1884 CLASS TREE

The towering cedar tree shown just to the right of old Deady Hall was planted by the members of the Class of 1884.

Cruises a la Carte

One of the nicest things about cruising on the famous President Liners is the absolute freedom they allow you—to sail when you please, stop-over as you like, continue on when you choose.

Actually you may go through the Panama Canal to California (or New York), to the Orient and back, or Round the World almost as freely on these great ships as you could on your own private yacht. And the fares are no more than for ordinary passage!

STOPOVER AS YOU LIKE Regular, frequent sailings of the President Liners make it possible for you to stopover exactly where you want to—see the things you want to see and make the sidetrips you want to make, then continue whenever you are ready.

Suppose you are making an Orient cruise: arrive at Shanghai, and find China more fascinating than you ever dreamed any place could be. Stopover! Visit Hangchow and Soochow, Tientsin... and Peking. Stay as long as you like. Then continue on... on another President Liner.

ORIENT ROUNDTRIPS President Liners sail every week from Los Angeles and San Francisco via Hawaii and the Sunshine Route to Japan, China and the Philippines; every other week from Seattle, via the fast Short Route. You may go one way, return the other—stopping over wherever you like, travel on the new S. S. President Coolidge and S. S. President Hoover and as many others as you choose of the President Liner fleet. Roundtrips are from $450, First Class... $240 for extra-economical Tourist Class.

ROUND THE WORLD The most thrilling cruise of all. 26,000 miles. Visits in 21 ports in 14 different countries, including Hawaii, Japan, China, the Philippines, Malaya, India, Egypt, Italy, France... Take only 85 days, or up to two full years—stopping over wherever you please, at no additional fare. First Class fares are from $833.50! And you may sail any week from New York, Los Angeles or San Francisco; alternate weeks from Seattle. Get full details at once.

NEW YORK President Liners bring all the thrill of real world travel to this speedy Inter-coastal trip... via the Panama Canal and Havana to New York. If you like, you may stopover with the same freedom that these liners allow you on the longer cruises. Explore the old world cities of the Canal Zone... see the sights in gay Havana! Fares are $165 First Class. Roundtrips by President Liner are generously discounted, and Round America roundtrips—one way by President Liner, the other by train—are from $255 First Class, hometown to hometown. Fort-nightly sailings from California; every week from New York.

Alumni Secretary

MR. CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION:

In making this report to the membership of our Association I wish to do more than merely report on the "state of affairs" as they are today. I wish to do this for two reasons. First, I am not satisfied with things as they are at present. Our Association is not yet on a firm foundation financially nor has it, in my mind, an adequate program. It is on the latter that I wish to dwell, believing that the solution to the fiscal question lies almost entirely upon the success or failure of the Association in adopting a program.

DEFINITE PROGRESS BEING MADE

However, I do not want to paint a gloomy picture. I do not feel that it is called for in the least. I feel that definite strides have been made in the past year to which we can point with pride and optimism. The part that the Association has played in organizing and participating in the University of Oregon Federation has to my mind been a major progressive step. Our membership has not decreased. For the first time in five years we have been able to maintain our paid-up membership. Revenue from the publication of OLD OREGON has slightly increased, and I believe I can safely say that the magazine has been gaining ground, as far as favor of the membership is concerned. It gives me pleasure to report that OLD OREGON was awarded a special prize for its editorial style and make-up by the American Alumni Council at its recent convention. While as editor of OLD OREGON I cannot believe that the magazine is deserving of such an award, it is, however, gratifying to know that since its revival a year ago last March, OLD OREGON has been able to reestablish, to some degree, its place in the alumni publication field. We have, in the publication of OLD OREGON, had grave financial handicaps with which to cope. Publication costs have been mounting out of proportion to revenue, and while every economy has been made without sacrifice to a certain standard of quality which I believe must be maintained, we have not as yet been able to make the magazine entirely self-supporting. Along this line one matter has come up that has caused some concern to a portion of our membership. This is in regard to OLD OREGON's acceptance of liquor advertising. I would like to state my position on this question very frankly and then throw the question open, if you see fit, for discussion and possible action. First, I would like to say that I would much rather not accept liquor advertising in OLD OREGON, not because of my personal objection to it, but because of the objection of a certain portion of our membership. To what extent this objection runs through our alumni readers I do not know. Only five alumni, two W. C. T. U. chapters of Milwaukie, Oregon, one Oregon Dad and one Mother and one faculty member have felt strongly enough to register their objections with me. However, I realize that this is not necessarily an index of opinion on this matter. Reasons for accepting the advertising are solely financial. With one more advertisement yet to appear in the last issue of OLD OREGON this year, revenue from this type of advertising will amount to better than $150. In the alumni office this year, $150 is a staggering amount. I could not, myself, justify turning down this revenue in face of the financial circumstances with which we must contend. I am entirely tolerant of the views of the objectors to this advertising policy, and I also realize that such a policy may, in some small way and in certain circles and under certain peculiar circumstances, be a hindrance to University prestige. However, when I see the alumni publications of California schools, Harvard, Princeton, Yale, and those of many state Universities as well, opening their pages to this type of advertising, I tend to discount somewhat the detrimental reaction claimed to result therefrom. Had the association the resources that would make this policy unnecessary I would be the first to suggest its discontinuance. Under the circumstances I cannot myself do so at present. However, I am, of course, more than willing to abide by the will of this group in this matter, and I would appreciate either tacit approval of this policy or definite instructions otherwise. One last word on this question. Some of those who feel this matter quite strongly have stated that they would rather have an inferior magazine or pay more dues to make up for the advertising. Unless this is the feeling of the majority of subscribers, I think it hardly fair to them that they should have to take on this extra burden or accept an inferior magazine at the same cost.

