in 1912:

13. Thou shalt be humble before Upperclassmen and Sophomores.
14. Thou shalt not rest thy haunches upon the sacred Senior Bench.
15. Thou shalt not taste the Joys of Nicotine upon the Campus.
17. Six days shalt thou labor, and to play safe make it Seven.
18. Honor and obey thy Profs, that thy days may be long upon the Campus.

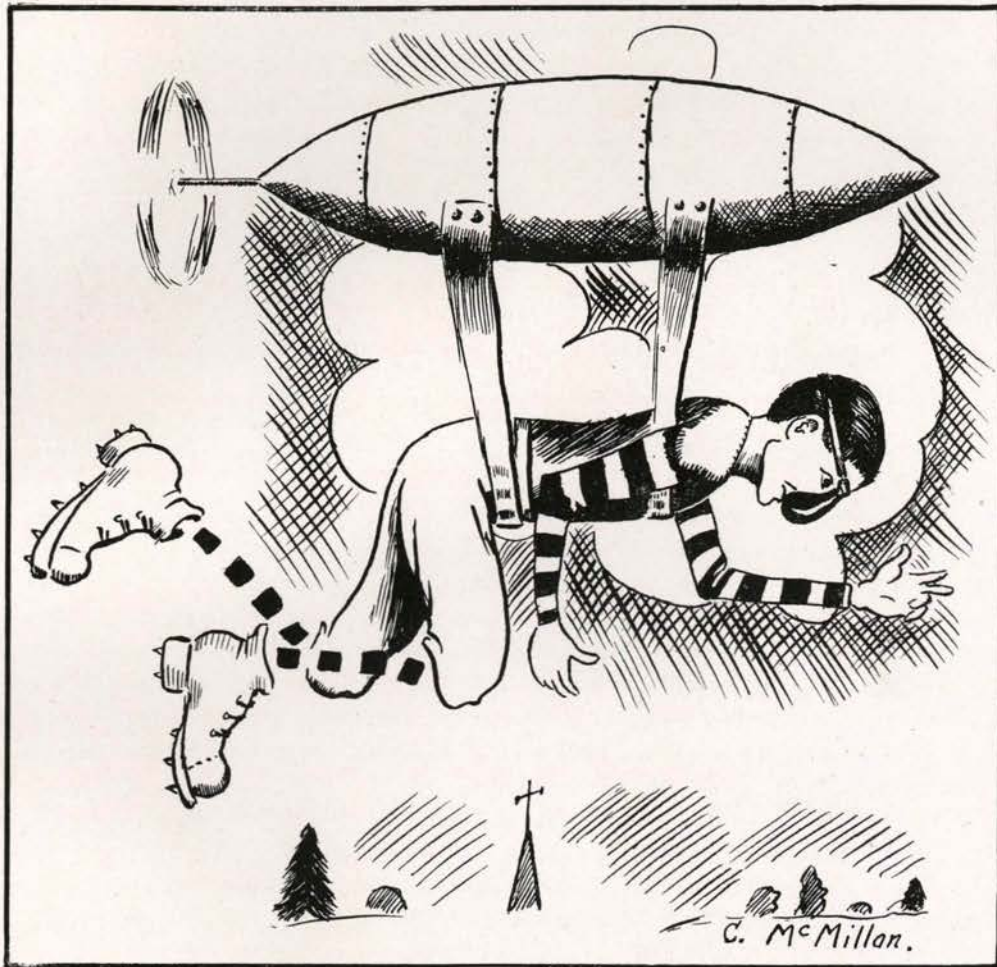

16. Thou shalt not commit Puns.
19. Thou shalt lift up thy Voice upon the Rooters' Bench, and there only.
20. Thou shalt not covet the Village Maidens, nor frequent the Dens of Iniquity of This or Neighboring Cities.

CHAPTER III

INTERCOURSE WITH THE FACULTY

1. A Wise Stude maketh a glad Prof, but a Foolish Stude is the heaviness of the Faculty.
2. My son, when thou goest forth to register, see that thou dopest out the Right Course; that is to say, one that is neither too stiff nor too soft.
3. Heed not the Counsel of the Wicked, nor seek too diligently after Pipes; for all is not a Pipe that is hollow.
4. When thou goest into the Presence of they Instructor, let thy Countenance be grave and thy Demeanor circumspect; listen attentively and pretend to be somewhat awed; it all helps.
5. When thou goest to class, if thou cravest fat grades, sit not in the rear with the Roughs and chew Tobacco, but get under the Gun; cop a seat in the Parquet Circle. Let thy phiz wear a simple and trusting expression; gaze earnestly upon the Prof, and appear to ponder over the Words of Wisdom that fall from his Lips, even though thy Thoughts are of some Foxy Muff or That Last Hand of Poker.
6. If your Prof. is a Monologue Artist, let your Waterman ramble over the Paper. No matter what you write, make a Stall at taking Notes. Nothing queers you with a Prof. like an Honest Indifference to what he is saying.
7. If he is a Comedian, let him know that you regard him as a second Eddie Foy. Let not a single Joke pass by without getting a Rise out of you; if it is an Old Favorite, seem unable to control yourself; if necessary, fall off your chair in a fit of laughter. He will admire you for your Keen Sense of Humor.
8. When you meet a Prof. in the Street, always accord him a Military Salute, and call him Doctor; it maketh no difference whether the only Degree he ever earned is a B. S. from Squashville Seminary, never omit the Doctor. This is important.
9. A Correct Answer turneth away Wrath, but a Bonehead Comeback getteth its author the Hook.
10. Honesty is the Best Policy,—when the Prof. is watching.

A FLYING TACKLE

ON THE GENTLE ART OF PIGGING

1. This is a revised version of the Adam and Eve Incident, being in the nature of a Scoop Story, and not found in the Good Book.

2. Adam dwelt in the Garden of Eden, so the Yarn goes; and the Lord said, It is not good that the Man should be alone; therefore he removed one of Adam's Slats by Painless Extraction, Adam being engrossed in the Morpheus Act at the Time, and created Eve.

3. And it came to pass that upon the Morrow Adam arose, and no sooner had he finished cussing his Big Ben alarm clock than he lamped Eve some distance away, floused out in her Nattiest Fig-Leaf.

