Two More

DEAR OLD OREGON:

Our faith in OLD OREGON received a severe jolt last month, when we found ourselves served to a two-page "hard liquor" advertisement. Sufficient time has elapsed for our first hot resentment to cool. However, we still find ourselves under the inner compulsion of registering as strong a protest as any of which we are capable.

The only moral justification which we can imagine for legalizing traffic in liquor is the claim (believed by some) that education rather than legislation is the way to overcome the evils of drinking, and that open sale would decrease consumption; e.g., President Roosevelt's hope that a cheap and ready supply of beer and wine would lessen the demand for hard liquors. But if, now, we lend ourselves and our publications to promoting sales and increasing consumption what possible moral justification have we? Absolutely none. It is indefensible.

We love OLD OREGON, and we do not want to have to cancel our subscription. But we love our boy, too; and we do not care to have distillers' propaganda (even though handsomely paid for) introduced into his mind through the medium of the one publication that represents to him his daddy's and mother's alma mater.

We all have a right to expect that OLD OREGON will be at least as circumspect in this regard as The Chicago Tribune (which nobody would accuse of a bias in favor of prohibition), and a half dozen other metropolitan dailies, not to mention the leading periodicals of the nation.

Yours for a clean OLD OREGON,

DEAR OLD OREGON:

The members of the Evergreen Women's Christian Temperance Union wish to protest against the liquor advertising which has appeared in recent numbers of the magazine. Such advertisements seem entirely out of place in a publication of this kind.

I have a personal feeling in the matter as I was for several terms enrolled in the Portland Extension Division of the University, and also attended a summer session.

Remote Home

DEAR OLD OREGON:

Thank you for your letter and the charming suggestion that someone remembers me. One doesn't expect it after this long. As to our life here being interesting, that depends. Certainly we often feel remote, and speak of going to Lewiston, 84 miles down the Snake, as Alaskans used to when going to the States: one is "going outside."

This boat trip requires from four to five hours going down; from one to two days coming back. There are no inns along the way, either, and you are the guest of the sheep or cattle people at whose landing the boat decides to spend the night.

From June to October the boat ties up, awaiting high water. Then to get outside you ride horseback to the nearest road, seven miles one way, about ten another. The seven-miler follows the face of the river and sometimes seems nothing but a scratch on the cliff. A hot scratch.

A matter of interest is the astonishing vitality of human life in these canyons. From age 3 to age 78, they ride the trails and peer into nature's bowels by way of the mine shaft with unabated vigor. My examples are our nearest neighbors. Further along they may begin younger and hold out longer.

I do admire the three-year-old. His legs barely make a start down his horse's sides, yet he sits his saddle around Suicide Point as if it were Main street. Suicide is spectacular and makes good talk; strong men have got off there and crawled. Still it is safer than some less showy hang-overs.

This is not newly settled country nor particularly "western." You find many a forgotten grave—it was too long a trip to "get them out" in the early days. We even have a grave stone here at Kirkwood. I felt rather sentimental about its austere location, on the bar, quiet above the rushing Snake, and the children and I put yellow roses on the grave on Decoration day. Then a visitor related how he had once seen the silent sleeper. He was sitting in our log bunkhouse sobering up on canned tomatoes. Very untidily.

We have no school and must soon import a teacher, someone who doesn't mind the remoteness.

May I leave the subject and speak of OLD OREGON. We respected your treatment of the recent delicacy especially; we don't in the least mind your copying TIME, except now and then when the struggle for conciseness becomes a little awkward. Criticisms of OLD OREGON bother me, regardless of how well they are meant, for I know the difficulties you encounter.

Grace Edgington Jordan, '16,
Kirkwood Bar,
Via Lewiston, Idaho.

This letter was written to OLD OREGON in response to a request from the editor asking Mrs. Jordan, a former alumni secretary, to write about herself for her many alumni-friends.—Editor.

DEAR OLD OREGON:

My how time does fly! Here I am missing some issues of that precious OLD OREGON. Please enter my subscription where you left off sending it to me. I believe the November issue was the last I received.

I made two short trips to Oregon last summer and one Sunday afternoon I could not resist the temptation of a visit to the campus, and how it has grown. We had a devastating dinner in the outdoor tea room over the mill race—and gliding canoes.

HON. FREDERICK STEIWER, '06

NOW serving his second term as United States senator from Oregon, having been re-elected last year by a decisive majority. Steiwer was admitted to the bar in 1908, after graduate study at the Oregon law school. He entered law practice in Pendleton, Oregon, where he served for ten years as deputy district attorney, four years as district attorney, and one year as state senator before first going to congress. He has a reputation for vigorous, efficient and impartial enforcement of the laws; is a citizen of the highest type, devoting a major portion of his time to public service. In congress he has been ever watchful of the interests of his native state and has shown a distinct and growing tendency toward truly progressive ideals of government. The University shares Fred Steiwer with Oregon State College, where he was a student before coming to the University. He received his B.A. degree from Oregon in 1906.

NEWS AND COMMENT

By the Editor

Kerr to Retire

Dr. William Jasper Kerr, Oregon's first chancellor of higher education, desires to be relieved of his duties as head of the state's higher educational system as soon as a successor can be obtained.

This announcement was made by Dr. Kerr near the close of the important April meeting of the state board of higher education, and came as a surprise to most persons connected with the state system. Although it has been known for some time that Chancellor Kerr was desirous of turning his heavy administrative duties over to a new man, few expected the announcement at this time. Dr. Kerr's statement composed the closing paragraph of a lengthy report on the progress of higher education under the unified board during the last five years, in which he traced the developments and changes during that period—a period of financial difficulties and major readjustments. He stated that now, however, he felt that conditions were such that the system was well enough organized to permit his retirement. He said he had accepted the post of chancellor only in the hope of getting the new system into smoothly functioning order. He said he felt that this had now been accomplished and in accord with his original intentions, wished to retire. Dr. Kerr is 70 years old.

