DEDICATION

To John Straub, Dean Emeritus, and the 'grand old man' of Oregon, who retires in June after fifty-two years of constant and unselfish service to the University and the cause of Education, this volume of the Oregana is affectionately dedicated.

Along the art patio with its breath of Spain
... challenging the restless with its warm peace ... time basks here with slow languor
... soothed by small winds that make tremulous the leaves.

On the old millrace . . . heavy with dead memories . . . its music the sigh of waters where the willows meet . . . the wind strides softly through the weeping boughs . . .
light and shade where paddles fall
. . . sanctuary of romance.

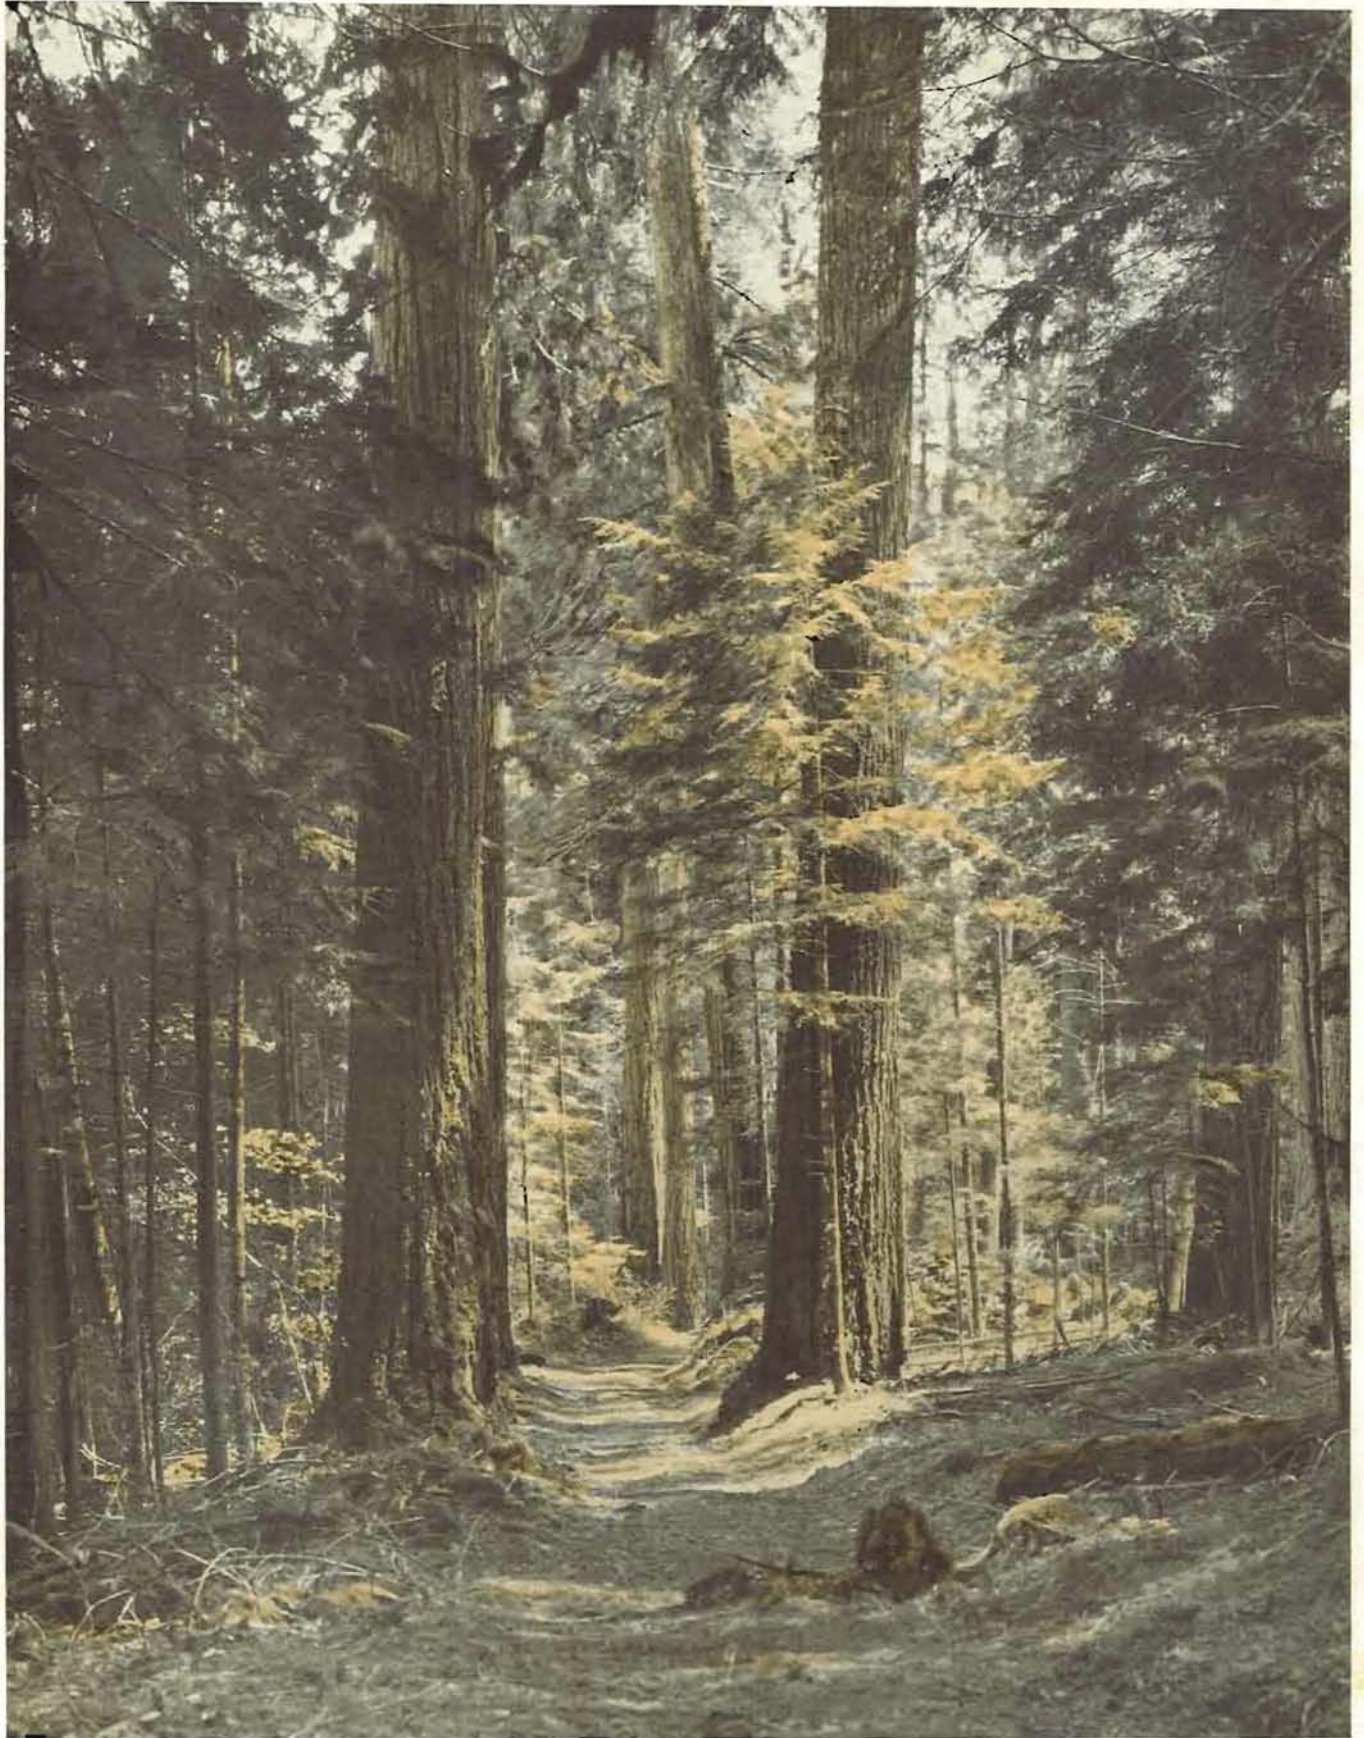

Ivy creeps over Oregon hall . . . through the windows drone portentous words . . . a moment of stillness on the green before the flood of students rush for curb-stones to smoke . . .

Sheltered by trees . . . grown majestic with the years . . . old Deady, nucleus of the University . . . still loved by those who study within its walls . . . Its footworn steps and high windows mute symbols of early days at Oregon.

In the temple of the firs . . . living shadows clothe it in robes of beckoning beauty . . .
to enchant lone couples strolling away . . .
the heavy hours . . . orchids and wild ferns are carpets for their feet . . . among the branches is left a wraith of the song of winds.

Waterloo of checkbooks . . . the irreverence of typewriters does not disturb the Greek facade . . . here is the pulsing heart of the University . . . the scarlet marks of failure find home here with diplomas.

*“Come, love and wine beside the river’s brink;
In every cup some shallow care we’ll sink.
Life’s span is but the rose’s, ten dear days;
Then chain the ten with laughter’s golden link.”*

ADMINISTRATION

At the University of Oregon we have adopted as one of our fundamental educational objectives the training of our emotional life and the establishment of higher and more beautiful standards of emotional values and experiences. Like any other program touching intimately the lives of the students, this venture will depend for its success, largely upon the student cooperation and sympathy.

We are trying to inaugurate a program which places a greater emphasis upon student participation in an enjoyment of music, fine arts, literature, drama, and allied subjects. We believe the answer to the ugliness of jazz is training in new standards of the appreciation of the artistic and the beautiful. We want every student who attends the University to have his life enriched and his spiritual understanding deepened by coming in contact with the finer emotional experiences. Out of this will come an increased capacity to enjoy and understand the more beautiful and the nobler things of life, and this will bring one to a new sense of spiritual values and the part they play in the ennobling of character and the enrichment of personality.

ARNOLD BENNETT HALL, President

Message from Governor Norblad

To the Student Body at University of Oregon:

I take the greatest of pleasure in extending greetings and good wishes on behalf of the state of Oregon to the young men and women enrolled in our State University.

The state of Oregon annually invests nearly one-half its revenues in education. At considerable sacrifice to themselves, the people of the state have provided opportunities whereby not only can every boy and girl secure an elementary and a secondary education, but also whereby every young person of real earnestness of purpose can secure the benefits of college or university training.

The citizens of our community have made the sacrifices necessary to provide these educational opportunities because they believe the training and equipment of future citizens constitutes the wisest and most fruitful guarantee of the progress, prosperity, and stability of the state. It therefore becomes your duty to make such use of the opportunities offered you as will vindicate their faith in the wisdom and value of providing opportunities for higher education at public expense.

With best personal wishes to each of you, I am very truly yours,

A. W. NORBLAD, Governor

GOVERNOR A. W. NORBLAD

BURT BROWN BARKER

Vice-President Barker

Burt Brown Barker has distinguished himself throughout Oregon as vice-president of the University. One of the most popular speakers in the state, he showed himself a real worker by the untiring efforts he made in conducting the gift campaign of the new Fine Arts Museum.

Mr. Barker is a native of Oregon, and that, together with a striking personality, has enabled him to understand and be a great favorite with students as well as citizens in this section of the country. His headquarters are in Portland, but he is a frequent visitor on the campus at Eugene, where he is a guest at many affairs given in his honor.

He received his A.B. degree from the University of Chicago, and his LL.B. from Harvard Law School.

The State Board of Higher Education

The State Board of Higher Education has been kept continually busy in its supervision of the Oregon institutions of higher learning since its establishment by the senate of the Oregon legislature in 1929. Members of that body oversee the affairs of the University of Oregon, Oregon State College, and the three normal schools located at Ashland, La Grande, and Monmouth.

Members of the board have met in the last year to grant degrees to graduating students, confirm faculty appointments, make grants for new buildings, and formulate policies for the schools to carry out.

Men who serve on the organization are: C. C. Colt, Portland, of the Oregon Life Insurance company, the First National Corporation, and the Title and Trust Corporation. Mr. Colt was appointed to serve nine years, the longest term for which any man was appointed. B. F. Irvine, also of Portland, who is editor of the Oregon Journal, was selected to serve for eight years. C. L. Starr, Portland attorney, was chosen for seven years; E. C. Simmons, Portland, well-known banker and manufacturing man, for six years; Albert Burch, Medford horticulturist, for five years; E. C. Pease, retired merchant in The Dalles and director of the Federal Reserve Bank of that district, for four years; F. E. Callister, Albany banker, three years; Aubrey R. Watzek, Portland banker, for two years; and Frank Oliver, Canyon City stockman, who was appointed for a term of one year, and has just been reappointed for a nine-year term.

C. L. Starr is chairman of the board. All members are appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate. The directors serve without salary, but receive ten dollars a day and necessary traveling expenses while on duty as actual members of the board.

The group makes an annual visit to each of the institutions under its control and hears reports from the heads of each of the schools. When one member's term is ended, another person is appointed to take his place. The variation in the length of terms keeps both experienced and new men on the committee, so that as many difficulties as possible in the organization of the group may be dispensed with.

Dean of Men

The office of the dean of men is maintained primarily as a source of advice and information for men students. Though his functions are diverse, the dean handles all problems concerning student loans, fraternities, dormitories, housing, and general student conduct, and is freshman class advisor.

During the past year the number of loans from the University Student Loan funds totalled 247, and the amount of such loans was more than $17,000. By virtue of his position as director of loans, the dean of men is required to do a great deal of financial counseling.

The office of the dean of men attempts to maintain a close contact with the fraternities, dormitories, and living organizations, and is responsible to the administration for the morale and cooperation of these groups. In the past they have proved to be splendid administrative agencies, and have shown a remarkably high sense of loyalty to the University and a fine spirit of cooperation with the administration.

Dean of Women

The dean's office represents the interest of the women students. It is an administrative link between students and faculty and, unlike an academic department, has no inherent strength unless it is devoted to the needs and interests of the individual woman and every social grouping.

It is a confidential office and, therefore, it is functioning most effectively when least is said about it. In its advisory capacity, its success is measured by the success of the women's organizations.

Some new phases of administration have been important during the last year. The position of Freshman Dean was established, and Mrs. Hazel Prutsman Schwering has been giving her time to the adjusting of freshman girls to college life.

An activities study and the development of a new system of personnel records have been the most significant single projects.

The 1930 Summer Session

The summer session of the University of Oregon will be almost a "floating one" this year, for, under the supervision of Alfred Powers, cruises to both Hawaii and Alaska have been planned. In addition to the trips, classes will be held both on the Eugene campus and at Portland, in which many prominent educators from all parts of the United States will teach.

The southwestern trip to Hawaii will be the first attempted by the University to the Islands. It will be much longer than the Alaskan cruise, and the boat will sail in June. Classes will be taught both on board the boat and at the University of Hawaii, where that institution's faculty will cooperate. The courses will include history, international relations, journalism, anthropology, geology, education, and literature. While attending the classes sponsored by the Hawaiian school, the students will be housed at Punahou academy. Karl W. Onthank, executive secretary of the University, will be in charge.

The cruise north to Alaska proved such a success last year that the administration has decided to repeat it. Students planning on making the journey will attend the first two weeks of post-session at Eugene, and on the morning of August 13 leave for Seattle from where they will sail the following day, returning about August 26. Special courses in landscape sketching, botany, geography, and the art of the Alaskan Indians will be given in addition to the regular subjects. W. G. Beattie, assistant director of the extension division, will be in charge of the Alaskan trip.

The University's summer sessions have proved invaluable to school teachers throughout the state as a means by which they may learn the newest methods in education for both the elementary and high school. Each department of the University of Oregon cooperates in the summer work, some of the regular professors instructing classes in Eugene and some lecturing in Portland. To supplement the teaching staff, well-known professors from the larger educational institutions of the United States come to offer courses along the line of work they are famous for. Many regular students of this school take advantage of these sessions to make up work they have missed during the winter months.

DEAN JAMES H. GILBERT

The College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

With the addition of sociology to the college in the spring of 1929, the number of departments was increased to an even twenty. These twenty disciplines, with the four groups in the lower division, now enroll almost exactly one-half of the major students on the Eugene campus. This does not, however, indicate the full extent of the service rendered by the college, under the direction of Dr. James H. Gilbert.

Reckoned in student hours the liberal arts college carries approximately two-thirds of the instruction load on the University campus.

The professional man who hopes to succeed realizes soon that education is a continuous process and the man or woman best equipped with a trained mind and an intensive study of auxiliary sciences finds his professional status and his influence in his community more easily maintained. The curricula of professional schools on the Oregon campus have been constructed with a view to a large admixture of cultural subjects. During the first two years in particular students electing majors in law, journalism, business, education, etc., are encouraged to acquaint themselves with the great masterpieces of literature and to train their own powers of expression in written and spoken word. In the social sciences the student finds an explanation of organized society and the evolution and significance of present day institutions. Work in the physical sciences trains in exact reasoning and familiarizes the student with the environment in which man must achieve his destiny. The biological sciences introduce the student to the realm of organic life and the physiological foundations of the mental processes.

Specialized work in these fields leading to professional opportunities is provided by the upper division curricula of these twenty departments. An attempt is made from the time of entrance to adapt the work to the capacities and needs of students. At the end of the first two years superior students are singled out for distinction and honor privileges in the upper division work.

The Graduate School

The graduate school believes that it is sincerely able to report essential good progress. It can point, not only to a constantly better prepared student body, but to one increasing from other and distant parts of the country and abroad. At the moment there are nineteen active candidates working towards their degree of doctor of philosophy.

The immediately most engrossing business before the graduate school is that of working out a new constitution and formal organization. The proposal has just received the sanction of the faculty, and it is purposed henceforth the school, as a whole, will be divided into some four "groups"---natural science; social science; language, literature and fine arts; and medicine. Medicine, it might be explained, is erected into a separate group at least in part, because of the practical problems arising from its situation off the campus. The groups are established in the interest of breaking down, even in graduate work, the too narrow specialization of individual departments, to establish a habit and opportunity of conference and cooperative thinking and work among the departments whose interests lie fairly close together. The mention of the medical school probably calls for the explanatory report that there is no proposal of having the graduate school swallow up the professional schools, even where the work of the latter is of a graduate status. The graduate school will continue to busy itself with work and degrees of the paramountly "theoretical," in the distinction from a strictly professional nature.

Dean George Rebec is head of the school, and under his direction the graduate school has drawn men and women for advanced work from all over the Northwest. Special research work is done by these students, and much valuable material is discovered. Each year an increased number of individuals come to the University of Oregon to take up graduate work, the largest number in the history of the institution being enrolled during the school year 1929-1930. A still greater number is expected by Dean Rebec next year. The increased emphasis upon higher scholastic degrees is one of the leading factors in the enlarged enrollment, Dean Rebec believes.

The School of Architecture and Allied Arts

The aim of the school of architecture and allied arts is the development of creative faculties. The school itself is divided into three parts, those of architecture, fine arts, and normal arts.

Probably there is no other school on the campus which allows the student to broaden out his own individual character as the school of architecture. It primarily endeavors to stimulate and encourage the student's best qualities and helps him to discover his own particular abilities. Contact with all the different departments of the school and specialization in any one of them is an aid toward this aim.

The department of architecture conducts courses in principles of construction and design, in the technique of pencil, pen and brush, essential to accurate and effective presentation, with such courses in history and practice as may supply acquaintance with the best examples of historic architecture, and a proper sense of the applicability of the precedents set therein to the design and purposes of modern buildings.

The department of fine arts has classes in all forms of delineation, including oil and water color painting, pastel crayon and charcoal drawing, as well as modeling in clay or plastoline, from life, cast, or nature; also classes in decorative design with advanced work in mural painting and stained glass.

The department of normal arts furnishes experience in designing and process of production of objects of the industrial arts, such as dress design, textile patterns and weaving, tile making and basketry, and the training of teachers for public school instruction in art.

Members of the faculty of the school of architecture and allied arts have won distinction in their various specialized lines of work. Dean Ellis F. Lawrence, head of the school, is known as one of the finest architects on the Pacific coast. Special exhibits of painting and sculpture throughout the United States have included representative works of the Oregon artists.

Special attention is given to normal arts, and the students enrolled in the courses create works of beautiful and artistic nature.

SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE AND ALLIED ARTS

The School of Business Administration

The chief objective of the school of business administration is to turn out business executives. This necessitates giving a broad cultural background as well as a technical training, and students are encouraged to take a large amount of work in the college of liberal arts before specializing in any given business field. The school is a member of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business, and as such maintains a high standard of teaching efficiency and scholastic performance. The problem method of teaching has been adapted to undergraduate use in the school with a view to supplementing factual knowledge with an ability to think intelligently in meeting the ever changing problems of the business world. During the past year the enrollment of the department increased fifteen per cent, there being five hundred and forty-five business administration majors enrolled fall term.

A feature of the current year has been the greatly expanded activity of the Bureau of Business Research. It is the purpose of the bureau to collect and interpret data relating to Oregon business conditions and problems, and to direct attention to experience-tested practices of good business management. By reason of legislative appropriation, funds have been made available for extensive studies in foreign trade and industrial fields. The findings of these studies are available to the business men of the state in bulletin form. As a by-product of the work, additional research fellowships and graduate assistantships have become available, thus making it possible to expand the graduate work of the school along very practical lines.

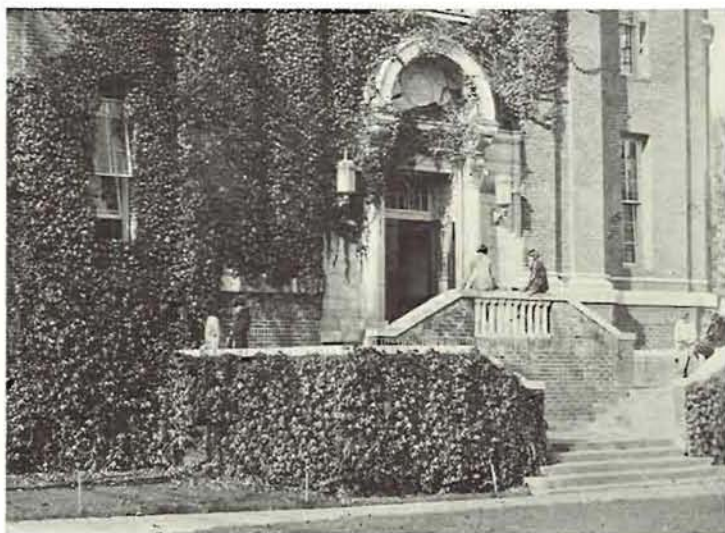

The matter of employment after graduation is of vital interest to the college student. While the school does not maintain an appointment bureau, it makes every effort to place those graduates who evidence qualities of business leadership. So far the school has experienced little difficulty in placing its students.

Dean David E. Faville is head of the school of business administration and, under his capable supervision, that section has become one of the best in the United States.

The School of Education

The general purpose of the school of education is to organize and correlate all the parts of the University which have for their goal the growth of the educational facilities of the state.

Ample provisions for specialization are made in the school by means of the professional training offered in the various departments of education and academic instruction given in the University. The college of literature, science and the arts plays a large part in helping the individual to gain this goal.

At the completion of undergraduate courses the student has the advantage of the model high school which the school of education has under its own supervision. This furnishes an excellent laboratory for training teachers and for working out new methods in educational practice, thus supplying the requirements for junior and senior high school positions. The school is the only one on the coast to have this facility.

The school of education furnishes advanced training for experienced teachers, normal school graduates and those who desire administrative supervisory positions. These courses are closely connected with those of the student studying for a high school position. A general service bureau to supply information and help is also a feature of the school.

Students not only do actual teaching under supervision here but have the opportunity of observing some of the best examples of educational work done in the state. There is also a wide field for research work in the well-equipped quarters of the school of education. Guidance along modern lines of improvement is another important factor.

Besides these student aids the school has a bureau to help its graduates obtain positions. A job at teaching may be secured in this state or another, and the bureau helps both those students who are graduates and those who are graduating.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

The School of Journalism

The main purpose of the school of journalism is the turning out of well-qualified and well-trained persons to enter the profession of journalism.

The Oregon school has been very active in the affairs of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism, of which the 21 most outstanding groups in the United States are members. In December Dean Eric W. Allen was elected president of the association. Dr. Ralph D. Casey, professor of journalism, was chosen assistant editor of the Journalism Quarterly, a magazine issued by the association. "Oregon Exchanges" is issued monthly for newspapers of Oregon.

Several branches of service to the newspapers of the state are carried on by the Oregon school. This includes a confidential exchange of newspaper statistics, an analysis of newspaper problems, the organization of the annual press conference held at the University, and constant field contacts maintained through Arne G. Rae, field representative of the Oregon Press Association.

An employment bureau for newspaper workers is maintained by the school, principally for Oregon graduates.

The University press, operated by the school of journalism, serves as a production unit for the University, as a laboratory for journalism students, and as a model for good printing. Each year a book is printed by the advanced class in typography, one of which was selected last year by the British Museum as outstanding in American printing. This was one of a group of only twenty American productions.

Students in reporting, copy reading, and proof reading are given actual experience in working on the Eugene dailies. Each spring members of these classes do all the editorial work on each paper for one issue. Members of the editing class write the editorials. Reporting work for a period of several weeks is also done on the Eugene Guard by those registered in reporting courses.

Instructors in the school of journalism do individual research each year, and encourage the students to do likewise. Honor workers in the school make surveys of the newspaper and magazine fields in the vicinity of Eugene.

The School of Music

There are three factors which make up a successful school of music in any university.

The first of these is the faculty. Little can be done no matter what the materials may be unless instruction is of the best. The school of music has on its faculty men and women of national and international renown.

The second factor is equipment. Few music schools are so well provided with various instrumentalities for student development. There is a beautiful auditorium with a magnificent organ, studios with grand pianos, private practice rooms, a lecture room with a radio, and a talking machine with a library of records.

The last factor is atmosphere. There is in the music building a delightful spirit of informality. The building also occupies the most prominent location on the campus and is free from distracting noises.

Not only does the school provide for those students desiring to make a profession of music, but also, courses are arranged for those who wish to dip into the field in order to round out their education.

During the last year a new organization of about fifty singers called the Polyphonic choir was started in the school of music under the direction of Arthur Boardman, head of the voice department. They featured not only the regular four part music but also that of eight or nine parts which was sung in the old churches. Throughout the year the group appeared at several vesper hours and concerts and met the unanimous approval of the campus. The choir is the only university organization of its kind on the Pacific coast.

One of the special features of the last year has been the presentation of Tuesday evening recitals in the school of music auditorium in which students took part. This has proved itself excellent entertainment and large crowds from both the campus and Eugene have been attracted. Members of the school of music faculty also gave recitals throughout the year, and received much praise for the high quality of their work.

Applied Social Science in the University of Oregon

The school of applied social science was organized in 1929 with Dean Philip A. Parsons as its head. This took the place of the former school of sociology and the school of social work in Portland.

This new division has departments at both Portland and Eugene. Pre-social work is given on the campus and the more specialized work at the larger city. The departments include that of nursing and health education, community organization, social work, public welfare, and research. The nursing program in Portland has been extended into a five-year course, with preliminary work in Eugene.

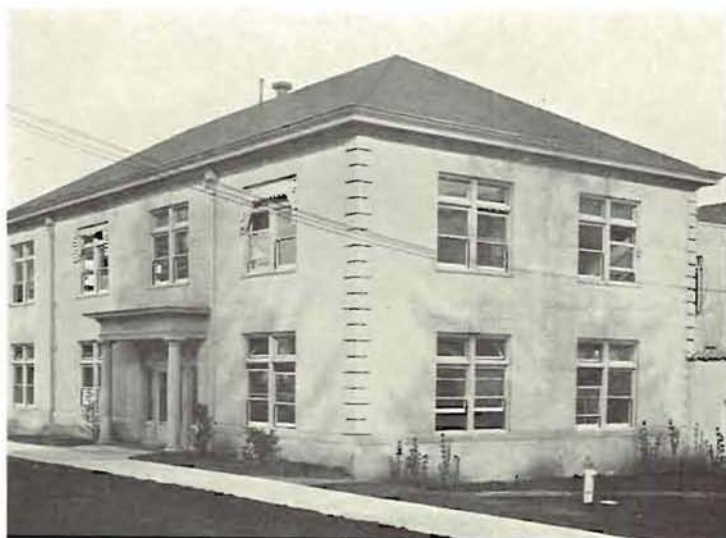

A large body of research workers is now directing a survey of the field in crime in Multnomah county, and is in addition conducting a division of municipal reference for the municipalities of Oregon. Communities all over the state make use of the consultation service offered at a comparatively low cost by the department of public welfare. The personnel division trains persons for the duties of deans of men and women, as well as personnel workers for high schools, normal schools, colleges, and universities.

One of the functions of the school of social work when it was organized was to serve, through its faculty, in an advisory capacity to the public and private agencies of the state. The director of the school was made by law a member of the state child welfare commission under the appointment of the president of the University.

The most recent development in the program of the division of applied social science is the co-operation that has been established between the University of Oregon and the American National Red Cross in making the Lane county chapter a demonstration center for Red Cross work and for training community social workers.

DEAN PHILIP A. PARSONS

In order that the public contacts of the school of applied social science may be effectively established, representatives of the faculties of the schools of journalism, business administration, education, and physical education, the departments of sociology, economics, and political science in the college of literature science and the arts, and the extension division have been associated with the faculty of the school.

SCHOOL OF APPLIED SOCIAL SCIENCE

DEAN JOHN BOVARD

The School of Physical Education

The school of physical education is primarily involved with those activities that are for the purpose of building up the physical well-being of the student. Education of a physical sort is an important part of the culture to be obtained from any university course, and it ranks along with the mental and moral values to be received.

Not only is it the idea of the school to present every opportunity to develop a balanced recreational program, but it is also a definite policy to make this program such that it will carry over into the post college days.

Students are encouraged to take part in some form of athletics if possible. The department for men and for women provides ample facilities and opportunities for recreation.

For those students who desire help or advice in matters of health or who become ill, there is the dispensary, and the infirmary at 1212 Onyx street. This infirmary is maintained by the University Health Service, and contains 13 beds. There is also an annex with 13 more beds.

A third department is that of athletics, whose primary purpose is to supervise and promote intercollegiate competition.

For those desiring a B.S. or an A.B. degree the school has a teachers' training course of four years. The first two years of the course are composed of English, biology, chemistry, languages, and social sciences, while the last two are made up of the pedagogy of physical education.

These technical courses are arranged along several lines---for those who plan to teach physical education with several other subjects; for those who elect to coach major sports in high schools and colleges; and for those who want to qualify as directors of playgrounds, recreational centers, or departments of physical education in universities.

Special attention is paid to games, as the school believes that good sportsmanship as well as strong physical health may be secured by this method. Dean John Bovard is head of the school of physical education.

SCHOOL OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The Extension Division

The advantages offered students attending classes on the University of Oregon campus are extended to all the people of the state by means of the extension division, directed by Dean Alfred Powers.

At the present time the extension division is organized into two departments, the department of extension teaching and the department of social welfare. The former offers the benefits of University instruction through correspondence study, extension classes, and teachers' reading circles. The latter makes the resources of the University available throughout the state by means of visual instruction, public discussion, vocational research, child welfare activities, conferences, special information services, and extension lectures.

During the last few years there has been a constantly growing demand throughout the state for courses of college status by persons who are unable to attend the University. Many college graduates have also enrolled in the division for the purpose of acquainting themselves with effective new procedures in various fields. Recent interpretations of history and literature, new attitudes toward government, industrial life, and international relations have proved the most popular.

Work through the extension division may be taken with or without credit. If the courses are to count towards a degree, the student must be eligible for admission to the University, and must have filed his credentials with the registrar of the University of Oregon.

