Political and Economic Affairs of Oregon

It is time to place in the executive chair at Salem a governor who has the independence, the courage, the integrity and the ability to bring about the successful execution of a comprehensive and constructive program of reforms every one of which is of vital importance to the welfare of the state of Oregon and its people.

Julius L. Meier, one of Oregon's leading business men, who was nominated independent candidate for the governorship at a state-wide mass meeting, possesses all these splendid qualifications.

He has the INDEPENDENCE — absolute independence.

He has the COURAGE — rare political courage.

He has the INTEGRITY — unquestioned integrity.

He has the ABILITY — extraordinary executive ability.

Julius L. Meier stands for principles and policies which contemplate the consummation of the very reforms so essential to the progress of Oregon and the well-being of its people.

Julius L. Meier stands for a rearrangement of our state economic affairs to the end that industry may prosper and a repetition of our present deplorable unemployment situation may be less liable to occur. Julius L. Meier stands for a continuation of our high standards of education, the protection and fostering of our public schools and higher institutions of learning.

Let Us Elect J. L. Meier---

and inaugurate a business administration in state affairs. Let us rise above blind party fealty, partisanship and prejudice and elect Julius L. Meier, who has only one interest to serve—THE PUBLIC INTEREST; who has only one master to serve—THE PEOPLE.

ONE OF THE CONDON OAKS

Dear to the hearts of alumni are the old trees known as the Condon Oaks. Near Villard Hall, they add dignity and beauty to the older campus. One of the oaks bears a plaque placed in it by the class of 1900 which celebrated its thirtieth reunion last June. Another is marked by the class of 1897.

Freshman Week at the University of Oregon

By KARL W. ONTHANK, '13
Dean of Personnel Administration ◆ ◆

OREGON alumni of the first and second decades of the century, who in increasing numbers are joining the ranks of Oregon mothers and dads, often feel a justifiable curiosity as to just what is this thing called Freshman Week. Nor has it helped them greatly, recalling the extremely simple registration procedure of their day on the campus, to be told that an entire week is used for students to register and get ready for starting college work.

Freshman Week is an invention to help the student to a good start in the complex and confusing life of a modern university. It is designed to bridge the gap between high-school and college, to take a freshman through the preliminary steps of getting settled in his new living quarters, registering, learning the campus, meeting and hearing the officers of the university, getting acquainted with student leaders, and being introduced to university life.

Freshman Week is said to have been started at Maine something over ten years ago. It spread rapidly and with many variations among the more progressive American colleges and universities. Examinations and lectures to students preliminary to registration were begun at Oregon in 1920 and proved so successful that by 1923 and 1924 the greater part of a week was used for the preliminary and registration performances, and classes were begun the beginning of the following week. It is now a regular part of university procedure, though it is still annually modified in form and content to meet changing conditions and expanding ideas of university service and responsibility.

Students who entered Oregon, or any other popular university, during the half-dozen years after 1918 have, unless they were unusually fortunate in friends to guide them, memories not too pleasant of the almost hopeless confusion into which they were plunged upon their arrival on the campus. Freshmen by the hundreds—literally by the thousands at the larger universities—flooded the campus. Small wonder that college houses were swamped and procedures of registration and adjustment, adequate in more tranquil days, broke down or became hopelessly jammed. Registration and class needs could be more or less satisfactorily met by providing more clerks and instructors, but these contributed little toward helping the individual freshman, away from home probably for the first time, in a new locality and an utterly different environment, to adjust himself satisfactorily to the university situation. In other days freshmen had commonly been inducted into college life informally, but not without a certain efficiency, by sophomore and upper class agencies, supplemented by sound and kindly, but equally unorganized faculty counsel and guidance. But when freshmen outnumbered all three of the advanced classes they were, however docile, simply too numerous to be assimilated by the traditional methods. Indeed, Freshman Week began primarily as an organized effort on the part of student leaders, assisted by staff advisors in student activity fields, to organize the freshman class and instruct it in the traditions and customs of the institution.

The almost complete break-down in the larger universities of anything resembling personal contact between faculty and students, and the lack of personal guidance of students by friendly professors, prompted faculties to attempt organized group guidance as the best available substitute. "Orientation" lectures and courses were instituted, by which it was hoped to introduce the new student to the college scene and to its activities, both official and "extra-curricular." The inadequacy of group orientation and counselling to meet individual needs was, however, soon so apparent that many institutions sought to make provision for personal contact between students and staff advisors.

Out of the same period of confusion and educational re-adjustment came programs for examining students psychologically, mentally, physically. All of these procedures take time, more time than the conventional registration days afford, so the registration period was moved forward and, as we saw happen at Oregon, the whole program was expanded and organized to fill the week preceding the beginning of regular class exercises.

Freshmen at Oregon now begin their program on Monday, though those residing in Eugene or arriving earlier on the campus take physical examinations during the latter part of the preceding week. Sophomores and upper-classmen are not required to appear till Thursday, when registration starts. All students are expected to be registered by Saturday noon. Any who register later pay extra for the privilege. Regular classes start promptly the following Monday morning and proceed with very little of the old confusion which used to disturb class work for a week or two. A detailed program for Freshman Week is as complicated as a railroad time table, but is simplified for the individual student by a "pre-registration" program, in which is listed the time and place of each examination, assembly, or conference which he is to have.

It will be interesting to follow a hypothetical freshman of the class of 1934 through his week. He arrives on the campus, let us say, Sunday noon. If he has made arrangements for a room in one of the dormitories, he may go directly there and take up residence. If he is interested in fraternity prospects and does not wish to commit himself to living in a dormitory, he may take up a temporary residence in one of the Eugene hotels or in some private house. He is given until the end of Freshman Week to settle upon his abode for the term. He is required, however, when finally settled, to live either in one of the organized student groups or in a dormitory, unless he is living at home in Eugene.

Monday morning early he attends the first freshman assembly, at which the dean of men addresses the assembled freshmen on student life, describing to them some of the conventions and customs of college life, and not overlooking the more fundamental objectives and ideas. Various student officers are introduced to freshmen at this meeting. From here he goes to the men's gymnasium, where he is given a thorough physical and medical examination. If he is rated a good specimen, he proceeds without further attention. If some defect is found or there is suspicion of some latent difficulty, he is passed for registration but checked for recall for re-examination and study and, if necessary, for assignment for special treatment in physical education by appropriate remedial and corrective exercises, instead of the usual gymnastic work, sports, and recreation.

In the afternoon he will take the "English A" examination. This is to determine whether or not he has a sufficient command of the language to proceed with his college studies without further instruction. If he passes the examination, he need take no more written English until the sophomore year, when the course in "Report Writing" is required. If he fails, he must take "English A," which is designed to drill him in the fundamentals of English usage, until he can meet the standard set. Most students meet it in a term; some take longer. The instruction is mainly individual, and the student may progress as rapidly as his ability and effort warrant.

Tuesday morning he attends the second general freshman assembly. Here he is addressed by three speakers—Dr. James Gilbert, '03, dean of the College and chairman of the scholarship committee, speaks on "Habits of Study and Scholarship"; Mr. Earl Pallett, registrar, on registration procedure, and the writer, on relations between freshmen and lower division advisors, of whom more will be said shortly. Following this, our freshman goes to the psychology department, where, with a roomful of his fellows, he is given the university's psychology or placement examination. This is intended to test his capacity for success in college studies. Experience has shown that his rating in this test, combined with his success in his high-school studies, constitutes a reliable index to his probable success in college.

Tuesday afternoon he is conducted through the library, where he receives information concerning the arrangements, use, and regulations of this important part of the university.

Wednesday morning, when his various tests and examinations have been completed and the scores made available, his registration material is released by the registrar's office. His credentials from high school have previously been filed with the registrar, checked and approved, and he has with him now the card of admission sent him by the registrar. When he presents this at the registrar's window he receives a large manila envelope containing various documents, chief of which are (1) a student record book, in which appear (a) a summary of his high school record, his psychological test score, and a college ability index representing a combination of these two; (b) a statement of the requirements which he must meet to graduate from the University and in which will be entered from time to time his grades and the courses marking his progress toward the ultimate satisfaction of these requirements and the awarding to him of a degree; (2) the schedule of courses for the year; (3) his registration book for the term. This is no longer the simple three by five card used in other days, but is now a stapled book of a dozen pages, containing instructions and registration blanks of various kinds and colors, each of which has a definite use and must be filled out, checked, and signed by appropriate persons and turned in with his fees before his registration is complete. Among the agencies besides the registrar for whom he supplies information are the Associated Students, the Oregon Dads and Mothers, the religious agencies and the deans of men and women.

