FOREWORD

When the University of Oregon was founded in the same year that Huxley opened John Hopkins, the clipper ship carried the wheat from Oregon farms and the Inland empire.

When our school came of age, steamboats had largely replaced the old clippers; and now the great oil-burners sail from Portland. Those rapid changes in sea transport have seen equally great advance in this University. We have tried in this yearbook to mirror the changes of this year and perhaps to show something of the permanent values underlying rapid change.

May we keep something of the swift grace and beauty of the clipper ship along with the strength of the machine age. And may we look off towards Hawaii and China with hope, even in a troubled year.

THE CAMPUS

of the University of Oregon has seen a great number of changes with the passage of time. Sixty-seven years ago near the present site of Villard Hall stood the log cabin of Hilyard Shaw, agent of the Hudsons' Bay Co.

The act of Congress, February 14, 1859, admitting Oregon to the Union, provided for a State University by the grant of 72 sections of land. The bill creating the University of Oregon passed the legislature in October, 1872. Since then a liberal educational policy has made possible the building of a great State University. The Oregana artist expresses in line etching some of the beauty of our buildings.

THE LAST of the great fleet of American sailing ships has passed over the horizon forever. One of the most famous of these full rigged vessels was the Tusitala. Once famous in the Australian wool trade under the name of Ivergulas, the Tusitala was sold to a group of American enthusiasts which included Christopher Morley, famous writer. It was later purchased by James A. Farrell, president of the United States steel corporation, and after several voyages was commissioned as a training ship.

ADMINISTRATION

Executives

Governor Meier

Julius L. Meier Governor of Oregon

Julius L. Meier is the third native son of Oregon and the first native son of Portland to be elected Governor. This honor was bestowed upon him in November, 1930, and on January 12, 1931, he assumed the duties of the chief executive.

His decision to go into politics was forced on him when a mass meeting of 5,000 voters in Portland insisted that he be the man to carry the banner of George W. Joseph, whose death occurred a short time after he won the Republican nomination for Governor. The mass meeting was called after a Republican convention in Portland declined to adopt the Joseph platform and principles.

Governor Meier was born in Portland, Oregon, on Thursday, December 31, 1874, and that city has always been his home. The young man was educated in the public schools of Portland and later graduated from the University of Oregon in the class of 1895 with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. For a time he practiced law in Portland in partnership with the late George W. Joseph. On his father's death, Julius L. Meier took up the duties of vice-president and general manager of Meier and Frank's, the department store founded by his father in 1857.

In addition to his duties in the store he worked assiduously for state-wide progress and prosperity. He has long been called the father of the Columbia Highway. In 1912 he called a meeting of the taxpayers of four counties to discuss the plan of building what has now become the most famous road in America. He worked hard for its completion and was for years president of the Columbia River Highway Association. Along its scenic route he built his beautiful country home, "Menucha."

Governor Meier has been active in many other plans for state development. He was one of Oregon's commissioners to the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, a leader in liberty loan drives, Northwest regional director of the Council of Defense, and was active in the work to restore France's devastated areas. He is much interested in aviation and has taken the lead in securing air meets and races for Portland.

On December 25, 1901, Mr. Meier married Miss Grace Rose Mayer of Portland. Their children are: Jean (Mrs. Joseph Ehrman, Jr.), Elsa (Mrs. Frederick Ganz), and Julius L., Jr.

President Arnold Bennett Hall

Arnold Bennett Hall came to the University as president in 1926. He is one of the foremost educators of the nation, an authority on international law, and an earnest advocate of judicial settlement of international disputes.

Dr. Hall is a graduate of Franklin College and the University of Chicago, where he took his law degree. Before coming to Oregon, he was associate professor of law and political science at the University of Wisconsin.

He is a member of the American Political association, the American Social society, the League to Enforce Peace, the American Institute of Criminology, the American Judicature society, the American Peace society, the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes, the Social Science Research Council of America, and the Universal Union for Peace.

For several years he was chairman of the committee on problems and policies of the Social Science Research Council of America, and in 1923 founded the Pacific Coast regional committee of that organization. He was the first chairman of the regional committee.

In 1927, Dr. Hall was a delegate to the Institute of Pacific Relations, held in Honolulu, and has several times been invited to address the Pan-Pacific conference on international social relations. For several years Dr. Hall has been state chairman of the National Student Forum, and in November, 1930, was invited by President Hoover to participate in the White House conference on Child Health and Protection.

Since he has been in Oregon, Dr. Hall has done a great deal to build up the University and the state. He has toured the state on several occasions to acquire a personal contact with many of the fathers and mothers of the students.

President Hall has been one of the University's staunchest friends, for during the financial crisis that has faced the school he has worked hard and loyally for the institution, and he has stood by us until the end.

During fall term Dr. Hall conducted a series of lectures for the freshman class. These lectures pertained to such fundamental problems as character, personality, spiritual qualities, and intellectual interests. President Hall gave these addresses to help the beginning college student in his first year away from the guidance of home-life.

Burt Brown Barker

Vice President Burt Brown Barker

Burt Brown Barker, now serving as vice-president of the University of Oregon, has always been active in semi-public and public affairs.

After completing underclass work at Willamette, he attended the University of Chicago, and from there went to Harvard where he received his LL.B. degree.

He has served as secretary-treasurer of the Chicago University club, and helped incorporate the alumni association. While serving as president of the association, he instigated the first alumni magazine and made it successful. He was one of the founders of Delta Sigma Rho, honor debating society. He was also interested in Y. M. C. A. work in Chicago, and was a member of the board of managers of Hdye Park Branch, and was chairman of the boys' work committee.

While connected with the Chicago Bar association, Mr. Barker did a great deal of notable work in the fields of defense of poor persons accused of crime, graft and corruptions in jails were exposed by the committee of which he was chairman.

The general control over the University is vested in the State Board of Higher Education. Present members of the board include B. F. Irvine, E. C. Sammons, C. L. Starr, C. C. Colt, F. E. Callister, F. C. Pease, Herman Oliver, Albert Burch, and Mrs. Walter Pierce.

At a meeting held on March 7 the board, in order to solve the financial difficulties now facing the University and College, voted to have but six schools in each institution with a dean at the head, and also voted to have a chancellor at the head of all the institutions of higher education in the State.

Board of Regents

The Personnel Division

The Personnel Division includes the Bureau of Personnel Research, the Deans of Men and Women, and the employment offices. Coordinated with these are numerous other agencies, such as the Health Service and the academic advisers. The purpose of all these agencies is to supplement university teaching with individual information, counsel, and service.

Armed with information as to his own talents and limitations, as to the requirements, opportunities, and compensations of the various occupations open to college graduates, and as to facilities for training and growth open to him in the University, a student can intelligently plan his career.

The office of the Dean of Men is a place of service to the men of the University. It is a place where a personal interest will be made manifest in those situations and adjustments that frequently arise in the lives of college men. Supervision and advice is given concerning such problems as student living conditions, financial difficulties, scholarship, fraternity questions, student activities, awards, and personal problems.

The purpose of the office of the Dean of Women is to serve the interests of the women students. It cooperates with student organizations on the campus in an attempt to develop student leaders and create a feeling of responsibility among them. It attempts to build fine social standards and attitudes, and provide opportunity for each individual to share in making the University a great center of learning and a center of fine living. Through guidance, it hopes to stimulate students to be intellectually alert, socially at ease, emotionally well-balanced, happy, worthwhile social beings.

College of Literature, Science and The Arts

The College of Literature, Science and the Arts, through its four lower division groups and its eighteen major departments, intends to satisfy the demand for a liberal education on the highest plane. It appeals to three types of students. The first class is composed of students seeking a broad foundation of literature, science, and social science as a foundation for success in their chosen profession. A second class of students recognize in the training the liberal arts college offers an end that is worth while in itself. The understanding of nature in its manifold phases, the scientific basis of life, and the study of human relations constitutes a preparation for leadership in the affairs of men. The liberal arts college supplies the foundation for self-expression in the higher realm of thought and an approach to creative arts like literature or drama.

In the associated fields of social sciences, the student finds preparation for various lines of public service. The student begins with a broad survey of the four fields of knowledge calculated to emphasize the relation between the various branches. This serves also as an exploratory period which paves the way for an intelligent choice for a major field at the beginning of the junior year. Students ranking high in the lower division are accorded honor privileges in the upper division, and graduates of outstanding ability may continue to higher degrees in the graduate school.

Dean James H. Gilbert, who heads the college, has been connected with the University of Oregon for twenty-five years. In 1903 he received his B.A. from the University, in 1907 his Ph.D from Columbia University, and in the same year, came as an assistant in the economics department to the University of Oregon. In 1925 he was made dean of the liberal arts college.

The Graduate School

The function of the Graduate School is to lift an institution to a genuine university level. The measurement of American universities has come to be made through the standing of their graduate schools and genuinely professional courses at graduate level.

The Graduate School of the University of Oregon controls all of the work leading to the degrees of Master of Arts, Master of Science, and Doctor of Philosophy, thus having under its supervision all of the advanced work except that done for professional degrees.

The Graduate School functions in its six divisions, including the academic year on the Eugene campus, the academic year in the Portland extension center, the Eugene summer session, the post session at Eugene, the Portland summer session. The Medical School in Portland, which, besides its professional students, always has a certain number of students working for the Masters or Doctor of Philosophy degrees. Except for the Eugene summer session and post session, there is very little duplication of enrollment between these divisions.

Although one of the youngest of the University schools in operation, the Graduate School is the most rapidly growing, showing a 69.8 per cent increase in the last five years, and for the year 1930-31 totalling an enrollment of 676, the largest of any school of the University.

The executive power of the school is vested in the Graduate Council, which is composed of the following: Dean Rebec, Dr. C. V. Boyer, Dr. Donald M. Erb, Dr. John J. Landsbury, Dr. Olof Larsell, Dr. W. E. Milne, Dr. John H. Mueller, Dr.

F. G. Schmidt, Professor Fred L. Stetson, and Dr. Rogers J. Williams.

Dean George Rebec received his B.A. at Michigan in 1891, and received his Ph.D. from the same school in 1896. He first came to Oregon in 1912, and became dean of the school in 1920.

School of Architecture and Allied Arts

The School of Architecture and Allied Arts is a member of the association of collegiate schools of architecture. The special aim of the school is to create and sustain an environment in which the student's most worthy qualities, characteristics and capabilities are accepted as a basis for growth; an environment which will be conducive to the discovery of his own special and peculiar powers, intellectual, ethical, and physical; and that which will afford encouragement and stimulation for his free development.

The school includes instruction in architecture, interior design, painting, sculpture, and normal arts. The degree of Bachelor of Architecture and Bachelor of Architecture in Interior Design are offered for the completion of the prescribed five-year course in these departments.

The Architecture and Allied Arts building is equipped with a testing laboratory, a drafting room, two art studios, sculpture studios, a dark room for developing photographic plates, a kiln and class room with modern equipment for pottery and cement tiles, and rooms for weaving, basketry, and similar arts. The building also contains an art library.

The art exhibition hall is used for special exhibitions and loan collections of paintings, etchings, drawings, sculpture, and various art objects. Exhibits of valuable potteries, statues, casts, and other antiques are on display in the art studios.

Dean Ellis Lawrence received both his B.S. and M.S. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of the American Institute of Architecture, and organized the Oregon school of Architecture and Allied Arts in 1914. Since then the school has become one of three outstanding university art schools in the United States.

School of Business Administration

The School of Business Administration, established at the University in 1914, affords both undergraduates and graduates training for the development of business executives. Concentration is in the managerial and administrative aspects of commercial activity with a coordinated broad training in economics, law, and the liberal arts. Instruction is chiefly by the problem method, using cases taken from actual business practice.

A modern building and completely equipped special laboratory are available for business administration students, affording ample facilities for study and research.

The school offers three undergraduate degrees: Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, and Bachelor of Business Administration. The graduate degree is Bachelor of Business Administration. A large enrollment in the school permits of specialized training in accounting, advertising, merchandising, foreign trade, finance insurance, industrial management, and allied fields during the junior, senior, and graduate years.

Training for the C. P. A. examinations has proved especially popular for graduate students interested in accounting. Students interested in law as well as business may take a six-year combination business administration and law course leading to an undergraduate degree in business, and a graduate degree in law.

Dean David Faville received his B.A. from Stanford in 1922; M. B. A., Harvard, 1925. Faculty of Harvard University 1927-28. Research Supervisor, Harvard Bureau of Business Research in 1927. He first became connected with the Oregon faculty from 1925-27, and was made dean in 1928.

With the recent change made by the State Board of Education, Oregon's school of business will become one of the largest on the coast.

The School of Education

The School of Education of the University of Oregon has a four-fold function to perform. It prepares teachers for the Junior and Senior high schools of the state in the main academic subjects and in physical training, music, and art.

It also prepares students with special aptitudes to become supervisors of special subjects in connection with public schools, and affords opportunities for advanced training to men and women of experience who look forward to becoming principals and superintendents. More than half the administrators in the first class districts (cities) of Oregon have received their professional training at the University.

The last important function consists in the investigation of the working of our existing institutions for public education with a view of improving them. In the last ten years a number of important aspects of the school system, such as school finance, efficiency of the course of study, the working of the county unit as opposed to the district system, have been investigated and reported upon, thus preparing a basis for valuable reconstruction in the school system.

The University School of Education has also provided, through its summer school, unusual facilities for teachers who desire to learn how to handle special cases of illiterate children who are non-readers or non-spellers. This work has attracted educators from all parts of the Union.

Dean Henry Sheldon received his B.A. from Stanford, his M.A. in 1897, and his Ph.D. from Clark in 1900. He first became connected with the University from 1900-11. Between 1911-12 he did work at Leipzig, and returned to the University in 1914. Because of his long service to the University and his contributions in the field of education, this volume of the Oregana has been dedicated to him.

The School of Journalism

After twenty years of service to the State and the University, it is with a feeling of great personal loss that the campus views the passing of the School of Journalism.

It was founded as a department in the summer of 1912, and since then its steady expansion has brought with it rating of third best of its kind in the United States.

In its first year there was one instructor, and the senior class was composed of three students. The school quarters consisted of one small office and a class room which was shared with the department of geology.

The first four-year class of journalism majors graduated in 1916, the first of the 247 graduates who have received bachelor's degrees from the school. Of these 65.42 per cent have gone into some branch of the profession and remained there to this day. The remaining 34.58 per cent include girls who married, graduates who died, and some to whom opportunity beckoned from other fields.

In addition to these about 443 other students, non-majors or non-graduates, have entered journalism either as life work or as a part-time occupation, after receiving their training in the school.

It is one of the best equipped schools of journalism in the country, having a technical laboratory in the University Press, which was founded to furnish journalistic instruction in the practical branches.

The course in journalism includes attention to both the editorial and advertising departments of the newspaper and magazine. Students are taught to write for general publications, trade and class journalism, and newspaper syndicates.

Dean Eric Allen received his B.A. from Wisconsin in 1901. After a great deal of practical experience he came to the University in 1912. He became dean of the school in 1916.

The School of Music

The School of Music recognizes the following objectives as of the utmost importance: First, to create, if possible, and at all events to stimulate an interest in good music and a love for it on the part of the largest possible number of students on the campus.

This is provided for by means of courses planned to be interesting, constructive, and appealing to those whose major interests lie in other fields. Concerts and recitals in great numbers are provided to afford a wide range of musical satisfaction and experience.

Second, to take care of that large and growing body of students who wish to offer music as a major for their baccalaureate degree in either arts or the sciences.

Third, to provide the best possible facilities for those students who are looking to music as a life work.

Fourth and last, to be active in research concerning the status of music in the hope of being of service to the cause of music education throughout the country.

The School of Music recognizes that it is a part and parcel of the University, and endeavors all the time to take its share of those responsibilities which concern the University as a whole.

Another field in which the school specializes, is that of public school music, preparing the student for teaching and supervising music in the grade and high schools. Student recitals are sponsored by the school of music, as well as song contests for fraternity and sorority groups.

Dean John Lansbury received his Mus.B. at Simpson College in 1900, his Mus.D. in 1909, was a pupil of Max Bruch in Berlin, and graduated from the University of Berlin. He first came to Oregon in 1914 and has held his present position since 1917.

School of Music

The School of Physical Education

The School of Physical Education was organized in 1920 with the idea of bringing together and coordinating all departments of the University having to do with the physical activity and well being of the student body.

Dean John Bovard

Service courses, consisting of instruction in various physical skills, games and sport, as well as the elements of personal hygiene are provided for all freshmen and sophomores, and it is the policy of the physical educational school to make this program such that it will carry over into the students' after-college days. Recreational opportunities are made available to students and faculty, and through a wide-reaching system of intramural competition, voluntary sports participation is encouraged.

The school also offers a thorough preparation to those wishing to adopt physical education as their life profession. The first two years are made up of foundational courses, and the last two devoted to technical phases of physical educational pedagogy. Students so trained are prepared to assume positions as high school, college or university teachers of physical education, as playground or community recreation supervisors, or as directors or coaches of major and minor sports.

Another department of the school is the University Health Service, which not only cares for students when they are ill or in need of medical advice, but seeks to serve as an educational factor in their lives, instructing them in healthful ways of living.

Dean John F. Bovard received his B.A. from California in 1903, and his M.A. from the same school in 1906. He was a graduate student at Harvard during 1914-15, and received his Ph.D. from California in 1916. He came to Oregon in 1906, and has held his present position since 1920.

School of Physical Education

Dean Philip Parsons

The School of Applied Social Science

The School of Applied Social Science is designed to place the resources of the University at the disposal of the people of Oregon in the social science field. The services which it offers are those of two kinds: education and public service.

In its program of education, the school trains students for professional social work in the field of relief, delinquency, child welfare, nursing, and health education; social work in the schools and in the administration of public welfare by private agencies and in the county courts.

In its program of Public Service, it endeavors, insofar as limited resources permit, to provide research and consultation services in the administration of government by state, county and municipal officials. It offers consultation, service, and other assistance to Oregon communities which are organized for the promotion of their cultural and social interests.

The work of the school is made possible by the effective cooperation of the Schools of Law, Journalism, Education, Medicine, Architecture and Allied Arts, Music, and Physical Education; and the departments of Sociology, Economics, Political Science, English, and Psychology. In its field service, it functions in cooperation with the Extension Division.

Organically it is divided into departments of Nursing and Health Education, Social Work, Rural Social Service Administration, Community Organization, Research, and Public Service.

Dean Philip Parsons received his B.A. from Christian University in 1904, and his M.A. from the same school in 1905. He received his Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1909, and his LL.D. from Culver Stockton college in 1927. He became dean of the Portland school of Social work in 1927 and has held his present position since 1929.

School of Applied Social Science

The Extension Division

The Extension Division of the University of Oregon, organized on a collateral basis with the schools, is charged with the responsibility of carrying the services of the University to citizens of the state who are off the campus. For the Extension Division, the State Is The Campus.

Dean Alfred Powers

It is organized into five departments, including correspondence-study, Portland center, state-wide centers, visual instruction, and social welfare. In the three teaching departments, namely, correspondence study, Portland center, and evening classes throughout the state, more than five thousand students are enrolled annually. The Portland center has an enrollment of three thousand students a year, exclusive of the Portland summer term, which is a part of the summer session of the University.

At various times in the past, teaching centers have been held in Astoria, Hood River, The Dalles, Pendleton, La Grande, Baker, Bend, Klamath Falls, Medford, Grants Pass, Roseburg, Marshfield, Coquille, Cottage Grove, Junction City, Silverton, Mount Angel, Newberg, Salem, and Eugene.

Through the visual instruction department, stereoptican lantern slides, of which the Extension Division has a library of ten thousand, are made available to the communities of the state, together with film slides, exhibits, and other visual material.

The numerous other services rendered to the state are organized into the social welfare department.

Dean Alfred Powers first came to Oregon in 1907, and received his B.A. degree from the University in 1910. He became dean of the extension division in 1926, after having been assistant director from 1922 to 1926. He has been director of the summer sessions of the University, and was University editor for the School of Journalism from 1920-1922.

Extension Division

Dean Wayne Morse

The School of Law

The University of Oregon Law School combines two six-year courses, one of these being a course in arts, science and law, and the other course in commerce and law.

Students are admitted to the Law School only after having completed the requirements for the Junior certificate with upper division standing. The degrees of Bachelor of Law and Doctor of Jurisprudence are granted by the Law School.

The school's own library, which contains approximately twenty thousand accessioned volumes and several hundred unaccessioned, is arranged to give students and faculty easy access to books which may serve every normal need of both.

The law faculty publishes a quarterly magazine known as the Oregon Law Review. This is a service to the members of the Oregon bar, and a stimulus to legal research and productive scholarship on the part of students. Student and faculty contributions are featured in each issue. This publication acts as the official organ of the Oregon Bar association.

This year the law school will conduct a summer session, giving two credits in each of the following courses: Criminal Procedure, Damages, Domestic Relations and Persons, and Mortgages. In addition, a one- to three-hour course in Legal Research will be given. These courses will be taught by Dean Morse and Professor Orlando J. Hollis.

Dean Wayne L. Morse, who heads the law school, is the youngest law dean in the United States. He received his Ph.B. from Wisconsin in 1923, his LL.B. from Minnesota in 1928 and his law fellow Columbia in 1929. He became instructor in argumentation at Wisconsin in 1924, assistant professor of argumentation at Minnesota from 1924-28. He came to Oregon in 1929, and was appointed Dean of the school in 1931.

The School of Medicine

The University of Oregon School of Medicine, located at Portland, was established in 1887. It is the only complete institution of scientific medical learning north of San Francisco and west of Denver, and it serves the largest territory of any school of its kind in the country.

Dean Richard Dillehunt

It is rated in Class A by the American Medical association, and it is becoming known as one of the finest of its kind in the United States.

The school has developed a three-fold program, including, first, research into the cause and prevention of diseases that are still obscure, training a limited number of well-qualified doctors who will be prepared to give the people of the state the most modern information and service, and the actual care of the sick and disabled of the state who are unable to pay for medical services.

Entrance requirements for the school include three years of general, scientific, and classical education.

The professional training that follows these three preparatory years, includes two years of laboratory sciences, followed by two years of hospital interne service.

The University of Oregon Medical school represents an investment in excess of two million five hundred thousand dollars, over half of which sum has been acquired as gifts from foundations and individuals. It is situated on a campus of one hundred and eighteen acres at an elevation of four hundred feet above the city of Portland.

Dean Richard B. Dillehunt received his M.D. degree from the University of Chicago Medical school in 1910. He practiced medicine in Portland in 1911, and in 1912 became professor of anatomy at the medical school. He became dean in 1920, in which position he has served ever since.

The Pioneer Mother

Serene, benignant, at rest after the long toil and danger of the trail, the pioneer mother now rules over the Woman's Quadrangle. Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University and donor of the statue, chose Mothers' Day on the Campus, May 7, as the appropriate time for the unveiling of his gift. He wished to commemorate, not the hardships of the trail, nor the customs of pioneer days, but, as he wrote to the sculptor, A. Phimister Proctor, to recall the pioneer mother "as I recall my mother, Elvira Brown Barker, and my grandmothers, Lucinda Cox Brown and Christina Henckel Barker, all pioneers of the true type, in the sunset of their lives . . . hardships and . . . sorrows . . . past . . . resting from their labors."

Old Oregon Official Alumni Publication

Fourteen years ago there appeared at the University the first issue of OLD OREGON, the first number of the official publication of the Alumni Association. This little magazine appeared in March, 1918, edited by a class in journalism under the direction of Charlie Fenton Clarke, '16, who was then Alumni Secretary. Since then the magazine has grown in size and circulation, and today we find as busy an editorial and managerial office as can be found anywhere, in the green and white shingle building housing the offices of OLD OREGON at the rear of Johnson hall. Today the circulation is over thirty-six times more than during the year in which it was inaugurated, and copies go to all parts of the world.

Through the columns of OLD OREGON, members of the alumni are brought back once again to their undergraduate days and dreams of Oregon flit through their minds as they read about their former classmates and of the campus. Under the able editorship of Jeanette Calkins, '18, who is also Alumni Secretary, OLD OREGON performs a real service and reminder. Margaret Boyer, '26, holds the post of managing editor as well as circulation manager on the magazine staff, and Roger Bailey, a junior in the University, acts as advertising manager.

Articles pertaining to scholastic and athletic interest appear regularly in the pages of OLD OREGON. Students on the campus contribute often to the magazine, thus bringing back to the alumni more vividly memories of past days.

Alumni Association Has Steady Growth

The University of Oregon Alumni Association has been growing rapidly in the last few years. Since the five members of the first class were graduated from the University in 1878, the Association has grown until, now, on the alumni files, are listed over 11,000 alumni and former students of the University. It is a difficult task to keep data and addresses up to date on this huge file, but day after day the work of recording marriages, occupations, births, deaths, and other vital statistics about alumni is going steadily forward.

Homer Angell

According to Jeanette Calkins, alumni secretary, alumni are becoming more conscious each year of the Alumni Association as an organization, and their interest is indicated by the large amount of alumni mail that reaches the desk of the alumni secretary every day. Letters come from all parts of the world giving new addresses, news items for the alumni magazine, OLD OREGON, or containing suggestions for the organization.

The present officers of the Alumni Association are: Homer D. Angell, '00, President; Donald Woodward, '27, Council Representative; Henryetta Lawrence, '24, Vice-President; Georgia Benson Patterson, '24, Vice-President; Joe Freck, Jr., '31, Vice-President; Jeanette Calkins, '18, Secretary-Treasurer.

This year the officers are planning to meet every two months to discuss the problems of the alumni organization, and to consider ways and means of keeping in touch with the immense body of Oregon alumni who are found the world over, having followed their professions into every known country. The association follows the movements of each student who leaves the campus, and perpetuates for him his contact with the University and its affairs. Inasmuch as there are many thousands who have gone out, and others going each year, the job is a big one. Nevertheless, the University, holding to its purpose of extending its campus to the boundaries of the state and to the home of every alumnus—whether he be in the South Seas, Russia, Greenland, or China—considers it eminently worth doing.