Regular classes are taught in Portland, and instruction by means of lesson outlines, prepared by faculty members, is provided for those persons living in smaller communities throughout the state. There are a number of full-time professors employed in Portland, and a number of instructors make weekly visits to that city to meet with classes. Written lessons from those enrolled in the correspondence courses serve as a basis of grading. The extension school is an especial boon to students who wish to make up credit for work missed, due to illness, or who lack a few credits necessary for graduation. Written English is the most popular of this class of work.

The School of Medicine

The medical school has as its purpose the reduction of needless waste in preventable sickness and mortality through the advancement of knowledge and application of the benefits of medical science.

Since its establishment in 1887 the school at Portland has grown to be one of the finest in the United States. It is the only complete institution of scientific medical learning north of San Francisco and west of Denver, and it serves the largest territory of any school of its kind in America. It is rated in Class A by the American Medical Association.

Under the direction of Dr. Richard B. Dillehunt, dean, the school has established a program for prolonging life and promoting health that has three divisions: Research into the cause and prevention of diseases that are still obscure; training a limited number of well qualified doctors who will be prepared to give to the people of the state the most modern information and service; and actual care of the sick and disabled of the state who are unable to pay for medical services.

Three years of general, scientific, and classical education are required for entrance to the institution. The professional training that follows includes two years of laboratory sciences with emphasis on research and investigation, followed by two years in clinical subjects, and then a year of hospital interne service.

The medical school conducts the Portland Free Dispensary, the only general free clinic available to the needy sick of the state, in co-operation with the People's Institute. The school also owns and operates the Doernbecher Memorial Hospital for Children.

Because the medical school has available a staff of expert teachers, laboratories well equipped for research, and various hospital and clinical facilities, the people of Oregon are assured doctors competent to conduct the fight against suffering and disease. Through the training of well qualified doctors, the public service of the medical school means health insurance for the people of Oregon. Because of its teaching and training there will ultimately be need of fewer hospitals and fewer doctors per capita in Oregon.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

The School of Law

The school of law recognizes that its chief duty is to the state of Oregon. To this end it is placing special emphasis on Oregon decisions, statutes, and procedure. However, this is done without in any way neglecting a full presentation and discussion of the general principles in law, and equity, and procedure that lie at the foundation of American jurisprudence.

The school of law believes that it cannot in justice to its students confine itself entirely to the field of theory. It has, therefore, developed courses in office practice, and other practice courses in which the student is required under personal supervision to draft contracts, conveyances, leases, partnership agreements, organize corporations, and prepare all the papers connected with various legal proceedings, including the probate of wills and administration of estates, and in a course in trial practice actually to conduct litigation through the trial stage.

This training will also qualify one for practice in any of the Western Code States.

It is strongly advised that the course taken during the first two years after the student's entrance to the University be selected from the various subjects offered, which will furnish him a background for his profession.

If, after completing this two-year course, the student desires further preparation in liberal arts before beginning his professional studies, he may either continue through the regular courses of the junior and senior year of the college of literature, science, and the arts, or after adding one more year, he may enter the school of law, and, by counting the first year of law toward both the degree from the college and that of the school of law, obtain both the collegiate and the law degree in six years from the date of his admission to the University.

If all requirements are complied with, the academic degree is conferred at the close of the first year in the law school, and at the completion of the law course two years later the degree of doctor of jurisprudence.

History of the Class of 1930

Seniors now---but four years ago humble freshmen. This class of 1930 represents the goal of every student of the University. Four years have they played and worked---always with their eyes turned toward that highest of titles---“senior.” Now they have reached the mecca of their desires.

When they came to the University there was wondering and fear in their hearts, and an ardent longing to some day emulate the formidable senior of their day. At that time they were organized as the class of 1930 with Alonzo Jasmin as their president. Soon the class of 1930 was one of the rifts in the whirlpool of studies and activities.

Peters

McKenna

After an active year the time came for the burning of the "green lids." This was another step toward the next goal---sophomores---and the gleaming eyes spoke aloud, for next year they could take out their revenge on the unsuspecting freshmen.

The next year came, and under the presidency of Keith Hall the activities of the class were continued. The traditional custom of a special sophomore garb was not to be broken. "Oh, no, we are upholders of Oregon traditions." "By his 'moleskins' ye shall know him." Then came the big event of the sophomore year---the Sophomore Informal. This time the class of 1930 carried out a Chinese motif, with monstrous, fiery-mouthed dragons as decorations.

The year stole by, and soon this class turned over another page. It could now use the name of "junior." This was the busiest of busy years, but with George Moorad as its president it lived up to the spirit of the class of 1930, and carried on its multitudinous activities with determination and success: Junior Shine Day, Junior Week-End, with its numerous social functions, Canoe Fete, Junior Vodvil "Oh Dear," Campus Luncheon, at which time Mortar Board and Friars paraded with dignity through the throngs and pledged outstanding junior women and men. As a climax to the gaiety of the week came the Junior Prom with its Greenwich Village setting. It was at the Junior Prom that a number of awards were made, among them the awarding of the Gerlinger Cup and the Koyl Cup to that woman and man, respectively, of the junior class whose merit, scholarship, and service to the University had been outstanding. Helen Peters was awarded the Gerlinger Cup last year and George Stadelman the Koyl Cup.

Betty Schmeer, Senior Leap Week Chairman

Miss Peters is a member of the Thespians, Kwama, Phi Theta Upsilon, Mortar Board, and Kappa Alpha Theta. She has served on numerous student body and Associated Women Student committees; last year she was Big Sister chairman, and this year is president of the Associated Women Students.

Mr. Stadelman was a football man for three years, track man for two years, a member of the Order of the "O" and of Sigma Nu.

Each year the Joseph H. Albert Cup is awarded to "that member of the senior class, who, during his college career, has shown the most progress toward the ideal in character, service, and wholesome influence." Francis McKenna was the winner of this cup last year. Mr. McKenna was president of the senior class; a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha Delta Sigma, Phi Kappa Psi, Order of the Emerald "O," and captain of Scabbard and Blade, besides serving on numerous committees.

The Setting for the Senior Ball

At last the long hoped-for goal was attained. In the fall of 1929 the name of "senior" was officially adopted. Carl Nelson, who has been elected president, did not return to school, and Eleanor Poorman, vice-president, served in his place; Edwina Grebel was secretary; Margaret Barrett, treasurer; Orville Bredthauer, sergeant-at-arms; and Wilfred Brown, class barber.

Reverting to childhood days the now dignified seniors amused themselves with a "Kid" party. Later they sponsored one of the most outstanding formal functions of the college year--the Senior Ball. "A Modernistic Dream" was the colorful motif. Those responsible for the success of this event were: Day Foster, chairman; Edwina Grebel, assistant chairman; Margaret Edmunson, secretary; Fletcher Udall, ticket sales and advertising; Marjorie Chester, invitations and programs; Joan Patterson, decorations; Dorothy Belle Endicott, patrons and patronesses; Boone Hendricks, features; Dean Creath, floor; Russell Baker, cleanup; Margaret Clark, refreshments; Billy Sievers, music.

Each spring the co-eds turn the tables on the senior men by providing entertainment for them during Senior Leap Week. The committee for the 1930 Senior Leap Week was Betty Schmeer, chairman; Naomi Hohman, Kappa Coffee; Sally Lutten, patrons and patronesses; Dorothy Belle Endicott, picnic; Marjorie Chester, Bar-Room Bust; Florence McNerney, publicity; and Marie Wilson, Co-ed's Revenge.

Day Foster, Senior Ball Chairman

The thoughts then turn to commencement with all its joys and thrills. Paul Hunt was chairman of the committee for Commencement invitations and senior booklets, the latter being a new feature with the class of 1930. Walter Norblad was head of the senior class memorial gift committee.

And with Baccalaureate Sunday and the last assembly in McArthur Court, the class finds college days a memory to cherish as they turn to active life out in the world.

Junior Class Officers

To begin its third year of existence, the class of 1931 chose from among its many active members, officers to guide its destiny during the junior year, an important period in the history of every class.

William Frank Whitely of Portland was elected as president of the junior class. His election was hailed with enthusiasm, for Bill possesses those qualities which the position demands, namely, previous active experience in campus affairs, a congenial spirit, and leadership. During his freshman and sophomore years Bill was a member of many committees of importance engaged in all types of activity.

Reba Helena Brogdon of Eugene won the position as vice-president. Reba has had an enviable record since she entered Oregon as a freshman. In her freshman year she was elected vice-president of the class of 1931. Her activity in that office assured her success in competing for the position a second time. As a sophomore she was elected to Kwama, sophomore women's honor society, and as a junior she has been a member of several important committees.

Harriet Louise Kibbee of Portland took the position of secretary to the class of 1931. A member of Phi Theta Upsilon, service honorary for upperclass women, and active in committee work, Harriet has taken a prominent part in campus affairs building a reputation for herself as a worker through and through.

Hal B. Paddock of Portland was elected treasurer of the junior class. As many other members in the class, Hal has taken an energetic part in putting the many social functions of the junior class over with a big bang. He has taken part in varsity debate, and was a member of the Dad's Day committee.

Jerome Cecil Lillie of Portland won the position of sergeant-at-arms, keeper of peace for the class of '31. Jerome was a member of the frosh football and basketball teams, and is at present a valuable member of the varsity eleven. His energies have not been expended on athletics alone, for he has been a member of several committees of importance.

Hal Paddock, Treasurer

Harriet Kibbee, Secretary

Reba Brogdon, Vice-President

Jerome Lillie, Sgt. at Arms

Junior Week-end Directorate

More varied than ever were the events of Junior Week-End this year. The Water Carnival which was inaugurated last year was enlarged and given greater prominence. Campus Day activities were increased with the addition of a tennis court dance following the Canoe Fete, and a hockey game as entertainment after the Campus Luncheon. The program for Mother's Day was improved so that it practically added a third day of activity for Junior Week-End.

Hal Johnson

Harold Johnson of Milton was appointed as general chairman of the Junior Week-End Directorate. Harold had been active on many committees during his three years at Oregon, and was very efficient in his directing of the week-end this year.

As assistant chairman, William Pittman was selected. Pittman directed a very successful Shine Day, and contributed much to making Junior Week-End programs work out smoothly.

Harry Van Dine of Portland handled the publicity for Junior Week-End.

Stanford Brooks of Astoria was appointed as head of the Junior Vodvil, one of the biggest features carried out by the junior class. Brooks' work on numerous other committees has been outstanding and his handling of the Junior Vodvil excellent.

The Canoe Fete was supervised by Bill East, and Cal Bryan was placed in charge of the Junior Prom. Kathryn Langenberg of North Bend was chairman of the Mother's Day committee, and Gladys Clausen successfully handled the big task of feeding the crowd at the Campus Luncheon.

T. Neil Taylor headed the group in charge of Campus Day activities, Harold Fraundorf managed the Water Carnival, and Hal Paddock handled financial matters.

Junior Shine Day

"A shine for a dime," traditional slogan of Junior Shine Day, echoed across the campus on February 28. William B. Pittman of Eugene was appointed to head the committee in charge of the event this year.

The proceeds from the junior bootblacks' efforts amounted to $120. Half of this sum was donated to a fund for the relief of Bulgarian students, and the remainder added to the coffers of the class of 1931.

Reba H. Brogdon of Eugene was chosen by Pittman to take charge of the ticket sales and to see that her junior gypsies sold, "A shine for a dime," to everyone on the campus. She appointed twelve co-eds to don the Romany garb.

William East of Salem supervised the construction and operation of the stands. He appointed the following men as managers at the five stands erected on the campus: Jerry Lillie, Mark Gill, Ted Parks, Al Hilgers, Verne Elliott, Jim Dezendorf, Don Maltby, Myron Griffin, Woodie Archer, Bob Bishop, George Christensen Maurice Kinney, Norman Eastman, Tom Dunham, and Bill Whitely.

Bill Whitely, president of the junior class, shined the shoes of Eleanor Poorman, president of the seniors, as traditional of Junior Shine Day. Other features of the day included a prize for the largest number of tickets sold. Harriet Kibbee, Thelma Kem, Gracia Haggerty, and Gladys Clausen were the champion ticket sellers.

The Junior Prom

All hail the Prom Queen, first choice of the campus to hold this new place of honor. Electing a Prom Queen was a new feature for the Junior Prom. Candidates from among the campus co-eds were selected early in the Spring term. The morning of the Prom, ballots were circulated for the campus to make the final choice, and the Prom Queen herself was presented at the Junior Prom, crowning event of Junior Week-end.

Calvin M. Bryan of Grants Pass was appointed chairman of the Junior Prom. During his three years at the university, Bryan has been active in campus affairs. A member of the frosh and varsity debate teams, and chairman on numerous committees, he has made for himself an enviable record.

With the experience of two former class dances behind it, the Junior class this year far surpassed all previous elaborate displays with their Pirate idea. McArthur court was supremely decorated with a dark background on which whites, reds, and yellows showed to advantage.

Since its first big affair, the Frosh Glee, the class of '31 has upheld its record as a leader in social affairs. The Frosh Glee is numbered among the few really unique class dances. The women's gymnasium was transformed to a great subterranean cavern in one end of which a huge fire roared with long flames of red, yellow, and orange shooting upward. A staircase led from the balcony to the center of the dance floor making a very novel entrance way for the dancers.

The motif for the Sophomore Informal of the class of '31 was Egyptian. McArthur court was the scene of this dance, the year's first big campus event. Huge columns of hieroglyphics and sun-scorched pyramids on a black background carried out the scheme very effectively.

The Canoe Fete

Colorful to a high degree and popular always is the Canoe Fete, one of the outstanding features of Junior Week-End. Last year some twenty floats were entered by the various living organizations on the campus who paired off and worked diligently to produce the prize winner. Neon tubing was introduced for the first time, adding a higher degree of color, and many other ideas were incorporated in as fine a group of floats as has ever passed the judges' stand on the old mill race.

William G. East of Salem was appointed chairman of the Canoe Fete this year.

"Nereid's Chariot," entry of Alpha Gamma Delta and Alpha Hall, was the winner of first prize last spring. The great whale, accompanied by a baby one, won approval of judges and spectators alike. It slid through the water silently, its great red eye winking occasionally as if to say, "I'm it." Painted in bright red, blue and white, the whale was indeed a striking picture as the spot lights played over it and followed the giant past the judges' stand into the darkness beyond.

Kappa Alpha Theta and Kappa Sigma captured the second prize with their entry, "The Fallen Aviator." A hush swept the watchers as this snow white "crashed ship," with its pilot, lifeless in the cockpit, passed by; a monument to many a lost hero. Great acclaim followed the silence, and many were of the opinion that the airplane, snowy white under the spot lights, one wing crumpled, the pilot limp and half out of the cockpit, was indeed the finest of all the floats.

Honorable mention was awarded to the float entered by Zeta Tau Alpha and Sigma Phi Epsilon, entitled, "Equina."

"The Fallen Aviator", Second Prize

"Nereid's Chariot," First Prize

Campus Day Activities

A variety of small events which fill in the spaces between the major features of Junior Week-End, spaces which might otherwise be void of interest, combine to make up Campus Day. The Water Carnival, the Campus Luncheon, painting of the "O", tug of war, and the tennis court dance are among the most important features of Campus Day.

Most important of these events is the Campus Luncheon, the break in the program when everyone gathers to make merry beneath the tall evergreens lining "Hello Lane," and chats with friends while eating a tasty lunch. Gladys Clausen of Portland was appointed chairman of the Campus Luncheon and arranged the feeding of the large crowd in a very capable manner.

Campus Day was headed by T. Neil Taylor of Portland. Neil has been very active in campus affairs and handled Campus Day activities successfully. He was assisted by Bill Donaldson, while Dorothy Thomas acted as secretary and handled publicity for the committee. Francis Hill and Ted Park directed the painting of the "O" on Skinner's Butte by the frosh football men, the tug of war between the sophomores and freshmen, and the burning of the green lids on Kincaid field. They enlarged the event so that it was among the most important features handled by the Campus Day committee. Dave Totten was in charge of the tennis court dance, assisted by Beatrice Bennett and Dena Lieuallen. Dave added a second tennis court dance to the traditional one by using the time after the Canoe Fete Friday night.

Hal Fraundorf of Portland was appointed as chairman of the Water Carnival. Although this event was just introduced to the campus last year, its popularity demanded its future care be in the hands of a special directorate.

The Sophomore Class

In line with the new spirit at Oregon of constructive and dignified traditions, the class of '32 has seen the passing of most of Oregon's traditional forms of hazing. The paddling of freshmen on the library steps, on ludicrous charges of misconduct, has almost ceased. The freshman parade and the annual underclass mix have been abolished for the first time in the history of the university.

It is perhaps with a sense of regret that many Oregon students and alumni will look at the new regime and speak of the good old days. But when traditions are outgrown and no longer fit the demands of a large university they must be discarded and a solid foundation built on new ideals that will make for a greater Oregon.

Changing the class organization from its outworn function of subordinating the freshmen, to a consciousness of itself as an entity has been the problem of the sophomores.

A significant departure from ordinary customs occurred when the realization that the unaffiliated man or woman was not getting enough out of class membership, led Jack Stipe, president, to encourage their organization into a working group.

Under an "Activity Committee" the sophomores have started a movement through which they are attempting to develop an interest in outside enterprises. It is felt that there is an immense opportunity for an organized class unit to do some really constructive work. Although definite plans have not yet been formulated, the committee believes that the work will consist in some form of service to the University or to the townspeople of Eugene. Leaders of the class feel that in such work the Sophomore class would have a chance not only to aid in some worthy cause but also to prove the driving power that it, or any other class so organized, can achieve through a true spirit of co-operation and willingness to work with each other.

The Sophomore banquet was held on February 14, in the men's dormitory. The motif of decorations was in the spirit of St. Valentines day.

Sophomore Informal

On an oasis under the shadows of the minarets of Mecca, modern youth danced to the strains of the "Varsity Vagabonds" at the Sophomore Informal of 1929. Stars and crescents symbolic of the spirit of the East, shone dully in a night blue sky.

Dim shaded yellow lights reflecting on the floor gave the illusion of the desert sands at dusk, with an infinity of shadow patterns.

Arrangements for the informal were in the hands of Tom Handley, general chairman; Max Williams, decorations; Chester Knowlton, business manager; and Irma Logan, secretary.

Kwama

Sophomore Service Honorary

Carrying out the service purposes of the organization, members of Kwama, sophomore women's honorary, assisted in various campus activities and programs throughout the year. Ushering at Sunday afternoon Vesper services, at special programs and serving at campus luncheons constituted a large share of the group's activity. During the winter term a tea was given at Gerlinger Hall honoring all freshman women.

Kwama as a society was organized on this campus a number of years ago. Its members are chosen the spring term of their freshman year on a basis of friendliness, fellowship, and services demonstrated. Nineteen members are chosen each year. The 1929-1930 Kwamas are: honorary members, Mrs. Virginia Judy Esterly, dean of women, and Mrs. Charles Leslie Schwering, assistant dean of women. Members: Carol Hurlbert, Bernice Hamilton, Florence Jones, Virginia H. Smith, Carolyn Haberlach, Lois Nelson, Donna Gill, Kathryn Perigo, Lucille Catlin, Helen Chaney, Bernice Woodward, Dorothy Jean Murphy, Alice Wingate, Barbara Mann, Betty Shipley, Irma Logan, Constance McKenzie, Murial McLean, and Anne Stange.

Oregon Knights

Underclassmen Service Honorary

The purpose of Oregon Knights is to entertain visiting athletic teams, usher at games, and uphold Oregon traditions. The officers are: Karl Greve, president; James Landreth, secretary; Joe Stoll, treasurer. Members: Ralph Walstrom, David Winas, Harold Kelley, Lawrence Bay, Dale Vandegrift, Jack Marshall, Ned Kinney, John Rogers, Gifford Sobey, Arthur Cannon, Henry McCue, Gilman Ryder, Rudolph Crommelin, Arthur Johnson, Henry Mumaw, Carvel Case, Kenneth Jette, Lloyd Ramp, Edwin Kirby, Milton Gilbert, Delbert Kimberling, Harold Short, Raymond Adams, John Marrs, Wilbur Preble, Walter Evans, Stanley Stark, Virgil Langtry, Willard Boring, Joe Hughes, Bob Quinn, Dick Givens, Carl Sanding, Elmer Peterson, Charles Larkin, Earl McGuire, Paul Wanacott.

Thespian

Freshman Women's Service Honorary

Composed of one freshman from each women's living organization, the Thespians, serve at banquets, luncheons and other functions where help is needed. The members are: Ellen Sersanous, Nadine McMurray, Dorothy Morrison, Marjorie Swafford, Adele Wedemeyer, Joan Bilyeu, Jane Winter, Elizabeth Jones, Artiss Eldrich, Marian McIntyre, Betty Carpenter, Harriette Hofmann, Carol Werschkul, Jean Whitney, Julia Creech, Maryellyn Bradford, Hester Hopkins, Alice Lively, Dorothy Campbell, Dorothy Curtis, Elizabeth Scruggs.

The Freshman Class

The freshman class of 1933 was the first class to enter the University under the new and impressive initiation now in use. At the Willamette football game the frosh sat in a separate Oregon rooter section reserved for them, and between halves marched around the field led by the band, and followed by the order of the "O" to the stands on the opposite side. Here in front of President Hall's box, they were welcomed to the University by John Straub, dean emeritus of men. Formal welcome was given them by Tom Stoddard, president of the student body. While the freshmen knelt Stoddard put the green lid on Lawrence Bay, freshman president, symbolizing the transition from high school to University life. The class then rose and led by the band sang the Oregon pledge song.

Oregon's traditional homecoming found the freshmen busy, building the bonfire and guarding the "O." The fiery "O" on Skinner's butte, the night before the football game with Oregon State College, burned with as much fury as in former years. Jim Travis was chairman of the bonfire committee.

The chief social event of the class was the "Frosh Glee" given on the evening of January 18, at McArthur Court. Holland furnished the motif of decorations, with the "Dutch Plate Idea." Charles Gillespie was chairman of the committee.

The class officers elected for the year are Lawrence Bay, president; Marguerite Tarbell, vice-president; Julia Creech, secretary; Wesley Edwards, treasurer.

*"Think not to scorn the fierceness of a sigh
From that which kindles flame may flames draw nigh.
O be not heedless of the tears of night,
Or the dawn's grey sighs that 'neath your casement die."*

The Medical School

Rising southward from the center of Portland's business, covered with foliage and Oregon fir, is Marquam Hill on which are the hospitals and laboratories of the University and State.

To the peaceful heights are carried the sick from the city below. Here broken limbs are mended and failing health is strengthened.

In the laboratories research work is steadily revealing the secrets of nature. At the present time, the pathology of sinus disease, goitre and heart diseases is being studied; the physiology of the gall bladder and endocrine glands is being advanced; the action of the Bacteriophage is being applied to diseases; the pharmacologic action of drugs is being investigated and unknown nerve pathways being worked out.

As a recognition of the good work done in the Medical School, the National Board of Education of the Rockefeller Foundation has given $40,000 to the University. This fortune is being invested in the construction of the new clinic on the campus of the Medical School.

Crowning Marquam Hill, overlooking the city of Portland, the medical school has woodland quiet and the advantage of being within a few minutes of the heart of the business section. The Doernbecher Children's Hospital, as well as the Multnomah County Hospital, are on the same hill, and form valuable observation laboratories.

Professor R. L. Benson

To his friends, Dr. Benson is a connoisseur of wild flowers and rock gardens, while to generations of medical students listening to his lectures, he has always been the kindly head of the Pathology department. To many physicians and surgeons he is teacher and counselor. As an authority on pollens and proteins, it was inevitable that Dr. Benson would become an eminent consultant in the allergic conditions associated with hay-fever and asthma. And as a result, he has recently found it necessary to retire as a full time professor and devote more of his time to the practice of medicine.

In esteem and recognition of his services to the Medical school as teacher and scientist for eighteen years, is dedicated this issue of the Medical section.

Dr. Benson holds the degrees of B.A., M.A., and M.D. He has been professor of Pathology, and head of the department from 1913 to 1929; Major in the U. S. A. Medical corps; Lieutenant Colonel Reserves; Pathologist United States Public Health Service; Pathologist United States Veterans' Hospital; Supervisor City Bacteriological Laboratories, Portland; Coronor's Surgeon, Multnomah County; one time Pathologist Multnomah County, St. Vincent's, and Good Samaritan Hospitals; Bacteriologist Florida State Board of Health 1912; Alpha Omega Alpha, Sigma Xi, American Association for the Study of Allergy, Interurban Medical Society, American Medical Association, and City and County Medical Society.

The Law School

From its modest beginnings in Portland in 1884, with seven students enrolled the first year, the law school has risen to a place of prominence among the schools of the University of Oregon and among those of the United States, and this year has a total registration of 92 students.

The original night school in Portland was unable to obtain a high rating and due to the strained financial condition of the University, the administration was unable to effect a reorganization without moving the school to Eugene. This was done, and in the fall of 1915 a full-time day law school was established here with three full-time professors and a part-time political science professor on the faculty.

Now, fifteen years since its establishment on the campus, the law school boasts spacious quarters in Oregon Hall, the services of five full-time and two part-time professors, and a law library that is unequalled among many schools of the country.

Charles E. Carpenter, dean of the school for the past three years, came to Oregon in 1922 as a professor. He took his law work at Harvard and had teaching experience in North Dakota and in Illinois before coming to the University. There was a small number of students in the school when it was brought to Eugene fifteen years ago, but by the fall of 1923 the enrollment had reached 49. In his eight years with the school, Dean Carpenter has seen the law school rise steadily in registration and in the quality of work offered.

Professors in the school include, besides Dean Carpenter, Carlton E. Spencer, Charles G. Howard, Wayne L. Morse, and Hugh E. Rosson. Part-time professors are James D. Barnett and Orlando Hollis.

Many of the leading members of the Oregon bar are alumni of the University of Oregon law school. Portland attorneys including J. F. Booth, Dan Malarkey, Earl C. Bronaugh, John F. Logan, Russell E. Sewell, Rodney L. Glisan, Judge John P. Kavanaugh, Lawrence A. McNary, and Homer Angell are only a few of the prominent alumni. In all, there are approximately 750 alumni of the school, located in all parts of the state and nation and well known in legal circles.

To gain admission to the law school as an undergraduate, a student must have obtained a junior certificate with upper division standing, or half of a four-year university course. He is then eligible to become a first-year law student. Special concessions are made in some instances to students who have not complied with the regular admission requirements. After his three years of work in the law school, the student is given his degree of bachelor of laws and then can take the Oregon bar examination. Graduates of the Oregon law school in the past years have shown a remarkably high record in passing the state examination, and almost all have become members of the profession.

The Law Student Body

Every student in the law school automatically becomes a member of the student body organization upon his registration in the school. The membership for the past year totaled 92.

Leland B. Shaw, senior, was president of the law school student body for the year 1929-30. David T. Bauman, another senior, held the office of secretary and third-year representative. Fred W. Finsley was treasurer and represented the second-year students. Roy L. Herndon was the first-year man on the council.

Elections are held in the spring term. The retiring president chooses a nominating committee which selects two nominees for each office. Nominations may also be made from the floor during the meeting of the entire student group. The first-year representative is selected by the student body the following fall term.

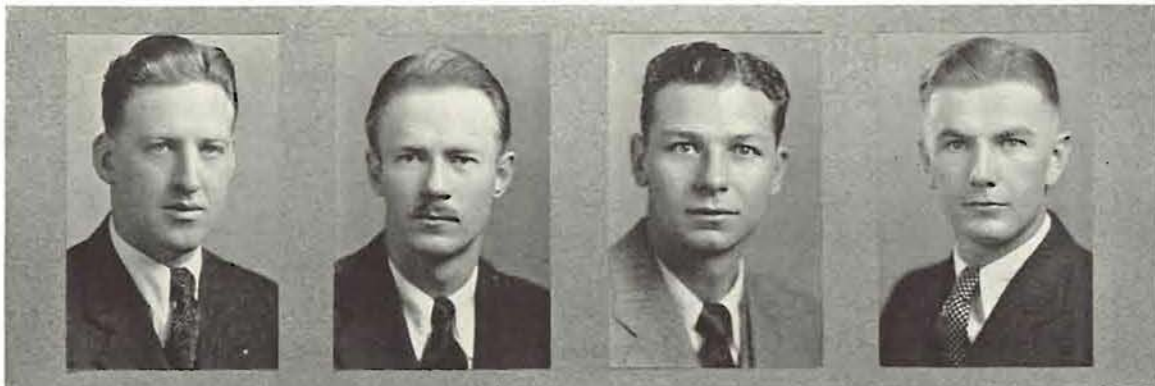

The law school student body council, composed of the four officers of the association, has direct supervision of the honor system, which has been in use for the past eight years. The council keeps the plan in operation and deals with infractions of the honor code. Examinations and quizzes are not supervised in the school, but the council has had few occasions to punish violators of the system.

The student association sponsors a social function such as a banquet or smoker each term. Last spring, Chief Justice Oliver P. Coshow, of the supreme court of the state of Oregon, was the principal speaker at the annual banquet.

A smoker held under the direction of Ellis D. Reiter, law senior, was the fall term affair. Wayne L. Morse and Hugh E. Rosson, new members of the faculty, were the speakers. Wrestling and boxing bouts and musical numbers were presented.

In March of this year, Judge John P. Kavanaugh, alumnus of the University of Oregon law school, was the honor guest at the student body banquet. All pre-legal students in the University were invited.

Law Activities

A moot court trial, held each year in the spring term by students in the law school for the purpose of practically applying their knowledge of law and court procedure, is one of the featured activities of the school. Members of the faculty choose the students for the parts of judge, jury, and attorneys, and these write up the entire case for presentation.

This mock trial last spring centered around the campus movie that was then in production on the campus and involved one of the stars, Phyllis Van Kimmell, in a breach of promise suit against Jack E. Jones. Lester Oehler and Bill Adams, law seniors, were the attorneys for the plaintiff in her attempt to get a verdict of $25,000. Chris Boesen and John Bell, also third-year students, defended Jones.

After both sides had presented their cases and the plaintiff and defendant taken the stand for cross-examination, the student jurors retired and after ten minutes deliberation returned a verdict of $3.95 for Miss Van Kimmell.

Jurors for the moot trial were: Bill Prendergast, foreman; Don Templeton, Maurice Tarshis, Wilford Long, Clifford Powers, Helen Louise Crosby, Mrs. Orval Yokom, Bill Eddy, Reese Wingard, Charlotte Keeper, Lester Johnson and Howard Davidson.

Court officials were: Ray Smick, bailiff; Bliss Ansnes, clerk; and Orval Yokom, reporter. The mock trial attracted many students from all over the campus and the court room was crowded.

