JACK TIDBALL
U. C. L. A. National Intercollegiate Tennis Singles

IN THE year's track and field classic this spring at Cambridge, Massachusetts, 16 stalwarts from the University of Southern California successfully nosed out 916 representatives of leading American Universities and Colleges, to retain the "I.C.4-A" title another year for Troy. ● During the summer just past, Jack Tidball added to the rapidly increasing fame of the University of California at Los Angeles, and to his own imposing list of titles, by defeating Richard T. Murphy of Hamilton College in a bitterly contested match at Haverford, Pennsylvania, for the National Intercollegiate Singles tennis championship.

● And thus far in 1933, Texaco FIRE-CHIEF Gasoline has withstood equally bitter competition and INCREASED its following, without resorting to fantastic claims or amusing but meaningless "tests" of mileage, speed, power, acceleration or anti-knock properties. ● FIRE-CHIEF won't fail in any of these points. FIRE-CHIEF SURPASSES highest U. S. Government specifications for "emergency" fuel . . . fuel that MUST MAKE GOOD. FIRE-CHIEF will make good in your car, with all the snap, dash and action that the Trojan and Bruin champions display. Try it now—let your motor prove FIRE-CHIEF performance.

THIS AND THAT

By THE EDITOR

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found the announcement of the appointment by Governor Meier of two new members to the state board of higher education to fill the vacancies left by the resignations of C. L. Starr and C. C. Colt. With prayerful anticipation, Oregon alumni look to the new members, Roscoe C. Nelson and Willard Marks, for solution to the problems of higher education. Whether the causes of discord in the ranks of higher education have been within the board or without does not matter. What is wanted is a solution, and these two new members, it is hoped, will be able to see through to the real causes, wherever they are, and alleviate them.

BOTH Mr. Starr and Mr. Colt have been members of the board since it was established in 1929, and have both given faithful and conscientious service. They have, however, been virtually mired in the bickerings and strife that have torn the board for its four years of existence. New men, from outside, may be the solution to the internal problems of the body. It is to be hoped so. Unquestionably Mr. Nelson and Mr. Marks will receive the support of the state at large in an attempt to restore the former strength and prestige of Oregon's institutions of higher learning, for it is high time that outside raids on Oregon's first-class faculties is stopped. It is high time that Oregon students again feel justified in attending the schools of their native state. It is high time that faculty members be permitted to cease worrying about administrative difficulties and turn wholeheartedly once again to education and research. May the entire board now dedicate itself to these ends.

CONTRARY to unofficial reports, there is to be a Homecoming on the campus this year, and the fact that the Oregon State-Oregon game is to be played the next week-end in Portland is to have no effect on the traditional campus gathering of Oregon men and women. Portland alumni who are to act as hosts to the rest of the alumni at the Portland game have given assurance of their intention to participate as usual in the Homecoming events. The Utah game is Oregon's only inter-sectional game, and indications are that it will be a real battle. Also, this year the student body is planning its customary royal welcome for alumni, with all the trimmings. The alumni meeting is to be confronted with issues of importance, and every alumnus will find the week-end unaltered from any Homecoming of the past. Remember the date: November 4, and come "Back to Honor Oregon." The next issue of OLD OREGON will be the Homecoming issue, and will carry a full program and particulars.

TO SAY that Homecoming week-end will be unchanged this year is a misstatement in one respect. For those alumni who return to the campus and some time during their stay wander up the stairs in Johnson hall to pay a visit to Dean Gilbert ("Jim" Gilbert to those who have gotten over the fears of classroom encounters) there is a disappointment in store. No more is he to be found in his traditional place adjoining the executive offices. These alumni will have to walk down the stairs and across Thirteenth street to 109 Commerce hall to find him, for the changes wrought by a new administration have apparently made it necessary to discard tradition in this case.

AS AN explanation to alumni who will be receiving their tickets for the Oregon State-Oregon game within the next few days and find, perhaps, that they are not quite the good seats they had hoped for, let it be said that consternation is no less intense on the part of the graduate manager. The explanation is that there is only one side of Multnomah stadium where alumni can be seated, and this side must, of course, be shared with Oregon State and the friends of both institutions, leaving less than half of one side of the stadium where good seats can be obtained. Paid-up alumni who sent their applications in before October 1 have been given preference, and after that orders are being filled in the order in which they are received. It must be remembered, too, that Multnomah plaque holders have a claim on a large block of the best seats. So if your seats are not as you would wish them, they are, nevertheless, the best that circumstances permit. If you have not already done so, order your tickets now.

More power to the alumni of the Los Angeles and San Francisco districts in their plans for gatherings to honor the football team when it appears in those cities, and may the Webfoots do them the honor of conquering the southern teams this year.

THIS MONTH WE HONOR

MR. PRINCE G. CALLISON, '23

Who is starting in his second year as head football coach at the University of Oregon, where he himself was once center on the Webfoot team and for two years won all-coast honors. From 1924 to 1928 "Prink" led the Medford high school grid-ers to two mythical state championships, piling up a staggering sum of 1,488 points to his opponents' 147. In 1929 he came back to his alma mater to become freshman coach, and in three years only two losses were chalked up against him. When Spears resigned in April, 1932, "Prink" was assigned to his job, and with one fairly successful season behind him and the start of a new season at hand, Callison bids well to soon become a strong conference championship contender.

A New School Year Begins

FOR the fifty-seventh time in an unbroken line of years the University doors have swung open to a new class of entering students. New faces and old are to be found, both among the faculty and students, as the University prepares to settle down once again to the task of educating the youth of the state in the cultural and professional subjects allotted to it.

Despite gloomy predictions of an unprecedented falling-off in enrollment, 2,051 students had registered after the first week, only an eight per cent decline from the year previous, and even this fact was made less important by the fact that registration showed an increase over last year of eight per cent in new students. Thus the drop is attributable to the failure of sixteen per cent of last year's students to return. Law school registration showed an increase of 17 students, from 87 to 104; and registration in the school of journalism climbed from 160 to 173. On the other hand, registration in the major schools of business administration and education showed decided declines.

SEVERAL professors have resigned their positions at the University or have been granted leaves of absence for the year, while a few new faces will be seen in the teaching staff.

