

Civic Patronage in the Roman Empire

John Nicols

Companion Web Site

This is first of several studies of the epigraphic evidence relating to civic patronage in the Roman Empire.

Please note that in order to format the PDF to display across one "page" / screen, some compromises had to be made. The omissions will be covered in separate arrangements of the data.

The Program

Part I: The basics: Columns have the following headings: Inventory No., nomen cognomen, evidence, and client and benefactions. [Available 1 March 2014]

Part II: The profile of the patron [Available 1 April 2014]

Part III: The profile of the client community [Available 1 May 2014]

Part IV: The profile of benefactions, material and administrative. [Available 1 June 2014]

Part V: The profile of the monument / inscription. [available 1 July 2014]

I am grateful for any corrections, supplements or comments to improve the presentation.

Please note that an Excel spreadsheet with all the data is also available on request.

J. Nicols, Eugene, Oregon, 1 March 2014

Contact Information:

- email: nic@uoregon.edu;
- phone in US: 541.346.4817