Full Presidents

Previous to this announcement, Dr. Kerr had recommended that Dr. Peavy, acting president of the College, and Dr. Boyer, acting president of the University, be granted full title of "Presidents." He praised the two men saying that they had shown such admirable adaptability and cooperation that he felt the change should be made in deference to their merit and achievements.

Institutional and system budgets were adopted by the board. The University received an increase of 4.25% over last year, making the total for the coming year $688,850.94. Oregon State College was given an increase of .26% and the entire budget was set at $2,328,387.97, an increase of 1.95%.

Mr. Sammons, chairman of the

FIRST MOVE

AT its April meeting the state board reaffirmed its position that student activities are an essential part of the educational program of the institutions. On this basis the board voted to levy a compulsory fee for this purpose. Also, however, the board referred the whole matter of student activity fees to a joint committee composed of the curricula and finance committees for study and recommendation at a later date. The action regarding the fee was taken so that the fee could be included in the catalog announcements for the next year. Details of disbursement will be decided later. In making this move the board acted in good faith with the student body organizations and gives the institutions a firm foundation on which to base further study and adjustments in the fee situation.

Dick Neuberger, former Emerald editor and original proponent of the optional fee, appeared before the board and urged that the fee be divided into two classifications, athletic and activity, and that the athletic fee be made optional. He claimed that many students are not interested or are unable to participate in athletics and should not be required to pay the fee. He pleaded also for the hard pressed student who finds the fee payments a heavy burden in his quest for an education, and urged that these students be exempted from the extra-curricular fees.

board finance committee, in presenting the budget stated that increases were made possible by digging into reserve funds set aside last year when the present decrease in revenue was foreseen. He issued a warning, however, that some means of increasing income for the next biennium was going to be necessary unless important functions were to be discarded during the next biennium. The income of the schools has decreased approximately 42% since 1929, Mr. Sammons pointed out.

Other Changes

¶ The Department of Music, formerly under the School of Fine Arts, was reestablished as a School of Music with former Dean John J. Landsbury, renamed dean. The School of Fine Arts was designated, as before, the School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

¶ Lower division work on both campuses was placed under separate heads instead of under one central administrator. M. E. Smith, formerly dean and director of lower division work for both schools, will head the division on the College campus, and O. F. Stafford was named dean of the work on the University campus. Stafford has been chairman of science on the University campus.

¶ A request of the University faculty that the University library be detached from the centralized control of libraries was referred to the library committee of the board for study and recommendation.

Student Fee Situation

Alumni of both Oregon State college and the University have watched with much apprehension during the last few weeks developments in the so-called "student fee situation" which has arisen on both campuses as a result of the attorney-general's ruling that student body fees cannot be collected by the state and turned over to the A. S. U. O. for disbursement.

The immediate result of this ruling, coming as it did just a few days prior to the opening of spring term, was a reduction in A. S. U. O. income of approximately 40 per cent. (With a similar situation at Corvallis). The attorney-general's decision made it necessary to place fee payments on an optional basis, and since only half of the University student population saw fit to continue their membership in the A. S. U. O., that organization now finds itself facing an operating deficit for the term.

Ticklish Problem

The problem of what shall be done is a ticklish one. Shall the student body turn over the management of its affairs to the institution? This can be done, since the attorney-general also ruled that the state board could levy fees for all activities that are incidental to courses of instruction. But what activities are and which ones are not logically a part of the educational program of the institutions? Should the state board take over the highly specialized task of administering football, for instance? Would faculty control tend to discourage student initiative and self-government which has been outstandingly successful at Oregon? Should the faculty, whose principal interest should lie in the educational endeavors of the institution, turn its attention toward the administration of athletics, student publications, and the other varied forms of student activity as distinguished from curricular activity? Or should the faculty confine its interest in these activities merely as a kind of extra-curricular laboratory system, leaving the problems of administration in other hands? These questions and many more have arisen as faculty, student leaders, alumni and others interested have searched about for answers to the problems involved.

The whole situation has so many ramifications, that an attempt at a hurried solution could be very harmful. Because of the rather successful football season last fall, and because costs have been kept at a minimum without sacrificing the activity program, the Associated Students will be able to continue through the remainder of the year much as had been planned (although payment of certain obligations of the organization which it had been hoped could be retired sooner than had been expected will have to be postponed). Also, there are compensating factors about the whole situation. It has stimulated a healthy discussion of the activity program as sponsored by the A. S. U. O.; it has served to awaken students to the full benefits of the organization; it has and is serving as an opportunity for weighing different types of student administration, one against the other; and is bringing about a better understanding of the relationship of activities, and especially athletics, to the life and progress of higher education. Out of these compensating factors (and perhaps out of experience if first solutions are not satisfactory) may eventually grow a stronger and even more healthy program than heretofore.

DR. W. J. KERR

Who has announced his desire to retire from the chancellorship of higher education in Oregon. Dr. Kerr has spent 49 years of his life in educational work, 40 of these years as president of educational institutions. For 25 years he was president of Oregon State Agricultural College, and was closely associated with the growth of that institution from a small school to one of the largest institutions of its kind in the country. From that position he was called upon to shape up Oregon's new unified system, as its first chancellor. He has held that position since September 6, 1932. He now feels that he is entitled to "some respite, travel and study."

To Dr. Kerr OLD OREGON extends congratulations on his notable career as an educational administrator. He leaves active service with the state system finally prepared for progress and development. He has contributed much toward the successful solution of the many problems arising from Oregon's unique educational experiment. To him should go much credit for the success thus far attained. May the years ahead offer him the rest and opportunity for travel and study he now desires, and may he see the fruits of his pioneer endeavors in the new system flower and ripen into a truly great educational contribution and enterprise.