INCREASED MEMBERSHIP IMPERATIVE

This leads us indirectly to the problem of increasing our membership, the only apparent solution to our present fiscal difficulties. As you all know, during the Zorn-Macpherson campaign most of the expenses of the alumni office were paid from campaign funds, including the salary of the alumni secretary and the publication—at that time the Alumni Emerald. Prior to that the alumni office was receiving about 400% more income from the University than it does now. In the face of these circumstances we have attempted to hold together the essential points of a well rounded program. We have come to a point now, however, where merely getting along will not suffice. I have been working with our president, Mr. Ralph Cake, on an expansion program for the Association. It is our feeling, and I think you will agree, that we can only increase the membership and participation in association affairs by increasing the interest and loyalty therein. It is a queer fact that those who do most and maintain the most interest are also those who are most willing to contribute to the maintenance of the Association. And conversely, those who have paid their dues are those most easily drawn into active participation. Therefore it seems wise to expand along these two lines, first, in increasing our efforts toward a larger membership, and secondly, in expanding the activities and program of the association.

One of our first objectives, and this is

NEWS AND COMMENT

By the Editor

Education Keeps Pace

Education, particularly higher education, is not lagging behind in a world of rapidly changing social orders, ideals. Educators are as anxious and eager as any one else to cast aside old traditions and methods and embark upon new experiments. Furthermore, higher education can be looked upon as the guide that will lead civilization on to greater progress, and steer it around pitfalls that might bring about ruin.

Although deeply engrossed with the complex problems of their institutions, educators of today are wide awake to the fact that they and their projects, are vitally concerned with business, finance, politics, social planning, and other present day phases of society.

These conclusions were reached by more than 600 people who attended the University of Oregon's Higher Education Conference July 11 to 14, on the campus at Eugene. Termed a "pioneer conference," by Dr. Fred J. Kelly, chief of the division of higher education at Washington, D. C., one of those present, the success of the meeting amazed not only its sponsors, but those who attended as well. Dr. C. V. Boyer, university president, invited a half dozen experts in education, finance, politics and sociology here as leaders, asked higher education institutions of the Northwest to send delegates, and opened all meetings to business and professional men and others interested.

Above Expectations

The response to the conference was far beyond the fondest hopes. At the first meeting the auditorium, seating more than 600, was jammed to the doors. Four forum meetings held each afternoon drew capacity attendance, with one of them having more than 300 present. In each of them dozens of people literally fought for an opportunity of taking part in the discussions.

The conference here drew many unexpected delegates from the entire Pacific Coast and Northwest and from such states as Wisconsin, New Mexico, New York, Illinois, Arizona, Colorado, and other parts of the country, and was so successful that educators and others predicted it would serve as the first and the model for scores of such gatherings in all parts of the United States.

The list of distinguished experts who delivered addresses to general sessions and who led discussion groups included Dr. Kelly, Hon. Frederick M. Davenport, former congressman from New York; Dr. James W. Angell, professor of economics at Columbia; Dr. F. L. Hovde, assistant director, General College, University of Minnesota, and Dr. George W. Frasier, president of the Colorado State Teachers' College.

Forum sessions held daily were on the responsibility of higher education to (1)—student, (2)—commonwealth, (3)—adult education, and (4)—social planning. Final reports were made by the chairmen on the last day.

Leads Social Trends

The outstanding findings of the conference were summed up by Dr. Kelly at the closing banquet July 14. He opened with the emphatic statement that "Not only has higher education, as represented by large and small colleges and universities, kept pace with rapidly changing conditions, but it is quietly but firmly taking the lead in social trends, and further, it expects to act as a guide to keep democracy from falling into chaos."

Dr. Kelly, in his summary declared that: First—Colleges and universities have already under way projects to solve the problem of millions of people, now finding themselves with much free time due to industrial changes, of what to do with their new and often unexpected leisure. Adult education represented by extension classes, correspondence classes, and even regular campus classes have been formed especially for these people at many institutions.

Second—Institutions have recognized that students must be trained not only to "make a living" and "make money," but must be trained for "living rather than working." To answer this call, institutions have adopted as objectives the training for avocations, instilling in the student the desire for social service, and inculcating in them an appreciation of the arts.

More Education

Third—Because the social order of today no longer needs great numbers of "producers," youth must be kept in education for a much longer period. This cannot be accomplished, however, if only the mentally superior are permitted to enter higher institutions. To answer this, many colleges and universities have lowered their standards of admission, or cast them aside, and opened a division that can train these people for more useful and enjoyable lives. The General College of Minnesota, and the lower division program of Linfield college in Oregon were cited as examples.

Fourth—The colleges and universities must be expected to furnish real "experts," whose activities may greatly change the entire procedure of democratic government. In place of the matter of state being settled by calling for "opinions" of heterogeneous groups, the experts will be called to present facts for a basis of action.

To Oregon's new president, Dr. C. V. Boyer, goes full credit for this highly successful and progressive step in educational activity. It is in itself tangible expression of the way in which he has so quickly accepted the helm at the University and the capable way in which he is able to put into action his hopes and ideals for the institution.

The entire proceedings of the conference are to be published soon, by virtue of an appropriation by the state board of higher education, and alumni desiring copies should place their order with OLD OREGON as soon as possible.

Chancellor Search on

Word from the last meeting of the state board of higher education held recently in Portland indicates that the board's announced intention of seeking a man to fill the position of Chancellor W. J. Kerr, resigned, is no mere gesture, and that there will be a new man at higher education's helm before September is distinctly in the realm of possibility.

The committee on whose shoulders this responsibility rests is composed of E. C. Sammons, chairman, Lief S. Finseth, B. F. Irvine, and Chairman Willard L. Marks, ex-officio. The instability of the present situation, together with the hope for increased enrollments and income, makes the need for a permanent chancellor immediate and imperative.

