DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS

STONE-THROWING ROMEOES

The engineers of the General Electric Company have been asked to solve some unusual problems, but never before have they had to work against Cupid. This is how it came about: Some of the swains who did their courting in parked cars along certain lighted roads in New England found that the lamps crimped their style. With simple but destructive logic they decided to extinguish the lamps with stones. Their aim was so good that repairmen of the utility which serviced the lights could hardly keep up with their depredations. Finally, G-E illuminating engineers were called in to design a fixture to foil the stone-throwing Romeos. These engineers produced a cast-aluminum guard, which looks very much like a baseball catcher's mask. It protects the lamp, and at the same time helps to concentrate light on the roadway.

HURRY! HURRY!

A flood had crippled three important electric motors in the refinery of a large oil company on the island of Aruba, 50 miles north of the coast of Venezuela. The plant had to be shut down until new coils could be installed. Losses caused by the shut-down ran into thousands of dollars a day. An order for the coils and word of the refinery's predicament reached General Electric in Schenectady, N. Y., on a Sunday morning. Work began immediately, and by dint of night shifts and a great concentration of efforts, the two-and-one-half-week job was completed in three days. The 808-pound shipment of coils, conveniently packed in small cartons, was flown in a chartered plane from Schenectady to the Newark airport, where it was transferred to an Eastern Air Lines plane bound for Miami. On Wednesday morning the cartons were transferred to a Pan-American Airways ship at Miami for the hop across the Caribbean to Kingston, Jamaica. From there, they were flown directly to Aruba in a specially chartered plane. They arrived Saturday morning, just six days after the order had been received by General Electric.

J. A. H. Torrey, Union College, '11, and G. H. Magner, Acadia College, Nova Scotia, '09, of the International General Electric Company, Inc., made the arrangements for filling the order.

FAT SPARKS

The artificial lightning boys have beaten natural lightning in one regard, at any rate. Engineers in the General Electric high-voltage laboratory have produced discharges of a quarter of a million amperes, which is greater than the current of any direct lightning stroke yet recorded. This current is discharged at a pressure of 150,000 volts.

Just as natural lightning, with amperage almost as great, destroys that which it strikes, so does the laboratory discharge; and just as natural lightning is accompanied by thunder, the laboratory bolts have their ear-splitting crashes. A copper wire a tenth of an inch in diameter is completely vaporized. A similar piece of iron wire is "exploded," the remaining ends continuing white hot for several seconds. A section of reinforced concrete is broken into bits. The handle of a silver-plated ice cream spoon vanishes with a shower of sparks, leaving behind only the bowl discolored by the heat.

These engineers were the first to produce 10,000,000-volt artificial lightning discharges, and they are continuing their studies through these high-current discharges, in order to find better means of protecting electric distribution systems. K. B. McEachron, Ohio Northern, '13, Purdue, '20, M.S., is director of the laboratory, and associated with him in these tests are: W. L. Lloyd, Rennselaer Polytechnic Institute, '18; J. L. Thomason, U. of Idaho, '29; G. D. Harding, U. of Arizona, '29; and J. R. Sutherland, Yale, '29.

NEWS AND COMMENT

By the Editor

Hurdle Marathon

Progress in higher education in Oregon for the past several years has been nothing short of a "hurdle marathon." No sooner is one obstacle successfully passed than another always seems to loom on the horizon. Perhaps this situation is not uncommon to many forms of endeavor these days, but it does seem as though Oregon higher education has had more than its share of difficulties.

First came reorganization, then came the Zorn-Macpherson bill, then the tax limitation bill, and now looming on the horizon is a serious situation in regard to finances for the coming biennium.

This fact was made public by Board President Willard L. Marks in a letter to Governor Meier setting forth the activities of the state system for the past two years, following a meeting of the board at which the matter of finances was discussed in preparation of the budget for the biennium 1935-36.

41% Reduction

No immediate return to the level of income prevailing before the unification of the schools is contemplated by the board, according to President Marks. However, higher education has absorbed a reduction of 41.2 per cent from the income for the four years prior to unification. Budgets for the next two years are being prepared on the assumption that the full income allotted higher education from the millage laws will be available.

Five hundred and eight thousand dollars in millage funds were diverted from the schools by the last legislature. The schools were able to continue without too serious impairment of services only by the fact that there were some reserve funds which could be drawn on. Those funds are now gone, and a restoration of the full millage income is imperative, or else serious curtailments will necessarily result.