Three new faculty members to serve on this campus have been named by the state board of higher education. Paul Everett Raymond, graduate of Harvard law school and for the past year professor of law at Stetson university, Florida, will become instructor in law, taking the place left vacant by the resignation of Guy S. Claire. Horace Robinson, formerly of the University of Iowa department of drama, will become instructor in English, and is slated to take the place of George L. Andreini in the drama department. Herman Kehrl, formerly of Portland and last year with the League of Municipalities of Minnesota, has been named director of the bureau of municipal research and service.

The University prepares to give its 57th year of service to the state. Registration is slightly down, but encouraging signs noted. Many changes effected in faculty personnel. Alterations made in Friendly hall. Dean Gilbert moved.

A LEAVE of absence for a year was granted Dr. John H. Mueller, professor of sociology, and as a result four members of the faculty of the department of sociology, now on two-thirds time, again will be put on a full time basis to absorb Dr. Mueller's work. These are Dr. P. A. Parsons and Luther S. Cressman, professors of sociology; Samuel H. Jameson, associate professor, and Mary H. Annin, associate professor.

Mrs. Marion F. McClain, circulation librarian, is on a leave of absence. Mrs. Marian P. Watts, reference librarian, has been granted sabbatical leave and will spend the year studying at the library school of the University of Illinois. Miss Katharine Kneeland, housing and employment secretary, has resigned her position and her place has been taken over by Miss Janet Smith. Raymond W. Breshears, who taught in the business administration school, has resigned, and is working for the state tax commission as a certified public accountant. A. J. Mathews, part-time instructor in the Romance language department, has resigned.

Dr. L. A. Wood and Dr. Donald M. Erb of the economics department are on leaves of absence for one year. Dr. Wood will do research work at the University of Chicago and plans to complete a book he is writing. Dr. Erb has gone to the University of Stanford, where he will be on the economics faculty. Leslie L. Lewis will take the second year of a two-year leave of absence.

E. W. Warrington, professor of education at the Oregon State college, is to give part of his time to classes at the University. Paul X. Knoll will also come over from Corvallis for part-time instruction in public speaking. Dr. Delbert R. French has already moved to Eugene to make his residence, and he will teach economics classes. He was here in Eugene for the summer session this year.

Dr. J. Earl Else, for the past 12 years director and chairman of the department of surgery of the medical school, has been named emeritus professor. Dr. Thomas M. Joyce, prominent Portland physician, has been appointed head of the department to succeed Dr. Else.

SEVERAL changes have been made during the summer in buildings and grounds, and offices of several professors have been re-located. Most drastic of these changes was the moving of Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the school of social science, from his traditional place in Johnson hall, next to the executive offices, to 109 Commerce hall. It is expected that Mr. C. D. Byrne, head of the informational division of the state system, will take over Dean Gilbert's former headquarters, as a move on the part of the administration to more closely unify the "official family" of Chancellor Kerr.

Alterations in Friendly hall were made during the summer after it was decided to close the building as a dormitory. A hallway making all offices accessible from one entrance, was the most important change.

"Cost a Fortune?--My Word No!"

By VINTON HALL, '32

"MY WORD, it'd cost you a fortune to take your automobile to Europe," said this person and that when my wife and I announced that we were going to take our car with us. But, as my grandmother who married my grandfather's brother used to say, "You can't let what people say bother you too much." And we didn't.

First of all we got down on paper what it would cost us. We thought we would just about break even. But we didn't. We saved almost $200. And we thought that was pretty darned good. We still think it was.

You can't get around this. It's a lot more fun driving your car where you want to go over there than it is hauling out fifty cents for a taxi to take you to a station and then have to squirm on a hard wooden bench waiting for a train that's an hour late. And there's no end to how much more you can see. For instance, we saw an enormous peasant woman flipped on her ear by a motorcycle that tried to beat us to a hay wagon.

JUST because we had an American automobile that looked pretty swell to a lot of Europeans everyone thought we were shot with gold. That was a disadvantage that can't be denied. Anyone who is unlucky enough to be an American tourist has to be on his guard. We tried not to be like American tourists, but that's just what every other American tourist thinks he tries to do. An American over there is just as obvious as an earwig in the morning mush. But, our very necessary economy led to inexcusable cupidity and we were soon quite capable of protecting ourselves from the machinations of garage men, hotel clerks, and forlorn widows.

Here is the story of how the writer, an ex-editor of the Emerald, and his wife decreased expenses but increased the enjoyment of their European trip by taking their auto—and Continentals thought they were Rockefeller!

JUST when we were becoming expert in this business of guarding our interests we got stung hardest. In one of our weak moments we left the car in a Madrid garage with orders to change the oil. We didn't stay to watch him change it nor did we inquire as to price for our prognostications made it seem unnecessary, (I've kicked myself a dozen times since).

Next morning we got the car and with it a bill for six liters (quarts) of oil at $1 a liter, and a wash job. We knew we had been bilked, especially when we had only paid 31 cents a liter for oil in France, but what are you going to do when you can't swear them out in their own language? We paid the bill and stormed out—too infuriated to check the oil—only to discover later that they had put in only four quarts.

Now this isn't fair to them over there. Everyone who writes about his European tour tells how he was swindled. They gyp over there because they think if they don't the American will, and besides he's got enough money to stand it or he wouldn't be traveling around that way. All Americans are known for their bargaining. So it develops into a vicious circle. The European gyps because he expects the American to bargain. The American wrangles over prices because he expects the European to gyp.

WE traveled about 7,000 miles over there on highways that were smooth and clean but as twisty as pretzels. (Speaking of pretzels, we'll come to beer later.) They have a lot of pride in their roads over there. They like them with lots of graceful curves in them and they groom them until they shine. Crews of sweepers come out of the unemployed to keep rocks and carpet tacks from under one's tires. Mussolini is building miles of new road in Italy, but he has his own ideas about highway construction. He won't fool with rock crushers or other modern appliances. Instead, he'll hand some lad a hammer, seat him before a pile of rocks, and let him fly at it. Then another lad with a donkey cart will haul the broken rock away. The result seems to be almost as satisfactory as anything we've turned out in America.

The 7,000 miles we traveled took us a long way on that continent. Distances over there are very short. We got north to Berlin (good place), east to Budapest (good wine), south to Naples (good women), and west to Madrid (good songs).

