More than four decades of academic programming, research, and publication in the area of cultural and community arts services informs the UO Arts and Administration Program. We are committed to a multicultural and sociopolitical orientation to art and culture, a strong belief in the opportunities afforded by digital and analog technology, a focus on contemporary and future trends, and a belief in the importance of research to the profession.

Why Oregon?

LEADERSHIP The University of Oregon's Arts and Administration Program educates cultural sector leaders to make a difference in communities.

EXCELLENCE Our two-year master's degree program prepares and inspires leaders based on the belief that professional arts managers must be familiar with the social, economic, political, technical, and ethical contexts in which the arts flourish.

STUDENT-CENTERED CURRICULUM Graduate students are encouraged to explore the discipline by selecting an area of concentration, course work, and internships specific to their interests.

CONNECTIONS At the University of Oregon, professional practice and networking are as important as theory and research. As the first university-based affiliate of the Americans for the Arts Emerging Leaders in the Arts Network, students at the UO are on the cutting edge of promoting constructive dialogue with the field of arts management, creating meaningful community collaborations, and organizing relevant professional development opportunities.

We give our students the power to positively affect not just their own future, but also the people, communities, and environments around them. In short, we empower them to make good.