Finances Worry

In a lengthy and detailed report given at the July meeting of the board, Chancellor Kerr told of the critical financial situation faced by the higher educational institutions of the state for the next biennium. With reserves spent in keeping present functions alive and with probable decreases in tax income, the outlook for the coming two years is far from a happy one, the chancellor pointed out. Wisely Dr. Kerr stated that it is not for the board to decide what the state can afford for higher education, but that it is the board's duty to inform the governor, the legislature and the people if the institutions are to continue their present functions. As duly appointed guardians as well as administrators of higher education, it is to be hoped that the board will actively campaign for the cause of Oregon's schools. The findings of the conference on higher education should alone be justification enough for such a policy. In face of the impending difficulties, the board is to be complimented for passing the new budget as submitted.

Ballot Threat

The measure, to appear on the November ballot, limiting property taxes to 20 mills will have more than drastic effect on higher education, if passed, and is another worry that has been heaped on the shoulders of those responsible for the higher educational system of the state. The passage of the measure would mean the complete stoppage of all income for higher education, as well as secondary education in the state. OLD OREGON cannot too strongly urge that alumni residing in Oregon study this measure carefully, giving attention to its effects on higher education and the valuable functions thereof that are placed in jeopardy.

Portland Again

The classic Oregon-Oregon State football game will again be played in Portland, this year on November 10. This is the announcement of Hugh Rosson, graduate manager. To many alumni this announcement will be greeted with approval, and by others with disapproval. The change, however, was made necessary by a second decision handed down by the attorney-general stating that no matter what arrangement is made for the administration of student "activity" fees, that they cannot be collected under a compulsory arrangement without legislative enactment authorizing such procedure. The difference between income from the former home-and-home games and the Portland games will just about make up the income lost through the voluntary basis imposed by the attorney-general's decision. It is this consideration that has prompted the change to Portland again this year. Under the circumstances, alumni should offer every co-operation to the Associated students during the present "student fee" difficulties.

Alumni Summer School

In line with President Boyer's apparent policy of making every effort to extend the services of the University over a wider field of activity, is his recent announcement of his intention of sponsoring an "alumni summer session" for alumni of the University next summer.

The sessions will be designed, according to Dr. Boyer, for alumni who desire to return to the University to "brush up" in fields in which they are particularly interested, such as law, business, literature, architecture or education, and for those who have developed interests in liberal arts. "Side-line" or hobby interests will have a special place in the curriculum. Ample housing and recreational facilities are available and will be fully utilized, according to the president, as will a full staff of faculty and group leaders and experts in the various fields.

Full plans for the session are to be worked out during the winter by Dr. Boyer and the alumni office and organization will take place through the Alumni Association. Although similar "short courses" have been carried on at other institutions, this is the first experiment in this type of "adult education" in the state of Oregon. Conceived along slightly different lines, with full consideration for the peculiar advantages of the University location and summer activities, the plan bids well to become another step in the University's growing influence in the state. The session should serve as a tremendous stimulus to alumni activity and heightened interest in the University on the part of alumni.

Enrollment to Gain

Unofficial reports from the registrar's office seem to indicate that a very substantial increase in University enrollment (at least in the freshman class) can be looked for this fall. Since 1930-31 there has been a steady decrease in new students registered in the University. This decrease was stopped by a gain of 9 last year. This year, however, the receipt of credentials of new students planning to enter the institution are approximately 44% above this time last year.

Certainly a large part of the credit for stopping the decrease last year was due to the activities of the Associated Friends and the Affiliated Living Groups organizations. In last year's campaign, these groups were in touch with 416 prospective students. Already this year, under the direction of Thomas H. Tongue III, these groups have been in contact with more than 1573 prospective students, indicating again the probable influence of this work on the percentage of increase.

Expenses Lowest

That the cost of going to college at the University of Oregon is as low as at any institution of higher learning in the Pacific region, with the possible exception of Washington State College, is indicated by a recent bulletin published by the United States Office of Education. The circular is based on an extensive survey of expenses for tuition, incidental fees, room rent, board, and incidentals, made by Walter J. Greenleaf, specialist in higher education. Among the four Oregon institutions listed (University of Oregon, Oregon State Agricultural College, Reed, and Willamette) the minimum expenditure at the Eugene institution is the lowest. Moreover, the minimum cost at the University ($346) is nearly $200 lower than the average for all institutions surveyed by Mr. Greenleaf.

Many Return

Largest attendance in recent years and revived enthusiasm in class and alumni affairs marked the Commencement reunions and semi-annual meeting of the Alumni Association held this year on Alumni Day, June 9.

More than 300 alumni returned for their respective class reunions and the alumni meeting. Classes staging reunions this year included 1884, 1899, 1904, 1909, 1913, 1914, and 1924.

The day got off to an enthusiastic start at the meeting held in the morning in the traditional meeting place in Johnson hall with Vice-president Joe Freck presiding. Dr. C. V. Boyer was introduced to the assembled alumni and spoke briefly in welcome to the alumni, stressing the important part that alumni can and should play in the development of their alma mater.

No Liquor Ads

A spirited debate upon the advisability of continuing OLD OREGON'S policy of accepting liquor advertising was eventually climaxed by adoption of the following resolution by a vote of 45 to 9:

Whereas, the liquor advertisements in our magazine, "Old Oregon" are fostering the erroneous idea that the University of Oregon countenances and even encourages the consumption of alcoholic liquors by its students,

Therefore, be it resolved by this Alumni Association of the University of Oregon that its Secretary, who is editor and manager of "Old Oregon," be requested to discontinue the advertising of alcoholic liquors in our Alumni publication at the earliest possible date.