Have you ever heard of Mallorca and the beautiful city of Palma where the sun eternally shines, where Spanish girls sing and dance in the moonlight to the rhythmic click of castinets, and where you can live like a prince on fifty cents a day? If not, you're better off. We were lured there for six reasons. First, because we heard it was possible to live on less than fifty cents a day. The other five reasons don't matter. We left our car in Barcelona and took a boat out to this Elysian isle off the coast of Spain. That overnight voyage on the Mediterranean was the roughest ever experienced. We landed on a dull dusty day. The cab driver overcharged us. The cheapest lodgings to be had amounted to over $1.25 for each of us. The city was crowded with Americans, Englishmen, and German Jews who represented part of the "Hitler overflow." Local color was practically nil. The place was as interesting as an antique bedstead painted a new bright pink and decorated with purple flowers.

Palma, for us, turned out to be just another victim of ill-placed publicity. That's all. If we had gone with no illusions we would have found no disappointment. But the presence of Colonel John Leader and his family counteracted Palma's ennui. The colonel, whom many OLD OREGON readers will remember as the commander of Oregon war-time reserves and the protagonist of everything in sports, is still the same man of enthusiasm and action who directed maneuvers fifteen years ago on Oregon's training grounds. One temptation that he can't overcome is to throw his arms about any Oregonian, man, woman, or child, and sing "Mighty Oregon." Why overcome that, we ask, providing a pretty girl happens along now and then?

Munich makes the best beer. So we stayed longer in Munich, Germany, for beer—Munich, Germany, for beer. Foaming, golden, beaded Münchnerbräu. Most Germans like the light beer better than the dark, but we preferred the dark. Germany's beer excuses all her faults, including Adolf Hitler. Her beer even makes up for a few strange traffic regulations. We didn't mind paying 25 cents a day for the use of the highways in Germany. We didn't object to buying the compulsory electric arms which flip up on one side or the other of our automobile when we make a turn. We didn't mind, providing they still sold Münchnerbräu. But Münchnerbräu, mind you, should only be drunk when you're thirsty on very warm afternoons. It is the apotheosis of divine fermentation and the deity of three point two. Therefore, impious indulgende to the point of intoxication is a blasphemy of its name.

About Italy? We'd pack up and go back to Florence tomorrow if we could. The place reeks with art. Venice reeks with garlic, and Rome with Mussolini. But Naples is the one place in all Europe where we never care to go again. If we do we'll be equipped with tear bombs to protect us from leech-like beggars.

France? We'd like to go to Paris again when it isn't so hot, when there's elbow room in the Louvre, and when we can hear something besides English spoken around us in the Folies Bergere. We'd like to go again after all tipping is abolished.

Oregon? The one place in all the world (as much as we have seen) to live.

Two New Board Members Named

ON Saturday, September 30, in Portland the interim committee of the Oregon senate approved the appointment of two new members to the state board of higher education—the final step in quieting turmoil of two weeks' standing centering about the state board.

Mr. Roscoe C. Nelson, prominent Portland attorney, was appointed by Governor Meier to succeed C. L. Starr, president of the board since its inception under Governor Patterson, who had resigned at the request of Meier.

Following by about 24 hours Starr's resignation, came that of C. C. Colt, who likewise had been a member of the board since it was organized. Governor Meier at first appointed William G. Hare of Hillsboro to fill the vacancy left by Colt, but due to what Hare termed in his refusal to accept as "a subtle charge that my appointment has political significance," he declined to take the proffered post. Willard Marks, former state senator from Linn county, was named to fill the position.

A controversy within the board over the inability of several members to get access to certain audit reports concerning the department of buildings and grounds at Oregon State college, in which it was charged there were reported irregularities, was the immediate cause for the governor's request for Starr's resignation. The governor also charged that dissention and strife has reigned within the board during Starr's term as president of the board.

Colt, in notifying the governor of his resignation, stated that by resigning he hoped to give the governor a free hand in his attempt to quiet the troubles of the board and to harmonize the educational forces and the work of the board.

Mr. Nelson was born in Richmond, Va., November 5, 1879, and came to Oregon in 1908. He took his bachelor of arts and bachelor of laws degrees from the University of Virginia. He is a member of the law firm of Dey, Hampson & Nelson. He has long been interested in civic affairs.

Mr. Marks is a native Oregonian. He was born on a farm near Lebanon June 25, 1883, the son of pioneer parents.

He was graduated from Albany college in 1904. He then became a newspaper man in Portland. In 1906 he returned to Albany to become deputy Linn county clerk. He was first elected to the state senate in 1926.

On September 23, 1932, Mr. Marks resigned as a senator from Linn county and as president of the senate to accept an appointment as a federal referee in bankruptcy.

At the same meeting of the board that the audit controversy came to light, the matter of the reported "firing" of Mrs. Hazel Schwering, dean of women at the University, was brought up. After a hearing at which members of the Oregon Mothers organization appeared in defense of the dean of women's office and its policies, the board settled the matter by voting to engage Mrs. Schwering and her assistant, Mrs. Alice Macduff, for the coming year.

Under the Capitol Dome's Shadow

By JESSIE STEELE, '33

DAVID EYRE, ex-'34, got the wanderlust this fall and shook the dust of the good old U. S. A. from his webfeet. Yes, he hopped a liner about the middle of September for a world tour, and plans to be gone a year. To the Orient first, then India, Rome at Christmas time, Europe at his leisure and return by way of New York, the Panama canal and San Francisco. David has another year of school but hasn't decided which institution to take his degree from. It may be an eastern university. He was prominent on the campus last year, filling numerous committee chairmanships and being elected president of Sigma Delta Chi, journalism fraternity.

An Oregon grad from Salem who has made good in a big way is Dorothy Baker, '29, who has recently been appointed assistant editor of Hygeia magazine with offices in Chicago. Miss Baker has been employed by the North Shore News in Chicago for the past year. She was very active in campus activities, being affiliated with Theta Sigma Phi and Mortar Board. She served on the national council of Mortar Board and was editor of its quarterly.

John Creech, '33, is working in his father's drug store in Salem. He will be remembered as one of Oregon's yell kings.

Helen Darby, '32, went to business college last winter and this fall is looking around for a nice job. She may go to California for a few months later on.