1915 OREGANA 1915

4. And Adam said unto himself, Some Rib, Bo, Some Rib.
5. Nevertheless, he determined to go easy on the Start, for he did not want to get in bad; therefore did he wait until evening, and then did he call her up over the Phone.
6. And Adam spake unto Eve, saying, Say, Little One, have you got a Date for tomorrow p. m.?
7. And Eve countered, Nix; why do you ask?
8. Then spake Adam again, saying, How about a Small Stroll around the Garden?
9. And Eve answered and said, Gotcha, Steve; I think it would be perfectly lovely.
10. This, my son, was the beginning of the great game of pigging, so popular in college,—a very cold game, as you see, and yet one of the least understood.
11. Verily, it cannot be learned from a Spalding guide, nor can it be doped out according to Hoyle. Every player must follow his own system; yet a few gentle tips may not come in amiss.
12. Like unto the Pastime of Poker is the Game of Pigging, for they all take a Whirl sooner or later, and the players may be divided into Four Classes: those who make a Stake and Retire, those who are frozen out, those who drop out through lack of interest, and those who are always playing and getting cleaned up, because they cannot resist the Fascination of the Game.
13. First, my son, let me correct a few False Hunches which you may entertain in regard to this Game.
14. A Common Fallacy is that the Successful Romeo must have the figure of an Apollo, the manners of a Chesterfield, the riches of Croesus, and the manliness of the Hero of an Essenay Two-Reel Special.
15. In other words, to pluck the Choice Fruit in the Garden of Love, you have to look like an Advertisement for Society Brand Clothing, dress like a Head Waiter, dance like a Vernon Castle, massage the Ivories like Paderewski, peddle a Line of Talk that would choke a Victrola, and rescue a Forlorn Maiden every Morning before Breakfast.
16. A glance at the Lucky Dogs who polish the Window Seats in our Leading Sororities and trot out the Big League Stuff at the College Clinches will show that Such is not the Case.
17. Some of our Greatest Rascals with the Women go to pieces whenever the Conversation drifts away from the subject of the Weather, and they seldom spend anything on their Adored Ones except Time.

1915 OREGANA 1915

18. The question naturally arises, What is the secret of their success? How do they cut the Mustard?

19. Bulldog Tenacity, unlimited Patience, and Unflinching Nerve seem to be the Main Requisites.

20. The ability to hand out unadulterated Guff for 29 Minutes while using the Receiver of a Telephone as a Chin Rest has any other Accomplishment beaten to a Pulp for Results.

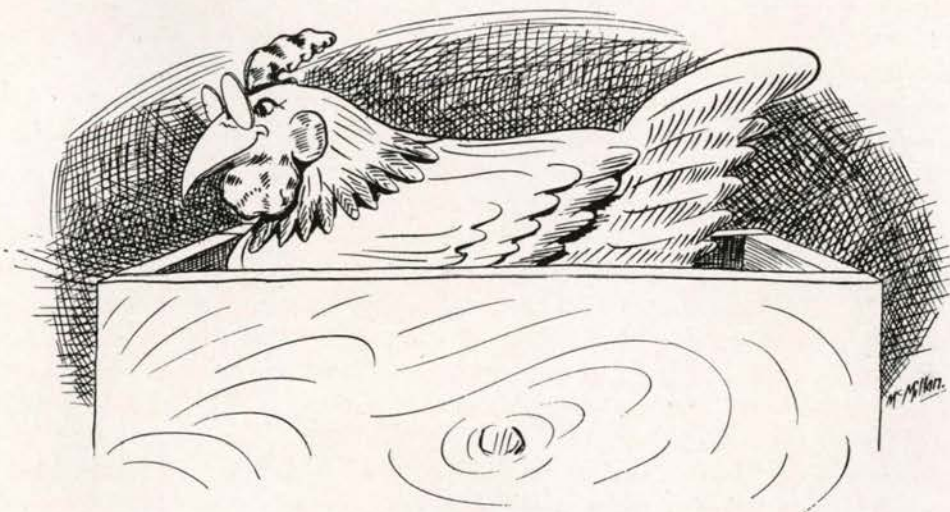

21. The Candidate with the Crust to date up a Bearcat for the Junior Prom 11 months in advance is the Lad who brings home the Kale every Time.

22. On the Other Hand, it is the China Doll who can play eight Victims at a time and keep them all in Good Humor, and who can stand up to the Hello Spout for an Entire Evening and Finish strong, who makes the Largest Collection of Fraternity Pins.

23. Verily, Endurance is more to be desired than Mere Speed, and Hard, Consistent Work than Great Riches.

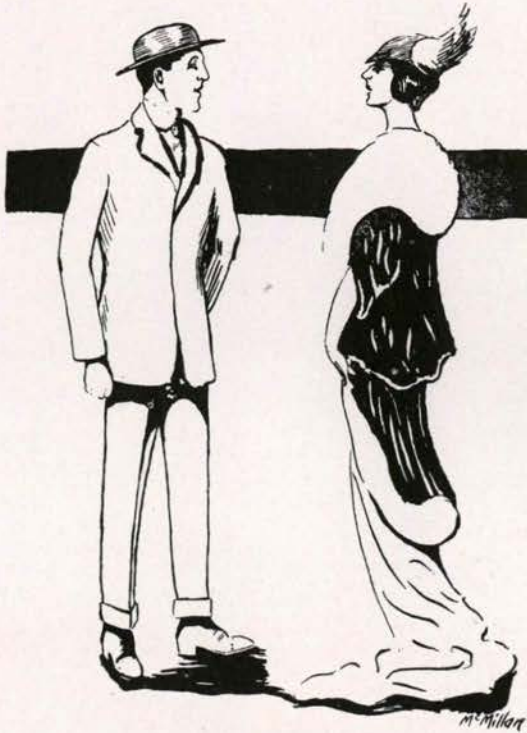

24. A Stake Trotter may burn up a Fast Track, but it takes a Brewery Horse to pull in the Mud.

25. Therefore, my son, if thou desirest above All Things to shine as a Social Tungsten, be of Good Cheer, stay on the Job, and learn to take Punishment, and my Money is on you. Selah!

Eugene Milkman—"Then it will be five cents more."

"Mr. Jones, your daughter says she is as true to me as the stars above, and that she can never care for another."

Prof. Leonard in Thoughtful Mood

Soliloquy of an Eight o'Clock

Gee! What a night last night! And what a head
 This morning! Wish I might have stayed in bed
 And warmed the Ostermoor till noon,—but nix!
 The Prof is joh nny-wise to all my tricks;
 My cuts are all used up; I'm on the brink
 Of ruin.—Where's the lesson? Let me think.
 Last time I pulled a bluff and got away;
 I'm done for if he calls on me today.
 Perhaps he'll pass me up.—Ye gods, what doubt!
 I wonder what they're trying to talk about.
 Lay over, Bill, don't rouse me from my dream.
 I wonder what the chances of the team
 Will be next Saturday. We've got to win;
 We'll do it, too, if Anse Cornell goes in
 And Fenton's right. Well, if we don't, I see
 Where Willie will go into bankruptcy,—
 And not a sou from home for three long weeks.
 Gee, what a prospect! Hark, an angel speaks!
 It's that blonde doll I danced with at the hop
 Reciting. There's a girl I'd like to cop;
 That is, if I had time and dough to queen
 And competition wasn't quite so keen.
 That wad of hair reminds me of the peach
 I stuck around last summer at the beach,
 Except that hers was darker and more fluffed.
 Gee! That was once the Prof could not be bluffed.
 That stall of Bill's has made the old boy sore.
 Will I be next? Lord, fifteen minutes more!
 But, speaking of the fair sex, after all
 It's only once a guy will really fall;
 Anr my once came back home in high school. Gee!
 I wonder if she ever thinks of me,
 And does she still remember our last vow
 That we'd be true? It's funny, but somehow
 Such girls don't come to college as a rule,
 I've noticed. Well, enough of dear prep school.
 A college man's expected to forget