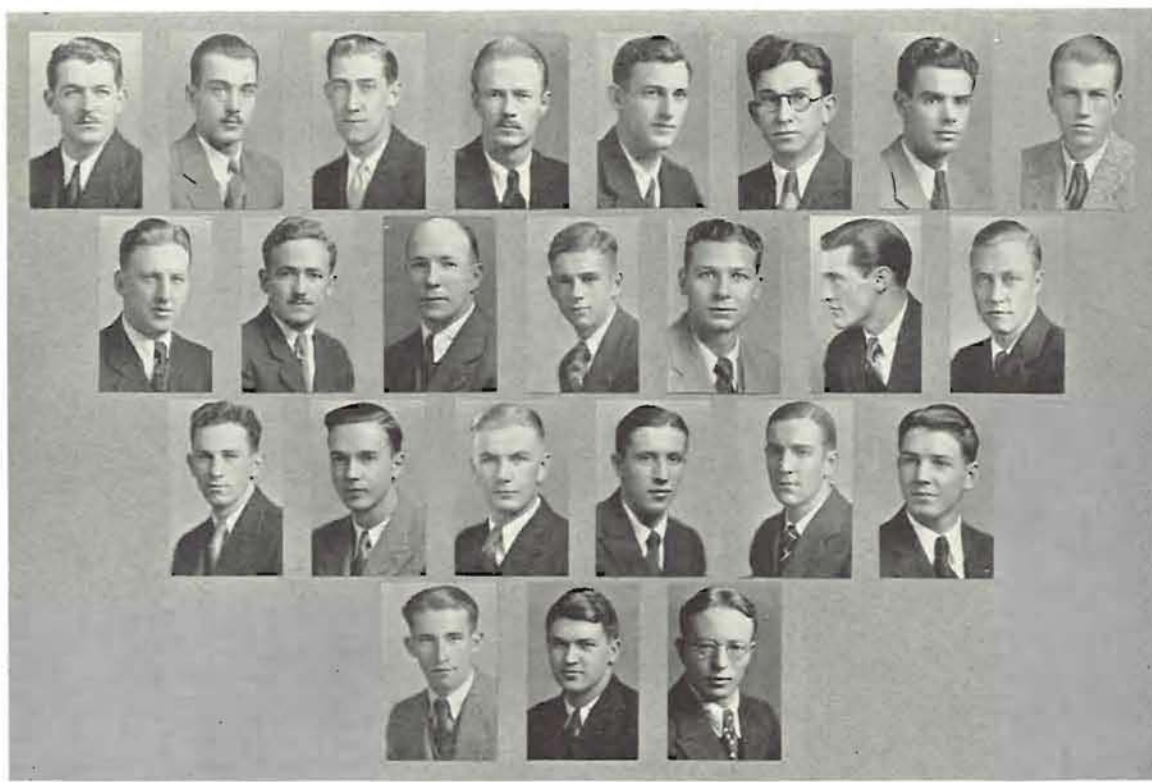

Students in the law school compete each year for the Frank R. Hilton prize, an annual award of $50 to the student who presents the best oral discussion of a legal subject selected by the faculty of the school. The competition was held this year on April 3. Three attorneys chosen from the state at large presided as judges. In addition to the prize offered by Mr. Hilton, the University gives second and third place awards of $25 and $15.

The Oregon Law Review, journal of the Oregon bar association, is published four times during the college year by the University. Charles G. Howard, of the law faculty, is editor-in-chief of the publication. Other members of the faculty comprise the editorial staff. Roland Davis, senior in law, is business manager and Richard R. Morris, another senior, is Recent Case Note editor.

Corner of the Law Library

Law Library

Upwards of 20,000 volumes are on the shelves of the law school library which is fast finding its quarters on the top floor of Oregon Hall too crowded.

Codified laws of every state of the nation and complete sets of English reports handed down since 1693 are in the library. An up-to-date collection of textbooks on all phases of law is available for circulation among the students in the school. Other books in the library do not circulate, but are kept as reference works.

The largest and most valuable gift of books ever made to the University of Oregon law library was the Kenneth Lucas Fenton memorial library collection of 8000 volumes, given in 1921 by Judge William D. Fenton, of Portland, in memory of his son. Other substantial donations of books that have been made to the library in the past include the libraries of Judge Matthew P. Deady and Lewis Russell.

Over 500 volumes a year are purchased by the law library which has an appropriation of approximately $3500 annually for such expenses. Close to 80 periodicals are received monthly by the library, being subscribed for or gotten in exchange for the Oregon Law Review, a University publication.

Four students in the law school are employed by the library as custodians during afternoon and evening hours besides the regular part-time custodian on duty. The law school library is open 16 hours a day, longer than any other library on the campus.

Law Alumni Association

A UNIVERSITY OF OREGON Law Alumni Association was formed in Portland December 20, 1929, with more than 100 charter members present at a luncheon meeting at the Multnomah hotel.

Lawrence A. McNary, of the class of 1890, was elected president of the alumni group at the initial meeting and Wilber Henderson, '11, was chosen vice-president. Carlton E. Spencer, member of the law school faculty, was elected secretary.

Four men were chosen to serve as executive committee men at large. Judge John P. Kavanaugh, will have a four-year term; William Adams, graduate with the class of 1929, three years; J. F. Booth, two years, and Harry J. DeFrancq, one year.

The alumni association was formed under the direction of Mr. McNary and a committee composed of J. F. Booth, '88, John F. Logan, '92, Dan J. Malarkey, '92, John P. Kavanaugh, '93, Arthur L. Veazie, '93, and John C. Veatch, '11.

Membership in the organization, which totals more than 250 at the present time, is open to graduates and former students of the University of Oregon law school and graduates of any college of the University who are now practicing attorneys.

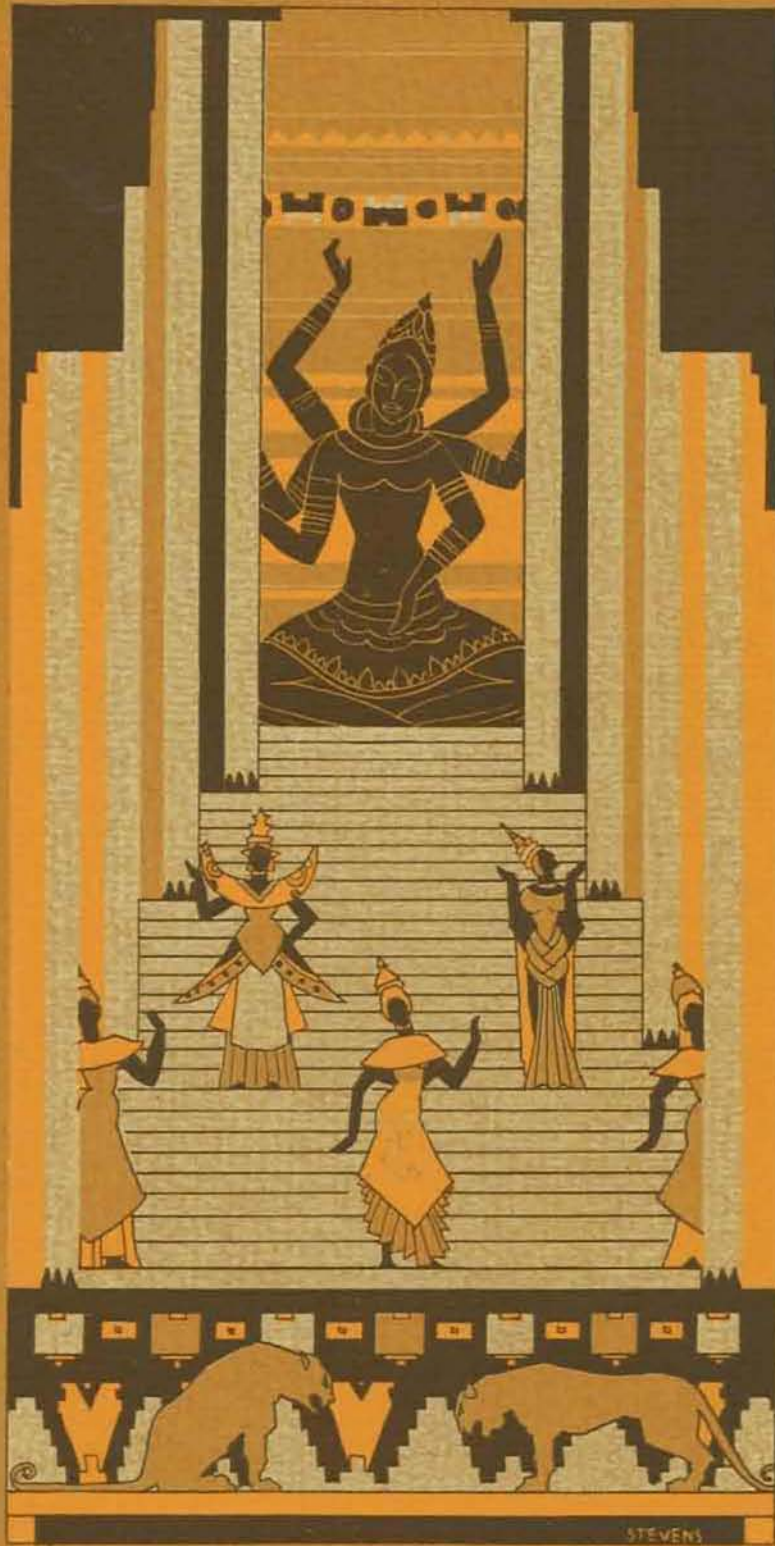

The alumni association was formed to foster a spirit of loyalty and fraternity among the graduates and former students of the law school, and to effect united action in promoting the welfare of the school of law and the legal profession.

Sending good students to the school, establishing a loan fund, providing openings for graduates, securing endowments for the school, and making the Oregon law school the Harvard of the Pacific are the aims of the alumni organization.

SCHOOL YEAR

Tom Stoddard

The undergraduate students of the University of Oregon are organized under the name of the Associated Students of the University of Oregon. The aim of this association is to sponsor student activities, including athletics, forensics, concerts and lecture series, student publications, student social affairs, and all business which directly concerns its members.

Through the assumption of their own business problems, students are made to realize the importance of bearing responsibility and the value which that factor plays in their entire lives. They not only are afforded the opportunity for the expression of leadership, but also an outlet for ability along practically any line desired.

I am sure that the activities of the Associated Students for the year 1929-30 have been marked with success. They have progressed in size and importance with the natural growth of the University and have reflected at all times the spirit of an enthusiastic and energetic student body.

Let us all look forward to the building of a greater and mightier Oregon.

Very sincerely,
THOMAS STODDARD, president,
Associated Students.

Student Body

Chief among the accomplishments of the student body for the year 1929-30 stands the move toward abolition of the rough features in Oregon's traditional policy. Instead of the Frosh Parade of other years, an inauguration ceremony was held at Hayward Field between halves of the Oregon-Willamette football game. At this time the men of the freshman class officially donned the "green lid" under the direction of Dr. John Straub, dean emeritus of men, who has known 52 freshman classes at Oregon.

The University of Oregon student administration has become an active member of the National Student Federation of America. This federation works toward the perfection of student government in the schools and colleges of the United States and the education of American students along national and international lines. At the convention of the federation, held in Palo Alto, California, Tom Stoddard, president of the A. S. U. O., was named national delegate on the executive council and was made a member of the standing committee on publications.

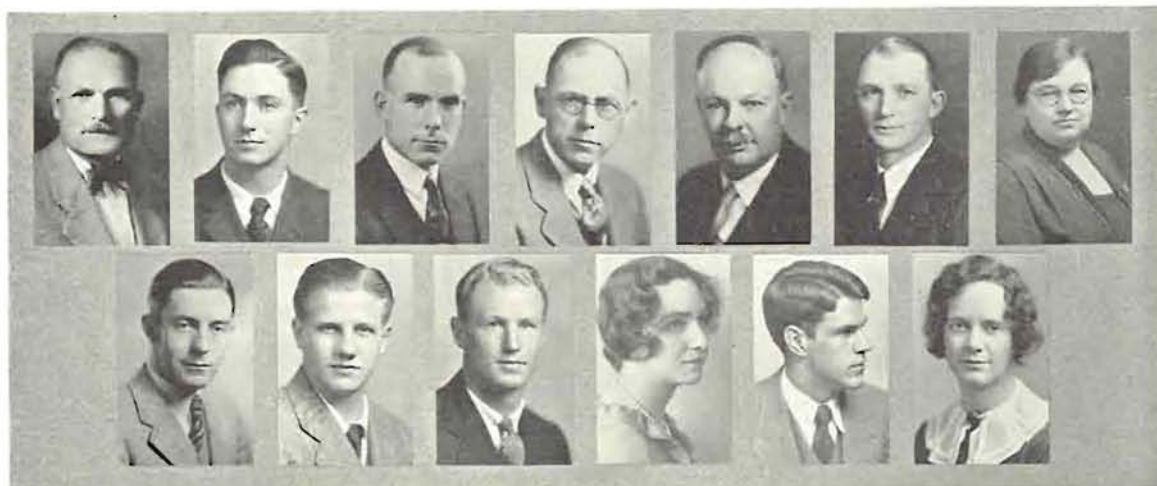

The 1929 Homecoming was the most successful, from the point of view of both attendance and finances, that has ever been held at Oregon. Dad's Day was more widely attended than ever, and so was the High School Conference.

In line with the spirit of progress which seeks to rid the school of outgrown usages and laws was the revision of the student body constitution which was carried out under the supervision of the executive council. Dick Horn, vice-president of the student body, acted as chairman of the revision committee.

A decrease of 10% in the budgets of all student activities resulted in a substantial saving.

A revival of the long unmentioned plans for constructing the Student Union building was made under the auspices of the student administration and a group of Eugene business men. A movement to construct a new stadium at the University was also started.

Executive Council

The executive council is the governing body that has control over all student activities.

Among its many duties is the election and employment of the graduate manager, all coaches, trainers, and student assistants. Student managers for all student body activities are appointed by the executive council, and it decides on all budgets for the expenditure of student funds.

The executive council is composed of six students, the president of the University, three members of the faculty, three alumni, and the graduate manager.

Greater Oregon Committee

"Where do we go from here?" high school seniors wonder. So an Oregon student steps in and answers, "To U. of O., of course." The Greater Oregon committee sees to it that no wavering one is left in doubt.

Every section of the state is represented on the committee. Each member makes sure that all prospective university students in his territory are interviewed.

What course to take? Where to take it? What are the entrance requirements? What are they like? Who are the Profs.? What are they like? What is college life? Those are some of the queries that the committee members answer.

There are the alumni too. The committee establishes contacts with the students that have graduated as well as the ones who are about to experience for the first time the pleasures of fraternity and sorority life, of millracing, of pushing up and down "old Thirteenth."

The work of the committee was climaxed this year by the visit of Paul Hunt, chairman of the committee; Keith Hall, vice-chairman; and Tom Stoddard, president of the student body, to all the principal cities of the state. The trip lasted nearly three weeks, ending September 18, when the three officials returned to Eugene.

Paul Hunt, Chairman

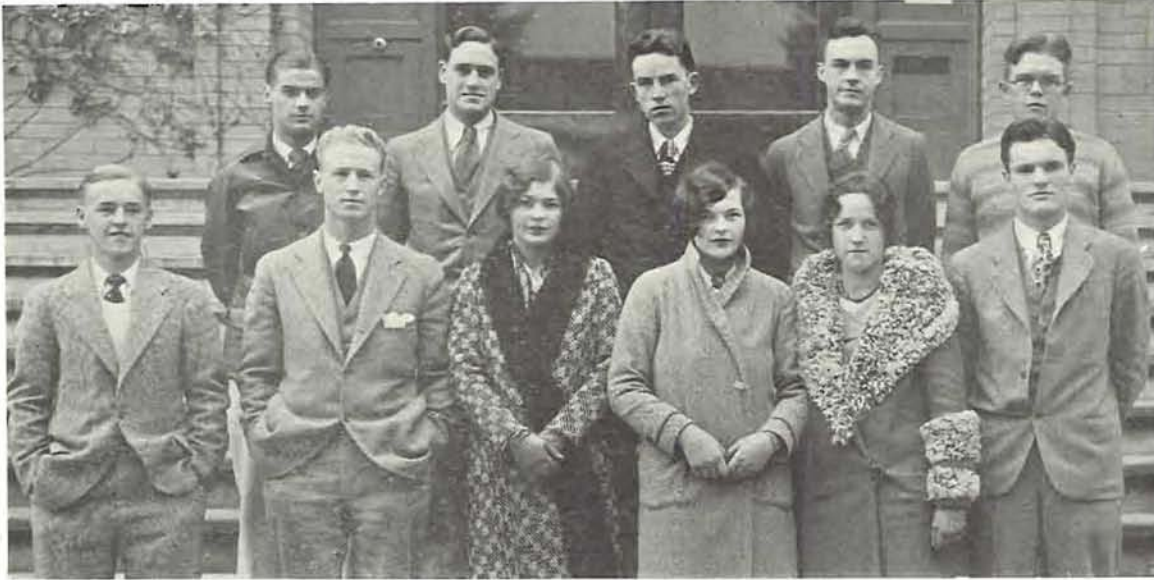

There were banquets, attended by students and alumni, in Medford, Klamath Falls, Burns, and Pendleton. There were meetings in Medford, Klamath Falls, Roseburg, Ashland, Bend, Burns, Baker, La Grande, Pendleton, and Astoria.

The trip was highly successful, according to Paul Hunt, who said upon his return:

"In our contact with prospective students we were impressed with the numbers that were going to our own institution. The fad, or whatever it may be called, of going to an out-of-state school seems to have entirely disappeared."

Homecoming Directorate

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1929:

A mammoth "O" burns high above the town against the blackness of the night. Roaring, howling, screaming, clanking machines lumber down the street below.

Grads are coming home to honor Oregon.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16:

Green and yellow pennants flutter in the November winds that sweep up Thirteenth street. Cars with green and yellow stickers on their windshields pass beneath the high arch that is the gateway to the campus. Grads are registering at Johnson hall.

Thousands of students and alumni mingle together at McArthur court. It is the homecoming luncheon. There is laughing and shouting as friends discover each other.

Yellow chrysanthemums are pinned above fast-beating hearts. There is cheering, and old grads refight the battles they had won or lost back in '16, '20 or '23.

Oregon beats the Beavers. The homecoming dance is a mass of throbbing, rhythmic victory-celebrating humanity.

"Ed's Co-ed" makes its debut. Alumni and students applaud.

Over the campus homecoming signs gleam, welcoming former students back to the school where they worked and played, flunked and made the honor roll for four years. An Oregon collegiate milks the O. S. C. cow above the sign "Cream for Our Coffee," and the S. A. E.'s win the Bristow cup for the second time.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 17:

Grads are boarding trains and tages or turning their cars north or south to where jobs await them. They have breathed once again that exhilarating atmosphere of college.

Dad's Day

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2:

Dad's Day: An opportunity for Dad to get a glimpse of college life; a chance to ask the professors why Johnny got a V when Mary got a I; a time when he can meet other Dads and compare progeny.

Five hundred men from all parts of the state, and some from other states, flock to the Oregon campus. The register shows that there are 134 from Portland, 53 from Eugene, 13 from Salem, and smaller groups from other cities.

There is a full program for the day. Meetings of the executive committee, of the general state committee, and the annual business meeting in the morning. Bruce Dennis, Klamath Falls, is president of the Oregon Dad's organization; Frank E. Andrews, Portland, vice-president; Claude Rorer, Eugene, secretary; Karl Onthank, Eugene, executive secretary. The other members of the executive committee are: Louis Dodge, Ashland; Paul T. Shaw, Portland; J. Roy Raley, Pendleton; C. C. Chapman, Portland; J. C. Stevens, Portland; C. H. Brockhagen, Portland; W. W. Banks, Portland; P. Stadelman, The Dalles; A. W. Norblad, Astoria, now of Salem.

In the afternoon the Dads watch the Oregon football team defeat the Bruins of Los Angeles by a 27-0 score. They sit in a special section of the grandstand, supplied with megaphones, yelling as lustily as their sons across the field. They have their own yell king, Mr. J. O. Freck, of Portland. The Oregon band spells out the word, "DAD" on the football field.

Afterwards there is a reception given by the faculty at McArthur Court. The faculty of each department and school is grouped around a placard in the balcony. It is easy for Dad to find the particular Profs that he wants to see. Then comes the big banquet on the main floor of the court. President Arnold Bennett Hall speaks. The A. W. Norblad trophy, a silver loving cup, is presented to Bachelordon for having the greatest percentage of fathers present. Theta Chi receives a hammered silver coffee set, given by Paul T. Shaw, for having the second largest percentage.

The banquet is followed by a smoker with boxing, wrestling, and fencing. Sunday there are special Dad's Day programs at the churches and special dinners at the various houses on the campus.

And Dad goes home to tell Mother all about it; so that she will be sure to come for Mother's Day.

Mothers' Week-end

SATURDAY, MAY 10:

Trains and automobiles coming to Eugene are filled with mothers, hundreds of them, thronging to the campus to share in the activities of Mothers' Week-end with their University sons and daughters.

Following registration at the Administration building, the mothers have a general meeting. The Water Carnival, held down on the millrace, and personally conducted tours around the campus fill the morning and afternoon.

A huge banquet is given at the Men's dormitory, in honor of the mothers, in the evening. Here they are officially welcomed to the University of Oregon by President Arnold Bennett Hall, Tom Stoddard, president of the associated students, and Helen Peters, president of the associated women students. Silver loving cups are presented to the sorority and fraternity having the highest percentage of mothers registered for the week-end.

Afterwards the mothers go to McArthur court to look on at the Junior Prom, the final event of Junior Week-end. They are thrilled at the sight of the vast pirate ship in which their sons and daughters dance, a changing mass of color.

SUNDAY, MAY 11:

All Eugene churches hold special services in honor of Mothers' Day. Dinners for the visiting mothers are held at all the houses.

In the afternoon, all the living organizations have open house, and the mothers pay visits to several, learning something about fraternity and sorority life.

A vesper service at the music auditorium, planned for mothers who are guests at Oregon, brings the affairs of the week-end to a close.

And mother returns home, understanding a little better that intricate thing which is college life.

High School Conference

FRIDAY, JANUARY 10:

High school conference . . . a chance for visiting preppers to learn a bit about college . . . see how college students study and how they play . . . an opportunity to compare notes with other high school students on the problems of running a student body government, a girls' league, or a publication.

More than 500 delegates from all parts of the state gather to spend the week-end as guests of the University of Oregon.

A full program is arranged for each day. On Friday morning there is a general assembly at which Tom Stoddard welcomes the visitors to Oregon. President Arnold Bennett Hall, and Dean Arthur Stone of the University of Montana school of journalism, give talks.

In the evening there is a banquet at the Men's dormitory in honor of the delegates and their advisors. Afterwards they watch the Oregon basketball team play a fast game with the Cougars of Washington State college at McArthur court.

And then there is the annual College Night entertainment at Gerlinger hall. This takes the form of a radio program announced over station BLAT. Madge Normile's famous blues songs, Hal Hatton's intricate tap dances, and the syncopating rhythms of the Varsity Vagabonds bring the first day of the conference to a close.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 11:

Election of officers for the various state associations occupies a good share of the morning. Student body officers choose: John Adams, Grant high of Portland, president; Edward Reames, Medford high, vice-president; and Naomi Childs, Sandy high, secretary. The high school press association elects: Clare Vause, Milton-Freewater, president; Ron Ingalls, Hood River, vice-president; and Dorothy Tucker, Albany high, secretary. Girls' League representatives choose: Madelene Gilbert, Eugene high, president; and Edith Holt, Bend high, secretary.

A gymnastic exhibition is put on in the morning by University women, and this is followed by a style show staged by the Associated Women Students of Oregon.

And then the conference is over, and the preppers go home to tell their friends about the things they saw and did while they were guests at Oregon.

The Campus Movie

College life as college students live it is portrayed in "Ed's Co-ed," or, as it was known during the long months of production, the "campus movie." Written, acted, and produced by Oregon students, it was the first picture of its kind ever to be completed. The world premier showing, held in Eugene during Homecoming Week-End, drew capacity houses and was an unquestioned success.

The trials, tribulations, and eventually the joys of a freshman who enters college and wins a girl, furnishes the story, the scene of which is laid on the Oregon campus. Oregon traditions and the famed mill-

The picture was produced under the joint direction of James Raley and Carvel Nelson. Ronald Hubbs acted as business manager. Members of the staff included: Verne Elliot, the freshman, Ed; Dorothy Burke, who as Joanne was Ed's chief reason for coming to college; James Lyons, the upper-class villain, who for a while made life miserable for Ed; Helen Allen, as Connie, Joanne's girl friend; Bill Overstreet, the athlete; Norman Eastman, Buddy, the fat, good natured sophomore; and Phyllis Van Kimmell, who as Midge, the freshman co-ed, is Buddy's sweetheart.

Rally Directorate

The biggest send-off rally that ever started an Oregon football team off to victory, the noisiest noise parade in campus history, and one of the peppiest rallies ever held in Portland . . . these were some of the achievements of the 1929 Rally Directorate.

Quite different from the small and rather ineffective committees of former years was the new and highly organized group which developed under the leadership of James Raley. Composed of 34 members, it included both men and women, a new venture at Oregon, where women had always been seen but not heard at rallies.

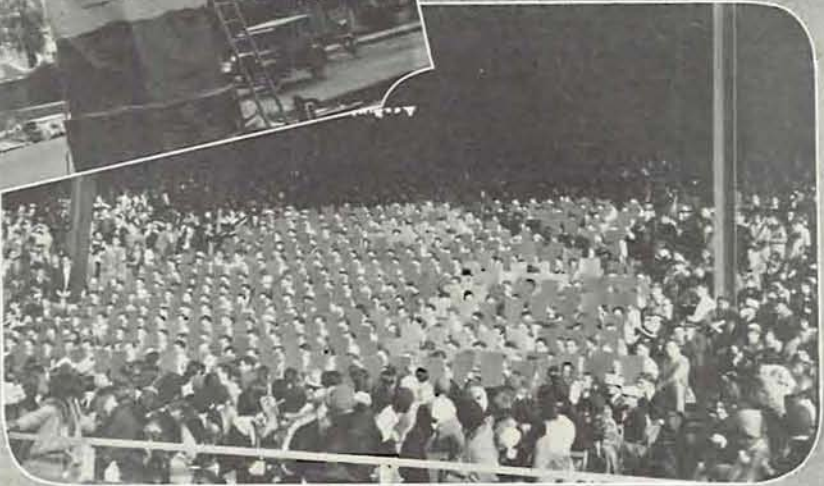

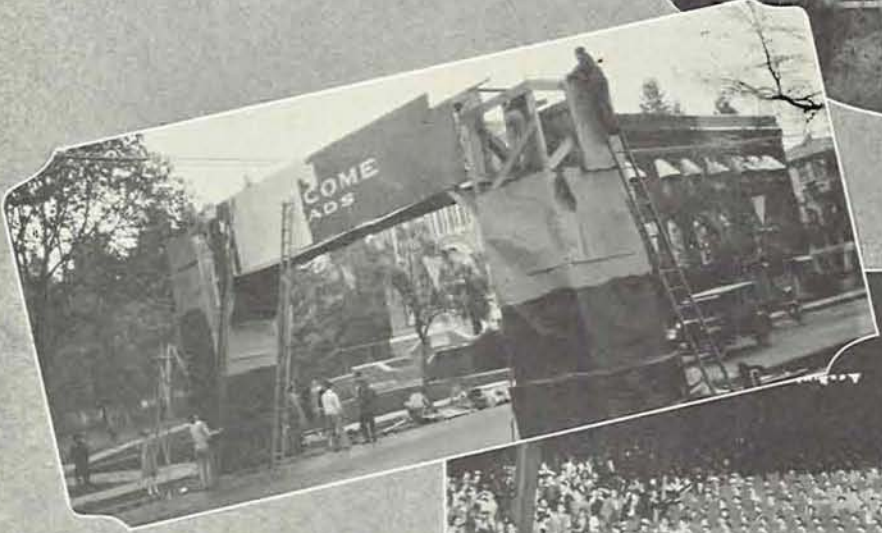

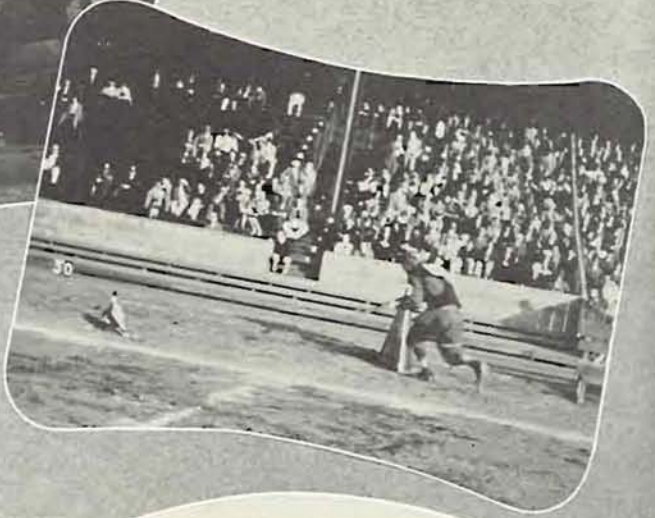

Members of the committee for the year included: James Raley, chairman; Joe Freck, assistant chairman; Shirley Rew, secretary; Charles Reed, Charles Laird, Stan Brooks, Bill Whitely, Ken Curry, Wilson Jewett, Sid Dobbin, Rosser Atkinson, Keith Hall, Kenton Hamaker, Don Carver, Paul Hunt, Myron Griffin, Jack Sammons, Douglas DeCew, Bryan Mimnaugh, Vawter Parker, Phil Bell, Treve Jones, Hal Kelley, Bill Knox, Dick Givens, Art Rolander, Alberta Rives, Ina Tremblay, Marjorie Clark, Virginia Moore, Emmajane Rorer, Anne Stange, Virginia Peyton, Edna Dunbar, and Anne Bloom.

September . . . long lines move between the registration tables. Hal Kelly leads the gang in Oregon yells. The band leads the frosh men to the grandstand where they don the green. The senior bench is smeared with green paint, and men of the class of '33 spend weary hours scrubbing it.

DRAMA

Mrs. Ottilie Seybolt

The Drama Season

Guild Theatre, under the direction of Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt, head of the department of drama, has captured the golden glamour of the true stage.

This golden illusion is what the outsider feels, as he pauses below the foot-lights, but past that glittering barricade lies unceasing toil, and Mrs. Seybolt has never for a moment faltered in her effort.

Let me paint a picture for you: a tall woman with gracious lines, she has dignity, poise, and charm. She has a fresh complexion, a curving mouth, and brown eyes that have luminous depths in them. Mrs. Seybolt has not outgrown enthusiasm. Her voice, though---that is the most beautiful and arresting thing about her: it has honeyed syllables and bell-like modulations that slip and slide into each other or that stand out, separately, exquisitely alone.

This is Mrs. Seybolt's second year on the campus. She is a graduate of Mount Holyoke college, took her master's degree in English at the University of Wisconsin, and has since been a member of the faculties of Grinnell college and the Universities of Wisconsin, Colorado, and Minnesota.

She has been associated with the Greek Theatre Players of California under Sam Hume, and director of the Poughkeepsie community theatre at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. During the summer of 1927, she was with the Chicago Art Theatre, which is conducted on the same basis as the Moscow Art Theatre.

This Christmas she took the part of Rosalind in Barry's play, "Rosalind," in the Christmas program of the Portland Civic Theatre.

The drama department is coming to be a more and more essential part in the University and a natural means of artistic expression for an increasing number of students.

Mrs. Seybolt is each year trying to present a wide variety of plays. This year, she presented: "The Importance of Being Earnest," "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," both social comedies; "Escape," a serious drama; "The Ivory Door," a lyrical fantasy, and "Yellow Jacket," a costumed fantastic comedy, thus running through the gamut of most types of drama, with the exception of modern American comedy, which was taken care of in the Studio Matinee plays.

The Studio Matinee plays are a new departure. Beginning in winter term, one-act plays were presented every Thursday at 4 o'clock, under the direction of a student in the direction of a student in the play production class.

Mrs. Seybolt has also brought into existence a new group to be known as the University players, which is composed, not only of students but of faculty members. This year the University players presented "The Importance of Being Earnest."

In this comedy the faculty was represented by Mrs. Seybolt, Miss Lenore Casford, Louis Artau, S. Stephenson Smith, and Mr. Matson. This was the first time that Mrs. Seybolt has taken part in any of the departmental plays.

Much credit for the progress of the department goes, not only to Mrs. Seybolt, but to her two assistants: Cecil E. Matson, and Fred Harris.

Mr. Matson is a recent graduate of the University. He was very active in drama while in college and has since been associated with the Duffy players in Portland and has done considerable independent directing work with high school casts. He not only directed, but took the male lead in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney."

Mr. Harris has charge of the classes in stagecraft and theatre workshop, and designed sets for most of the plays, notably those of "Escape." This is his first year on the campus. Before he came here, he had professional experience in New York and Los Angeles, and made designs for the Players' club in Seattle.

For the first time, the stage and workshop are figuring as an integral part of the department and are receiving their share of attention along with the acting and production end of it.