Homer Smith, ex-'33, and Mrs. Smith (Marjorie Swafford, ex-'33) have been married a year now. Homer is in the insurance business and Marjorie keeps house, and incidentally was active in the recent NRA consumer's drive.

This month's Rambling Reporter takes us to the capitol city of the state of Oregon, which, next to Eugene and Portland, has the largest alumni population in the country. The writer is women's editor for Salem Statesman.

Katherine Laughrige, '33, has been very busy of late working with the Salem ad club on fall opening, which was a Salem event of September 21. She was active in advertising circles while at Oregon, being affiliated with Gamma Alpha Chi.

Although most of these squibs have concerned recent grads, this one is about Charles V. Galloway, '99, who is chairman of the state tax commission. Mr. and Mrs. Galloway and an 18 year old daughter have been residents of Salem for some time.

David Ivan Kafoury, '33, better known as "Ike," has been running a grocery store near one of the big hop yards out from Salem. He isn't married—yet.

Urlin Page, '33, is waiting to hear whether or not he passed the bar examination which he took in July. He spent part of the summer studying for it and the rest of the time waiting to hear how he came out. He plans to be a lawyer, though, in the very near future.

Esther Lisle, M.A. '33, is teaching in the high school at Langlois, which is down the coast from Bandon. She is interested in physical education work and spent part of the summer as a counselor at the Girl Reserve camp near Salem.

Floyd Ellis, ex-'21, is in the loan business in Salem. He has been located here about seven years. He and Mrs. Ellis took a vacation trip this summer into Canada, spending a week of their time in Seattle.

* * *

Erma Wiggins, '31, is in charge of Red Cross relief work in Hillsboro. She has been there since August, and was formerly connected with the Marion county office in Salem.

* * *

A busy Oregon alumnus the past few weeks has been George Hug, '07, superintendent of schools for Salem. A contemporary educator of Hug's, who likewise lives in Salem, and who also has been more than occupied with the re-opening of schools, is Charles Howard, M.A. '23, state superintendent of public instruction, with offices in the Supreme Court building.

Delta Upsilon Chapter Granted

SIGMA PI TAU, local fraternity on the Oregon campus, has been granted a charter by Delta Upsilon, one of the oldest of national fraternities. The grant was made at the annual convention of the fraternity held this year in Chicago early in September.

Sigma Pi Tau was organized in 1922 and has petitioned Delta Upsilon since that time. Since its founding the group has had many prominent members both in activities and scholarship. Eight are members of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honorary, and six are members of Sigma Xi, scientific honorary. For 27 terms Sigma Pi Tau has led men's fraternities in scholarship. Dean Eric W. Allen, head of the school of journalism, has been faculty advisor for the group since its founding.

Date of installation has not been announced at this time. It is expected, however, that the group will be installed in January so that Sigma Pi Tau may become the centennial chapter of the national organization. Delta Upsilon was established at William and Mary college in Virginia in 1834. The Oregon charter was the 59th to be granted by the national.

We've Hope in Them Thar Webfooters!

But it'll take lots of luck to keep ol' man Injury off the field; and even at that, there are still weak spots here and there. Yes'r, there's a premium on reserves in the Webfoot camp, but nevertheless, our hope runs high.

By BRUCE HAMBY, '34

WANTED: A few reserve half-backs, about two experienced tackles and perhaps a 200-pound blocking quarterback.

With those replacements on hand, Prink Callison might be a little more enthusiastic about his 1933 football chances at the University of Oregon. Right now, with the season just getting under way, the young Webfoot coach isn't saying much. It's far too early to predict just what the Webfoots will do this fall.

All observers admit, and you might press Callison to agree with you, that Oregon has a good-looking first string eleven. Every position is filled by a letterman and in the season's opening contest, against Linfield college at Eugene Friday night, September 22, the regulars rolled up 20 points in 20 plays in slightly less than a full quarter.

THE Webfoot second string didn't look so bad in that first contest either, tallying 20 points in the second quarter on only a few more plays. But that's where the optimism ends. Outside of the first 20 men or so, Oregon is woefully lacking in football players of Coast conference calibre.

Taking the hope that the Webfoots could go through the entire season without any serious injury to any of the regulars, Oregon might easily prove to be a dangerous pennant contender. But should any of the first stringers be laid out for two or three weeks, Webfoot stock would drop very fast.

But perhaps a glance over Oregon's 1933 material will more clearly explain Callison's attitude. The starting backfield combination should click this fall. Three of the ball-carriers are playing their third and final year as varsity men. The fourth is a junior with one year of conference competition behind him.

ANY coach or athletic fan on the coast will tell you that Mark Temple, Leighton Gee and Mike Mikulak are as fine players as anyone could wish for. Bob Parke, the fourth mentioned individual and blocking quarterback this fall in place of Bill Bowerman, is a cinch to develop into a great player.

Mikulak, making his final bid for all-American honors, should reach the peak of his full-backing career this year. With his defensive qualities already known up and down the coast, Mike may surprise many of the fans this year with some new-found offensive ability. He is slightly heavier than last year, weighing close to 200 pounds.

Temple, mentioned on many all-coast teams last year, is one of the most consistent and dependable halfbacks Oregon has had in years. His work as safety man, his kicking and passing ability, stamp him as a dangerous contender for repeated honors this year. Gee, who occupied the right halfback post off and on last season, seems to have the position sewn up this fall. Last year his main disadvantage was lack of weight—he tipped the scales at only 157 pounds. This fall he returned weighing close to 170. He is a great open-field runner and a fine pass receiver.

Parke, the newcomer to the backfield combination, was a reserve halfback last year. In shifting his backs about in an effort to secure a successor to Bowerman, Callison tried out Parke and liked his work so well that he retained him at that post. Parke, although he weighs only 165, is an aggressive player and a good field general.

OUTSIDE of two reserve fullbacks, Howard Bobbitt and Jack Rushlow, the Webfoots are in need of some experienced reserves. Only three halfbacks are given any chance of breaking in this fall. "Pepper" Pepelnjak, the stocky and speedy half who gained fame last year by scoring a touchdown on his first play in a conference game, will alternate with Gee at the right half post. To relieve Temple at the opposite berth, John "Stew" Milligan, a sophomore, will be the only man available. While Milligan's great kicking and passing work last year with the frosh stamp him as a comer, his lack of experience will hold him back. Frank Michek, another sophomore, completes the list of halfback prospects.