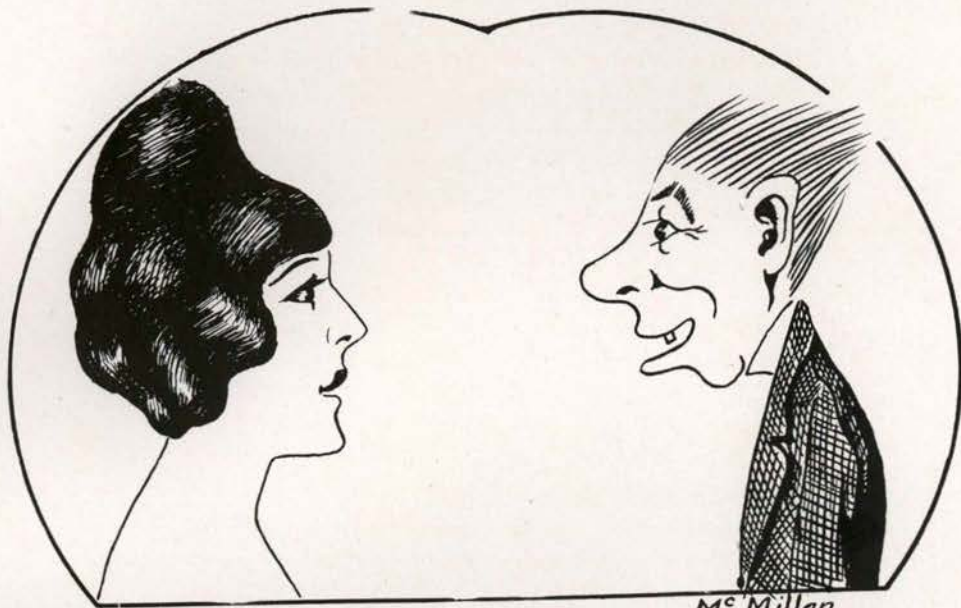

Those childish days. Ten weary minutes yet!
 Hello, they're laughing! Must have been a gag
 Sprung by the prof.—And me caught off the bag.
 I always try to laugh at every joke;
 Again I'll be in bad. Oh, for a smoke!
 Some consolation from the filthy weed!
 As soon as I get out I'll put on speed,
 Hit for the old hang-out on Thirteenth street,
 Where some kind-hearted stude I'm sure to meet
 Who'll lend to me the makings. Then, perchance,
 Some maid to me will coyly slip a glance;
 And if it's Bess, we'll stroll about a while
 Or sit upon the steps, and there beguile
 The time away with gossip. If it's Grace
 We'll take a book and paddle up the race.—
 I almost hope it's Grace instead of Bess.
 This isn't such a bad old world, I guess.—
 I mean, it won't be if I get away
 Without being called on to recite today.
 I do believe I'm saved,—that bell is due.
 Why won't it ring? Kind Fortune, pull me through!
 What's that, professor? Did you call on me?
 I didn't understand—in fact, you see—
 I'm sorry, but I didn't quite prepare
 The entire lesson.—See the old boy glare!
 Oh, what an ass I am!—There goes the bell.
 He's got my goat. Another goose-egg! Hell!

VIGILANCE OF POLICE FUTILE

Charles W. McMillan
1914

"Hank"

"Jack"

The Adventure of Heine the Sleuth and Jack the Grab

At Oregon there lived a youth, and he was wondrous 'wise';
 He never fell for skirts, forsooth, or clas; or pretty eyes,
 Instead, this husky spent his time at study and at lab,
 And let his evenings pass away in chasing Jack-the-Grab.

One night as Henry homeward went, the movie show closed down,
 His final fifteen shekels spent, the "good-night" picture thrown,
 All of a sudden through the air rang out a piercing screech,
 "Jack-the-Grab is out again," quoth Henry Heidenreich.

Our Henry skitted through the block, and blood was in his eye,
 "I'll get my shotgun out of hock and chase him down or die!"
 "Succor! Succer!" cried the maid; "I'm coming," Hank replied,
 And thinking he was Jack come back, again the ladies shied.