Gradually the Secretary's office is collecting and classifying an immense store of bibliographical material and other data about alumni. The association is the broad avenue or highway between the University of Oregon and its former students, and to all of these, near and far, OLD OREGON serves as a means of communication with the classmates of former years.

Among the activities planned for alumni is Homecoming week-end during fall term. At this time many graduates return to the University to live over the days they once knew. A Homecoming dance is held, luncheons are given, the big football battle is waged, and everything is done to let the alumni again taste their college days.

The School of Law

A leading position among the branches of the University, and a similarly strong position among institutions of legal training in the United States is held by Oregon's School of Law, now completing 48 years of service. Founded in Portland in 1884 and brought to Eugene in 1915, the school is the only one in the state holding membership in the Association of American Law Schools.

No small part of this prestige has been gained by the work of Wayne L. Morse, who became dean of the school this year, following the resignation of Charles E. Carpenter.

Professor Morse is the youngest law school dean in the country. He received the degree of Ph.B. from the University of Wisconsin in 1923, and the L.L.B. degree from the University of Minnesota in 1928. In 1932 he was awarded the degree of Doctor of Laws by Columbia University.

From 1924 to 1928 Dean Morse was professor of argumentation at Minnesota. In 1928 he received a fellowship at Columbia, and in 1929 came to the University of Oregon as assistant professor of law. He is director of the survey of Oregon penal institutions, and a member of the national committee on criminal law and criminology of the Association of American Law Schools.

Students' Offices of the Law School

Dean Morse, in summarizing his philosophy of legal education, has stated:

"My program of legal education for the school is based on the major premise that society is entitled to a legal profession whose members are thoroughly trained in the knowledge of the law, and who are conscious and appreciative of the social implications and consequences resulting from the application of legal rules and doctrines, and who are motivated by the spirit which places societal values above individual gains."

Upon such broad principles of education was the student association of the law school organized—a separate, self-governing body, comprising every student registered in the law division. For ten years the law student body has operated on the honor system, the law school being the only branch of the University in which it is employed. The system is directed entirely by the students, absolutely without faculty intervention.

Policies and activities of the student body are administered by four officers, elected annually. Sam Van Vactor was president for the year 1931-32, assisted by the following men: William Bartle, secretary; Francis Cheney, treasurer; and Jim Travis, representative of the first-year group.

Several social affairs are held each year. The first event of the fall term was a smoker held at the Craftsman club, at which the first-year students were for the first time brought into contact with upperclassmen and faculty. In February the law books were again deserted. This occasion was the Barristers' Ball, which proved to be one of the major social events of the winter term.

An interesting innovation in the work of the school this year was the introduction of moot court practice in the class in Procedure, under direction of Professor Orlando J. Hollis. Actual court cases were used in every trial, and all the necessary court officials were appointed from the class roll.

A stimulus to legal research and productive scholarship on the part of the students is offered by the Oregon Law Review, a magazine sponsored by the law faculty and published every month by student editors and contributors as a service to members of the Oregon state bar. The post of faculty editor-in-chief is filled by Professor Charles G. Howard, and William Kuykendall is student editor-in-chief.

Medicine

Dean Dillehunt

University of Oregon Medical School

Unique in its setting upon a campus of one hundred and eighteen acres at an elevation of four hundred and fifty feet above the city, the medical center of the University Medical School occupies a plant representing an investment of about two million five hundred thousand dollars. Approximately one-half this sum has been acquired through gifts from foundations and individuals in recognition of the merit of the work done there.

Notable changes in the organization of the Medical School this year include the institution of two new divisions of the department of Medicine. The division of Dental Medicine was established in March, shortly after the Outpatient Clinic had moved to the new building. The scope of this work includes the study and treatment of dental diseases as they are related to the medical conditions of patients, thus attempting to correlate treatment in medicine and dentistry. The division of Psychiatry of the Department of Medicine was established in October with a complete schedule of courses for medical students.

The Outpatient Clinic of the Medical School which was enabled by a gift of four hundred thousand dollars from the General Education Board of New York, was occupied last February, and is admirably meeting the needs of the Medical School and the community.

The University of Oregon Medical School is rapidly taking its place among the foremost institutions of its kind in the country. With a splendid faculty, headed by Dean Dillehunt, the school is prepared to educate outstanding men for the profession.

Pharmacology Department

When students at the Medical School are in need of advice, academic or personal, when they are sick, when they are discouraged, they always have found a true friend in the person of Dr. Harold B. Myers, associate dean and professor of pharmacology.

In addition to his status as professor of pharmacology and head of that department, Dr. Myers is chairman of the committees on admissions and advanced standing, curriculum and schedule, and student health, as well as being a member of the committees on clinical laboratories, and publications and catalogue.

His research interests have included tolerance of drugs; uranium glycosuria; diphtheria toxemia; intravenous medication with dyes; fungicidal action of volatile oils; acute mercuric chloride nephritis; and morphine poisoning, which has had a material practical application to the fruit industry in Oregon.

Dr. Myers came to the University of Oregon Medical School as professor of pharmacology in 1915, having been an instructor at the University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, prior to that time. He received the Bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1908 and the degree of Doctor of Medicine from Western Reserve University in 1911.

In recognition of his friendly interest in medical students, of his untiring efforts in behalf of medical education, of his desire to aid in investigation of unsolved medical problems, this section is dedicated.

THE Joseph Dollar, with a fair wind astern, sailing for the Orient. This famous clipper built by J. Reid and Co. of Glasgow was originally named the Schurbek. At the outbreak of the World War the Schurbek had taken on ballast at Santa Rosalia in readiness to sail for Chile to load nitrates for German munition factories. In 1920 the vessel was sold by the reparations committee to the Robert Dollar company. After several profitable trips to the Orient, the ship made its last voyage in 1929, and was scrapped at Shanghai.

History of the Senior Class

From the time the class of '32 launched upon the sea of higher education at Oregon its members have sought adventures off the traditional course pursued by previous college classes.

Desiring to be unique "Freshies" they sponsored weekly matinee dances to further their campus acquaintances. Brian Mimnaugh, Bernice Woodard, Pat Boyd, and Al Browne steered the class successfully through its first collegiate voyage.

Abolition of the time-honored Frosh parade and mix was the next original step, when the class, as sophomores, led the campus in upholding the movement for more dignified Oregon traditions. The annual Sophomore Informal under the guidance of Tom Handley converted the barren basketball court of the Igloo into a dreamy oasis of palms surrounded by gleaming minarets of a transported Mecca. Besides this customary social event the class inaugurated a banquet for members only, which was a St. Valentine's affair at the new Men's dormitory. Jack Stipe, Elizabeth Strain, Dorothy Jean Murphy, Kermit Stevens, and Kenneth Scales were the officers for the second year.

Their junior year still followed the "new tradition" idea with the sponsoring of a Junior Jinx for upperclass students. A rally motif was carried out, the dance celebrating a night football game between O. S. C. Rooks and Oregon Frosh. Jack Edlefsen was in charge. Under the direction of Omar Palmer the Junior Vodvil was revived in the spring and presented to the campus May 1 and 2. Junior week-end was celebrated a week later with "Fete Moderne," the Millrace pageant, and the Junior Prom as highlights. Prom decorations featured the throne room of a medieval castle which formed an appropriate setting for Queen Eleanor I (Eleanor Lewis), the second junior queen to rule over the festivities. Chet Knowlton was chairman of the week-end celebration. Junior officers were Art Potwin, Carolyn Haberslach, Marie Myers, and Joe Hughes.

About to disembark and scatter abroad on unknown shores, these seniors have attempted to make their last trip together the most worthwhile with Hobart Wilson, Hope Shelley, Virginia Grone, Kermit Stevens, and Barney Miller at the helm.

Gerlinger, Koyl, Albert Cups

Two women and one man were awarded the highest attainable honors in the Junior and Senior classes last spring. At the Junior Prom the annual presentation of the Gerlinger and Koyl cups was made to Helen Chaney and Brian Mimnaugh, respectively, who were the juniors outstanding in merit, scholarship, and service to the University.

The Gerlinger cup was awarded by Mrs. George T. Gerlinger, a member of the Board of Regents, for the first time 14 years ago.

Miss Chaney, a member of Alpha Xi Delta, was a Kwama and secretary of the Y. W. C. A. her sophomore year. As a junior she acted as treasurer for the Associated Women Students and as chairman of the Mothers' Day observance. She is this year president of Y. W. C. A., treasurer of Mortar Board, a member of Pi Lambda Theta, national women's educational honorary, and Phi Theta Upsilon, upperclass women's service honorary.

Eighteen years ago Charles W. Koyl, a member of the 1911 class, presented the Juniors with a cup to reward the man in their ranks who had distinguished himself in scholarship, character, and leadership.

As president of the Associated Student Body, Brian Mimnaugh is perhaps the best known. His activities have not been confined to executive positions entirely, but include four years of baseball, membership in the Order of the "O," Oregon Knights, chairman of the Rally committee for the Homecoming celebrations last year, chairman of the Junior Prom, and this year's delegate to N. S. F. A. convention in Toledo, Ohio. He is, also, a Friar and member of Phi Delta Theta.

The third woman in ten years to have her name inscribed on the Albert cup was the distinction gained by Dorothy Eberhard, when she was chosen to receive the award by her classmates. In 1921 Joseph H. Albert of Salem presented the cup to be awarded each year by a vote of the senior class to "the member of the Senior class, who, in his or her college career, has shown the greatest progress towards the ideals in character, service, and wholesome influence." Her activities included membership in Pi Beta Phi, vice-presidency of her class during her Freshman year, Kwama, service on the Greater Oregon committee and Junior Weekend directorate, a member of the Y. W. C. A. council, and president of Mortar Board.

MORTAR BOARD

Officers

JANET OSBORNE, President    VIRGINIA GRONE, Secretary
ALEXIS LYLE, Vice-President    HELEN CHANEY, Treasurer

Active Members

Anne Baum, Helen Chaney, Virginia Grone, Carolyn Haberlach, Irma Logan, Alexis Lyle, and Janet Osborne.

Each spring at the campus luncheon Junior women are selected for membership on the basis of service, scholarship, and leadership.

Furthering faculty-student relationship was the year project of the group, with the annual Mortar Board Ball on April 23, as their outstanding social event.

FRIARS

A tap on the shoulder beckoning Junior men who have distinguished themselves as leaders to join the solemn ranks of the Friars, is one of the highlights of the annual Junior Week-end luncheon.

Members chosen last spring were: Wallace Baker, Omar Palmer, Kenton Hamaker, Donald Moe, Jack Stipe, Brian Minnaugh, Kelsey Slocom, Willis Duniway, Charles Laird, Walter Evans, Art Potwin, Kermit Stevens, and Chester Knowlton.

Commencement

Class of '32 Bids Farewell to Campus

Preparation to "tackle the world single-handed" did not deter the Seniors from seeking occasional moments of pleasure from their studious pursuits. Winter term they were hosts to the Sophomore and Junior classes at the most formal of all formal dances. Gerlinger hall was transformed for the evening into an exotic Siamese setting with the aid of lavish Oriental decorations and a two-piano eleven-piece orchestra. Bob Allen and his committees were responsible for the success of the dance.

Spring brought the men a "golden opportunity" in the form of Senior Leap Week, when they were given the chance to even up debts with their extravagant feminine classmates. Likewise, the co-eds were awarded an opportunity to date their "secret sorrows." From April 21 to 23 women played the role of gallants, escorting the men to the numerous social functions given in their honor and "footing" the bills. Crowning the gay round of activities was the Mortar Board Ball on the last night at the Eugene hotel. Members of Mortar Board sponsored this dance for the third consecutive year to which the entire campus was invited—the women carrying out the Leap Year idea.

The days preceding Commencement were devoted to the reception for graduates at which President and Mrs. Hall and a number of the faculty entertained. Then there followed the ever-impressive Flower and Fern procession when the women graduates, robed in their caps and gowns, paraded on the grassy quadrangle between Gerlinger and Johnson. With their arms filled with flowers they formed a circle and placed their boquets upon the ground. A twilight concert followed this ceremony.

Baccalaureate services were solemnized on Sunday morning at the First Methodist Episcopal church, followed on the next day by Commencement exercises in McArthur court. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York City gave the graduation address.

At the touch of the sheepskin, placed in the hands of each graduating Senior by President Arnold Bennett Hall to signify the student's qualification for facing the competition of life, college days were bidden farewell forever. The past four years are but a memory, and yet a memory that will help and guide them through the years that lie ahead.

The Junior Class

BOB HALL, President
ELIZABETH SCRUGGS, Vice-President
MARJORIE HAAS, Secretary
ED BOLDS, Treasurer

As the last class to enter the University with an official greeting from John Straub, dean emeritus, and the first class to be welcomed with the impressive new public initiation ceremony.

The Freshman skipper was Larry Bay, with Marguerite Tarbell, Julia Creech, and Wesley Edwards helping him. They built a huge bonfire on Skinner's butte at Homecoming under the direction of Jim Travis; entertained the campus with the traditional Frosh Glee in a "Dutch Plate" motif planned by Charles Gillespie, and picnicked at Swimmer's Delight late in the spring.

Then James Travis took over the helm, aided by Mary Lou Muncy, Marian McIntyre, and Freeman Young. The social life included a "Big Top" informal directed by Ted Jenson, a line party at one of the down-town theatres, and a class picnic managed by Bart Siegfried.

This year Bob Hall has charge of class problems, assisted by Elizabeth Scruggs, Marjorie Haas, and Ed Bolds. The first event sponsored by the Juniors was the Junior-Senior dance on Hallowe'en, given in conjunction with the Senior class, and with Gordon Day acting as Junior chairman. Then came Junior Shine day, managed by John Hare, and last of all, the famous Junior Week-end, with campus day, the canoe fete, and Junior Prom, all under the leadership of Ned Kinney.

Short, Reymers, Green, Walstrom, Marrs, Platt
Bolds, Needham, Sersanous, Tarbell, Weber, Chapman Kinney

Junior Shine Day

Junior Week-end, the biggest event of the school year, was under the direction of Ned Kinney. The success of the festival was due to careful execution and to the enthusiasm shown by members of the committee.

Hare Shines Mimnaugh's Shoes

John Marrs acted as assistant chairman, and the remainder of the committee was composed of: Secretary, Ellen Sersanous; canoe fete, Hal Short; luncheon, Marguerite Tarbell; prom, Sanford Platt; campus day, Ralph Walstrom; water carnival, Bob Needham; mother's day, Marian Chapman; advertising manager, Mahr Reymers; finance manager, Ed Bolds; publicity, Sterling Green; and queen's reign, Louise Weber.

The canoe fete, the big campus luncheon, the water carnival, the formal dance of the year—Junior Prom, all contributed to make the students, alums, and mothers and friends enjoy a successful Junior Week-end, under the direction of a competent group of third-year students.

The other major activity of the Junior class, Shine day, was held on February 24th under the slogan of "A Bigger Shine for a Dime." John Hare was chairman, aided by Jean Grady, assistant chairman; Esther Hayden, secretary; Marguerite Tarbell, tickets; Hal Short, publicity; and James Densmore, stands.

The night before Shine day the campus was bombarded with old shoes of all descriptions reminding students to secure their shine tickets. On that day, pretty equestriennes, chosen from the Junior class, strolled the campus and solicited dimes from shabbily shod students, who then restored the sheen to their shoes at the various stands erected on 13th and operated by Junior men.

Densmore, Short, Hayden, Tarbell, Hare, Grady

The Canoe Fete

“ Last year the entry submitted by Delta Delta Delta and Sherry Ross Hall won the awards by unanimous decision of the judges. The float was entitled “East of the Sun, and West of the Moon.”

Another feature of the week-end was campus day, with the luncheon under the shadow of the old Pioneer. All the old characteristics of campus day were reenacted with the pledging of Mortar Board and of Friars; the tennis court dances; the ducking of unwary males in the fountain; the slow flivver race, and the “beautiful female impersonator” contest. The latter event was won by Pi Kappa Alpha with their contestant emulating Queen Eleanor I, first monarch of Junior Week-end, and to Sigma Kappa went the honors of dressing the queenly figure.

The Sophomore Class

ALVIN McKELLIGON, President
CAROLINE CARD, Vice-President
HELEN BURNS, Secretary
JULIUS REHAL, Treasurer

The class of 1934 has again confirmed predictions that they would go far in University of Oregon activities.

The Sophomore Informal, with its Arctic scene of igloos and northern stars set off by a black canopy, was the featured dance of the winter term. It was a no-charge, all-campus event, and its success was attested to by the many students who dance attended. Abbie Green's dance orchestra played, this marking the first appearance on the campus of the band which has since become so popular here.

Last year the class held its picnic at Swimmer's Delight, swimming and row-boating in the afternoon and dancing in the evening. This year there will be another picnic of similar nature.

Another activity planned by the class for spring term is a beard-growing contest, prizes being awarded the best beards of various types, and a vigilance committee appointed to see that no shaving is indulged in.

As in years before, on Junior Week-end there was a tug-of-war across the mill race between the Sophomores and the Frosh. In last year's efforts the class of 1934 was highly victorious, and this year they will attempt to keep their record unsullied by the aspiring Freshmen.

Two honoraries are formed for Sophomores, the Skull and Dagger for outstanding men, and Kwama for prominent women. This year the two organizations held a joint dance.

Those who have guided the Sophomore class this year are: Alvin McKelligon, president; Caroline Card, vice-president; Helen Burns, secretary; and Julius Rehal, treasurer; all of Portland.

Two more years await the second year class, and with Freshman and Sophomore activities behind them, they are looking forward to their own Junior Week-end, their own Junior Prom, their own Senior Ball, and graduation.

The Freshmen Class

HOWARD STEIB, President
KAY SANDERS, Vice-President
KAY DUNBAR, Secretary
ROBERT ZURCHER, Treasurer

Members of the class of 1935 have had little reason to complain of dull moments. From the night they marched around Hayward field and donned the green caps until their picnic late in the spring term, something has been doing.

During the fall term there was the "O" on Skinner's butte to be painted and then repainted and then repainted again, because it had been smeared with orange and black paint while the unsuspecting Freshmen were enjoying the Oregon-O. S. C. football game. Later, when the campus was be-smeared with more orange paint, daubed by unknown vandals, the Frosh were out in force to remove every trace. Freshmen women brought food to the men who were guarding the "O" the night before the big game.

At Homecoming the Frosh-built bonfire cast its ruddy glow from Skinner's butte over the pajama-clad paraders in the town below, despite the torrents of rain that made it an almost impossible task.

Then, when everybody thought the Frosh must be fatigued by their many activities, a general walkout was staged in defiance of all upperclass mandates and regulations, and woe unto those who tried to stop it, for they were soundly spanked with their own paddles.

Spring term, of course, marked the work and pleasure of the Frosh Glee, and that annual event, the Freshman picnic, which terminates the campus activities of the year.

Walter Gray was general chairman of the Frosh dance, the first big dance sponsored by the yearling class, and was assisted by a competent committee.

During Junior Week-end the Freshmen were again conspicuous, first by participating in the Frosh-Sophomore tug-of-war over the mill race, and second by the burning of their lids—the discarding of their first-year insignia.

The officers of the youngest class in the University are Howard Steib, of Milwaukie, Kay Sanders, Kay Dunbar, and Robert Zurcher, all of Portland.

Kwama

This Sophomore women's service honorary has been of much service to the campus this year. Its efforts to promote good fellowship among the members and among the other co-eds have led to the serving of campus lunches, homecoming banquets, and formal teas for Dean Schwering and others. Nineteen Freshman women are selected each year to become Kwamas during their Sophomore year. Present members are: Virginia Hartje, Nancy Suomela, Laura Drury, Joan Cox, Geraldine Hickson, Lois Floyd, Marylou Patrick, Louise Barclay, Madeline Gilbert, Edith Peterson, Helen Binford, Jean Failing, May Masterton, Helen Burns, Maxine Reed, and Caroline Card. Honorary members are Mrs. Alice B. Macduff and Mrs. Hazel Prutsman Schwering.

Thespian

The Freshman women's honorary is the Thespian. Throughout the year its members have served at teas and social functions whenever asked. They have cooperated with Freshman representatives of the men's houses in discussing Freshman problems and Oregon traditions. Other activities include a tea given each term for Freshman women and a campus-wide survey for the Big Sisters. Members of the organization are: Marigold Hardison, Roberta Bequeath, Marytine New, Blanche O'Neill, Mildred Keasling, Sybyl Lou King, Hariette Campbell, Virginia VanKirk, Louise Stein, Ruth McClain, Helen Scruggs, Helen Schacht, Charlotte Eldridge, Lois Margaret Hunt, Mary Stewart, Peggy McKie, Virginia Howard, Marie Saccomanno, Lucy Ann Wendell, Alice Gerot, Louise Thomas, Eleanor Staten, and Lucille Stewart.

Fifteen outstanding Freshmen are selected each year to become members of the Skull and Daggers underclass honorary for Sophomores. The selection, made at the Frosh Glee, is based upon campus activities, character, and good fellowship.

Candidates for selection usher at games, concerts, and assemblies, meet with high school delegations, and uphold Oregon traditions, the president of the organization being a member of the newly created court of traditions.

The organization is not a political one, although its members are usually found among those leading in campus activities in later years. It serves to create a goal toward which Freshmen may work, at the same time fitting them for upperclass honors.

This year, apart from the usual activities, a dance was held in conjunction with the Kwamas at the Alpha Chi Omega house. Flood lights and palm trees were used to create a forest effect. The insignia of the Kwamas hung at one end of the room and that of the Skull and Daggers at the other. Patrons and patronesses were Mrs. Hazel Prutsman Schwering, Mrs. Alice B. Macduff, Mr. John M. Rae, and Mr. Daniel Gage.

Student Government

Brian Mimnaugh

Student Body President's Message

"The Associated Students of the University of Oregon have just completed the most successful financial period in recent years. A continuation of our present policies will mean the further expansion of a more diversified student program in the very near future.

"A strong student government demands strong student leaders with an intricate knowledge of student affairs. Without such leaders educated to the machinery of student government, that government will weaken and eventually fail.

"Because of the recent reorganization of the University, we must face the realization that our own student government and student activities are being carefully scrutinized. More than ever before we must prove the justification of our own existence just as others are finding it necessary to prove theirs.

"The solution of the problem lies in the complete unification of the Associated Students, together with wholehearted interest and detailed knowledge of our own student problems. Such a solution would not only guarantee our existence, but would materially strengthen our own government and all individuals connected with such an enterprise.

"Let us seize this opportunity to increase our knowledge of our own government and look forward to a still greater University of Oregon."

Sincerely,

BRIAN MIMNAUGH,

President of the Associated Students.

Officers of the Student Body

The student administration of the University of Oregon this year has directed its efforts toward the greater enlightenment of the student body as a whole on student problems and student affairs. The student body officers have consistently endeavored to unite the students in closer bonds of service and fellowship.

That they have succeeded in their purpose may be seen in the fact that a greater feeling of cooperation and a greater Oregon spirit has been brought about. All of the student officers have consistently given of their time and service in order to make their ideals for a better student government a reality.

The associated students have carried out a program this year in the interests of international good-will and the furtherance of enduring peace, that has given the University of Oregon a widely recognized prestige. Chief among these movements was the international good-will tour of the Pacific Basin debaters, Roger Pfaff, David Wilson, and Robert Miller.

Each year the associated students sponsor a concert and lecture series, which has been of an especially high quality this season. Some of the programs that have been given under the associated students' auspices this year include the Portland Symphony Orchestra, the Kedroff quartet, Georges Enesco, Sir Hubert Wilkins, the Eugene Gleemen, and the students' own musical organizations. The students have shown more interest in this series than ever before, resulting in a larger attendance than in previous years.

The University Band, resplendent in new uniforms, has lived up to and even exceeded the excellent record that it has had in past years.

One of the things that every loyal Oregon student has rejoiced in this year has been the fact that every cent of the debt on McArthur court has been paid. Another thing that the students may feel proud of is the realization that student finances this year are on a sounder basis than they have been in the past decade.

Brian Mimnaugh was one of the leaders at the convention of the National Student Federation of America, which took place in Toledo, Ohio. The student government of the University of Oregon was highly commended by student executives attending that meeting.

Executive Council

The governing body that has control over all student body activities is the executive council. Its duties include the election and employment of the graduate manager, coaches, trainers, editors and managers of student body publications, and student assistants.

The executive council appoints student managers for all student body activities, decides on all budgets for expenditures of student funds, and has full control over all athletics, forensics, and other associated student activities.

Dad's and Mother's Day Committees

The fifth annual Dad's day celebration this year took place Saturday, October 24. More than four hundred fathers attended the affair. Sigma Kappa won the A. W. Norblad cup for the largest attendance of fathers. W. Lair Thompson was named president of the Dads' association.

The Dads were honored at noon at luncheons at the various living organizations, and afterward around the fireplaces the visitors listened to radio reports of the Oregon-North Dakota football game. In the late afternoon the Dads were entertained at a smoker.

Fathers, sons, and daughters were honored at a special banquet Saturday evening at McArthur court. Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall was the principal speaker at this event.

Oregon Mothers came from all parts of the Pacific coast to join the festivities of the annual Mothers' week-end on the campus. Mothers were honor guests at the campus luncheon, the canoe fete, the Junior Prom and the Mothers' day banquet.

The banquet for Oregon Mothers and their sons and daughters was held in Gerlinger hall. During the banquet cups were presented to the organizations having the most mothers present for the occasion. Phi Mu sorority was the winner among the sororities, and Beta Theta Pi among the fraternities. Mrs. F. Bond, of Pendleton, was named president of the Mothers' association.

Alumni 1,000 Strong Return to Oregon

"Home to Honor Oregon," alumni of the University of Oregon, nearly a thousand strong, returned to the campus last November for the annual Homecoming celebration.

A student committee, headed by John Penland, worked hard to make this Homecoming successful. From the huge serpentine and ear-splitting noise-parade down Willamette street, to the dignified and beautiful vespers service Sunday afternoon, Homecoming was one of the best that Oregon has ever had.

Carrying flares, sirens and other rally regalia, enthusiastic students displayed their "Oregon spirit" in a giant rally and serpentine march downtown Friday evening, November 13. Noise machines carrying huge saws, boilers, steam whistles, riveters, steam rollers and other types of racket producers were entered by various campus living organizations. As usual, the huge fiery "O" built by the freshmen blazed forth on Skinner's butte.