KARL W. ONTHANK, '13
Recently appointed Dean of Personnel Administration

Freshmen no longer "major" in a university department, unless perchance they select one of the professional schools in which studies begin with the freshman year. The majority of freshmen, who study in the college of literature, science, and the arts, now select as a field of principal interest one of four groups in the college, namely: (1) languages and literature, (2) social sciences, (3) mathematical and physical sciences, (4) biological sciences. Our freshman is instructed to proceed to the chairman of the lower division group which he selects as his field of principal interest for his first two years. The chairman assigns him to one of the professors teaching courses in this group, who will act as his advisor during these two years. His advisor, after inspecting his high-school record and the report of his placement test, physical examination, and other information which he brings with him in his student record book, and after talking with him about his vocational objectives and other interests, the amount of time, if any, which he expects to spend in outside employment, athletics, or other activities, and other subjects which may have a bearing on the amount and nature of work which he should carry on his study program, proceeds to make out a schedule of studies for the term, with these facts in mind, and looking toward the ultimate earning of a degree.

It is the business of the advisor to assist the student in every way possible toward making the most of his opportunities in college. The student is expected to confer with his advisor whenever he meets difficulties, either scholastic or otherwise, and to meet with him from time to time during the term, to discuss his work and the planning of his course toward his ultimate objectives. The advisor will normally have the student in one of his classes and will through this connection and otherwise seek to maintain a continuing personal relationship with the student. This is one of the important services which is being developed as a part of the personnel program of the University. It is new, both to students and advisors, but advisors are taking their responsibilities seriously, and if students can be persuaded to see the advantages to be had from maintaining a friendly personal relationship with their advisors, it may be expected to help them avoid many difficulties and losses of time.

After his study program for the term has been filled out and signed by his advisor, our freshman now takes his registration card to the instructors of his courses for their signatures. Most freshmen, however, are in sectioned courses—that is, courses in which the number of registrants is so large that the courses must be split up into from two to a dozen sections for adequate instruction. For registration in these courses he goes to McArthur Court, where he finds ranged around the galleries of this great building the section clerks representing different courses. Here he is assigned to appropriate sections and his card is checked to make sure that con-licts of hours of class meetings are avoided. He is then directed to the floor of McArthur Court, where, after he has filled out the numerous other blanks in his registration book, his cards are inspected by the registrar's checkers, his residence is noted by the dean of men, he is photographed for the records of the personnel offices, and he pays the initial registration fee at the cashiers' booths ranged along one side of the floor. Upon the payment of this fee and the acceptance by the cashier of his registration book, his registration for the quarter is completed and his troubles are over.

His troubles are over, that is, unless perchance he and his ideal fraternity have not yet made up their minds about each other. For now that his registration is complete, he is free to pledge, and the brothers are not infrequently at his elbow with pledge pin in pocket, as he pays his fees. The fraternities and sororities have co-operated in the freshman week program by concentrating their rushing season during this period. The men now pledge as soon as registration is complete, which may be any time after Thursday morning, and the women on Saturday. Later pledging is possible, but is relatively infrequent, partly because the houses are normally filled at the beginning of the term and the fraternities have either secured or definitely lost the rushees desired, partly because the University housing regulations prevent students from changing residence after the beginning of a term.

Saturday night comes the freshman banquet, attended by all freshmen. On this occasion the dean of men presides and introduces the dean of women, who speaks briefly, introduces other University deans and administrative officers who do not speak, and student officials, who also on this occasion merely smile and bow, and the president of the University, who makes the address of the evening and who customarily speaks on the aims and objectives of college life, in his characteristic forceful and convincing manner. Dr. Clarence W. Spears also addresses the gathering. This closes Freshman Week.

Children Are Aided In Summer Clinic

By WILFRED BROWN, '30

TO GIVE a chance to boys and girls who have had no chance.—That is the purpose of the educational clinic that has been conducted at the University of Oregon each summer for the past three years by Dr. Grace Fernald of the department of psychology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

The clinic recognizes the fact that there are some, if not many, children who have in their mental make-up some quality that is a little bit different, that does not quite fit in the rather standardized system of American education. They are not sub-normal, these children, they are just different, and in the public schools they have no chance.

The results of the Oregon clinic have been nothing if not remarkable during the three years of its existence. Children who were entirely unable to learn in the public schools, have returned after a summer at Eugene to head their classes for the next year. Ten weeks is ordinarily sufficient to get the so-called backward child started forward, Dr. Fernald found, though in many cases the children have returned for the second summer to obtain further benefits.

Nor has the clinic stopped with very small children. There were many older youngsters, held back in classes with children far below their own years, who were able to catch up. There have even been a few high school and university students who were unable to get along well.

A fifteen year old boy there was who came to the University clinic whose initial reading test registered almost zero. He had been utterly unable to learn in all the years he had been at school, and his teachers had all but given him up. Yet a year following his first enrollment he passed the state eighth grade examination with high grades. There was a high school student who, after three years of grades so low that they would not entitle her to college entrance rating, enrolled in the Oregon clinic for a summer and the following spring received her diploma with high honors. There was a young man who after being twice disqualified from Stanford University came to the University of Oregon for ten weeks, then returned to Palo Alto and in a year made twenty-six honor points and A's in most of his subjects. These are only a few.

Fifteen children enrolled in the clinic school in 1928, the first year it was held on the University of Oregon campus. The year following there were forty, and in 1930 sixty-five. There doubtless will be many more in 1931. The first session was scheduled for only six weeks, but it proved so successful that the Eugene Kiwanis Club raised funds necessary to continue it through the additional four weeks of the post-session.

The Kiwanis again raised money for the additional four weeks in 1929, and last summer the University paid for the entire ten weeks.

Most of the children came from various Oregon cities the first year the school operated in Eugene, but its fame spread rapidly. In 1930 one student from Honolulu was enrolled and others from all the Pacific Coast states and as far east as Chicago. Inquiries have been received from almost all parts of the United States. There were forty-seven teachers who worked under Dr. Fernald in 1930.

How is it done? Well, Dr. Fernald says that the problem is in reality much more simple than it would seem to the casual observer. The first and most important thing is to give each pupil a thorough mental diagnosis, in a way similar to that which a physician might give to a patient. The difficulties of each child must be noted and analyzed, and then he must be given instruction aimed to remedy those difficulties. Individual attention is all-important.

Almost without exception, Dr. Fernald has found, the difficulty of the children lies in their inability to learn to read properly. Every subject taught in school is based upon reading, and it follows that one who is poor in reading must likewise be poor in other things. And usually the one who is good in reading is likewise good in other subjects.

In teaching her pupils to read Dr. Fernald follows the old adage that one learns by doing. The pupils, strange as it may seem, learn to read through writing. The pupil is told that he may write a story, taking anything he wishes as his subject. Words which he does not know and wishes to use are written for him by the instructor, each on a separate card, large enough so that he may have no trouble in noting the various lines, and letters, and, if necessary, he may trace those words until he learns them.

Most of the first stories of the pupils are very simple, containing only a few words written in very large characters. One of the first stories of a small girl last summer consisted of "My Cat Saw a Lizard," written in letters over three inches in height. As soon as the story is completed, it is "printed" on a typewriter, and the pupil is given the copy for his scrap book. The original is kept by the instructor for reference.

That is the beginning. The pupil almost invariably remembers the words he used in stories, and in case he should forget, he keeps a file, or dictionary, of the new words which have been written upon cards for him. The second story is usually more elaborate than the first, and the third more than the second. As the pupil learns to write new words, he also learns their appearance in print, so that he is able to recognize them when he sees them. Each day he writes a new story, and each day he uses and learns new words. That is the way he learns to read in the clinic conducted by Dr. Fernald.

Ordinarily the pupils easily learn all other subjects after they have mastered reading, although sometimes one sticks on arithmetic. To aid in the instruction in arithmetic, a small "store" is conducted by the pupils. Counters representing the various denominations of currency are used, and the children soon gain facility in handling figures, although it all has the elements of a game.