Hazardous Policy

One of the strongest arguments against institutional control of activities, and especially athletics and student publications, is the fact that many feel that the institution, devoted primarily to educational endeavors, should not be accountable for the policies, especially the athletic and student publication policies, of the institution. Collegiate athletics, while tied in name to the institutions, have in recent years become more the property of the students and alumni than the institutions themselves. It must be admitted that because of this certain practices have entered into the administration of athletics that have not been in harmony with the idealism of the educational world; but on the other hand, it must be admitted that athletics, and especially football, have served as an effective focal point for higher educational patronage. Institutions as such can not, however, hope to bring about the changes they would wish without untold sacrifice of such patronage—an item of grave importance to higher education especially in such uncertain years as the schools have been facing. Institutions might well bend their efforts toward directing this patronage-enthusiasm rather than ruthlessly turning away from its demands. Solution will not be found by a few scattered institutions who are willing to make the sacrifice. A general reaction in all colleges and a combined attempt to direct and encourage the "purification" of college athletics can be the only solution without too great sacrifice.

Caution Needed

Let Oregon, and the state board of higher education, not be too rash in its desire to reorganize the whole system. If a change is necessary to operate legally (and that must be decided by competent attorneys and perhaps the courts) or if a change is finally deemed advisable, then let Oregon move with caution after thorough study of the implications and probable results of any contemplated change.

And as the whole thing is being aired and studied let it be kept in mind that the system heretofore in effect at Oregon has worked successfully for 30 years; that during that 30 years, except for minor ups and downs, the program has been constantly developed, always with the educational and cultural values uppermost; and that Oregon has always been in the van of those institutions seeking the real and highest objectives for their sports and activity programs.

A discussion of these matters as they affect the University would not be complete without some mention of the man who has contributed most to the institution in this respect. That is Hugh E. Rosson, graduate manager. Rosson, himself a former faculty member, was drafted for the job because of his exceptional business and organizing abilities. Since taking over the office he has shown a keen appreciation of the educational values of the activity program as well, has assisted in weeding and evaluating the various activities, has been instrumental in materially cutting down a large operating deficit, and while injecting a certain amount of idealism into his policies, has won the esteem and respect of his contemporaries at other institutions, and has placed the A. S. U. O. in the forefront of student associations on the Pacific coast. Any attempted reorganization that did not provide for the continuation of Hugh Rosson as director and manager of activities would be of serious material and educational loss to Oregon.

HUGH E. ROSSON

Who was assigned the job of rehabilitating the A. S. U. O. several years ago and who is responsible for the fine progress and development of that organization since that time.

ROSEBURG, like Albany, covered last month by OLD OREGON'S "Rambling Reporter," can lay claim to a member of the state board of higher education, as well as a large number of alumni active in almost every phase of the community's civic, business and social life.

Charles A. Brand, orchardist and restaurant owner is Roseburg's representative on the state education board. He was re-appointed recently by the governor and then was elected vice-president of the body.

Following are some of the alumnicitizens of Roseburg, together with a note or two on occupations, family, interests, etc.:

* * *

Mrs. Florence Hurley Andraieff, '28. Her husband, Nick, is a clerk at Powell's furniture store.

Mrs. Gladys Taylor Burke, '23. Lives in West Roseburg.

Mrs. Olivia Risley Carnes, '09. Has a son, Howard, and daughter, Carol.

Helen Casey, '21. Left Roseburg this spring to take up work at the Pasadena Community Playhouse, where she had previously spent two years.

Fred F. Criteser, ex-'12. Lives in West Roseburg. Married.

Mrs. Claudia Broders Hartung, '25. Wife of Frederick E. Hartung, Swift company salesman. Have a son, Tommy, age 5, and a daughter, Elaine Suzanne, age 2.

Daphne Hughes, '31. Has forsaken her home town for welfare work in Chicago.

Mrs. Lora Hempy Larwood, ex-'26. One daughter, Betty, age 2.

Mrs. Genevieve G. McClintock, ex-'19. Has a daughter, Patricia, and son, Richard. Six months ago, the McClintocks adopted a five-year-old girl, Nancy.

Rosa B. Parrott, ex-'00. Taught here several years and later taught in Tennessee. Is confined to her home with poor health.

Floyd C. Ramp, '08. Farmer.

Eva Rice, ex-'23. Residing with her mother. Her father, Attorney M. F. Rice, passed away this winter.

Mrs. Dena Henslee Singleton, ex-'24. Wife of George L. Singleton. Has a son, Gordon, age 4.

Mrs. R. June Gray Talbot, '11. Married, and has one daughter.

Mrs. Moda Drain Whipple, ex-'12.

Wife of Attorney R. L. Whipple. Has two daughters, Lois Anne, senior in high school, and Betty Mae, of the junior high school.

Education of Roseburg youngsters is quite largely in the hands of Oregon grads:

William M. Campbell, M.A. '34, is superintendent of Roseburg's city schools. Has three children, William Jr., Elizabeth and McAfee.

Katie Maree Buchanan, '27. English and dramatics teacher at the senior high school, and very active in Roseburg dramatic work. This is her seventh year here.

Lova Belle Buchanan, '30. Fifth year as teacher in senior high. Popular in music circles.

Marjorie Frances Chester, '30. Teacher in junior high.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli S. Hall, ex-'31 (Marie L. Gilkeson, '26). He is principal of the Rose school. Mrs. Hall resigned her teaching position at the same school two years ago.

Eldress Judd, '30. Teacher in the senior high school.

Beatrice Tabke, '31. Teacher at junior high.

Mary Enid Veatch, '25. Instructor at junior high.

Nellie Catherine Westra, '28. Teacher at junior high.

A. Jean Whitney, ex-'33. Teacher at the Bungalow school not far from Roseburg. Lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Whitney.

James H. Bosard, ex-'24. Teacher in the Brockway school 10 miles southwest of here.

Roseburg's business district might almost be abandoned if the Oregon alums decided to hold an all-day picnic on the tree-shaded Umpqua river. Some of these cogs in the wheel of business are:

Harrie W. Booth, ex-'18. Cashier at Douglas National bank. Married eight years and has one daughter, Harriet Catherine, two years old. Resides in Laurelwood, Roseburg.