Ralph Terjeson, chunky Pendleton athlete, will again understudy the quarterback job. Whit Arey, former Eugene high school star, is a sophomore applicant for the position.

The center of the Webfoot line is one of the most cheering aspects of the whole grid situation. With Bernie Hughes, all-coast last year, back at center. Four lettermen guards are battling for regular jobs and there are three promising sets of ends on hand. Callison's only worry is to fill the tackle berth left vacant by the graduation of Bill Morgan, all-coast star for the past two years.

Biff Nilsson, two-year veteran, is the only experienced tackle on hand. The remaining candidates are all playing their first year as regulars. At present Alex Eagle, 200-pound giant from San Francisco high school fame, is getting the call to pair with Nilsson in the first string line. Eagle understudied Morgan last year but got little chance to play. Chuck Bishop, 220-pound one-year letterman, is alternating with Eagle. To aid Nilsson on the other side of the line is Dwight Neilson, husky sophomore.

Besides Hughes at center, Line Coach Gene Shields has Chuck Swanson, two-year reserve, and Con Fury, tackle on the 1931 frosh team. Both Swanson and Fury are capable of taking over Hughes' job.

Gardner Frye, Dutch Clark, Brec Cuppoletti and Roy Gagnon, all letter-winners, are fighting for the two regular guard positions. Callison plans to use them in pairs, alternating each quarter. Gagnon and Cuppoletti are taking care of the left guard berth, with Frye and Clark, the two starters in 1932, paired opposite them.

Three lettermen ends and three talented reserves are making the battle for wing posts an interesting one. Butch Morse, Chuck Wishard and Bud Pozzo are the three returning veterans, while Bud Jones, a transfer from Ashland Normal school, Mason McCoy, reserve last year, and Ned Simpson, a sophomore, are the three newcomers.

Morse and Pozzo are getting the call for regular jobs in early season practice. Morse is a cinch for the left wing position, while Pozzo is beating out Wishard at present for the opposite post. Jones, McCoy and Simpson are about on a par, with Jones having a slight edge, due to more experience.

The big hurdle of the entire season will be the classic struggle with the University of Washington, to be played this year at Seattle on October 14. Should the Webfoots come through this with a victory, they will be in a good spot to reach California with the Northwest championship. Jimmy Phelan, Husky coach, is making no bones about "getting" Oregon this season, however, and breaking the five-year jinx that has kept Washington elevens from scoring on the Webfoots.

Gonzaga Game Revealing

Showing great offensive power, a better-than-expected pass defense, and satisfactory last-half power, the Webfoot eleven won from the stubborn playing an offensive ability rivaling his reputation as a defensive back. Temple, Gee and Parke, together with Mikulak, proved to be a backfield combination that is bound to be a real conference threat. Mike Pecarovich, Gonzaga coach, rated Oregon at least on a par with Washington—the team that beat his Gonzagoans 13 to 0 the week before on a soggy field.

Other bright spots: The Oregon line seems better and stronger than it has been for years; the morale of the team appears much improved over last year. Dark spots: Temple came back from Spokane with a wrenched knee, and undoubtedly will not be up to par when the big game with Washington comes off at Seattle October 14; and the inability of the Callison men to put the ball across from the five-yard line or better four different times in the first half against Gonzaga.

New Graduate Council Formed

THE final step in the complete coordination of all academic work in the state system of higher education has recently been effected through the appointment by Chancellor W. J. Kerr of a graduate council composed of representatives of the University, state college and medical school.

The graduate division, of which the graduate council is the governing body, was created at the last meeting of the state board of higher education and Dr. George Rebec, for years dean of the graduate school at the University, was named dean and director. Coordination of all graduate work had been recommended by the curricula committee of the board more than a year ago.

Under the plan the graduate division of the state system will embrace all work beyond the baccalaureate degrees except that leading to strictly professional degrees. The newly-appointed graduate council, with Dr. Rebec as dean and chairman, will administer graduate work wherever it is offered in the system, framing uniform regulations and standards and enforcing the board's allocation of graduate offerings.

The graduate council, as appointed by Chancellor Kerr, upon recommendation by Dr. Rebec, is composed of one representative of each major academic division at the University and college and one representative from the medical school. The University representatives are: Dr. C. V. Boyer, arts and letters; Dr. J. H. Gilbert, social science; Dr. J. J. Landsbury, fine arts; Dr. J. R. Jewell, education; Dean E. W. Allen, journalism; Dr. H. V. Hoyt, business administration; Dr. J. F. Bovard, physical education.

Dr. Olof Larsell will represent the medical school.

Alumni Writers Active

FOUR books, written by Oregon graduates, have recently made their appearance in the book stores of Oregon.

"Fundamentals of Logic" by Miller Chapman, M.A. '28, was published last spring. Chapman is assistant in philosophy at Harvard university.

Milton Krims, ex-'26, has recently had published a book, "Into Darkness," by the Macauley company. The book deals with the power of money and the manner in which it may crush and bewilder a sensitive man.

Another Oregon author who has recently placed a book upon the market is Edison Marshall, whose "Light in the Jungle" has received favorable reviews for its intensity and dramatic picturization of the Indo-Chinese jungle.

The fourth Oregon author is Mrs. Claire Warner Churchill, '19, whose book, "Slave Wives of Nehalem," appeared during the summer from the Metropolitan press of Portland. The book presents in fiction form the life of the Oregon coast Indians, a subject which Mrs. Churchill has studied for many years.

When Oregon Meets O.S.C.

PORTLAND alumni of the University of Oregon were hosts to the Dads and Mothers clubs and "Friends of the University" at their luncheon meeting at the Portland hotel on Thursday, October 5, at which time a special football program was presented.

Prink Callison, football coach, Bill Reinhart, baseball and basketball coach and freshman football coach, and Bill Hayward, track coach and football trainer, were all invited by Bert Gooding, president of the Portland Alumni association, to be speakers at the luncheon, and all accepted.