Dr. Fernald has accomplished much through her work in Eugene and in Los Angeles. Next summer will probably see her back here again and the attendance at the clinic much greater than ever before. In Los Angeles there are now six clinics for such unusual children conducted during the winter months, and the youngsters who don't quite fit into the public schools are sent there.

But in all parts of the United States there are many, many boys and girls who are laboring under difficulties and are unable to learn properly in the public schools. For most of them there is no clinic school available such as that conducted at the University of Oregon, and the thought of them worries Dr. Fernald.

She is not satisfied when there are many left who still have no chance.

Oregon Summer Cruises Prove Successful

"ADVENTURERS in Education" is the term which probably best fits the students on the University of Oregon summer cruises. One cruise went all the way to tropical Hawaii, and the other sailed up the beautiful inland waterway to romantic Alaska, in search of entertainment and education.

Both were to be had in plenty, it was soon discovered. The teachers who had just spent nine long months in strenuous work, and who had looked forward with dread to a "required" summer session, were both delighted and surprised at this unique method of education. No longer was it necessary to still the urge to go places and do things, in order that summer school could be attended to gain credits for advancement or for a higher degree. The lure of travel could be so admirably combined with study!

In the lists of the more than 200 who were on the cruises were many University of Oregon alumni as well as active students, who took this method of vacationing and adding credits toward graduation.

This innovation in University education was started in 1929, when the first Alaska cruise was sent out. Its success was so encouraging that it was decided to enlarge the field this year, and to send a cruise to the Hawaiian Islands as well as to Alaska. The Alaska cruise students spent one week on the campus, and two weeks on the water, while the Hawaiian travellers spent two weeks on the water and five weeks in the Territory, where they studied under both University of Oregon faculty and professors in the University of Hawaii.

Each cruise was ably staffed by University of Oregon professors, or faculty members drawn from other schools. To Hawaii went Dean Karl W. Onthank, head of personnel administration of the University, as director; Dr. Warren D. Smith, as professor of geology; Dr. Nelson L. Bossing, authority on secondary education, as professor of education; Mrs. Mable Holmes Parsons, short story writer, as professor of English; and George H. Godfrey, head of the University news bureau, in charge of journalism.

The Alaska students had as their staff of instructors Professor W. G. Beattie, who spent a number of years in Alaska school work, and is still known and loved by hundreds of people in the Territory, as director and professor of education; Professor A. R. Sweetser, who made his second trip as professor of botany; Professor Nowland B. Zane, who again instructed art students in putting on canvas the beauties of the far north; Dr. Charles N. Reynolds, of Stanford, professor of anthropology; M. H. Douglass, University librarian; Dr. E. L. Paekard, professor of geology; Frank Jenkins, editor of the Eugene Register, professor of journalism, and Kathryn Bailey, dean of women and registrar.

The Hawaii cruise, with seventy-five students and a dozen members in the faculty party, set sail on the R. M. S. Niagara from Vancouver on June 25. The week on the vessel, with perfect sailing weather, was enjoyed by everyone, for the ship's personnel saw to it that everything was done to make both play and study something long to be remembered. Dances in the evening, deck games during the day, parties, inspections of various parts of the vessel, and study in the comfortable library and "deluxe" cabins occupied the time during the trip.

Arriving in Honolulu, the Oregon party was met off shore by a committee of the chamber of commerce, who tendered a truly Hawaiian welcome by bestowing a fragrant carnation

"lei" or wreath on each student. At the dock the Royal Hawaiian Band was out in full force, and several talented Hawaiian singers had been added for this special occasion.

Students were taken from the boat to their spacious quarters in Punahou Academy, a school but a short distance from the University of Hawaii campus, where classes were held. From the first day swimming in the warm but invigorating surf at famous Waikiki, thrilling surf board riding at this spot, dancing at the hospitable Moana Hotel under the huge Hawaiian moon, trips to haunts on the islands where real native life could be found in all its delightful simplicity, an adventurous trip to the Big Island where the mighty Volcano of Kilauea thrills all who venture near, and other diversions were enjoyed by the students. Classes were all held in the morning, and afternoons and week-ends were left free for the never-ending round of things to do.

At the University of Hawaii a number of courses of great interest were found by Oregon students. Seldom do those interested in geology have the opportunity to study volcanoes under the world authority, Dr. Thomas A. Jagger of the United States Geological survey, who heads this work for the government. His course was very popular, and many audited without credit, merely to hear what he said about this phase of world development. Courses in Oriental art and culture by famous Chinese authorities, education courses in this land where education is a science of the highest order, as well as the regular studies were offered.

The Hawaii group came back on their ship, the Niagara, and landed at Vancouver on August 15, everyone wishing that the trip was just starting.

The Alaska group, 130 strong, spent the first week of their session on the campus at Eugene. Here they read up on Alaska, studied its various phases, and so were unusually well prepared for their two weeks' journey, which began from Seattle August 14. Their ship, the S. S. Admiral Rogers, took them to Ketchikan, famous for its salmon canneries; Juneau, capital of this northernmost territory; Petersburg, an interesting little co-operative fishing settlement; Skagway, gateway of the gold rush days; Sitka, romantic and quaint Russian capital, still haunted by the ghosts of these picturesque old rulers of the land, and many other towns and cities.

Only in Alaska can such a sight as the Taku Glacier, a mighty living field of ice, be seen. The daring vessel sailed up almost to the huge ice mass, and with blasts of the whistle, caused great icebergs to drop off into the water. From Skagway the students went on the narrow gauge railway up into the very heart of the great mountains, and saw along the roaring river the remnants of the trail of '98, over which men toiled to get to the gold fields. At Sitka there are old Russian buildings to be explored, while along the route there are huge mountains, snow capped and gleaming in the bright sun; forests of matchless green, beautiful waterways that stir the blood of those who would like nothing better than to adventure up them in a boat of their own.

The cruises have now proven their way, and the University of Oregon must be given credit for having the courage to pioneer a new field in higher education, a field that is expected to grow by leaps and bounds in importance, and what means much more to students and teachers, in real value and enjoyment to the individual.

Judge Robert S. Bean Is Honored by Alumni

By F. H. YOUNG, '14

ROBERT SHARP BEAN, United States Judge for the Oregon District, will receive from the University of Oregon Alumni Association a citation for more than fifty years of distinguished service to his State and to his Alma Mater, on Friday evening, October 3. The occasion will be marked by a dinner in his honor at 6:30 o'clock, at the Benson Hotel, Portland.

To the best of our knowledge the event will be the first of its kind in the history of alumni activities in connection with the University of Oregon.

The dinner for Judge Bean will have two-fold significance. The occasion will permit alumni to honor the only remaining member of the University's first graduating group, the Class of 1878—that hardy band of one woman, the late Mrs. Ellen Condon McCornack, and four men.

Then, too, University alumni will pause a moment to pay tribute to a man who for some forty-eight years has continuously served his State and his Country in judicial capacity. Through that long service first as judge of the Second Judicial District, then for nineteen years as member of the Oregon Supreme Court, and since April, 1909, as United States District Judge for Oregon, Judge Robert S. Bean has achieved unsullied distinction as a jurist of high legal attainment.

Of importance to University alumni who have not lost sight of events now being blurred by the rolling years, was Judge Bean's membership for thirty-eight years on the University's Board of Regents, from 1882 to 1920. To those familiar with that span of years which was marked by the University's struggle for existence, then gradual emergence into a place of educational importance and confidence in Oregon public opinion, Judge Bean's service to his University will be gratefully remembered as one of patience and scholarly confidence that in the end the institution would forge ahead as merit of its work dictated. Judge Bean served as president of the Board for twenty-two years, from 1898 to 1920.

Although not a principal purpose behind the October 3 dinner in his honor, but worthy of mention to alumni readers of OLD OREGON, is the fact that only a few days less than two months prior to the coming dinner event, was the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Judge and Mrs. Ina Condon Bean. Mrs. Bean was a daughter of Oregon's famous geologist, Doctor Thomas Condon, a name perpetuated on the campus, (whence, years ago, he would leisurely ride each day on his three-wheeled bicycle, well clothed in a long black cape,) by designation of the science building as Condon Hall. The Condon Museum, housed by the same building, is another reminder of the invaluable scientific research accomplished by Mrs. Bean's father. Judge and Mrs. Bean were married in Eugene September 7, 1880.