For the second year in succession, Pi Kappa Alpha won the Bristow trophy awarded to the house having the best Homecoming sign. This year, taking a sincere step in the attempt to promote better feeling between the University and Oregon State, the committee in charge of the contest, headed by George Kotchik and Larry Fischer, ruled that the sole motif of these signs was to be to welcome back the "grads" and that any sign which attempted to "razz" the visiting school would fail to receive any consideration whatsoever in the prize awarding.

The float entered by Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Tau Delta was given first place in the noise parade.

Following the downtown activities, the students gathered at the men's gymnasium for the annual Journalism Jam. Although not officially connected with the week-end festivities, the dance has come to be traditional with Homecoming. The dance is sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi, professional journalism fraternities. Merlin Blais was chairman. The affair, always extremely informal, was one of the most colorful events of the week-end.

Homecoming Committee Directs Successful Week-end

Saturday, November 14

About fifteen thousand people arrived on the campus Saturday to see the Oregon-Oregon State football game, which finished with a 0-0 score.

Homer D. Angell, Portland attorney, was unanimously re-elected president of the alumni association at its meeting Saturday morning. Jeanette Calkins was re-named secretary-treasurer.

The Homecoming luncheon, under the direction of Alexis Lyle, began at 11:30 at McArthur court. This affair is always an enjoyable one for the students because of its informality.

The Homecoming dance, which was held at McArthur court, was the big event of Saturday evening. The Igloo was completely and artistically decorated in an ocean setting. Alumni and students exchanged dances and during the intermissions talked over old times. The event was under the direction of Bob Holmes. The dance was preceded by a reception in Gerlinger hall. Alumni, faculty, and students were all invited to this affair, one of the most enjoyable features of the week-end.

Campus decorations for Homecoming were in charge of Roger Bailey. Neon signs, banners, and a mammoth welcome arch across Thirteenth avenue helped make the alumni feel that the campus was welcoming them "with arms outstretched," as the new Homecoming windshield sticker, designed by McGowan Miller, depicted.

Plans for welcoming the returning graduates, and providing accommodations for them, were carried out by a committee working under Carolyn Haberlach. A special office in Johnson hall for registering the visitors was maintained Friday and Saturday. Many of the alumni stayed at the living organizations of which they are members.

Other members of the Homecoming Directorate who were important contributors to the success of the event were Wayne Emmott, assistant chairman; Marguerite Tarbell, secretary; Omar Palmer, finances; and Barney Miller, publicity.

N. S. F. A. Studies Student Problems

A new organization at Oregon this year is the National Student Federation of America committee, which was formed for the purpose of studying the activities and problems of this campus and comparing them with those of other campi, and at the same time training a group of men for competent student leadership.

The chairman of the committee is Robert Hall, and the other members are: Ned Kinney, Fred Hellberg, Hal Short, Kenneth McKean, Ed Bolds, John Marrs, Gordon Day, and Ellen Sersanous, secretary.

In its first year of existence, this committee has accomplished much toward the advancement of student affairs. In order to bring the students closer together that they might better understand and make more valuable their own student government, the N. S. F. A. committee suggested the inauguration of regular student assemblies. The first of these took place March 2.

The committee has made a close study of student government, and one of the definite things that it has done toward better government is the drawing up of an amendment to the constitution, which provides for more efficient freshman class elections, and aims to eliminate the spending of excessive campaign funds.

The meetings of the committee take the form of an open discussion in which any current problems of the campus are considered. Each problem is referred to one member of the group, who investigates it thoroughly, and then brings his report back to the main committee for consideration.

The National Student Federation of America came into being five years ago. The founders established the following purposes which have guided and directed the policies of the Federation since its inception:

"We should achieve a spirit of co-operation among the students of the United States of America to give consideration to questions affecting students' interests.

"We would develop an intelligent student opinion on questions of national and international importance.

"We would foster understanding among students of the world in the furthering of an enduring peace."

The local committee has kept these purposes ever in mind in making its decisions and carrying on its work on the Oregon campus.

University Summer Cruises

Rugged, venturesome Alaska; exotic, semi-tropical Hawaii; the University of Oregon campus at Eugene and the Portland extension center combine to form the campus for the summer sessions of the University of Oregon.

The summer cruise to Alaska offered in August will be the fourth to be conducted by the University of Oregon. The steamship "Admiral Rogers" has been chartered for the exclusive use of those making the trip. David E. Faville, dean of the school of business administration, will be director of the cruise.

Arrangements have been made for an extension of the Alaskan cruise into the interior of Alaska, for a voyage down the Tanana and up the Yukon to Dawson, one of the greatest river trips in the world.

The cruise to Hawaii, which began June 19 and ended August 5 last year, will be repeated again this summer. Last year's cruise was under the direction of Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University. There were 53 students enrolled.

The students who took part in the cruise made the trip to Honolulu on the "Empress of Japan," and while in the Islands they were quartered in dormitories at Punahou college. Classes were held aboard the vessel, and credits were given for courses which were taken at the University of Hawaii.

1700 Enroll for Summer School

Outstanding educators from all parts of the country and leaders in their respective fields at the University make up the faculty for the summer sessions which will be held simultaneously at Eugene and in the Portland center, beginning June 20 and continuing for six weeks until July 29.

The campus at Eugene, spreading in expansive lawn under the shade of numerous evergreens and bordered by the mill race, offers an ever-present out-of-doors just outside the class room or hall of residence. Nearby are rivers, hills, and the pleasant summer coolness of the forests; within week-end reach are the beaches, the snowy Cascades, cold lakes, and fishing streams.

Last year there were 746 students registered in the Eugene session, and 802 students in the Portland summer session.

Regularly organized classes will be conducted in several departments of the University during a four weeks' post session in Eugene, August 1 to August 26. Last year there were 266 students enrolled in the post session.

The total number of students at all of the summer session of last year was 1,747, of whom 1,389 were undergraduates and 358 graduates.

The Sophomore Informal

Tuesday, November 10, McArthur court was transformed into scenes representing the far north for the 1931 Sophomore Informal. Against a background of black, the walls were made to show vast snow plains, icebergs, Eskimo huts, and dog teams. At one end of the room the colorful aurora borealis shone out across the dancers, and flood lights from the floor replaced the usual overhead lighting effects. A low black canopy covered the ceiling. Entrance ways were miniature igloos and the orchestra occupied an iceberg in the center of the floor.

Arrangements for the dance were made by Neal Bush, general chairman. Ed Reames was business manager; La Myra Smith, secretary; and Fred Ahern and Madeline Gilbert handled the publicity. Committee chairmen and assistants were: Virginia Hartje and Helen Binford, refreshments; Jim Ferguson and Louis Kalina, construction; Betty Karkeet and Charleen Purcell, decorations; Hugh Williams, Frances Carpenter, and Kathryn Liston, music; Norma Chinnock and Maxine Reed, programs; Bill Price and Ike Donin, floor; Nancy Suomela and Katherine Engebretsen, patrons and patronesses; Ed Field and Leonard Lundgren, clean up; Glen Heiber and Maurice Stauffer, hauling; Bob DeGraff and Spencer Carlson, lights.

The Homecoming Dance

Homecoming Week-end, bringing alive the memories that still live in the minds of the alums, was brought to an enjoyable climax Saturday evening, November 14, at McArthur court where the annual Homecoming dance was held. The walls hung in black, served as a background for the beautiful autumn scenes that were shown in brilliant reds and yellows. The programs were made in black and silver yet keeping the Homecoming spirit.

The day started with the campus luncheon before the exciting football game, and ended with the reception for alums and the dance which grads and undergraduates alike enjoyed in this informal atmosphere.

Bob Holmes was general chairman with the following committee assisting: Harry Schenk, business manager; Freeman Young, tickets; Marvin Jane Hawkins, music; Mary Lou Muncy, patrons and patronesses; George Vaughn, decorations; Jeff Howard, properties; and Fred Ahern, floor and clean-up.

Many alums were conspicuous at the dance and seemed to enjoy again memories of their college days. Dancing in McArthur court, seeing old faces, talking of old times—the Homecoming dance.

The Fashion Dance

Co-eds were given a chance to ask their "secret sorrows" to the Gamma Alpha Chi, women's national advertising honorary, fashion dance held March 5 at Coconut Grove. The Leap year idea was carried out throughout the dance, inasmuch as 1932 is Leap year. The main feature of the evening was the fashion show given through the courtesy of Eugene merchants. The models came through a modernistic fashion book and showed advanced styles of what is correct to wear for campus, for sport, and for dress affairs during the bright days of spring. In keeping with a dance sponsored by an advertising honorary, many favors were given to the guests.

Velma Hamilton

The eight models of the evening included: Margaret Ann Howland, Janet Thacher, Dorothy Cunningham, Elizabeth Wright, Jack Gregg, Bob Hart, Leighton Gee, and Joe Hughes.

In connection with this dance was a contest sponsored to find the girl who looked most like the picture on the Rollin's hosiery poster that was distributed on the campus. The winner was announced at the dance.

Harriette Hofmann was in charge of the dance, and was assisted by Velma Hamilton, general chairman; Dorothy Cunningham, decorations; and Helen Evans, publicity.

The Military Ball

The year's most formal dance was given January 23, at the Eugene hotel where Scabbard and Blade, national military honorary, entertained for the military department of the University and for a large number of special guests. Full military dress was in order. Decorations of flags, machine guns, and cannons, with programs of black leather, pierced with a miniature gold sabre carried out the strictly military atmosphere.

The pledging of five new members to Scabbard and Blade presented an impressive military feature of the dance. Those pledged were: Major R. H. Back, Charles Bishop, Rudolph Crommelin, Ned Kinney, John McCulloch, and Marshall Wright.

Included in the large guest list were many prominent out-of-town guests, including Governor and Mrs. Julius Meier, Secretary of State and Mrs. Hal E. Hoss, General and Mrs. Paul A. Wolf, and members of the Scabbard and Blade chapter at Oregon State College.

Bob O'Melveny, general chairman of the dance, was assisted by Wayne Emmott, Ira Brown, William Johnson, John Painton, George Kotchik, and George Pratt.

Bob O'Melveny

Journalism Jam

The new 1931 edition of the Journalism Jamboree took place Friday evening, November 13, at the men's gymnasium. This year the traditional event of Homecoming Week-end was not a masquerade as the custom in previous years has been. Campus clothes were in order along with rooster's lids, but rally pajamas were taboo. The dance followed the big Homecoming rally parade and bonfire. This dance was sponsored by the two national journalism honoraries for men and women, respectively, Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi. It was a strictly no-date affair. Brightly colored handbills were distributed about the campus advertising the dance.

A gay crowd composed of Oregon and Oregon State students as well as alums filled the gym and were caught up in the carnival mood as they danced among the multi-colored spotlights, confetti, and serpentine that comprised the decorations.

Merlin Blais

Merlin Blais was general chairman and Ted Montgomery was the assistant general chairman; Alyce Cook, secretary; Eleanor Jane Ballantyne, programs; Jay Sehorn, decorations and floor; and Betty Anne Macduff, features. Willetta Hartley had charge of the well patronized concessions; Carl Webb attended to the cleaning up, and Roy Sheedy handled the publicity.

Junior Prom

A representation of a throne room of an old castle was the scene of the Junior Prom, an annual event of Junior Week - end, held at McArthur court, May 9, 1931. The walls were hung with coats of arms, shields, and swords. The programs carried out the color scheme of black and silver. The room was dominated by a throne, from which Queen Eleanor I reigned. Eleanor Lewis was popularly elected queen and reigned during the entire week-end. A grand march led by the Queen held the interest as the main feature of the dance.

Vice-President Burt Brown Barker presented the Koyl and Gerlinger cups which were awarded to the outstanding man of the Junior class and to the best all-around woman of the Junior class.

Brian Mimnaugh was general chairman of the dance and was assisted by the following committee: Ken Jette, assistant chairman; Velma Powell, secretary; Clifford Beckett, programs; Sol Director, construction; John Long, floor; Esther Kaser, refreshments; Betty Barnes, patrons and patronesses; Litton Bivans, features; Bill Keenan, music; John Painton, clean-up; and Thornton Shaw, publicity.

Those winning the cups were Brian Mimnaugh and Helen Chaney. Dorothy Eberhard was announced as the best all-around senior student.

Brian Mimnaugh

Senior Ball

The most formal of all campus dances was given by the class of 1932, Saturday evening, February 6, at Gerlinger hall. A formal reception was held preceding the dance in Alumni hall. Exotic gold, red, and green decorations in Siamese style did not detract from the air of dignity and splendor that pervaded the ball room. The programs carried out the same theme in the colors.

Housemothers from six women's living organizations, with the wives of two faculty members, served refreshments during the evening. Those serving included Mrs. A. L. Wall, Mrs. Katherine Yerex, Mrs. Josephine Stewart, Mrs. James H. Gilbert, and Mrs. Virgil D. Earl.

Robert Allen

The committee in charge of the dance was Robert K. Allen, general chairman; Constance Baker, reception and refreshments; Virginia Grone, assistant on reception and refreshments; William Barendrick, tickets; Omar Palmer, assistant on tickets; Roy Sheedy, promotion; Harry Van Dine, assistant promotion work; Margaret Hammerbacker, secretary; Walter Baker, decorations; Dave Totton, music; Warren Cress, assistant chairman.

The Senior Ball committee tried to outdo all past dances in its efforts and to make the ball the most formal and most lavish of all campus dances, in their last big college affair.

Krazy Kopy Krawl

The big ballyhoo dance of the year was held Saturday evening, January 16, at Coconut Grove. This annual campus dance was presented by Alpha Delta Sigma, men's national advertising honorary. Huge colored posters advertised well known products and souvenirs consisting of samples were provided by these manufacturers. A new feature was added to the dance this year in the form of a vodvil featuring the best campus talent available. The evening was considerably enlivened by the presence of six genuine night club hostesses.

The Krazy Kopy Krawl was first instituted in 1927, and since then has been an annual event and has proved to be one of the campus favorites among the informal dances of the year.

Bob Holmes was general chairman. The favors were planned by Larry Jackson, who was helped by John Painton. Roger Bailey was in charge of the ticket sales. Dick Goebel secured the brightly colored advertisements for the decorations. Francis Mullins procured the vodvil. Hal Short provided for the patrons and patronesses. The advertising was handled by Barney Miller and Mac Miller.

Those on the program included Ivy Walkem, Sally Addleman, Hal Hatton, and the Theta Chi trio. Francis Mullins announced the different numbers appearing after each dance.

Bob Holmes

A gloomy graveyard, with music coming from a ghost orchestra playing from a huge coffin, was the scene of the first Junior-Senior dance held Saturday evening, October 31, at Coconut Grove. This founded a new upper-class tradition that the campus will look forward to being continued. Skeletons from prominent campus closets were brought out and rattled about the edge of the dance floor. Refreshments were of the popular Hallowe'en combination and the programs carried out the Hallowe'en colors, orange and black.

Fred Fletcher and Gordon Day were general chairmen of the affair, and the committee assisting was composed of the following Juniors and Seniors: Will Norman, Jack Vaughn, John

Ferd Fletcher

Painton, Ned Kinney, Louise Ansley, Fred Hellberg, Maurice Pease, Esther Hayden, Barbara Barker, Helen Darby, Margaret Bean, Sally Adleman, Marjorie Swafford, Lucille Kraus, Ellen Sersanous, Cecil Espy, Ben Vitou, Ed Bolds, Willis Duniway, and Roger Baitey.

Many Dances Held During the Social Season

Oregon students are given ample opportunity to attend dances on their own campus, as almost every week-end some dance is sponsored by the University. Informal rally dances and matinee dances are given throughout the year. All classes have their traditional dances that are given, besides which they often have additional dances. This year saw the advent of an entirely new dance, one given through the combined efforts of the Juniors and Seniors.

Every spring term the Freshman class gives the Frosh Glee, which the whole campus eagerly awaits. Senior Leap week, a week in the spring term in which the co-eds do the dating, is the occasion of a formal ball given by Mortar Board, Senior women's honorary.

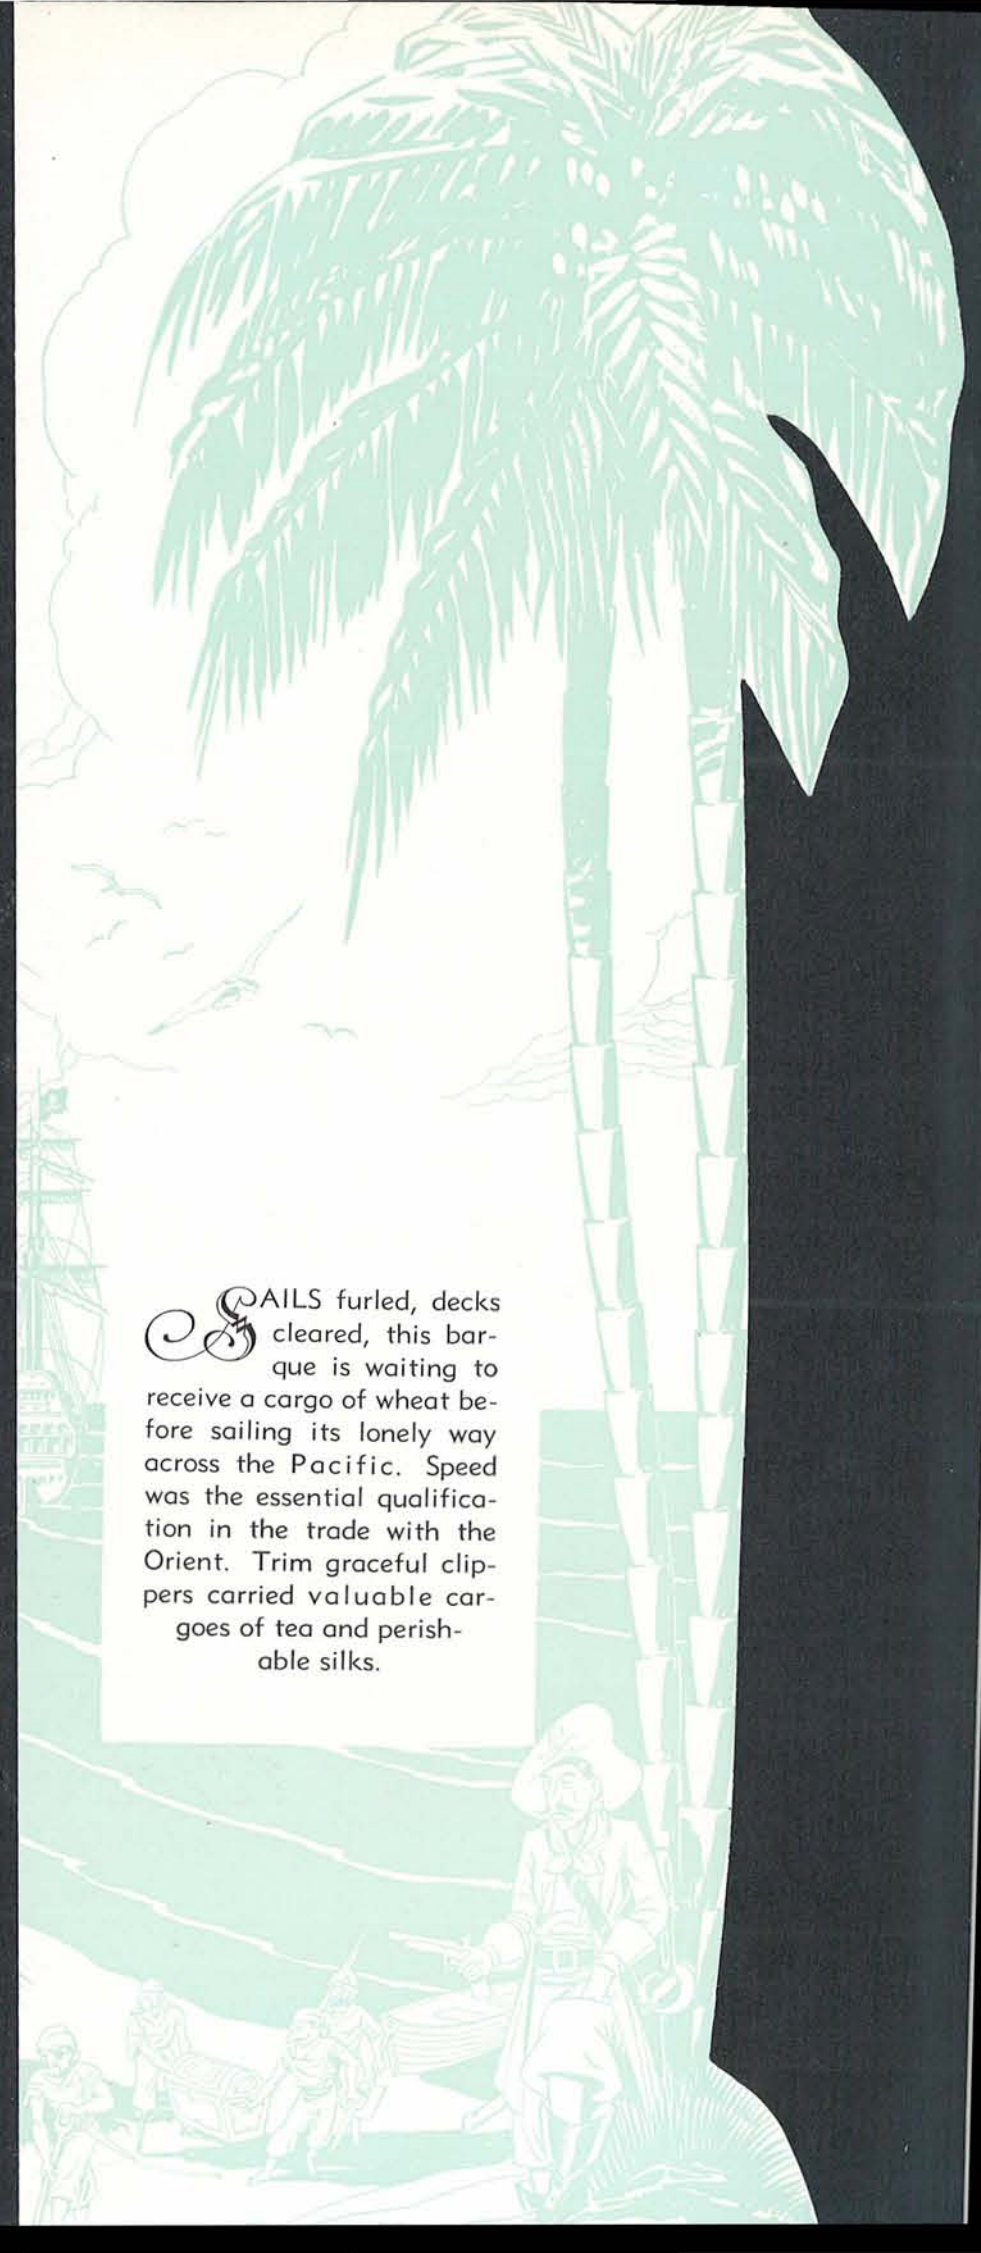

This year the faculty and students cooperated and gave two affairs that included dancing, vodvil acts, and stunts. One was the Christmas Revels, held just before fall term finals, and the other was given winter term and was a costume affair, the Colonial Rout, held in honor of George Washington's bi-centennial anniversary.

The Beaux Arts Ball presented by the Architecture and Allied Arts league of the University is a masquerade held spring term. Fall term of this year the Law school entertained with the Barristers' Ball.

Dances are not given in the two closed week-ends just before finals, but it may be seen from the variety of dances, from informal rally dances and masquerades to strictly formal balls, that the Oregon students have their share of "good times."

Oregana Carries Ship Motif

A comprehensive record of student body activities and an accurate picture of campus life during the year is the goal of the Oregana, the official yearbook publication of the Associated Students. The Oregana's predecessor, the first University yearbook, appeared in 1900. Although changes in name and format have occurred, the publication has been continuous and increasingly successful, and today the University yearbook occupies an enviable place among the better college publications throughout the country.

Old clipper ships and the ocean, and Oregon's nearness to the sea has inspired the book's art motif. This year, more than ever before, the interests of the students have been drawn across the green waters of the Pacific to activities and endeavors in many fields. The "good will" debaters, David Wilson, Roger Pfaff, and Robert Miller, who this year made their extensive speaking tour throughout the Pacific basin, spent a major portion of their time on the ocean as they traveled from place to place. The University summer school conducts each year two ocean trips, one to the Hawaiian islands and one to Alaska and northern waters. Thus the sea, which plays such an important part in student life, thought and activity, has formed the background motif for this annual.

The editor of the Oregana for this year is Thornton Gale, senior in journalism, who was associate editor of last year's book. Wells Smith, senior in economics, is associate editor; Virginia Wentz, junior in journalism, and Zora Beaman, senior in journalism, are assistant associate editors; Allen Proctor, sophomore in architecture, is art editor; and Madeline Gilbert, sophomore in sociology, is general secretary.

Business Staff Handles Finances

The financial responsibility of the Oregana requires a large expenditure of time, money, and careful planning. Over $12,000 annually must be collected and distributed by the book's business staff in order to assure financial success, and the direction of the engraving, printing and binding for the annual, collection of advertising, both subscription and display, subscription drives and allotments and, finally, the distribution of the book itself must all be carefully organized and carried out by the business staff.

Roger Bailey

After a marked success in handling the business of the Oregana last year, Roger Bailey, junior in business administration, was again appointed to fill the position of business manager for this year's annual.

Gordon Day, junior in sociology, and Frances Johnston, sophomore in English, ably assisted Bailey in various duties and responsibilities. Assistant business managers are their official capacities. The advertising manager is John Painton, senior in business administration, who worked hand in hand with Bailey in securing the necessary advertising for the Oregana's pages. Roberta Mills, sophomore in English, is the office manager and had complete charge of the organization of the business office.

A subscription drive held on the campus during the fall term yielded very satisfying results when 20 living organizations pledged "100 per cent Oregana." All the other organizations, although not up to the 100 per cent mark, came near to the top and aided materially in the increase of its circulation.