Mrs. Seybolt is also making an annual custom of producing a matinee performance of a children's play. Last year it was "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs"; Loleta Jaeger taking the part of Snow White, Bob Guild of Prince Charming, Florence McNerney of the Wicked Fairy, and Nancy Thielsen of The Queen.

This year the "Ivory Door," lyric fantasy by A. A. Milne, served as a performance for both adult and children audiences.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was presented by the class in dramatic interpretation; that of the "Ivory Door" by the class in technic of acting.

Importance of Being Earnest

What's in a name? Love, honor, family, fortune, everything to be exact, and so that is why it is necessary to both our heroes to be "Earnest" . . . and both of them succeed.

It is a brittle, sparkling, high-comedy that made us laugh and forget ourselves, this "The Importance of Being Earnest," which was presented November 20 and 21 at the Guild hall by the University Players. Mrs. Seybolt directed the play.

The University players are a new group composed not only of students but of faculty members. The play, which is by Oscar Wilde, has no action, and so relies for interest on the skill with which the lines are handled.

Mr. Matson, as John Worthing, J. P., and James Lyons, as Algernon Moncrieff, deserve special credit for their interpretation. Their wit tilted back and forth with rickicity and grace.

Mrs. Seybolt for the first time took part in one of her own plays and gave a polished, dignified, and haughty presentation of the supremely dignified and haughty Lady Blacknell.

Helen Allen as the Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax, and Elinor Rennie as Cecily Cardew, both with ingenue parts, lent a charming atmosphere to the play.

Miss Casford, as Miss Prism, the spinster governess, sustained a hard piece of character-acting throughout, as also did Mr. Artau as the Rev. Canon Chasuble, D.D.

Mr. Smith, as Merriman, caused gales of laughter by a bow-legged walk and an air of senile dignity.

Jack Waldron as Lane, and Robert Miller as the servant are new Guild players who shone.

Heroes versus Heroines

Scene from Episode Seven of "Escape"

Escape

"Escape," the intense story of a man's soul, his harrowing flight from prison, his almost escape, and then his giving himself up, because as Mr. Galsworthy puts it, "it's one's better self one can't escape."

"Escape" was the most serious play attempted by the department this year, as much of the story lay between the line, but exceptional acting made it a real success.

It is an episodic play, Captain Matt Denana, taken by Arthur Gray, being the only character to appear in more than two of the nine episodes. Mr. Gray begins as a polished, cosmopolitan, urbane gentleman, we see him becoming weaker, more ragged, hopeless, despairing, but he is still a gentleman, polished and urbane.

Characters who deserve special mention for fine work are: Florence Mc Nerney and Sally Runes, both of whom played "the girl of the town" with intensity and yet a certain wistful quality; Jack Waldron, as the "fellow convict," whose acting was extremely vigorous. Nancy Thielsen as "the lady" gave grace, color, charming insouciance. Cecil Matson as "the old gentleman" gave an excellent and finished piece of character portrayal; James Lyons, as "the man in Plus Fours," Renee Nelson, as his wife, were interesting and sincere. Kermit Stevens, as "the parson," was a fine figure of a man.

Other characters who carried their parts convincingly: Addison Brockman, Margaret Turner, Elizabeth Thacher, Celene Lauterstein, Loleta Jaeger, George Anderson, Ethan Newman, Boone Hendricks, Robert Miller, Albertina Hankey, Doralis May, Norma Jacobs, Gene Love, Miles Shaw, Bessie Davie, and Jean Williams.

The Studio Matinees

To the soft-toned song of chimes that carry you back ages and aeons and out of yourself, each Studio Matinee performance begins.

The Studio Matinee plays were a departure of winter term. Each Thursday afternoon at 4:15 they began. No admittance was charged. They were produced under the direction of a student in the class of play production, thus giving each of the students a chance to gain actual experience.

The plays and their directors were: "The Very Naked Boy," Celene Lauterstein and Helen Mielke; "The Carved Woman," Louise Harris; "On the Lot," Boone Hendricks; "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," Betty Cook and Gwen Panton; "The Very Naked Boy," Margaret Frey and Gwendolyn Foss; "The Siege," Dean Lieuallen and Jean Williams; "East of Eden," Clela McKennon; "The Siege," Dorothy Smith; "Men Folk," Irene Breum and Charlotte Brosius; "Fancy Free," Sanford Platt; "Rising of the Moon," Addison Brockman; "Nevertheless," Willard Jensen; "Aria da Capo," Renee Nelson.

The Studio Matinee players are: Celene Lauterstein, Helen Mielke, Bessie Davie, Ethan Newman, Arthur Markewitz, Louise Harris, Kermit Stevens, Henry Kaahea, Mary Jean Warner, Julianne Benton, Alice Morrow, Boone Hendricks, Mabelle Beakley, Barton Siegfried, Addison Brockman, Dena Lieuallen, Jean Williams, Katherine Starr, Helen Allen, Elinor Rennie, Clela McKennon, James Lyons, Jewel Ellis, Gene Love, Florence McNerney, Betty Cook, Gwen Panton, Louise Webber, Verne Eliott, Charles Jones, Margaret Frey, Gwendolyn Foss, Harvey Welch, Dorothy Foss, Eddie Crebs.

Loleta Jaeger was a sincere, whimsical princess; Nancy Thielsen beautiful and bad as Queen Brangomar; David Olsen, a funny old man with a long beard as Court Chamberlain; Bob Guild, blond and charming as Prince Florimond. George Anderson, as Berthold, the chief huntsman, was convincing; and Florence McNerney as Witch Hex a hunched-back little spit-fire.

"The Thieving, Lying Lot of Jack-a-napes" in "If I Were King"

If I Were King

"If all my dreams of loveliness had been pieced together into one perfect woman, she would have been like you," so says James Lyons as Francois Villon, "the strangest knave in Paris," to Grace Gardner as Katherine de Vaucelles, niece of the king.

This is from the commencement play, "If I Were King," by Justin Huntley McCarthy, which was presented June 7, 1929, by the Guild Hall Players, under the direction of Mrs. Seybolt.

Francois Villon, scholar, poet, drunkard, charming lover, thief, rogue, and beggar, becomes prime minister of France for a day, knowing that he must die at the end of it, and all for the love he bears Katherine. But he saves France, and by his courage, saves himself and wins his Princess de Vaucelles.

Mr. Lyons, as Villon, drew, compelled, terrorized, and made love to the rest of the cast. He had a character part, a gallant's part, a hard part. He played it, and you saw, not Jim Lyons, junior in business administration, but Villon, arch-scoundrel of France. Miss Gardner, as always, was supremely charming. She was a fit princess.

K. Starr, as Huguette, the other feminine lead, was a sweet wench, and she played her role with a gamin fierceness.

The play, which takes place in the time of Louis XI, was colorful, spectacular, thrilling. All of the characters were romantic, swashbuckling, intriguing.

The main characters included: Louis XI, Gordon Stearns; Tristan L' Hermite, Hugh Logan; Oliver, Addison Brockman; Thibaut D'Aussigny, Marshall Hopkins; Noel le Jolys, Edward Merges; Rene De Motigny, Milton George; Guy Tabarie, Jack Dennis; Colin de Cayeux, Bob Guild; Jehan le Loup, George Anderson; Casin Cholet, Billy Siegfried; Robin Turgis, Fletcher Udall; Toris Eschelles, Wayne Mulquin; Captain of the Watch, Gene Love; Mother Villon, Diana Deininger; Johanneton le Belle Heulmier, Maybelle Beakley; Blanche, Joy Ingalls; Guillemette, Sylvana Edmonds; Isabeau, Mary Lou Dutton; Denise, Luelia Andre; the Queen, Helen Allen; Court Page, Elinor Rennie.

The Workshop

Guild Theater has what might be termed a two-by-four stage, so small it is, and when it isn't decorated it is bare, uninteresting, and forlorn, but the classes in stage craft and workshop have taken it over.

Guild Theater is more fascinating, more illusioning, more colorful than most stages twice its size.

Take the play "Escape," for example. The first episode: Hyde Park at night; a great light permeated the atmosphere. One felt the terrifying spell of London on a night when tragedy stalks abroad. Episode 2: on the prison farm at Dartmoor, grey, black, and an unescapable doom. A massive fence, over which there could be no escape. One could almost feel the damp, clammy hands of fog.

Episode 3: a bed room at an inn: a bed built into the wall, a vision of blue-green. Episode 9: in the vestry of a village church. Here were peace and sanctuary.

Under the direction of Fred Harris, instructor of stage design, each scene was intensely individual, although the same set of props was used for each one.

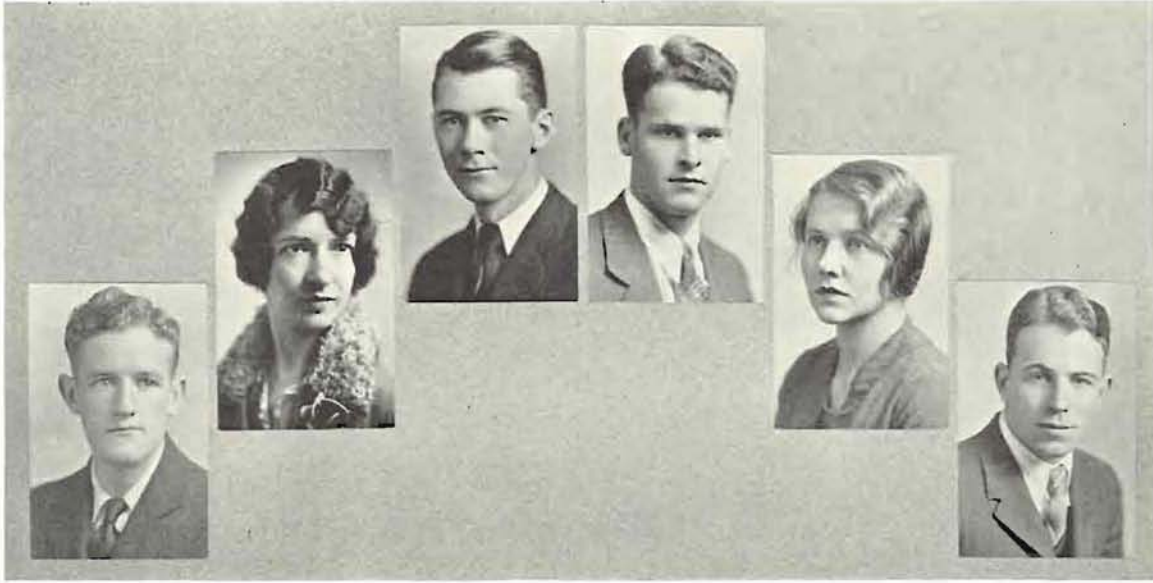

For the first time the courses in workshop and stage design have become a definite part of the department of drama. "We are trying," Mrs. Seybolt said, "to make the workshop a laboratory which will illustrate for students all different types of design; especially those types which are most current in the best theaters today.

"Theaters for years have been moving away from literal realism. In so far as Guild hall allows we shall try to illustrate all modern technique."

National Collegiate Players

In order to further dramatic interest on the campus, the Oregon chapter of National Collegiate Players each year presents a play with all-campus talent. This year the play was "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," for which 150 persons tried out.

The officers of the group include: president, Gordon Stearns; vice-president, and secretary, Diana Deininger; treasurer, Marshall Hopkins; adviser, Mrs. Seybolt. Honorary members: Mrs. Seybolt, Mrs. Alice Ernst, Mrs. Gerda Brown, Fred Harris, Cecil Matson, Dr. C. V. Boyer, Mrs. Florence Shumaker. Active members: Gordon Stearns, Diana Deininger, Marshall Hopkins, Loleta Jaeger, Addison Brockman, and Lawrence C. Shaw.

Cecil Matson, director, and as hero, Lord Arthur Dilling, gave a consistent piece of fine workmanship. Nancy Thielsen, as Mrs. Cheney, has shown herself one of the finest actresses on the campus.

Carl Klippel, who played Charles, the butler, was more than successful in interpreting a cosmopolitan character. Jewel Ellis, little girl with Titian hair and an orange dress, was a spot of brilliant color in the play.

Florence McNerney, as Maria, and Marshall Hopkins, as Lord Elton, both did excellent character work.

As Willie Wynton, James Lyons was at his best. Loleta Jaeger, as Lady Mary Singley, handled an ingenue part with ease.

Others who carried minor parts well: Eleanor Wood as Mrs. Ebley; Billie Gardiner as Mrs. Wynton; Jack Waldron as William; Byron Adams as Jim; Burdette Niclaus as George; and Jack Stipe as Roberts.

The Drama Tournament

The fourth annual high school drama tournament was held April 24 and 25 in Guild hall, with ten high schools competing for the silver loving cup which is given as the prize for the best one-act play.

The high schools and the plays they presented were: Corvallis, "Lonesome - Like;" Junction City, "The Dustman;" Milwaukie, "Spring Sluicing," which was written by Mrs. Alice Ernst, member of the University faculty; The Dalles, "Oh, Doctor;" Medford, "The Stepmother;" Eugene, "Judge Lynch;" Salem, "The Last of the Loweries;" Lincoln high school, Portland, "Aye, Aye, Sir;" St. Helens, "Finders - Keepers;" Bonanza, "Afterwards."

This line-up of plays evinced quite a different aspect from those of previous years, as they were much less serious.

Last year the loving cup was won by the Milwaukie union high school with "The Valiant," by Holworthy Hall and Robert Middlemass. It was directed by Elizabeth Yoder. The cast of characters included: Warden Hold, Charles Elwell; Father Daly, Mario Bisio; Jan, a jailor, Archie Bullis; James Dyke, Howard Steib; Wilson an attendant, Edwin Fenwick; Josephine Paris, Jean Jameson.

Other schools entered in the contest were: Corvallis, "The Drums of Oude;" Henley, "Joint Owners in Spain;" Roseburg, "The Machine Age;" St. Helens, "The Eldest;" Marshfield, "Dust of the Road;" Newberg, "The Boor;" Baker, "Dregs;" Mill City, "Los Zapatos;" Eugene, "'Op-o'-Me-Thumb."

The first high school drama tournament, May 4-6, 1927, was won by Roseburg high school with "Trifles." The second tournament, May 3-4, 1928, by Eugene high school with "Two Crooks and a Lady."

The directorate for the drama tournament is composed of: George S. Turnbull, professor of journalism; James H. Gilbert, dean of the College; Mrs. Seybolt; Mr. Matson; Mozelle Hair, of the Extension Division; Dr. C. V. Boyer, head of the department of English; F. O. Harris, assistant professor of design; Loleta Jaeger, senior in English and member of National Collegiate Players; Kermit Stevens, sophomore in sociology.

Literary Achievements of 1929-1930

Every year members of the faculty and student body of the University receive commendation in the literary world for their accomplishments. The year of 1929-30 shows outstanding progress in the field of literature on the campus.

The greatest bit of recognition of the talent on the campus was the publication of the March issue of "Troubadour," western magazine of poetry, which was entirely devoted to poetry and art work of Oregon students. Margaret Ormandy was guest editor of the publication. She was assisted by Rebecca Morgan and Ralph Millsap.

Several members of Pot and Quill, women's honorary literary society, have had material accepted during the year. Serena Madsen Scheffer, its president, has placed: "Any Girl," with Good Housekeeping; "Rain on the Roof," and "Song For Sleep," in the American Poetry magazine; and a "Girl Nun Speaks," in Troubadour. Mrs. Eric Allen has had several stories, plays, and poems accepted. These include: "The Feminist Bug," in the Household magazine; "Far Enough Off," with the Midland; "Warp and Woof," and "Lambs Kneel to Suck," in the Frontier; she also had three poems in the Anthology of Northwest verse. Mrs. George Turnbull placed two stories: "A Bright Idea," and "Whose Living Child," with Modern Homemaking; "The Greater Gift," with the Macfadden publications, and two juvenile stories with the David Cook company: "It Does Take Courage," and "Given In Trust." Ruth Newton placed a short story, "The Wedding Present," with Midland.

Members of Tabard Inn chapter of Sigma Upsilon, men's writing fraternity, have had several short stories and poems published during the year. W. F. G. Thacher placed a short story, "Pinky and the Torpedo," with Blue Book; Pat Morrissette and Walter Evans Kidd each had a number of short stories and poems printed. "Tabard Tales," containing some of the best work of the members, was issued by the fraternity in 1929.

"Spring Sluicing," a play by Mrs. Alice Henson Ernst, which had appeared in the Theatre Arts Magazine was selected as a typical play for the anthology "Plays of American Life and Fantasy." "The Valley of Lost Men" appeared in the March issue of the same magazine. Her poems include: "Out of the West," in the anthology of Northwest poetry, and "Drums of the Sea" in Troubadour.

John Scheffer has placed "Abandoned Farmhouse" and "An Old Man Feels Late Winter," in Frontier; and "Ascetic Scrutiny" and "This Motley April," in Muse and Mirror.

Magazines on the continent have published a number of philosophical poems by Dr. Gustav Muller.

To An Unknown God

Your face is chipped; your sides are marred;

You are old, Buddha.

Your brow is stern, your features hard;

You are cold, Buddha.

*How can you hold the confidence,
A people's prayers, white-hot, intense,
Or do you give them recompense?*

You are bold, Buddha.

I touch your head, your chiseled face;

Who made you, Buddha?

Your robes are carefully in place,

Your hands too, Buddha.

*I stand and gaze into your eyes,
And mingled with unuttered sighs*

I see you breathe, to my surprise;

I bow, too, Buddha.

Your chest moves up and down with mine;

Are you alive, Buddha?

How can mere stone become divine,

And seem to thrive, Buddha?

*If you can answer human need,
And through distress a nation lead,*

It is not mine to burn your creed,

And them deprive, Buddha.

FOR AN OLD LADY AT A WINDOW

*Lady, when life passes by,
Multicolored down your street,
Do you, just a little, sigh
And wish that you were young and fleet
To run down golden avenues
Of intermingled light and shade,
To dance in never-listless shoes
With that splendid cavalcade?
Do your pulses leap a bit,
Measured though their beat has grown,
At the gallant grace of it,
At its bugles boldly blown?
Patience, lady, you will find
Gallantry is of the mind,
And he who sees the pattern whole
Has banners flying in his soul.*

MARGARET ORMANDY

Arietta al Fresco

*The sky's a cup
Turned wrong-side up
    Upon the round world's rim
Blue hills afar
Soft trimmings are About its silvered brim.*

*At dawn 'tis filled
With sun-wine spilled
    In from an amber hold.
The wine foams bright
Until, at night,
    It trickles out---clear gold.*

*The gold drips through;
The bowl of blue
    With star-gems coldly gleams
'Tis drained of wine;
There only shine
    Pale dregs of thin moonbeams.*

MARY KESSI

Pack Train (1853)

*Pack mules a-crawlin' up the Siskyou's ribs--- Greasers a-snortin' and the moon tellin' fibs---
Cow Horn peak's a white mountain ghost
Castin' her shadder t' the blue wiped coast.
Up the Californy trail t' the top of the earth,
Fetchin' in grub fer the devil's gold berth--
Here's black strap tobaccy for tough, cussin' jaws.
(For the last dozen strips the boys pull straws)
An' whiskey splashin' on the lean breathin' sides,
Next t' ten pound boots, cut from old horse hides.
Salt evens color, and sugar's worth a claim
And a pick and a shovel is preferred t' any dame.*

*Night . . . . night . . . . and the mules stump on--- Tall ears a-feelin' fer a whisper o' dawn.
Lop sided critters, their tails dripping red,
But down at Sailor's Diggings there's bellies to be fed,
An' on up the gulch, there's streets bleedin' gold--
The world's on their withers, waitin' t' be sold!*

CONSTANCE BORDWELL

Silhouette

*Quite many times I've heard it marked of me
When in a lamplit room I paused a space,
"Her silhouette there! What fine symmetry!
Look at the shadow profile of her face!"
I always turn to see my one fine grace,
The meager gift of gods grown miserly,
Obliterated by my turning, be Grotesque, a formlessness, to pause then race!*

*Across the brightness. As I watched it flee
A whisper dimly shadowed mocked at me;
"Even your one vanity is shadow."
To which my spirit learned to answer: No.
Your mocking haunt of gods who cannot see Behold! I cast a shadow pleasingly.*

REBECCA MORGAN

Transition

*At this, my hour of death, I will not be Involved with sanctimonious men, who'd see
That at my time of passing they would give Due thanks to God for days I've had to live.*

*I will not have a debt of gratitude
Hung on my soul for hours on earth I've spent,
Ticked off a time clock so methodically,
Paying installment prayers on my life's rent.*

*All prayers for me are needless at my hour;
For God will understand. He has the power
To know that for each simple joy that's been,
My heart has deeper thankfulness within.*

*The joy of gray fog, wind blowing through my hair,
Shifting sands,--the utter ecstasy
As, at a thought, my fingers can cajole
The smouldering anger of a Liszt rhapsodie--*

*Gold candles on the altar dusky brown,
The mellowness that comes with charity--
Sunshine on green water slanting down,
A cocky robin in an apple tree . . . .
(And still they mutter on so earnestly As slower ticks the clock, inevitably.)*

*The ravings of this mad soul soon shall cease
So, gentlemen, go--and let me die in peace.*

NANCY TAYLOR

Helen's Sonnet

*The simpleness of her unconscious grace,
Like that of children, so bewitches me
That distance takes away tranquillity
And leaves me dazed and breathless. Every trace
Of peace is gone when she removes her face
Too far for lips to touch--I wish to see
It close, though lost indeed am I when she Complies and seizes me in her embrace.*

*A thousand times more troubles than I find Myself than when she kept herself apart,
But slowly, with her arms about me twined,
With head close to her swiftly beating heart,
I sink into the softness of her breast,
And find at last a calm and perfect rest.*

RALPH MILLSAP

Enchanted Place

*Soft,---here's a ring
Of misty-white balloons on dandelion stems;
Hush,---Crickets will sing
The minute the Moon puts on her gems
And send their long, gold rays to sparkle on this place.*

*Whist,---be, oh, so still!
The fairies might be frightened at the least footfall.
They'll come---you'll see they will,
If we speak no word at all,
Nor bend the smallest grass in this enchanted place.*

ART

School of Architecture and Allied Arts

Following the example set by the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh, in combining the teaching of several arts under one division, the School of Architecture and Allied Arts was organized in 1914. "Up to this time," as it was expressed by Dean Lawrence, head of the school, "such art as was taught on college campuses was non-professional in character, with the exception of architecture, which too often had been affiliated with, and dominated by engineering schools. The art schools of the country to which the students flocked to study painting, sculpture and design were highly specialized at the expense of cultural background.

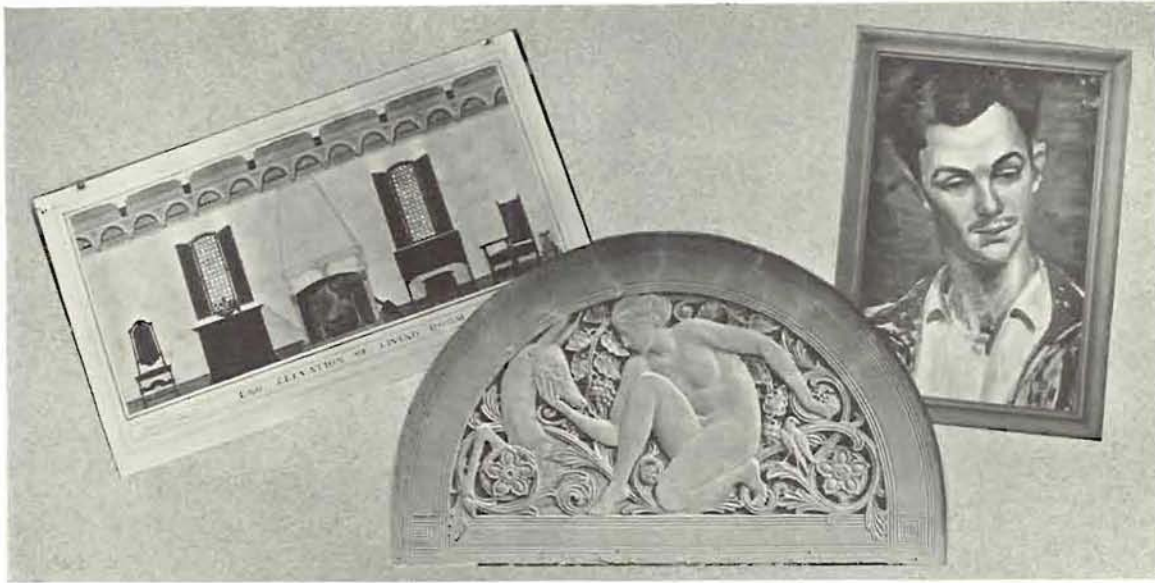

"The school at Oregon was convinced that art, especially architecture, calls for its practitioners to intimately understand their own times, as well as those of the past which produced the great periods of art history. The curriculum has been prepared to take advantage of university background, and a liberal education accompanies the professional training. Early contacts are established in art endeavors, so that creative experiences are not postponed too late, and so that early convictions as to objectives are established. Yale, Princeton, Harvard, Cornell, Michigan and Washington have since organized similar new divisions of schools."

The services to the University in the undertaking of collaboration problems are noteworthy. Going on the principle that the architect should know the processes and standards of painters, sculptors, designers and craftsmen, and they, in turn should appreciate the problem of the architect, whose art they so often serve, the students are brought together in the studios and in the solving of collaboration problems. The entrance of the art building was such a problem, the architects detailed its motives, eleven painters designed the stained glass panels, five sculptors executed the bas-relief symbolic of the arts, and tile insets were made by the class in applied design.

This year the sculpture department is cooperating with the architects of the Fine Arts Museum by making the models for bas-reliefs and capitals which will be carved under their direction. Last year murals were made by the painting and design staff for the new men's dormitory.

The graduate students take for their theses work such problems as the decoration for the art library, the design and embellishment of one of the art courses, and the murals for the entrance lobby. Tile panels and sculpture for the art building have been executed by the various classes from time to time. Stage designers work with the dramatic department.

The well known art collections that the department is responsible for bringing to the University every year are stimulating to the art majors and of great interest to the students, faculty, and townspeople. Some of the outstanding exhibits of last year were the collection of etchings on architectural subjects by Dr. Louis Conrad Rosenberg, the group of water colors sent out under the auspices of the American Federation of Artists, a display of oil paintings by Andrew J. Vincent, and the showing of Travel Sketches by Maude Kerns, assistant professor of normal arts here.

Looking into the future to predict the merging of the Occidental with the Oriental civilization a great new art is bound to spring up. A rare Oriental art collection, known as the Murray Warner, will make an excellent teaching background. The two hundred thousand-dollar unit of the Fine Arts Museum now under construction will house the Murray Warner collection and the Millican collection of American Indian art. The complete plan provides space for other collections of both Occidental and Oriental art.

The school operates on a non-competitive basis. Prizes, medals, and mentions have been abandoned. The purpose is to give individual, not mass instruction. Programs for design problems are carefully drawn, considering the individual student's need and interest. He is in competition only with himself. The problem is the one hundred per cent development of his abilities.

Removing the confusing elements of judgments, juries and pressure, each student creates to the best of his talents. Each assignment is a very personal experience. Library research and copying is of little interest to the designer, as such. Historical research is stimulated to develop taste, but archeology is separated clearly from art.

Weaving Class at Work

Instructors do not execute students' work. By the method of Socrates, the staff seek to lead the student to his best efforts in analysis, criticism, and taste. He is allowed freedom, and experimentation results. Errors are pointed out by the staff in the class criticism of finished work. Perfection, if secured by direct aid from the staff, and not by the student's own feeling and thought, is of questionable value as an educational by-product.

On visitors' day visiting artists discuss the exhibited work with the students but do not pass judgment or select winners.

Allied Arts League

The purposes of the Allied Arts League are to organize all the majors in the School of Architecture and Allied Arts, to spread democracy among the students and to further encourage the non-competitive spirit that is an outstanding feature of this school in the University.

The activities of this year were the open house, held the first of the term, in honor of the new students and the new faculty members, and the banquet given in honor of C. Herrick Hammond, president of the American Institute of Architects, J. Monroe Hewitt, vice-president; and Fred Wilson, district director. The annual "Art Bust" followed the banquet as well as open house at the home of Mr. W. R. B. Willcox.

The School of Music

The outstanding undertaking of the School of Music this year was the informal Tuesday night music hour series. Professor George Hopkins was chairman of the recital committee and to his enthusiasm is due much of the success of the series, which was introduced primarily to create a new era of student interest in music. Both students and faculty members appeared in the programs.

Four faculty recitals were also rare treats of the year. Rex Underwood, violinist, Dr. John Mez, cellist, and Aurora Potter Underwood, pianist, presented "An Evening of Chamber Music," the opening numbers of which were two Spanish dances, followed by trios by Mozart and Saint-Saens. This was on October 24. An evening of French music was the second and given October 29. Rex Underwood and Aurora Potter Underwood featured in this with an entirely classical program by French composers. A joint recital by Dr. John Landsbury, pianist, and Arthur Boardman was given March 6. Due to the fact that Dean Landsbury had not been heard in concert for nearly five years, there was greater interest in the recital even than usual. The fourth was an organ recital by John Stark Evans during spring term. Mr. Evans also gave a Sunday afternoon recital at the First Presbyterian church in Portland. The organ on which he played is the largest in the state and of his own designing.

Not included in any of the various series of programs but of no less importance was the presentation of the second act of Richard Wagner's opera, "Faust," by Madame Rose McGrew's opera class, January 23.

Solo or joint recitals have been given frequently by senior music students and have furnished delightful programs.

With the exception of the Polyphonic choir, new organization under the direction of Arthur Boardman, head of the department of voice, all other organizations are either responsible to themselves or to the associated student organization.

University Symphonic Choir

The University Symphonic Choir, an organization comprised of what has been, in former years, the men's and women's glee clubs, made four appearances during the year. The first, the presentation of the St. Cecilia Mass, occurred December 8, in the last vesper service of fall term. January 20, it appeared with the Portland symphony Orchestra; April 13, in Seven Last Words, and participated with the Eugene Oratorio, in "The Creation," May 6. Professor John Stark Evans directed.

A new year of activity for the University of Oregon band started with the appearance of John H. Stehn as director. William B. Sievers and W. J. Peterkin acted as assistant directors, while A. H. Wright again officiated as drum-major. Joe Freck, Jr., was manager of the band.

Two trips to Portland were made during fall term for football games, with broadcast over KGW and KEX both times. A concert was given at the Dad's Day dinner and also a Sunday afternoon concert, January 12. Still other concerts were prepared for winter and spring terms.

Mu Phi Epsilon

Mu Phi Epsilon, women's national honorary music fraternity, presents annually eight programs on the campus and in the community. Its annual formal concert was given February 6. The annual breakfast for initiates was an event of February 9. A Founders' Day dinner, November 13, and a patroness tea, spring term, were among its activities.

The senior or general managership of musical activities for the year of 1929-30 was in the hands of Clarence Veal. Junior or special managers were Jasper Reynolds, orchestra; Joseph Freck, band; Stewart Ralston, men's glee club; Donald Carver, women's glee club. These positions represent responsibility and those who are selected for them must have shown outstanding ability and willingness in their underclass years, by doing such things as ushering and assisting the managers in various ways. The office of senior manager is highly competitive as it is filled from the ranks of junior managers, the present manager having held the position of orchestra manager last year. Their duties are to plan and arrange for tours of the organizations, and they are rewarded at the end of the year with the emblem of the group they have served. The junior managers are chosen by the general manager and approved by the music committee, a sub-committee of the executive council.

Concert Series

World famed artists are brought to the campus under the auspices of the associated students through the music committee of the executive council.

The series for 1929-30 comprised four concerts, that of Paul Kochanski, violinist, December 5; Arthur Boardman, tenor, January 7; Portland Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Willem van Hoogstraten, January 20; Smallman a Capella choir, February 25.

The Kochanski concert was the master violinist's second appearance in Eugene. His repertoire included one of his own compositions entitled "Flight," which he has dedicated to Charles A. Lindbergh.