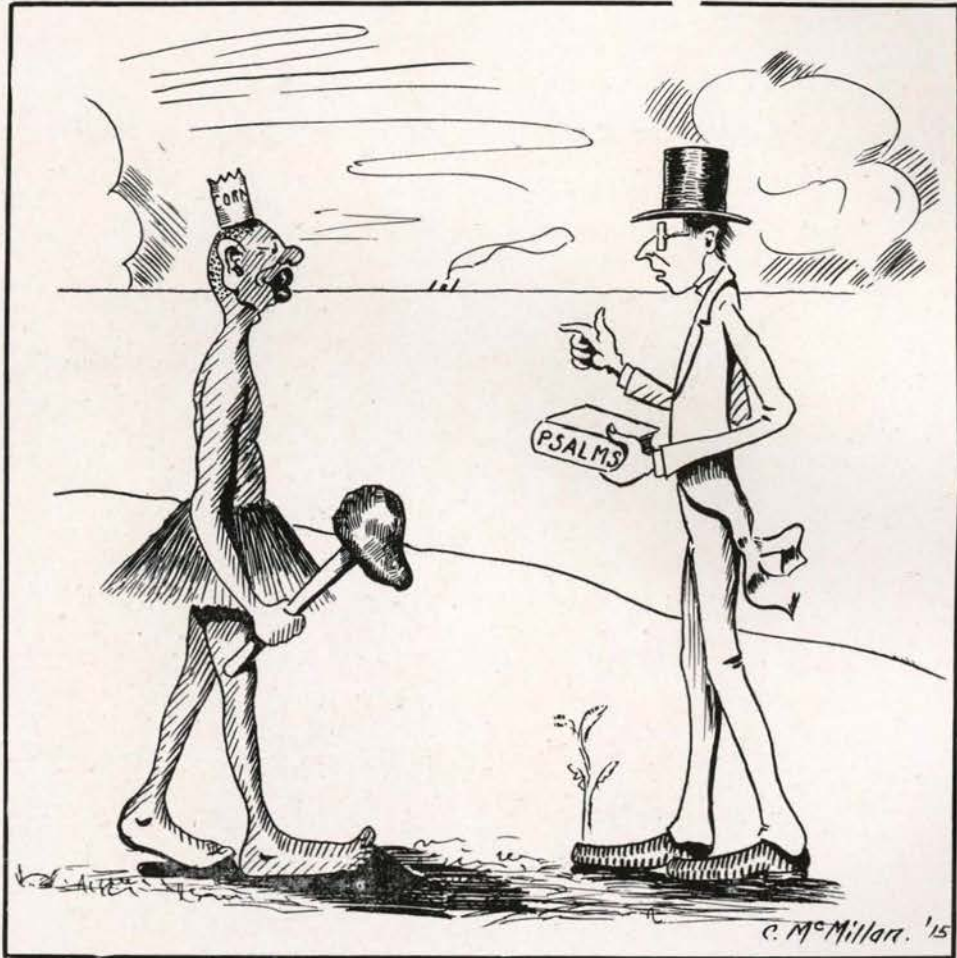

The husky Junior made it plain, he warn't the Foxy Jack,
 He soothed the ladies' nerves again, and took 'em to their shack,
 Then said he, as he wandered home, "'Tis time somebody licked 'm,"
 And lo, behind a tree was Jack, a-waiting for a victim.

The Grabber neatly jumped the hedge, with Henry close behind,
 The neighbors ceased their snoring and threw up the window blind.
 "Good gracious!" quoth the Junior, "I'm sure I'd rather not Be taken for a burglar and my skin filled up with shot."

Across the lot sped frightened Jack, and nimbly took the fence,
 "This is no place for me," he hissed, "I'll hie me quickly hence."
 He vanished in the darkness like a spectre or mirage,*
 And the one best college fixture still seems to be at large.

TO FATIMA

(Dedicated to the habitues of the Thirteenth street station.)

Here's to my lady Fatima,
That mistress seductive and fair,
Who holds me, a captive submissive,
With smoke-fetters drifting in air.
When other maids prove cold and faithless,
When other friends shun my distress,
I turn to my charming Fatima
And seek solace in her caress.

What though she has slaves by the thousand
Who worship with me at her shrine?
What though her warm lips for their kisses
Are yielded, as well as for mine?
Why wish to withhold her from others
And selfishly call her my own?
To me she is ever as constant
As if I adored her alone.

At the Prom

Before the Grand March.

He says:

Well, Maude, we're here at last; and all that hurry
 For nothing. I've seen Junior Proms before.—
 They never start on time. Well, I should worry!
 With you to talk to no delay's a bore—

She says:

It's dear of you to say it. I'd be happy
 To sit like this all evening—just us two;
 But really, Bob, I wish they'd make it snappy
 And get the grand march over with. Don't you?

He says:

That's me. Why don't they cut it out, I wonder?
 A rest before the crawl would do no harm;
 Besides, somebody's sure to make a blunder,—
 There goes the music now. Just take my arm.
 Gee, what a mob! Your gown, my dear, is charming,—
 Be careful, or they'll use you for a rug.
 Lord! Fifteen rounds like this,—it's sure alarming.
 To stand the pace a guy should be a pug.

She says:

Ouch! Some one stepped on me. See all the dresses!
 Nell shows a lot of nerve to wear that skirt!
 I s'pose we'll have to meet the patronesses.—
 Turn this way, quick.—Who is that blonde with Bert?
 I see so many unfamiliar faces;
 The place seems almost strange to me, somehow.
 It's fun to pipe the latest college cases,—
 Who was that girl who spoke to you just now?
 The one in pink charmeuse, with Willie Queener?
 They're laughing at us. My, she has a crust!
 Don't try to act as if you hadn't seen her;
 Who is that, Bob?—I do believe you're fussed.

He thinks:

Ye gods! Flo Keene, from my home town. Damnation!
 I asked her to this dance six months ago!
 She said, when she turned down my invitation,

1915
1915

She couldn't make it up here. Oh, you Flo!
 And with that boob! Of all the knockout punches
 My pride has yet received, this is the worst.
 Fate's surely handing it to me in bunches.
 I mustn't let Maude know I asked Flo first.

He says:

That? Oh, she's from our town. I used to court her,—
 Of course, I'm joking.—Really, I can't see
 Why Willie took the trouble to import her;
 She never made an awful hit with me.
 He got turned down by someone else, the chance is,
 And hadn't anybody else to take.
 I'll have to sign her up for several dances;
 It's up to me, I s'pose, for old time's sake.

When They Reach Home that Night.

She says:

It was the grandest dance I ever went to;
 I've had a perfectly delightful time;
 And, as I've said to you before, or meant to,
 The music and the punch were both sublime.
 And that last waltz, Bob,—wasn't it entrancing?
 This night is one I never shall forget.
 With you I feel that I could just die dancing,—
 Don't hurry, Bob. You needn't leave me yet.

He says:

Er—well, you see, I really must be going,
 Of course, I hate to tear myself away,
 But, really, Maude, the way the wind is blowing,
 You might take cold out here, if I should stay.
 Besides, with Pan-Hell rules, I'll take no chances;
 I wouldn't for the world get you in wrong.
 Thanks, Maude, for going with me. Of all dances
 I ever saw, this was the best.—So long!

She thinks:

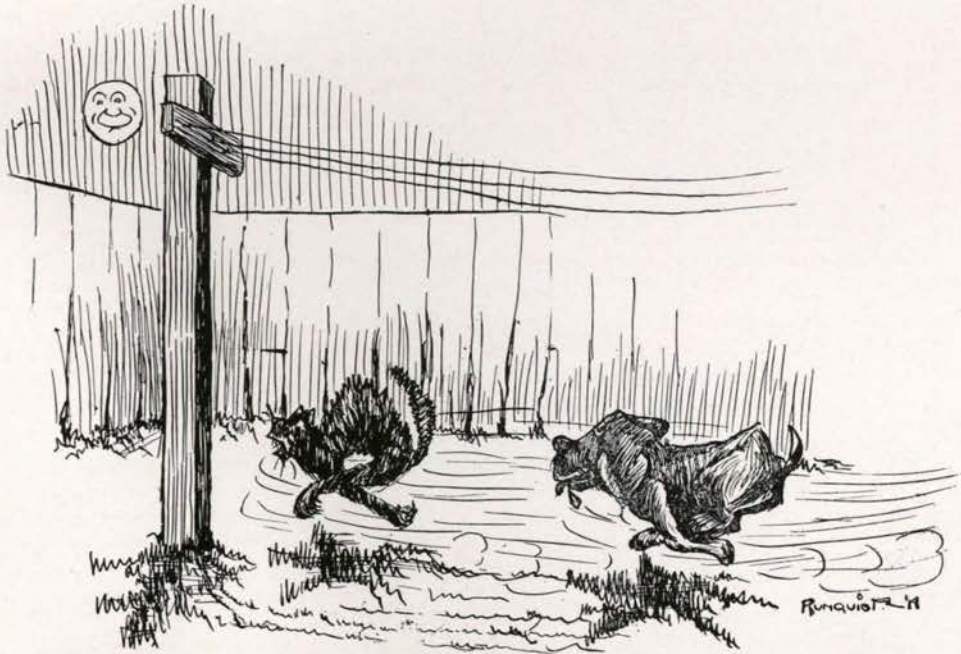

Poor, stupid Bob! He's not a bit suspicious,
 Or he would see that I don't care for him.
 I'm glad he's gone. . . . My, but this air's delicious.
 I almost suffocated in that gym.
 So that's the girl that beat my time with Willie!