Oregana Business Staff

The managers and assistants in all departments of the general business staff are equally responsible for the success or failure of the financial side of the Oregana. This year's staff was made up of competent, hard-working members who carried out their tasks with unerring dependability and are worthy of commendation.

The fall term subscription drive offered two prizes, one for the women's organization and one for the men's organization that first pledged a 100 per cent Oregana subscription list within their group. Delta Delta Delta and Alpha hall received the prizes in the contest. Many other groups were also 100 per cent.

Oregon Daily Emerald Voice of Student Opinion

Oregon's daily newspaper, the Emerald, with its clear cut presentation of campus news and student life, is distributed to the members of the student body each morning with the exception of Sunday and Monday. The Emerald strives continually to be not only a conveyor of campus news but an institution striving for the betterment of campus conditions and student life.

This year's Emerald editor is Willis Duniway, senior in journalism, who claims membership in a distinguished family of newspaper men. His great-uncle, Harvey Scott, was the founder of the Portland Oregonian. Duniway was appointed to the editorship of the Emerald at the end of last year, following his short term as managing editor. He is also campus correspondent for the Portland News-Telegram.

The "Emerald of the Air," a 15-minute daily broadcast over radio station KORE, is one of the principal side-features sponsored by the Emerald. Merlin Blais, senior in journalism, is the present radio editor and the programs are planned and supervised by him. The programs consist of short talks, news items of interest, music, book reviews, or sport talks. Twice a week short plays are presented under the direction of Cleta McKennon. The plays are often written by students. The casts are chosen at try-outs among student talent.

The eleventh annual Pacific Intercollegiate Press association conference was held on the campus in November. Twenty-four editors and managers of college publications in California, Nevada, Idaho, and Washington were present for a two-day session including conference meetings, a luncheon and a banquet.

Thornton Shaw, senior in economics, is the present managing editor of the Emerald. Ralph David, senior in journalism, is associate editor, and Lawrence Jackson, senior in business administration, is business manager.

Outstanding Workers Receive Awards

Awards, consisting of pins and membership in the Emerald "O" and small cash prizes, are made each spring term at the Emerald banquet to students who have displayed marked ability and enterprise in their work on the Daily Emerald. Last year the banquet was held at the Osburn hotel. Dean Eric W. Allen, of the school of journalism, acted as toastmaster, and the entire staff of the Emerald was present.

Rex Tussing, senior in journalism, won the honor of being the first person to have his name engraved on the Turnbull-Hall honor plaque, presented by George S. Turnbull, professor of journalism, and Vinton Hall, retiring editor of the Emerald, to the student showing the most consistent and outstanding influence among the student newspaper workers during the four years at the University. The plaque is to be awarded each year.

Pacific Basin Tour Debaters

The last half of 1931 saw the University of Oregon take another major step in establishing itself as a recognized leader among American universities in the active promotion of international good-will. The Pacific Basin Good Will tour, concluded by three Oregon students early in 1932, is the longest international speaking and debating trip ever sponsored by an American university.

In 1927-28, a University of Oregon debating team made the first "round-the-world" forensic tour ever undertaken. It was later imitated by several universities in various countries.

The Pacific Basin Goodwill team was the first to make a complete circuit of the Pacific, and its seven months' trip of 35,000 miles was longer both in time and in distance than the "round-the-world" trip. Since the conclusion of the Pacific tour several American universities, together with universities in New Zealand, Australia, and the Philippines, have begun to make plans for similar Pan-Pacific trips.

The selection of Robert T. Miller, Roger Alton Pfaff, and David G. Wilson as the personnel of the Pacific Basin team was announced by the faculty committee about May 1. At the same time, Walter E. Hempstead, member of the 1928 team and now instructor in the speech division, was named faculty adviser.

Sailing from Portland on June 2, the Oregon trio first went to San Francisco and then visited New Zealand, Australia, Ceylon, India, the Straits' Settlement, the Philippines, Hongkong, China, Japan, and the Hawaiian Islands before returning to the United States in December.

In San Francisco, Portland, and Eugene they were accorded a notable reception. Governor Meier of Oregon and Mayor Rossi of San Francisco met the team as their liner docked in the Bay City. University alumni met their ship on arrival at Astoria several days later. A crowd of 300, representing the University, the city of Portland, and leading civic organizations, was at the dock in Portland on January 3. And when the team arrived in Eugene on January 8, a rally-reception was staged at the depot like those given for returning heroes of the gridiron. A formal banquet and a dance at McArthur court completed the program.

During the long trip, Pfaff, Miller, and Wilson filled more than 100 speaking engagements, of which about 30 were debates.

World Press Lauds Tour

"One of the most important and significant educational projects undertaken by students of any American university in recent years."—East Oregonian.

"Once more it can be said with some assurance that modern youth is doing enough of good and worth while things to offset some of the less favorable indications. The Pacific Basin Debate tour is one of these. Here is the nearest example of a fine idea and ideal that originated in the mind of one of the students when in high school, and which by their own efforts almost entirely has been brought to realization."—Morning Oregonian.

"If the visitors had received one-tenth of the benefit that the audience had, they would have profited very much from their visit."—Otago Daily Times, New Zealand.

"The general impression you have created if I can condense is 'if these boys are a fair sample of American youth we are sorry that we did not know them before, and we want to keep on meeting them.'"—J. B. Rodgers, Queensland Debating Societies Union, Brisbane.

"You brought with you the real American spirit and I think of you as not only truly representing Oregon, but all of the United States."—Henry W. Wolcott, American Consul, Adelaide, Australia.

"The University of Oregon team has conquered the University of the Philippines in debating, resolved "That Imperialism Is a Benefit." Their victory is all the more remarkable when you consider the subject in these islands and the fact that three of the five judges were Filipinos."—Creed C. Hammond, Auditor, Government of the Philippine Islands.

These are only a few of the world-wide press comments on the University of Oregon Pacific Basin Tour. Wherever the debaters spoke, the newspapers of the country gave their unqualified commendation.

In the eyes of the world, a speaking tour of as ambitious a nature as this, assumed more significance than as an Intercollegiate debate tour. The trio acted as good will ambassadors for the United States. In the far East their presence was interpreted as a friendly gesture by a major power, and did a great deal to pave the way for more amicable understandings, and cooperation in the future.

Forensic Managers

The student managers contributed much during the past year to make forensic activities successful. Charles Jones, who was active in debate as an upperclassman, was general student manager. His assistants were: Clifford Beckett, varsity debate manager, who was also appointed chairman of the welcoming committee for the Pacific Basin tour; Bernice Conoly, women's debate manager; and George Bennett, freshman debate manager.

An innovation in the organization was the appointment of a secretary, Josephine Waffle, who kept records of the schedules and had charge of the necessary correspondence.

Men's Varsity Debate

One of the fullest debate calendars in years was arranged for the varsity debaters this year. Besides two road trips, the teams debated with representatives from ten schools.

In the first debate of the season, January 26, against Whittier College, Wallace Campbell and Rolla Reedy represented the University. On this same day Hobart Wilson and Walt Evans spoke in the first radio debate, against the same school. One of the most important contests was against the University of Pittsburg. The easterners met our team on February 6.

Much interest was shown in the two tours that were taken this year. Hobart Wilson and Walt Evans were chosen for the northern trip, February 17 to February 20. They spoke against Whitman College, Washington State College, and the University of Idaho. In the southern tour, March 16 to April 1, the Oregon men competed with Stanford University, University of Southern California, Whittier College, U. C. L. A., Pomona Junior College, and the University of Arizona.

The complete list of participants in varsity debate this year is: Wallace Campbell, Rolla Reedy, Walt Evans, Hobart Wilson, George Bennett, Thomas Tongue, Cecil Espy, Otto Vonderheit, Ray Clapp, and Stephen Kahn.

Women's Intercollegiate Debate

Following the plan that was adopted last year and which has proved very successful, the women's debate squad combined the freshmen women with the varsity members. The team included Bernice Conoly, Florence Holloway, Betty Whitson, Lynne Anderson, Jean Lennard, Louise Smith, Geraldine Hickson, Helen Harriman and Alma Tye.

The schedule was composed of twelve debates, eight of which were on the home floor. Florence Holloway and Betty Whitson were chosen to represent the squad on the Northwest tour, which lasted from February 16 to February 21, and which included debates with Whitman College, Washington State College, and the University of Idaho.

During the season, the various teams encountered many strong opponents from the University of Washington, University of Idaho, Washington State College, Pacific University, University of California, Oregon State College, and the University of Nevada. The debate with Oregon State College, an annual relation in women's forensics which was begun only last year, was held by radio, both in Corvallis and Eugene.

Freshman Debate

Under the leadership of Robert Oliver, coach, and George Bennett, manager, the Freshman debate squad had a very successful year. Much interest and initiative was shown by the members of the team, who encountered, during the season, representatives from six schools throughout the state.

Mr. Oliver, who is working for his Master of Arts degree in English, graduated from Pacific University in 1931. He has attended two summer school sessions at the University of Washington. As proof of his qualifications for advisor of the Freshman team, it may be stated that during his college career, he took part in 45 intercollegiate debates as well as four oratory contests.

The members of this year's squad were: Brittain Ash, Bernard Asheim, Howard Ohmart, Theodore Pursley, Orval Thompson, and Herbert Skalet. They represented the University in five dual debates against Pacific University, Oregon Normal School, Linfield College, Albany College, Willamette University, and in one single debate against Eastern Oregon Normal School. All the debates were characterized by a policy of non-decisions. It is believed that this method stimulates more intelligent, valuable work, since it does not place too much emphasis on winning. Cross-question style of debate was also adopted. By this is meant the system in which a member of each team is permitted to cross-question a member of the opposing team for a period of ten minutes. The method proved to be very satisfactory.

A subject of national interest was chosen as the topic for debate: "Resolved, that Congress should enact legislation providing for centralized control of industry "

Contest Speaking

Oregon participated in seven oratorical contests during the past year. At the Pacific Coast conference held March 22 and 23, Rolla Reedy and Wallace Campbell represented the University. Mr. Campbell also entered the State Peace contest, April 8, his subject being "I Take This Woman."

At the State Old Line contest, March 11, the Oregon entrant was John Pennington, who spoke on "Oliver Wendell Holmes, Liberal Jurist." The other state contests were the State After-dinner, December 11, and the State Extempore, February 12. Thomas Hartfel, in the former, chose as the title of his oration "Racketeers, You're on the Spot." George Bennett, in the extempore contest, spoke on "Issues in the 1931 Campaign, If Any."

Thomas Hartfel, Oregon representative, in another contest chose as his theme "Washington, the Courageous." Walter Hempstead was their advisor.

The Congress club is a debating society, composed of those who are interested in oratorical activities and debate. The floor can be held by any member. Meetings, which are held every Wednesday at the College Side, are conducted as open forums, the topics discussed usually being of an economic or political nature.

Officers are: Roy McMullen, president; Otto Vonderheit, vice-president; Robert Jackson, treasurer; Donald Saunders, secretary; and George Bennett, parliamentarian.

Honor Awards

Judged outstanding among many excellent orations, Errol B. Sloan's "In Defense of the Monroe Doctrine" was awarded the Failing prize in 1931. The award is given to "that member of the senior class who shall pronounce the best oration at the time of his or her graduation." It is made possible through the annual income of a gift by the Honorable Henry Failing of Portland to the University.

Herbert J. Doran, who has been very active in forensics as an underclassman, won the Beekman prize, given under the same conditions as the Failing award for the second best oration. The title of his oration was "Eyes That See Not." The endowment for the prize was made by the Honorable C. C. Beekman of Jacksonville. The judges of the contest were: Mrs. G. A. McNeill of Rochester, New York, Mr. Claiborne M. Hill of Berkeley, California, Mr. Randall S. Jones and Mrs. A. E. Rosenberg of Portland, and Judge G. S. Skipworth of Eugene.

The Jewett prizes are awarded annually from a sum of money given in memory of the late W. F. Jewett, for students who excel in public speaking. Presentations in 1931 were made as follows:

After-dinner speaking contest: First prize, Ruth C. Warren; second, Arthur Potwin; third, Wallace J. Campbell.

Elementary speech students contest: First prize, Leo Edward Laurin; second, Frances Evelyn Frazier; third, Wallace Laurance.

Men's intramural contest: George Bennett, first; Gordon Day, second; Stephen Kahn, third.

Women's intramural contest: Celia Verna Thoma, first; Marian McIntyre, second; Harriet Kibbee, third.

Another speaking contest held this year was that of the Congress Speaking club. Its purpose was to stimulate interest in oratory among the members of the club. Prizes were given by Vice-President Burt Brown Barker. The winners were:

Upperclass contest: First prize, Wallace J. Campbell; second prize, Ralph Burrough; third, Merlin Blais.

Underclass contest: George Bennett, first; Kenneth Fitzgerald, second; Stephen Kahn, third.

These prizes and awards presented each year to outstanding men and women speakers and debaters are given with the purpose and hope of stimulating and encouraging public speaking among the students on the campus.

R. O. T. C.

Major Barker

Officer in Charge

The present commander of the Oregon R. O. T. C. department, Major Frederick A. Barker, was appointed to West Point from Oregon in 1904. Graduating from that institution in 1908, Major Barker has seen 24 years of continuous service in the army, his work being at various times in the United States, Hawaii, and in Europe during the World War.

After serving as executive officer at Vancouver Barracks and then at Fort Lewis, Major Barker was transferred to Oregon in the summer of 1928. Twenty-four years had elapsed from the time he left Oregon for West Point until he came back in an official capacity.

The War department, which is constantly in touch with the various nationwide R. O. T. C. units, is always endeavoring to maintain the highest type of instruction suitable for college men, and to be of value to the students. This work is carried on here under the command of Major Barker, and his leadership has materially increased the efficiency and "esprit de corps" of the cadets. As a part of this program, annual reviews are held in the spring. This year, the inspection was held on April 20, Colonel Pillow, from the headquarters, North Corps area, being the inspecting officer.

Although this is the first R. O. T. C. command Major Barker has held, the department has steadily grown in size. The character of the work and the training given has, for the last three years, received the highest rating of excellence in the tactical inspection given in the late spring after the reviews.

Eleven years ago Oregon had a military enlistment of 325 Sophomores and Freshmen and 12 advanced students. Now, the enrollment is 590, with 55 advanced students. During his short but efficient stay here, Major Barker has contributed much to the excellence of the military department.

Among the activities of the military department are the rifle team which, though handicapped by the return of only four veterans, came through with a much better record than predicted; and Scabbard and Blade, which sponsors the military ball. Major Barker is an honorary member of the organization.

Through work on the drill field and in the classroom, leadership is developed, initiative is encouraged, and the training is valuable in time of peace as well as in days of war. Major Barker has contributed much to developing this leadership, encouraging initiative, and inspiring the Oregon cadets.

Staff Officers

Major Back received his training at Washington State College, and was admitted to the army from his home, Vancouver, Washington, in 1917. During the war he saw action in France as a captain of infantry, and was wounded in action. After the war, Major Back served in the United States and the Philippines. He attended the Army Engineering School in 1922 and graduated from the advanced Infantry School in 1927. In 1931 he graduated from the Command and General Staff College, and was placed on the General Staff eligibility list.

This is the first year that Major Back has been at the University. He is the coach of the rifle team and instructs the junior cadet officers in the military sciences.

Kelley
Barker

Prouty
Back

Lieutenant Kelley was admitted to the army from Rhode Island. He saw seventeen months of service in France, was wounded in action, and received the Silver Star citation for gallantry in action. After the war, he served at Fort Leavenworth, Camp Greene, North Carolina, and was stationed at different posts in the United States. In 1922, he graduated from the U. S. Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia. Lieutenant Kelley was transferred to Oregon in February, 1931, where he became instructor in Freshman and Sophomore basic courses, teaching citizenship, elementary leadership, national defense act, and combat principles.

Lieutenant Everett S. Prouty enlisted in the army from Wisconsin in 1917, and was commissioned as a second lieutenant of infantry. He was overseas for a year, serving in France, England, and Germany. He has attended the University of Wisconsin and Oxford. Since the war, Lieutenant Prouty has been on duty at numerous army posts in the United States, and has served in the Hawaiian Islands. He graduated from the U. S. Infantry School in 1930, and was assigned to Oregon. He is instructor of the senior cadet officers, and charge of two drill companies.

A veteran of 25 years of service in the army, Sergeant Conyers retires from active duty this year. He has seen service in the Philippines, where he took part in topographic work, was on duty on the Mexican border for three years, and has served at Fort Leavenworth for three years. During his 11 years of service here, Sergeant Conyers has instructed in the basic courses and has been a large factor in contributing to the excellence of Oregon's military department.

Sergeant Agule is in charge of the records of the military science department, and is an assistant instructor. Enlisting in the army some 17 years ago in New York, he has seen service in the Panama Canal Zone, and from Wyoming to Louisiana, from New York to Oregon. He has been at the University since 1920.

The world war forcibly demonstrated the need for civilians capable of assuming the duties and responsibilities of ranking officers in the army in case of national emergency. To meet this need and to make it possible for college men to earn military commissions, Congress authorized the establishment of a Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Oregon's R. O. T. C. unit is similar to military departments in colleges and universities throughout the country. The first two years is compulsory for Freshmen and Sophomores. Training is received in close order formation, the manual of arms, and the simpler military sciences.

The Junior and Senior years are elective. Instruction is given in the handling of troops, combat principles, and the higher military sciences. The Seniors act as captains and first lieutenants in drilling the companies, the Juniors as sergeants. Corporals are appointed from the Sophomore ranks, with the Freshmen acting as privates. In the spring of the year, outstanding Senior officers are promoted to the position of major. At the end of a four-year course, including a summer camp, the cadets receive commissions in the organized reserves as second lieutenants. In case of war, they would hold their commissions in the regular army.

An important activity of the Military Science Department is the Rifle team. This team represents Oregon in telegraphic meets held with teams throughout the nation. In 1932 Oregon was entered in 38 meets in addition to meets scheduled with teams in the North Corps Area.

Major Back, coach, was handicapped this season by the return of only four veterans. L. E. Smith, Powell, Minturn, and Moynahan provided the nucleus around which the team was built.

Of the 13 men turning out for the team, 10 won sweaters: Thompson, Moynahan, Powell, De Maris, Minturn, Reeder, Parkinson, Smith, Taylor, and Manager Ira Brown, high point man.

Scabbard and Blade

Realizing that the privileges of citizenship carry responsibilities, a group of young men, military students at Wisconsin, founded the National Society of Scabbard and Blade in 1905. The purpose of the society is to assist college men in meeting the obligations of citizenship, to raise the standard of military training in the American colleges and universities, to encourage the development of leadership and initiative, and to create an "esprit de corps" among college cadets.

The honorary is modeled after the United States army. Chapters are designated as companies, and organized into regiments. Seventy-three companies comprise the roll of the society, making six full regiments, and a part of the seventh.

In the spring of 1928, Company L, Sixth regiment of the Scabbard and Blade, was installed at Oregon. The years that have followed have seen Scabbard and Blade assume an important place in Oregon life. The military ball, a high spot of the winter social season, is sponsored by this group. Pledging of new men takes place at this affair. In 1932, the following men were pledged: Marshall Wright, Rudolph Crommelin, Charles Bishop, Charles McCullouch, Ned Kinney, and Major Back to honorary membership.

On Scabbard and Blade day, October 27, a banquet was held at the Anchorage. C. R. Clark, an early member of Scabbard and Blade, was the principal speaker.

Major Barker, Major Back, Lieutenant Prouty, and Lieutenant Kelley are honorary members, and act in an advisory capacity. The officers of the Oregon chapter are: Treve Jones, captain; Ira Brown, first lieutenant; Fremont Smith, second lieutenant; and Thomas Moran, first sergeant.

Company L received high recognition during the 1931 summer camp, when its captain, Treve Jones, was made captain of the Provisional company, composed of all Scabbard and Blade men from the North Corps Area.

Allied Arts League and Architecture Club

The Allied Arts League is composed of all students majoring in art, architecture, painting, sculpture, etc. Informal "Art Busts" are given every term by the League, thereby forming close contact between departments, faculty, and students.

The Allied Arts League, together with the Architecture Club, fostered the visit to this campus last spring of Frank Lloyd Wright, internationally known exponent of modern architecture.

The Beaux Arts Ball, the most elaborate masquerade dance on the campus, was the major activity of the Allied Arts League during the spring term. It was held at the Osburn hotel, and was under the direction of Schuyler Southwell chairman, assisted by a competent committee. The ball, an annual affair of the Art school, was featured by exotic decorations and gay costumes at this most informal of all informals.

History of the Store

The University Co-operative store is the classroom supply department of the student body. The store was organized in 1920 by the executive committee of the Associated Students.

By being members of the co-operative association, all students are entitled to vote at the annual election when the board of directors, which supervises the operation of the store, is chosen.

The board, which outlines the policies of the store and directs its activities through a manager, is composed of five students and two faculty members, and the manager, Marion McClain.

Alpha Tau Delta

Alpha Tau Delta

Alpha Tau Delta, national nursing fraternity, developed from a local fraternity, Alpha Tau, founded in 1927 by Miss Elnora Thompson, president of the National American Nurses' Association and advisor of the five-year nursing students. Admission into the national fraternity has been accomplished through the leadership of its president, Miss Helen Rothenberger, registered nurse and a graduate of St. Vincent's Hospital in Portland. The group has increased rapidly and at present has 38 members on the campus and 25 in the various hospitals of Portland.

Rally Committee

An essential part of every football game, rally, and other athletic demonstrations is the rally committee. At football battles the small group of students urges the rooters on to give vent to their spirit and enthusiasm. At rallies the committee is always in the limelight along with the yell leaders to promote better cheering.

When the team returns from foreign conquests the rally directorate, band, and cheer leaders head the students in welcoming back the gridiron heroes. The white sweaters with the University's name and the words "rally committee" are easily recognized and stand out among the vast crowds of cheering students.

Under the chairmanship of Ferd Fletcher, sophomore, this year's directorate has been actively prominent during the fall term.

Women on the committee act in a capacity similar to that of women yell leaders, standing in front of the co-eds' rooting section during the football contests. By having women on the committee, it enables the co-eds to have a more active part at football games.

Seven women and four men compose this year's rally committee. Members of the directorate include Ellen Sersanous, Lucille Kraus, Lucille Weber, Esther Hayden, Marjorie Swafford, Marguerite Tarbell, Marie Meyers, Harold Short, Gordon Day, Ferdinand Fletcher, and Ned Kinney.

The idea of a rally committee is still new in the University, but its success in its few years of existence speak for its continuation in the future.

A grandstand of indifferent, unenthusiastic lookers-on, who half the time are looking at something or someone else other than the struggle before them, and the team, too, battles half-heartedly. But a rooting section filled with shouting, excited students, pepped up by a group of cheer leaders, then the green and yellow eleven fights to bring new laurels to the University that is backing them. The rally committee only helps to keep up this Oregon spirit, so essential to the winning of athletic contests.

All the women's activities are centered through the Associated Women Students, whose council is made up of the above elective officers, standing committee chairmen, and the presidents of the Y. W. C. A., W. A. A., and the heads of houses.

Early in the year, representatives of these organizations met to discuss common problems and plan non-conflicting programs, with the purpose of avoiding duplication of material and of promoting a better understanding and co-operation among the groups.

Closer contact with the women students of the other Oregon colleges was maintained through a special correspondence committee, furthering the project started in 1931 which resulted in the organization of the Oregon Intercollegiate Associated Women Students. Delegates from the schools in the association met at the University of Oregon on April 19. The formation of the new associated women's group in the state was discussed, and ideas on activities interchanged.

The A. W. S. on April 21 entertained delegates to the Western Intercollegiate Associated Women Students, following their official convention at Oregon State College April 20.

A more systematic method of procedure has been possible this year with the innovation of the A. W. S. office in McArthur court.

Five mass meetings were held during the year, all of which were well attended. Nella Roster, the foreign scholar, spoke at the first one in fall term, comparing the campus with foreign schools. The plan of vocational speakers was continued, with addresses to the women by Miss Avis Lobdell and Mr. Cameron Beck, personnel managers. Meetings during spring term were for the nomination and installation of new officers for next year.

Ann Baum, president of the A. W. S., is a member of Mortar Board, Alpha Kappa Delta, Phi Theta Upsilon, the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, and was secretary of the organization in 1931.

Officers of A. W. S.

Several changes were made in the Associated Women Students activity program this year. The Big Sister work, under the direction of Betty Ann Macduff, was expanded to aid Freshmen women throughout the first year rather than during registration week as formerly. Proper adjustment between scholarship and social and extra-curricular activities was emphasized.

A spring carnival was introduced April 9 for those women living organizations not participating in the Canoe Fete. McArthur court was transformed by brilliantly decorated house booths in which all the regular carnival attractions were displayed.

The "Get Wise" party and April Frolic of previous years were abolished and "Co-ed Capers," a costume affair for University women, substituted on January 13. In the class stunt competition, the Junior class won the prize cup with their "Hallyboo" idea.

Part of this program was given at the Colonial theater as the first of subsequent bi-weekly entertainments sponsored at the theater during the remainder of the year.

Foreign Scholar

One of the outstanding projects of the Associated Women Students on the Oregon campus is that of maintaining a scholarship for some woman student from a foreign country. It was first undertaken in 1925, and since that time, with the exception of 1931, a foreign student has studied at the University each year. This activity represents a broad cultural advancement in line with similar progressive programs of colleges and universities throughout the United States. The for-ign scholar, selected from applications submitted to the A. W. S. by the Institute of International Education of New York City, is the means of introducing a new viewpoint on the campus. Students here gain keener insight into foreign life, and the foreign student will carry into her home country greater understanding and good will not only from the University of Oregon, but from the entire United States.

Three of the foreign scholars have been from France—Mademoiselles Andre Pellion, Lydia Coublin, and Theresa Chambelland; in 1928 Dr. Louis Huls from Berlin, Germany; and in 1929 Elizabeth Norwood of Belfast, Ireland.

On the campus this year is Nella Roster of Florence, Italy. A student of law and sociology at the University of Florence, she is working on a thesis on international law, which she expects to complete with another year in the United States.