A committee of five, to be appointed by President Ralph Cake, to study the possibility of having the dates of Commencement put ahead one week and to take necessary steps if deemed advisable, was provided for in a motion presented by Fred Staver, '04.

Praise Board

The following resolution was presented by the resolutions committee and adopted unanimously:

Whereas, the State Board of Higher Education, recognizing the necessity for an individual spokesman for each of the major institutions, and in order to provide for the more harmonious and efficient administration of the University has named Dr. C. V. Boyer as head of our Alma Mater; and

Whereas, the appointment of Dr. Boyer has met with general satisfaction among students, faculty, alumni and friends; and

Whereas, the appointment of a president and the establishment of new channels of communication with the Board have resulted in improved morale among students and patrons of the University, and this action on the part of the governing body is recognized as the first step in the program of restoring confidence in our institutions of learning, therefore

Be it resolved by the Alumni Association of the University of Oregon, in semi-annual meeting assembled, that we express our approval of the Board's initial step in the direction of improving the administrative organization, and pledge our support to any further steps that are necessary to insure harmony and a constructive program for higher education in Oregon.

Dr. Boyer Speaks

Three hundred alumni, graduating seniors and faculty members crowded John Straub Memorial building to hear President C. V. Boyer, in his first formal address to alumni since his elevation to the presidency.

In opening his talk, Dr. Boyer said the public, from the point of view of the president of a state university, may be regarded as made up of the high school graduates who are giving some consideration to a college career, and the taxpayers. There are the parents, too, who are asking if a university education will advance their offspring in the competitive world into which they will shortly be forced, he added.

Tax-supported universities have to be justified just as we have to justify tax-supported fire departments, tax-supported highways, and the like, President Boyer declared. His talk in part follows:

"... Democracy depends for its success upon the wisdom and sincerity of the selected few and upon the powers of discrimination of the selecting many. College graduates constitute a small percentage of the population, and not all college graduates become governors, legislators or judges. If they have the will and ability, however, there are many offices necessary to the functioning of society which they will be called upon to undertake, and at all times they will have the opportunity to pass upon men and measures. By their willingness, they will take part in civic life, by their ability to perform creditably the functions allotted to them, and by their judgment of men and measures, university graduates will be judged and the value of higher education to the state will be determined.

"... The college graduate should be a judge of men and measures. The courses which he has pursued have brought him in contact with master minds, whether in the field of art, science, literature, history, economics, politics, philosophy, or law. . . . He has learned that all human institutions are 'quests for perfection,' and he comes to have a high respect for excellence and an aversion to mediocrity, whether among business men, politicians, or poets.

"... If we believe that democracy with its freedom is still the ideal political institution if it can only be cured of its diseases, then the need for higher education is greater than ever before. We need to turn out men and women trained in the habit of scientific thoroughness, able and willing to lead in social reorganization, ambitious to perform a superior job. . . . Let not the public destroy our universities and colleges by the sudden cutting off of all funds or by the slow process of attrition. . . ."

Class Representatives

Merle Chessman, Astoria, member of the class of 1909, introduced President Boyer. Mr. Chessman presided at the luncheon.

Preceding Dr. Boyer's address, Darwin Bristow had given the remarks from the class of 1884, followed by other words from W. T. Eakin, Astoria, also of the class of '84; Edwin Martindale, president of the senior class, expressed the hopes of that group and the pledge to take the vows to work for the betterment of the university. Leslie M. Scott, chairman of the state highway commission, appeared as the representative from the class of 1899, telling of the events of the University in his day.

Miss Pauline Walton, daughter of the late Judge J. J. Walton, one of the group of pioneers who worked to establish the University of Oregon, spoke from the class of 1904, pledging anew that group's work for the University.

Ormond Bean, city commissioner of Portland, spoke for another reunion class, that of 1909.

Harold Young, representing the class of '14, which held its 20th reunion, gave the message from his group, but sounded a warning that the fight was not over yet, referring to the measure which will be on the November ballot, the tax limitation bill.

Georgia Benson Patterson, Hillsboro, gave the talk from the class of 1924, in which she stressed the need for revived interest in the University and the need for greater activity for the school.

All reunion classes held special dinners Saturday evening prior to the Flower and Fern procession and twilight concert.

About 60 attended the annual meeting and breakfast of the State Association of University of Oregon Women, Saturday morning at the Osburn hotel. Mrs. C. V. Boyer, wife of the University president, was the honor guest for the breakfast.

Mrs. Ella T. Edmunson, Eugene, was elected the new president, succeeding Mrs. R. S. Bryson, also of this city. Mrs. William Barker, Eugene, was named first vice-president, Mrs.

George T. Gerlinger, Portland, second vice-president, and Miss Bertha Comings, Eugene, secretary.

Commencement Talk

The government of the United States, if it is to succeed in the future, and if peace and prosperity are to be permanent, will be one in which regulation, control, cure and prevention will play paramount roles, yet the government will be a true democracy in every sense of the word.

This was the message brought to the 57th graduating class of 505 students at the graduation exercises held Monday. The speaker was Frank Bane, Chicago, director of the American Welfare association.

Mr. Bane summed up his dynamic message in three sentences:

"The field of regulation must be as broad as the field of exploitation. The area of control must be as wide as the area of crime and disease. The realm of care, cure and prevention must be as far slung as the forces of misery."

Chancellor W. J. Kerr, President C. V. Boyer and Board Chairman Willard L. Marks each made short farewell addresses to the graduating seniors. Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, announced that gifts to the University during the year had amounted to approximately $100,000 with other valuable gifts of collections, books, and supplies.

Down through the periods of world history youth has stepped to the fore in times of need and rescued the people, contributed to sciences and the arts and brought about religious movements and reports, and today there is a need more than ever before for young men and women to set the various nations back on the road to prosperity and world peace, it was declared by Rev. James Ferguson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Astoria, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning at McArthur court.