Arthur Boardman, who came directly from preeminence in Italy to lead in the performance of Verdi's "Requiem" last spring, and who immediately became head of the voice department of the school of music, presented the second concert of the series.

Dr. Willem van Hoogstraten

The highlight of the season was the appearance of the Portland Symphony Orchestra directed by Dr. Willem van Hoogstraten. The appearance was also the second in Eugene for the organization, since when there was wide demand for a re-engagement. Dr. Hoogstraten holds the degree of doctor of music, having had it conferred upon him by the University of Oregon in recognition of his outstanding work. In conjunction with the concert the University choir appeared as a special added feature.

Completing the series, the Smallman a Capella choir presented a program typifying the creative ability of its director, John Smallman. It had just finished a transcontinental tour at the time of the presentation.

The Polyphonic Choir

The Polyphonic choir made its debut in the last vesper service of fall term. In so doing it took its place among the major music organizations and is thought to be the only amateur choir of its kind on the coast. Its repertoire is selected from the works of Palestrina, Di Lusso, Arcadelt, Eccard, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and those of the Russian school as well as modern and romantic composers. Only a few other such organizations exist of this type. Much credit is due Arthur Boardman, new head of the voice department, who has undertaken and made such a success of the organization. Harold Ayres served as accompanist.

Lester McDonald

The 1930 Oregana

The ultimate goal to be achieved by the staff of the Oregana is a comprehensive record of student body activities, and an accurate picture of campus life. A publication that will ring true to the spirit of the University and revive many pleasant reminiscences of college days to the student after he leaves the campus is what this book is intent on accomplishing.

A theme? All good annuals as a rule have a theme and not because it is an "old Spanish" custom either. To merely make a chronological survey of campus life would accomplish the primary purpose of an annual, yet it would fall far short of a pleasing presentation of the subject. Beauty of design and good writing, while secondary to accuracy of interpreting student life, is vitally necessary for an annual to be a success.

An Eastern flavor is put into the Oregana with the adoption of a Hindu theme. The practice of correlating the theme with the institution which it represents is fast becoming extinct for the reason that originality, the quality which makes one book different from the next one, cannot be based from year to year upon the same theme. The editors of this book feel that the contents make its relationship with the University so self evident that a theme is not necessary to convey this impression. Divorcing themselves from this practice the staff have planned an unique presentation of campus life with the hope that it will be a new and interesting slant on an old subject.

Lester McDonald, junior in journalism, is the editor of the 1930 Oregana. The trio who, together with the editor comprise the editorial board of the Oregana are Henrietta Steinke, associate editor; Wilfred Brown, assistant editor; and Martha Stevens, art editor.

Oregana Business Staff

When it comes to financial responsibility the business department of the Oregana carries more of it than any other campus publication. The problem that surrounds the job of collecting and distributing over $12,000 annually is a large and exacting one. It involves not only raising this money from students and organizations on the campus but wisely spending it on quite a large and complicated publication venture. As business manager of the Oregana, John Nelson, last year's manager, assumed this task with the aid of an able staff comprised of Dean Creath and Bob Allen, as assistant managers; Virginia Sterling, office manager; Renee Nelson, organization manager; Bradshaw Harrison, advertising manager; and Roger Bailey and Gordon Goodpasture, assistant advertising managers.

A new idea of securing advertising revenue was evolved by John Nelson, which proves more effective than former systems. Due to high cost of producing a year book advertising rates need to be much higher than they are worth to business men. This, which has been a strong obstacle for advertising solicitors, has been overcome by eliminating all advertising space from the Oregana and substituting for it special subscriptions from the various down-town merchants. The staff offers to their former advertisers a copy of the Oregana with their name embossed in gold on the cover and the listing of their business within the book for the price of ten dollars.

Roger Bailey has been outstanding in promoting this new advertising scheme.

Circulation for this year has surpassed by a wide margin that of previous years. The students behind the circulation drive, which was carried on at the first of the fall term, are Betty Beam and Bob Miller.

The Oregon Emerald

The Oregon Emerald, published daily with the exception of Sunday and Monday by the Associated Students of the University of Oregon, represents more than a mere conveyor of campus news. It is an institution continually striving for the betterment of campus conditions and the rights of students. Guided by Editor Arthur Schoeni, it wields an influence over the campus, and its power is judiciously governed by its editorial board and various publication committees.

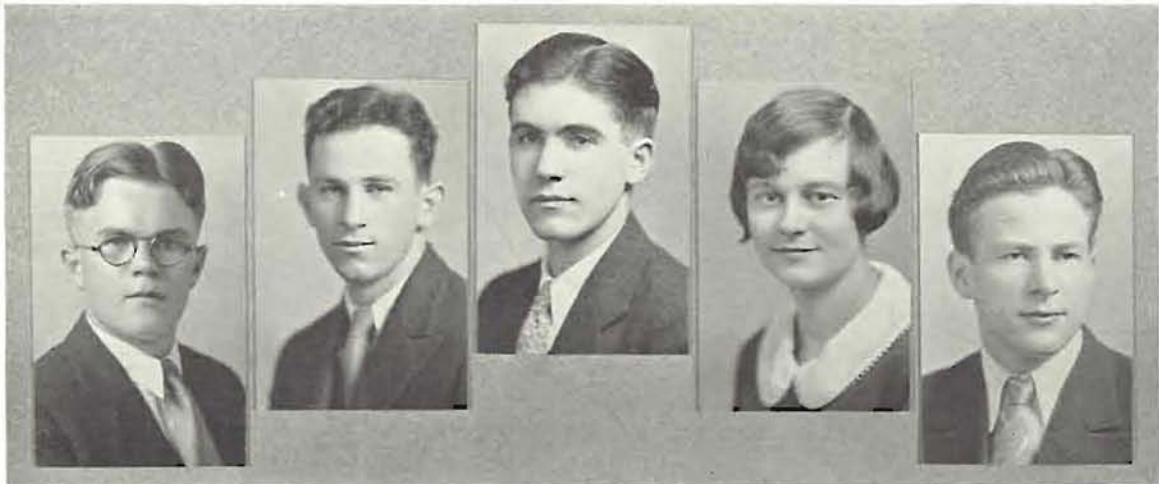

Aside from publishing news, the Oregon Emerald has promoted this year various successful campus projects. The KORE radio broadcast contest for living organizations on the campus as well as a cartoon contest was sponsored under the auspices of the Emerald. It was also co-sponsor of International week held on the campus Winter term.

The most noticeable improvement made this year was the enlarging of the newspaper to a standard eight column page, and the adoption of the latest improved body type which facilitates easier reading. The increase in the size of the paper necessitated running two linotypes where only one ran continually last year.

Under the editor-in-chief, Arthur Schoeni comes Vinton Hall, managing editor. Aiding Art Schoeni in directing the editorial policies of the Emerald are four editorial writers: Ron Hubbs, Ruth Newman, Rex Tussing, and Wilfred Brown.

Occasionally special editions are published. When Dr. Spears arrived on the campus a six-page edition was gotten out. In the Winter term a "Battle of the Sexes" was waged in the editorial department when the women were permitted to exclusively publish an edition that was followed shortly after by another one solely of masculine origin. The "Green Goose" scandal edition humorously showed how it should not be done in polite newspaper circles.

Upper News Staff

At the end of the preceding spring term the managing editor appoints seven experienced Emerald workers to edit important departments of the newspaper. The selected seven comprise an upper news staff vital to the backbone of the entire editorial organization. The sports, society, and literary editors are on the upper staff as well as the chief night and make-up man. News from other universities come into the Emerald regularly through the Pacific Intercollegiate Press association. This is handled by the P. I. P. editor editor who is also on the upper news staff.

Reportorial Staff

The aim of the editorial department of the Daily Emerald is to completely cover the campus and other sources from which potential Emerald news can be derived. A general reportorial staff of twenty-one students do the "leg work" on the campus, writing a large part of the thousands of words required to fill the Emerald every day. Apart from the general news staff there are the sports writers who work under Harry Van Dine in covering athletics. It is on these staffs that the future Emerald editors serve their apprenticeship.

Business Department of Emerald

The business department of the Daily Emerald points to statistical surveys, increased advertising linage, and a new copy department, as significant accomplishments for this year of which they are directly responsible.

The attitude of the business department toward successful newspaper management is well exemplified in their attempt to scientifically analyze the interests of Emerald readers by means of a well planned campus survey. Edward Publos, Emerald statistician, was in charge of this survey and gained distribution of questionnaires by the help of Alpha Delta Sigma, advertising honorary.

Tony Peterson, advertising manager, and Addison Brockman, foreign advertising manager, are proud of the fact that for the Fall and Winter terms they have been able to beat each month the advertising linage of the same month of the previous year.

Foreign advertising as conducted by Addison Brockman seems to be upon impressing national advertisers the value of the college newspaper as an advertising medium. This is evident in the increase in space and number of foreign advertisers.

With the primary purpose of giving students who specialize in advertising at the University a chance to gain practical experience, the business department this year established a copy department headed by Jean Patrick, manager, and Betty Carpenter as her assistant. Opportunity is given the energetic advertising students to take over local display accounts handling all copy work and representing town merchants as their advertising agent. Improvement in copy and increase in linage can largely be contributed to this department. "Sez Sue," the novel shopping column being run every Friday in the Emerald under the direction of Betty Hagen and Nan Crary is an example of progressive advertising.

Emerald "O"

As an honorary society the Emerald "O" serves as an incentive to campus journalists by inviting to membership those who have done the most outstanding work on the Daily Emerald. At a banquet held at the end of each spring term an award in the form of an Emerald "O" pin is made to the most efficient staff members of the current year. Present members of the Emerald "O" are: Wilfred Brown, Joe Pigney, Harry Tonkon, Osborne Holland, Clarence Craw, Vinton Hall, Josephine Stofiel, Mary Klemm, Cleta McKennon, George Weber, Betty Hagen, Addison Brockman, Harold Kester, Ina Tremblay, William Hammond, Charles Reed, Arthur L. Schoeni, Robert T. Hall, Lavina Hicks, Lawrence Mitchelmore, and Jack Hempstead.

Old Oregon

Radiating Oregon spirit and transmitting to graduate students news of campus activities and the University are the twofold purpose of "Old Oregon," a monthly magazine published by the Alumni Association of the University of Oregon. For the last six years Miss Jeannette Calkins has edited "Old Oregon," putting her enthusiasm into its pages, and ever striving to improve and enlarge this alumni organ.

The present staff which works with Miss Calkins in turning out this publication are: Margaret Boyer, assistant editor and circulation manager; Delbert Addison, sports editor; John Wade Nelson, advertising manager; and Jack Spencer, assistant advertising manager.

Aside from increase in national advertising lineage and forward steps made in the editorial department, arrangements were completed this year so that every senior who graduates will have included in his diploma fee a one year subscription to "Old Oregon" as well as membership in the Alumni Association.

Having started in March, 1919, as a small, irregularly published magazine it has grown under the guidance of three different editors to its present magnitude where it is recognized as one of the best monthly alumni publications, and can boast of a four-color cover each month.

An editorial aim of "Old Oregon" is to spread a spirit of friendliness and intimacy among former students of the University; a spirit which is characteristic of the title of the magazine. Miss Calkins believes that the mission of her publication is to convey news of alumni members and their friends, and she has her staff completely cover every available source for news of former Oregon students. There are more than enough national magazines covering specifically every conceivable topic, but there is one field that the alumni magazine can hope to satisfy, and that is telling alumni readers about their friends and former college associates, in spite of the fact that they may be scattered all over the globe. Thus "Old Oregon" strives to give its readers news of alumni and accurate knowledge of the University of today and tomorrow.

University Press Publication Committee

The responsibility of publishing three, regularly-issued magazines as well as a series of pamphlets written by professors and students making scientific researches in various scholastic fields at the University, rests with the University Press Publications Committee, headed by Dean Eric W. Allen, of the school of journalism. This committee controls a budget out of which is spent annually a large sum of money in the publication field.

The magazines under their supervision are: "The Oregon Exchanges," a bi-monthly edited by Prof. George S. Turnbull, for newspaper editors throughout the state; "The Oregon Law Review," another bi-monthly edited by Charles G. Howard of the law school for the State Bar Association, and "The Commonwealth," published every other month of the school year by the school of applied social science. All three of these magazines have state-wide distribution and are examples of the service rendered the state by the University of Oregon.

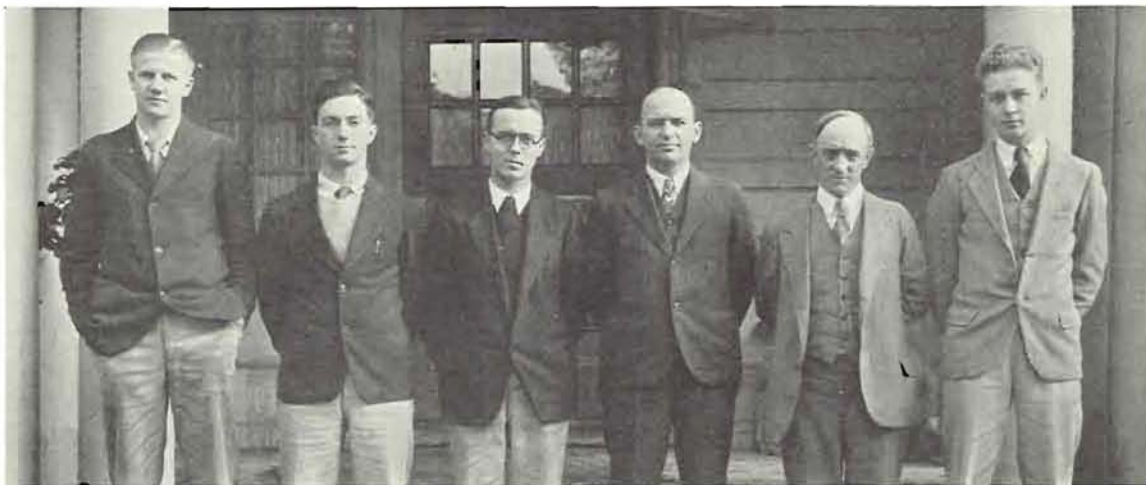

The University Press Publications Committee consists of Dean Allen, chairman;

Carl L. Huffaker, professor of education; David E. Faville, dean of the school of business administration; Charles E. Carpenter, dean of the law school; Earl L. Packard, professor of geology; Philip A. Parsons, dean of the school of applied social sciences; M. H. Douglass, University librarian; and Robert C. Hall, superintendent of the University Press.

The University offers a series of publications gotten up by professors and students making advance studies in specialized fields in exchange for the publications of other learned societies, institutions and universities throughout the country. Prior to June, 1926 the publications committee issued twenty pamphlets, each on a different and unrelated subject and yet under the same listing. Since 1926 the committee felt it wise to issue them under a more detailed classification. To accomplish this they publish a business administration series, an education series, geology series, journalism series, language and literature series, mathematics series, physical education series, plant biology series, and psychology series.

Publications Committee of Executive Council

The publications committee of the Associated Students of the University was reorganized in the Spring of 1929, in accordance with an amendment passed by the students. This group consisting of seven members, not only serves in an advisory capacity to the executive council of the student body, but it also has a strong hand in the naming of editors and managers of the Emerald and Oregona.

After members of the staffs of the two publications nominate candidates to fill chief positions, it is the duty of the publications committee to recommend one of the number to the executive council which has the power to appoint him to the editorial vacancy. Should the executive council refuse to ratify a recommendation, it is necessary for the publications committee to select another person for the appointment. Candidates for business manager of the two publications appear before the committee without being formally nominated by the business staff of the respective student publication.

While the duty of recommending editors is the most responsible requirement of the publications committee it has many other problems to solve in the realm of publishing undertakings. Policies of the Emerald and Oregona are to a certain extent under control of the publications committee. The letting of contracts for student body work to engravers, printers and photographers is placed in the hands of this committee.

Public Relations Bureau

The success and development of an institution such as the University of Oregon depends a great deal upon favorable public opinion, and for this reason a Public Relations Bureau is being maintained under the direction of George Godfrey, assistant professor of journalism. Its chief function is to present to newspapers throughout the state the correct interpretation of news concerning the University and its students.

A corp of Portland and Eugene newspaper correspondents work under the supervision of George Godfrey in the publicity "shack" situated behind the administration building. Samuel Wilderman, assisted by Ruth Newton represents the Portland Oregonian. Ralph Millsap writes for the Oregon Journal. William White is correspondent for the Portland Telegram, and Willis Duniway handles all copy for the Portland News. The Eugene Register employs Harry Tonkon while the Guard gets news from Laura Clithero. Ruth Newton is also secretary to the Bureau while Lois Nelson handles all news regarding the school of music.

Every night these correspondents gather to disseminate the day's news and send important stories to the press. They have at their command files containing photographs and information concerning students and faculty, reference works of various types, and every other conceivable convenience for finding and writing University news.

A new field of publicity was created by the Bureau this year when George Godfrey started shooting motion pictures of campus life and sending them to various theaters. A complete "mat" service (plate and photographic) is being offered newspapers throughout the state as well as plenty of up-to-the-minute news stories. These stories are supplied to the smaller papers by the publicity class--each student acting as correspondent to an Oregon newspaper.

Tonkon, Crane, Clithero, Newton, Duniway, Nelson, Millsap

A.S.U.O. News Bureau

Organized primarily to publicize the University of Oregon athletic teams the news bureau of the associated students functions in the same manner as the public relations bureau. It covers all news, athletic or otherwise, which concerns the student body. The department has been organized to its present point of efficiency by Sam Wilderman, who has been director since leaving the editorial staff of the Morning Oregonian in 1924. Assisting Sam Wilderman with the News Bureau is Joe Pigney, formerly sports editor of the Oregon Daily Emerald.

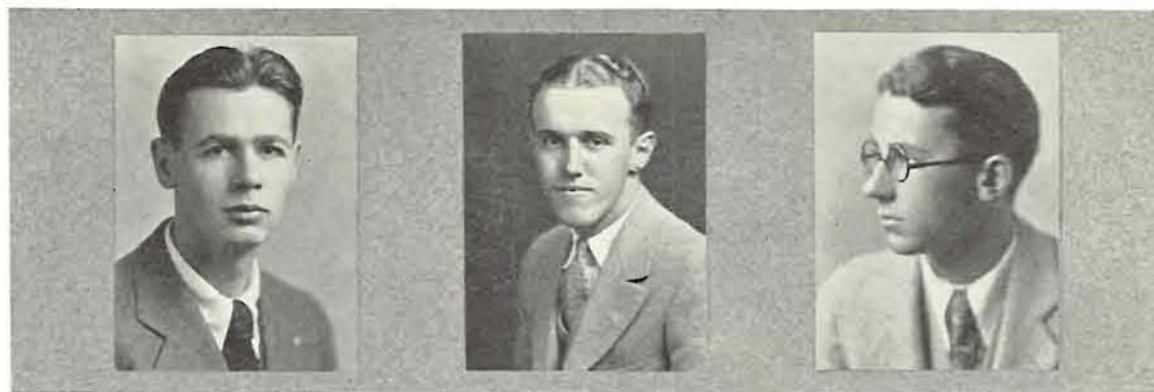

While this bureau serves all of the newspapers in the state, its principal mediums of publicity are Portland, Eugene, and Seattle papers. The Portland Oregonian, Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the Eugene Register employ Joe Pigney as their correspondent. Harry Van Dine, this year's sports editor of the Emerald, is sports correspondent for the Oregon Journal. William White handles sport news together with regular campus news for the Portland Telegram. Delbert Addison, sports editor of Old Oregon is correspondent for the Seattle Times. News stories for other papers not employing campus correspondents are sent to them in mimeograph form, usually accompanied by layouts and mats.

Sam Wilderman proves valuable in promoting for the University of Oregon her football games with other universities. Each season he acts as the University's advance agent before each contest, interviewing sports editors and thoroughly organizing a publicity campaign. His knack of supplying good news makes him a welcome visitor to all newspaper offices.

Besides turning out quantities of news stories the department cooperates with other branches of the A. S. U. O. and the University. One of its duties is to keep a statistical record of all athletic events for each year. Like the Public Relations bureau it offers a complete sports "mat" service (plate and photographic) for all newspapers, and has on tap in files and reference works, accurate information that facilitates the operation of their department.

Sigma Delta Chi

International Professional Journalistic Fraternity for Men

*Founded at De Pauw University April 9, 1909
Installed at University of Oregon April 17, 1913*

This organization, which now has some forty-five chapters spread throughout the United States, has as its purpose the furthering of the profession of journalism. Its membership is taken from among the outstanding juniors and seniors in the School of Journalism on the basis of interest and achievement in journalistic work. The Oregon chapter, at present, has a membership of one hundred and eighty-seven; this includes active, alumni, and associate members.

(W. F. G. Thacher Chapter)

Founded at University of Missouri, November 14, 1913
Installed at University of Oregon, June 7, 1924

This organization, which has grown out of the Advertising Club of the University of Oregon, chooses its membership from students who are taking advertising courses and working on the advertising side of campus publications.

It is interesting to note that the alumni chapter in Portland, composed of past University of Oregon members, is one of the most active in the country.

The 1930 Debate Season

A positive policy of encouraging original work, stimulating thinking, of guidance, and opportunity for every student with talent and the ability to work has animated Oregon's new debate coach, Ralph C. Hoerber, and his assistant, Walter E. Hempstead, Jr., in their work with debaters and orators this year.

Debate work this year was all original with the students, and the attempt has been to introduce flexibility and informality into the actual contests by means of the extempore method of speaking and the selection of live, interesting propositions. The fact that decisions were rendered in all debates increased interest in the work this year, too.

Mr. Hoerber was graduated from the University of Oregon in 1921 with honors in economics. He was active in forensics while at Oregon, representing the school in the Old Line contest and in several debates. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

A master's degree from Oregon in 1923 in economics and psychology was followed the next year by a scholarship at the Harvard law school. Finishing his law work at Stanford, Mr. Hoerber took his doctor of jurisprudence degree there in 1927 and since he was admitted to the bar has practiced law in Portland with Teal, Winfree, McCulloch and Shuler. The new coach has taught economics and public speaking at various times at the University of Oregon, especially during the summer sessions.

Mr. Hempstead, too, is an Oregon graduate, having received his degree in 1929. He majored in journalism while on the campus, serving as an associate editor of the Oregon Emerald, student daily, and being awarded the privilege of wearing a Sigma Delta Chi scholarship key. He is a member of Delta Sigma Rho. Mr. Hempstead was active in forensics, having represented the University in debate, oratory, and extempore speaking contests. He has been in charge of freshman debate work this year.

The general forensics manager for 1929-30 was Eugene Laird. Assisting him were Florence McNerney, in charge of women's debate, Robert Miller, men's debate manager, and Hobart Wilson, who arranged the oratorical contests.

Men's Varsity Debate

The men's varsity debate team, under Dr. Ralph C. Hoerber as coach, engaged in nine more debates this year than last.

The 1930 proposition for debate was: "Resolved, That the nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament except for such forces as are needed for police protection."

The members of the varsity debate squad were: Eugene E. Laird, Errol B. Sloan, Roger A. Pfaff, Arthur S. Potwin, John V. Long, Robert T. Miller, F. William Cutts, Merlin Blais, Walter H. Evans, Calvin M. Bryan, George Cherry, Charles L. Jones, A. Harvey Wright, Wallace J. Campbell, J. Hobart Wilson, John W. Nelson, and Neil R. Sheeley.

Oratory

W. E. Hempstead Jr., in his first year as coach, led the 1930 oratory and extempore speaking teams through a very profitable season of two extemporaneous speaking contests and four oratorical contests.

Arthur Potwin took first place in the State Extemporaneous Speaking contest which was held at Linfield on February 14. This was the first time Oregon had ever won this contest. The general topic was "Disarmament." The contest is sponsored by the Intercollegiate Forensic Association of Oregon.

Roger Pfaff, substituting at the last minute for Robert Miller, represented the University of Oregon in the State Old Line Oratorical contest held at the University on March 14. The subject of the orations delivered in this contest was "Defense of Modern Youth." This contest is also sponsored by the Intercollegiate Forensic Association of Oregon, of which every institution of higher learning in the state is a member.

Arthur Potwin represented the University of Oregon in the State Peace Oratorical contest which was held on April 11 at the Eugene Bible University. The subject of the orations was "Will of the Warrior."

Mr. Potwin also entered the Pacific Forensic League Oratorical contest which was held at Tucson, Arizona, on March 26, 27, and 28. The topic was "Peace of the Pacific."

W. E. (Jack) Hempstead

Errol Sloan, who was the University of Oregon representative in the Pacific Forensic League Extempore Speaking contest last year, entered it again this year. It was held at Tucson on the same dates as the oratorical contest, and was on no particular topic, the contestants learning the general subject only two hours before the meeting and relying upon their knowledge of miscellaneous public questions.

Charles Jones represented the University in the sixth National Intercollegiate Oratorical contest on the Constitution which was inaugurated and conducted by the Better America Federation of California. It was held at Corvallis the last week in April.

Other members of the varsity oratory team were Robert Miller and William Cutts.

Edmunson, Klemm, Hicks, Conoly, Woodard, Jordan, Holloway, Painton, Henderson

The proposition, "Resolved, that the modern diversion of women from the home to business and industrial occupations is a detriment to society" was argued by members of the women's debate teams in their forensic combats this year. All the debates were decided by single critic judges, the decisions and the general interest in the question bringing large audiences to hear the arguments.

Only two experienced debaters returned to the women's squad, the largest number being sophomores or juniors with no previous forensic training. Margaret Edmunson, senior in sociology, and Mary Klemm, senior in journalism, came to the work with three years of debate experience.

Members of the squad were Margaret Edmunson, Frances Jordan, Lavina Hicks, Elizabeth Painton, Florence Holloway, Harriet Kibbee, Elaine Henderson, Bernice Woodard, Mary Klemm, and Bernice Conoly.

The complete schedule of contests follows:

February 5	- -	University of Washington, negative	- - - -	Eugene
February 11	- -	Washington State College, affirmative	- - - -	Pullman
February 12	- -	University of Idaho, affirmative	- - - -	Moscow
February 26	- -	University of Utah, affirmative	- - - -	Eugene
March 6	- - -	Whitman College, negative	- - - -	Eugene
March 7	- - -	University of California, negative	- - - -	Eugene

Two wins and two losses is the record of the women's team at the time of writing. Lavina Hicks and Bernice Conoly, representing Oregon, lost to Helen Durand and Blanche Bordon of the University of Washington in a debate in 105 Commerce on February 5. Earl W. Wells, of the Oregon State college department of public speaking, was the critic judge. Margaret Edmunson and Mary Klemm, upholding the negative of the question for Oregon, journeyed to Pullman and Moscow February 11 and 12, winning the debate at Washington State college and losing the contest with the University of Idaho. Both these decisions were rendered by critic judges. The same negative team met representatives from the University of Utah in Eugene February 26 at the Unitarian church. The contest, sponsored by the Eugene City club, was won by the Oregon women. The affirmative debaters from Utah were Grace Anderson and Irene Sheranian. The critic judge was Alvin O'Konski, of the department of public speaking at Oregon State college.

Elizabeth Painton and Bernice Conoly represented Oregon in the debate with Whitman college, on March 6, while Bernice Woodard and Frances Jordan will meet a team from the University of California March 7 on the proposition: "Resolved, that the regular full-time employment of married women workers should be discontinued."

The Freshman Debaters

Four single debates and one dual contest were listed on the Oregon freshman men's schedule for 1930. The subject discussed was: "Resolved, that the nations of the world should adopt a plan of complete disarmament, except for such forces as are necessary for police protection." The schedule:

March 11	- - -	Albany College, negative	- - - - -	Eugene
March 11	- - -	Albany College, affirmative	- - - - -	Albany
April 4	- - -	Pacific University, negative	- - - - -	Eugene
April 9	- - -	Monmouth Normal, negative	- - - - -	Monmouth
April 16	- - -	Southern Oregon Normal, negative	- - - - -	Eugene
April 24	- - -	Linfield College, negative	- - - - -	Eugene

Freshman women debaters took part in three contests during the 1930 season. Debating the subject "Resolved, that the modern diversion of women from the home into business and industrial occupations is a detriment to society," the teams met representatives from the Monmouth Normal school and from Linfield college. The schedule:

April 27	- - -	Linfield College, negative	- - - - -	Eugene
April 27	- - -	Linfield College, affirmative	- - - - -	McMinnville
April 3	- - -	Monmouth Normal, negative	- - - - -	Eugene

The frosh debaters sat in on round-table discussions of the varsity squads this year, receiving their coaching along with the more experienced debaters. Since they furnish the material for the varsity the following year, this method of coaching them was thought to be the most effective.

The Debate Awards

THE FAILING PRIZE, awarded annually to the member of the senior class who delivers the best oration at commencement, was won in 1929 by Paul Clark with his oration on "Intellectual Honesty."

THE BEEKMAN PRIZE, awarded annually to the member of the senior class who gives the second-best oration at commencement, was won last year by Marian Leach, speaking on "Prince Lucien Campbell." These prizes are the incomes from endowments given the University more than forty years ago.

THE JEWETT PRIZE CONTESTS, of which there are three, are held annually to encourage interest and efficiency in public speaking among the students of the University. The prizes are offered each year by Mrs. W. F. Jewett, the originator of the contests. In 1929 they were won as follows:

MEN'S EXTEMPORE, with the main topic of "Politics in Business"---Errol Sloan, first; John Nelson, second; Benito Padilla, third; and Wallace Campbell, fourth.

WOMEN'S EXTEMPORE, with the main topic of "Foreign Indictment of American Culture"---Lou Ann Chase, first; Bernice Conoly, second; Elaine Henderson, third; and Gladys Clausen, fourth.

PRE-LEGAL ORATORICAL---William Knight, first; Benito Padilla, second; and Leland Fryer, third.

Delta Sigma Rho

Delta Sigma Rho, national honorary fraternity for participants in inter-collegiate forensic contests, was installed on the Oregon campus in 1927.

The work of the fraternity this year has been the entertainment of visiting debate teams. Officers of the chapter are Eugene Laird, president; Florence McNerney, secretary; and Margaret Edmunson, treasurer. Other members include Walter Hempstead, Roland Davis, Walter Durgan, Ellsworth Plank, Avery Thompson, Harvey Wright, Alice Clink, Mary Klemm, Hugh Biggs, and Errol B. Sloan.

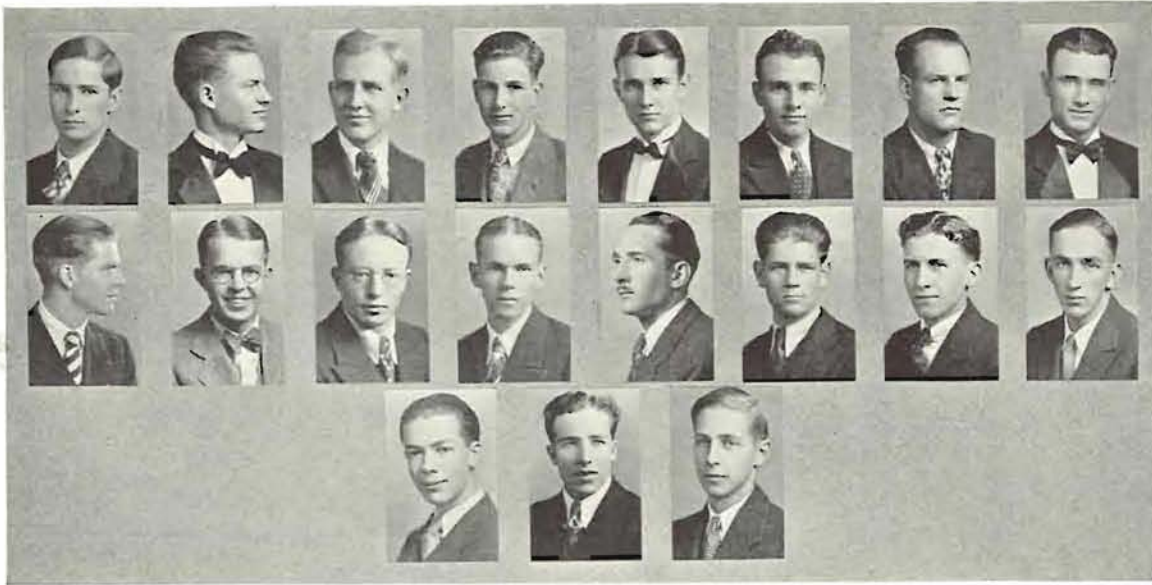

Delta Sigma Rho was founded on April 13, 1906, by Professor E. E. McDermott, of the University of Minnesota, and Professor H. E. Gordon, of the University of Iowa. The purpose of the organization was to compensate the faithful student who trained no less than the football or track hero, in preparation for contests in which the honor of their institutions were no less involved than in a foot race or a basketball game, and who forewent smokers, stags, dances, parties, picnics, vacations, Thanksgiving dinners, class honors, and scholarship prizes, all to master the intricacies of some question for debate, or to overcome some awkwardness of gesture, or fault of speech.