Activities directly connected with the scholarship fund are the Dime Crawls. A reversed Dime Crawl was held winter term, at which the men's organizations were hosts; the Christmas College Ball at the Multnomah Club in Portland on January 2; the chrysanthemum sales before important football games of the season; and the A. W. S. auction sales of unclaimed articles found on the campus which are held two or three times during the year.

Committee chairmen for these activities this year were: Dime Crawls, Louise Ansley (foreign scholar chairman); Christmas College Ball, Marguerite Tarbell and David Epps; Chrysanthemum sales, Louise Webber; and auction sales, Margaret Hunt.

The Young Women's Christian Association is a national organization with purposes of broadening friendships and life through the inter-association of religion and education, and the development of leadership through practical experience. Participation in the World Students' Christian Federation extends its interests and opportunities internationally.

With other western organizations, the Y. W. C. A. is represented at the Seabeck conference in June.

Vesper services at 5 on Tuesday, discussion groups, upperclass and frosh commissions, and the annual banquet are the chief activities of the organization. Government and leadership is carried on by the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, composed of officers and committee chairmen.

Margaret Edmunson is the executive secretary of the association.

Philomelete offers to all women on the campus opportunity for wider contacts in friendships, and the development of special interests. It is made up of nine hobby groups, which are centered through the sponsorship of Phi Theta Upsilon, upperclass women's honorary, headed by Helen Evans, president.

Through study, discussion, research, and recreation with other women, boundaries between classes and organizations, between affiliated and independent groups are lessened, and a wider social viewpoint maintained. Philomelete is a means of developing personality traits, abilities, and leadership through working with others.

The organization as a whole gave dinners for the new women on the campus, and a Thanksgiving party fall term, an informal dance and a picnic in the spring. During the year many of the groups have combined to sponsor dances and parties.

With the formal initiation in Gerlinger hall winter term, Philomelete membership was brought to 250.

The project begun in 1929 through the work of Diana Deininger, president of Phi Theta Upsilon that year, is growing rapidly in scope and definiteness of purpose.

The Women's Athletic Association has evolved from an organization originally sponsoring intercollegiate contests, to one with the primary purpose of interesting Oregon women in general health and intramural and inter-class sports. Membership is gained by the earning of a specified number of points awarded for participation in any of the regular sports offered.

Observance of the A. C. A. C. W. National Health week, beginning November 17, was the first big activity of the year.

The Aleen cup, presented to the women's living organization planning the best week's menu, was won by Alpha Phi; the poster contest, by Lolita Biller; the posture contest, by Helen Leisz.

Spring term activities were the College Play day at which several western Oregon colleges were represented, a high school play day for Lane county girls, and the strawberry festival.

Managers of sports for the year were: Thelma Lund, hockey; Catherine Duer, volleyball; Nellie Schaeffer, basketball; Alice Madsen, hiking; Juanita Demmer, speedball; Doris Payne, baseball; Florence Tennant, golf; Vivian Coss, tennis; Dorothy Ball, archery; Dorothy Lou Mac-Millan, swimming.

This year women's Order of the "O" was made strictly an honorary organization for women who have taken an active part in the Women's Athletic Association.

Besides the earning of 1000 points in interclass competitive sports, qualities of scholarship, good sportsmanship, cooperation, interest, and leadership are considered by the W. A. A. council and Order of the "O" in the selection of active members. The awards for earning 1000 points are a white sweater and a large "O." Associate members are those who have made 500 points, the requisite for the award of a small letter "O."

Three new active members were selected this year, and their awards presented at the W. A. A. banquet winter term. They were Vivian Coss, Juanita Demmer, and Lolita Biller.

Sports offered during the year in which points toward membership might be won were: hockey, volleyball, basketball, hiking, speedball, baseball, golf, tennis, archery, and swimming.

An Inscription to Irene Gerlinger

A monument to noble womanhood. This building has a soul. Hearts joined with hands in its erection, and love and aspiration informed a reverent craftsmanship. The very workmen labored under a benign rule that was more guidance than authority. Not by tribute torn from the unwilling vassals of a prince nor from the impudent arrogance of penitent or boastful wealth were these stones laid. Gifts in devout and cherished memory of noble mothers . . . . . and gifts of hope from many a home made joyful by a little girl are all here bodied forth. When the massed power of all the people moved within the legislative halls and said The daughters of a democratic state are the most priceless treasure. Let the decree be written in brick and stone . . . . . It stands today—a structure built on honor . . . . . Our own land serves our daughters . . . . . A little sheltered from the traffic of the street, yet not too far retired, the building stands, strong as the firs and rocks of Oregon yet built in grace not ruggedness . . . . . Into this college home we sought to build beauty with strength.

—Eric W. Allen.

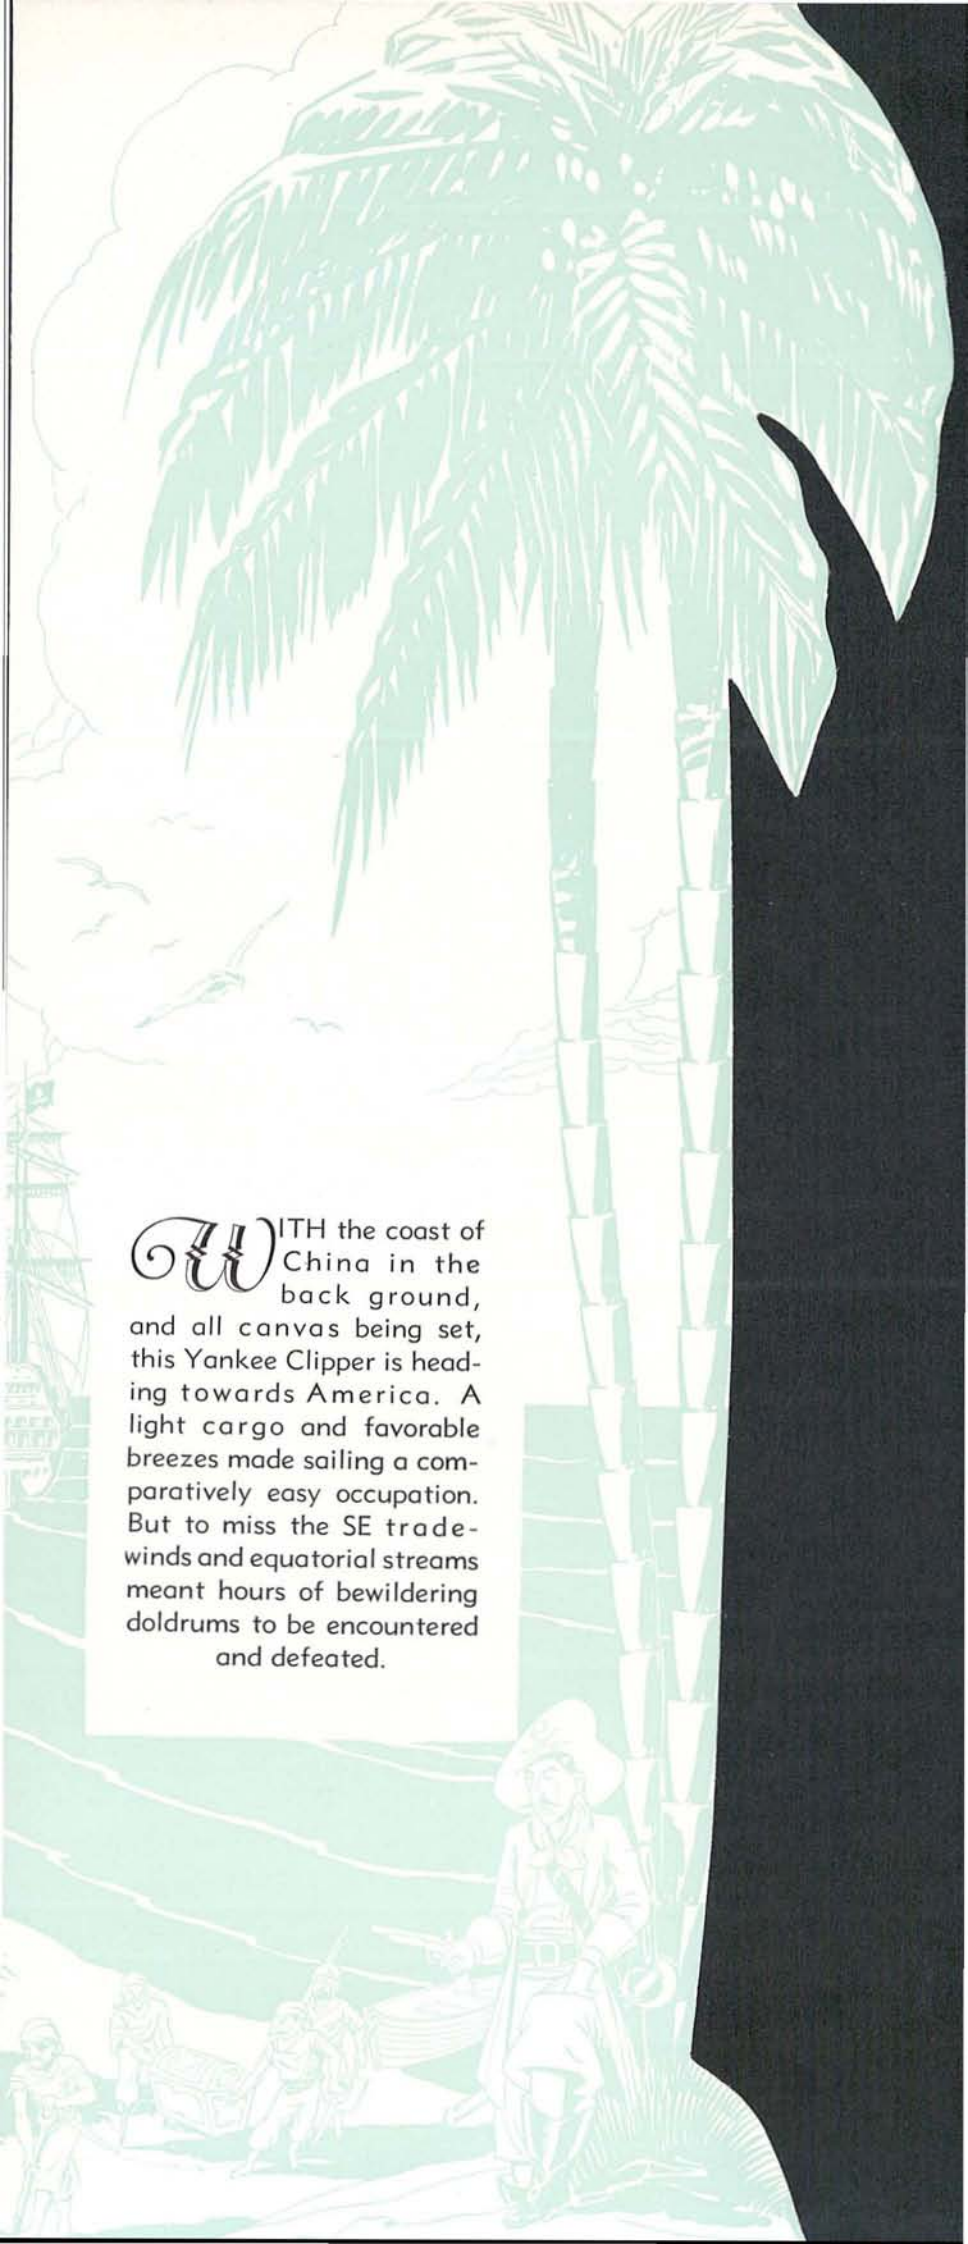

Interior of Gerlinger Hall

Gerlinger Hall, dedicated May 7, 1921, is named in honor of Irene Hazard Gerlinger, a regent of the University of Oregon from 1914 to 1929. The chief function of the building is service to women. It contains their athletic facilities, and it is used in many other ways. Entertainments and dances are held in the gymnasium; Alumni hall, with its soft lights and rich furnishings, is the scene of meetings and social gatherings; there are smaller rooms for group meetings; the sun porch on the south side of the building is convenient for campus teas.

WITH the coast of China in the back ground, and all canvas being set, this Yankee Clipper is heading towards America. A light cargo and favorable breezes made sailing a comparatively easy occupation. But to miss the SE trade-winds and equatorial streams meant hours of bewildering doldrums to be encountered and defeated.

THE ARTS

Drama

Mrs. Otilie T. Seybolt

Department of Dramatics

Under the leadership of Mrs. Otilie Turnbull Seybolt, director, the department of dramatics has presented to the campus four outstanding plays during the season. Particularly notable have been "Journey's End," major winter term play, and Philip Barry's "Hotel Universe," spring play.

The response which "Journey's End" received from townspeople and students proved it to be one of the most successful, as well as one of the most ambitious, undertakings ever attempted by the department. Its reception was certainly a compliment to Mrs. Seybolt as the director. It was through department cooperation with Astoria theater-owners that the play was reproduced in Astoria, where it received equally enthusiastic applause.

Mrs. Seybolt came to the University of Oregon in 1928 from Grinnel College, where she had served on the faculty. She did her undergraduate work at Mt. Holyoke College, and her graduate work at Wisconsin, Columbia, and California. She has had extensive experience on the faculties of eastern and southern schools.

The policy of the department, under Mrs. Seybolt, has been one of encouraging as many students as possible to take active part in its varied activities. Large numbers of students have served on technical and production staffs for her plays, and have gained interesting and profitable experience.

This year, the presentation of "The Trojan Women," by Euripides, during the winter term marked the beginning of what is hoped to be a series of revival productions. It is hoped that this presentation will establish the departmental custom of presenting one play from the history of drama each year. This would enable a student, in the course of four years, to see one play from each of four outstanding periods of historical drama.

George Andreini has contributed much of value to the department this year with his excellent technical directing. As technician for the fall and winter term productions, he worked out commendable lighting and stage effects. The members of the classes in stagecraft have worked under his direction. Particularly praiseworthy among the results of his efforts was the dugout scene for "Journey's End." It seemed actually cold and dreary and forbidding.

Mr. Andreini came to Oregon from Stanford, where he did his undergraduate work and received his bachelor degree. As a student at Stanford he worked closely with Gordon Davis and Harold Helvenston, receiving experience in technical as well as directing work.

Spring Play Principals

Barry's "Hotel Universe"

Tempo intricately worked out by a combination of lighting, speaking, and sound effects marked the production of Philip Barry's "Hotel Universe," and left the audience with a feeling of the infinitude of time born in the land of dreams and memories. The ethereal quality of the play was a credit to the discerning direction of Mrs. Otilie Seybolt.

Dorathi Bock, who played Ann Field, gave a professional touch to the play which bespoke her years of experience as a character dancer and professional actress. Her story was that of a love affair with Pat Farley (Addison Brockman.) A tragic intervening romance in Pat's life caused the psychic conflict in his personality.

The whole theme of "Hotel Universe" was based upon a conflict between the values of life among the characters. Their disillusionment and bitterness was finally overcome by the presence of timeless things in which they were caught, and aided by Stephen Field's rich understanding of their troubles, they are led to normality.

Carl Klippel played Stephen Field with remarkable consistency. The bitterness and cynicism of Lily Malone (Norma Jacobs) had an element of comedy and a great deal of skepticism. Walden Boyle, Barry's successful business man, was a character haunted by his youthful ardor for religion. Hope Ames, played by Mrs. Otilie Seybolt, was the one character who took life for granted and was not seriously at odds with her own life. Jean Williams, as Alice Kendall, and Jack Stipe, as Norman Rose, found the conflict of their lives based upon Norman's Jewish pride of race and dread of refusal. Felix LeGrand played Felix, the butler, the character who emphasized the passage of time in the play.

"Hotel Universe," one of the most technically intricate plays ever presented by Guild theatre players, was set with an illusion of solidity and strength and an arrangement of constantly changing light throughout the performance.

Scenes from "Journey's End" and "Dulcy"

War Drama and Rollicking Comedy

Called the greatest anti-war document ever written, is R. C. Sheriff's "Journey's End." This tremendous drama of the emotional strain of war was one of the biggest stage successes ever presented in New York or London.

Leonard Dart, as Captain Stanhope, was the character around whom the tragic emotions of the play were centered. His quick tempo was in direct contrast to the slow, effortless interpretation given by Gene Love, as the serene Lieutenant Osborne. Walden Boyle and Wilbur Walker lent comedy and relief to the intensity of the story. Warren Gram appeared as the boyish Raleigh; Ethan Newman, as Captain Hardy; Jack Stipe, as Hibbert; each an excellent role well done. Charles Shoemaker, Martin Geary, Bob Ferguson, and Eldon Woodin had shorter bits. The psychological effect of the rat-infested, mud-walled dugout scene of the play was one of intensity, strengthening the feeling of the strain of "uncanny silence."

Red-headed, vivacious, lovable, was Marian Camp in the title role of "Dulcy" presented to the campus as the fall term play. The rollicking comedy which developed when "Dulcy" attempted to be the "helpful" wife was carried through by Walden Boyle, as her husband, and Harvey Welch, the self-styled scenarist. Donald Confrey, as William Parker, and Kathryn King, as pretty Angela Forbes, furnished the romantic element. Leonard Dart, as Schuyler Van Dyck, of The Van Dycks, and Gene Love, as C. Roger Forbes, lent dignity to the production. Inez Simons played Mrs. Forbes, Jack Stipe played Tom Sterret, Howard Barrett appeared as the butler, and Carl Klippel did a short bit excellently. The zest and enthusiasm of the cast was shared by the audiences.

Groupings from Greek Tragedy

"Trojan Women" Greek Revival

Stylized treatment in direct contrast to the quiet realism of the more modern productions characterized the presentation of "The Trojan Women," Euripides' story of the siege of Troy. The pathos of the story lost nothing of the poignancy which it held for the Athenians. Mrs. Ottilie Seybolt, as actor-director, established the rhythm of the play, and carried it through on her own shoulders in the role of Hecuba, the Queen of Troy. Revolving around Hecuba was one of the largest casts ever to appear on Guild hall stage.

Poseidon, played by Jack Stipe, was a God-like figure, appearing with Elizabeth Scruggs in the prologue. Inez Simons, as Andromache, was the most tragic figure of the play. Her voice, her gestures, her every minute on the stage showed her grief. Rose Simons appeared as the strange, mad priestess, lending a bit of terror to the play. Barbara Hendricks played the little Prince.

Walden Boyle and Zora Beaman appeared effectively as Helen and Menelaus; Charles Shoemaker, as Talthybius; Bill Anderson, Hagan Moore, Ethan Newman, Michael Norton, as Grecian soldiers. A large chorus of women, directed by Ty Smith Hartmus, furnished the music which sustained the rhythm and tragedy of the performance.

George Andreini, head of the production staff, managed an excellent suggestion of the scene, laid on the shore outside a break in the walls of Troy, by a combination of line, mass, and color, distinguished by its simplicity. The lack of realism in the setting made possible the staging of a play designed for an expansive stage on the Guild hall stage. Simplification of arrangement also added to the effect and illusion of space for the production.

The Studio Players

Students Direct One-Act Plays

Much interest was shown in the annual Studio Play matinees this year. Five one-act plays were presented in two performances on January 12 and 19. The first program included "Intruder" by Maeterlinck and "Gooseberry Mandarin," a fantasy by Ruthenberg. Halman's "The Will o' the Wisp," "Ashes of Roses" by Constance D'Arcy Mackay, and "Pan in Pimlico" by Helen Simpson were included on the second bill.

The Studio Plays are presented each winter term under the direction of members of the class in play production. Casts for the plays are chosen by tryout from the campus at large and many aspiring actors have a chance to show what they can do.

"Intruder" was directed by Dorothy Clifford and included Louise Weber, Cris Pope, and Margaret Woodworth in the cast. "Gooseberry Mandarin" was under the Burlingame, Margaret Hunt, Warren Gram, Bill Gearhart, Bob Loomis, Kathryn direction of Julianne Benton. Members of the cast were Donald Carruth, Harry Eide, Howard Steib, and Gertrude Winslow.

The outstanding play of the two programs was "Pan in Pimlico," directed by Kate Alward, who deserves credit for her excellent direction. The acting of the play was noteworthy with Albert Culverwell and MaryGould Parsons as stars. Wilbur Thibault and Leo Baker appeared in the same play. "The Will o' the Wisp" was somber and grey with a delightful consistency creditable to its director, Rose Haldeman. The class consisted of Mary Jean Warner, Dorothy Gordon, Gertrude Winslow, and Helen Scruggs.

"Ashes of Roses" had the best setting of any of the plays. The scene cleverly represented the eighteenth century dressing room of a great actress. Beth Hurst directed the play and Louise Marvin, Daisy Swanton, William Anderson, and Minnie Belle Heral appeared as members of the cast.

Art

Dean Lawrence

Architecture and Allied Arts

Housed in one of the most attractive buildings on the campus, and one which boasts a small arcaded patio in its center, is found the School of Architecture and Allied Arts, ranked one of the best schools of its kind in the United States. A great variety of courses are offered and among these are subjects in architecture, sculpture, painting, and drawing, design, crafts, interior decorating, art teaching, and the history of architecture and the arts.

Not only does the school offer training for students contemplating careers in architecture, structural design, painting, modeling, illustrating, various forms of commercial arts, interior decorating, costume designing, and crafts, but in connection with the School of Education, it offers special courses for art teachers. It is a member of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture, the American Federation of Arts, the College Art Association of America, the Society of Medalists, American College Society of Print Collectors, and the Western Association of Art Museum Directors.

Exhibits are held in the art gallery of the school of traveling loan and art exhibitions, in order to offer the students an opportunity to broaden their appreciation and to add to their cultural background. Perhaps the most outstanding of these was the Frank Lloyd Wright architectural exhibit. Another interesting display was that of the Warren Wheelock collection of paintings, wood carvings, and bronzes. Sketches by Ben Larson, a commercial artist, and student water colors were displayed, together with pencil and water color sketches by Carl Heilborn, former University student, and oil and water color paintings by A. H. Schroff. The Michael J. Mueller Memorial exhibit was shown during the fall term.

The Art School

Sculpture Important Department

Not only does the school attempt to give as professional a course as possible in the field of sculpture, but a thorough grounding in cultural elements is stressed. Courses in modeling, architectural modeling, and sculpture composition are given here.

Beginning students in sculpture are started at once in stone. Here they cut directly into stone without the use of any pointing machines. Clay is used, however, for studies from life and for small sketches.

Students in the life classes work directly from the figure which is considered as a means to an end or is used as preparation for individual expression and is not considered sculpture in itself.

The composition of most students is not realistic or copied as they merely use nature as a starting point. For in the best type of art, art begins where nature leaves off, and is a recreation of the natural form into a new form which produces art.

The school is very fortunate in being able to secure native stone from Brownsville, Ore. This stone is well adapted for work in the field of sculpture because it is not only very attractive, but is soft enough to handle easily and at the same time it is durable. In the composition of stone, the simplest fundamental forms, underlying nature are used.

Student Work

Weaving Class

Pottery and Weaving Classes

The division of general art subjects has been arranged for students not interested in becoming professional architects, interior decorators, painters, sculptors, or art teachers, but who may be interested later in fields of costume design, or as teachers of art appreciation.

Pottery and weaving are only two among several courses offered in which students may express themselves in the language of form, color, and texture as developed through materials. These courses, known as applied design, give students an opportunity to form independent thinking and direct expression through materials; first, by stressing originality of ideas; and, second, through the selection of many processes of those most appropriate to the execution of particular design ideas.

The pottery classes include the building by hand and casting from moulds of tiles, bowl and vase forms, candlesticks and lamp bases, glazing and firing and the use of the potter's wheel. Special attention is given to beauty of form. In the advanced pottery classes, special studies in ceramic design and decoration are made, and the students participate in packing, firing, and drawing the kiln.

Weaving classes study the construction of simple hand-loom for use in the grades; articles adapted to the needs and abilities of the students; and the warping and setting up of a four harness footpower loom for more advanced weaving.

Courses in decorative design, civilization and art epochs, home decoration, dress design, and stage design are also given under the head of general art subjects.

Painting and Drawing

One of the most interesting departments in the school is that of painting, drawing, and composition. Technical proficiency consistent with the maximum development of individual expression, in the various fields of painting, is the aim of this division of the school, whether the special interests of the student be in the field of landscape, portraiture, mural, or illustration. Wide selection of subjects is permissible and competition and mass training are alike eliminated.

The painting classes use for their study of technical problems of painting, still life forms, modern forms, such as machinery parts, and also the study of color, tone, line, and their relation. Water colors and oils are also used. Half days are devoted to a study of the head, or portrait study, while the remaining half days are devoted to a study of the figure. The importance of the figure as a decorative thing is stressed in these classes, together with its use in decoration.

Classes in drawing spend a short time, at first, in drawing from a cast. In recent years, however, an effort has been made to let all students work from a model as soon as possible. In the life drawing classes charcoal and lithograph crayons are made from the figure.

The composition classes are composed of many interested workers. Work in these classes is based on consideration of the methods of uniting and relating parts of abstract parts.

A new addition to this department is in the form of a small intimate gallery used for exhibition of school work as it is done, and the latest and best efforts are always on display.

During the spring term, students in these classes are allowed to work out-of-doors, where they do landscape sketches while using nature for decorative motifs.

Class in Architecture

Architecture and Mural Painting

Architectural design, structural design, and interior design are embodied in the School of Architecture. Interior and architectural design are five-year courses.

First-year students begin with simple problems of composition such as placing openings in the facades of a prescribed building, and lectures on materials, mouldings, function, and composition. These problems increase in scale as the student progresses. In the upper division courses, actual conditions of site and environment are incorporated in the program as far as possible, and the work of city planning, domestic architecture, and architectural design are correlated in such problems as "An Industrial Village," and "A State Capital City," in which actual topography is given and the problems in architectural design are associated definitely with living conditions, and other practical considerations. In addition to courses in design, graphics, city planning, and construction, courses are also given in architectural history, which includes a study of human nature as revealing the reason why man has created the various arts.

The structural design course takes up surveying as its first class. This is followed by courses in graphic statistics, hydraulics, reinforced concrete, masonry construction, mechanical appliances for buildings, electric lighting and wiring, heating and ventilation, arches, and steel and timber construction.