1915 OREGANA 1915

I wonder what's the matter with his eyes.
I must say, that of all the sloppy, silly,
And horrid cats I've seen, she takes the prize.

He thinks:

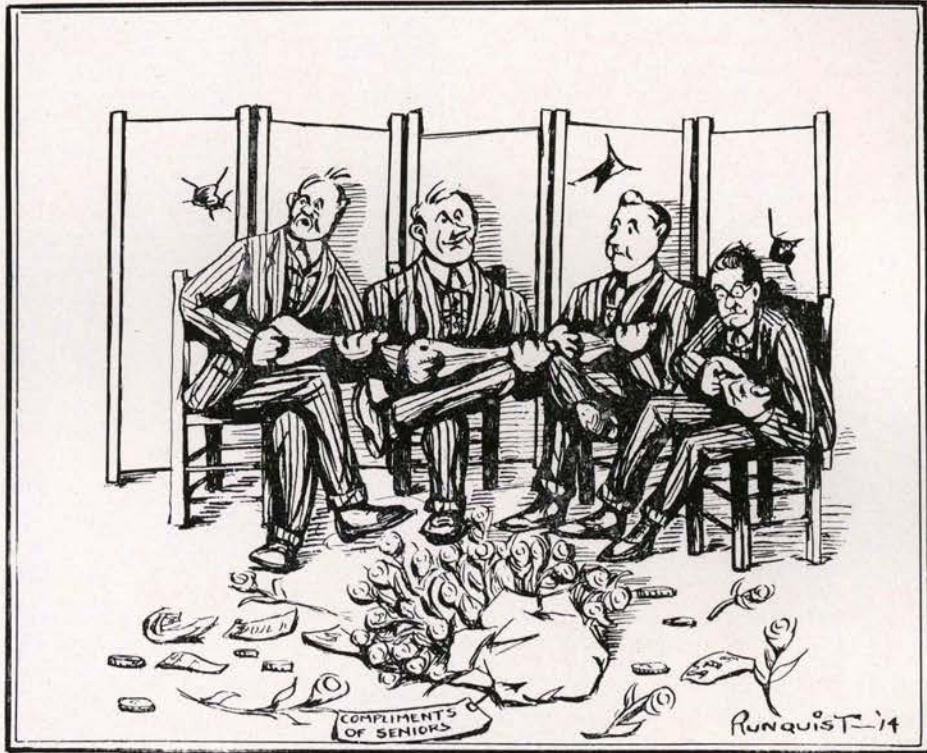

It's over with. The agony is ended.
Now for a smoke.—Gee, but these pumps are tight!
I wonder, if Maude really was offended
Because I broke away so soon tonight.
She might as well know now, that I don't love her.
This blow-out's cost me quite a wad of dough!
Some struggle, too,—but, gee! I'm glad it's over!
I wonder, if I've got a chance with Flo.

Oleson—Did you see our dog take the first prize at the cat show?

Wrightson—How did he do it?

Oleson—He ate the cat.

The Junior Troubadours

An Appreciation.

Ah-ha! Here we have them. The famous Junior Troubarours, that fearless aggregation of Mexican musicians, pictured in the act of receiving the applause and other articles which they always draw forth from their audiences. Note Bill Heusner's famous crouch. It enables him to successfully dodge the flying missiles, as is shown by the large gaps in the screen behind. Next observe that equally famous mandolin and poker player, Spud Hill, immediately on Heusner's right. Note how the artist has caught the inspired, almost human expression on the front of his head, otherwise known as face. Next in line sits Franklin W. Staiger, the noblest Roman nose of them all. This is the first and only portrait ever obtained of this celebrity with a collar on. And finally, bravely maintaining his position on the extreme end, and exposed to the full fury of the audience, we have Shorty Howard. Truly, an inspiring subject for the pen of any artist!

Four Hundred Twenty

The Glee Club

Second only to the Junior Troubadours as an aggregation of musical artists is our Glee Club. We went to a Glee Club concert once,—in other words, we faced the music. We listened to their beautiful strains,—at least, it was a strain for the audience. Those young men were wonderful singers. It was wonderful the way they could all finish at the same time while singing different tunes.

It is very seldom that we weep at a show, but we wept that night. It was at that saddest part of the performance, the "stunt" by Batley and Jerard. Even the seats were in tiers. But to return to our story. Batley came out to the front of the stage and sang a ragtime song, and all the time he was singing, he kept ragging back and forth before the footlights. At first we wondered why he did this, and then the truth dawned on us. It made him harder to hit.

They certainly were some "stunt" men. What would a Glee Club program be without "stunts"? We fear it would be very stunted.

But we never go to a Glee Club concert now. It is more satisfactory to sit at home and file a saw, and it costs less.

The Club is nix on the Caruso. Once they took in a misfit. He could sing. They had an awful time with that gink, but after a few weeks of practice with the Club, they took it out of him all right.

But it's a great old Glee Club at that. They took a long trip into Eastern Oregon and Idaho last Christmas, and it almost killed us to have them gone. We almost died of joy. Next year they're going to take a longer trip. We hear that they are even planning to make a tour of South Africa. However, we wouldn't advise them to do it. An ostrich egg weighs between two and three pounds.

Their Favorite Sayings

Cloran—"Miss Blank came all the way from Texas to study Spanish. Do they talk Spanish that way in Texas, Miss Blank?"

Gilbert—"According to Professor John Bates Clark, who was my major professor at Columbia University," etc.

Young—"That is to say, so to speak." (Massages the palm of his hand with his forefinger, makes several passes and plucks an invisible object out of the atmosphere, then takes several tango steps across the floor.)

Sweetser—"Here we have (sniff, sniff) a very fine specimen (snuff, snuff) of the typhoid microbe."

Schmidt—"Vat you going to do ven der eggziminations come around, eh?"

Allen—"That mistake is inexcusable. Br-r-r-r! Just wait till I give you that quiz."

Prexy—"While I think perhaps the plan is rather advisable, I am not prepared at this time to say whether it would be feasible. On the other hand, I believe it is all for the ultimate good of the University; however, we should ask ourselves this question, are we serving the best interests of the state in taking this action? If so, I would favor a further consideration of the matter, with a view as to the ultimate good of the University," etc.