After the world war had continued for about a year, the National Society came to the conclusion that those who were most active in presenting the issues arising out of the war to the public through the medium of the four-minute speakers' organization and the like, however serious, earnest and conscientious they might be, did not have the qualifications necessary to present their messages to the public. At a meeting of the Minnesota chapter it was decided to offer the nation the services of its members as thoroughly trained and qualified speakers. The president of the society communicated with President Wilson. A member was appointed in each state, and the state representatives of the fraternity worked with the Committee of Public Information to furnish for all occasions a speaker who had been thoroughly trained and who was thoroughly qualified to communicate to the public in an interesting, attractive, intelligent way.

The society includes in its membership leaders in thought and action everywhere: mayors, attorneys, governors, senators, diplomats, with the best trained oratorical talent in the country within its ranks. The wearer of the key has undergone tests of intellectual and forensic efficiency; he is using his influence everywhere in the interests of sincere and effective public speaking.

The Congress Debate Club

With the Vice-President public speaking contest as its principal event of the year, the Congress public speaking club completed the second year of its existence.

The organization was founded with the dual purpose of giving the members practice in public speaking and of increasing their knowledge of current events. The club has adopted the policy of voluntary membership and at the end of winter term women were admitted to membership.

The Vice-President award was offered by Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, in the interests of public speaking, to be at the disposal of the Congress club. Wallace Campbell, sophomore in sociology, chairman of the contest, planned it for freshman men only, with the award offered in nine prizes as follows: $10, $5, $3, $2, and five of $1.00.

The contest was held during the early weeks of spring term, with Burt Brown Barker officiating as chairman. The speakers delivered their addresses extemporaneously and each was allotted eight minutes in which to prepare his speech. The judges were selected from the University faculty.

The officers of the club for fall term were: Roger Pfaff, president; Wayne Robinson, vice-president; and Merlin Blais, secretary. For winter term the officers were: Merlin Blais, president; Wallace Campbell, vice-president; George Bateman, secretary, and Tim Booth, sergeant-at-arms.

International Debate

Representatives of four nationalities met in friendly forensic battle in Guild theatre on the evening of February 6--- Japanese, Chinese, British and American. Shaigeo Yoshida, Dai Ho Chun, and Donald Layman, representing the University of Hawaii, upheld the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that the nations of the world should adopt a policy of complete disarmament except for such forces as are needed for police protection." The Oregon team, defending the negative, was composed of Arthur Potwin, Calvin Bryan and Eugene Laird.

Orange leis, symbols of good-will, were hung around the necks of the Oregon debaters by the men from Hawaii, in token of the friendliness of their mission. Nor did the heat of the argument erase the smiles from the faces of any of the participants.

Alvin O'Konski, of the public speaking department at Oregon State college, who acted as critic judge, awarded the decision to the negative, giving them five out of a possible nine points on the basis of analysis, organization, knowledge of the question, utilization of data, adaptation of material and argument to the question and to the audience, delivery, rebuttal, personality, and persuasion. Vice-President of the University, Burt Brown Barker, acted as chairman for the debate.

The contest with Hawaii marks another forward step in the development of international debate at Oregon. Believing such contacts further international goodwill in a modest way, the University of Oregon itself sent a debate team, composed of Walter E. Hempstead Jr., Benoit McCrosky and Avery Thompson, around the world during 1927-28. Visiting teams from foreign countries have been entertained at various times in the past, notably from Sidney, Australia, and from Oxford and Cambridge.

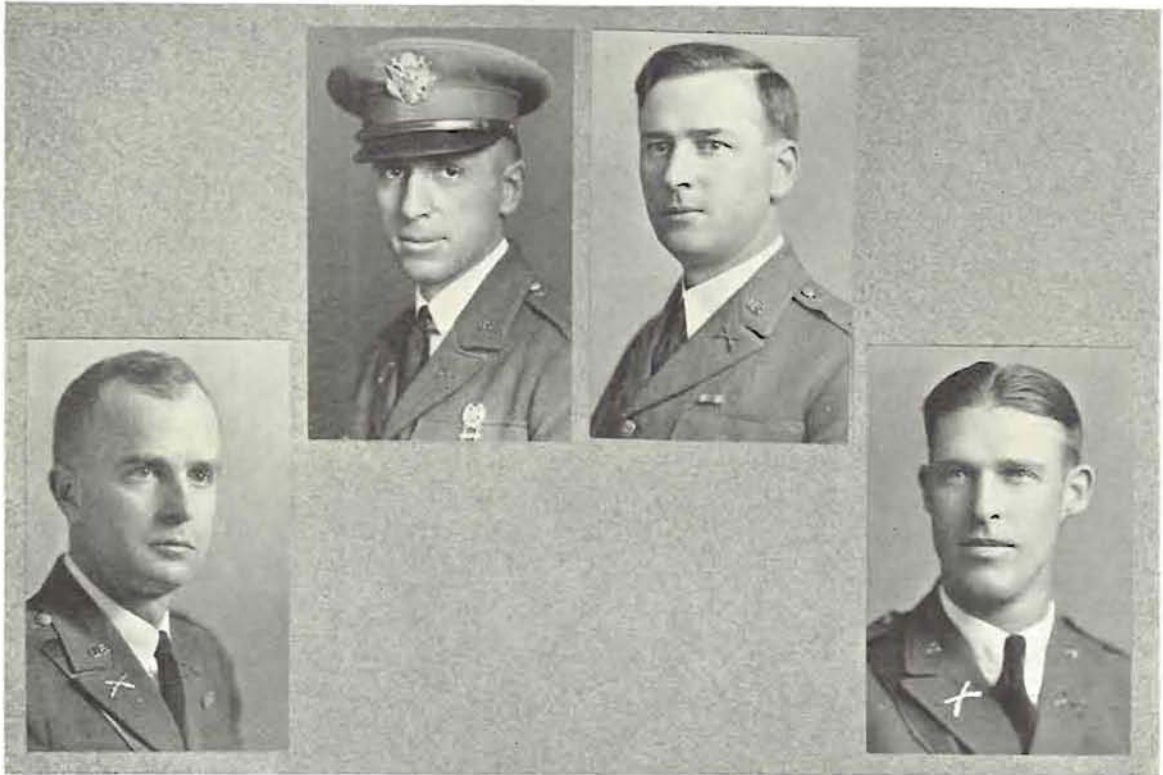

The contest this year was the third between Oregon and the University of Hawaii, the Oregon around-the-world team having met Hawaii twice during their trip. The team from Hawaii was on an extended trip in the United States, the contest in Eugene being only the second on their schedule.

The Officers of R. O. T. C.

Six men compose the staff which has been assigned by the United States government to direct the R. O. T. C. department at the University of Oregon.

Major Frederick A. Barker, commander of the department, was assigned to Oregon in the summer of 1928. Under his leadership the corps has steadily improved until now the university may well be proud of the organization. Major Barker came to Oregon from Fort Lewis, Washington, where he was stationed for several years. He is a World War Veteran and a graduate of West Point.

Captain C. H. Bragg has been connected with the University military department since 1927. He is the instructor for the Junior cadet officers, and is the coach of the University of Oregon rifle team, which won the "Doughboy of the West" trophy last year.

Captain George F. Herbert is the veteran of the officers detailed at Oregon, having been here four years. Captain Herbert will leave Oregon at the close of this year. He was only recently commissioned a captain and he is one of the best liked officers at Oregon.

Lieutenant J. E. McCammon came to this post last fall from Fort Benning, Georgia. He has worked hard to place Oregon high up in the rankings of R. O. T. C. units.

Sergeant F. I. Agule, the oldest man in point of service at Oregon, has a great task to keep all of the records of the department straight. He has been in charge of the clerical work at the barracks for eleven years.

Sergeant Edward Conyers will retire from active service in 1931, and in him the members of the corps will lose one of their most valued friends. He has been at Oregon for ten years and has served in the regular army for 30 years.

The Cadets at Attention

The Cadet Corps

The cadet corps of the University of Oregon Reserve Officers' Training Corps has grown steadily from a small group to a battalion of five regular companies and a very efficient band of 55 pieces. Regular drills are held at the R. O. T. C. barracks during the fall and winter months, with battalion drill an event of the spring term on the parade grounds.

Military training is compulsory at Oregon for freshmen and sophomores, with junior and senior work optional. The cadets are trained in the fundamentals of foot drill and the manual of arms during the first year, with military courtesy a big factor in their work. Rifle practice is also possible for the cadets, with a regulation gallery housed on the second floor at the barracks.

Senior cadet officers are in command of the various companies, ranking as captains and lieutenants. Junior officers act as sergeants and take care of the squad drilling. Corporals are chosen from the ranks of the sophomores with freshmen ranking as privates.

Upon completion of four years work in the military department, the cadets are entitled to commissions in either the Organized Reserves or the National Guard. The cadet officers are expected to attend summer camps, while in school, where they are given advanced military problems to solve.

The spring term formations, when the battalion drills as a unit under the command of cadet officers, are of much interest to the members of the Oregon student body, and a large crowd is always on hand to see the college soldiers go through their paces. Few college infantry battalions can surpass the excellent drilling of the Oregon R. O. T. C. unit.

As an added incentive for young college men to continue military work during their junior and senior years, the United States government pays the cadet officers and makes a uniform allowance for equipment.

The Military Ball

One of the annual high-lights of the social season at Oregon always proves to be the Military Ball and this year the affair was bigger and better than ever. The ball is sponsored by the local chapter of the National Society of Scabbard and Blade, military honorary organization, and this year's formal affair was attended by several high army officers and legislators.

All upper division military men are invited to this function; a dance which is held during Spring term being the only affair restricted to members of the military honorary.

The dance was held at the Osburn hotel on the evening of January 22. The ballroom was decorated with flags, guidons, and other colorful military insignia until it presented a very beautiful effect in the soft light of the room. Cadet officers attended dressed in their military finery, and the limited number of guests were arrayed in their tuxedos to make the affair very formal.

Attractive programmes in the form of leather books with a small sword fastened to them added to the occasion.

Webb Hayes was chairman of the ball, assisted by Elmer Pahl, Hal Johnson, Jesse Douglas, and Lyle Grimes.

Guests of honor for the occasion included Governor A. W. Norblad, Major General C. H. Martin, Major General U. G. Alexander, Major General G. A. White, Major General J. L. Hines, Brigadier General P. A. Wolf, Arnold Bennett Hall, Colonel O. A. Richmond, Colonel W. W. McCammon, Colonel E. V. Hauser, Lieutenant Colonel A. O. Walter, Major B. A. Barker, Major J. H. Tierney, Major C. W. Robbins, Major D. C. Stanard, Captain C. H. Bragg, Captain J. C. Koepke, Captain G. F. Herbert, Lieutenant J. E. McCammon, Dean Virginia Esterly, Dean Hugh Biggs, and C. R. Clark.

The Rifle Team

The Oregon rifle team is looking forward to a big season in 1930. Some of the best shots from last year are again back to form the nucleus for this year's team. Among the returning veterans are included: Harvey Wright, Warren Powell, Earl Nelson, Philip Livesly, and Robert Rieling. In addition to these men Oregon has some of the best shots in the entire R. O. T. C. corps. Arlen McCarty placed second in the corps shooters of the United States and Hawaii ratings and Philip Smith tied for third place. Lawrence Parks is an expert rifleman and Gene Shumaker was high point man for the intramural shoot.

The Oregon unit carried off all the honors in the camp at Vancouver Barracks at summer camp last year. Headed by McCarty, Wright, Smith, Erkinbrecker, and Livesly, the Oregon shooters won all of the various medals and trophies awarded at the camp. They also won the Doughboy of the West trophy and the Hotchkiss trophy.

Harvey Wright was high point man in the elimination shoot to pick a team to go to Camp Perry, Ohio, to participate in the national matches. At Camp Perry, Wright was elected captain of the Ninth Corps area team. He placed in all five matches and made the only perfect score in the President's match at 1000 yards.

Captain C. H. Bragg, a nationally known shoot, is coach of the Oregon rifle team and he has developed one of the strongest squads in the country. He participated in the national matches in 1927. Harvey Wright serves as his assistant and he has made an enviable record for himself during the past two years.

The Summer Camp

The summer camp, held at Vancouver Barracks, is attended each year by the infantry units from the four major colleges and universities of the Northwest. Oregon sent 28 men to the encampment during the summer of 1929, Oregon State 23, Washington 22, and Washington State 2.

Instructors are drawn from the military units of the schools sending men to the camp; the regular officers of the barracks help with the training.

"Doughboy of the West"

The men attending the encampment were under the command of Major Frederick J. deRone, with Captain Frederick W. Race acting as adjutant. Instructors were Captain Harold R. Priest, Captain C. Bragg, Captain H. L. Darrett, Sergeant Agule, and Sergeant Collins.

Non-commissioned officers and men from the Seventh Infantry served as instructors on the rifle range.

Infantry drill and command, use of weapons, combat principals under assumed battle conditions, company administration, marches, first aid drill, and care and feeding of men were studied at the encampment.

Rifle range work with the .30 calibre rifle, the .45 calibre service revolver, auto-rifle, machine guns, and 37 millimeter gun were taken up in detail with every man given an opportunity to qualify for service medals and badges during the summer period.

Scabbard and Blade

Company L, Sixth Regiment of the National Society of Scabbard and Blade, military honorary, was installed at the University of Oregon in April, 1928. The national organization is modelled after that of the United States army. The various chapters are designated as companies and are organized into regiments in order of their organization.

There are now 73 companies, being six full regiments of twelve companies each, and part of a seventh regiment.

Believing that military service is an obligation of citizenship, and that the greater opportunities afforded college men for the study of military science place upon them certain responsibilities as citizens, cadet officers in various colleges and universities conferring baccalaureate degrees formed this society.

The purpose of Scabbard and Blade is to raise the standard of military training in American colleges and universities, to unite in closer relationship their military departments, to encourage and foster development of the essential qualities of good and efficient officers, and to promote intimacy and good fellowship among the cadets. Members are selected not on scholarship alone but also on the basis of leadership, initiative, and character.

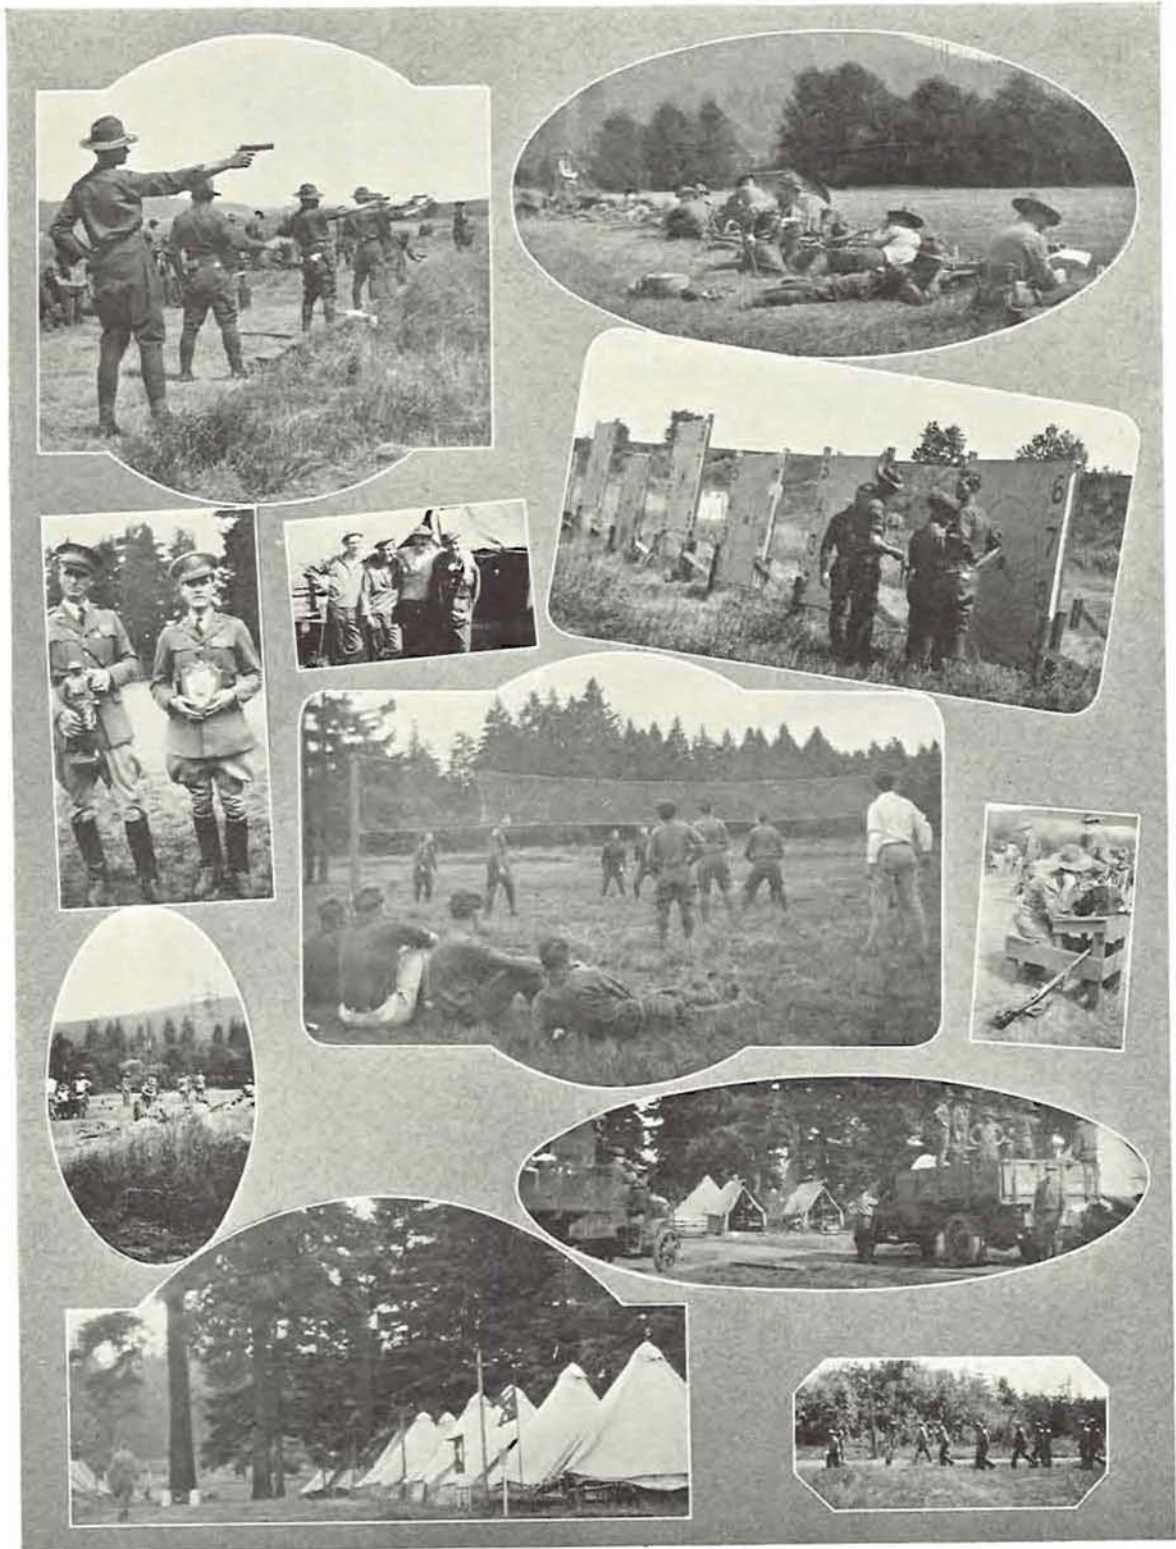

The present officers of the Oregon company are: Arlen McCarty, captain; Harvey Wright, first lieutenant; Harold Kelley, second lieutenant; and Frank Ison, first sergeant.

Captain Arlen McCarty was recently appointed to the United States government flying school at Riverside Field, California, and was thus forced to relinquish his office in the local Scabbard and Blade organization.

Working as a unit of the "Y," it has gained wide recognition through its many activities, the most important of which is the campaign for a Braille library for blind students at the University. The aim is to make Oregon one of the first universities to have a complete reference library for the use of blind students. The commission is also doing deputation work in connection with many of the major schools.

This is the first year since 1922-23 that there has been a Y. M. C. A. on the campus. Its place was taken during the interim by the United Christian Work. Although handicapped by the difficulties of reorganization, the "Y" has completed a modest but successful year's program. The winter term fraternity discussions, International week, and the bringing of prominent speakers to the campus have been among its activities.

The Craftsman club is an organization for Masons, sons of Masons, and members of the Order of De Molay on the campus of the University of Oregon. It is comfortably housed in a building provided by the Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Oregon.

The most important activity of the club is the organization and training of a degree team which has exemplified certain work of the Masonic lodge before many of the lodges of the state. This degree team has done much to promote the feeling of friendship between the citizens of the state and the University.

The local activities of the club have always been informal. A spirit of good-fellowship guides all its activities and provides a friendly atmosphere for all who enjoy affiliation with the organization. The clubhouse is always open to all members and their guests.

Chi chapter of Phi Kappa Delta was installed at the University of Oregon in 1922. Its active and field membership roll now number 120, and includes educational leaders both state and national.

The goals of the fraternity are research, leadership and service in education. Its membership is recruited from students of high scholastic standing who are entering upon education as a profession. To advance research, the national Council of Phi Delta Kappa offers a $2,500 fellowship and a $500 scholarship to graduate students seeking advanced degrees in education. Chi chapter grants, in addition, funds for specific projects carried on through the University of Oregon. It serves also as an agency for the collection and dissemination of authentic information applicable to current educational problems in the state of Oregon.

The fraternity co-operates with the university in sponsoring an annual conference for high school principals and superintendents held at the time of the general high school conference. Meetings of a social and professional character are held periodically throughout the year and during the summer session.

HAFIZ

Oregon Women

This year we dedicate the Women's section to the wives of the presidents of the University who were such constant sources of aid and inspiration to their husbands in their work as the heads of the University of Oregon and the ever increasing number of its members--- students and faculty.

The first ladies of the campus have never before been credited with the building and expansion of the campus from the days when Deady and Villard were the only buildings on the campus, the only social life that of several debating societies, and 150 students, to what is now a large state university of some 3000 students.

These women have assisted their husbands in entertaining guests of the university, giving aid to poor students, establishing scholarships, ministering to the sick, entertaining students, and helping the students whenever they could.

In a recent issue of the Oregana the presidents themselves were honored---their wives being completely forgotten by the students themselves, and many others. These women have done their work unheralded, and without praise, but have done their best, and continue to do their best for the University, the students, and the people of the state.

Mrs. John W. Johnson

Mrs. Johnson was the wife of the first president, John Wesley Johnson, the man who is remembered as a thorough scholar of the days when Deady, and later Villard, comprised the University of Oregon campus. He was president from the time of the founding of the University in 1876 and served until 1893. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson did not live on the campus, but on the other side of town---a handicap in those days.

Mrs. Dunn, wife of Professor Frederick S. Dunn, says of Mrs. Johnson, "She was a home-body, leading a quiet life. She only came up to the campus for such occasions as debates and commencements. Mrs. Johnson had quite a large family, and did all the work herself, which made it quite hard for her to be around the students, or participating in social life."

Mrs. Johnson was a pleasant-faced little woman with a quiet, serene voice. She was one who served without being seen or heard, quite content to do her own work in her own way, retired from the public eye.

Four of the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are graduates of the University of Oregon.

Dr. Alice Hall Chapman

Dr. Alice Hall Chapman is the wife of Dr. Charles H. Chapman, who was president from 1893 to 1899. It was she who organized the Fortnightly club, the first women's club on the Pacific coast, and she was elected its first president. This club is mostly literary and civic in its purposes and exists still today. Through this group she assisted in the starting of the scholarship loan fund for University students.

The Fortnightly club founded the first library of Eugene, a circulating library room.

In a letter received recently from Dr. Chapman, she described the banquet after the first inter-collegiate football game which she and Mr. Chapman gave in their home. Some neighbors had to come to her rescue with more food, as she did not have enough space to prepare turkeys and all the trimmings for 34 boys. Then she tells of plays the student put on for the Fortnightly club, which she describes as "well-done, and being great fun."

Mrs. Charles Williams, sister of Professor Frederic Dunn, says of her, "Dr. Chapman was always willing to give her time for the benefit of others." The photo shows the campus as it was in Mrs. Chapman's day.

Mrs. Frank Strong

Mrs. Strong is the wife of the third president of the University, Dr. Frank Strong, man of strong vision. He was president from 1899 to 1902. Their aim was to "build and broaden the school." Mrs. Strong was then a young and vivacious woman who loved to entertain. The Strongs were the first to bring prominent visitors to the campus, and to entertain them while they were here, at their own expense. When they first came here the first floor of Collier hall, as the president's residence was then known, was used for a library for the students. Shortly afterwards the library was moved to the north end of Friendly hall, leaving the whole house for living quarters.

Mrs. Strong was very much interested in the students and their affairs. She helped poor students or got aid for them. She was a member of the Fortnightly club, a literary organization, and worked in the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. and Mrs. Strong were here only three years ---Dr. Strong resigned to accept a position as president of the University of Kansas, where he now serves as the chancellor of the college, and is the chairman of history.

Mrs. Prince L. Campbell

"A woman of attractive personality, of warm-hearted impulses, good judgment; and she is a staunch friend," John Straub, dean emeritus of men, described Mrs. Prince L. Campbell, recently.

Mrs. Campbell is the widow of the late Prince L. Campbell, who did so much for the growth and expansion of the University. He was president from 1902 until his death in 1925. The new fine arts building is a memorial to Mr. Campbell, and is to be named for him. One of the women's dormitories bears the name of Susan Campbell, in honor of his wife. Her portrait hangs over the fireplace in Susan Campbell's drawing room as an inspiration to the girls who live there.

Mrs. Campbell has always been a friend of the students. She has always been ready to help alleviate suffering, for example by cooking in the Phi Gamma Delta house during the influenza epidemic because no cooks could be hired. She also nursed the boys that were sick with the "flu."

Mrs. Campbell has taken a keen interest in the Doernbecher hospital for crippled children in Portland, helping to raise the funds for its founding.

Mrs. Arnold Bennett Hall

Mrs. Arnold Bennett Hall

"Mrs. Arnold Bennett Hall is sincere, frank, and democratic," said Mrs. Charles Leslie Schwering, assistant dean of women, or better known as the "freshman dean." "She has been very active in club work on the campus and in Eugene." She, like some of her predecessors, is a member of the Fortnightly club, literary organization formed by Dr. Alice Hall Chapman, the wife of the second president. Mrs. Hall organized the Faculty Women's club, composed of faculty women and wives of professors, in order to bring about greater cooperation for the benefit of the University.

Mrs. Hall makes direct connection with the students through her membership in Mortar Board, senior women's honorary. In connection with her interest in students, Mrs. Hall is a member of the American Association of University Women, and is a member of the advisory board of the Y. W. C. A.

Under the administration of Helen Peters, the Associated Women Students made the year an eventful one, in which the spirit to promote campus friendships was particularly strong. The Big Sister organization, under the leadership of Margaret Cummings, helps the new students adjust themselves to college life, and is perhaps the biggest work of the A. W. S. The annual "Get Wise" party held early fall term did a lot to get the Freshmen acquainted with one another, and with upper classmen. Clever stunts were presented at that time to get the Freshmen interested in activities, and show the benefits of the various activities that women students can get into, and the honoraries that they may make from good work accomplished in the particular fields.

Informal campus teas were given twice a month, supervised by Harriet Kibbee, to bring about a closer contact among the women on the campus, to become better acquainted with each other, and to establish greater friendships on the campus. The first tea was a formal given in honor of Elizabeth Morwood, of Belfast, Ireland, the foreign student on the campus this year; and for Dean Virginia Judy Esterly, who returned to her post as the Dean of Women on the campus after a year's leave of absence in Europe.

The year will stand out in the history of the Associated Women Students as one marking the organization of a state association of college women officers, at a meeting planned by the University of Oregon council and held on this campus. Dorothy Kirk was elected vice-president of the new state group, and will succeed as president next year.

Activities of the Association

Elizabeth Morwood is the foreign student this year. She is from Belfast, Ireland and has spent a considerable bit of her life in English schools. Miss Morwood lived at Hendricks hall, during this past year.

During the winter term, the Women's League voted to be known as the Associated Women Students.

In interest of the foreign scholarship fund, dime crawls, the Christmas College ball, and a waffle dance were held to raise money.

The women took an important part in entertaining visitors at the high school conference, held January 10 and 11, and staged at this time the annual style show. During spring term the annual April Frolic, all-women stunt show was held April 19. Each term mass meetings were held in Alumni hall to hear well-known speakers.

Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. is a group of about 900 women seeking through different approaches and interests such as fellowship, development of leadership, discussions, and worship, to attain high values in character training.

Fellowship is attained not only through teas and dinners on this campus, but through intercollegiate conferences at Seabeck, Newport, and the spring cabinet training conference, and at the Northwest Conference on Pacific Relations.

Daily teas were held in the Bungalow during Frosh week, the annual membership dinner, Junior-Senior breakfast, and other teas and dinners were given during the year. Numerous discussion groups met during the year and the Tuesday Five o'Clocks gave opportunity for quiet meritation and worship. The Y. W. also participated in International week, held during the Winter term. The Frosh Commission gave the freshmen a chance to have their own miniature Y. W.

Philomelete

Ten hobby groups, designated by the name of Philomelete, have been proteges for the past year of Phi Theta Upsilon, junior and senior women's service honorary.

After consideration of the popular interests and hobbies of the Oregon women, the following groups were organized: Arts and Craft, Play, International Relations, Charm School, Literature and Poetry, Mythology, Music, Drama, Woman in Her Sphere, and Nature.

These divisions are usually composed of twenty to thirty girls who have their elected officers, with two members of Phi Theta Upsilon as sponsors.

Informal meetings are held every two weeks to discuss the latest developments in politics, the most recent novel, or the proper way to entertain guests. The aim of the organization is to promote friendship and congeniality among women whose interests and hobbies are closely associated.

Diana Deininger was the founder of the organization, and it was she who contributed many ideas for the individual groups, and who greatly helped them in their work during the several months of the groups' existence.

The second annual Philomelete "party" was held early in the spring when all the various groups gave programs illustrating their special interests. During the year, the membership ranged from 150 to 200.

The second issue of "Acacia Branches," Philomelete's annual official publication, gave a resume of the work of all the groups, and of the plans carried out during the year.

This undertaking is a comparatively new feature on the western coast, but the success and possibility of further development of the plan have been proved by the response and lasting interest shown on the campus since the work was started early in 1929. Groups of women in other colleges are expecting to start the formation of similar organizations on their campuses, and there may some day be an organization with chapters in several of the colleges.