Interior design is considered in its essential relations with the point of view of architecture. The work of the first two years is carried on almost identically with that of the design course of study. During the following three years, the work is devoted to specialization on interiors.

An important unit of the school is the drafting rooms where students of interior decoration, structural design, and architectural design, occupying individual tables, may execute their various projects.

Normal Arts Course Gives General Preparation of Art Principles

The aim of the normal art courses is to develop an appreciation for the beautiful and to give, together with preparation for the work of supervising and teaching art in the schools, freedom, spontaneity, and power of original self-expression in design, with some understanding of the design and processes employed in the industrial arts and crafts.

In the four-year course, a general preparation of art principles and backgrounds with emphasis on the modern approach as to individual creative expression is given.

For the first two years, a student studies the general principles of art and their application to material in varied forms, such as textile designs, lettering posters, wood blocks, batiks, construction, and book binding. Color theory, which is a study of color with reference to its scientific background and artistic use, is given, and practical applications to every-day life in dress, the home, the commercial work, and the theatre are studied. Design classes also make a study of the nature forms in landscape, human figure, and abstract composition, together with a study of the historical crafts in relation to modern technique and the teaching problem. An interesting series of wood blocks were made in the spring of scenes along the mill race from its head to its outlet. Practice in the use of drawing instruments, and making simple plans and elevations is included in the course of instrumental drawing. Geometric drawing, projections, and perspectives are made the basis of the problems.

Following these two years comes the upper division of crafts, and this includes weaving, pottery, home decoration, advanced design, life and costume, costume design, representation, drawing, and sculpture. Pedagogy of art, which is a comparison of the leaders of the movements and methods of art teaching of the past and present is given in this division. A study of subject matter, material and method of presentation, observation of art classes in the city schools and University high school, lessons, plans and courses of study for grade and high schools is included.

The Art Museum

"Through wisdom is an house builded; and by understanding it is established, and by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches."—Proverbs.

Such is the inscription above the doors of the Oregon Museum of Fine Arts which was designed to be a "temple of things beautiful and significant" and which was made possible by gifts from the citizens of Oregon.

The Murray Warner Collection of Oriental Art is in the process of being installed in the building. This collection was given to the University in 1921, by Mrs. Gertrude Bass Warner, as a memorial to her husband, and was started by Major and Mrs. Warner while they were living in Shanghai, China. Part of the collection was given to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., but the larger portion of it has come to the University of Oregon in order to foster on the Pacific Coast a sympathetic understanding and appreciation of the peoples of the Orient.

Especially distinguished by the rarity and perfect preservation of the objects composing it, the Warner collection is composed of Chinese, Mongolian, Korean, Japanese, and Cambodian collections. Included in the Chinese collection is a large group of Chinese paintings by old masters; tapestries and embroideries; fine examples of cinnabar lacquer; old jade; Chinese porcelains; ancient bronzes dating from the Chou, Han, and Sung dynasties.

The Japanese collection consists of rare old paintings, old prints, and brocades, some of them a thousand years old. Temple hangings and altar cloths, embroideries, old porcelain, jewelry, collections of old silver, of pewter, of copper, of bronze, of armor, and wood carvings are to be found here.

Very beautiful paintings mounted as screens, old bronzes, and Korean chests inlaid with mother of pearl are found in the Korean collection while the Cambodian collection contains beautiful stone carvings, many sampots of silk and gold, and plaster-cast reproductions of the wonderful bas-reliefs from the famous temple of Anchor-Wat.

The Murray Warner Museum Library is on the third floor of the Woman's building at present, and will be transferred to the Museum building when its installation is completed. This contains a collection of rare books dealing with the history, the literature, the life, and the art of the Oriental countries.

Adjoining the Oriental Museum building is a small memorial court which contains a sunken pool surrounded by an arcade, and at the head of which are two seated Pans. This peaceful court is in honor of Prince Lucian Campbell, former president of the University of Oregon.

Sonnet for The Sad of Heart

Loving the drift of April's petal-fall,
The curving of the transitory wing
And every fugitive and lovely thing,
You stood in starry solitude to call
Upon your gods with madness magical
Until you saw, and thence forgot to sing,
The gallant rose abruptly perishing
With dust upon the petal at its fall.

Now reft of song and desolate of peace
You look on beauty with a calm despair
And a wry wisdom, knowing passionately
That bird and rose alike must one day cease
And caring not, being at last aware
Of every blossom's brief mortality.

—Margaret Ormandy

Guest Speaker

The little man postures
A-tiptoe there,
Winning his audience
With an air
Of dapper benevolence
And a smile
Serenely meek
And guileless, while
At the rear of the platform,
Her chosen seat,
His wife looks thoughtfully
At his feet.
Her days, too,
Must all be spent
Steeped in this unctuous
Sentiment.
Can it be,
She seems to say,
You see my idol's
Feet of clay?
But he, with foresight
To be noted,
Is neatly spatted,
As well as coated.

Asahyid Was Lovely..

This is the dark time . . .
This is the time of gloom
Of the shadow
Flung cloak-wise from
The minaret.

Who has heard the slave girls,
Heard the chime of ankle bells,
Heard the heavy feet
Of slave girls?

This is the dark time . . .
Asahyid is gone.
"Asahyid, your flower lips,
The petals of your eyes . . ."

Incensed darkness,
Steal across the city,
Shroud the heavy feet,
Of night-time girls,
Shroud the slavegirls
Catalfalque of darkness . . .

Asahyid was lovely.

Shooting Star

The clouds are foam
Splattered on the sea
Of the sky

The moon comes home
Rocking as the swell
Goes by

Her nets are filled
Silver with the fish
Of the sea

And one that spilled
Shimmers down the deep
Toward me
—Janet Fitch

Homesickness

The moon up here in the North
Is a cool haughty woman
With smooth blonde locks and polished nails,
Exquisitely gowned in silver
For a formal ball.

But in the warm South—my home—

She is a tawny, pulsing red-haired girl
Awakened, sleepy-eyed, from a
Tangled mass of honey-suckle and magnolia
By the careless rapture of the Mocking bird.

—Margaret Reid

Outcast

Night belongs to the willow near the river,
And to the white moth blinded by the moon—
Each has its part: the moth's frail quiver
Finds rhythm in the wind-swept willow's tune.

I dare not try to sway there with the white moth,
Or sing in windless tones beside the willow—
Too earthly, I, to hover in the moonlight;
I must seek sleep upon a mortal pillow.

But moonlight fades, and when the day comes gaping
And the willow, bathed in stifling sunlight, grieves,
Then may I come, with heavy eyelids, seeking
To find the white moth smothered in the leaves.

I. Awakening

Like a mystified young giant
Finding at last his voice, his strength,
You arise
Singing your prophetic songs
Of release.

Awakened by the touch of lips
And the breath of song,
You come into life.
Startled by the favor of a smiling muse
You breathe the strength
Of your renascence.

America

You are a tower of glinting bronze
Undimmed by the mists you rise above;
You are a youth with pockets full;
You are a troubador with head up, singing,
Spanning oceans with your song.

School of Music

The School of Music has for its head Dean John J. Landsbury. Dr. Landsbury has been a member of the faculty for many years, coming to Oregon in 1914. He received his Bachelor of Music degree from Simpson College in 1900, and his Doctor of Music degree in 1909. He attended the University of Berlin in 1904 and 1905 as a graduate student. Dean Landsbury served on the faculty of Simpson College and Baker College before coming to Oregon. He was made dean of the School of Music in 1917.

Mr. John Stehn, director of the band, has been on the campus for three years. He graduated from Cornell College in 1925, and received his Master of Science degree in 1927. For the next two years Mr. Stehn taught in the University of Oklahoma, then joined the faculty at the University of Oregon.

Mr. John Stark Evans, professor of organ, has led an interesting and colorful career. Mr. Evans graduated from Grinnell College in 1913 with an A.B. degree. He attended law school at Iowa University, and later went to New York where he studied composition under Rudolf Gantz and Rubin Goldmark. From New York, Mr. Evans went to California to teach at Pomona College. The following year he came to the Oregon campus.

A short while later the World War broke out and Mr. Evans enlisted in the army where he was made second lieutenant of the infantry. After the war ended Mr. Evans again returned to New York where he studied for a year. The summer of 1924 was spent studying in France, after which he returned to Eugene. Mr. Evans is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

The work of the music managers is important, because it constitutes the mechanism by which concerts may be given without any last-minute mistakes. The managers' duties are exacting and minute, comprising the efficient overseeing of small details.

Jack Bauer and Gordon Fisher have faithfully carried out their many duties and have co-operated in making this year's concert series one of the best.

Symphony Orchestra

The University of Oregon Orchestra is one of the finest of college orchestras. It is fast achieving distinction with the student body and townspeople as well as with critics. Under direction of Rex Underwood it has enjoyed an interesting and successful year.

The first concert of the year was given in the music auditorium on November 19. The brilliant "Overture to Il Guarany" by Gomez was the first composition played. This selection is a legend of Brazil in the days of the Spanish conquistadores. From romance the orchestra turned to fantasy in their description of "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," which tells a story of a lad who, with the aid of some magic words, commanded a broom to bring him water from the well. However, the boy forgot the words which would stop the broom, the house was flooded and he was drowned. The bassoon solos accentuated the fantastical music.

The "Concerto in D Minor" by Mozart was presented as a piano solo by Dr. John Landsbury, dean of the School of Music. The orchestra assisted in part. Hayden "Symphony No. 2" is a lively and stirring number, and it was nicely interpreted.

The second concert and last of the year was given January 31, featuring as soloists Frances Brockman and Howard Halbert, talented young violinists.

The program opened with "Finlandia" by Sibelius. Miss Brockman played Mozart's "Concerto in E Flat Major" with orchestral accompaniment. She displayed beautiful full tones and good technique. This selection gave Miss Brockman a chance to demonstrate her prowess on the violin.

Lalo, "Symphonie Espagnole," for the violin and orchestra, was played by Mr. Halbert, who showed his mastery and artistry with the interpretation of this difficult number. He played with the deep feeling and ease of the artist. The Spanish swing and rhythm of this selection was particularly effective.

The program closed with the "Procession of the Sardar" from Caucassian Sketches by Ivan Ippolitow. This composition describes the half savage tribes of the Caucassian mountains. The music is weird, wild, and almost strained, yet it carries a stressed swing and rhythm. It was greatly applauded by the audience.

University Band and Quartet

The band deserves much credit for what it has accomplished this year under the splendid direction of Mr. John Stehn. The band was one of the principal attractions during the football season, and it has been one of the highlights of the concert series.

The band gave its first concert in the music auditorium on January 17. The program opened with "Inglesina," a typical Italian march. This stirring selection was followed by the soft and melodious "Stradella" by Von Flotow.

"Scenes Pittoresque" by Massenet contains four movements which show the variable ability of the composer.. Gounod's "Faust" was the climax of the entire program.

The closing number was the colorful "Southern Rapsody" by Hosmer. This composition is a skilfully blended fantasia on southern airs, based on familiar dixie rhythms. The effective harp obligato was played by Doris Helen Patterson, member of the music school faculty.

The second concert was given February 21, and proved itself to be of high musical caliber. The numbers ranged from concert marches to overtures and serenades. The program was interesting and brisque, and well applauded by those attending.

The Polyphonic Choir

A new experiment, the Polyphonic Choir, capably directed by Arthur Boardman, head of the voice department, has proved a big success. The choir has taken the place of the men's and women's glee clubs of former years. It is now on its third year, and already the outstanding choral activity of the University.

The choir comprises a total of over two hundred voices, divided into two sections, the first division and the second division. The first division is composed of a group of forty advanced singers, personally directed by Mr. Boardman. The second division is directed by Mr. Roy Bryson, assistant voice professor. This division provides a choral group which is open to all students who desire to take part in such an activity without the necessity of special training.

One of the major musical events of the year was the presentation of the "Messiah" by the full choir. The assisting soloists were Nancy Thielson, soprano; Margaret Sims, contralto; Hadley Crawford, tenor; and George Barron, bass. The large audience was very appreciative of the work done by the choir and soloists, as well as for the accompaniment of the University Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Boardman conducted.

Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" was presented by the first choir and was greatly enjoyed by all. The voices blended more perfectly than ever before, and the soloists sang well.

Hayden's "The Creation," a difficult piece of work, was presented as an Easter offering and was very appropriate to the occasion. Again the voices blended beautifully and colorfully.

The most interesting work of the choir was the concert which was held in Portland. A large ovation was given the young singers for their splendid work.

The choir sponsors the annual "Polyphonic Choir Trophy." This is in the form of a contest among the living organizations of the University. It is interesting to note that this contest affords an opportunity for all students who are musically inclined to make a debut in the campus music world.

Concert Series

Georges Enesco, famous Rumanian violinist, opened the winter concert series. Mr. Enesco is one of the outstanding artists of the day and has few equals as a teacher.

This concert fulfilled the expectations of the large audience. The program was a study in technical intricacies and a work of rabid impressionism. The melody in his selections was exquisitely stressed both in his playing and the fine accompaniments of Sanford Schlusel, pianist.

Mr. Enesco's "Handel Sonata" was enjoyable. "Bagatelle," a modern Rumanian composition, was carefree and melodious, building up to a decisive climax. Through Pugnani's "Largo Expressivo" beautiful effects were achieved. Chausson's "Poeme" was the outstanding major work of the program.

Technical virtuosity was given full sway in the last group of compositions. The purely impressionistic "Fountain of Arethust" from Szymanowski's "Violin Myth" was characterized by delicate effects made through muted tones. Pagnanini's "Caprice No. 24" served to present the artist's skill in the double stop — weaving pictures on the minor strings while carrying the melody in the major.

The concert given by the Eugene Gleemen was one of the most successful ever staged by the A. S. U. O. More than 3000 people packed McArthur court to hear the 75 talented singers, drawn from the ranks of Eugene's business and professional life. The program was directed by John Stark Evans of the School of Music. Assisting soloists were Earl Pallett, basso, of the administration faculty, George Bishop, baritone, University student, and the visiting artist, Hal Young, tenor.

The two opening numbers, Kremer's "Prayer of Thanksgiving" and Mozart's "Ave Verum Corpus" were preludes soothing as they were appropriate.

The first brilliant display of technique and perfect coordination was in the interpretation of the Russian hymn "Hospodi Pomilui" which was introduced in Eugene two years ago by the Russian Symphonic choir.

Bornstein's "Creation Hymn," written for Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor," was very impressive as a piano solo and was very well received by the audience.

Hal Young's first two solos were "Le Reve" from Massenet's "Manon" and the aria from Puccini's "La Boheme." His clear, rich tenor voice carried the rare qualities of vibrant warmth and depth. Earl Pallett was impressive in his rendition of "Old Black Joe," in John Stark Evans' adaptation, and George Bishop's interpretation of "Old Man River" delighted the audience.

As his second group, Hal Young sang Bracco's "Serenata," Clay's "Songs of Araby," and Lehmann's popular "Ah Moon of My Delight." In this composition Mr. Young displayed himself as a master of modulation and delicate phrasing. His two encores were "Tallyho" and Kremer's "Last Hour."

The Gleemen's second group of songs was the war-time ballad, "The Americans Come," Heine's "Two Grenadiers," and Reichardt's "When Roses Bloom."

An effective close was the arrangement of the "Serenade" from Romberg's "Student Prince." This was enthusiastically received by the appreciative audience.

The performance of the Kedroff Quartet was a popular and artistic success. "Vespers in a Russian Village" was rendered with a mystic fervor so characteristic of Russia. The quaint Russian folksongs were entertaining as well as the quartet's manner of presenting them. The gay "Bachanalian Song," words by Ruskin, created a pleasant atmosphere.

The Kedroff Quartet has been on the concert stage for a period of 35 years. For the long years of practice and devotional work, they have been rewarded by the great prominence they hold in the world of music. This appearance of the Kedroffs was their first and last in Eugene, as the quartet, which is on its final tour, will end its activities in Paris this year.

The famous Portland Symphony Orchestra, very popular with the students, never fails to provide an interesting and enjoyable program. The concert presented this year included numbers by Beethoven, Debussy, Borodin, and Tchaikowsky.

The dreamy and beautiful "Overture to Lenore," No. 3, was realistically painted by the 75 masters of melody. The enchanting manner of presentation cast a spell over the large audience, which was not broken until the final strains of the last number proclaimed the end of the glorious program.

"Afternoon of a Faun," entirely different in character, was remarkably refreshing. One could almost see the pictures woven by the orchestra.

"Dances" from Prince Igor were lovely beyond description. The music waded rhythmically to and fro, describing scenes, telling strange tales. Magic sprang from each instrument and worked wonders with each full, vibrant note.

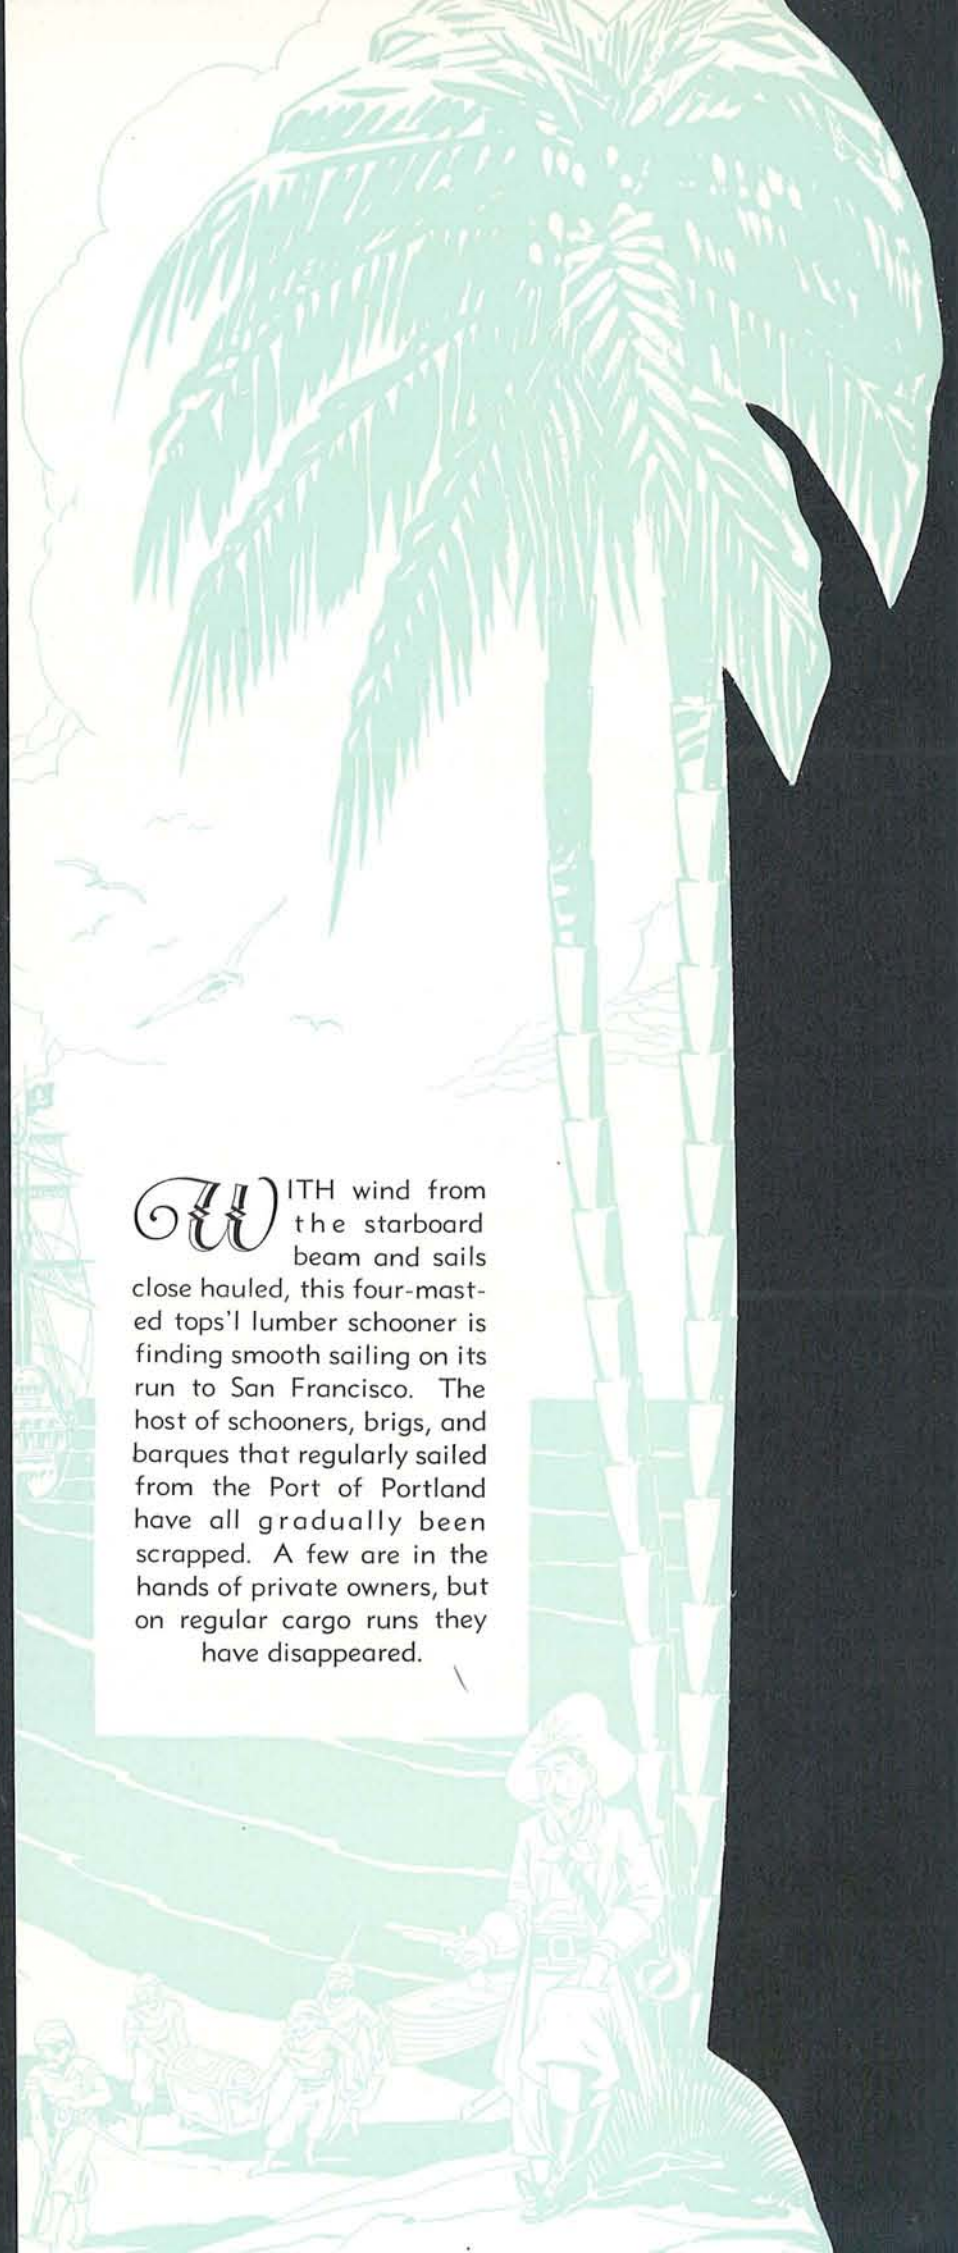

The University of Oregon has been very well represented at all the concerts given by the orchestra in Portland.

Oregon Among Leaders

Under the able tutelage of Dr. Clarence W. Spears, a green Oregon team blossomed forth in one season to rank among the Coast conference leaders.

Forced to build a gridiron machine from sophomore material, he succeeded so well that the durable Webfoot eleven that fought its way through a suicide schedule to third place in the conference standings, and astounded experts by bowling over New York University in an intersectional game, had six men in the lineup playing their first game for the varsity.

In making the Webfoot record of five wins, two ties, and two defeats, Dr. Spears was hampered by injuries that cost him two star wingmen, Steve Fletcher and Larry Winters, and an ineligibility ruling that deprived him of the services of Joe Lillard, dusky backfield flash, who had been heralded by sport critics as Oregon's only barrier against a disastrous football year.

For the fourth successive year the Webfoots walloped the Washington Huskies, and chalked up other conference victories against Idaho and U. C. L. A. Revenge for an O. S. C. triumph in 1930 was postponed to 1932, as the 1931 representatives of the rival schools battled to a scoreless tie. The losses marring Oregon's schedule were received at the hands of Southern California and St. Mary's, while North Dakota and Oregon played to a scoreless tie in another intersectional game.

A rosier outlook awaits Prink Callison in 1932. The sophomore stars, Mike Mikulak, Leighton Gee, Mark Temple, Erwin, Nilsson, Bernie Hughes, and Chuck Wishard will be equipped with valuable experience, while Bill Bowerman, Orv Bailey, and Bill Morgan have one more year of competition. Only two members of the first string, Captain Irv Schulz at guard and Eric Forsta at center, will be missing for the 1932 campaign.

In addition to his nine regulars, the coach will have valuable reserve linesmen available in Milt Thompson, Oliver Pope, Charles Westenheiser, Howard Clark, Con Fury, Red Wilson and Chuck Swanson, while Steve Fletcher, veteran end, may return to school. In the backfield Don Watts, Red Rotenberg, Ray Kelly, Romey dePittard, Bud Pozzo, Jack Rushlow, Orville Beard, Howard Bobbitt, and Oral Shepardson will be very much in evidence.

Night Games Test Oregon Mettle

The yearling ranks will contribute the most promising material with which an Oregon coach has ever been presented. Pep PepeInjack, Bill Bevan, Stan Kostka, Butch Morse, Joe Walsh, Elmer Brown, Art Clarkson, Jim Gemlo, Gardner Frye, Alex Eagles, Clarence Coddling, Ned Simpson, Jack Chase, Roy Gagnon, and Ross Smith are all conceded an even chance for varsity berths in the scramble for positions that is bound to ensue when Oregon begins active preparation for the 1932 season.