The Intellectual Life

INTERVIEWS WITH PROMINENT EX-STUDENTS

After the mid-year exams in February, the Faculty announced its intention of raising the standard of scholarship at the University, regardless of flunks. The Oregana detailed its special war correspondent to interview a few of the leaders in the intellectual thought of the University, with the following results:

Austin Brownell—"I think the Faculty is to be commended for its effort to improve the culture and learning of this institution. Too often we neglect this side of our development for the more superficial training."

Rolla Ralston—"I am heartily in favor of any reform which will correct the present decline in education. So keenly have I felt the lack of a proper intellectual environment here, that I have decided to look for it elsewhere."

Maurice Cleary—"I believe that civilization is more advanced in the State of Washington than here. For this reason, although I regret to leave, I believe after one semester's trial that the surroundings of my native state are better fitted to my aesthetic temperament."

Gavin Dyott—"The present student ideals at the University of Oregon are deplorable. To improve these ideals, to promote higher culture, has been my constant aim, and therefore I have severed my connection with the institution."

"What do you do when you forget your lines?" asked the trembling reporter of Earl Clapp Bronaugh.

"I just repeat the multiplication table in a muffled voice," replied the great emotional actor. "I had the house in tears at Junction City over nine times nine are eighty-two."

SECOND WEEK IN JANUARY

She—"Is Bill still on the water wagon?"

He—"No, very restless."

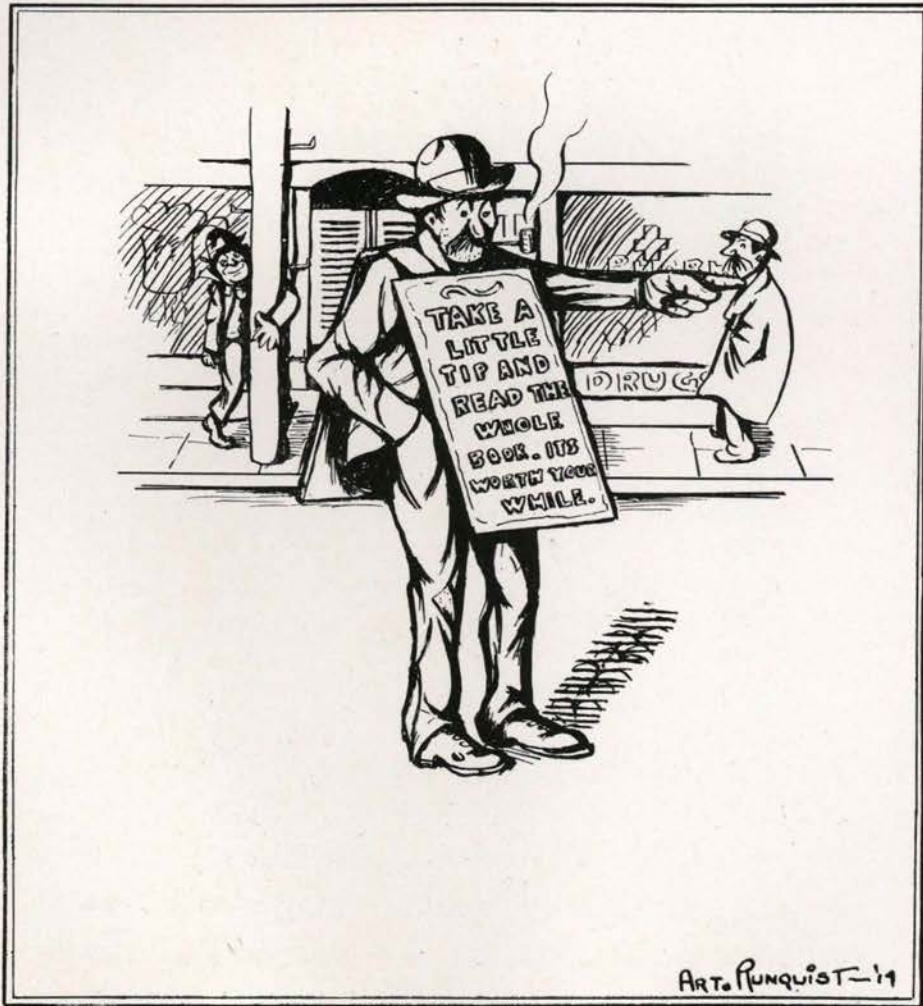

"Note-books have we, lots and lots,
We put in them tho'ts and tho'ts,
Write them neatly down, and then—
Never take them out again."—R. A. P.

Bill—I fear that Echo is not for me.

Clark—What's the matter, old man? Haven't you the sand to propose to her?

Bill—I have the sand, but not the dust.

Are We Treating Our Advertisers Squarely?

The students of the University of Oregon spend a large sum of money yearly for the necessities and luxuries of life. These things may be secured at hundreds of stores, both from merchants who believe in the University, in its activities and in its publications, and who back up their moral support with large chunks of their profits from their student trade, and from merchants who are eager to share in this trade but are exceedingly unwilling to reciprocate in the matter of financial support. These are the same people who tell the Emerald manager that they are advertising in the Oregon, and the Oregon manager that they have too much space in the Emerald.

To the shame of the Student Body of Oregon, it can truthfully be said that they have never made any endeavor to concentrate their trade with the people who do support them, nor in the cases where they do patronize an advertiser, to apprise him of that fact. On the contrary, they have taken an attitude which many merchants have construed to mean that their trade is not influenced by advertising in college publications, and which many of the merchants have been quick to act on, to our financial detriment. As a result, both the Oregon Emerald and Oregon managements have been seriously crippled in their efforts to put out a product worthy of the institution they have the honor to attend.

The manager of this annual desires to make the prophecy that unless the Student Body, individually and collectively, takes a decided stand in favor of patronizing Oregon advertisers and notifying them at the time that they are there in response to such advertisement, it will be but a short time when the Emerald and the Oregon will no longer be self-supporting, but a direct burden on the Student Body and the Junior Class of the University.

In the past Oregon has had an enviable reputation for squareness. Is it too much to ask that she treat her supporters, the merchants who by their direct financial support make her publications a possibility, as squarely as she treats her opponents on the athletic field? I think not.

—BEN. F. DORRIS JR.

Nov. 17—Larry Mann begins to distance Joe Gilpin. Endurance is better than speed. Joe buys some new rags and concentrates on the Tri Delt house. "Love me and the world is mine!" gets popular at the Fiji house.

Nov. 18—Ryan explains it all and is reinstated in Theta affections. How does he do it?

Nov. 19—Eyes of sporting world turn to co-ed inter-class basketball race.

Nov. 21—Studes who see Prof. Reddie's production of "Getting Married" resolve to remain single.

Nov. 23—Three Avavas take accidental bath in Wilamette river. Staiger is near-hero.

Nov. 25—Shorty Howard buys Junior corduroys and brings home a woman's wrapper.

Nov. 26—Glee Club takes barn-storming trip. Heidenreich receives ovation from feminine contingent at Woodburn.