50% Nominated

ALUMNI of the University constitute about one per cent of Oregon's population but they contributed over eight per cent of the winners in the primaries this year. Before the primaries about 16 per cent of the total office seekers this year, 375, were Oregon alumni. Well over half of those from Oregon who threw their hats in the ring came through with flying colors, 32 of them being nominated in the primaries.

Oregon tallied better than 66% in the primaries for Congress: James Mott, ex-'07, republican, now completing his first year in the national law-making body will run against R. R. Turner, ex-'22, democrat and superintendent of schools at Dallas for twelve years. One of these men will represent the first district.

In the second and third districts are Jay H. Upton, LL.B. '02, republican, with a long line of service in the Oregon Senate behind him, and Walter B. Gleason, LL.B. '11, democrat, now practicing law in Portland, were nominated.

Oregon is assured of placing a man in the position of Superintendent of Public Instruction with the two winners graduates from the institution. Charles A. Howard, M.A. '23, republican and present incumbent, and J. W. Leonhardt, B.S. '29, democrat and principal of the Central grade school in La Grande, both seek election.

In the judicial race five alumni were named in the primaries: George Tazewell, LL.B. '94, Portland attorney; Arthur D. Hay, LL.B. '11, Lakeview, appointed by Governor Meier last year; R. Frank Peters, LL.B. '10, Hillsboro attorney and former member of the state legislature; and Howard K. Zimmerman, '13, Astoria, are all out for the non-partisan positions of circuit judges in their respective districts.

Six Oregon alumni from different districts are still in the running for State Senators. They are: L. L. Ray, '12, democrat and attorney from Eugene; Elwin A. McCornack, ex-'08, republican, who has previously served several years in lower house at Salem; George W. Dunn, '86, republican and representative from Jackson county for many years; Dean H. Walker, '13, republican and formerly dean of men at the University; Kenneth E. Shetterly, ex-'18, Willamina merchant; and Roy K. Terry, '10, republican, Portland attorney.

Five Oregon alumni, three republican and two democrat, will compete with 21 others for the 13 positions in the lower house from the fifth district: Homer Angell, '00, former alumni president and former state legislator; Richard Deich, LL.B. '10, attorney seeking re-election for second term; W. S. U'Ren, ex-'14, attorney and father of direct legislation in Oregon; A. M. Esson, LL.B. '96, attorney; and Howard Latourette, LL.B. '05, attorney.

The only two men running for representative from the sixth district are Oregon alumni: Chester A. Moores, B.A. '12, LL.B. '17, republican and Portland real estate man, and N. Ray Alber, LL.B. '17, Portland attorney, lives in Milwaukie.

From the thirteenth representative district comes republican F. D. Mayer, B.A. '26, J.D. '27, attorney in Lebanon. Nominated in the fourteenth and fifteenth districts respectively are Charles A. (Shy) Huntington, '24, republican seeking re-election, and William W. Knight, LL.B. '32, republican, Roseburg attorney.

The twenty-eighth district nominated J. F. Hosch, M.D. '05, democrat from Bend, physician, and the thirty-third district named Fred W. Herman, LL.B. '14, seeking re-election on the republican ticket.

Those in the running for district attorney in the various parts of the state are: Grant J. Williams, '25, Gold Beach republican seeking re-election; James R. Bain, LL.B. '12, republican and attorney in Portland; Elmer D. Cook, ex-'23, republican attorney from Salem; Robert Chrisman, ex-'25 republican, attorney from Enterprise.

Priaulx Named

Arthur W. Priaulx, ex-'28, publisher of the CHILOQUIN REVIEW and MALIN ENTERPRISE, Klamath county weekly newspapers, has been named chairman of the State Central Committee of the Republican party in Oregon. Priaulx's comparatively rapid rise in the ranks of the party in Oregon was motivated by the policy of placing younger men in responsible party positions. After his election, Priaulx announced that he would move to Portland, where he felt he could better direct the destinies of the party. His election was greeted by widespread approval and confidence on the part of practically all state party leaders. His choice was unanimous.

son, graduate manager, managed the celebration with the assistance of Tom Stoddard, assistant graduate manager. The gross cost was more than $20,000. George Godfrey, University publicity agent, did similar work for the pageant. Fred Harris, former drama instructor, designed and directed the building of the mammoth 250 foot stage on Hayward Field; Mildred LeCompte Moore, '24, was in charge of all pageant dances; Cora Moore, '26, directed the 200 voice chorus; Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, held the leading role of the "Pioneer"; Rex Underwood, professor of music, directed the orchestra; and Clifford (Skeet) Manerud, ex-'22, managed the Queen Contest. An Oregon alumna, Marjorie Wilhelm, '32, was elected queen of the pageant.

In fact, every major position in the production of this show, except that of director, was held by someone directly connected with the University. Literally hundreds of Eugene alumni and faculty members took lesser parts in producing and staging this pageant, which, each time presented, is becoming more and more famous. Newspaper critics compared it with the very best two or three events of its kind in the world.

University Participates

For the third time in eight years the city of Eugene donned old fashioned clothes, the men grew whiskers, and the streets were decorated for the now famous pioneer pageant, known this year as the Oregon Trail.

In looking back on this third presentation, it is not hard to see the important part that the University plays in making of this Eugene celebration the event of genuine historical interest, and civic and cultural enterprise that it is. More than 50,000 persons, among them hundreds of alumni, were present in Eugene to view the spectacular pageant and world famous parades depicting the old-time northwest.

A very partial list of those participating indicates the extent to which Eugene draws on University or University trained talent in this event.

The script and beautiful words of the pageant were written by W. F. G. Thacher, professor of English and Business Administration. Hugh Ros-

Enrollment Gains

An increased enrollment is reported by Alfred Powers, director, in the six weeks' regular summer sessions of the state system of higher education. These sessions closed July 27, and the second session at Eugene opened August 1.