It so happens that October 3, date of the Judge Bean dinner, coincides, almost to the hour, with the football game to be played in Chicago that evening between Drake University and the University of Oregon teams. Play-by-play details of this game, Coach Spears' first big battle under Oregon colors, will be read during the first part of the dinner. Since this game will not be broadcast, these reports will afford alumni an excellent means of following their team during its first big 1930 contest.

Judge Lawrence T. Harris, Eugene, himself a distinguished member of the Oregon Bar, a former justice of the Oregon

JUDGE ROBERT SHARP BEAN, '78

Supreme Court, an alumnus of the University, Class of 1893, a speaker of conspicuous ability, and lastly a friend of Judge Bean, will be principal speaker at the dinner.

Alumni in Multnomah County will soon receive return postcards on which they are requested to make reservations. Alumni in Oregon outside of Multnomah County are invited, but they should take the precaution of making reservations—address the Benson Hotel.

The President Plans to Visit Oregon Cities

On a hurried trip that will take them through eastern, central and southern Oregon, President Arnold Bennett Hall and a group of officers of the Oregon Mother's organization will start by automobile October 4 to visit mothers, alumni, and friends of the University. At this writing the schedule is not entirely completed, but it is probable that President Hall will speak before groups in Hood River, Pendleton, La Grande, Baker, Prineville, Bend, Klamath Falls, Ashland, Medford, Grants Pass, Marshfield, and coast towns. With him will go Mrs. Walter M. Cook, Mrs. F. W. Bond, Mrs. J. F. Hill, Mrs. Paul W. Ager, all officers of the Oregon Mothers. Vice President Barker and Dean Alfred Powers will probably accompany the group also.

"It Was a Great Trip" Says Tom Stoddard

WELL, WE'RE back home again after our two thousand mile trip through the State, during which time I'm sure we must have met you. Doctor Spears and I are both rather tired, but our enthusiasm over the results of the trip quite overshadows any other feeling that we might have from it.

For those of you whom we failed to meet, let me tell you what this is all about. Doctor C. W. Spears, our new football coach, and I have just completed a thorough tour of the State of Oregon, during which time I am sure that we shook the hand of most every Oregon alumnus in the State. If we missed you, it wasn't our fault, because we were there, and we tried to see you. Perhaps you would like, also, to know just why we took this valuable time to spend in such a way. Well, in the first place, everyone who meets "Doc" always asks him the same question, "How do you like Oregon?" And "Doc," up to this time, has always had to say, "Fine, as far as I have seen of it." We figured that since it was the dominant question for "Doc" to answer, he should at least be able to be definite. So I warn you, when next you see "Doc," don't be afraid to ask him about our State. He knows all about it.

The second reason for the trip was to acquaint our new coach with the alumni and business men and women of the State. "Doc" is new here, and he wants to know who's who in Oregon. Using his own terms, "I want to meet the wolves face to face." Ha!

The third and most important reason for our visit to every hamlet, village, and farm in the State is just this. The University of Oregon is launching upon a real, up to the minute, broad-gauged athletic policy, and right along with our progress down here, we want to see progress throughout the entire State. We want to make "our" football program "your" football program. We want to make the University of Oregon football program the "State of Oregon" football program. We would like to see the enthusiasm and fire which is always present on the campus during the season spread out to include every city in which the University of Oregon is represented by alumni and friends. We want to see "football fire" in your hearts as well as ours. So "Doc" and I merely went around, mainly for the purpose of taking a little inventory of Oregon's assets along a football line, and seeing just where our friends were, and what they would be willing to do. You know the rest.

We organized an athletic committee in each city, with a chairman at the head, for the sole purpose of arousing interest in our athletic program. We received hearty support and fiery enthusiasm in every section, and I warn you, just watch us go from here on out. We feel that we now have something to stand on, and that Oregon has a real co-ordinated backing among the alumni. You don't know what a comfortable feeling it is to feel that you are all behind us, and ready to comply with our every request. And don't forget what we told you. If ever you want some information or suggestions from the athletic department, just drop "Doc" or me a letter, and see how quickly you receive a response. We aim to help those who are helping us first of all, and since you all have said that you are going to help us, I guess we have every one of you to serve.

We took several side jaunts from the "beaten path," which if you have never taken, both "Doc" and I advise you strongly to some day enjoy as we did. While in Hood River, Dr.

Nichols and his wife drove us through the beautiful Hood River Valley and up the Mount Hood Road to Cloud Cap Inn. Honestly, it is one of the most gorgeous sights in the State. And then, while in LaGrande, Fred Kiddle and several others took us on an overnight trip to Wallowa Lake. We drove back just at sunrise through the Wallowa Valley, and that is a drive that we shall never forget. At Baker we attended the American Legion Convention for two days, and then went on a two-day fishing trip as guests of Mr. Charles Minnaugh into the Echo Lake district. We caught lots of fish, and the scenery was beautiful. It was a perfect fishing trip, if such can be. While in Marshfield we were taken on a scenic trip up Coos River, and that trip also we shall consider one of the high spots of our journey.

All in all, we enjoyed the trip thoroughly, and we are certainly glad we met you, and saw your homes. We shall always remember many happy and pleasant instances which occurred, and we'll try also to remember most of you. Thank you for your wonderful hospitality, and now all we ask is that you pay us a visit in Eugene, and give us a chance to welcome you.

It's football season in Oregon. Come on, alumni and fans, let's go!

As I write this, everyone around Eugene is getting set for football, to say nothing of the opening of school. If you should make us a visit right now you'd get the impression of activity, of work.

"Doc" Spears is settling down in earnest to teach Oregon's team a few things about football. And as for the team, well, I don't mind telling you that they are as enthusiastic about Doctor Spears as you seemed to be. They are all ready to follow him through the season. It's going to be a great year.

Let 'er Buck!

As the copyrighted insignia of one of the most spectacular wild west shows in the far west, this bucking broncho epitomizes the Pendleton Round-Up to Oregonians. For every one of the past twenty-one years Pendleton has been putting on a show worthy of the wide interest it has enjoyed, but this fall, the Round-Up surpassed all previous years in brilliance. Broncho-busting, steer-roping, ball-dogging, and races were only some of the thrilling events. Over 2,000 Indians, full panoplied in all the barbaric splendor of the American Indian, presented a gorgeously colorful spectacle. Braves and squaws wore buckskins encrusted with pounds of colored beads and with magnificent feathered head-dresses. Cayuses, Walla Wallas, Yakimas, Klickitats, Simoy, Utes, Klamaths, and the Nez Percés were among the tribes represented at the Round-Up. On the final day some of the scenes of the old West were enacted when a realistic pageant, "Over the Hill," was presented. For many years alumni have worked on committees of the Round-Up Association.

Dr. Spears Revives the "Bull Whip" in Football

By JOE PIGNEY, '30

THE BLACK bull whip, encouraging action at the end of its crackling, nine-foot lash, has had an historic prominence in the pioneer epics of Oregon.

The simile is easy to grasp. The bull whip went into the museum when the automobile replaced the ponderous oxen, but from time to time it has been imaginatively dug up to arouse enthusiasm for a cause. Twenty-four years ago Hugo Bezdek sent its lash curling around the gridirons of the country and brought Oregon charging forward into football supremacy. When Bezdek left at the end of the 1906 season the bull-whip was returned to its shelf in the museum. Bezdek came back to Oregon in 1913 and got out the lash and for five more years the Webfoots were hurried along to the limelight. But this famous maker of champions again retreated from the pioneer fields of Oregon and the black bull whip has been without a strong arm and supple wrist until this season when Dr. Clarence W. Spears, builder of football champions at Dartmouth, West Virginia, and Minnesota, threw it away and got himself one with a thicker handle and a longer lash which has induced the Webfoot candidates to move swiftly on Hayward Field.

Not in this generation of Oregon students has there been such strait-laced activity on Hayward Field. If the grads who remember the old days—which indeed have been "the good old days"—could sneak into the secret practice sessions they would be thoroughly convinced that the Webfoots were once more on the path toward football glory. The old thrill which Bezdek created would return when they saw sturdy giants of the type of Austin Colbert, 200-pound guard, George Christensen, 220-pound tackle, Carson Mathews, 222-pound husky at tackle, Irv Schulz, Jerry Lillie and Marion Hall, trio of 197-pound linemen, and a half-dozen other forwards bordering upon the 200-pound mark, marching up and down the gridiron swiftly, accurately and even eagerly at the command of Dr. Spears' big, black bull whip.