Nov. 27—Thanksgiving Day. We give thanks for the following blessings: That Parkison got "his," that we don't go to O. A. C., that we still have Motschenbacher to run the college for us, that the faculty still allows us to chew gum and carry matches, that they haven't put a light in the grandstand yet, that examinations come but once a year, and for all other favors which the good Lord and the FACULTY, in their infinite wisdom, have granted us.

Nov. 28—Fraternity stay at homes entertain at national pastime. Hill grieves that he can't hold anything better than fours and can't win anything but jackpots.

Marlin

12 gauge Hammerless
Repeating Shotgun

THE handsomest and best designed pump gun in the world! Hammerless—Solid Steel Breech (inside as well as out). Solid Top—a thick steel wall of protection between your head and the cartridge; keeps out rain, snow, dirt, leaves, twigs and sand. Side Ejection—away from your face and eyes. Matted Barrel—A great convenience in quick sighting. Press Button Cartridge Release—to remove loaded cartridges quickly from magazine without working through action. Double Extractors—they pull any shell. Take Down Feature—for convenient carrying and cleaning. Trigger and Hammer—Safety—a double guard against accidental firing. The Solid Steel Breech (not a shell of wood) shows the superior design. The receiver is absolutely solid steel at the rear as well as on top.

The Marlin is the safest breech-loading shotgun ever built.

Marlin

Pump Action
.22 Repeating Rifle

The deep Ballard target rifling is the reason—it develops maximum power and adds years to the rifle's life. Ask us about Ballard rifling.

Other equally important advantages, too, make the Marlin the most desirable of all repeating rifles.

Has fewer and stronger parts than any other repeater. Takes down easily; simple to clean; you can look through the barrel—it cleans from both ends.

Handles all .22 long, .22 short and .22

long rifle cartridges without adjustment. 15 shots at one loading. Model 20 with Full Magazine, 25 shots.

Solid Steel Top protects your face and eyes against injury from defective cartridges, from shells, powder and gases.

Side Ejection throws shells away to the side, never up across your line of sight.

Send 3c postage for gun catalog, showing all the Marlin Repeaters, Rifles and Shotguns.

What the Authorities Say About the 1915 Oregana

"Allow me to congratulate you upon the completion of your great work. It will stand as one of the epoch-making events in the history of this country. By the way, would either the editor or manager consider an appointment as United States ambassador to Mexico? I feel certain that you could beat the Mexicans at their own game."—President Woodrow Wilson.

"I heartily endorse the 1915 Oregana for its high moral tone. I believe it will be a great power for the uplift of the young manhood of this country. I hope to see a volume placed in every Y. M. C. A. in the land."—Charley Koyl.

"I have read the 1915 Oregana with the rare pleasure one artist feels in perusing the masterpiece of another. Allow me to commend you for the literary excellence of your book, and its freedom from all taint of slang or vulgarity. I intend to use it as a text-book in my English classes next year."—Professor Edward Allen Thurber.

"Although in the past I have felt hostile to the University, I wish to announce that in the future I shall be its most zealous supporter. I have been converted by reading the 1915 Oregana. It has opened my eyes to the wonderful fruits which may result from a higher education. No more referendums in mine."—H. J. Parkison.

This Advertisement for the Candidacy of

Judge Lawrence T. Harris, '93

for the nomination for Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon on the Republican Ticket was inserted at the expense of the 1915 OREGANA as a tribute to a man who has demonstrated through many years his loyalty and his love for his Alma Mater, his friendship for and his desire to assist her students.

As a Circuit Judge his reputation for courage, ability and squareness has become a by-word among practicing attorneys.

The present question is not whether he will be elected but how big his majority will be. The voters of the University, friends and the supporters of that institution should take this opportunity to demonstrate to Judge Harris their appreciation of his service and devotion to OLD OREGON.

Extracts from Oregon Emerald for April 1, 1950

Oregon Again Defeats Washington.

The Oregon-Washington football game in Portland Saturday developed into a farce. Oregon had a walkaway, winning by a score of 150 to 0. This is the thirty-sixth consecutive victory for the lemon yellow, Washington's winning streak having been broken up when Coach Bezdek's eleven gave Dobie's team its first beating back in 1914.

Prep School Football.

Eugene High School succeeded in winning the prep school championship of the state yesterday by defeating the Oregon Agricultural College by a score of umpty-ump to nix. The Eugene team excelled the Aggies at all departments of the game. The defeat of the Corvallis school was a reminder of the time when it formerly ranked in the college class and put out teams which competed with Oregon in athletics.

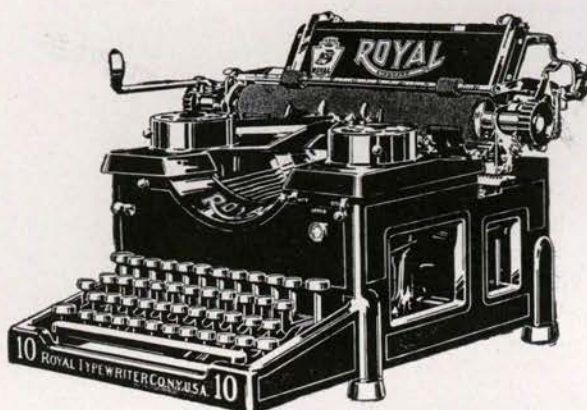

Professor Given Severe Sentence.

Professor A. Windjammer of the University of Oregon was brought up for trial before Police Judge Bryant DeBar yesterday and given a stiff sentence. Professor Windjammer was found guilty of cruelty to students, the testimony going to show that on one occasion he held a class half a minute over time while delivering a lecture. This was made a criminal offense by an initiative law passed by the people in 1920. As punishment for his crime, the Professor was sentenced to listen to phonograph records of his own lectures for the same period of time during which his students had to endure them.

Professor Straub Still in the Game.

Professor Straub is still meeting his classes in Villard Hall. In an interview to an Emerald reporter yesterday, he declared that he had no intention of retiring from the faculty until he had served another fifty years.

Royal Master--Model 10

“The Machine With a Personality”

Every keen-witted stenographer, every office manager, every expert operator on the firing line of “BIG BUSINESS” will grasp at once the enormous work-saving value of the NEW ROYAL MODEL 10.

Because it is “the machine with a personality.” YOUR personality! Think of a MASTER MACHINE with an adjustable touch—a typewriter you can “tune up” to fit your own personal touch, simply by “turning the knob” until it strikes the keynote of YOURSELF. Think of getting through with your week’s work with the minimum of effort, and banishing the dull grind of “typewriter nerves.”

The ROYAL MASTER-MODEL 10 has a lot of personalities, and you can pick out the one that fits YOU, merely by turning the knob in the back of the machine. Combined with this you get a writing machine with 100 per cent visibility—100 per cent speed—100 per cent accuracy—which means 100 per cent efficiency. A typewriter of LONG TERM SERVICE that need not be “traded out” and won’t “die young.”