Seated on the float are four groups, representing the pioneer founders' families and first students, the middle period of University history, the present generation of graduates, and the future generation. Those taking part were: First group; Mrs. T. G. Hendricks, Billie Scott, (first student enrolled at Oregon), Anna Patterson Potter, George A. Dorris, Blaine Hovey, Darwin Bristow, and Jennie Spencer Luckey. Second group; James W. Mott, Edward F. Bailey, Pauline Walton, Norma Hendricks Starr, Camille Carroll Bovard, and Chester H. Starr. Third group; Mary Jean Warner, Frances Johnston, and Thomas H. Tongue III. Fourth group; Elizabeth DeCou, daughter of Professor E. E. DeCou and Walter Gilbert, son of Dean James H. Gilbert. session for the University sessions in Eugene and Portland was 1268. The total enrollment of 2214 for all sessions is an increase of 421 over that of last year. Out-of-state enrollment in the sessions of the College and the University reached a figure almost equal to pre-depression times, amounting to 307, and representing most of the states in the union.

As a part of the second session at Eugene will be held the training institute for emergency education supervisors, the University of Oregon having been designated at Washington, D. C., as the regional training center for Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

In this institute the newly appointed supervisors in the four states will receive intensive training for a period of eight days.

The summer session at the University attracted a group of more than 50 art teachers and students who came from as far east as Providence, R. I., and from Wisconsin, North Dakota, Alaska and California. Twenty-five of the number hold scholarships made possible by the committee on education of the American Institute of Architects, from a grant of $13,500 made by the Carnegie corporation to advance the appreciation of art in schools and colleges.

Shailer A. Peterson, another graduate in 1930 and receiving an M.A. in 1932, teaches science. He enrolled in summer school for advanced work.

A former L. H. S. teacher is Mrs. Grace Gilmore Robins, '19, who now keeps house for her husband and small daughter and is active in civic and social life of the town.

Mrs. Eleanor Everett Groves, '24, is another who is kept busy in her home, being the mother of two little daughters.

Mrs. Elizabeth Summers Sein, '30, makes her home in Lebanon with her husband. Her brother, John C. Summers, ex-'33, is now employed in an executive position in the office of the Crown-Willamette Paper Mill, Lebanon's principal industry. He plans to marry soon.

Dr. Irvine M. Smith, who graduated from the University in 1892, is perhaps the oldest of Lebanon's graduates. He is a retired physician and surgeon.

Hugh R. Kirkpatrick, of the class of 1917, former Mayor of the Strawberry City, and great-grandson of the city's founder, is at the head of the Kirkpatrick Motor Company.

Frank D. Mayer, '26, is practicing law in Lebanon and is city attorney. He is republican nominee for state representative from Linn county.

Mrs. Lurline Brown Chamberlin, '18, is visiting her parents at their country place near Lebanon this summer. Her home is in the Hawaiian Islands.

Lena G. Medler, a member of the class of 1931, is teaching school at Crowfoot, near Lebanon. Her brother, Malcolm, '29, blind musician, is organist of the First Presbyterian church of Portland.

Donna Gill, ex-'32, who teaches in the public schools at Albany, is spending part of the summer with her parents in Lebanon.

Lorayne Blackwell, '34, youngest of the graduates from Lebanon, has signed a contract to teach in Sodaville.

JACK BELLINGER, '33.

¶ Major Harvard C. Moore, '09, M.D. '13, instructor of military science at the Medical school in Portland, has been assigned to the San Francisco presidio. With him will be his wife, Mrs. Lucia Wilkins Moore, '11.

RAMBLING REPORTER

LEBANON

The Strawberry City

SEVERAL University of Oregon graduates and former students make their home in the little Willamette valley city of Lebanon, situated near the foot-hills of the Cascade mountains on the Santiam highway.

The city is known throughout the country for its "World's Largest Strawberry Shortcake," served each year at the Strawberry Fair.

One of the oldest and most faithful of the graduates is Dr. J. C. Booth, who graduated in the class of '98. During the past four years he has been joint senator from Lane and Linn counties in the state senate. He has served for many years as a doctor in the Lebanon community. In military life, he has the rank of major. He served in the Spanish-American and World wars.

Dr. Booth's two daughters both graduated from the University and his son attended one year. Mrs. Esther Booth Jones, '26, is living in Springfield, where her husband, Dr. Melville S. Jones, '29, is practicing his profession. They have one daughter, Alice Elizabeth. Margaret Booth, '26, is living in New York City. Joel Clarence Booth, Jr., ex-'33, graduated from Georgetown University this June and plans to enter the diplomatic corps.

Associated with Dr. Booth in the Booth-Irvine firm is Dr. Norman E. Irvine, who received his M.D. from the University in 1919. He is chairman of the State Board of Health.

Another member of the medical profession in Lebanon is Dr. Robert Bruce Miller, '14. He is also commanding officer of Hospital Company 167, Oregon National Guard.

Teaching during the coming year in Lebanon High School, which boasts a beautiful ten-acre campus reminiscent of the University's stately lawns and trees, will be eight graduates of the University, all of whom were re-elected from the past year.

Superintendent of Schools is Lester A. Wilcox, '24, who is entering his seventh year in that position in Lebanon. Mrs. Wilcox (Gertrude M. Braden) also graduated in 1924.

Arthur H. Pengra is principal of the high school. He graduated in 1917. Mrs. Pengra (Stella P. Mitchell) was a member of the class of 1916.

Claralee Cheadle, '24, has taught civics and history in Lebanon High School since her graduation from the University, excepting one year when she taught in Hawaii.