Certainly higher education has absorbed more than its share in curtailing public expenditures. The wisdom of the board (as the protector as well as administrator of higher education) in going to the legislature and seeking a return of its legitimate allocation of millage funds is in line with the public duty of that body. The state board was originally set up to eliminate the separate demands on the legislature by the state higher educational institutions at each session. However, it was never contemplated that the unified board would merely administer higher education. Its duty lies likewise in making known the needs of higher education and in doing what it can to fulfill these needs. With this conception of higher education, Oregon can look for some improvement in the fiscal set-up of its schools of higher learning.

There are also many other obstacles in the pathway of real progress in higher education. But as the conception of the unified system becomes more clearly outlined (and as the elimination of certain prejudices and personal factors takes place) progress is bound to become accelerated.

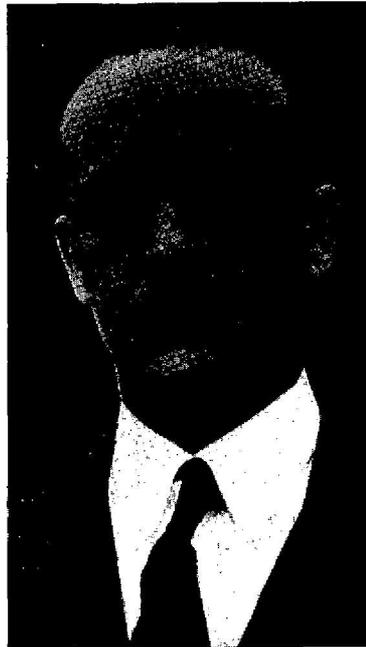

President Marks states in his communication to the governor, that "it is the board's conviction that the fundamental allocation of functions are sound, educationally and economically, and should therefore be maintained." This statement would seem to indicate that the board contemplates few changes at present, and prefers to give the present set-up a fair trial before experimenting further. In a system so radically new and untried as the so-called "Oregon system" it cannot be expected that the heights of educational efficiency in Oregon's relatively untried and peculiar system have been already reached. And of course time and educational conceptions will necessitate revision occasionally.

Game Returned

Following the Oregon-Oregon State game, held in Portland this year for the second time, came the announcement from the graduate managers of the respective schools that this game was to be returned to Eugene and Corvallis. The 1935 contest between the two schools will be played in Eugene and in 1936 in Corvallis.

Taken to Portland again this year in the hope of making up revenue lost from the enforced optional fee, the game netted little more than if it had been played on home ground. Other factors however, entered into the decision to bring the game "back home."

NEW PRESIDENT
Merle R. Chessman, '09, editor of the Astorian-Budget, who was unanimously chosen president of the Alumni Association for the year 1935 at the recent Homecoming meeting.

Parents in many cases complained of having the students taken away from the campus so often during a single term and turned loose in Portland, where adequate supervision of their activities was impossible. Also, there was a growing feeling that to have a "big game" on home grounds is one of the best ways of bringing alumni and friends to the campus.

The latter reason is more important than it may seem at first glance. The welfare of the institutions is dependent to a great extent on the good will of the general public, and this good will is in turn dependent upon the knowledge and impressions that the general public holds in regard to the state institutions. Football, more than any other activity, can bring large numbers of persons to the respective campuses, and thus indirectly inform the public of the activities and services of the institutions.

The decision to bring the game back will also mean much to the success of Homecoming activities, because the rule seems to hold that the larger the attendance the more successful the Homecoming. It was a wise decision, and will in the end reap profits to the institutions much greater than the dollars and cents profits that might result from holding the game annually in Portland.

Dr. Chapman Dies

Dr. Charles Hiram Chapman, second president of the University of Oregon, died in Cornwall, Connecticut, on October 20, according to word recently received on the campus.

Dr. Chapman was president of the University from 1893 to 1899. He came to the University from the Wisconsin State Normal School where he had served as an instructor in matheatics. He held a Ph.D. degree from Johns Hopkins university.

The short stay of Dr. Chapman on the Oregon campus was marked by rapid development of the scientific divisions of the institution and the bringing of several new professors to the campus. His activities in bringing the University closer to the organic school system of the state was perhaps his greatest contribution. Leaving the campus he later became an editorial writer on the Portland Journal and Oregonian. Later he became a staff writer for the Nation for several years.