Another successful year has just been completed by the Women's Athletic association. The biggest event of the year was the invasion of the United States Field Hockey team on January 27, 28 and 29. This team played a picked squad of university girls, well-trained and coached under the direction of Janet Woodruff, herself a hockey player of note in New York.

Girls were allowed to turn out for one sport in the fall term, due to the ruling passed last spring (it was repealed later). A choice of speedball, under Margaret Duncan, coach, and Pauline Kidwell, head; volleyball, under Phyllis Gove, coach, and Mary Agnes Hunt, head; and swimming, under Ernestine Troemel, coach, and Clare Maertens, head, was offered.

Winter term two sports, basketball and lacrosse, were given. Phyllis Gove coached the basketball team, and Lucile Murphy was head of basketball. Miss Woodruff coached lacrosse and Mary Wilburn was in charge. The W. A. A. entertained the visiting All-American hockey team with a banquet at the New Men's Dorm during their stay here.

The regular W. A. A. banquet was also held during winter term, officers for the coming year were announced, letters and sweaters were awarded.

On the spring term sport program there was a wider variety offered---tennis, hockey, baseball, and archery. Beth Salway was head of tennis, Naomi Moshberger of hockey, Alta Bennett of baseball, and Ruth Jaynes of archery.

Two all-year-round sports were offered this year, hiking under the direction of Grace Caldwell, and riding under the direction of Betty Beam.

Points are awarded for making the various teams, 100 for first, 75 for second, and 50 for third. When 500 points have been earned a small "O" is awarded, and when 1000 points have been earned a sweater with a large "O" is presented to the winner with membership in the Women's Order of the "O."

A food stand for hungry athletes was inaugurated in the fall term. The annual strawberry festival climaxed the year during the spring term.

Captain John J. McEwan

When Captain John J. McEwan resigned his position as head football coach at West Point and came to coach Oregon in 1926, he was faced with a real problem, and he knew it. Coast Conference teams were just beginning to receive national recognition. It was hard for some of the ancient and battle-scarred alumni to forget the old traditions of steam-roller football.

Many of the old grads were still just reovering from the shock of the forward pass innovation. Knowing him to be a tough player himself, and an army man, others hoped to see Captain McEwan re-establish the old "tandem formation" methods that would gloriously pulverize all opposition.

But McEwan knew better. He knew foobball, modern football. Every new rule put into effect meant that a new style of play would be possible, and necessary. He started out cautiously. His team won but one conference game during the first two years. He was concerned with the future then, more than with premature attempts at a championship, and did succeed in building a solid foundation upon which to work. In his third year McEwan's men lost but two out of ten games and won the Northwest title. Last season his Webfoots tied for the Coast Conference championship with Stanford, California, and U. S. C.

Dr. Clarence W. Spears

Much regretted by Minnesota, whose head football coach he had been for the past five years, Dr. Clarence W. Spears moved himself, his family, and his widely respected coaching system out to Oregon to take the position vacated by Captain McEwan.

Dr. Spears left a Gopher team that had a reputation and a future, and came here to take up with the Webfoots where McEwan left off. The Doctor will have the best prospects of any new coach that has come to Oregon in many years.

During the five years that Dr. Spears was at Minnesota, his teams won twenty-eight games, tied three, and lost nine, and were never defeated by more than two touchdowns except once. During the three years that he coached at Dartmouth, 1918, 1919, and 1920, his teams were rated among the strongest in the East, and only twice were they defeated by as much as two touchdowns. At West Virginia, where he coached until going to Minnesota, he was very successful, turning out an undefeated team in 1922. He coached New Hampshire in 1921.

Bill Haywood

The Coaching Staff

Captain McEwan was ably assisted in his work with the Webfoots by three ex-Oregon varsity men, Billy Reinhart had charge of the backfield. For three seasons he had been coaching the freshman teams, and is also head coach of varsity baseball and basketball.

Frang Riggs, who finished his varsity career in 1920, coached the ends. It was his first experience at teaching football, but he turned out some valuable material. Gene Shields, line coach, had several years of coaching experience at Benson Tech school in Portland. He was an all-Coast guard in 1926, and this year helped develop one of the strongest lines the Webfoots have ever had.

The 1929 football season was as successful as any Oregon has had for years. While winning seven out of ten games played, with a total of 209 points to opponents' 91, the Webfoots were relatively as successful as they were the year before in winning eight out of ten games played. The post-season game with the University of Florida at Miami put the Webfoots on a permanent basis of national recognition. Oregon lost but one conference game this year, and as a result was tied with Stanford, U. S. C., and California for the Pacific Coast championship, and with W. S. C. for the Northwest championship.

Action started with an early tilt with Pacific University, and a 58 to 0 victory sent the Webfoot hopes soaring. It was thought that at last Oregon had a chance to fight on even terms with Stanford, the next team on the schedule. The Cards, however, were well prepared, and in a broiling scrap came out ahead with a score of 33 to 7.

The Oregon team came back the next week with the desperate desire to show the Northwest that its brand of football was much better than it had appeared in the torrid south, and it did. After defeating Willamette 34 to 0, the Webfoots went to Portland to play Idaho. Though starting unimpressively, Oregon drove through to a 34 to 7 victory.

The next week, Oregon won from Washington, 14 to 0, after a tough battle with Coach Bagshaw's power machine. The Huskies had been rated far under Oregon before the game, but as was shown later, when they played close games with Stanford and California, Washington's slowly developing team had just begun to wake up.

A week later the Oregon reserves took a game from the U. C. L. A. Bruins with a score of 27 to 0, after a slow, mediocre exhibition.

The homecoming game was with O. S. C. While the Beavers had a record of victories as good as Oregon's, they were given no odds, and at no time during the hour's battle did they threaten seriously to break down the deliberate, orderly Webfoot system, and lost the game to Oregon, 16 to 0.

The post-season series started off promisingly with a 7 to 0 win over the University of Hawaii, in a fast open game played on the Multnomah field in Portland, a week after the Aggie contest.

The Varsity for the '29 Season

The Season

The conference season cost the Oregon team the services of George Stadelman, star center, and Johnny Kitzmiller, the Flying Dutchman, both of whom received broken legs, Stadelman in the Idaho game, and Kitzmiller in the O. S. C. game. Oregon lost the St. Mary's game, which was played on Thanksgiving day in San Francisco, by a score of 31 to 6. The Gaels were undefeated throughout the season, and the Webfoots were the only opponents to cross their goal.

The final game was with Florida at Miami, but three weeks after the O. S. C. encounter. Seven of the Oregon players were not able to compete, Stadelman and Kitzmiller because of injuries, Robinson and Williams, because of the Alligators' prejudice, and Spear, Colbert and Schulz because of faculty rulings. After a gallant stand, the Webfoot reserves were beaten by the Floridans, 20 to 6.

There were many outstanding players on the 1929 Oregon roster. Several of them were named on all-Coast teams by various sports writers and coaches. George Christensen and Austin Colbert were both listed as first string tackles, and seldom was there a selection in which one or both of these "quarter-ton babies" were not mentioned in one of the first three teams. Marshall Shields was continually rated as a first string guard.

Johnny Kitzmiller was selected by most Coast authorities as all-Coast halfback or quarterback. Because of his triple threat ability, he was indeed one of the most spectacular players on the Oregon team. Bobby Robinson was a fifth Webfoot mentioned on all-Coast lineups. It was Bobby's last year, and he will go down in gridiron history as one of the cleverest, fastest, and most versatile backs ever on a Northwest team.

The only players to be lost through graduation were George Stadelman, Dave Mason, Harry Wood, Bobby Robinson, Chuck Williams, Walt Browne, and Wally Shearer.

Oregon vs. Stanford

The biggest moment of the season for Oregon was when Woodie Archer crossed the Cardinal goal line with a pass he had received from Johnny Kitzmiller early in the first quarter of the Stanford game. It was the first conference encounter for both teams. Pop Warner's men were rated high, and still held the semi-official national championship won the previous season. Oregon was the Northern threat, and a loss to Stanford at this time meant apparently that any hope of a 1929 Coast title would be out of the question in the Northwest. The score was 33 to 7 for Stanford.

It was hot down in Palo Alto. The Cards took no chances. After the heartening first quarter, the Webfoots began to wilt in the heat, and as the effect of the terrific battering Stanford smashed over two touchdowns before the half ended.

Stanford ran wild during the third and most of the fourth quarter. McEwan used more than two full teams in efforts to stop the Cards, but Stanford was able to cross Oregon's goal for three more touchdowns.

Idaho vs. Oregon

Rankled by the Stanford experience, the Webfoots met Idaho in Portland two weeks later. The result was a one-sided victory of 34 to 7.

The Vandals bucked over a score in the first few minutes when an Oregon fumble gave them the ball on the 6-yard line. A long, perfect pass from Kitzmiller to Archer, and Kitzmiller's place-kick for the extra point soon evened the score. At the start of the second quarter, Kitzmiller, aided by smashing interference, returned a punt for 80 yards and a touchdown. Toward the end of the half, Bobby Robinson went on the field, and in a couple of minutes later, made a touchdown, receiving the ball on a pass from Kitzmiller.

In the final period Hal Hatton intercepted an Idaho pass and ran 55 yards for a touchdown. Just before the end of the game, Steve Fletcher blocked a punt, scooped up the ball and galloped 40 yards for another six points. George Stadelman, all-Coast center of the previous year, suffered a broken leg during the game.

Washington vs. Oregon

To the uninformed, Washington looked like easy meat for Oregon. The Huskies were having domestic troubles. Just before the game their coach resigned.

There was something else besides mechanical football, however, with which the Webfoots would have to reckon. The players had vowed grimly to win the game if it were humanly possible. The final score was 14 to 0 for Oregon.

Toward the middle of the second quarter, Bobby Robinson was sent into the game. A play or two later he intercepted a pass on Oregon's 5-yard line. He had a clear field, and was but a few yards from his objective, when Westerweller, Husky end who had just been removed from the game, rushed out on the field and tackled him. The referee awarded a touchdown to Oregon. The Webfoots scored again in the second half on a long pass from Kitzmiller to Archer.

U. C. L. A. vs. Oregon

U. C. L. A. thinks Oregon has a peculiar team. In 1928 when the Bruins and Webfoots met for the first time, Oregon won, 27 to 0, but when statisticians had analyzed the game it was found that the California team had surpassed Oregon in yardage, passes, first downs, punts, and in fact, nearly everything but score. The Southerners were not satisfied.

When they came to Eugene this year, they were defeated again, 27 to 0, but went home with the mystery for the most part unsolved.

The Oregon reserves played most of the game. While they did make the best statistical showing this time, the Webfoots played listlessly, scoring occasionally just as a matter of course. The Bruins were enthusiastic and aggressive, but never very dangerous. Tough luck caused UCLA ends to muff two perfectly good passes that would have been sure touchdowns.

Oregon State vs. Oregon

Oregon State Agricultural College failed to avenge the 12 to 0 defeat of the previous game and were beaten again by the Webfoots in the Oregon Homecoming game by a score of 16 to 0.

The Staters came very close to scoring in the second half when Sherwood, Orange half, grabbed a blocked Oregon punt and was tackled from behind by Ed Moeller, Webfoot fullback; and again a few plays later, prevented only by Bobby Robinson's beautiful flying tackle which downed McKallip, O. S. C., end, for a loss on what seemed for an instant to be a scoring end run; and still again when Dave Mason intercepted a pass on the 1-yard line and returned the ball to the 34 yard line.

Late in the first quarter Johnny Kitzmiller started the scoring with a strategic place-kick from the 22-yard line. Bobby Robinson made both of the touchdowns, and Kitzmiller and Londahl kicked the extra points. Kitz paved the way to the first one in the second quarter by the marvelous feat of punting from mid-field to out of bounds on the Aggie 1-foot mark. On the last play of the second half, Johnny Kitzmiller was tackled in such a way that his ankle was broken.

Hawaii vs. Oregon

Because Hawaii was the second of four tough teams Oregon played in a period of but three weeks, Webfoot coaches used many second string men in the Portland contest, but succeeded in defeating the Islanders, 7 to 0.

Characteristically, Bob Robinson was responsible for Oregon's 7 points. He had been in the game but a few minutes during the second quarter when he returned a punt for 65 yards and a touchdown, making one of the most thrilling runs ever seen on Multnomah field. He also converted with a place-kick.

Nobriga, center, Howells, tackle, and Kausihilo, guard starred on defense for the Deans. MacFarlane, Holt, and Wise, Hawaii backs, were an unusually dangerous pass combination, and several times threatened seriously to score through their streaking deluge of spirals.

Three times Oregon was within the Hawaiian five-yard line, but through fumbles and actual resistance were unable to produce the necessary punch. Al Browne, Webfoot half, with the aid of stellar blocking of Chuck Williams, was able to total 102 yards from scrimmage.

St. Mary's vs. Oregon

Five days after the Hawaii game, Oregon met St. Mary's in San Francisco. The Gaels shattered Oregon's chances in the first quarter by scoring three touchdowns, and in the second and last quarters with two more touchdowns, resulting in a final score of 31 to 6.

During the first few minutes of play, Ackerman, Gael end, smeared an Oregon punt, and Ebbing, another end, fell on the ball behind the Web-foot goal. A few minutes later, Ebbing scored a second touchdown with a 10-yard run after a long pass from Stennett. The third score of this disastrous first period came when St. Mary's passed and carried the ball from Oregon's 43-yard line in six plays with Stennett making the final dash. Sheflin, Gael reserve back, made the fourth touchdown in the second quarter after a long run had put the ball on the 6-yard line.

The Oregon line finally solved the Gael tactics, and kept the Saints on the defensive throughout the third quarter, and toward the end of the game, Bobby Robinson tossed a neat 15-yard pass to Al Browne, who ran 5 yards for a touchdown, the only one scored against St. Mary's during the season.

Florida vs. Oregon

Without the brilliant Johnny Kitzmiller, all-coast quarterback; Austin Colbert, all-coast tackle; Bobby Robinson, all-coast halfback; Chuck Williams, halfback; George Stadelman, the great center; Chuck Spear, halfback, and Irvin Schultz, tackle, the Webfoots played the closing post-season game in Miami with the University of Florida, and lost, 20 to 6.

Oregon's most positive threats were quarterback Londahl's 60-yard return of the opening kickoff, and a 40-yard pass to a touchdown, Wally Shearer to Walt Browne, in the last quarter. Because of the tropical heat, many of the unacclimated Webfoots discarded their jerseys in the second half and finished the game clad mainly in moleskins and shoulder-pads.

Both teams resorted frequently to punting. Only two passes were completed during the game, one by Oregon in 9 attempts, and the other by Florida in a single attempt. Londahl did the best punting of his career.

Oregon was within scoring distance several times, the game ending with the ball on Florida's 23-yard line, but always a break or an ineffective play of some sort interfered.

Frosh Have Good Season

Under the direction of Prink Callison in his first year on the University coaching staff, the frosh had a successful season, losing but one game of the five played, and totaling 125 points to opponents' 26.

Plenty of good varsity material was uncovered. Backfield luminaries were Jack Rushlow, fullback; Don Watts, halfback; George Currie, quarterback; Dan Sheehey, halfback; and Cliff Garnett, quarterback. Rushlow made seven touchdowns, and played a consistent defensive game. He is a powerful runner, and hits with a rip and smash as a good fullback should.

Watts is another Flying Dutchman and comes from Kitzmiller's home town in Pennsylvania. He was a positive scoring threat. Sheeley and Currie were steady workers of the type much in demand by varsity coaches.

Johnny Hare and Myron Decker were a pair of ends hard to handle. Both scored several times on passes. Bill Morgan and Sherwood Billings made an exceptional pair of Frosh tackles. No team could count on consistent yardage through their positions. They were well matched for weight and speed.

The varsity will be needing guards before long, and will find Jack Hughes and Al Stoehr ready for the positions. Bernie Hughes was regular Frosh center. He is a good passer, and played his defensive position like a veteran.

The Frosh opened the season against Chemawa. Oregon won the game with a score of 42 to 0, but the little Redskins put up plenty of opposition, at times making long drives through the line for distances of 40 and 50 yards before losing the ball. Rushlow made three touchdowns, Watts two, Garnett one, and Lewis one.

The Washington Babes came to Eugene for the next game and were defeated, 19 to 0, in a fast but ragged encounter. Oregon began scoring in the first three minutes of play when Rushlow stole the ball from the arms of Cherberg, Babe halfback, as he came through the line, and ran 80 yards to the goal. Watts scored the two other touchdowns for the Frosh, and was the individual star for the day.

The Frosh defeated Centralia Junior College, 27 to 13, making all of their points in the second quarter. Centralia took an early lead with a touchdown on a pass from Seeborg to Nesbit, and scored again in the third quarter by a short pass over the line from the 3-yard mark. Watts scored first for the Frosh with a 31-yard run on the same lateral pass play that had worked so well against Washington. Sheehey converted. Rushlow bucked over the second touchdown, and a Watts-Hare pass brought in the extra point. Len Rands carried the ball over from the five-yard line for the next tally, and the Frosh scoring ended when Decker crossed the goal with a long pass from Watts and Rushlow converted.

The Frosh divided a two-game series with the Rooks, losing the first, 6 to 7, and winning the next one, 31 to 19. The first was played in Medford, where Callison had been coach, and where seven of the Frosh players lived. The Rooks made the first touchdown on a 15-yard pass from Davis to McDonald. The Frosh did not find themselves until the last quarter, when Rands plugged over for the six points.

The Frosh took the second encounter at Corvallis after a thrilling scoring spree on the part of both teams in which were featured seven touchdowns, a field goal, a safety, and three conversions. The Rooks led, 17 to 12, at half time. The Frosh scored first from the 6-yard line on a Rushlow to Currie to Watts lateral, but the Rooks came back with a touchdown on Little's 11-yard end run and Davis' conversion. The Frosh made another 6 points when Rushlow bucked the ball over from the 2-yard line. The Rooks came back again with a touchdown on a 17-yard pass from Davis to Bowman, and a conversion by Davis, and still again when Davis kicked a field goal from the 29-yard line.

The Rooks finished their scoring in the third quarter when they blocked Currie's punt for a safety. The Frosh evened the score on Rushlow's smash for a touchdown, and in the fourth quarter had the Rooks at their mercy, scoring on a long pass to Hare, and on another of Rushlow's bucks.

Gloomy Season Brightened

Rated at the beginning of the season as the runts and underdogs of the coast competition, the Oregon basketball team made a sensational spurt from the cellar position of the northern division of the conference into a second-place threat to Washington, the champion. While the towering Huskies retained their title by dropping the Webfoots for two games in Seattle, February 28 and March 1, Washington State shoved the Oregon quint to third place by defeating Idaho two straight at Pullman. Despite the fact that next year Oregon will have a more seasoned team, compilers of dope do not give the Ducks much chance of developing a championship combination. The Webfoots will again be handicapped by lack of height and weight against the more bulky members of the northern division. This year, however, general satisfaction for the team's showing was the reigning state of mind among basketball fans on the campus and elsewhere. Wrestling three out of four games from the highly touted and really powerful Oregon State team was a feat that the Webfeet can be justly proud of having accomplished. The third game of the series was the one that the Aggies took---played at McArthur Court---with a final score of 29-28. In the fourth game, at Corvallis, the Oregon quint unleashed a slashing, driving attack that overcame a five point lead held by the Orangemen, in the last forty seconds of play. The final score was 34-33 for Oregon. However, the University of Oregon can not be allowed a clear claim to the state championship, because two games were lost to Willamette University. Therefore, notwithstanding the fact that the Oregon Staters defeated Willamette in two games, the Bearcats are eligible to mutual recognition for the state title. Reinhart will have the same group of players to work with next year as he had this season. Only two of the men, Jean Eberhart, center, and Cliff Horner, guard, have seen action on the varsity for more than one season. This pair will be eligible to play but one more year. However, other outstanding players on the squad, which includes Bill Keenan, Henry Levoff, Windsor Calkins, Steve Fletcher, Max Rubenstein, Vincent Dolp, Kermit Stevens, and Harold Olinger, will all have two more years of conference competition. The Webfeet did not play consistently brilliant basketball through the whole season. At least three of the games were lost because of ragged playing; but there was never any lack of speed, aggressiveness or action on the part of the Oregon hoopmen. The northern champions were the only aggregation in the northern division whom Oregon speed and Reinhart basketball did not defeat. Washington took all four of the games that they played with the Duck quint. In all, the Webfeet basket shooters played 27 games and came out above the .500 mark, winning 14, and losing 13. In pre-season games Oregon lost two---to Willamette and Gonzaga. These teams are not recognized as members of the conference. A comparison of total scores for the season, Oregon 869 to opponents 606, shows that the Webfoots really possessed the ability to toss baskets. A little more height and a bit more steadiness, and Bill's men may figure even more strongly in next year's pennant chase.

Beavers Beaten Three Out of Four

OREGON 37, AGGIES 29 (at Eugene). In this game at McArthur court, the Webfoots took an early lead and never allowed the Beavers to overcome it. The defeat sounded the opening note in a melody that doomed the Orangemen to fourth place in the conference competition at the end of the season. It was a rough, fast, well played game, and the Webfoots simply swamped the Staters. They were unable to cope with Oregon's bewildering passing attack; and close checking kept the Beavers under. Lanky Eberhart and fast, shifty, little Keenan played sensational basketball for Oregon. The former scored 13 points; the latter, 10.

OREGON 34, AGGIES 27 (at Corvallis). Oregon's flashing, sizzling attack dazed the valiant Aggies. They rallied after the Ducks took an early lead, and the score stood 13 all at the end of the first period. But the long drawn Oregon center, Eberhart, ran wild in the last half, and sank four field goals for Oregon, and the ship for the Beavers. He was high point man, with eleven for his scoring total. Veterans Ballard and Fagan were outstanding men for the Beavers.

AGGIES 29, OREGON 28 (at Eugene). On foreign territory, the Staters truly jerked the fruits of victory from the very teeth of the Ducks. The latter started the scoring, but the Orangemen played great basketball, and a tight first half ended, 13 to 10 for the Beavers. The last period was wild and rough. The Staters were lagging, despite furious effort, five minutes before the end. With a ten-point lead to overcome, they called time out, and then came back to nose the Ducks out by one point.

OREGON 34, AGGIES 33 (at Corvallis). A last minute rally turned the tables on the Beavers in this game. They led the scoring through most of the contest, and held the edge at half time, 19 to 13. With less than a minute to go in the last period, and the count 33 to 28 against them, the Ducks called time out; while the State College rooters stamped on the bleacher seats, and bellowed gleefully. Oregon went back into the game then, and spurted to win in the last half minute, with field goals tossed by Eberhart, Dolp, and Rubenstein. Taking this game cinched the state title for Oregon.

Huskies Take Four

WASHINGTON 37, OREGON 23, (at Eugene). This game was ragged, rough, and never exciting. The Webfeet took an early lead and then faltered. With the score five to nothing against them, the Huskies started piling up points. The first half ended 23 to 12 for Washington. In the last period, Oregon played erratically, and the lanky Hal McClary, Husky center, tossed field goals.

WASHINGTON 32, OREGON 31, (at Eugene). In this game, the Webfoot second string, playing the last ten minutes, scored 12 points against the veteran Huskies, but could not quite cut the lead. Oregon couldn't get the tip-off, but fought a fine uphill battle against the champions.

WASHINGTON 32, OREGON 25, (at Seattle). In this game the Huskies proved their right to retain the Northwest basketball championship. Fast furious play and close checking held the score to 16-14 for Washington at half time. Then with the count 22-20 against them, the Huskies unwrapped and started a drive that gave them a winning margin.

WASHINGTON 38, OREGON 31 (at Seattle). Led by two veterans, McClary and Jaloff, the Huskies grabbed an early lead but lost it when Stevens and Eberhart tied up the count for seven all. Oregon forged ahead when Fletcher sank a long one, but the Huskies retaliated with a barrage of field goals. Oregon rallied in the closing minutes, but four field goals by Olinger were not enough to cut the lead.

Cougars Break Even

WASHINGTON STATE 32, OREGON 30, (at Eugene). Oregon fought hard to cut down the Cougar lead, but a desperate rally fell just two points shy of tying the score. Oregon played raggedly and missed many easy cripple shots. End slow, big Cougar center, was a tower of strength for his team. Levoff, Webfoot guard, scored 10 points.

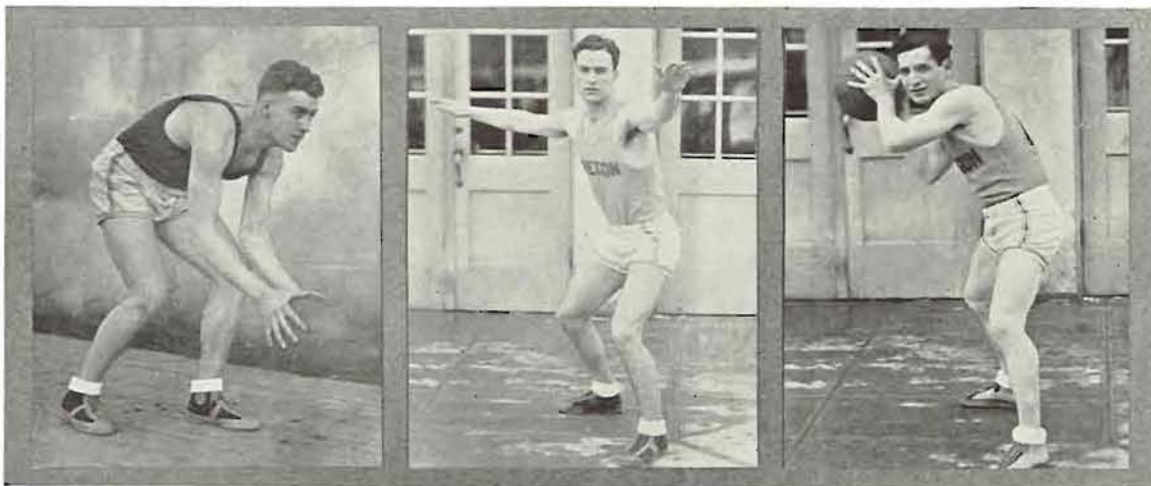

COUGARS 32, WEBFOOTS 34 (at Eugene). Midget Keenan flashed in a fast game that needed five minutes overtime to play off a tie score of 30 all. At half time the Cougars led, 18-13. Oregon forged to the front, however, soon after the last period opened, 19-18. The Ducks led the game after that by one or two points till Luft, Cougar forward, tied things up at the end. Keenan and Clalkins scored field goals for Oregon in the over-time period.

W. S. C. 31, OREGON 28 (at Pullman). In a game that stood 17-10 for the Cougars at half time, the Webfoot team played nervous, erratic basketball, and missed seven three throws. Stevens, regular guard for Oregon, scored 10 points, playing as forward.

COUGARS 21, OREGON 35. In the second game at Pullman, the Webfoots ruined W. S. C. Hopes for the Northwest hoop title. After an early 7-7 tie, the Oregonians held the lead throughout. Eberhart got the tip-off consistently. Stevens, as forward, carried the bulk of the Oregon attack.

Vandals Win Once

IDAHO 37, OREGON 40 (at Eugene). The first half looked hopeless for Idaho. The spectators ate peanuts and booed. At half time the score stood 22 to 11 for the Webfoots. But the Vandals came back with a rush in the last period, and the count stood 37-36 against the Ducks with fifty second to go. Then Dolp sank two free throws for Oregon, and Calkins shot a field goal, as the game ended.

IDAHO 41, OREGON 34 (at Eugene). The Vandals took an early lead and never relinquished it. Stowell, Idaho forward, scored 18 points, while Keenan, Duck forward, counted for 15. Homer Dickson, huge Webfoot javelin heaver, played a good game for Oregon at center after Eberhart was taken out.

IDAHO 30, OREGON 33 (at Moscow). In this game, aided by Billy Keenan's stellar playing, and using a fast accurate passing attack, the Webfoots moved into third place in the Northwest division. The Vandals staged several desperate rallies in the last period, but could not overcome the Webfoot lead.

IDAHO 35, OREGON 40 (at Moscow). The Oregon quint spurred in the last period and laid defeat at the door of the fighting Vandals. Eberhart led the scoring with 12 points. Stowell and McMillin, Vandal forwards, shared a total of 22 points. Dolph, Webfoot guard, Horner as forward, Hughes, guard, and Keenan, forward, all played excellent basketball for Oregon.

The Frosh Season

The freshman basketball team hung up an enviable record under the tutelage of Prink Callison, new coach from Medford high school. The yearlings took three out of four from the Rooks and four straight from Medford high, Salem high, Chemawa Indian school, and Albany college. The final game of the season, with the Rooks at McArthur court, was dropped by the Frosh after a previously unbroken string of victories.

The ex-Pearpicker mentor went to work in earnest, and with the assistance of Scott Milligan, soon had a quintet organized that displayed a smooth, fast-breaking attack with a satisfactory defensive system as well. The checking of Bill Morgan, heavyweight guard from Medford high, was especially consistent.

Cliff Garnet, Morgan's former team-mate, held down the other guard position.

The most notable player on the team in view of speed and shooting ability was Clarence James, ex-Tillamook prepper. Paired with the speedy James at forward was Don Siegmund, whose alertness and aggressive spirit won him a place on the team. Bill Bowerman alternated with Siegmund. Charles Roberts had the edge on the center position which was hotly disputed by George Beechler. Substitutes who broke into nearly every game were Homer Stahl, Hughie Evans, Roy Shaneman, George Robertson, Bob Near, Art Minney, and Milt Thompson.

TRACK

Bill Hayward

Track Has Comeback

With a team made up largely of sophomores, Coach Bill Hayward was able to force a come-back for Oregon track last spring. The effects of the lean years since the Coast championship team of 1924 have definitely disappeared, and from the 1929 season record, Webfoot track is once again on its traditionally high plane.

Twice O. S. C. was defeated in dual meets. Oregon started the season by winning five out of nine first places in a relay meet held in Corvallis, and later swamped the Aggies in a regular track meet with a score of 93 to 38.

In a dual meet with the Huskies, who placed second in the national championship meet at Chicago, Oregon did not do even so well as O. S. C. Washington defeated Oregon, 84 to 49, and O. S. C., 79 to 52. It was in the Washington meet that Ed Moeller, of Oregon, unofficially set a new world's discus record with a throw of 160 feet 1 inch.

At the Washington relay carnival in Seattle, which was won by W. S. C., Oregon took third place. Washington was second.

The Northwest season ended with the conference meet in Eugene. Washington won with a comfortable margin, making 63 points. Oregon was second with 38, W. S. C. third with 33, O. S. C. fourth with 25½, Idaho fifth with 5, and Montana sixth with 1½.

Ed Moeller, Ralph Hill, a promising sophomore miler, and Claire McKennon, Northwest champion 440 man, brought Oregon into a tie with Indiana for twelfth place in the national meet at Chicago last June. Eighty-five schools were entered, but only forty-six of them were able to break into the scoring.

Ralph Hill's fourth place in the mile, and Ed Moeller's second place in the discus accounted for the 12 points that Oregon won. Moeller and McKennon met with touch luck in the preliminaries. McKennon drew the fastest heat and was barely nosed out of a 48.3 quarter mile, while Moeller fouled technically by a quarter of an inch on a record-breaking throw of 160 feet 10 inches.

But four lettermen were lost to the track team through graduation in 1929. Captain George Stager, who has won three stripes, was one of Hayward's most reliable point winners. Stager did not reach his top form in the discus this season until late, but in the two previous years he was credited with being at times the best discus man in the Northwest. In 1928 he was the only Webfoot to win a first place in the conference meet held at Mis-soula.

Back Row: Bill Hayward, Ed Siegmund, Ralph Hill, Ed Moeller, Homer Dickson, Hal Hildreth, Bill Prendergast, Johnny Kier, Burr Abner, manager.
 Seated: Harold Kelley.

Ed Jensen is another man who will be greatly missed. He has run in the distance events all four years at school, and usually picked up valuable points against the stiffest competition. In most meets he ran in a least two events, which included the mile, the two-mile, or the half mile runs.