It was the first appearance of the three Oregon coaches before the Portland alumni group this year. Coming a few days before the Oregon-Washington football game at Seattle, it served a double purpose—that of getting the Portlanders acquainted with the athletic situation at Oregon and to boost the annual Webfoot-Husky tilt.

The Portland alumni have been active this fall and have arranged a complete program of activities. They hold luncheons every other Thursday and an effort has been made to have some faculty member of the University speak at these luncheons. At the one held at the Heathman hotel September 21, Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, was the chief speaker. At a meeting before that Hugh Rosson, director of athletics and general manager of the student body was the speaker.

The Portland alumni will sponsor two big events Armistice week-end. The night before the Oregon-Oregon State game at the stadium here November 11, they will stage a midnight matinee at the Broadway theater. The night of the game a big alumni dance will take place at the Masonic temple.

President Gooding has appointed committees to handle the various phases of alumni work in Portland this fall. He will get in touch with the Dads, Mothers and Friends of the University heads and seek their cooperation in making the midnight matinee and the alumni dance a huge success.

A liaison committee to work with a group of Oregon State alumni has been appointed. The two groups will work together on the Oregon-Oregon State football game and will iron out whatever problems may arise. The complete personnel of committees appointed by President Gooding follows:

Portland alumni have been working several weeks laying plans for two big alumni gatherings in Portland on the Armistice Day week-end, November 11, when the Rose City plays host to University and college fans.

Theater: Joe Freck Jr., chairman; Kenneth Jette, George Joseph, Margaret Tarbell, Edgar Smith, Alice Morrow Scott, Dolores Pierson.

Publicity: Sam Wilderman, chairman; Gwiadys Bowen, Eddie Smith, Harold Young, James Travis, Harold Hunt.

Constitution and by-laws: Dave Pickett, chairman; Bob Mautz, Carl Dahl, Allan Bynon, Lyle F. Brown.

Liaison: Bob Maxwell, chairman; Merwyn

Rankin, Dr. Merle Margason, Sam Wilderman, Dr. Howard Staub.

Fraternal groups: William B. Adams, chairman; Mark Gill, Rod Keating, Mrs. W. Lyle Palmer, Freda Goodrich Mowrey, Anton Peterson, Mary Griffin, Anne Baum, Frances M. Gill.

Dance: Jack Benefiel, chairman; Henryetta Lawrence, Mrs. Lamar Tooze, Brian Minnaugh, Mrs. George Eisman Jr., Esther Maegly Justice, Georgia Benson Patterson, Jack Meier.

Membership: Don K. Moe, chairman; Leith Abbott, Martha Shull, Seth Thompson Jr., Alexander G. Brown, Paul Hunt.

Bureau to Assist Oregon Cities

THE culmination of long laid plans for a bureau of municipal research and service at the University of Oregon has taken place on the campus this fall with the establishment of offices for the new bureau and the appointment of Mr. Herman Kehrli as bureau head.

The new bureau, established by virtue of a $6,000 appropriation, made by the state board of higher education at the request of the League of Oregon Cities, will have as its duty the dissemination of information to city officials concerning municipal administration and act as a clearing house and give assistance in the solving of the problems of Oregon municipalities. The commonwealth service council of the University, under the chairmanship of Dean James H. Gilbert, and the League of Oregon Cities are joint sponsors of the new project.

Fifty-one Oregon towns and cities are now members of the League, but whether an Oregon municipality is a member or not, they will, nevertheless, be extended the facilities of the bureau.

Mr. Kehrli, accompanied by Mrs. Kehrli, came to Eugene from Minnesota, where for the last year he has been working with and studying methods of a similar and long-established bureau in that state. Before going to Minnesota, Mr. Kehrli was manager of the City club of Portland, and is a graduate of Reed college.

At the first meeting of the league since the establishment of the bureau, held in Eugene September 23, Dean Gilbert outlined to the delegates some of the subjects on which the University was prepared to assist the cities. These included regulation of public utilities, the distribution of the tax burden, city planning, sanitation projects, and legal questions. Advice and information on these and other matters the cities may now receive through the new bureau.

The project is looked upon as a big step in bringing the University and the services of its faculty in closer contact with the people of the state.

Herman Kehrli, manager of the newly established bureau of municipal research and service at the University.

ON AND ABOUT THE CAMPUS

BESIDE the many faculty members who stayed in Eugene during the summer to teach in summer school, many others spent the three-month interim between spring and fall terms in traveling, studying, research, and other activities.

Research Party at Crater Lake

Dr. E. G. Leighton, executive secretary of research, E. G. Moll, professor of English, Nowland B. Zane, professor of design, and Andrew Vincent, professor of art, spent the summer at Crater Lake national park doing research work for the Carnegie corporation. The object of the research was to determine how the natural beauty of Crater Lake national park could be appreciated most by the public. With the University group was Fred Strickland, Portland artist. John C. Merriam, head of Carnegie corporation, visited the men twice during the summer.

Elected National President

Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed, director of dormitories at the University, was recently elected national president of Phi Omega Pi sorority. She represented that group at the national Pan-Hellenic convention in Chicago, September 12, 13 and 14. Mrs. Turnipseed is a member of the sorority at Beta chapter, University of Iowa.

Dean Onthank Attends Meeting

Dean Karl W. Onthank, head of the personnel bureau at the University, attended the Hazen foundation convention in Estes Park, Colorado, during the summer. Some 75 selected personnel and administrative workers from all parts of the nation attended the conference. Dr. O. R. Chambers of the Oregon State college faculty accompanied Dean Onthank.

Summer Spent in Orient

Four members of the University faculty spent the summer inspecting industries, newspapers, and halls of art and music in Japan, China, Korea and Manchuria. Those who made the trip were Dean Eric W. Allen, Dean John J. Landsbury, Dean H. Val Hoyt, and Prof. Anne Landsbury Beck. Mrs. Winnie Landsbury McKnight, sister of Dean Landsbury and Mrs. Beck, accompanied the group. They returned to Eugene for the opening of the fall term of school.