Kee Buchanan, who graduated in 1925, has been teaching in the Strawberry City since 1927. She teaches commerce and English and has directed a number of dramatic productions, recently starting the Lebanon puppeters.

Reed L. Clark, '30, is coach of Lebanon's athletic teams. Mrs. Clark (Estelle Gloria Johnson, '31) formerly taught music in the high school.

Margaret L. Cummings, '31, teaches French and English.

Karl S. Landstrom, who graduated in 1930 and received his M.A. in 1932, is teaching commerce.

RECAPITULATION

Gregory Enthusiastic

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article, appearing in the OREGONIAN under date of July 6, 1934, is herewith reprinted for alumni readers because of its interest to Oregon sport followers and because it is written by L. H. Gregory, sporting editor of the OREGONIAN, whose writings are widely read and authoritative.

It doesn't take so long to shoot from the bottom toward the top, once you get winning momentum with fighting spirit behind it. For instance, the way the University of Oregon leaped from a far-under-par general record in 1932-3 to pinnacle positions in almost every sport for 1933-4. Really astonishing, looking back, what the Webfoots did.

In 1932-3 they lost that early U. C. L. A. game in football, 12-7, in the last second of play, and it just seemed to take the heart out of everything. Before the season ended the football team did manage eventually to get together, so that the momentum period really dates from its 12-to-0 victory over Louisiana at Baton Rouge. Still, in basketball Oregon won only two games out of 16, to finish forlornly in the cellar; in baseball, showed almost no interest at all, and had no league to play in; and in track did fairly well, spurred by the prejudice against losing always inherent in the crafty Colonel Hayward.

A sad showing, taking it in all respects, very sad. Athletically, Oregon ranked as a "sick" school.

And then what? Why, in one way and another, the lads got to going. The stuff was there all the time, but just hadn't come out.

First, the football team got hot and rallied behind Prink Callison to demonstrate the ex-Medford high school winner just as resourceful a coach as any of the high-priced importees. The turning point of the whole Oregon athletic outlook was that 6-0 out-of-the-fire victory in the second half from Washington. The lads themselves never really knew what they could do until they went and did it on this great occasion. From and after that achievement, the purple tinge faded out and a glow of health replaced it.

Oregon did lose one football game, to be sure, the one to Southern California, but only that one. And when the season ended the Webfoots stood in a championship tie with Stanford, had defeated St. Mary's for the first time, and had national recognition.

One thing leads to another, and the rise in football was at once reflected in a flaming basketball spirit. A young and enthusiastic team, after early reverses, fought its way into second place at the finish by winning seven of its last eight games.

In baseball, with northern division competition re-established, Webfoot momentum continued. The nonchalant lineup of the preceding season pulled itself together, aided by some pulsing new blood, and came up with the championship—Oregon's first in collegiate baseball for eight seasons, Washington having taken the intervening seven pennants in a row.

In track the lads, coached by the good old colonel, buckled up their loins and proceeded to make second place in the northern division conference meet only 1 5-6 points below Washington State, the winner. Oregon in dual meets defeated Washington and Oregon State, and lost only to the Washington Staters.

The repercussions are still echoing in.

Bob Parke, tossing the javelin regularly for the first time in his life, not only took the conference championship, but followed a couple of weeks ago by winning the national collegiate championship with a new record that broke by four feet one of six years' standing, with his historic heave of 220 feet 11 $\frac{5}{8}$ inches.

In football, instead of having to beg for intersectional games, they come without the asking. Louisiana State, another rising college in athletics, enthusiastically asked for the transfer to Baton Rouge of its game originally slated for Portland, and is making great preparations there for a battling reception to the Webfoots next December.

Oregon will mean something nationally when the visitation is made this time. Two years ago it was considered just "one of those games."

Addenda

Swimming reinstated as a major sport came into the national limelight under the tutelage of Coach Mike Hoyman. Winning all its dual meets against Oregon State and Washington the Webfoot team was barely nosed out by the Huskies in the Northwest Conference meet. This same Husky team which Oregon had defeated previously went East to Columbus, Ohio, to cop third place in the National meet. Jim Reed, backstroke ace, Wally Hug, sprint star, and Oglesby, distance man, broke Pacific Coast and Word records during the year. The Medley team composed of these three cracked the Coast record in this event several times in practice.

Oregon's golf and tennis teams made excellent showings in spite of the handicap of lack of experienced players. The golf team broke even in six intercollegiate contests. It split two contests with Oregon State and lost twice to the champion Huskies from Seattle and won its other matches. The tennis squad registered victories in four out of seven contests. Broke even with O. S. C. and Linfield, lost one to Washington, and won two from Willamette University.

Bright Outlook

The outlook for next year is even brighter. Callison is the only coach to lose more than four men through graduation. The football squad will lose nine men, and this loss will be sorely felt. Reinhart loses two basketball regulars and one man from his first-string nine. Only three men finished their four years of track. With promising material coming up from freshman championship teams and from junior colleges and transfers, Oregon won't have to upset the dope so often in winning next year.

Frosh Sports

Winding up one of Oregon's best year's in freshman sports the Duckling baseball eleven won every one of its contests and gave the varsity a couple of hard tussles. Coach Kelley's team included Dick Bishop, considered one of the best catchers in the state outside of professional baseball, and Bob Wiltshire and Bud Brewer, well known pitchers in amateur state leagues. In addition to an A1 battery the frosh displayed a tight infield and strong hitting power.

Track, swimming, football, golf, and tennis all revealed first class material which will be welcome on the various varsity teams next year.

REPORTS

nothing new in theory, is the establishment of local alumni groups in all parts of the state. Pioneering work in this field is expensive, and to accomplish it, it will be necessary to call on the loyalty and service of those members of the association who have always been willing and anxious to be of service. With local groups established, we hope to be able to rely on these groups to take over a part of the work of interesting new members and enlisting their support.