The backfield, too, has felt the sting of the lash. You've got to be tough to be a ball carrier of Spears' team; you've got to block and tackle and run with grueling fierceness. If you have a name like Captain John Kitzmiller, who two years ago led the Pacific Coast in scoring and who has headed in the right direction again this year with fourteen points to his credit after the Pacific victory, 20 to 0, on September 20, you don't automatically step into a position—you've got to earn it and Johnny has. Spears didn't know before the start of practice whether the other Oregon backs were the real stuff or not, but when he flicked his whip they stepped pretty lively and now the coach is convinced that he can "whip up" a powerful backfield which can run the ends, pass the ball and smack the line. Some of these boys who are responding most readily to a little prodding are Don Watts, sophomore half, George Currie, another sophomore half, Jack Rushlow, full-back from Prink Callison's 1929 frosh team, John Donahue, two year veteran at full, Cliff Garnett, still another sophomore half, Clyde Gilbert, quarterback transfer from Missouri, Al Browne, quarterback holdover from last season, Ed Moeller, veteran fullback who stars on the defense, and, of course, the "Flying Dutchman"—Kitzmiller.

One hates to become optimistic over an Oregon team and then get let down at the end of the season. Optimism, however, hasn't been the habit of the Webfoot followers in the last few years. Even though there might have been an ounce of hope it was usually washed away by the feeling that it was too good to be true or that it surely wouldn't last. But this year one can get stirred quite warmly with the thorough conviction that the enthusiasm is not going to be betrayed.

To keep your enthusiasm, however, you must keep away from Dr. Spears, this new pioneer of Oregon football. The gloom of a Gil Dobie or the pessimism of Hugo Bezdek would be sheer cheerfulness in the light of Spears' scowl. But when you look at the team and then at the coach's frown you are sure that the dejection goes no deeper than the skin.

Someone asked Dr. Spears what he thought of the Oregon team.

"Terrible!" he said.

Someone else asked him who were the best players.

"There are none. Not a single football player on this whole squad of fifty-eight, even though it is the largest turnout Oregon ever has had."

If you want to hear happy football talk ask Dr. Spears about Minnesota and you will get the tale of such all-Americans as Bronco Nagurski and Joesting. But you can be almost certain that Dr. Spears, in a few years, will be describing just as affectionately the accomplishments of Kitzmiller, Colbert, Watts, Christensen, Schulz and Hall. And when you see the way football players are flocking to Oregon from all parts of the country you will be convinced that Spears will always have one or two stars to talk about.

Right now there is a lot of put on gloom around Hayward Field and even the usually cheerful Bill Reinhart, backfield coach, has permitted his mouth to fall. Gene Shields, line coach, and Jack O'Brien, who handles the ends, have likewise acquired the atmosphere of gloom.

The only dependable index of Oregon's coming greatness on the football field is Shy Huntington, who succeeded Bezdek. Shy declared that he has been waiting for a man like Spears ever since Bezdek resigned.

Someone's enthusiasm over the Webfoot prospects has even suggested that Oregon will take the Pasadena game this year. Only twice before has Oregon had this honor. Once Pennsylvania was beaten and once a well remembered battle was lost to Harvard, 7 to 6.

Besides Dr. Spears and the football team Oregon has one other chance to gain the Rose Bowl tournament game. Its schedule is light, and although there are plenty of tough spots, there is the chance of a clean sweep. Pacific and Willamette offered little resistance on the pre-season schedule. Drake at Chicago, October 3, should go to Oregon. The Washington game in Portland October 18 will be a toss up with the Webfoots a slight favorite to down Jimmy Phelan, ex-Purdue leader. The Idaho game in Eugene, October 25, and the U. C. L. A. tilt here also, November 8, should be comparatively easy victories.

By the way, this game on November 8 is the Homecoming game and if it goes according to schedule, should bring a number of the old grads back to the campus.

The traditional encounter with Oregon State at Corvallis, November 15, will be shrouded in its usual doubt. The St. Mary's game at San Francisco, Thanksgiving Day, is the only contest in which Oregon will not be given an edge.

In the Fall

AT THIS time of year, or perhaps a bit earlier, sororities and fraternities are beginning to rehearse their "biggest and best" pleas, to dust off their loving cups, to intimate to their alums that the linen is at low ebb, or the furnace simply must be overhauled. Rushing, that barbaric custom, is beginning to sweep the freshmen into a maze of activity, joy, and despair. We do not mind the activity, nor do we begrudge the joy, but the despair is hard to bear and almost harder to witness.

The University has changed from the old days. Time was when most any student, on the warm recommendation of a friend, could take the school by storm. Over this freshman would wax the battles of the few then existing campus groups. Now, however, with membership in most of the fraternities and sororities limited to thirty-five or forty students, with over three thousand students on the campus to choose from, pledging becomes a matter of eliminating not the dubious, but often the most splendid material. No longer need a student belong to a "house" to get on. Opportunity awaits the many who choose the advantages of independence.

The Travelling Summer School

THE DEAN of the Summer Sessions of the University of Oregon deserves credit for a far seeing policy in instituting his travelling summer schools. For the student who wishes to combine the advantages of study with the benefits of travel, the Alaska and Hawaii summer sessions are unsurpassed to our knowledge. Chosen faculties of picked men, small classes, adequate library facilities, and the opportunity for change and rest, all helped in making the success which both cruises enjoyed.

It is to be hoped that the policy will be continued. The opportunity to study the Pacific under such ideal conditions should attract more and more summer students to the University of Oregon.

We Wait

THE REPORT on the survey of the institutions of higher education in Oregon should be ready for the public in November, we hear. We are looking forward to the report with anticipation.

Dues! Dues! Dues!

EVERY year brings the inevitable reminders that your dues are due again. Whether it be for club or league, for church or lodge, or just for your Alumni Association and OLD OREGON, the time rolls round when you must get out your check book and write your own particular John Henry on the bottom line.

Happily, there is one solution for the alumni dues! It is a Life Membership in the Alumni Association which includes OLD OREGON for life. The price is twenty-five dollars. This money is put at interest and the principal cannot be touched. Only the interest is used for current expenses. Thus the Alumni Council hopes to build up a substantial endowment for the Alumni Association.

1876

Among summer visitors in Eugene was Mrs. Helen J. McIntosh of Los Angeles. Mrs. McIntosh attended the University in 1876 and 1877.

1880

Alfred Coolidge, pioneer banker of Whitman County, passed away on July 27 in Spokane, as a result of a stroke of apoplexy suffered two hours earlier at Liberty Lake, Washington. He and Mrs. Coolidge had been spending the week-end at the lake with friends. Mr. Coolidge had apparently been in excellent health. He would have been seventy-two years of age September 9. Mr. Coolidge was born in Silverton. He was educated in the Silverton public schools and was graduated from the University of Oregon in 1880. He then formed a partnership with Adolphus F. McClaine, deceased, also of the class of 1880, in the banking business. In 1883 Mr. Coolidge came to Palouse County, in Washington, and organized the Second National Bank at Colfax. Mr. McClaine later came to Washington to live. Both held interests near Colfax. In 1905 Mr. Coolidge went to Spokane to take the presidency of the Traders National Bank. Later he became chairman of the board and Mr. McClaine the president. When that bank merged in 1913 with the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, both men retained their interests and served on the board of directors for many years. In 1924 Mr. Coolidge returned to Colfax and again became president of the bank he had organized. He served the bank actively until his death. He was a great lover of outdoor life, fishing, hunting and golf being among his favorite sports. He was president of the Colfax Golf Club at the time of his death. Surviving are: his widow, one son, one daughter, Emma Coolidge Geesey, ex-'22, of Seattle, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Phyllis Coolidge Wingard, ex-'24, also of Seattle.

Mrs. Vina McLean, ex-'80, died in Portland on June 11. She had been in ill health for some time. She was the daughter of the late J. T. Witter, pioneer Eugene business man. For many years, she taught school in Lane County.

1883

Walter William Cochran, ex-'83, died in Cottage Grove on September 7. Mr. Cochran was born July 3, 1857, at Coburg. He was a son of the late Senator R. B. Cochran. One brother, Charles Cochran, of Sheridan, and several nieces and nephews survive.