Dr. Chapman's death and the death of Dr. Frank Strong a few months ago, robs the University of two distinguished ex-presidents. Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall is now the only living ex-president of the University.

Correction

OLD OREGON wishes to correct an item appearing in its last issue, in which it credited Dr. D. V. Poling, field man for the state board of higher education, with being an alumnus of Oregon State College. We are informed that Dr. Poling is not an alumnus of O.S.C. and trust that the faulty impression will thus be corrected.

NEW YORK ALUMNI CELEBRATE FIRST ANNUAL FOUNDERS' DAY

When Oregon alumni in all parts of the country gathered in their home localities on October 11, one of the larger groups was that of the alumni of New York. Though the banquet was the most distant from the campus, it was also one of the most enthusiastic and was engineered by John MacGregor, '23, and Allen Eaton, '02.

A L U M N I

FOUNDERS' DAY

Country-wide

On the evening of October 11 there gathered in Portland, Oregon, nearly 500 alumni of the University of Oregon. In New York City 64 alumni met together; in Seattle, in Marshfield, in Baker, in Astoria, and in many other localities, large and small, alumni joined to celebrate the 58th anniversary of the opening of the University and to honor the founders of their alma mater.

The event was not, however, just "another gathering." Alumni were serious in their desire to discover whether the ideals of the founders of the University were being properly preserved and furthered; whether definite progress was being made in educational endeavors; whether standards were being maintained and strengthened.

Because in Portland is to be found the largest concentration of alumni, the banquet there, aside from being the largest staged, also assumed the proportions of being the center from which the activities of the entire country-wide event emanated.

Morse Speaks

Principal speaker at the Portland gathering was Dean Wayne L. Morse of the Oregon law school, who took as the basis for his talk the threatening encroachments of censorship of classroom freedom. On this subject he said in part:

"We must continue to keep our University a democratic stronghold wherein, unhampered by fear and insecurity, scholars can bring their best talents to the solution of the perplexing problems of the day; where students, in an environment of unemotional fact finding and theory testing, may develop critical analytical attitudes, strong qualities of leadership and a consecration to principles free from dogma, prejudice, and partisan bias."

Dean Morse further stated that if the University is to retain its name of a "university" in fact as well as in name, the teaching of science must be returned to the curriculum of the institution. He cited the fact that the University has lost prestige among educators and other educational institutions by the fact that it no longer has major work in science. Science could be established again on the campus with little if any additional expense, he said, and without taking it away from any other institution in Oregon.

President C. V. Boyer, who was also on the program, declared that it was peculiarly suitable that the alumni should come together to celebrate Founders' Day at a time when democracy which founded public education is threatened, and when higher education, upon which democracy depends, is also threatened by the breakdown of an economic system contemporaneous with the establishment of democracy. Dr. Boyer stated that the faults of character and the failure of leaders in the past to assume responsibility can and must be overcome by the universities. Democracy, he said, depends upon the soundness of the higher education which it offers its youth, and in order to obtain that soundness, standards must be high. "If we issue diplomas, let them be the symbol of mastery," he stated.

Professor E. H. McAlister, who graduated from the University in 1890 and who has attained a national reputation in his field of mathematics and engineering, was awarded a scroll by the Portland alumni group as the No. 1 alumnus for 1934. The award will be made each year.

First Student

Of much interest to the alumni was the presentation of W. J. (Billy) Scott of Creswell, who was the first student ever to register in the University. He holds the first receipt for tuition paid the University. He is the grandson of an early pioneer and Indian fighter and the son of W. J. J. Scott, a member of the first board of regents of the University.

Other speakers on the program included: Ralph Cake, president of the Oregon Alumni Association; W. Lair Thompson, president of the Oregon Dads; Mrs. A. M. Dibble, president of the Oregon Mothers; Earle Wellington, president of the University of Oregon Federation; Bert S. Gooding, president of the Portland Alumni Association; and Hugh Rosson, graduate manager of the A.S.U.O.

A portion of the program was broadcast over radio station KEX and several of the alumni meetings in other parts of the state included the broadcast as part of their local programs.