I think that I can most easily explain my hopes along this line by describing the Alumni Association that I would like to see. I would like to see an alumni group meeting regularly once a month in every city and town in Oregon of over 1000 population. I would like to see these clubs organized so that membership, program, and repertorial chairmen were active in every locality. But even more important I would like to see every club adopt some definite objective each year. There are many small but highly important services that could be rendered the University by such organizations. May I suggest a few? The establishment of scholarships to be awarded to the high school students from the high schools in the localities of the alumni groups; the raising of funds for the presentation to the University of a portrait of some beloved professor or president; the furnishing of an alumni lounge on the campus; a yearly contribution to the student loan fund; the collection of books for the library; the donation of funds for research projects. In short there is no end of such service that could be made by this method.

Also, I hope that some day it will be possible to do away with alumni dues entirely and in their place substitute an annual drive for contributions to a fund to be known as "The Alumni Fund." From this fund would come, of course, the administrative expenses of the Association. But it would be my hope that a sufficient amount would be raised by this method that the Association would be enabled to make real contributions to scholarship and loan funds or other donations. Under such a plan I would like to see OLD OREGON mailed to every alumnus and alumna, or at least to all contributors. I think that the contributor to such a fund rather than the alumnus who pays dues will be more interested and active. Continual dunning for dues is psychologically wrong and tends to destroy rather than build interest. As soon as an assurance is given that such a plan is feasible, I pledge myself to see that it is put into effect.

I do not want to pretend that I look upon the alumni association as an organization whose use is solely that of increasing the material worth of the University. But I do believe that such tangible expression of fealty to alma mater is the best measuring rod of alumni interest in the University, and again conversely, the greatest builder of interest.

Lastly, I would like to mention again the local groups. I would like to see those groups truly representative of educational ideals. I would like to see them take an active interest in local educational problems, in civic affairs, in the placement of the highest-type of person in public office—in short I would like to see the alumni present a front to the state at large that would be truly representative of the ideals and aims of a great liberal arts institution. All of this need not be a dream. It is distinctly in the realm of possibility.

The greatest need of higher education and the University today is the justification of its work. Of the University of tomorrow will be expected three things. First: A research program that is continually delving into the vital issues of an ever-changing civilization; second, the establishment of the University as the center from which emanates the state's cultural, intellectual and civic life; and third, it must be a great liberal arts school for the education of the citizens of the state. The alumni can be of inestimable service in promoting these objectives. But in the final analysis the alumni must take their rightful place alongside of the University and be in themselves the sole and complete justification of the University.

ROBERT K. ALLEN,
Alumni Secretary.

U. of O. Federation

JUNE 9, 1934.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION:

As your representative on the board of directors of the University of Oregon Federation I would like at this time to make a brief report of the progress and accomplishments of that organization and its work in the interests of the University.

As you will recall The Federation was organized early in the fall of last year. It is composed of representatives of five University service organizations, namely: The Alumni Association, the Oregon Dads, the Oregon Mothers, the Associated Friends of the University and the Affiliated Living Groups, this organization devoting its interests to the dissemination of information concerning the University and the increasing of the enrollment on the Eugene campus.

I was named as the representative of the Alumni on the board of this Federation, and as such I have attempted, in its program of promoting University welfare, to at all times keep uppermost the ideals of the alumni and the interests of our Association.

This opportunity to work with representatives of the other organizations in the interests of the University and higher education has been a most happy and beneficial experience. The Federation, aside from its program and activities, has been of inestimable value in bringing together all groups which have as their purpose and ideal, the welfare of our alma mater. Through the Federation we, as the citizens of the state (alumni, friends, fathers, mothers and students) have, as never before, been able to present a united front to the state at large, in the legislative halls, at meetings of the state board of higher education, and wherever an expression of opinion in educational matter has been required or asked for. This voice has proved itself to be far more persuasive than did the separate and un-united voices of our organizations in the past. Rather than discrediting the prestige or influence of any of the member organizations, the Federation has served to enhance and make more influential the activities and wishes of each group.

It is difficult to assign definite accomplishments to the Federation. Its work in the subtleties of human contact, political and social, its part in movements representing even larger groups than the 60,000 persons represented indirectly by the Federation itself, and its cognizance of confidences placed in the members of the board, all contribute to the difficulty of making public statement as to accomplishments.

I think that I can best explain our work merely by asking you to review the progress that has been made in higher educational affairs during the past year, and assign some part of the credit for that progress to the amalgamated efforts of our organizations, both individually and collectively through the Federation. We are able to maintain closer contact with those persons directly in charge of educational affairs; we are able to assist and to some degree direct the student campaign for increased enrollment; we are able through the many opportunities afforded by our large membership to sound out and to some extent guide legislative opinion as to educational matters.

After almost a year of association with the Federation I can unqualifiedly recommend its work and worth. It is not a temporary organization, but designed to last through the years; to assist in arriving at satisfactory solutions during educational turmoil; to promote peace and harmony wherever possible; and to take the lead in progress and development once a firm educational foundation is again established.

Lastly, we point with pride to the high type of conduct maintained by the Federation. We feel we are in the van of those organizations whose members are convinced that real peace and harmony in higher education will only come with a tolerant understanding of the educational problems of the state as a whole. The University cannot prosper unless all educational institutions of the state prosper. Gain made at the unwarranted expense of another institution is not truly gain at all. We look to a day when the state will be united behind a broad educational program and when the citizens of the state will take greater pride and more active interest in their educational institutions, forgetting the jealousies and short-sightedness of the past.

To this ideal the Federation is dedicated. To this ideal the Federation seeks your cooperation and support. Through our alumni association we look to you for an expression of your approval and willingness to join in this important task that lies ahead.