1890

Darwin E. Yoran, ex-'90, and Mrs. Yoran made an extended trip to Florida this summer where Mr. Yoran attended the national convention of the Knights of Pythias Lodge as supreme representative from Oregon. Mr. Yoran is postmaster in Eugene.

1892

OLD OREGON regrets to record the death of James Madison Hughes. Mr.

Hughes attended Willamette University at Salem, and the Washington and Lee Law School of Virginia as well as the University of Oregon. He received the LL.B. degree from the University in 1892. Mr. Hughes practiced law in Portland and Astoria, in the latter city holding the office of justice of the peace for a number of years and the offices of assistant district attorney and city attorney for a time. He edited a newspaper in Astoria for two years and has also written some verse.

Mrs. C. A. Burden, '92, and Elma Hendricks, '93, returned home September 1 after a six months' tour of the world. They sailed from San Francisco on the "Belgenland," and visited cities in countries all over the world before their arrival in New York in July. They made the trip from Detroit to Eugene by auto.

1895

Julius L. Meier, whose efforts in the business world have carried the great institution of Meier and Frank Company to a position of supremacy, has entered the political realm as independent candidate for governor of Oregon. His decision to go into politics was forced on him when a mass meeting of 5,000 voters in Portland insisted that he was the man to carry the banner of George W. Joseph, whose death occurred a short time after he won the Republican nomination for this honor. The mass meeting was called after a Republican convention in Portland declined to adopt the Joseph platform and principles which Mr. Meier believed was a betrayal of the people of Oregon. Mr. Meier was born in Portland December 31, 1874, attended public schools in Portland and studied law at the University of Oregon, from which he was graduated in the class of 1895. He married Miss Grace Mayer, daughter of pioneer Oregonians, on December 25, 1901. They have two married daughters, a son, Julius L. Meier, who is a student at the University of Oregon, and four grandchildren. He is president and general manager of the Meier and Frank Company at Portland.

1898

Lewis R. Alderman, specialist in adult education, and now connected with the Bureau of Education at Washington, D. C., was a guest lecturer in education at the University of Oregon summer session this past summer. Mr. Alderman, a native Oregonian, was graduated from the University in 1898 and has held almost every position in the public school system of Oregon. He has been teacher, principal, city superintendent at both Eugene and Portland, county superintendent, state superintendent, and college professor. During his work in Oregon he was very successful in establishing small high schools throughout the state. He taught at the University from 1908 to 1910. During the World War Mr. Alderman recognized the opportunity for education among men in the navy. He was appointed by the secretary of the navy to organize their educational program. He is the author of "School Credit for Home Work."

Clyde T. Bonney, ex-'98, lists his permanent address at Sisters, Oregon. He formerly lived in Tygh Valley.

1899

Maude Kerns has been studying this summer at the University of California under Herr Hans Hofmann, director of the Hans Hofmann School of Fine Arts at Munich, and closely associated in Paris with the modern movement. Artists from all over the United States came to Berkeley to study with Herr Hofmann, said Miss Kerns, who reported that she gained a great deal from her work with him. She liked it so much, in fact, that she, together with a number of other students in whose work the painter showed an interest, stayed an extra month after the close of the session, studying with him, and taking trips into the country to sketch.

1900

Anthony G. Dorse is the commander-in-chief of the Mexican Border Veterans Association, an organization of persons who served in the United States military service from January 1, 1916, to April 6, 1917. National headquarters are at Oconomowoc, Wisconsin. Mr. Dorse was graduated from the law department of the University in 1900. Since 1905 he has practiced law at Oconomowoc, and for eight years, from 1909 to 1917, was judge of the municipal court for the western district of Waukesha County, Wisconsin. Mr. Dorse served first as an enlisted man in the Wisconsin National Guard in 1901 and was commissioned a captain. On the Mexican border he was in command of Company M, First Regiment of the Wisconsin Guards in 1916; of Machine Gun Company, First Regiment, 1917; Machine Gun Company, 128th U. S. Infantry, 1917-1918. In 1916 he was also field judge advocate under General Frederick Funston, southern department. During the World War he served overseas with the Thirty-second (Red Arrow) Division.

1902

One of the popular visitors at the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Pacific division meeting, held on the campus in June, was Ansel F. Hemenway, '02, who came back to the University at Commencement time after an absence of three years. He spent the summer in Portland, where he taught botany at the Portland extension center. Dr. Hemenway is a professor of botany at the University of Arizona. He has a new home, just completed, fourteen miles from the Arizona campus. The house is built of rough stone and is very attractive in appearance, judging from the snapshot which Dr. Hemenway displayed in the Alumni Office. The new home contains a fireplace of copper ore, and has all of the ore's colors, of green and turquoise hues, Dr. Hemenway says. There is very little wood used in the construction of the house, so the building is practically fire proof. Water, in that section, is found at a depth of 170 feet, and is much farther down in other sections. Dr. Hemenway's tract contains 640 acres, and includes a few patches of iron wood trees, and other desert growth. A picture of his fifteen-year-old son Arthur shows a huge bull snake, harmlessly hanging about the boy's neck. Dr. and Mrs. Hemenway also have a daughter, Janice, who is twelve years old.

1903

Elma Hendricks has gone to Pasadena to spend the fall with her sister, Norma Hendricks Starr, whose address is 429 South Anita Drive. She plans to return to Eugene about Christmas-time.

1904

Dr. Clyde Mount, ex-'04, Oregon City dentist and first president of the Pacific Coast Dental Conference, died June 2. He was fifty-one years of age. After leaving the University, Dr. Mount attended North Pacific College of Dentistry in Portland, being graduated in 1906. In 1910 he was appointed a member of the State Board of Dental Examiners. He was elected twice as president of the Oregon State Dental Association, first in 1921 and again in 1922. About a year ago he was compelled to give up his practice. He was an active worker for the Boy Scouts and was on the Oregon City school board several years. In 1913 Dr. Mount was married to Myrtle Parker. She survives as do two sons. O. B. Mount, ex-'96, of Baker, Dr. Albert Mount, '11, and Dr. Guy Mount, '07, both of Oregon City, are brothers of Dr. Mount. Funeral services were in St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Oregon City. Vault entombment was in Mountain View Cemetery.

1905

Dr. Carl H. Davis, Milwaukee obstetrician and member of Rush Medical College faculty, has been appointed director of the department of obstetrics and gynecology in the Marquette University School of Medicine. Dr. Davis holds the degree of B.A. from the University, B.S. from the University of Chicago, and M.D. from Rush Medical College. He was formerly of the medical staffs of the Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, and the Northwestern Life Insurance Company. He now belongs to the staffs of Columbia and Milwaukee County Hospitals, in Wisconsin. He has been associated with Wisconsin General Hospital, Madison, and the Methodist Hospital, Chicago, and until last year was a lecturer for the University of Wisconsin extension division. During the war Dr. Davis was a major in the medical corps, stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas. He is a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and a member of its board of governors, president of the Chicago Gynecological Society, and last year was chairman of the section on obstetrics and gynecology of the American Medical Association. Dr. Davis is affiliated with Alpha Kappa Kappa Fraternity. He is the author of a text on obstetrics and has published numerous articles in national and state medical journals.

Among the first to reserve seats for the Oregon-Washington game in Portland on October 18 was O. C. Wright. Mr. Wright lives in Portland and is executive secretary of the Oregon Baptist State Convention and director of the Missionary Co-operation.

1906

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Starr (Norma Hendricks) were among Eugene and campus visitors during the summer. They make their home in Pasadena, California.

1907

Clara Blais, instructor in French at the Eugene High School, spent the summer in Europe. Her time was spent in sightseeing and in studying.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Culbertson (Mary Rothrock, '07) have been spending the summer travelling in Alaska and motoring over the Northwest. This winter they are to live in San Diego, where their address will be 1880 Alameda Terrace.

1910

For two years Lieutenant and Mrs. Raymond Earle Kerr are to be at Long Beach, California, where Lieutenant Kerr has been stationed. Mrs. Kerr was in Eugene last winter, and in July went to Bremerton, Washington, where Lieutenant Kerr was stationed. They made the trip from Washington to California by motor, stopping in Eugene, in August, and in Palo Alto. Lieutenant Kerr is an ex-member of the class of 1910.