Carl T. Black, ex-'24. In the restaurant business as manager of Bell's Tavern. Not married.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Cannon, ex-'22 (Frances A. Wiles, '19). Clarence works in state highway office at the courthouse. They have a baby son, Theodore.

Violette Cole, '29. Part time employe in the Douglas county assessor's office.

Ethan A. Collier, '09. Head of state highway commission office at courthouse. Married and proud father of four daughters and one son.

Ned E. Dixon, ex-'21. In service station business. Married and has one son and one daughter.

Alfred J. Ellison, ex-'34. Union Oil service station employe. Married one and a half years.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Harris Ellsworth, '22 (Helen Dougherty, '22). Mr. Ellsworth is editor of the News-Review, Roseburg's daily. President of the Oregon State Editorial association.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Fisher, '13 (Ethel Tooze, ex-'15). Senator from Douglas county, and associated with his father in Fisher's department store. Mrs. Fisher is active in American Legion auxiliary and club work.

Mr. and Mrs. Will H. Gerretsen, Jr., '20 (Frances Holloway, ex-'24). Denn-Gerretsen and Company is the name of Will's firm. The Gerretsens have two sons, Gordon and Donald.

Robert Currin Gile, '32. Associated with father, R. L. Gile, in fruit packing business.

Walter S. Hamilton, M.D., '97. Serves on bench as Douglas county judge.

William W. Knight, LL.B. '32. Local attorney associated with Carl E. Wimberly. Candidate for the nomination to the state legislature on the Republican ticket.

Frank William Long, '31. With the Douglas Funeral Home. Unmarried. Owner of a shiny new Ford V-8.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Newton Orcutt, ex-'05 (Dora F. Page, ex-'02). He is practicing attorney. Mrs. Orcutt spends several weeks each year visiting her two daughters, Mrs. Vivian Fox at Marshfield, and Mrs. Dorothy Orcutt Fisher at Seattle.

Albert Micelli, ex-'26. Owns local ice plant. Married, and has a son, Bobbie, and daughter, Eleanor.

Donald W. Radabaugh, ex-'30. Manager of Hunt's Indian theater and the Rose theater. Married, and has one daughter, Nancy Carol, three years old.

Glenn C. Radabaugh, ex-'28. Managing editor of the Roseburg News-Review. Married. Mrs. Radabaugh teaches dramatic art.

Dexter Rice, LL.B., '97. Practicing lawyer. His daughter, Iris Rice, now Mrs. Donald Helliwell of Marshfield, formerly attended the University.

John Truman Runyan, '31. Associated with father in the contracting business. Resides with parents.

Mrs. Pearl Rayburn Schneider, ex-'32. Stenographer in the county agricultural agent's office.

Bernard Shaw, ex-'27. With father in publishing The Chieftain. Married Audrey Porter of this city a year ago.

Ralph R. Smith, ex-'23. With father in operating the Umpqua Valley Lumber company. Married and has a son and a daughter.

Dr. and Mrs. Caryl G. Van Valzah, ex-'22 (Anne Isabel Gorrie, '25). Practicing dentist. Live in Kohlhagen apartments. Have a daughter one year old.

Charles B. Wade, M.D. '14. Practicing doctor. Married. Has a daughter, Patricia, 3.

Elmer J. Wainscott, M.D. '07. Has daughter, Bernice, who is a senior at the University this year. His son, Harold, is a local druggist.

George J. Willett, ex-'24. Formerly practiced law. Makes home with his parents.

Mrs. Augusta J. Baldwin Darby, ex-'00. Works as part-time clerk at the Style Shop. Has a daughter, Mary Ellen, in high school, and a son, James, at Willamette university.

Clara O. Engebretsen, '30. Resigned as county health nurse in February to accept the position of superintendent of nurses at the state tuberculosis hospital at Salem.

PORTLAND

Gilbert Talks

That the University of Oregon has within it the essential elements of vitality and strength and it would rise above the handicaps imposed by the present situation in higher education in Oregon, was the theme of an address by Jim Gilbert, '03, before the Portland Alumni association on Thursday, April 5. The meeting was held in the Heathman hotel and attended by about 130 alumni and guests.

Preliminary to the address a number of prominent guests (some, candidates for office) were introduced by the program chairman, Roland Davis, '29.

Among the additions to the Portland group to receive recognition was Hugh Biggs, '27, former Dean of Men at the University. Mr. Biggs has recently moved from Ontario to Portland to accept appointment in the federal district attorney's office where he will be associated with Ed Hicks, '26, another graduate of the University and of the law school.

Facts Reviewed

Dean Gilbert reviewed the facts regarding the trend of enrollments in higher education in Oregon showing a decline of 28 per cent since 1931. The average decline for all states was 8.2 per cent. State universities of the country fell off 7.7 per cent while the University of Oregon declined 26 per cent. Figures showed that the largest decrease in any state was 19 per cent for North Dakota. This unenviable record of Oregon, the speaker showed, was not due to economic conditions alone since business activity in Oregon had declined less than the national average and markedly less than in Washington where University enrollment had actually increased.

The abnormal condition could be accounted for by factors associated with loss of prestige and of confidence in the institutions and in educational leadership in Oregon. The recent appointment of presidents as sponsors for the individual institutions may help to restore the high position in which the schools were held prior to 1932. Certain reckless and irresponsible statements made without foundation during the Zorn-Macpherson campaign, had persisted to the detriment of the University. The speaker took pains to explain and refute the "myth of the twenty-seventh place" occupied by Oregon among state universities which advocates of the school moving bill so frequently asserted during the campaign. "It seemed," said the speaker, to have originated in a set of figures showing that the University of Oregon took twenty-seventh place in the ratio of instructors to student body. If the same test be applied, the University of California is thirtieth from the top and the best of all state universities is little Delaware."

Faculty of Quality

Quality of faculty is the determining factor in creating a great institution and as the survey showed, the Eugene faculty in point of training, in the number of advanced degrees, rose far above the national average. The same is true of the number listed in "Who's Who in America" and Cattell's "Leaders in American Education."