NEW YORK

Many Attend

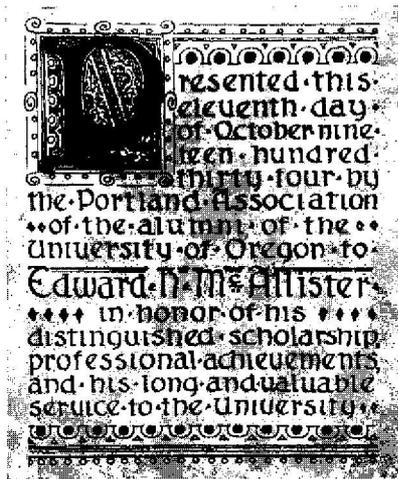

One of the most enthusiastic of the Founders' Day banquets was that held in New York City at which nearly four score of Oregon's graduates now living in or near the nation's metropolis, were present. The banquet was held at the Town Hall club, with Allen Eaton, '02, presiding.

Particularly appropriate to the occasion was the presence of three descendants of Ben Dorris, one of the founders of the University. They were Nancy Dorris, '10, and Betty and Martha Eaton.

The highlight of the banquet was the address of Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation and son of Henry Villard, whose interest in the University of Oregon meant so much in the early development. Mr. Villard reviewed his father's life and his constant interest in education. "I've inherited from him a profound feeling of affection for the University of Oregon," said Mr. Villard. He mentioned with regret the political control of state educational institutions in America and regards it as a fatal blunder, along with the refusal to allow the teacher to have self government or at least faculty representation on the board of trustees. Faculties should be untrammelled and uncontrolled to study problems, he contends. He believes also that the R. O. T. C. has no place in a university, particularly when, through the depression, colleges have been starved for necessary funds to carry on. In conclusion he said: "I assure you that as long as I live, nothing will happen at the University of Oregon which will not concern me."

Older Alums Present

A feature that added immeasurably to the success of the New York gathering was the fact that so many of the older alumni were present, according to John MacGregor, who was largely responsible for the large turn-out and the fine program. Among such alumni was Virgil V. Johnson, '96, son of the first president of the University after whom Johnson hall is named, who is director of one of the finest charitable institutions in New York. Also, there was in attendance, John C. Higgins, '97, an outstanding lawyer; Allen Eaton of the Russell Sage Foundation; and Moses D. Mossesohn, '05, formerly in charge of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and always a staunch Oregonian.

BANQUET NOTES

Marshfield

Fifty alumni gathered at the Chandler Hotel in Marshfield to hear Bas Williams, ex-'19, and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles A. Howard, '23, who happened to be in Marshfield. Other speakers were Mayor Peacock of Marshfield; Chet Huggins, '16, former Oregon track star; Joe McKeown, '29, former student body president; and Mrs. Horsefall. A quartet sang Oregon songs. The program from Portland was well received. No new officers were elected, it being decided to maintain for the present the organizing group of the banquet as officers. Elton A. Schroeder, '27, of Myrtle Point was chairman.

La Grande

Unable to tune in on the Portland program, approximately 50 alumni of La Grande and Union and Wallowa counties decided to do some broadcasting themselves, and Oregon songs reverberated throughout the corridors of La Grande Hotel, according to Ray Bolger, banquet chairman. Fred Kiddle was principal speaker, Ray Williams toastmaster. It was voted to organize a Wallowa and Union county alumni association and to join the Eastern Oregon association. Officers elected: Merlin Batley, '16, president; Asa Eggleston, ex-'22, Enterprise, vice-president; and Dorothy Kirby, '27, secretary.

Albany

Sixty-five alumni, ex-students and friends of the University attended the Founders' Day banquet held in Albany. Rex Putnam, '15, superintendent of schools, was in charge of the event, and reported an enthusiastic gathering, with lots of talk and many Oregon songs.

Burns

Twelve alumni and five guests gathered at the Hotel Welcome in almost isolated Burns. Douglas Mullarky, ex-'20, presided. After the singing of Oregon songs, short informal talks were given by Merrill Hagan, ex-'29, and William M. Bennett, '27. Eleanor Welcome, ex-'31, read a short paper on the history of the University. Officers elected were: Douglas Mullarky, president; William Haggerty, vice-president; and Eleanor Welcome, treasurer.