Bill Crawford had the misfortune this year to sprain his ankle during the O. S. C. meet, and as a result did not win his third stripe. His other two varsity years were a success. Crawford came to school as a stellar high jumper, but Bill Hayward needed a hurdler, and he made one out of Crawford. This division of work cut a couple of inches from his high jumping, but it did enable him to capture a lot of points that would otherwise have gone to opponents.

Bill Prendergast worked his way to a top notch sprinter during his three years as a sprinter and 440 man. Prendergast acquired a lot of power from his 440 work, and was for that reason one of the most consistent sprinters. He was always able to do the 100 in close to 10 seconds under the severest conditions. The 220 was his best event, however, and he usually placed well up against the field.

The nucleus of next year's team will be Tyrell Lowry, sprints; Ed Siegmund, hurdles; Ed Moeller, weights; Ralph Hill and Clarence Hill, distances; Bob Robinson, pole vault; Homer Dickson, weights; Bob Everts, high jump; Claire McKennon, 440; Harold Kelley hurdles; Orville Bredthauer, broad jump; Johnny Kier, broad jump; and Don Maultby, pole vault.

Oregon State Wins Cross Country

Although the Oregon State cross country team defeated Oregon on points in the one meet of the season, which was held as a preliminary to the homecoming football game in Eugene, the Oregon harriers managed to capture four out of the first five places. The score was 90 to 120 for the Aggies.

Ralph Hill, star distance man on the track team, was first in the race by nearly a quarter of a mile. He finished so far ahead at the end of the two and a half mile grind, in fact, that many of the spectators did not notice him and thought that the race for first was between Leonard Steele and a Stater. Steele took second place after a thrilling finish in which he gained more than 25 yards on his opponent. Pat Beal was an easy fourth, and Ed Jensen managed to pull in fifth, but the other Webfoots were not fortunate enough to break into the first half of the 20-man field.

Coach Hayward was short of distance men, and pressed into service for the meet, several quarter-milers and sophomores. As it was the meet provided thrills for the huge crowd gathered for the homecoming football game with Oregon State.

The Freshman Team

Few Outstanding Frosh.

The 1929 Frosh team was by far the weakest that Oregon has had in many years. There were several good men on the squad, but for no one event was there enough material to gather the all-important points in the second and third places.

Frosh who showed themselves to be the most likely candidates for varsity were Dick Jennings, half-mile; Virgil Scheiber, sprints; Paul Bale, sprints; Hubert Allen, broad jump, high jump, and hurdles; Gilbert French, weights and high jump; Roy Brown, 440; Bill Minsinger, sprints and broad jump; Tom Johnson, 440; Cliff Beckett, mile; Fred Bechill, mile; Bill Kuykendall, sprints; Joe Hughes, 400; and Carl Berger, low hurdles.

The Frosh lost a relay meet and a track meet to the Rooks. A summary of the track meet which the Rooks won, 74  $\frac{2}{3}$  to 47  $\frac{1}{3}$ , is as follows:

100-Yard Dash—Scheiber, Frosh, first; Gordon, Rooks, second; Bale, Frosh, third. Time, :10.4.

Shot Put—Bergerson, Rooks, first; Remley, Rooks, second; Cox, Rooks, third. Distance, 41:5.

Pole Vault—Forfeited to Rooks.

Mile Run—Cantine, Rooks, first; Wilson, Rooks, second; Beckett, Frosh, third. Time, 4:44.

440-Yard Run—Ruff, Frosh, first; Mays, Rooks, second; Lillie, Rooks, third. Time, :54.

High Hurdles—Allen, Frosh, first; Prentiss, Rooks, second; Penland, Frosh, third. Time, :16.8.

220-Yard Dash—Gordon, Rooks, first; Bale, Frosh, second; Kirk, Rooks, third. Time, :22.8.

880-Yard Run—Jennings, Frosh, first; Renner, Rooks, second; Weatherspoon, Rooks, third. Time, 2:5.8.

220-Yard Low Hurdles—Prentiss, Rooks, first; Penland, Frosh, second; Parker, Rooks, third. Time, :26.4.

Discus—Kretzmeier, Rooks, first; Covington, Frosh, second; Buzan, Frosh, third. Distance, 115:3.

Javelin—Carlson, Rooks, first; Edwards, Frosh, second; French, Frosh, third. Distance, 167.2.

Broad Jump—Rodman, Rooks, first; Scheiber, Frosh, second; Mensinger, Frosh, third. Distance, 21:1 $\frac{1}{4}$ .

High Jump—Allen, Frosh, first; Covington, Frosh, and Lyman and Remley, Rooks tied. Height, 5:9.

Relay—Won by Rooks. (Taylor, Duff, Lillie, May.)

The Baseball Season

Finishing with a record of eight games won and eight lost, the Oregon baseball team completed a rather disappointing conference season in a tie with O. S. C. for third place. The sixteen-game schedule, all with major colleges in the Northwest, was one of the most extensive ever played by an Oregon nine.

Prospects seemed bright for another conference championship in baseball when thirteen lettermen answered the call that Bill Reinhart, coach, sent out in the spring. Bill Baker, two-year veteran pitcher, and Reynold MacDonald, standby of the previous year, were on hand to form the nucleus of the pitching staff with Curly Fuller, Art Schoeni, and Dave Bloom rounding it out. The slugging trio, Dave Epps, Ray Edwards, and Cotter Gould were back in the outfield, together with Kramer Barnes from the frosh nine. Barnes had an exceptionally good year, showing plenty of speed, a strong throwing arm, and a good eye at the plate. He led the Webfoot regulars in batting with an average of .325. The first base job was divided between Les Johnson and Carl Nelson, both experienced players. Ken Robie took care of the shortstop position, while Franny Andrews and Al Hilgers took turns holding down second. Don McCormick, of home run fame, and Harold Olinger, just up from a good season with the frosh, guarder the hot corner. Besides being Oregon's star infielder, Ken Robie was the premier shortstop of the conference. Bill Reinhart shifted Gordon Ridings behind the bat to help out Ira Woodie, both men playing their last year.

Constant rain during the training period held back the conditioning of the team, and all pre-season games were called off because of the adverse weather with the exception of the tilt with Meiji University of Japan, which was taken by the Japanese boys, 1 to 0. Both teams played sparkling ball, but the island nine, in the midst of an extensive American tour, proved too clever and wide-awake for the Webfoots.

Opening the conference season against Oregon State, the Webfoot nine divided a two-game series. Then Oregon met the three big northern schools in successive series on Reinhart field. First Idaho invaded Eugene and was turned back with two defeats. Washington State followed the Vandals and won both games. As Oregon broke even with the University of Washington Huskies next, they began their road trip with a standing of .500. In the return series the Webfoots split even at Seattle, lost both to the Cougars at Pullman, and split again at Moscow against the Vandals. Returning home, they wound up the year efficiently with two decisive victories over Oregon State. Although Oregon had the Indian sign on Idaho and Oregon State, it was jovial Buck Bailey and his wheat-fed lads from Pullman that put the Webfoots out of the running. The conference championship went to Washington when their final game with Idaho was rained out, the Cougars' chances for a tie floating away in the downpour.

Oregon 3, Oregon State 4

The opening game of the conference season was a pitcher's battle between Reynold MacDonald, hurling for the Webfoots, and Harvey Boultinghouse, star Aggie right-hander. With two men out in the sixth MacDonald blew up, and the Aggies scored three runs to cinch the game. Ray Edwards, Oregon center fielder, knocked a home run with Barnes on base.

The Freshman Squad

Frosh Have Big Season

By winning ten games out of eleven, the Frosh baseball men stole the show from the varsity, whose in and out play gave them no better than an even break. With Spike Leslie as coach the yearlings took three out of four from the Oregon Rooks and five successive battles with high school nines as well as a double-header with Southern Oregon Normal School at Ashland. High schools falling before the Freshman onslaught were Salem twice, Eugene twice, and Marcola once.

During the training period the squad was hit hard by the loss of Kenneth Scales, considered their best pitcher, who broke his leg sliding into second during practice. Ed Charles and Hal Waffle stepped into mound prominence, however, and pitched consistent ball throughout the season.

Charles Hoag held down the catching position skillfully, and together with several of his mates should bolster the varsity nine this season. Brian Mimnaugh led the squad in hitting with an average of .411. Hoag was right behind with .406. Mimnaugh and Kermit Stevens, shortstop, formed an especially effective keystone combination, while Clyde Kirshner held down first base. The third base job was divided between Johnny Londahl and Orville Garrett, both performing creditably. Londahl, originally a catcher, was shifted to the infield as Spike Leslie discovered an able assistant to Hoag in Amos Lawrence. Larry Jackson and Slug Palmer came through with heavy stick work in the outfield, and although not quite such a fence-buster, Harry Malatore added a great deal to the team by his fleetness and fly-gathering ability.

Edward F. Abercrombie

Tennis Reaches New Height at Oregon

Edward F. Abercrombie has made a name for himself, for it was he who coached "Oregon's greatest tennis team," and was largely responsible for its success. Abby in five years built tennis at Oregon from a minor sport of very little importance to a team that in the last season won the championship of the Pacific Coast, and tied with the University of Texas for the team championship of the United States, the first time an Oregon team in any sport has had such a justifiable claim on a national title. Abby will not be with us this year, and it is to be regretted, for Oregon has lost a fine coach. Steve Smith has been appointed to take his place, and with the wealth of material on hand, should turn out a team that will equal that of last year.

Led by four of the greatest tennis players Oregon ever produced, Bradshaw Harrison, Sherman Lockwood, Henry Neer, and Stanley Almquist, Oregon made a phenomenal showing that ranks foremost in the athletic achievements of Oregon. The Web-footers took the northern crown of the Pacific Coast Conference without losing a match, defeating the University of Washington 6 to 0, and Oregon State 7 to 0, which makes the second consecutive year this feat has been accomplished. As a result of these victories Oregon gained the right to meet Stanford, winner of southern division honors, for the coast championship. This match, which was held at Palo Alto, was the hardest yet encountered, and brought into the light more than ever the feud between Stanford and Oregon for athletic supremacy. After a strenuous fight which was featured by Neer's victory over Easton, and the defeat of Doeg and Hall, nationally ranked players, by Harrison and Lockwood in doubles, the Lemon and Green emerged victorious, giving Oregon her first Pacific Coast conference tennis title. In the individual championships of coast conference schools, Bradshaw Harrison and Sherman Lockwood took the doubles title, and Harrison was runner up in the singles, being defeated by Doeg of Stanford.

Not satisfied, Oregon headed East in quest of further laurels. The climax of the season was the meet with the University of Texas for the team championship of the United States. Texas had previously met and defeated all of the foremost schools of the East and Midwest, and as Oregon had done likewise on the coast the contest brought together two of the greatest net teams of the country. The match, which was played under a hot Texas sun, ended in a tie, giving Oregon her first claim to a national title. The outstanding event of the match was the victory of Bradshaw Harrison over Berkeley Bell, one of the leading tennis players of the country. This accomplishment gave the Oregon net man wide publicity, which reflected upon the rest of the team as well.

All of the Oregon players entered the Texas State Tournament, Harrison going to the semi-finals before being eliminated by Bell, whom he had previously defeated in the match with the University of Texas, and Lockwood being defeated by La Coste in the quarter-finals. In doubles Harrison and Lockwood went as far as the semifinals, where they were defeated by Bell and White. From Texas the Webfooters journeyed to Baltimore to take part in the Maryland State Tournament. Here Harrison went to the finals, being defeated by Bell again in four close sets, Lockwood reached the semi-finals, but was defeated by Barnes, and Harrison and Lockwood went to the finals in doubles. In the Delaware tournament the Oregon net team was recognized by seeing Harrison and Lockwood in doubles. The National Intercollegiate matches were next, and were held at Haverford, Pa. The tournament attracted the leading college players of the country. Harrison was seeded number 8 in the singles, but lost to Cram of Vanderbilt University in one of the early rounds. Neer and Almquist went to the fourth round in doubles, and following completion of the tournament were ranked number five among the leading doubles combinations represented. Lockwood gained distinction by winning the consolation tournament out of a classy field of sixty leading players. Following these matches, the team branched out, the various members of the team going their own way, seeking honors in the big tournaments of the East. Probably the highlights of the eastern trip was the winning of the singles title in the Atlantic States Tournament by Harrison. This took place at Ocean City, and attracted a number of prominent players. This tournament concluded the season.

Freshman Tennis

The Freshman team, as did the Varsity, enjoyed a very successful season, winning all the meets played, which included Salem High School, Washington Frosh, Reed College, and Oregon State Rooks. The following men took part in the matches: Jack Rhine, Don Ragen, Art Potwin, Carl Gerlinger, Del Thom, and Tom White. Below are the scores of the teams met.

The Swimming Team

Swimming Season Cut Short

The varsity swimming and water polo teams had but three meets this year, and were without a regular coach, but they did acquire a bit of a reputation. The trite saying of "all dressed up and no place to go" describes exactly the swimming situation. Idaho, W. S. C., British Columbia, and California were all at times on the tentative schedule, but because, of financial difficulties, and the lack of interest by Oregon State Agricultural College, which refused to help by giving some of these teams guarantees on their own schedule, all had to be cancelled.

The water polo team defeated Multnomah 3 to 1, O. S. C. 4 to 3, and O. S. C. again 5 to 4, in an overtime game. John Anderson, Art Hanson, Bill McNabb, Bob Bishop, Al Edwards, Paul Lafferty, and Rosser Atkinson were the mainstays of the polo squad.

The first O. S. C. meet ended with a score of 42 to 42, but the Beavers claimed the victory because they won five out of the nine first places. The Staters' elation was short lived, however, since the Ducks settled the state championship by walloping them 51 to 33 a couple of weeks later in the Corvallis tank. Two meets were scheduled with Multnomah, but only one took place, and the Webfoots won that 36 to 30.

John Anderson, captain and coach, won all six of the races he entered, and was high man for the season with 22 conference points to his credit. Bill McNabb, back stroke and breast stroke, made 15 points, Art Hanson, sprints, 10, Al Edwards, sprints, 8, Chuck Silverman, distances, 6, Len Thompson, diver, 6, Steve Fletcher, breast stroke, 5, Charles Foster, distances, 4, Joe Brown, diver, 2 and Palmer McKim, distances, 2.

The Frosh Squad

Ducklings Show Promise

The Frosh were a bit inferior to the Rooks this year, but should furnish some valuable varsity material, particularly in Needham, sprints; Travis, breast stroke; Spain, back stroke, and Pease and Calandra, dives.

The Rooks won the opening meet 41 to 25, but the Frosh came back losing the second by only 32 to 34. The Frosh took two meets from Salem high school by wide margins, taking all but one first in each meet.

Frosh 25, Rooks 41

Palmberg, Heitkemper, Moe, Staples, Will

The Golf Team

Gathering under its wing both the Northwest championship and the Pacific Coast conference championship, the Oregon golf team rose to new victorious heights last season. With Don Moe, who won the western amateur crown last summer, and George Will, prominent northwest golfer, as number one and two men, respectively, Oregon's team was the strongest ever developed here and was on a par with any other college golf team in the country. The links quintet was rounded out with Bill Palmberg, Francis Heitkemper and Ike Staples.

Oregon State was met in a home-and-home series and decisively defeated in both matches. Then the University of Washington was conquered with the feature match of the day being the battle between Don Moe and Chunk Hunter, leading Washington amateur. Moe won, enabling the Webfoots to gain a 3 to 2 margin over the Huskie divot diggers. That victory cinched the Northwest championship for Oregon.

A two-man team, composed of Don Moe and George Will, entered the Pacific Coast conference tournament at the Seattle Golf club. Both Moe and Will played sparkling golf to carry away the trophy. Washington came in second while Stanford, the favorite, was relegated to third place. Moe was individual medal champion as well, completing the 72-hole in 288 strokes. Will made the rounds in 316. Near the close of the year, a telegraphic match, the first of its kind ever attempted on the Coast, was played with Harvard. Although the score was close, Oregon conquered the Crimson.

Don Moe was recently chosen a member of the Walker cup team to represent the United States in its invasion of England in quest of the Walker cup this spring. This is the highest national honor that can be accorded an amateur golfer. He has also been ranked fifth in national amateur rating.

Not to be outdone by the varsity, the Freshman Golf team displayed their ability to poke the little white pill far and straight by swamping the Rooks twice, both times by 12½ to 2½ scores. The single star of the team was Vincent Dolp, who is recognized as one of the leading young golfers of the nation. Besides Dolp, the team consisted of George Kotchik, Treve Jones, Harrison Kincaid, and Bob Christensen.

Pasion, Reymers, Hughes, Knox

Boxing Gains Popularity

The boxing team, although it entered no competition with other schools, made steady progress from the beginning of the season until the end. Under the coaching of Bob Knox several new men who have had no previous experience looked like coming champions at the end of the training period. The intramural tournament also showed up some new talent which Knox has taken under his wing to develop. Knox is the only man of the 1929 team who was back for this season, and he was given the task of teaching the team aspirants the art of self defense in the absence of the former coach, Herman Gawer.

Three men from the University of Oregon entered the Pacific Coast amateur boxing tournament, held at Portland, February 22 and March 1. Most of the leading amateur boxers on the Coast participated in the tourney. Bob Knox went to the semi-finals in the welterweight division before losing a decision, thus establishing himself among the title contenders of amateur welterweights. Although Knox is perhaps the fastest and cleverest boxer on the team, Mahr Reymers, lightweight, showed plenty of punch and ability to take care of himself in the ring. Reymers was declared ineligible for the Coast amateur meet. Ben Pasion, flashy Filipino, was knocked out in the second bout of the tournament. Pasion, a flyweight, is fast and shifty, but he had the misfortune to run into a haymaker from his opponent's fist.

Bernie Hughes, frosh football center, is the most promising heavyweight in school, and he should provide tough opposition for opposing heavyweights during the next three years.

This was the second year that an attempt was made to revive boxing at the University, and a considerable amount of interest was accorded the sport, both by the physical education department and the students at large. Attendance at the intramural bouts and team tryouts was too great for the small boxing room to accommodate, and in a year or so, due to popularity, the sport should find itself on a standardized basis with letters being awarded to contestants.

The Managerial System

The Webfoot system of managers is proving exceptionally efficient, and the duties of these busy men are enlarging every year. At the head of the organization is the senior athletic manager, and directly under him are the senior varsity managers, one for each sport. Just below the senior varsity managers are the junior varsity managers. Sophomore managers are also chosen to handle the freshman sports. Each of the aspirants work up to the next step higher.

Russell Baker is senior athletic manager and is proving himself capable in that role. Golf was added to the list of sports to be handled by managers this year, increasing the number to eight. Another duty added to the managers' burden is acting as a subsidiary of the Greater Oregon committee. Their task is to encourage the enrollment of desirable students at Oregon and to look after them before they become accustomed to the Webfoot campus. Other duties of the managers are to supervise the handling of A. S. U. O. property, team equipment, etc., to see that the fields are kept in good condition, and to see that the games are handled efficiently.

The varsity managers' club is composed of all senior and junior managers and is an active and business-like organization, holding regular meetings and assisting individual managers with their work.

Intramural Sports

Intramural athletics have been steadily growing in popularity, and the past season saw rapid strides made in the addition of new sports to the schedule and in the number participating. Also, the quality of playing was better than usual. Basketball was the most popular with twenty-nine teams entering the tournament, composing seven leagues. The league leaders met at the end of the preliminary races in an elimination contest which was won by Delta Tau Delta, who defeated Delta Epsilon in the finals.

Water polo was added to the intramural program in two forms. A handball league was organized, the teams playing under the orthodox water polo rules; and a softball league was likewise formed, this method of play being a new invention popularly known as intercollegiate water polo. The participants showed a great deal of adaptability to this splashing sport, and water polo has definitely established itself in the Oregon intramural sport realm.

With Harry Elliott supervising wrestling and Bob Knox coaching the boxers, both of these sports, once almost defunct at Oregon, made progress toward a rejuvenation in popularity during the winter term. Elliott uncovered some material through the wrestling tournament with which he hopes to bolster his varsity squad.

Intramural Champions

The Wrestling Team

Summary of Sports Year

During the spring and fall of 1929 and the winter of 1930 the Webfoot varsity teams won eight state championships from Oregon State, won two Coast conference championships and tied for a third. The only event lost to the Beavers was a cross country race, in which Duck runners placed first and second, but lost on points.

Don Moe and George Will won the Coast conference two-man team golf title, and Don Moe won the individual honors.

The 1929 tennis team, under Ed Abercrombie, and made up of Bradshaw Harrison, Sherman Lockwood, Henry Neer, and Stanley Almquist won the Pacific Coast conference championship from Stanford after beating Washington and Oregon State in the North. Oregon's four-man team played a 3 to 3 tie with Texas University for the national intercollegiate championship.

Coach John J. McEwan's football men finished the conference season in a tie with U. S. C., Stanford, and California for the Coast title, all four teams losing one game. Oregon won seven out of the eight games played.

The baseball team fell into a slump at the start of the 16-game season from which it did not recover until too late, and finished near the cellar. Oregon State, however, found that Billy Reinhart's men were not at home to them. Oregon beat them in three out of four games.

Track had been on a decline for several years, but it took new life in 1929. The Webfoots beat the Aggies in a dual relay meet, and massacred them in a dual track meet with a score of 93 to 38.

Oregon took second place in the Northwest conference meet, and tied for twelfth place in the national meet. During the season Ed Moeller broke the world discus record.

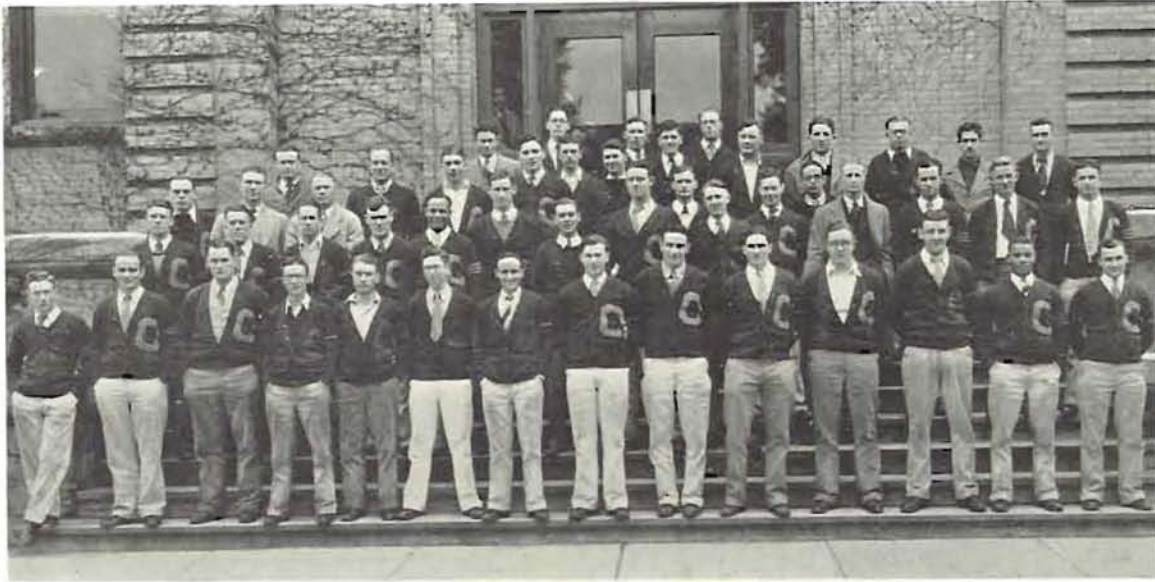

The basketball team was made up mostly of sophomores and was not conceded much of a chance. After a slow start, however, Billy Reinhart forced his team from the bottom of the Northwest list into third place. The Ducks won three games from Oregon State and dropped a fourth by a one-point margin.

The swimming and water polo teams were without a regular coach. Oregon tied with O. S. C. in the first, but came back with a 51 to 33 win over the Beavers a couple of weeks later. The water polo team beat the Aggies twice.

Boxing and wrestling were not official sports, but were more popular this year than for some time. It is believed that before long one or both of these sports will be put on a recognized basis.

Frosh teams were exceptionally promising. Football and basketball teams under Prink Callison, each lost but one game of their schedules, and defeated every opponent at least once by considerable margins. The Frosh baseball team of Coach Spike Leslie, lost but one game, and have graduated some valuable players into varsity ranks. The Frosh track team was weaker than usual, but did have a few good men on its roll. The same was true of the Frosh swimming and water polo teams. The Frosh golf team went through the season undefeated.

New Men's Dormitory

The Men's Dormitory, now in the second year on the University of Oregon campus, is structurally a most imposing building, constructed to house men. It consists of six individual units, Alpha, Gamma, Omega, Sherry Ross, Sigma, and Zeta, each having its own president and social organization. Though housed in the same large building, these units are comparatively separate, each having its individual lounging room and dining rooms, which can be closed off from the main dining room.

It furnishes a pleasant and homelike atmosphere in which the men may entertain at will, and also secures for them many invaluable contacts and friendships, without which college life would be empty.

The Men's Dormitory also offers splendid facilities for serving large numbers such as visit the campus at such times as Homecoming, Dad's Day, and at other periods throughout the year. By opening all the smaller rooms into one large dining room, almost numberless persons may be served easily and may enjoy any program or speech which is being given.

*"From the mountains falls the gloaming,
To the skies the stars are homing
Looking down at Oregon;
While soft the ripples run,
While canoes are softly gliding
Through the shadows stealing, hiding,
Float the songs from the old millrace,
Songs of our Oregon . . . . ."*

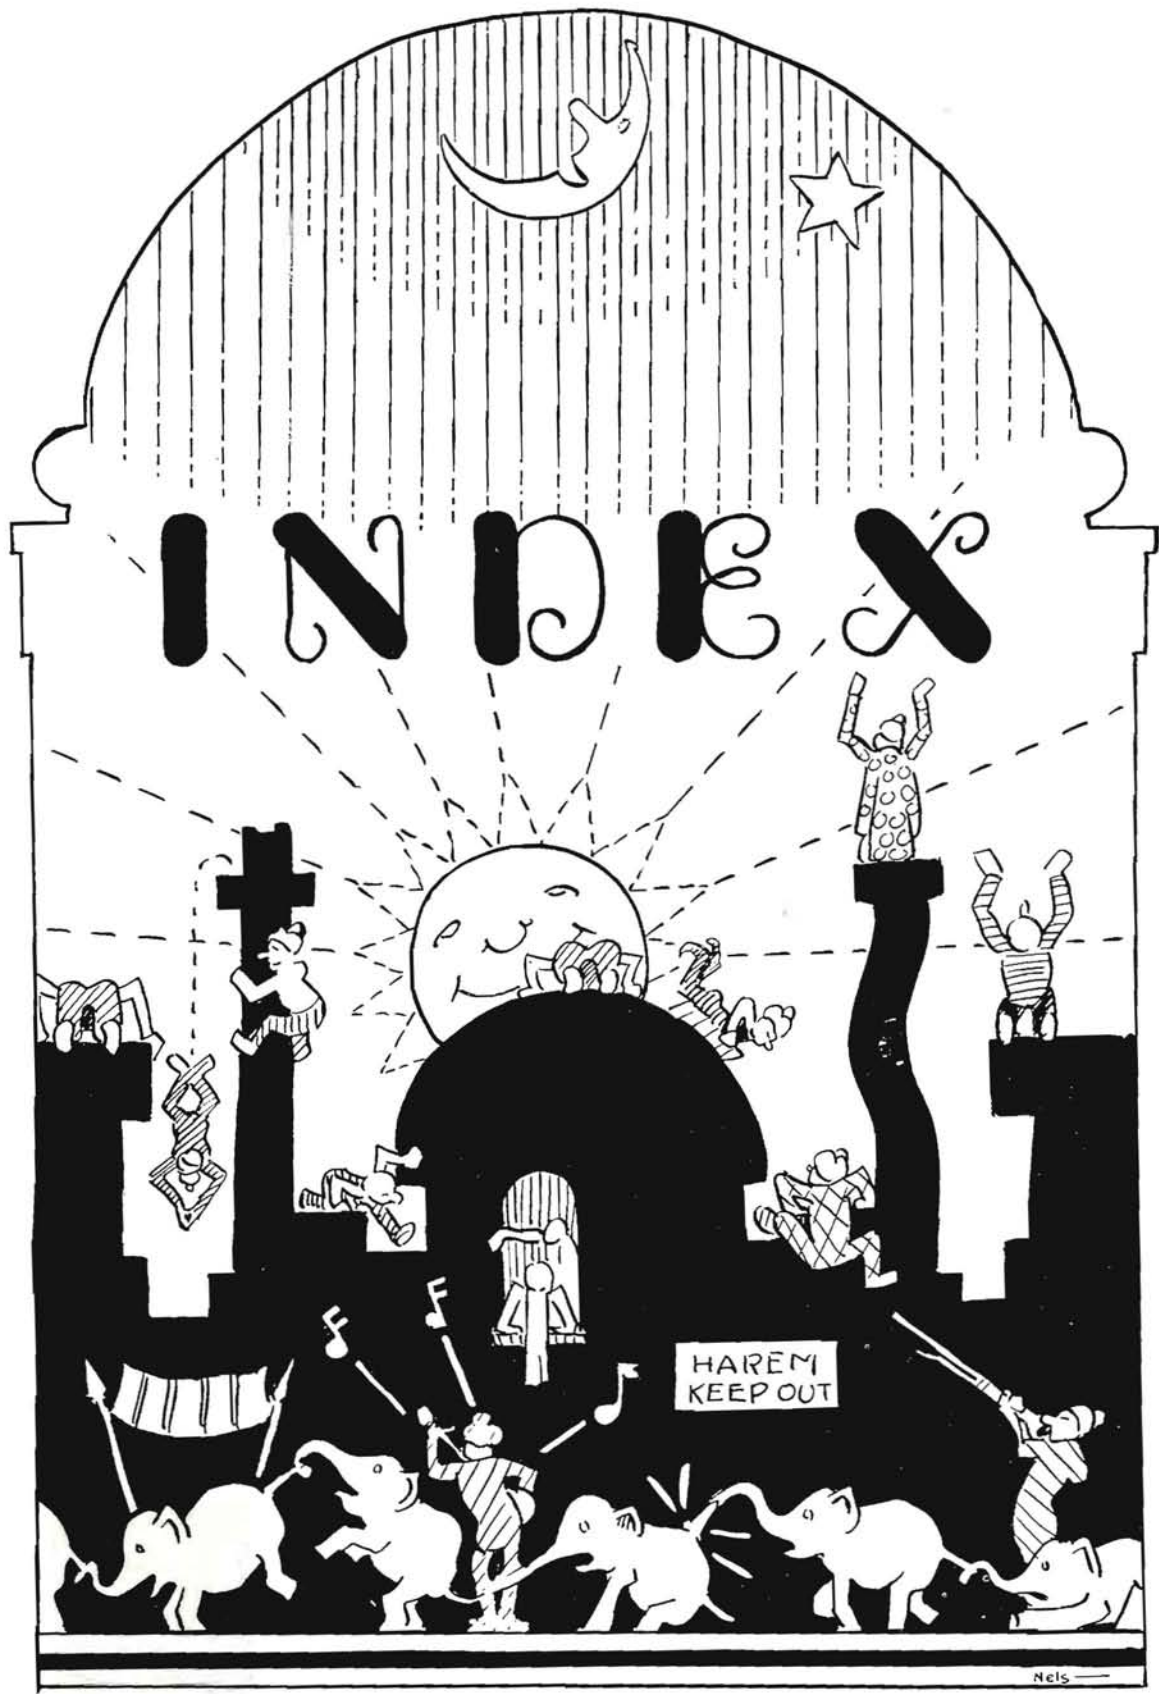

*"Oh would that Fortune met me by the way,
That changing Time would grant me slow delay,
And when the reins fell from the hands of youth
That Age might prove the stirrup for my stay."*