Mr. Gilbert reviewed the achievements and the evidence of strength in the several colleges and schools of the University. The liberal arts college was rated among the first three per cent of American liberal arts colleges—more than two hundred in number. The School of Medicine is outstanding in research, teaching and clinical arrangements and has been recognized again and again by the great educational foundations. The law school has class A rating, high standing in research and publications and is known widely for its standard of teaching and the success of its graduates in bar examinations.

The art school has become a regional institution, its faculty and students winning honors and awards in national competition with the entire field. Along with Harvard the school has been recognized five times by the Carnegie Foundation as a center for the training of art teachers.

The School of Journalism, because of its combination of cultural and practical courses and its laboratory methods of training, has been frequently mentioned among the first five and not infrequently among the first three of the country.

The School of Education, built up under the able direction of Dr. H. D. Sheldon, has won national recognition for its researches and the training of school administrators. Out of 35 notable researches in the field of education turned out by instructors in the Pacific Northwest and listed by the U. S. office of Education, 25 were credited to the University of Oregon School of Education.

The School of Business Administration holds membership in the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business, a sure guarantee of quality and soundness of methods. Its instruction methods and its curriculum have been frequently commended by great graduate schools of business like Harvard and Stanford.

Offers Rejected

The speaker showed that salary cuts enforced by legislative act and the requirements of an unbalanced budget had reduced the scale of salaries at the University of Oregon to a lower level than that of any important state university with the exception of Washington. "Offers have come to our best men," the speaker continued, "but almost to a man they have preferred to stay. They make this decision, involving personal sacrifice, because they are attached to the University and realize that despite its temporary trials it has a promising outlook for the future. There is no dissension within the faculty but rather unanimity and solidarity. They are fighting to maintain unsullied the ideals of Oregon, to fortify still further its reputation and its achievement and extend more fully its services to the commonwealth of Oregon. In this battle for efficiency and a square deal in higher education the faculty, we believe, have the support of the organized alumni throughout the state."

MEDICAL

Lucas Elected

Medical savants holding University of Oregon degrees elected Dr. Leo Lucas, M.D. '23, Portland physician and surgeon as president at the closing session of their 21st annual conclave held March 13, 14 and 15.

The medical alumni named other officers as follows: Dr. Earl D. DuBois, '25, Portland, first vice-president; Dr. Albert J. Bowles, '23, Seattle, second vice-president; Dr. Charles W. Lemery, '27, Portland, third vice-president; Dr. W. E. Grieve, '26, Spokane, fourth vice-president; Dr. Arthur Jones, '26, Portland, treasurer; and Dr. Birchard A. Van Loan, '26, Portland, secretary. All were elected unanimously.

More than 200 of the medical school's 1100 alumni came from many sections of the Pacific Northwest to the Portland sessions. Specially honored was the last surviving member of the first class to be graduated from the school in 1888, Dr. James Hunter Wells, quarantine officer of the Portland health bureau; also Dr. S. E. Josephi, who helped organize the school in 1887 and served as its first dean.

Featured speaker was Dr. Leo Eloesser, San Francisco.

Anniversary

reunion celebration of the school's founding, held March 23. Among the nine teachers with 25 year records was Mrs. May Gilliland Gay, '33, extension division.

Staunch friend of students during their four formative high school years, Mr. Jenkins has seen some 7000 graduates leave his school equipped with the knowledge given them by himself and his faculty. Affectionately known as "Hoppy," the Portland principal has made education a hobby as well as a profession. He is responsible for developing activities in his school as a factor in character and personality development.

Direction rather than discipline is his rule in dealing with students. A prophet of the new leisure, Principal Jenkins has pointed his work toward the development of hobby enthusiasts as well as useful citizens.

Mr. Jenkins has watched his school grow from a staff of five teachers and 125 students to its present enrollment of more than 2400 students. He has observed much of Portland's development as a city as well, having spent his childhood there. He graduated from Yale in 1900, received his master of arts degree at the same institution, and won his bachelor of law degree from the University of Oregon law school in 1902. In 1929 the honorary LL.D. degree was conferred upon him by Oregon State college.

Etcher Returns

A travelogue of rare charm and beauty was enjoyed by University and Eugene folk through Eyler Brown's, '16, exhibit of some 65 etchings, ink and pencil sketches, aqua-tints and water colors at the University school of fine arts during the first week of April. Picturesque scenery, famed and unfamiliar, discovered in Sweden, Belgium, Germany, France and Italy, was sought out by the artist during a 20 months' period of study and travel in Europe, and interpreted with what critics have proclaimed as true insight, selectiveness, and delicacy of execution.

Eyler Brown, assistant professor of architecture, recently returned after going to Belgium in 1932 under a C. R. B. scholarship grant, and studying under Malcolm Osborne, of the Royal etcher of that country, and in London under Malcolm Osburne, of the Royal College of Art. He resumed his teaching this spring term. He holds a master in architecture degree at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Coaches Champions

No fluke is the impressive record of achievement of Coach John A. Warren, '28, whose baseball quintets from Astoria have rung up three state prep championships in the past six years, with only three losses in 24 tournament contests. Not in that period have the Fishermen ended the season below third place in the state.

Masterful tutoring gave "Honest John's" hoopsters top place in the 15th annual play-off at Willamette university, Salem, with their final win over the Klamath Falls Pelicans. Outstanding prep basketball coach in the state is the title Warren has been earning at the expense of his team's opponents, who in six years have marked up only 26 hard-earned wins as against 267 victories for the Astorians.

During the 1934 season his marksmen scored 1187 points and allowed their opponents less than 500, in 48 contests, all but four of them victories for the Astorians.

Code Attorney

Donald C. Beelar, '28, student body president in his senior year, has taken a prominent part in NRA code work in Washington. Beelar, who has been in Washington for some time in the department of justice and reconstruction finance corporation, aided in preparing the brief that won the court decision that ruled price fixing under the NRA constitutional. The case was the first real test of the national code authority.