Oregon made far from an impressive showing in their first clashes on the gridiron, barely eeking out a 21-6 victory over Monmouth normal and scoring a 20-0 decision over Willamette. Both games were played under the Hayward field lights on successive nights. The Webfoots appeared sluggish and stale from their early season training grind and the lighter elevens contributed all the spectacular playing.

Using a hidden ball play wherein the tackle lugged the leather, Larry Wolfe's scrappy normal squad played the varsity off its feet to gain a lead of 6-0 in the first half. The ghost ball and the white jerseys of the Teachers harmonized perfectly in running off the delayed sneak. The Monmouth boys showed absolutely no respect for the reputed prowess of one Joe Lillard, stopping the colored streak dead at the line, besides holding his punt returns to an absolute minimum.

A regulation ball was supplied for the second half, but the Teachers continued their aggressive tactics, nearly scoring twice more on the same trick. Oregon braced in the last quarter, and with Red Rotenberg in the lineup rolled up three touchdowns on the tiring normal eleven. Englebretsen of the visitors stole the punting honors from Joe Lillard, while Hal MacKenzie was the outstanding linesman of the fray.

The Webfoot sophomores played with more confidence against Willamette, but with the exception of the red-headed comet, Rotenberg, the offense lacked steam. Red packed the ball in sensational fashion on open field runs, and was on the hurling end of several long passes to Leighton Gee. Oregon's line functioned smoother than on the previous night and Willamette was forced to take the defensive most of the game. Larry Winter, Webfoot end, was down on every punt, and Bill Morgan, Oregon tackle, showed brief flashes of the form that won his all-coast recognition by the end of the season. Willamette made a brief but futile attempt at a fourth-quarter score with Cannady, negro half, and Erickson doing the ball carrying.

Oregon Takes Vandals, 9-0

Oregon tallied their first conference victory over a stubborn University of Idaho defense by a score of 9-0. Coach Spears had brought his inexperienced team a long way from their showing against Monmouth and Willamette. Although still far below the peak they achieved later in the fall, they were powerful enough to completely crush the Vandal scoring raids. With Idaho softened by the relentless pounding of the Webfoot forwards and backs, Joe Lillard managed to shove the ball across late in the fourth quarter for a lone Webfoot touchdown.

Duplicating Monmouth's performance, Idaho completely smothered Oregon's highly touted "Midnight Express" in the first half but Oregon retaliated by holding Willis Smith, Idaho's "Little Giant," to a minus yardage average. Mark Temple smashed through for most of the Webfoot gains in the first periods, ably assisted by another sophomore, Leighton Gee. Oregon gained a slight advantage shortly before the half, when an Idaho center passed over Quarterback Sather's head. The latter chased the ball back over the goal line where he was tackled by big Mike Mikulak, Webfoot fullback, as he attempted a return.

With the tandem combinations of Temple and Gee, Watts and Lillard clicking smoothly, Oregon pounded their way down Multnomah field only to be thrust back time and again by the fighting Idahoans.

Captain Irv Schulz and Bill Morgan dominated the Webfoot line performance, but the other linesmen nearly equaled them in effectiveness. Except for Rotenberg, who fumbled frequently, the backs showed a decided improvement over the preceding week. Mike Mikulak was becoming accustomed to the fullback berth, and his smashing tackles routed any line-smashing attempts from the Vandals.

Strong Washington Team Bows, 13-0

Steadily showing improvement, Oregon's lemon-jerseyed warriors upset advance predictions by conquering the University of Washington by a score of 13-0. The Webfoots played for the breaks and got them, to trounce the Huskies for the fourth successive time.

After three even quarters of battling, Oregon unleashed its attack. Gee, Watts, and Lillard had hammered the ball down to the Husky 25-yard line, when Watts suddenly faded back and southpawed a pass that Red Bailey snared on the one-yard line, where a horde of tacklers downed him in his tracks. Lillard drove over for the touchdown.

Washington came back with a rush, nearly sweeping to a touchdown before Oregon stiffened on the 10-yard line. Benny Sohn's punt return of 45 yards was mainly responsible for this advance. After Sohn's sensational run Merle Hufford, Husky triple-threat, lugged the ball for a short gain, and then passed to Bledsoe for a first down on the Web-foot 10-yard line. He flipped another pass but Bill Bowerman, Oregon end, intercepted it and raced 87 yards for the final score.

The whole Oregon team played consistently good ball with Bailey, Bowerman, Gee, Mikulak, and Watts especially brilliant. Paul Schwegler, Husky all-American tackle, and big Pete Antoncich were bulwarks of strength on the Washington line, while the troublesome Mr. Hufford was the shining offensive light. Mikulak backed up the Oregon line to perfection, his smashing tackles being the defensive gems of the game.

Oregon suffered its greatest loss a few days after the Washington game when the squad, already minus the services of Fletcher and Winter, was deprived of Joe Lillard. Charges were brought to the effect that Joe had played semi-pro baseball under an assumed name and the negro star was forced to turn in his suit.

U. S. C. Crushes Oregon's Hopes

Oregon played without Joe Lillard, but it probably wouldn't have made any difference. Southern California ripped the sagging Webfoot line to shreds, romped around the ends, and tossed passes hither and yon to rout the northerners by the very decisive score of 53-0.

Be it said for Oregon that they were struggling against the most powerful offense in the country. Ernie Pinckert and Gaius Shaver lived up to their names of powerhouses, while Orv Mohler ran rings around the bewildered Oregonians in the lone quarter he played. A stonewall defense broke the back of Oregon's thrusts, and a quick-forming interference swept away all vestige of a Webfoot barrier.

Oregon managed to stave off all but one assault in the first quarter, but Orv Mohler took the helm in the second and the scorekeeper got busy. Before the half ended Dr. Spears had realized the futility of catching the Trojans and was giving his reserves a chance.

North Dakota Holds Oregon Scoreless

In a game marred by fumbles and poor kicking, Oregon and North Dakota University struggled through four scoreless periods at Grand Forks, North Dakota, in the Webfoots' first intersectional contest of the season. Neither team threatened seriously in the first three quarters, both squads resorting to punts, with Oregon gaining slightly in the exchanges. The Sioux completed several long passes but failed to make much headway through the Oregon line.

Shortly after the fourth quarter opened Oregon failed to capitalize on their best scoring chance, when Nilsson, Oregon tackle, blocked a North Dakota punt on the 10-yard line. Temple battered in vain at the Nodak line and then threw a pass that was spilled over the goal. Burma, hailed as one of the best backs in the Middlewest, failed to strut his stuff, but Felber at end played outstanding ball for the Dakotans.

Violets Wilt Under Oregon Attack

Oregon made football history in their second intersectional game, astounding grid fans throughout the country when they wilted the Violets of New York University to the tune of 14-6. Led by Mark Temple, plunging dynamo, and Leighton Gee, the Webfoots completely outclassed the overconfident easterners. Doped to win by several touchdowns, the New Yorkers utterly failed to dent the western line and scored their only touchdown by an aerial attack in the third quarter, culminating in a heave from McNamara to LaMark over the goal.

Oregon scored early in the fray, when Temple and his mates rushed the Gothamites off their feet with a series of slashing runs, the Eastern Oregon boy catapulting over guard for the score. When New York crept close in the last period, Temple whipped a pass to Gee that netted another touchdown and clinched the contest. Mike Mikulak played his usual stellar defensive game, while the line consistently outcharged the Violet forwards.

U. C. L. A. Easy Mark for Webfoots

The Webfoots wound up their conference schedule by trouncing U. C. L. A. 13-6, in a game that was Oregon's throughout. Temple and Mikulak probed the Bruin ramparts successfully on two occasions, Temple cracking the line for a score in the opening quarter and alternating with Mikulak in a 75-yard drive in the third period, that was not halted until the latter rammed his way through for the final points.

Shorn of their passing ace, Len Bergdahl, who was injured in the St. Mary's game a week previous, the weakened Bruin aerial attack nevertheless threatened constantly and missed a chance to tie the score, when Mulhaupt dropped Duncan's pass over the goal in a last quarter rally. This same combination produced a Bruin score in the second quarter.

Forsta and Wishard were instrumental in the first Oregon touchdown by their activity in blocking punts. Bobbitt, another sophomore back, broke into the limelight with several long runs to his credit.

Civil War Ends in Scoreless Tie

After struggling through four doggedly fierce quarters, Oregon and O. S. C. were forced to admit that the thirty-sixth renewal of their annual classic was an even proposition. There were few thrills for the vast homecoming crowd as the two elevens pounded stolidly away on the soft field, with neither team securing an advantage. Back and forth amid sudden rain squalls, the players pummeled and battered through the mire, Oregon showing a slightly better running attack and O. S. C. nullifying this advantage with some beautiful punting by Keith Davis.

Davis' lofty spirals were the outstanding feature of the otherwise drab game. Time and again the Orangemen fumbled to bring the Webfoots deep into scoring territory, but on each of these occasions Davis coolly thumped the ball out of danger. Thrills were few and far between as the two powerful lines locked grimly on every play; the ball carriers considered themselves lucky if they were able to reel off two yards at a whack.

Oregon came the closest to scoring when Frank Little, Beaver fullback, fumbled soon after the game opened, and Oregon recovered on the O. S. C. 25-yard strip. Three plays failed to advance the leather very far, so Temple shot a pass to Bailey over the center of the line. The red-thatched end leaped high to snag the ball for a first down on the 10-yard line. Temple endeavored to plow through from there, but he might as well have bumped his head into a brick wall.

Shortly before the half Johnny Biancone, slippery streak in the Beaver backfield, twisted loose for a 20-yard dash to Oregon's 30-yard line, but two passes were knocked down and the Orange wave receded. Reg Rust, giant high-stepping Orange half, hauled down a 25-yard hurl from Davis in the third quarter and galloped 15 yards more before being hauled down by a trio of Webfoots. These spasmodic drives were the best the Beavers could muster against their ancient foes. Mark Temple, who chalked up the most individual yardage, and Mike Mikulak, defensive powerhouse, were outstanding for Oregon.

Oregon Loses Post-Season Tilt

Less than a week after the U. C. L. A. tilt, Oregon came to grips with the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's. The conquerors of Southern California ran roughshod over the stubbornly resisting Webfoots in the last half, to pile up a 16-0 decision.

Leighton Gee's spectacular punting and a vigorous Oregon assault kept the Gaels in the shadows of their own goal posts for two periods. The vaunted St. Mary's aerial attack failed to materialize, and it was the Webfoots who bombarded the air in a desperate attempt to score. Angel Brovelli, famous for his exploits against Fordham, battered in vain at the Oregon wall, while Temple, Gee, and Mikulak slashed through a wavering St. Mary's defense to twice maneuver the ball into a scoring position, but were unable to score.

Two games within a week took toll from Spears' warriors, and before the half ended it was apparent they had shot their bolt. The St. Mary's reserves performed even better than their starting lineup, and the southerners started their scoring with the second half kickoff. Bud Toscani, scintillating Gael back, scooped up the long kick and sped 95 yards down the sidelines behind perfect interference that brushed the Webfoot tacklers aside.

Not content with this score, the Gaels opened a steamroller drive interspersed with the long-awaited aerial assault. Toscani and Brovelli's successor, Pardee, raced through yawning gaps in the Webfoot line, while Johnny Baird and Bill Beasley whipped accurate passes to the wingmen. A gallant defense brought the Gaels up short on the 5-yard line, where Fletcher dropped back and thumped a successful placekick.

The Moraga marauders gathered momentum again in the last quarter, pounding relentlessly goalward, only to be penalized frequently for roughness and holding. A 25-yard penalty put them back on the 30-yard line, but Beasley threw a 29-yard pass to George Canrinus, who was dropped in his tracks. Beasley bucked the final yard that separated St. Mary's from their second touchdown.

Frosh Squad Brightens Oregon Prospects

The strongest Frosh grid squad in Oregon history was the unanimous concensus of opinion among sport critics of the Northwest, after the Washington Babes and the O. S. C. Rooks had bowed before the superior might of the green-garbed yearlings. Prink Callison's squad opened the season auspiciously by slaughtering the Monmouth Normal reserves in an early season workout.

Following this convincing demonstration of their strength, the Frosh proceeded to clean the O. S. C. Rooks 25-13 in their first encounter on Hayward field. The rain that soaked the field into a morass beat a funeral dirge for the baby Beavers as stocky "Pep" Pepelnjack, shifty Elmer Brown, and burly Stan Kostka ripped the Rook line apart to roll up the score. "Butch" Morse at end led the interference that allowed Penelnjack and Brown to get a flying start for their 30-yard sprints.

The Rooks came to life in the third period when reserves predominated in the Frosh lineup, and succeeded in running across two touchdowns on their own account. Norm Franklin dodged and skidded his way to the 5-yard line, and Arnold Heikenen pushed the ball over on a reverse. A few minutes later Pangle broke loose for a 50-yard jaunt that gave the Rooks their final score.

The Washington Babes proved little more than a romp for the rampaging Frosh, and succumbed 31-7. Art Clarkson, ambidextrous speedster, added his accomplishments to the galaxy of stars in the Frosh lineup, and contributed more than his share toward the Oregon total. The whole line outcharged the Babe forwards as easily as they did the Rooks, and presented an impregnable defenst against the Babe onslaughts.

The Frosh capped their long list of performances by coming out on the long end of a wild 43-20 scoring spree with the Rooks at Corvallis. The opening whistle had barely blown when Norm Franklin, tricky Rook quarter, snatched up the kickoff and weaved 90 yards through the entire Frosh team for a touchdown. The Frosh retaliated a few minutes later when Elmer Brown shot a 20-yard pass to Ned Simpson at end, who covered the remaining 25 yards to score. The bothersome Mr. Franklin came back immediately on the ensuing kickoff, this time with a 85-yard gallop through the astonished Frosh. By this time, however, the Frosh were organized and their superior line shoved the Rooks around at will. With Clarkson, Pepelnjack, and Brown flashing their stuff, the yearlings quickly amassed two more touchdowns and Kostka battered over for another shortly before the half.

On the third play of the second half Brown reeled off a 35-yard run to the 17-yard line, and Clarkson raced across the goal to make the count 31-14 for the yearlings. Brown again got in the clear to take the ball down to the 2-yard line only to have a 15-yard penalty mar his work. Butch Morse blocked Franklin's kick and recovered behind the goal for another score, running Oregon's total up to 37 counters. O. S. C. came up with their usual fourth quarter rally when Dan Mitola, Beaver end, blocked Brown's punt, and Pangle picked it up to saunter across the last white line while the yearlings looked on undecided. Pepelnjack made the last Frosh score with an 18-yard dash.

Oregon Takes Fourth Place

When the Northwest Conference basketball race for 1932 came to a close in February, Oregon found herself in fourth place position. This classification is merely on paper, however, for Coach Bill Reinhart's men finished even with Oregon State and took three out of four games from Washington State, who finished only one game behind the Washington Huskies.

With the outlook for dependable material extremely dim at the start of the season, Reinhart had small hopes of bettering last year's record. This is exactly what he did, however, in spite of the fact that his squad was made up mostly of sophomores and boasted only three lettermen. He won 7 games and lost 9 as compared to 6 wins and 10 defeats in 1931.

Windsor Calkins, this year's captain, is one of the two regulars who will be lost this spring through graduation. Playing consistent and at many times brilliant basketball Captain Windy will be remembered by many as one of the greatest stars ever turned out by Bill Reinhart. Not a guard in the conference could keep up with Calkins when he went boring in towards the basket, leaning forward as if he would surely lose his balance. If he got a step ahead of an opponent or even caught his man off balance it was always safe to chalk up two points. Not the least of his accomplishments was his supremacy over other Northwest Conference players in the art of foul-shooting, sending forty-eight shots through the net.

Henry Levoff is the other star who has played his last basketball game for the University of Oregon. Although Hank had not the offensive punch that characterized Calkins' playing, his defensive tactics more than made up for any other lack of ability. This was shown very strongly in the home series against Washington State. Besides checking his own man very strongly, he was constantly harassing the tall, high-scoring Huntley Gordon until the latter scored eleven points in both games, only half of his usual performance.

The third of the only three veterans on the team was Charles "Cap" Roberts, center. Cap scored more points than any other Oregon player, and finished third among conference scorers. His value to the team was not limited entirely to scoring, however, for he was a tower of strength on the defense. His size and strength were prime factors in regaining the ball from the tip-off and from both backboards. He will be back next year to lead Oregon in another conference hoop race.

Sophomores, or men out for basketball for the first time, filled the other two positions. Jack Robertson, sharp-shooter from Lincoln high in Portland, was a first-stringer from the start, although an injured ankle kept him out of the final Oregon State series. Although a senior on the campus, Cliff Potter was out for basketball for the first time and played fairly regularly. He is tall and lanky and aided in scrapping for the tip-off. Gilbert Olinger and Jim Watts were two other sophomores who turned in creditable performances.

Pre-Season Games Test Varsity

Olinger and Watts showed up especially well in the Oregon State games, those semi-professional encounters where nerve and stamina are more to be admired than shooting ability.

Max Rubenstein, diminutive raven-haired forward, served his fourth year with Web-foot reserves and was awarded a well-earned service letter. He pulled several hot games out of the fire for Oregon and his graduation is viewed with regret by many fans.

John Jeffers, LaGrande Houghton, Don Siegmund, Isaac Donin, and Homer Stahl were not fortunate enough to make a letter this year but will be back next year determined to be on the playing squad and help Reinhart win a championship.

Oregon's showing in pre-season games can only be described as mediocre. They won two hard games, it is true, from the crack Ellensburg Normal quintet, but they dropped a game to Dallas town team, an aggregation of former high school stars who could not give decent competition to an average university five. Another game was lost to Multnomah Club in Portland. Florsheim's, an independent team in Salem, was defeated 41-21, and a pair of games was taken by overwhelming scores from Pacific University.

A road trip to Idaho and Washington State started the regular playing season. Idaho was much stronger than the Webfoots were led to believe and the first game was dropped 31-26. Cap Roberts was the star of the game, however, scoring 12 points and holding the giant Grenier to one field goal. In the game the next night Oregon got off to a quicker start and Captain Calkins led his team to a 33-29 victory.

Two days later the boys again took it on the nose, losing to Washington State 33-21. But Bill Reinhart, master strategist, sat up half the night and figured out an offense that completely baffled the Cougars in the second game. This was Robertson's turn to be "hot," and he led his teammates to a thorough 42-29 thrashing of the Cougar, accounting for 15 points himself.

Oregon Divides Series With O. S. C.

Coming up from behind a 13-0 score, and weary from four conference games in five days, the Webfoots fought an uphill battle barely to nose out the Irishmen 33 to 31.

In the first game, the Vandals were completely outclassed by the smooth-working Webfoots and were routed by a 39-26 score. Every offensive play of Oregon's seemed to function perfectly and their defense could not be questioned. A complete reversal of form was shown the next night and Rich Fox's boys had it all their own way. Fiery Pete Wicks and high-scoring Bennett proved to be the sparkplugs in the Vandal machine that left the Webfoots gasping on the short end of a 39-19 score.

The next two games were against the University of Washington at the Igloo. Although Oregon has never won a game from the Huskies on the home court, she was given the odds to win this series because Washington was trailing all the other teams in the percentage column. Every time a Washington player cast off, no matter where he stood, the scorer marked up two points. Oregon was hitting them, too, but they couldn't match the Huskies' ability and went down to defeat, 44-32. The encounter the next night was almost as bad for the Webfoots, Washington emerging victorious 33 to 23.

Rated again as the underdogs to Oregon State, Oregon stunned the conference with a thrilling 21-20 victory over the Beavers in their first meeting of the season. The Orangemen tried everything in the books in the closing minutes to nose out their rivals from the University, but to no avail. Roberts and Robertson were the leaders for the Oregon attack and were putting up a mighty struggle on defense. Calkins, as usual, counted for three tallies from the gift line, gained from his fierce rushes toward the basket. Oregon State was behind 18-11, with eight minutes to play, when they started their rally that was to carry them to within one point of victory. The gun sounded at the opportune time for Oregon and the first Beaver pelt of the year was hung in the minds of Oregon fans.

Washington State Falls Under Savage Attack

The following week-end the Webfoots lost another pair of games to the Washington Huskies. The first one ended 38 to 29, but the second was won in the final minutes of play, 27 to 21.

By far the most thrilling games witnessed in Eugene in recent years were the two against Washington State, who were leading the league and were several games ahead of Oregon at the time.

After seizing an early 15-3 lead in the first game it looked as if Oregon was going to have everything her own way. But the Cougars rallied slightly before the half and trailed 19-11 at the intermission. Immediately after the second half began they started a determined rally and caught up with the impudent Webfoots. The score was tied 19 all when Calkins and Roberts started the scoring again and Oregon stayed in the lead until the final bark of the gun, the final score being 34-32.

This excitement was mild compared to the entertainment staged by the two teams the following evening when Oregon made it three straight over the Cougars by barely nosing them out 24-21. Oregon was behind most of the time and trailed 18 to 14 with only a few minutes of play. Several more points were made by each team, but when the time was up Oregon was still out in front by three points.

Three wild games against Oregon State ended a far from uninteresting season. The first was at Corvallis. The Beavers led 25-24 with two minutes to go. Although Roberts played most of both games, he lacked the spark and fire he had shown in earlier games. As a result the Staters took both games by the heartbreaking scores of 37 to 31 and 26 to 20.

Frosh Squad

Frosh Team Has Good Season

Under the direction of Coach Prince "Prink" Callison, the 1932 edition of Oregon freshman hoop teams enjoyed unusual success. They emerged head-first from the "little civil war" series with the Oregon State rooks, winning three games to the baby Beavers' one. They met with similar success against several high school teams throughout the state. Jefferson high school from Portland was defeated 43 to 13 in the first game of the season, Salem was bested twice, and a two-game series with Medford high school was divided.

Sylvan Campf, captain and forward, was one of Coach Callison's most valuable assets. Besides scoring his share of the points, Campf was strong on defense and proved to be a steadying influence over the other players, in spite of the fact that he had several injuries during the season which kept him from being at his best at any one time. The other men comprising the first five were Roland Rourke, sharp-shooter from San Francisco, who was high-scorer for the season; Ralph Terjeson, a husky forward from last year's state champion Pendleton five; Bob Miller, center from Everett, Wash.; and Bill Berg, guard. An unusually strong reserve list included Chuck Clay, Arne Lindgren, Wilson Siegmund, George Jette, J. B. McClain, Lyle Reeder, and Ralph Thomas.

The first game with the baby Staters was played in the Igloo and the Oregon freshmen led throughout, winning 40 to 20. Rourke led the attack, garnering 12 points for himself. The going was much tougher the next afternoon at Corvallis, the frosh barely winning, 32 to 30. The rooks gained an early lead, but Berg and Miller quickly closed the gap and the frosh led the rest of the game. With ten minutes to go in the final period, the frosh held a 12-point advantage, but George Hibbard, flashy rook captain and guard, dropped in three field goals in quick succession and added two free throws to give the Orange team a much better chance to overcome the leaders. By clever ball handling, however, the Oregon freshmen were able to hold the two-point lead until the end.

Again on their own stamping grounds, the Ducklings turned back the invading Orange babes 41 to 22 in the first game of the final series, making it three straight over Roy Lamb's youngsters. The rooks were ahead only once during the entire game, that being after five minutes of play, leading 5-4. Callison's boys soon started hitting them, though, and the game was in the bag.

The tables were reversed the following afternoon when the rooks finally achieved their season-long goal of handing at least one defeat to the boys from Eugene. The hard-fought game was won by the rooks 26 to 18. The frosh couldn't get going, and the Corvallis team gained an early lead which it held throughout the tilt.

Webfoot Swimmers Have Best Record

Faced with the necessity of replacing two conference stars of his splendid 1931 swimming squad, Coach Jack Hewitt succeeded so well that the 1932 natators made the best record of any Webfoot athletic team throughout the school year by winning the Northwest championship.

Hewitt was fortunate in having his veteran 440 man, Red Foster, and an able backstroke and breaststroke performer in Paul Lafferty on hand when the season opened. Sammy Nigh, rated as one of the best divers on the coast, also bolstered Oregon hopes. However, Mac Miller and Steve Fletcher, the record-breakers on the 1931 team, were gone and Coach Hewitt looked around for available replacements.

Bob Needham fitted in nicely as the Webfoot dash man, while Ferd Fletcher, Steve's brother, proved every bit as sensational a breaststroker as the veteran Lafferty. Jimmy Brooke jumped from yearling ranks to dominate the backstroke, and Francis Oglesby found his niche in the 220.

The first dual meet with O. S. C. resulted in a Webfoot victory in both swimming and water polo. The aquatic contest ended 56 to 28, while the polo tilt was won 4-1. Oregon almost made a clean sweep of the swim events, Eisenschmidt of O. S. C. taking the lone first place for his school by edging out Needham in the 100-yard free style.

The Webfoots opened the series by winning the 160-yard relay. Hug, Oglesby, Pratt, and Needham comprised the Oregon quartet. Ferd Fletcher sprang a surprise in the breaststroke by winning from his teammate, Lafferty. Jimmy Brooke also astonished his supporters when he swam away from the Beaver veteran, Ralston, in the 100-yard backstroke.

Needham and Foster, swimming the 50-yard and 440-yard, respectively, were easy victors, and Stevenson annexed a second place in the distance event. Nigh placed first in the diving competition, while Oglesby walked off with the 220.

The final clash with O. S. C. was nearly as disastrous for the Staters, although they did capture three first places this time. The Beavers achieved some consolation out of this second meet for they eked out a 1-0 decision in water polo.

Swimming Squad

1933 Prospects Bright

Prospects for the 1933 season appear bright in spots with a fair percentage of lettermen returning. Brooke, Needham, Sherman, Oglesby, and Hug will be on deck, but Foster, Lafferty, Nigh, Fletcher, and Pratt have wound up their varsity careers. Two frosh experts, Sherman and Gearhart, are expected to compensate for Fletcher's loss, but breaststroke material to replace Fletcher and Lafferty is conspicuous by its absence.