Mrs. Pauline Davis Steelquist left Eugene in June for Bello Horizonte, Brazil. She joined her husband, R. U. Steelquist, '09, who had left several months before to take a position as technical man with the Brazilian company of the Electrical Bond and Share Company. Mrs. Steelquist made the journey by way of New York. She was accompanied by two of her children. A son, John, remained in the United States to compete in the national finals of the Edison Scholarship Contest, and joined his family later in the summer.

1911

Lester I. Bullard, ex-'11, is an inspector for the Burroughs Adding Machine Company in Chehalis, Washington. He has one daughter, Eula Faye, who will be five years old in November.

Louis McCoy is now electrical superintendent of the DeGrasse Mill of the International Paper Company at Pyrites, New York. He lives at 5 Crescent Street, Canton, New York.

Colonel Clarence R. Hotchkiss, former United States Marshal of the district of Oregon, has been selected as secretary of the Julius L. Meier for Governor Committee and is located at the general offices of this organization at Portland. Colonel Hotchkiss recently returned from Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, where he was graduated from the Infantry Tank School on June 30th. He is a graduate of the law school of the University.

1912

Among visitors in Eugene during the summer was Dr. Eva Frazer Johnson, of Madison, Wisconsin. She visited her mother and her sister, Celeste Campbell, '26.

1913

Edward Flint Bailey, democratic nominee for governor of the State of Oregon, was graduated from the University in 1913 with a B.A. degree, and attended the University law school from 1913 to 1915. In 1915 he began the practice of law, but in 1917 he left the law office to join the army. From June 21, 1917, to August 6, 1920, he served with the U. S. Marine Corps, and was discharged with the rank of first lieutenant. His service in the army completed, he was in Seattle for a time as assistant foreman of the Grain department of Fisher Flouring Mills Company. For the past several years he has practiced law in Junction City, and it was from Lane County that he was elected to the Oregon legislature as Senator. In the University, Mr. Bailey was prominent in campus activities. He played football from 1909 to 1912, and went out for track in 1909-10. In his senior year he was president of his class. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta, Friars, and Order of the "O." A visitor in the Alumni Office this summer told a significant little story about Ed Bailey as a freshman. Before entering the University, Ed had been the main hope of the Eugene High School football team. When he first started playing on the University team, his high school followers used to watch him with encouraging enthusiasm. One day, as Ed was practicing some particularly difficult feat, one of these boys yelled, "Make it for good old Eugene High, Ed!" Ed Bailey, the seventeen year old freshman, paused, turned toward the boy and answered, "Eugene High? Hell, no! I'm working for Oregon now!" And he's been working for Oregon ever since!

Karl W. Ontliank, for several years executive secretary of the University, was made dean of Personnel Administration in June. He will have under his direction important work in supervising the activities of all students, men and women. The bureau of personal research, offices of the dean of men and dean of women, activities concerning the collection of vocational information and placement service, faculty personnel work and organization of lower division faculty advisers, will all come under his supervision. The new dean has been preparing himself for this type of work for a number of years, and has studied extensively at Stanford University, at Columbia University, and the University of Oregon, having but recently returned from a leave of absence devoted to intensive investigation in this field.

Major Walter R. McClure is now in command of special troops in the Hawaiian division, having under his jurisdiction the tanks, airplanes, signal corps, military police, and the like. Major and Mrs. McClure have two children, Dorothy, aged six, and Walter Jr., eighteen months old.

Agnes Dorothy Campbell recently received the first copy of her new novel, "Fragrance of Sage," from John Long and Company of London, publishers. She reports that copies of the book will be on sale at Olds Wortman and King's in Portland. Miss Campbell is head of the art department of Holmby College, Los Angeles. She has studied extensively both in the United States and abroad and is an inveterate traveller. She has studied at Kuntsgewerbe Schule, Berlin, Columbia University, Art Students' League, New York, Academie Julien, Paris. For several years she taught at the Oregon Normal School and also has been an instructor in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. Miss Campbell admits that there was a thrill in seeing her first book in print. She is working now on a second novel.

1914

Lieutenant Alexander Martin, Jr., U. S. N., has been transferred from Guama to the United States Navy Yard at Mare Island, California.

Don B. and Hazel Rice, ex-'15, live at 1112 Glendora Avenue, Oakland, California. Mr. Rice is business manager of the Oakland public schools.

Men who do their best work after 50 are those who have learned to REST . . .

ARTHUR BRISBANE, famous journalist, says, "The greatest loss to the world, and especially to America, is that caused by the death of men that die too soon. A man's best work should be done between fifty and seventy. And if he knows how to live wisely, his best thirty years may be found between fifty and eighty."

Tired nerves and bodies need rest, particularly during the Winter season, when sickness is most prevalent. A Winter cruise via Red Star or White Star Lines provides the kind of rest that keeps men fit. Medical authorities declare that nothing tones up the system so thoroughly—and delightfully—as a sea voyage. Let us tell you about the splendid winter cruises listed below:

World Cruise of the Red Star liner Belgenland, most famous globe-circling ship. From New York, Dec. 15. 133 days. From San Diego, Dec. 31, Los Angeles, Jan. 2, San Francisco, Jan. 4. $1750 (up)—including complete shore program.

Mediterranean—Four 46-day cruises by White Star liners Britannic (new) and Adriatic. Jan. 8 and 17, Feb. 26, Mar. 7. Covering principal points of tourist interest. $695-$750 (up), First Class—$420 Tourist Third Cabin, both including shore program.

From Oregon he went to Wisconsin, where he visited. Dr. Pendell has devised a new honors system which will be used at Oklahoma next year and of which he will be in charge. The plan is to replace term papers and under it the better students may register for additional credit. They prepare papers which are criticized by the professor and returned to the student for revision. Dr. Pendell will have

Giants out of the earth

An Advertisement of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company

NO AGE but ours has seen so swift and complete an application of natural forces to the doing of daily tasks. Man's leaping knowledge . . . embodied in industrial plants and laboratories, airplanes and electric locomotives . . . has won new power and freedom. Machines are the symbols of a new relationship with nature. They are the servants of this civilization . . . helping men to extend the limits of their opportunities, to change the character of their life.

Americans have been pre-eminent in this change, for in whatever they do they seek to utilize nature to the utmost. They have taken the power out of the earth and from the running streams. They have made it turn the wheels of their industry and move their products by rail and road. They have made color and variety out of chemistry. They have spun metal in slim wires to carry their voices anywhere with the speed of light . . . and make neighbors of the scattered millions of America.

Joining homes and work places, towns and distant cities, the Bell Telephone System has furnished a new communication for this new age. Forwarding the growth of the nation, giving better and more complete service in advance of the demand, its function has become the indispensable one of furnishing the means of social and business contacts in crowded cities and scattered villages over the length and breadth of a continent.

The Bell System is constantly improving the scope, speed and accuracy of its service.

Its work of contributing to the welfare and prosperity of American life goes on with increasing purpose and pace.

"Ocean Parade," a book of travel and adventure in the Orient, written by Fred B. Michelson, ex-'23, and Leon Byrne, ex-'26, and published by Robert M. McBride and Company, was issued on August 8, and has been receiving favorable comment. It has been lauded by critics for its humor. It is the first book for either of the two. "The book deals with the experiences of the authors, who 'set out to find the purple ports beyond the western horizon,' and in so doing found romance and adventure passing belief," says Leon Byrne. The book is unique in presentation. Says the foreword: "Because it is our story, rather than the story of one of us, we have collaborated in writing it. We have followed the plan, more or less, of writing alternate chapters, naming the author of each chapter in the chapter heading." "The authors describe, with candid frankness, the sex life of sailors in foreign ports, and moral conditions as they exist, or do not exist in the Orient," says an excerpt from a letter of Mr. Byrne's. Mr. Michelson at present is the editor of a trade journal in San Francisco and has been doing short stories for some time. He is a member of Chi Psi Fraternity and on the campus was a member of the "Emerald" Staff. Mr. Byrne has also had success with fiction and has written articles in national magazines. ## 1926

At eleven o'clock on the morning of September second Marian Phy and Paul W. Ager were married in Union at the Methodist Episcopal church with Dr. Philip Parsons, of the University faculty, reading the service. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Mark Phy. Her attendants were Margaret Phy, maid of honor, and Mrs. Mark Phy, and Dorothy Riordan. Cecil Ager was his brother's best man. A number of University people went to Union to attend the ceremony. Among these were Ronald Robnett, and Randolph Kuhn who acted as ushers, David Faville who sang just before the service, and Mrs. Robnett who played the wedding march. Immediately after the wedding a reception was held at the Union Hotel. After an automobile trip to Vancouver and Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. Ager returned to Eugene where they are making their home at 667 East Twelfth Avenue. Mr. Ager was appointed comptroller of the University last year after serving for a year as assistant comptroller, and Mrs. Ager is secretary to President Hall. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ager were members of the class of 1926. She is a member of Delta Gamma and was a Kwama, while he was affiliated with Phi Sigma Kappa, Friars, Order of the "O" and Sigma Delta Pi. He is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

College Ice Cream

the whole house
agrees is great!*

Try and get forty students in each organization to agree on one thing. It simply can't be done unless you're talking about College Ice Cream. That is the one thing that the freshmen, the seniors, the prexy and the cook all have the same opinion about. They know that it is good—pure—and is made in many different flavors, a new special in brick and bulk every week. So the wise house manager orders College Ice Cream and keeps peace.