Political Group

University of Oregon alumni are taking an active and interesting part in the political campaigns now being conducted all over the state. They are particularly active in Portland, in the newly organized Multnomah chapter of Oregon republicans where four of the five major offices are occupied by former Oregon students.

Lamar Tooze is president of the organization; Paul Hunt is secretary, Robert J. Cramer, treasurer, and Sam Wilderman is sergeant-at-arms. All are members of the Portland alumni group.

Ransom Meinke, Oregon State graduate, is vice-president.

On the various committees are numerous Oregon graduates. Bert Gooding is chairman of the nominating committee; I. V. Brown, chairman, and Paul Hunt and Sam Wilderman are on the attendance committee. Roland Davis is chairman of the program committee, which also includes Dave Husted.

Code Reference

Bernard C. Gavit, professor of law at the University in 1928-29, is the author of a new volume, "The Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution." The volume is particularly interesting, especially as a reference for many "code" matters now before the public.

Federal Appointee

Rapid advancement for Hugh L. Biggs, '27, of Ontario, was his recent appointment as assistant United States attorney for Oregon, under Carl Donough. Taking up his new work in Portland on April 2, Mr. Biggs has assumed many of the duties previously handled by J. W. McCulloch, chief deputy, who is at present working on construction litigation on the Bonneville project. For several years Mr. Biggs served as dean of men at the University. In 1932 he was elected district attorney for Malheur county, which position he has resigned. He is a son of the late Judge Dalton Biggs.

BASEBALL

Bright Outlook

Because it has some first-rate pitchers and more than the usual number of first-string men can hit, two essential factors for a winning baseball team, Oregon baseball fans look for one of the best teams in several seasons this year. Besides that, Coach Billy Reinhart finds himself with an unusually capable lot of both infielders and outfielders.

Hurlers who can be depended upon this year include Leonard Donin, two year veteran; Ossie Edwards, who will pitch for his third year; Ron Gemmell, veteran from last season, and Don McFadden, a transfer. In reserve are Earl Buchnum, from the frosh string last spring, and Jack Todd, another transfer.

Only one letterman is back to hold these hurlers behind the bat, Mickey Vail, but three other men are promising. Con Fury, sophomore, has been showing up well, and will undoubtedly make his letter in this position, while Homer Goulet and Marvin Stroble will also probably see quite a bit of action.

Reinhart's entire team in the outfield and infield, with but one exception, will be men drawn from the utility list last year, freshman squad or transfers. The letterman is Wesley Clausen, who shows considerable improvement over last year already.

In the infield Harry McCall has shown up well at first, Ray Koch is doing good work at second, Mark DeLauney at third, while Ivan Elliott, Bob Thuneman and Eddie Vail are ready to fill in when needed. In the outfield the regulars to date are Clausen, J. W. Hunt, and Maury Van Vliet, with Harry Butler, Andy Karstens and Earl Vessen ready in case of need.

For some reason or other, Oregon dropped its first pre-season game to Monmouth Normal, 4 to 3, but came back a couple of days later and won easily, 9 to 2.

Track

Colonel Bill Hayward, veteran track coach, is as pessimistic about Oregon's track prospects as ever, so followers are expecting him to come through with the same successful season as he has so many times in the past. Bill is somewhat handicapped by his lack of lettermen, but has several promising prospects who can be counted on for points.

In the sprints Hayward has four promising candidates. Bud Shoemake, a transfer from Sacramento Junior college, has been showing genuine speed, and looms as the potential winner of the Oregon squad. Others in the short distances include three fast sophomores: Doc Merrill, Walter Hopson, and Howie Patterson.

Quartermilers of promise are headed by Sherwood Burr, two-year letterman and captain this year. Bill Bowerman, Frank Michek and Marshall Wright are also out for this event, and are showing steady improvement.

In the half-mile event George Scharpf is an unusually promising sophomore. He won the relay for Oregon in the meet at Hill Military Academy early in the season, and is expected to come home with points in the half, his favorite event.

The distance men are headed by Bob Wagner, winner of the two-mile event in the Northwest meet last year. He will be paced by Bob Ludington, a good sophomore prospect, and Clayton Wentz, a consistent runner with two years of experience.

In the field events the outlook is not quite so promising. Only two likely prospects are out for the jumps. Fred Nowland, one-year letterman, leaps up around six feet in the high jump, and is trying hard to develop into a broad-jumper. Arne Lindgren, sophomore, can travel around 22 feet. Bob Parke, football quarterback, is keeping his arm in shape by hurling the javelin, and now can throw around 215 feet. Warren Demaris, northwest champ in this event, is not in school this year.

Nowland, when not jumping, is practicing on both high and low hurdles, and may do quite a bit of work in this department. Mason McCoy, two year letterman, will again be out in both events, while Arne Lindgren will take low hurdles.

In the weights Gardner Frye, letterman from last year's team, is hurling the discus 135 feet and is putting the shot 47 feet. Stanford Smith, sophomore, so far is rating next to Frye in the two events. McCoy plans to enter in the polevault, an event in which he does around 12 feet. The only other promising recruit for this spot is Ken Wood, a transfer from Oregon State College.

Track fans will see lots of action this year, with the relay meet against Oregon State, dual meet with Washington and the meet of the Northwest division of the conference all taking place in Eugene. Oregon will also meet Washington State at Pullman and Oregon State in Corvallis.

Swimming

If the Order of the "O" has anything to say about it, swimming will again be a major sport at the University of Oregon. The athletes point to the unusually successful season swimming has enjoyed this year, in spite of its minor standing, and to the fact that all over the country swimming is coming back as a popular public sport.

In the Northwest championship meet Oregon piled up 30 points to take second place, not a long way behind Washington, which won with 44. In the two dual meets, Oregon took one and Washington took one. This is a record that Oregon can well be proud of, since Washington won third place in the national meet recently at Columbus, Ohio.