Lakeview

Lakeview alumni, about 20 strong, gathered at the Lakeview Hotel for an informal "pow-wow" and had so much fun that it was unanimously vowed that next year the event would be three times as large. No officers were elected. Judge Arthur D. Hay, '11, presented a short history of the University, and Forrest Cooper, '27, and Mrs. Ernest Fetsch, '22, led a session of singing.

Pendleton

Under the organizing genius of Jim Raley, Jr., 77 alumni of Umatilla and Morrow counties gathered at the Pendleton Hotel for their first Founders' Day banquet. Films of Oregon football games were shown and Oregon songs were sung. The group voted to join the new Eastern Oregon Alumni Association. Officers of the Umatilla and Morrow county group are: Judge B. B. Richards, '98, president; Mrs. James Johns, ex-'12, vice-president; and Bert Jerard, '15, secretary-treasurer.

Baker

The third of the Eastern Oregon groups to meet and join the Eastern Oregon Alumni Association met at Baker, with James Donald, '15, acting as organizer. Eighteen alumni attended the banquet held at the Baker Hotel. After a business session, the group gathered around the radio on the mezzanine and listened to the Portland broadcast. James Donald was elected president and Mrs. John Palmer, ex-'24, secretary-treasurer. Those present were:

John R. Palmer, ex-'23; Lavelle Healy Palmer, ex-'24; A. F. Kerr, '09; James Oliver Gyllenberg, ex-'20; S. A. Ingram, ex-'34; Bernice Phillips Staggs, ex-'17; I. D. Staggs, ex-'14; Roger Biswell, '06; Joan Patterson, '31; Grace Urray Evans, '09; Susan W. Moore, '84; Belle Gray Dodson, ex-'84; Paul E. Tracy, '27; Henry McKinney, '07; Florence Cleveland Donald, '13; James T. Donald, '15; E. W. Slocum, '27; George F. Stewart, ex-'25.

Klamath Falls

Thirty-nine alumni of Klamath Falls met at the Pelican Grill with Andrew M. Collier, '13, presiding. The dinner meeting had been arranged by LeLaine West Gardinier, '23. A committee headed by Mrs. Margaret Gierhart Pigney, '31, was responsible for the fine turnout. Half a dozen short talks were given, including reminiscences of other days at Eugene, and football impressions. Oregon songs were sung, with John Houston as leader. An executive committee was elected: Mrs. LeLaine West Gardinier, '23; Wanda Brown Shaw, '21; Margaret Gierhart Pigney, '31; John Houston, '21; and Arthur W. Larsen, ex-'29. Those present:

Andrew M. Collier, '13; H. C. Merryman, '09; Ruby Fenwick Wisecarver, ex-'24; Arthur W. Larsen, ex-'29; Pete Motschenbacher, ex-'28; Josephine Lindley Mott, ex-'26; Charles Ivan Snyder, '26; Malcolm Epley, '29; Ruth Newton, '28; Caroline Tifton Fowler, '25; Dr. E. Cecil Adams, '23; Jane Garcelon, ex-'32; John Houston, '21; Madge Calkins Hampton, '23; Dorothy Eberhard, '31; Blanche O'Neill Houston, ex-'35; Helen Abbey Larsen, ex-'30; Mercedes Boyd, '29; Phyllis Hartzog, '30; Erma Clifford McCulloch, ex-'12; Margaret Gierhart Pigney, '31; Lois Pixley Serruya, ex-'23; George A. Sprague, ex-'33; Jean Bailey Moore, ex-'24; Kenneth A. Moore, ex-'23; Wanda Brown Shaw, '21; May Lindley Myers, ex-'24; Agnes Irwin Stovall, ex-'33; Burge W. Mason, Jr., ex-'32; Mildred Sinniger Mason, ex-'32; Myron E. Shannon, '25; Myrtle Helm, '33; Raymond G. Heider, '12; Alice Thurston Howard, '21; George W. McIntyre, ex-'24; Eloise McPherson McIntyre, '24; LeLaine West Gardinier, '23; Thirza Anderson Snyder, ex-'31; Nellie Motschenbacher, ex-'29.