Gilbert Given PWA Appointment

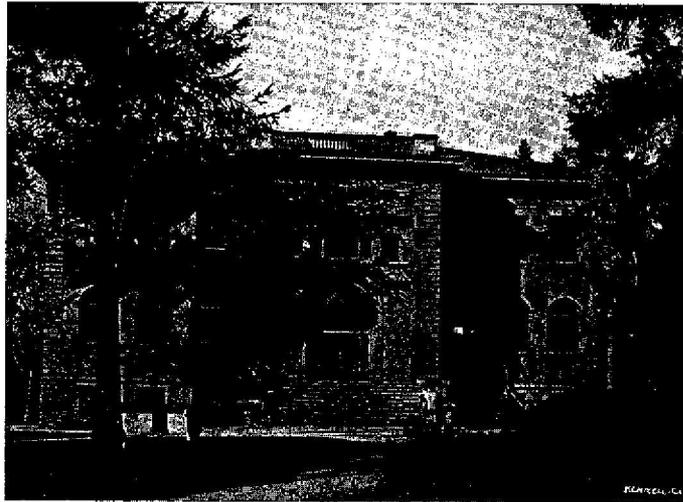

Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the school of social sciences, has been given recognition for his outstanding ability with two important appointments in connection with the NRA in Oregon. On August 1, General Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, appointed Dean Gilbert to the state advisory board of the national recovery program. This appointment was resigned a few weeks later in order that he might accept a place on the advisory committee for the public works administration in Oregon.

Extension Classes Scheduled

Salem, Roseburg, Medford and other cities of the state will each become a miniature campus of the Oregon state system of higher education this fall, according to plans for extension courses for these localities recently announced. Class groups have been organized and will be taught by regular faculty members of the University, state college or state normal schools. Extension courses, which are planned primarily for those who are unable to attend one of the higher institutions, will also be given in Eugene and Corvallis, and the center in Portland will be maintained as usual, it was stated.

Dr. Robert C. Clark, head of the department of history at the University, spent the summer in Honolulu where he taught in the school of Pacific and Oriental affairs of the University of Hawaii. He returned to Eugene the latter part of August. Another faculty man who taught during the summer was Ray P. Bowen, head of the Romance language department, who taught at Stanford.

Miller Goes to Columbia

Robert T. Miller, class of 1933, received word during the summer that he had been awarded a scholarship at the Columbia university law school. Miller was one of the good-will debaters that toured the Pacific basin, and last spring he won the Failing-Beekman speaking contest. Miller was executive secretary of the Associated Friends during the summer.

Dean Morse Refuses Offer

Wayne L. Morse, dean of the University law school, has declined an offer from a large southern university to become dean of the law school there. The offer was a very flattering one as it proposed to double the salary Dean Morse received under the reduced Oregon salary schedule. Chancellor Kerr, when informed of the situation, immediately recommended changes be made in Dean Morse's contract. His salary was adjusted upward $500 per year and he was given an indefinite tenure contract by the state board of higher education.

Student Receives Scholarship

A four-year scholarship to the Webb Institute of Naval Architecture in New York City has been awarded Jack Macduff, class of 1933. The scholarship is for $1,000 for each of the four years and covers all expenses at the institution. The award was made through competitive examinations held throughout the United States. About 20 candidates were accepted by the school.

Courses in Religion Offered

Credit courses in religion of equal academic standing with other courses in the institution will be given at the University starting this fall. The work will be non-sectarian in spirit and is sponsored voluntarily by a representative faculty group. Professor E. W. Warrington will head the department, both here and at Oregon State college. Courses dealing with religious aspects of certain other academic fields will be offered by Nowland B. Zane, professor of design; Dr. H. G. Townsend, professor of philosophy; and Dr. E. S. Conklin, professor of psychology.

Extension Given Brown

Eyler Brown, assistant professor in architecture who has been doing advance work in etching in Belgium during the past year, has been granted an extension of time, and does not plan to return to the campus until next March.

New Pledge Plan Used

A new plan whereby fraternities can pledge only freshmen who have made a satisfactory showing in the entrance psychological examination was put into effect on the campus this year. Freshmen who placed in the lowest quartile in the exam must earn a .75 grade average before being permitted to pledge a house. The plan is new and is being watched with interest by many other institutions. It is expected that the plan will materially raise house grade averages.

Morgan Studying in East

Fred B. Morgan, assistant professor of physics, is now attending the University of Michigan for the purpose of obtaining his doctorate. Professor W. R. Varner, formerly of Oregon State college, has been chosen to fill the vacancy.

Employment Secretary Named

Miss Janet Smith, formerly secretary of the Y. W. C. A. of the Northwest, has been named to the position of secretary of the University employment bureau. Miss Smith will be associated in this work with Miss Katherine Kneeland, who was secretary of the work last year and who will devote only part time to the employment and personnel work while continuing her studies for a master's degree. The bureau serves as a clearing house for students who want part time work.

Mrs. Schmidt Dies

Mrs. Elizabeth Schmidt, wife of Dr. F. G. G. Schmidt, for many years a member of the University's German department staff, died in Eugene on September 30 of heart disease. She came to the University with Dr. Schmidt from Germany in 1904.

Dad's Day Scheduled

The annual Dad's Day at the University has been set for Friday and Saturday, October 20 and 21, according to plans announced jointly by Lair Thompson, president of the Dad's organization, and Thomas Tongue, president of the associated students. The Idaho game Friday evening will be the feature entertainment for the week-end.

* * *

Uniform Audits Requested

The assistance of the auditing department of the secretary of state's office in helping to correct any deficiencies in the accounting system of Oregon's higher educational institutions has recently been requested by Chancellor Kerr. It is hoped that by following the recommendations of the state auditors a uniform accounting system may soon be set up, and deficiencies will be done away with entirely.

Frederic S. Dunn Ill

Frederic S. Dunn, head of the Latin department, has been seriously ill at his home during the past few weeks, although doctors report that he has been making progress of late. A. J. Mathews is helping out in the department during Mr. Dunn's absence.

Donor of Scholarship Dies

Ion Lewis, for 40 years one of Portland's most famous architects, died August 29 at the Arlington club in Portland, where he had been living in retirement. Mr. Lewis was the donor of the Ion Lewis scholarship in architecture at the University in 1931.

Student Fees Are Reduced

Student fees and student expenses at all institutions of higher learning for the 1933-34 school year will be lower than for several years. Student fees at the University were reduced $6 per term or $18 per year, and the annual breakage deposit was reduced from $10 to $5. Board and room charges at dormitories have been lowered about $30 per term during the past year.