Not only did the Oregon mermen turn in some impressive victories, but cracked their share of records as well. Jim Reed, backstroke, broke the Pacific Coast record in his event by three seconds, and the medley relay team, composed of Hug, Kerby and Reed tied the 300-yard distance Coast record. Hug gave the famed Jack Medica a real battle in the 50-yard sprint, and in the opinion of some of the judges, actually won this event.

Golf

To Oregon's list of capable, nationally famous coaches must now be added another name, that of Norman Thomas Stoddard, who this term will instruct both varsity and freshman divoteers. Stoddard, assistant graduate manager, hailed as one of the best golfers in the Eugene Country club, has a roster of promising varsity and first year men out daily, and although they failed to down Washington in the first meet, they have high hopes of outpointing Oregon State, Washington and others on their schedule.

Stoddard has but one veteran, Don Olsen, to fall back on, but has a number of sophomores who may develop for the next two years. These include John Boyd, Ed Labbe, Jack Mulder, and Ed Wheelock. Men from last Freshmen out, some of whom show real promise, include: John Allen, Blaine Ballah, Cornell Bilyeu, Lynn Latourette, Sid Milligan, Bob Martin and Ford Young. The frosh will have two meets with O.S.C. rooks.

Schedule Shift

Oregon gridsters will again get a nice long trip next fall, for the Oregon-Louisiana game has been shifted from Portland to Baton Rouge, to be played there December 15. With this shift the Webfoot schedule for next fall is virtually complete, as follows:

September 23—Gonzaga at Eugene.
September 30—U. C. L. A. at Portland.
October 13—Washington at Portland.
October 20—Idaho at Moscow.
October 27—Utah at Salt Lake.

December 15—L. S. U. at Baton Rouge.

Tennis

Coach Paul R. Washke admits he has a job on his hands if his varsity racqueteers are to take any of the matches from Oregon State or Washington, the only two conference teams to be met, and it might not be surprising if Linfield or Willamette gave the Oregon squad quite a tussle. However, looking ahead, several freshmen are showing up quite well, and by next year a formidable team may be put on the courts. In a recent meet the frosh took three out of ten matches from the varsity, and there were a number of close contests.

Varsity material so far includes: George Economus, La Barre, Fisher, Newton, Thompson, Winslow, Hutchinson, with the first two named showing up best so far. Freshmen include John Economus, who won his match from Newton; Kessler, who defeated Thompson; Tyson, Hikman, Chrones, Platt and Johnson.

Starr Honored

Paul Starr, sensational Oregon track man who ended a glorious career last spring, has been named on the honor roll of American track and field stars, according to word received by Bill Hayward from Major John J. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner. Starr, captain last year, won every race he entered in 1932 and 1933, and placed second to Ralph Metcalfe, great Negro star, in the 100-yard dash at the national intercollegiate meet in Chicago.

Betas on Top

With only three sports remaining on the intramural sports calendar, Beta Theta Pi still heads the list for the all year point-totals. However, only 22 points separate them from their nearest competitors, the Yeomen.

Gaining the 100 point award in the wrestling competition, the independent men have jumped from fourth place while passing up Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Phi Epsilon to settle into second position right behind the leaders.

The three remaining sports on the donut card are softball, golf, and tennis. These activities will open after the beginning of spring term.

The standings of the organizations entered in the competition are as follows:

Labor College

In England the labor college movement has grown steadily. Adults, after a day of toil, crowd into classrooms to hear lectures on economics, literature, sociology, and related subjects. Some of this work has reached the high standard of that done in honors courses in Oxford.

For many years Dr. C. V. Boyer, University's recently chosen president, has followed this movement, longed for a chance to promote this type of education in this state. A few days ago the opportunity came, when the University was invited, together with the universities of California and Washington, to join the state federations of labor in establishing the Workers' Education Division.

Eagerly recommending the plan, which has the approval of the Chancellor of higher education and the state board of higher education, Dr. Boyer says: "That a group of adult working men should request that courses in liberal arts be opened to them is one of the most hopeful signs for education that I have noticed in many years. It is in complete accord with my belief that education does not end with graduation, but is continuous through life. At the present time, when the world is undergoing such a rapid change in respect to the status of the individual and the social group to which he belongs, I feel it is more than ever imperative that adults should expand their capacities for appreciation, deepen their understanding and widen their horizon."

Classes for Oregon will be held first during April and May, in Portland, as part of the FERA project, and, upon the basis of results observed during this experimental period, a permanent program to take effect for the school year starting next fall will be determined. The work will be expanded to other cities as the demand arises on the part of the workers.

The type of courses asked for by the workers includes literature, arts and social sciences. Courses offered will be strictly of college and university level, modelled somewhat along the lines of those given in labor colleges in England. Universities in each state will supply instructors. In Oregon the work will be administered by the extension division, in close cooperation with a committee of nine members appointed by the Oregon Federation of Labor and the University.

John L. Kerchen, for the past 12 years director of worker's education for the University of California, will become regional director of the project for all three states. He will also be a member of the committee of nine. Other members of the committee will be Ben T. Osborne, executive secretary of the Oregon federation; William Cooper, Vern Haybarker and Miss May Darling, all of Portland; Dr. George Rebec, Dr. James H. Gilbert and Dr. Rudolph H. Ernst, professors at the University, and Alfred Powers, dean and director of the general extension division.

Conference Success

Most successful Commonwealth Conference ever held, was the opinion of hundreds of Oregon citizens who attended this annual event on the campus of the University March 19 to 24. Groups meeting during the week included: League of Oregon Cities, Oregon Roadside Council, City and Regional Planning representatives, city and county health officers.

Highlights of the session:

Oregon Civic Council, an organization that will have for its purpose the coordinating of all regional, county and city planning groups, formed by planning delegates, who chose Dr. P. A. Parsons, head of University's department of sociology, chairman.

All-state organization plan worked out by Oregon Roadside Council, which will include a chairman in each county who will coordinate work of service clubs, boy scouts, etc., to the Prominent citizens who led discussions, delivered addresses: Marshall N. Dana, chairman of the Pacific Northwest regional planning commission; Edward W. Miller, manager of the Oregon Coast Highway association; Frank Bane, director of the American Public Welfare association; C. A. McClure, president of the Pacific Northwest Association of Planning Commissions.