Astoria

Forty-four alumni of Clatsop county met in Astoria, with Merle Chessman, '09, presiding. The banquet was organized by John Halderman, '31. Principal speaker was A. C. Hampton, '18. Oregon songs were sung, but it was found impossible to get the Portland broadcast on the radio. Officers elected were: W. T. Eakin, '84, president; Max Schafer, '23, Seaside, vice-president; Margaret McCullough, '26, secretary; and John Halderman, '31, Maude Mastick Ash, '14, Dr. Jon Straumfjord, '28, and Neil Morfitt, '22, on the board of directors. Those present were:

John Halderman, '31; Ardena Larson, ex-'34; Robert Larson, ex-'32; Willis West, '32; Bertha C. Robertson, '22; Max Schafer, '23; Beatrice Bennett, '31; Martha Ann Prothero, '31; Florence L. Griffin, ex-'27; W. T. Eakin, '84; Maud Mastick Ash, '14; Mary McClean, ex-'13; Harry R. Serles, ex-'26; Leo A. Carruthers, '25; Margaret Arnold Warren, '29; John P. Trullinger, '24; Myra Cannon, ex-'09; A. C. Hampton, '18; A. A. Anderson, '06; Hilda Pitkanen Eliasson, '34; J. V. Straumfjord, M.D. '28; Norman Thompson, '34.

Others

Other Founders' Day dinners were held throughout the state and perhaps in other states, but as yet the alumni office has not received reports on them.

HOMECOMING

President Chessman

One hundred and eighty alumni of the University officially made their attendance known at Homecoming this year by registering at the alumni booth, while an estimated 400 more were present for one or two of the many events of the week-end.

Aside from the Montana-Oregon football game and the usual exchange of greetings and stories by old classmates reunited, the chief center of interest was the election of officers of the Alumni Association for the coming year. Although ordinarily nominations only would be made at the Homecoming meeting of the association, the nominations were made unanimous this year, and new officers for the coming calendar year are already known, without the necessity of the usual mail ballot.

Merle Chessman, '09, editor of the Astorian Budget, was the unanimous choice to succeed Ralph Cake, '13, of Portland. Chessman was honored not only with the presidency of the alumni during the week-end, but as a dad of an Oregon student, was named vice-president of the Oregon Dads, which organization also held its annual campus get-together during the week-end. Other officers elected were James H. Raley, Jr., '31, to replace Joe Freck, '31, as vice-president, and Henry Fowler, '14, Bend, for the three year term as director at the expiration of Carl Nelson's, '19, one year term.

Traditional Event

All traditional fanfare of the old-time Homecoming took a prominent place in the festivities of the week-end. Although thoroughly soaked by a drenching rain, the Homecoming parade of floats and noise machines went off as scheduled. Many alumni attended the Homecoming dance, the rally dance, and the individual alumni dinners given by the fraternity and sorority houses.

Chief topic of discussion at the alumni meeting concerned ways and means of better establishing the alumni association on a basis of fuller participation by alumni and a better financial condition. It was declared that the establishment of the annual Founders' Day tradition was a step in the right direction, and that a conscientious follow-up on the local organizations established by the first Founders' Day should be an important part of the program for the coming year.

Robert K. Allen was named to serve another year as alumni secretary by the Alumni Council. This action was ratified at the general alumni meeting.

FOOTBALL

Tragedy in South

Alumni and Oregon sport followers of the Northwest settled back in their chairs on the afternoon of November 17, and twisted their radio dials to the station that was to broadcast the Oregon-U.S.C. game. For the first time in many a year these radio listeners felt that at last Oregon had a chance to storm the citadel of the once-mighty Trojan.

The game started off very encouragingly with Oregon making first down after first down; the Trojans apparently unable to stave off the Webfoot attack, and Oregon fans settled a little further back, more convinced than ever that at last the long thwarted dream of a win over Southern Cal was to come true. To add to their hopes was the fact that it was raining in Los Angeles; the first break Oregon has had with Los Angeles weather in many years.

But such confidence was doomed to short life. Getting the ball down to the Trojan's 11-yard line, only to lose it on downs, Oregon came right back with a series of passes, that ended tragically when Cal Clemens snared one on the U.S.C. 28-yard line and ran it back to Oregon's 47. That was the end of Oregon's short spurt of brilliancy. From that point on the fortunes of both teams seemed to switch, with U.S.C. playing superb ball for the first time this season, and with Oregon showing only mere occasional spurts of the brilliancy with which she had started the contest. The game belonged to U.S.C. from that point on, and the game ended 33 to 0 despite the stubborn resistance of the Webfooters.