PENNY MATCHING

The penny matching squad is working out daily in the Y. M. C. A. book exchange. The candidates are taking advantage of every opportunity to develop their skill, and whenever Charley Koyl's back is turned they get down to work. So far Vernon Motschenbacher continues to hold the local championship, but Otto Heider and several other candidates are showing good form.

SNIPES

"String" Fleming, captain of the Varsity snipe team, called his men together in the Thirteenth street car station the other day for a try-out. Charles Saxton Bingham made the fastest time, rolling ten snipes in 1 minute 15 seconds. Spud Hill was a close second, and Captain Fleming third. The captain was unable to do himself justice on account of his lack of practice since baseball season started, caused by the vigilance of Coach Bezdek. The scrub team shows marked improvement, Kenneth Robinson and Bobby Bean being the most promising of the new men.

BULL-FIGHTING

With the approach of the spring elections, the Varsity bull-fighters are getting into shape for the campaign. This year it looks like some of the old-timers, like Motschenbacher, Staggs and Dutch Young, will be forced to give way to some of the younger blood. Bertrand Jerard appears to have a position cinched, and Fred Hardesty and Bert Lombard are not far behind. It is to be regretted that Ben Dorris is ineligible to compete, having been disqualified under the four-year rule. Injuries have been few, although Sam Michael dislocated his jaw the other day after throwing the bull for 17 minutes. Altogether, Coach Straub looks for a most successful season.

TUG-OF-WAR

The intersorority tug-of-war last fall proved one of the most interesting ever held here. The Theta team again succeeded in winning the championship, getting more pledges than any other bunch. They were hard pressed, however, by the Tri Deltas. As usual, several protests were made. Some of the bunches were accused of getting over into their rivals' territory, and it was also charged that one or two of the sororities used male "ringers" to help pull for them.

"Say, I want you to weigh this package and tell me how much it will cost to send it," said Cleve Simpkins, advancing to the postoffice window.

"What's in it?"

"The manuscripts of my latest poems."

"Well, you'll have to send it by parcels post."

"Why?" queried the well known Oregon verse-monger.

"Because it's not first-class matter."

"I can't get anything out of this class except wooden answers," growled the peeved Prof.

"That's because we're all bored," murmured the suffering student.

"From the University of Oregon—" mused the Devil as the Professor was ushered into the infernal regions. "Your name sounds familiar, but I can't place you."

"I'm the guy who devised the law to deduct from a student's hours in proportion to his cuts," said the Prof, with some pride.

"Put this man over the hottest coals," ordered His Satanic Majesty, "and turn on the draught."

If We Always Told the Truth

"Fellow-students, the man I am about to nominate, hasn't any qualifications for the position at all. He is merely a tinhorn politician who wants an office. It doesn't give me any pleasure to nominate him, but his friends asked me to and I can't get out of it. I would advise you to vote for the other man."

"Good night, Mr. Boob. I don't thank you for taking me to the Prom, because I didn't want to go with you. Charlie didn't come through and I knew it was my last chance. I've been terribly bored all evening."

"Goodby, Miss Gusher. I've had a rotten time at your house dance. It was just like all the others, and they're getting blamed tiresome. I hope you never invite me again."

"The Emerald takes pain in announcing the engagement of Mr. Harry Rounder and Miss Daisy Lemon. Mr. Rounder is a member of the Smoke Cig fraternity. The Cigs were the only bunch that bid him, and they needed the money. Mr. Rounder has proposed to almost every girl in college and has been engaged two or three times, but he always got the hook before. Miss Lemon is neither beautiful, accomplished, nor popular. She has been sticking around for three years trying to get a man, and Harry is the best she can do."

More Raving About That Arc Light

As I sit in retrospection,
When I should be boning Dutch,
A sort of violent insurrection
Riles my temper "velly" much.
Little wrinkles of perplexion
Flitter o'er my troubled brow;
Healthy symptoms of dejection
Hide my optimism now.

Spring is here in green perfection,
But its call no longer lures;
My heart, harboring affliction,
Lacks the medicine that cures.
'Tis the Power's intervention,
That peeves the inner me;
They have thwarted my intention
To improve the family tree.

Where I "pigged" in sweet contention,

Advice to Young People

By Miss Ora Gunn

Dear Miss Gunn:

I am a great favorite among the ladies, and am considered very handsome. Inclosed is a lock of my hair. What color might it be? Do you think a young man should encourage more than one girl to fall in love with him? Lawrence D.

Answer: Your hair might be a golden brown, but it happens to be a cross between a bay and a brindle. No, it is very wrong for you to deceive the girls so cruelly.

Dear Miss Gunn: I want you to tell me whether my girl loves me. She often sits on my lap and kisses me. What conclusion can I draw from this?—I. Chase.

Answer: It is generally considered a good sign.

Answer: Yes.

Dear Miss Gunn: I am only a Freshman, but I have a heart. The object of my affections has thrown me down, just because I am not as big as she is. What shall I do?—Joe S.

Answer: For perfect love, it is necessary that the couple be suited to each other in every respect, including size. Better find another.

Will R.—No doubt you have been merely indiscreet, but always remember that the mill-race and the cemetery have eyes and ears, and be more careful next time.

"Here is the Answer," in WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

THE MERRIAM WEBSTER

Every day in your talk and reading, at home, on the street car, in the office, shop and school you likely question the meaning of some new word. A friend asks: "What makes mortar harden?" You seek the location of Loch Katrine or the pronunciation of jujutsu. What is white coal? This New Creation answers all kinds of questions in Language, History, Biography, Fiction, Foreign Words, Trades, Arts and Sciences, with final authority.

400,000 Words.
6000 Illustrations.
Cost $400,000.
2700 Pages.

The only dictionary with the new divided page,—characterized as "A Stroke of Genius."

India Paper Edition:

On thin, opaque, strong, India paper. What a satisfaction to own the Merriam Webster in a form so light and so convenient to use! One half the thickness and weight of Regular Edition.

Regular Edition:

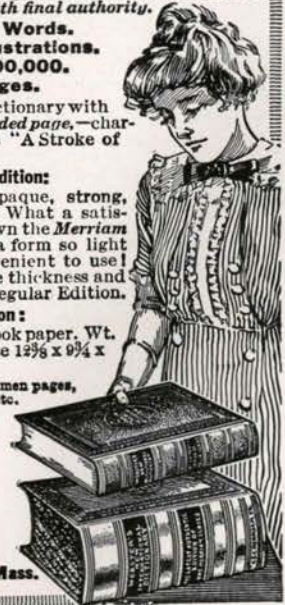

On strong book paper. Wt. 14¼ lbs. Size 12½ x 9¼ x 5 inches.

Write for specimen pages, illustrations, etc.

Mention this publication and receive FREE a set of pocket maps.