No Bouncing Notes

(See Front Cover Cut)

Not so long ago persons in attendance at concerts or other events in McArthur Court some times heard three sounds at once, as notes or voices bounced around in the spacious auditorium, or they heard practically nothing at all, depending upon where they were seated. Sounds went up into the high ceiling and were lost. Some would bounce from wall to wall for as long as 9 seconds.

Now, however, sounds emanating from a scientifically constructed stage carry neatly and quickly to any part of the building, and since sound dies out in less than 2 seconds, doesn't "meet itself coming back" and cause distortion and annoyance for the audience. This has been made possible by a CWA project, under which some 39,000 feet of sound-absorbing fir-text material has been applied to walls and ceiling.

The acoustical treatment project is one of the largest ever attempted in the Northwest says F. R. Woodbury, acoustical engineer of Portland, who prescribed the remedy. Two huge construction towers, 73 feet in height, were erected within the court so that workmen could apply the material on the high ceiling. The work was done by 30 skilled carpenters.

Off Four Per Cent

Enrollment at the University is crawling up to the 2,000 mark, with 1964 now on the campus. This is a decrease of four per cent over spring term a year ago, and a less than usual decrease over last term. CWA jobs for approximately 200 students have helped to keep enrollment up this term, officials state.

Education Meet

If the "new deal" is to succeed, or if the United States is to have any other form of peaceful "new deal," it will have to come about through the cooperation of educators, business and professional men and all other citizens. The time has passed, leaders believe, when professors can sit back and propound theories, and when business men can progress on the basis of past experience and expedient measures only.

With this thought in mind Dr. C. V. Boyer, acting president of the University, has called a conference on higher education, to be held on the campus May 18 and 19, to which will be invited not only educators, but business, industrial and professional leaders as well. Three main lines of thought will be taken up:

1. Exposition and discussion of views from outside the educational field on current social movements.

2. Significance for education, and particularly for higher education, of social changes as presented by men selected from educational and other fields.

3. Thorough study and evaluation of efforts now being made in colleges and universities to meet the needs of the present.

Invited to the conference: Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie corporation; Dr. George F. Zook, commissioner of education; Dr. John L. Kerchen, director of workers education, University of California; Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of federal relief administration; representatives of colleges and universities of Northwest and Pacific Coast.

Lucinda Cox Brown

"Through our student chapters we hope to work for the betterment of education," declared Mrs. Russell William Magna, of Holyoke, Mass., national head of the Daughters of the American Revolution, as she and other prominent officials of the organization formally installed a student chapter on the campus of the University of Oregon March 28. The new group will be known as the Lucinda Cox Brown chapter, named in honor of the mother of Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University. Mrs. Brown was a pioneer who came to Oregon by covered wagon, and it was in memory of her that Mr. Barker presented the University with the statue of the Oregon Pioneer Mother, a work of art symbolizing all pioneer mothers.

More than 250 were present for the installation ceremonies, and heard Mr. Barker given an inspiring account of early pioneer days. Participating in the event were: Mrs. John Y. Richardson, Portland, state regent; Miss Elise Oehler, organizing regent for the new group; Miss Ethel May Handy, regent of Multnomah chapter; Mrs. Mark Weatherford, Albany, newly elected state regent; Mrs. Isaac Lee Patterson, Portland, past national vice-president general; Mrs. S. E. Stevens, regent of Oregon Lewis and Clark chapter, Eugene.

Women's Officials

Next year's officers of the Associated Women Students, elected recently, are: Catherine Coleman, Eugene, president; Virginia Howard, Portland, vice-president; Reva Hems, Portland, secretary; Ann-Reed Burns, Portland, treasurer; Elaine Comish, Eugene, sergeant-at-arms; Margery Kissling, Garibaldi, reporter.

Loan Fund

The senior class this year will take approximately $500 of its funds on hand at the end of the year and set it aside as a student loan fund, to be made available to future seniors who find need of cash with which to go on to commencement. The fund will be administered by the regular student loan fund officials of the University.

¶ Rapid progress on the Oregonian, student yearbook, is reported by its editor, Madeleine Gilbert. The volume will be dedicated to Mrs. Murray Warner, donor and director of the famed Murray Warner collection of Oriental art. Notable feature of the book will be illustrations of priceless art objects in the museum.

FACULTY

Symposium Debate

A brand new idea that has aroused the interest of the whole state citizenry is that called "symposium" style of debate, originated at Oregon for students in forensics. Casting aside the old "affirmative" and "negative" idea, and the idea of competition between schools, University groups now hunt up facts and figures, form their own opinions, and before groups of citizens at grange, forum, club and church meetings, speak out exactly as they believe. Already the students have appeared in various parts of the state, have been enthusiastically received. Topics to date have centered on tax distribution, sales tax and school crisis. John L. Casteel and W. A. Dahlberg, of speech division, have charge of this highly successful student activity.

Faculty

R. C. Clark, head of the history department, has been named to the editorial board of the Frontier and Midland, a quarterly magazine published at the University of Montana. Professor Clark will help to prepare the history section of the publication.

¶ After a year as instructor in law on the University campus, Paul E. Raymond is resigning to return to John B. Stetson university in Florida, where he will become a professor. The work of the young instructor has been outstanding during the year, Dean Wayne L. Morse says, and deep regrets are expressed that Mr. Raymond made the decision to move.

¶ Dr. Samuel Haig Jameson, professor of sociology, has just published a book, "Status and Social Welfare Organizations." Volume is a part of Dr. Jameson's doctorate thesis. Book is printed by U. S. C. Press.

¶ A daughter, Jo Ann, was born to George H. Godfrey, '29, director of public relations, and Mrs. Godfrey (Augusta DeWitt, '25) on March 29. Godfrey is also campus correspondent for the Oregon Journal and numerous national publications.