Bob Chilton is counted on to assist Sherman with the diving burden, while Wilfred Paul, yearling ace, should make a valuable addition to Coach Hewitt's staff of sprinters and 220 men. In addition to the frosh swimmers, a number of this year's reserves, who figured strongly in the second victory over O. S. C., will be ready to make a determined bid for 1933 berths.

Frosh Swimmers Defeat Rooks

After getting off to a poor start against Salem high, the yearling natators regained prestige by defeating the O. S. C. rooks twice by the identical scores of 43-41. The frosh water polo artists went through the season undefeated, scoring victories over the rooks and the Salem preppers.

Ineligibility depleted the frosh ranks shortly before the Salem meet, and the crack capital city outfit breezed through the weakened Oregon squad for a 41-34 upset. As the high school had no 440 swimmers this event was not run off, and Gearhart and Sherman, Oregon's distance stars, had no chance to cut down the Salem lead. The Reed brothers, McQuaid and Needham, were outstanding for Salem, while Bob Chilton and Wilfred Paul starred for the yearlings. Jean Privat of the frosh was the hero of the 5-4 water polo tilt.

Summary of First O. S. C. Meet

400-foot relay—Rooks, first; Frosh, second. Time: 1:8.1.

100-yard breaststroke—Paul (F), first; Kirkpatrick (R), second; Thompson (R), third. Time: 1:19.8.

100-yard backstroke—Hine (F), first; Robbins (R), second; Hart (F), third. Time: 1:24.6.

50-yard free style—Smith (R), first; Paul (F), second; Johnson (R), third. Time: 25.4 seconds.

100-yard free style—Smith (R), first; Thomas (F), second; Ringrose (F), third. Time: 1 minute flat.

440-yard free style—Sherman (F), first; Staton (R), second; Zehntbauer (F), third. Time: 6:26.8.

Fancy diving—Johnson (R), first; Chilton (F), second; Chapman (R), third.

220-yard free style—Paul (F), first; Smith (R), second; Gearhart (F), third. Time 2:41.2.

300-yard medley—Frosh, first; Rooks, second. Time: 3:52.8.

Water polo—Frosh won, 4-2, Wilfred Paul scoring three of the Frosh tallies.

Summary of Second O. S. C. Meet

160-yard relay—Rooks, first; Frosh, second.

Breaststroke—Paul (F), first; Thompson (R), second; Kirkpatrick (R), third.

Backstroke—Moorhouse (F), first; Robbins (R), second; Hart (F), third.

40-yard free style—Smith (R), first; Witherall (R), second; Paul (F), third.

440-yard free style—Sherman (F), first; Gearhart (F), second; Staton (R), third.

100-yard free style—Smith (R), first; Thomas (F), second; Gearhart (R), third.

Fancy diving—Chilton (F), first; Chapman (R), second; Stewart (F), third.

220-yard free style—Smith (R), first; Paul (F), second; Thomas (F), third.

Medley race—Frosh, first; Rooks, second.

Water polo—Frosh won, 6-2. Paul tallied four of the six points.

Intramural Sports Gain Popularity

Under the able guidance of Paul R. Washke and his efficient staff, intramural sports during the school year of 1931-32 attracted a constantly accelerating interest from the associated students.

This year's program varied but slightly from the system introduced in 1930-31 by Mr. Washke. All-campus tourneys in tennis, horseshoes, handball, boxing, and golf were staged fall term with swimming, water polo, and basketball provided for intramural competition. Earl Boushey supervised the all-campus activities and basketball, while Jack Hewitt, varsity swimming coach, took charge of the aquatic sports.

The winter schedule found volleyball and handball on the intramural lists, fencing and wrestling constituting the all-campus activities. Boushey directed the progress of the wrestling, volleyball, and handball, and Warren Powell organized the blade tournament.

Soft ball, baseball, golf, horseshoes, tennis, and archery will be on the spring program, according to present plans. In addition to the men mentioned, the following student instructors—Art Ireland, golf, and Clair Meisel, wrestling, aided in the intramural work.

Perhaps the greatest incentive for the living organizations to participate in the intramural program is the point system installed last year as an experiment. Under this system the competing teams are rewarded with points on the intramural chart in accordance with their success in the tournaments, and the all-year winner is announced when the results are tabulated at the end of spring term. Competition was unusually keen last year, with the Betas, Phi Delts, and Yeomen all in the running up to the final tourneys in tennis, golf, and baseball.

The point system has suffered from lack of competition this year due to the Oregon Yeomen, who swept through four consecutive tourneys before being halted by the Phi Delts in volleyball. Only by a miracle can another squad hope to overtake the independent group, which is a favorite to carry off the lion's share of honors again this spring.

The final standings of the leading living organizations in 1930-31 were:

1. Beta Theta Pi .....	681 points	10. Sigma Alpha Mu .....	380 points
2. Phi Delta Theta .....	680 points	11. Phi Kappa Psi .....	377 points

Yeomen Win Majority of Events

The Yeomen got off to a flying start in the first important tournament of the year, when they swamped the Chi Psis 30 to 11 in the intramural swimming finals. Two events, the 40-yard backstroke and the 40-yard breaststroke, were close, but the remaining races were easy Yeomen victories.

The water polo crown also fell into Yeomen hands, but not until a stubborn Beta opposition was overcome. With half a minute of play left, Jean Privat whipped the ball past Johnny Hare, Beta goalie, to give the Yeomen a 1-0 victory.

The Yeomen staged the biggest upset of the intramural season, when they came from behind to defeat S. A. E.'s strong basketball aggregation in the semi-finals of the hoop tourney. Led by Jack Robertson, varsity star, and the Hanson brothers, the fraternity boys set a dizzy pace during the first half but LaVant Holden and Red Kjosness narrowed the score during the final sessions. A. T. O. dropped the title game to the crack Yeomen outfit.

The intramural handball title was easily captured by the Yeomen, both singles and the doubles final with Sherry Ross Hall being taken. Sol Schneider, Yeomen ace, took Al Richen down the line, Lawrence Keppinger defeated Tommy Thompson, and the doubles combination of Al Schneider and Paul Hughes drubbed Jim Dezendorf and Bill Klinger.

The Yeomen ran into their first snag when the Phi Delts nosed them out, 16-14, 18-16, in a bitterly contested volleyball finals. Despite this momentary setback, the Yeomen are leading the intramural race at the end of winter term with 463 points, the closest trailer being Beta with 319 tallies.

University boxing champions for the year 1931-32 are: Heavyweight, Wilfred Paul and Harry McCall, co-holders; light-heavyweight, Larry Winter; middleweight, Don Weed; welterweight, Howard Nachtman; lightweight, Harry Smith; featherweight, Maurice Pease; and bantamweight, Benny Pasion.

University wrestling champions for the year 1931-32 are: Heavyweight, Howard Clark, light-heavyweight, Frank Keltner; 165-pound division, Doc Kelliher; middleweight, Tom Mountain; welterweight, Ray Clapp; lightweight, John Ruttencutter; featherweight, Norman Burke.

Baseball Team Faces Loss of Lettermen

Unfortunately, Oregon's varsity baseball team dropped from its high pedestal of previous year. Bloom and Scales bore the brunt of the mound work, and although shaky at times, did very good work as a whole. Scales was followed by a jinx which didn't affect his fine hurling, but at times worked havoc with his support.

After losing two pre-season games to Willamette University, Oregon opened its 1931 conference schedule at Eugene against Oregon State and was defeated 7 to 3 in a hard but ragged game. Leland Chester drove over a homer and a three-bagger to take hitting honors, and Barnes made two brilliant fielding catches for the Webfoots, but the Staters shoved over two runs in the last inning to keep ahead of Oregon's rally in the fifth.

The second game with the Beavers was equally as ragged and Oregon lost again, 11 to 7. Scales was relieved in the 5th by Arnett, who allowed the Staters three homers. Oregon was held to two hits until the 8th inning. Mimnaugh, Londahl, and Barnes displayed some good stick work.

With a drastic shift in the line-up, Reinhart's proteges opened up with all guns on the Idaho Vandals to take the first game 17 to 0. Bloom allowed only four hits and no walks. The Vandals helped Oregon out by making seven errors and allowing 12 walks. Londahl bagged a homer and Stevens and Bloom a three-bagger each. Eight Webfoots crossed the plate in the 4th, three in the 5th, and five in the 8th.

Idaho tightened up in the second game of the series, which again Oregon took by the score of 8 to 3. Scales did the mound work and allowed the Idahoans only four hits. Oregon pounded out 12 hits, scoring in all but the 5th and 8th innings.

Oregon Takes W. S. C. 8-7

The Webfoots overcame a two-point lead in the last inning of a hectic opening game with Washington State to win 8 to 7. Bloom hurled a fair game but the Cougars were leading 7 to 5 at the beginning of the 9th, and sent in a fast-ball artist to crimp Oregon's possible rally. Then the fireworks began. Barnes doubled. Stevens walked. Mimnaugh brought Barnes home. Shaneman doubled and Mimnaugh and Stevens came home. Score: Oregon 8; Washington State 7.

The Cougars came back clawing in the second game of the series to pound Scales from the mound in the 8th and win 7 to 2.

Oregon's blows were wasted in its first game with the Washington Huskies — a hitfest brawl which ended in Washington's favor, 8 to 6. Bloom lasted only six innings on the mound, but long enough for the Northerners to pound him for all but one of their runs. He was replaced by Jack Hughes. Oregon garnered 17 hits but made 5 errors. The lead wobbled back and forth in the first five innings.

The second game with the Huskies was a heart-breaker for Oregon, who lost 11 to 6. The Webfoots had the game in the bag 5 to 1 at the end of the 8th inning, but the Huskies wouldn't admit defeat. They pushed over eight markers in the last canto. If the game was a heart-breaker for the rest of the Webfoots it was doubly so for Ken Scales, who pitched his best game of the season. He didn't get the breaks and support he was entitled to after eight brilliant innings.

In the first game with the Washington Huskies at Seattle, Oregon was nosed out in the last inning, 3 to 2. It was a pitchers' duel between Bloom of Oregon and Arthur of Washington. The score was tied 2-2 at the end of the eighth. The Huskies drove over the deciding score in the ninth. Oregon was held to six hits, but allowed Washington eight.

The Webfoots came back strong in the second game of the series to take the Husky pelt, 14 to 9. It was the second loss of the season for Washington. Scales pitched a tight game and received fine support. Oregon made 11 hits in the first inning. Shaneman proved a big factor in the victory, clouting two singles and two doubles.

Moving on to Moscow, Oregon crushed the Idaho Vandals for the third consecutive time, 7 to 1. Dave Bloom was invincible, and sprinkled six Idaho blows at wide intervals.

Vandals Subdued in Close Game

The next game with the Vandal's was anybody's until the last inning, when Oregon pulled ahead 13 to 12. It was a wild skirmish from beginning to end with the Webfoots making 12 errors. Four Vandal pitchers attempted to fool the Oregon batters, but allowed 15 hits. Hughes started on the mound for Oregon, but was chased to the showers in the seventh when Idaho rallied and chalked up seven runs.

On to Pullman! The Webfoots were after revenge for their last defeat from the Cougars. Resulting score: Oregon 10, Washington State 7. Stevens starred at short, fielding every chance perfectly. Scales hurled a very commendable game. The Webfoots had two big innings—the third and the fifth, scoring nine runs in the two. Two homers by Chester and Stevens with men on accounted for several scores.

But the Cougars came back the next day to claw the Webfoots into submission in the last game of the road trip, 6 to 4. Washington State piled up an early lead aided by three Oregon errors which the Webfoots couldn't overcome. Oregon made its first two runs in the seventh and two more in the ninth. Bloom hurled.

The first of the two-game series with Oregon State was played at Eugene and proved that the Webfoots were not too consistent in their winning. The Staters humbled the men of Oregon by the tremendous score of 12 to 2. Oregon rallied in the second game to close the season with a victory over the Orangemen.

Roy Shaneman led the Webfoots for the season in batting average with a percentage of .380. He was followed in order by Lohndahl and Stevens with .377 and .375 respectively. Following are the batting averages for the remainder of the team: Mimnaugh, .349; Arnett, .322; Bloom, .322; Barnes, .315; Chester, .302; Potter, .261; Scales, .261; Palmer, .250; King, .212.

The Frosh horsehide artists completed the season with only one defeat chalked up against them. In pre-season games they won from Eugene high and University high, 8-3 and 8-1, respectively. Losing their first game of a four-game series with the Oregon State Rooks, 5-6, the Frosh came back with spirit to take the succeeding three encounters, 12-8, 10-8, and 5-4. Ike Donin proved to be the Frosh mainstay on the mound, with Don Weed as an able assistant.

Track Squad Has Successful Year

Notwithstanding the fact that Oregon's 1932 track team will be minus the services of its three greatest stars of last year, Colonel William L. Hayward, the Webfoot's veteran track coach, can be relied upon to develop a very formidable squad. Ralph Hill, Bobby Robinson, and Ed Moeller, have all been lost through graduation.

Paul Starr, last season's sophomore flash, and Paul Bale, running his last season for the lemon and green, will lead the sprinters. They will be ably assisted in the 100- and 220-yard dashes by Jack Rollwage of last year's squad, and Merrill and Hamilton of the 1931 freshman team.

Hayward

Oregon will be exceptionally strong in the quarter-mile event. The mile relay team which trimmed .04 seconds off the meet record against Oregon State last spring will be intact this season. The team includes Johnny Marrs, Chuck Dolloff, Jack Rollwage, and Art Holman.

Bill Hayward is certain to put a first-place winner in the 880-yard dash on the tracks of the Northwest conference this spring in the person of Tom Moran. For two years Tom has been running second to Eddie Genung of Washington, national A. A. U. champion. Genung's graduation last spring leaves the field open to Moran.

Bob Hall, first place winner in the dual meet with the Huskies last year, heads the list of this year's mile prospects. As a understudy to Ralph Hill for two years, Hall has learned many of the fine points of the four-lap race and will show his heels to many a northern miles this season. Bob Hunter, a transfer from Stanford, will bear watching in the mile, as will Eddy, Edwards, Downey, Nunn, and Hammond.

Daniels and Huesner, freshmen last year, will have to bear the brunt of the pole-vaulting.

Holman Breaks Meet Record

Track Prospects Brightest in Years

Hubert Allen, senior this year, is conceded to be one of the best broad-jumpers in the conference and can hold his own with any of the Northwest hurdlers. Mason McCoy, the best of the Freshmen hurdlers last year, will give Allen plenty of competition in the high hurdles, while Art Holman will hold sway in the low sticks, having broken the meet record against Oregon State last year. Other broad-jumpers are: Bill Palmer, Art Holman, and Sherwood Burr. The high jump event will be taken care of by Bill Palmer, Joe Simpson and Allen.

Marion Hall, two-year letterman in the weights, will return again this spring to toss the shot and discus, while Al Edwards, also a letterman, will concentrate on the javelin. Sophomore possibilities in the weight events are concentrated around Fury and Hakanson, a pair of husky lads from Sand Point, Idaho.

Coach Bill Hayward's attempt to raise Oregon track back to the high plane of former years met with considerable success last spring with the Webfoots taking second place in the Northwest conference meet, and winning both the dual and relay meets with Oregon State College.

Oregon began the season by winning five out of eight events and breaking two meet records at the relay meet against the Beavers. Starr, Allen, Holman, and Bale established a new meet record of 43 seconds in the 440 yard relay. The old record of 7:57 for the distance medley was cut down to 7:41.8 by the Webfoot team consisting of Starr, Marrs, Moran, and Hill. Oregon also won the 880-yards relay, the 220-yard relay, and the two-mile relay.

In the annual dual meet with the University of Washington, the Huskies scored 83½ points to Oregon's 47½. Ed Moeller winning the discus and Bobby Robinson taking first place honors in the pole vault.

The Beavers fell for the second time when Oregon outpointed them in the dual meet, 78½ to 52½, breaking four meet records at the same time. Bobby Robinson, Art Holman, and Hubert Allen set up new records in the pole vault, low hurdles, and broad-jump. The fourth new record was made by Rollwage, Dolloff, Marrs and Holman, running in the mile relay race.

In the final encounter of the season, the Northwest conference meet, Oregon finished second to the University of Washington, with Washington State, Oregon State, Montana and Idaho following Oregon in the order named.

In contrast to the fairly successful season enjoyed by the varsity tracksters last spring, was the showing made by the Freshman team. Both meets of the season were lost to the Oregon State Rooks. Mason McCoy, hurdler, and Norman Daniels, high jumper and pole vaulter, were high point men for the Frosh.

Warren Demaris, a husky boy from Prineville, Ore., last year won the national high school javelin championship with a heave better than last year's best among varsity men in the Northwest. Demaris, together with Fred Nowland, will form the nucleus of this yearling team.

Tennis Team Reaches Finals

Oregon netmen failed to win the Northwest playoff, but they reached the finals in both singles and doubles, giving the champion University of Washington racketeers a tough tussle in both instances. In other contests Oregon dropped dual meets to the Huskies and Whitman, and split with O. S. C. in a home-and-home affair.

The first O. S. C. clash resulted in a 4-3 decision for the Webfoots. Jack Rhine annexed the first Webfoot victory by taking Grafton into camp, 6-1, 6-2. Joe Kalisky and Ray Adams also scored singles wins, Kalisky edging out Cook 7-5, 3-6, 10-8, and Adams downing Loomis 6-3, 6-4 in straight sets. Del Thom and Tom Mountain dropped their tilts, Sjoblom scoring a 6-2, 6-4 triumph over the former and McComber staging a comeback to defeat Mountain, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5. The doubles matches were divided, Kalisky and Rhine overwhelming Grafton and Goss 6-1, 6-3, while Adams and McLaren lost to Cook and Sjoblom 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

The Washington meet was a massacre with Oregon suffering a scalping in every match. Jack Rhine, Oregon No. 1 man, toppled 6-0, 6-3 before the slants of Lloyd Nordstrom, Husky ace, and the other members took just as severe trouncings at Seattle. Hoyt bombarded Kalisky for a 6-0, 6-0 decision, while Mountain also dropped two love sets to Rostgaard. Adams put up a stiffer tussle but bowed to Rieke 6-4, 6-4. The doubles defeats were nearly as bad, Rostgaard and Rieke coasting to a 6-1, 6-1 decision over Mountain and Adams. Rhine and Kalisky dropped a heart-breaking 11-9 set to Nordstrom and Hoyt, the latter coming back stronger than ever to stop the discouraged Webfoots 6-1 in the second set.

In the Northwest playoff which began the next day the Webfoots fared considerably better. Under sunny skies, the Oregonians marched through a field composed of Washington, O. S. C., W. S. C., Idaho, and Montana delegates to enter the finals. Lloyd Nordstrom and his doubles partner, George Hoyt, again proved themselves the Webfoot stumbling block, Nordstrom eliminating Mountain in the semi-finals and Rhine in the finals, while Nordstrom and Hoyt cleaned Rhine and Kalisky in the deciding doubles encounter.

In the final meet of the season, O. S. C. reversed the first decision to nose out the Webfoots 4-3. Oregon swept the doubles but Jack Rhine alone won in the singles.

Frosh Team Wins All Matches

Oregon's tennis hopes look upward as a result of the strong showing made by the Frosh racket experts, who scored victories over the O. S. C. and Washington yearlings, and aided the varsity against Whitman in a non-conference meet. Lack of finances has necessitated eliminating tennis as an intercollegiate sport in 1932, but it is expected that the sport will be installed by the 1933 season.

The O. S. C. Rooks were trounced 5-2 and 6-1 in dual meets and the Washington Babes bowed 5-1. In the first O. S. C. clash Lewis dropped his singles match to Hockley by a score of 6-1, 6-4, but redeemed himself in the doubles by helping Bob Johnson to trim Hockley and Sjoblom 6-2, 6-8, 9-7. Johnson defeated Schlegel 6-2, 6-2; Dick Goldthwaite beat Rafferty 6-1, 6-0; Jim Edmiston edged out Leidig 7-5, 15-13; and Cornell lost to Sjoblom 6-1, 6-1 in the other singles duels. The second doubles match resulted in a 6-0, 6-0 victory for Goldthwaite and Edmiston over Fox and Schlegel.

Don Lewis, Bob Johnson, Jim Edmiston, and Dick Goldthwaite comprised the squad that traveled to Seattle for the Washington matches. Johnson and Lewis also took part in the non-conference matches with Whitman. The final O. S. C. meet was more of a walkaway than the first, the yearlings losing but one match. Lewis avenged his earlier loss to Hockley 6-4, 6-4; Johnson defeated Schlegel 6-3, 6-4; Goldthwaite overwhelmed Trust 6-0, 6-0; Cornell eked out a 2-6, 6-1, 6-1 victory over Rafferty; and Leidig managed to down Edmiston 6-4, 2-6, 7-5 for the lone Rook point. Johnson and Goldthwaite teamed together to turn back Hockley and Leidig 6-2, 6-4, while Lewis and Edmiston swept through Schlegel and Rafferty 6-1, 6-4.

Varsity prospects for 1933 include Jack Rhine, No. 1 man in 1931, Portland city champion several times; Joe Kalisky, Eugene city champion; Tom Mountain, No. 1 man on the 1930 Frosh squad, runner-up in Yakima valley championship of 1928; Bob Johnson, Portland city champion in 1928, Yakima valley champion in 1930, and runner-up in Washington state championship of 1930. Don Lewis, Washington state champion in 1930, Portland city champion in 1929, and Pacific Northwest doubles champion of 1929; Jim Edmiston, Central Oregon doubles and singles champion, Medford city champion; Dick Goldthwaite, Portland interscholastic champion for three years, holder of numerous park titles.

Golf Team Takes Conference Championship

To the Webfoot golf team can be credited Oregon's lone 1931 Coast Conference championship. With George Will and Vince Dolp sharing the majority of honors, Oregon brushed aside O. S. C. and Washington, easily captured the Northwest playoff, and then maintained their supremacy by edging out a great Stanford squad for undisputed Coast recognition.

When Will nosed out Captain Dolp, 1930 Pacific Coast intercollegiate champion, for the No. 1 position in the spring qualifying tryouts, it was evident that the Webfoots would have a strong combination on the fairways.

The first match of the season with O. S. C. turned out to be a rout despite Dolp's absence due to an injured digit, and the Orangemen were able to pick up but one point in 21. George Will, No. 1; Frank Shafer, No. 2; Harrison Kincaid, No. 3; and Bob Hammond, No. 5, made a clean sweep of their twosomes, while Bob Adelsperger, No. 4, outscored Bob Finch of the Beavers, two points to one. In the foursomes, the Oregon golfers made a complete sweep. Will and Kincaid trimmed Hawkins and Bogart, and Shafer and Adelsperger outclassed McCook and Finch. Will shot splendid golf, scoring a 73 on the morning round.

The yearlings came through against the Rooks in fine style, although their victory was not quite so overwhelming as the varsity's. Dick Near, Bill Manning, and Henry Jayne chalked up three markers apiece in the twosomes. Don Olson was not so fortunate, dropping one point to Beardsley of the Rooks but saving the other two.

The Washington Fairway artists offered only slightly stiffer resistance, the Webfoots running away with the meet, 19½ to 1½. Will annexed three points from Kermit Rosen, Harry Kincaid took two out of three from Adolph Levar, Captain Dolp blanked John Schwager, Frank Shafer walked away with three points against Elwell Case, and Bob Adelsperger made it unanimous with a clean sweep against Danton Rossell. Rosen and Schwager managed to wrest a ½ point from Dolp and Will in the No. 1 foursome, but Shafer and Kincaid rolled up three more points against Case and Levar.

The Northwest intercollegiate crown fell just as easily into Webfoot hands. The Oregon team's total of 1258 points was 49 points better than the closest competitor, Washington, whose four-man squad amassed a total of 1307.

Eugene Fairways

Will Takes Honors

Montana and O. S. C. also had representatives on the Eugene fairways for the northern division finals. Individual northwest honors again went to Will, the wiry little No. 1 man taking Dolp's measure by two strokes. The Webfoot scores for the 72 holes were: Will, 305; Dolp, 307; Kincaid, 319; and Shafer, 327. The Husky scores: Rosen, 314; Levar, 326; Schwager, 330; and Russell, 337. Montana: Lewon, 359; Fitzgerald, didn't finish. O. S. C.: Finch, 331; Hockens, didn't finish.

Stanford, winner of the southern division playoff, brought a formidable contingent north to contest Pacific Coast supremacy with the northern victors. Malcolm MacNaughton, the southerners' No. 1 man, took southern division honors and was regarded as a serious menace to Dolp's Pacific Coast intercollegiate championship. Other Stanford luminaries were Harry Eichelberger, Warner Edmonds, Herman Hellman, and Stuart Hawley.

After one of the most closely contested tourneys in years, the Webfoots edged out their southern visitors by the narrow margin of two strokes, 625 to 627. Not until the last hole of the last match was Oregon reasonably sure of victory. Bob Hammond, playing No. 6, came to the eighteenth green needing a five to win the title for the Webfoots. In a dramatic finish he recovered from behind a tree to sink a birdie four, and the match was Oregon's.

It was Will's superb playing that saved the day for Oregon. His card of 149 was six strokes better than MacNaughton's, the leading Stanford scorer, and nine strokes ahead of Dolp and Shafer. The Stanford scores: MacNaughton, 155; Edmonds, 156; Eichelberger, 157; and Hellman, 160. Oregon: Will, 149; Dolp, 158; Shafer, 158; and Hammond, 160.

MacNaughton proved more than a mere threat for individual honors, for the Portland divot-digger stroked his way to the 1931 championship. An unfortunate pairing drew George Will and Vince Dolp together in the first round, and Dolp secured ample revenge for previous setbacks when he eliminated his old rival. Will had little time to rejoice over his victory, however, for Warner Edmonds of Stanford took him down the line in the semi-finals. In turn, Edmonds fell down before the superior play of the long-driving MacNaughton.

Golf has been eliminated from the 1932 slate, but Oregon should place a fairly strong aggregation on the greens when the sport is resumed in 1933.

Interfraternity Council

The Interfraternity Council is composed of a representative from each fraternity on the campus, usually the house president. It has as its main function the control and regulation of interfraternity affairs, with legislative powers in dealing with such problems as arise. The council is presided over by the dean of men, who acts in the capacity of permanent president.