Most of America's Night Airports are G-E Lighted

BESIDES developing a complete system of airport illumination—flood-lights, boundary lights, and beacons—to facilitate and safeguard night air-travel, General Electric has given to the aeronautic industry:

The G-E magneto compass, which has been found by some of America's best-known pilots to be the most accurate and reliable compass they have ever used.

The G-E supercharger, with which 70 per cent of the American engines built in 1929 were equipped, and which has made possible all American altitude records to date.

Also the G-E engine-temperature indicator, engine-speed indicator, oil immersion heater, card compass, arc-welding equipment, radio equipment, and other pioneer developments.

The G-E monogram, on products used in the air, on land, and at sea, is everywhere the mark of quality and reliability.

FOR THE HOME: Millions of American homes are made happier and more comfortable by electric appliances bearing the G-E monogram. These include refrigerators, radio sets, fans, vacuum cleaners; motors for many other electrically driven household devices; MAZDA lamps, wiring systems, and Sunlamps; Hotpoint electric ranges and appliances.

FOR INDUSTRY: G-E research and engineering have made important contributions to every basic industry, including apparatus for generating, transmitting, and applying electricity; electric furnaces and heating devices; street, traffic, airport, and Cooper Hewitt lights; Victor X-ray apparatus; equipment for railroad and marine electrification, and for street railways.

Can she wait for the courts to decide?

IN the event of your death, the transfer of your funds or property involving your signature must be handled through the courts. Has your wife the ready cash to live on for an indefinite period, to say nothing of taking care of certain inevitable expenses, and other pressing obligations?

A way to prevent the sacrifice of some of the valuable holdings in your estate is to provide a fund, immediately available through a John Hancock life insurance policy, sufficient to cover all contingencies.

Cecilia Patricia Gallagher, former law student at the University, and John Dodge Galey, son of Henry C. Galey, ex-'05, and Mrs. Galey, (Rosa Dodge, '04) of Ashland, were married on August 2 at the Madeleine Church in Portland. Laurence Shaw, '30, of Portland, was best man. Following the wedding reception, held at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left for a trip to American Lake. They will live in Eugene where Mr. Galey is attending the University law school. Mr. Galey received his B.A. degree in 1929. He is affiliated with Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. Mrs. Galey attended Reed College and the Northwestern College of Law.

Campbell Church, Jr., is chartering yachts for hunting and fishing or cruising trips in British Columbia and Alaskan waters. He and Mrs. Church (Nona Proctor, ex-'30) live at 3048 East Laurelhurst Drive, Seattle.

Helen Coe Webster, '29, and Donald Beelar, '28, were married June 28 in Washington, D. C., at Woodley Park Towers, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben A. Fisher (Katherine Chatburn, ex-'21), formerly of Marshfield. Mrs. Fisher played the wedding march and Mr. Fisher gave the bride in marriage. The wedding was a culmination of a romance begun at the University. Mrs. Beelar is a member of Kwama, Phi Theta Upsilon, Mortar Board, and is affiliated with Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. Mr. Beelar is affiliated with Sigma Nu Fraternity. He was student body president during his senior year at Oregon. After a honeymoon at the Virginia beaches the couple is at home at 2025 Eye Street

1930

Helen Peters, former president of the Associated Women Students on the campus, is attending the Yale school of medicine this year.

Margaret Tingle and her aunt, Miss Lillian E. Tingle, head of the Department of Household Arts at the University, sailed early in June for Europe where they visited in England, Germany, Scotland and France. Miss Margaret Tingle planned to enter medical school this fall.

Dorothy Fox and Leslie B. Newhouse have been appointed graduate assistants in the school of business administration for this year. Both received B.A. degrees in June.

La Wanda Fenlason, who received thesis honors in history when she received her diploma in June, was acclaimed the outstanding honor student in the 1930 graduating class. As a result she received a prize of $25 offered by Phi Beta Kappa, through the courtesy of Richard W. Montague, M.A. in public service, 1919. The prize was used to purchase books. Miss Fenlason, who is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, was selected from among the ten honor students in the graduating class on the basis of her general scholarship rating, the manner in which she passed her oral honors examination, and the quality of the thesis that she wrote. In addition to her scholastic work, she has been active in campus affairs. She has served on the "Emerald" staff and on the "Oregoniana" staff. She is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority. She will be a graduate assistant in the history department this year.

Malcolm "Jim" Campbell and his wife, Inez Heyman Campbell, are at Stanford University this year where Mr. Campbell is working for his doctor's degree. He received his M.A. degree in June. Mr. Campbell, who worked in psychology on the campus, will work at Stanford under the direction of Dr. E. K. Strong on the problem of the comparison of the abilities of the Japanese and the Caucasian. The study has been provided for by a special grant made by a number of Japanese. The two men will study the mental and physical characteristics of the two races as measured by various psychological tests. Mr. Campbell has studied at O. S. C., and at Reed College, where he received his B.A. degree. Mrs. Campbell also was a student at Reed.

Lois McIntyre, ex-'30, was selected for queen of the 1930 Pendleton Round-up.

Charles Bodine spent the summer working on a mining claim in the Siskiyou mountains.

Margaret Hurley spent six weeks last summer as counsellor at Skyline Trail Camp on Elk Lake. Miss Hurley received her degree in physical education.

Margaret Edmanson left during the summer for the University of Illinois, where she will be assistant Y. W. C. A. Secretary. She was accompanied by Daphne Hughes, senior at the University, and chairman of the national executive committee of the Y. W. C. A., who went to Granville, Ohio, to attend a meeting of that committee.

Margaret Clark became the bride of Howard B. Holman on June 18 at the home of the bride's aunt in Eastmoreland. Following the wedding a reception was held. The bride attended Mills College and was graduated from the University in June. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. Mr. Holman attended school in California. The couple is at home in Portland.

Phyllis Henningsen, ex-'30, and Dr. William Horn Downs, of Shanghai, China, were married on September 10 in San Rafael, California. The bride was the center of much entertaining in Portland during the summer prior to her wedding.

Fredericka Warren, ex-'30, and Edward Bissell, ex-'30, both of Portland, were married on June 1 at the First Congregational Church in Eugene. Only a small group of relatives and friends attended the ceremony. Mrs. Bissell is a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority. Mr. Bissell is a member of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity. They will live in Portland.

Bradshaw Harrison of Tacoma won his third consecutive net championship in the Pacific Northwest this season when he played at Vancouver, B. C., in July at the Western Canadian Lawn Tennis Tournament finals.

Melba McDonald, ex-'30, and Robert A. Jones were married August 10 at Westminster House on the University campus. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are to make their home in Eugene. Mrs. Jones is a member of Delta Zeta Sorority. Mr. Jones is a graduate of Oregon State College and is a member of Kappa Psi Fraternity.

Huldah Thom, ex-'30, was killed August 18 when the car in which she was riding struck a telephone pole. The accident occurred in Corvallis.

Camels are made of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos, blended with expert care. You'll find them mellow, mild and smooth, with a full-bodied aroma that simply can't be copied. It's a simple statement of fact to say money can't buy a better cigarette.

WE HOLD certain truths to be self-evident in this matter of smoking — truths that need no garnishing of guff. A fellow smokes because he likes to; he smokes a certain brand because that brand gives him more pleasure than any other. Year in and year out more people smoke Camels than any other cigarette. We submit that the only legitimate reason is because they enjoy them better. If there's any bunk in that, we hope to swallow a senator.