Tuttle at Columbia

Dr. Harold S. Tuttle, for several years a member of the University's school of education staff and on the faculty of Pacific university last year, is doing research work at Teachers' college of Columbia university this year. His work involves a scientific determination of the effect on attitudes towards citizenship which various college studies have upon students.

398 Pledges Listed

Fraternities and sororities pledged 398 new students during "rush week" this fall, with the men's houses taking 204 and the women's groups admitting 194. Competition this year was reported to be very spirited because of the decreased enrollment. Phi Delta Theta, with 20, led the men, with Sigma Alpha Epsilon second with 18. Gamma Phi Beta led the women's houses with 21, and Alpha Phi was second with 20.

Associated Friends End Year's Program

THE Associated Friends of the University, organized in Eugene in the late fall of 1932 by the friends of higher education throughout the state, is bringing to a close its first year of activity. To uphold the educational prestige of the University of Oregon, and to bring before the young people of the state the advantages of getting their higher education in the institutions of their own state are the purposes of the organization.

The effectiveness of the program as carried out by the new organization is shown in registration figures at the University which indicate an eight per cent increase in enrollment of new students, while, on the other hand, the registration of old students shows a decline of sixteen per cent.

During the past summer the Associated Friends have worked in co-operation with students' living organizations of the University in a state-wide program of laying before prospective students the educational opportunities offered at the state university. An outstanding feature of this work has been the publication of 10,000 copies of a small newspaper, "The University of Oregon Times," a copy of which was mailed to every high school graduate in the state.

The "University of Oregon Times" stressed the increasing importance of university training under the "new deal" and during the era of social and economic planning predicted for the America of the future. Other contents included articles on the standing, the faculty, and the curricula of the University's six professional schools—in law, journalism, business administration, fine arts, education, and physical education—the importance of the colleges of liberal arts and of the social sciences which serve as a foundation for the training of the professional schools; the cash value of university training in terms of increased earning power; extra-curricular activities of the student body; and the opportunities open to university students for a large measure of self-support.

An open letter from W. J. Kerr, chancellor of the state system of higher education, addressed to the Associated Friends was also published in the newspaper. Chancellor Kerr said in part: "I am in hearty accord with the constructive efforts of your organization in encouraging young people to go to college and in helping entering students to solve their educational problems in their own best interests."

Several thousand personal letters have gone out during the past summer from the Associated Friends to prospective university students, supplying them with requested information on the University's calendar, entrance requirements, living conditions and costs, and faculty standing in the various fields. The major objective of this correspondence has been to check a growing tendency among Oregon students to go outside the state for higher education.

The Associated Friends of the University maintain a permanent office in the Miner building in Eugene. Dr. Irvin R. Fox of Eugene is president, and John W. Anderson, also of Eugene, is secretary-treasurer. The association at the present time has a membership of some 2,000 persons.

Has Heavy Duties

Charlie Fenton Clark, '16, formerly secretary of the Alumni association and the first editor of OLD OREGON, has been for a number of years assistant to the graduate manager of the University of California. She has recently been assigned additional duties including the management of the famous Stephens union of the University of California and Eshleman hall which houses all of the University of California student publications. She has also been given charge of a considerable number of the budgets of student activities.

THE FAMILY MAIL

To the Editor:

We're plugging away here on the West African coast. My husband has charge of the cargo, since this is the distribution point for the interior stations. And I trot about on my bicycle, inspecting schools. Next week we start on a real trip into the "bush"—a hundred miles or so by bicycle and foot, to visit more schools. I hope to see some real African Africa, untouched by the influence of the white man.

We've been enjoying an elephant lately. When we went out to see it in the jungle I expected to see it tearing up trees by the roots, but instead it was calmly eating bananas from the hands of natives. And one morning it strolled down the beach in front of our house. The natives have a tradition, of course, that he is a spirit of a bad man who died. Pretty healthy looking spirit, if you ask me. He stands about six feet and has a nice pair of tusks.

Our rainy season is starting, and what rains! None of this drizzle that does get a bit tiresome at Oregon now and then. But torrents and winds, and lightning and deafening thunder. We get up and put our clothes on at night just in case we will have to take to the open spaces. It rips the zink off the roof and blows down the native bark huts—and then the sun comes out and in an hour we can play a set of tennis.

To the Editor:

I left Eugene shortly after graduating and came to the "Windy City."

Since arriving here I have been working rather steady. At present I am working for the Sewing Machine Supply company, located at 404 South Market street. Here I am employed as a "handy" man. While the pay is small and the hours are long, nevertheless, I like the work. It is quite varied, and full of new problems.

Among various places of interest I have visited are: the world's fair, Fields museum, Shedd aquarium, main public library, and Lincoln park. Of course, the fair is by far the most interesting place of all.

To the Editor:

I was lucky in securing a good position here with McKesson, Langley, Michaels and company upon graduation. My wife also has a position here. We are looking forward to seeing many of our old friends here for the Oregon-St. Marys game. Regards to all Oregon friends.

To the Editor:

I am again driving sight-seeing busses on Catalina island, as I have for several summers. I expect to be here this winter until my foreign work materializes, as I hope it will soon. I think Oregon University is the best school of the six colleges I attended and I always expect to boost it. I do so here.

To the Editor:

This is to advise you that Mrs. Hammond and I left Manila June 26. I have resigned, and we are happy to get back to Oregon after an absence of four years in the hot tropics. We are returning to the States via the Suez and Europe.

We are stopping at Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, and at Suez we will take an overland trip through Egypt. Get off our ship at Naples and after a visit in several Italian cities will cool off in or on the lakes of Switzerland, then to Paris and London with side trips, etc.

After a few days visit in New York and attention to business in Washington we will be back in Oregon the latter part of September and will again make our home in Portland.

Please do not send me any more OLD OREGONS to Manila, but hold all numbers until further advise from me. When we get our new home in Portland I will furnish you the address. Thanks.

Creed C. Hammond, ex-'93.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Major-General Hammond was comptroller general for the Philippine islands for four years.

To the Editor:

At present I am working on my father's farm and hop yard, 15 miles west of Eugene. I had planned to teach high school but was unable to obtain a position for next fall. I am, however, selling a little automobile insurance.