Jinx Victim

Why Oregon never seems to make a good showing against U.S.C. was a much discussed subject following her defeat at Los Angeles. There always seem to be factors each time that might be held responsible for a loss, but an injury, or hot weather has never seemed to justify the huge scores that the Trojans have been able to pile up against Oregon each time the two teams clash. Most probable explanation would seem to be found in the fact that slowly, through a weird combination of circumstances each time, the Trojans have been able to establish a reputation of being unbeatable as far as the Webfooters are concerned—a reputation that amounts to that

HALFBACK SENSATION

Here's Maury Van Vliet, about the slipperiest 155 pounds of halfback on the coast, and an important factor in Oregon's football successes this year. Being a junior college transfer and having played one year already, he will play his last game for Oregon against Louisiana State on December 15.

most feared phenomenon of football psychology, a jinx. When that jinx can be broken will depend on the mental attitudes and the skill of Oregon teams of the future. The fact remains that the Trojans are, after all, merely another football team, composed of eleven men, and Oregon will, in the end, break the jinx—just as Washington succeeded in doing this year against Oregon.

Fight Producer

The week previous Oregon had battled Oregon State on almost even terms in Multnomah stadium to win the mythical state championship from the ancient rivals from Corvallis.

Starting out listlessly, the game changed its complexion after a fist fight between Oregon's Alex Eagle and Oregon State's Jack Brandis. Although the fight was short lived and was merely an outbreak of the rivalry and enthusiasm of the two teams, it was nevertheless responsible for putting new life into the game. Oregon scored a field goal in the third period to break a threatening deadlock, and again in the fourth with a touchdown. The Staters scored in the last minute of play on a series of passes. The final score was Oregon 9, Oregon State 6.

Homecoming Game

The Webfooters took Montana in their stride—almost. It was an inspired Grizzly aggregation that descended on the campus for Homecoming and Dad's Day, and although Oregon came out on top, 13 to 0, the game certainly wasn't "in the bag" until the last gun had been fired. Rushing with ferocity and determination, the Montana ends were able to smear many an Oregon play, and in the last few minutes of the game the Grizzlies threatened by a series of sensational forward passes. The gun cut this offensive short, but not too soon for Oregon.

A Broken Jinx

The end of the "seven lean years" for the University of Washington with its 16 to 6 victory over Oregon at Portland on November 13 marked the fall of the Ducks from the top flight of the conference. A league victory over Idaho 13 to 6 and an inter-sectional win over University of Utah at Salt Lake City had put Oregon back in the ranks of dangerous title contenders.

After toppling the strong Gonzaga and U.C.L.A. teams in the opening

OREGON'S QUARTET

games of the season, Oregon met the Washington Huskies at Portland in the "croochal" game of the year for both elevens. Washington, unable to score on the Webfoots, let alone win a game, since 1927, was thirsting for blood. Oregon was just as anxious to extend its list of shutout victories and at the same time keep in the conference race. Thirty-two thousand fans jammed Multnomah stadium to see the battle.

The Huskies wasted no time in breaking into the scoring column. Late in the first quarter Elmer Logg, sensational sophomore kicking star, place-kicked a 35-yard field goal to put Washington ahead 3 to 0. In the second period a pass from Haines to Cain gave the northerners a touchdown. The conversion made the halftime count 10 to 0.

Oregon came back with its characteristic second half fire to push over a score early in the third quarter. With hard-plunging Frank Michek and diminutive Maury Van Vliet leading the way, Oregon marched straight down the field to the Husky goal line. Following the ensuing kickoff the Ducks opened another march, and with Washington helpless before Oregon's powerful running and passing attack it looked like a second Webfoot touchdown. But a fumble broke up the march, gave the Huskies the ball and the Phelan-coached men quickly seized the opportunity to add six more points on a left-handed pass from Haines to Ahonen. That ended the scoring.

Idaho Tough

A week later the Ducks invaded Moscow, Idaho, to meet the Vandals in their annual homecoming game. On a muddy field in a driving rain Oregon passed and ran its way to a hard-fought 13 to 6 victory. Again Michek and Van Vliet formed the spearhead of the Webfoot attack. Oregon's aerial attack was not stopped by the rain and seven of Van Vliet's 12 tosses were completed, one resulting in a score. Michek tallied the second on straight line smashes.

Salt Lake Scare

Oregon's biggest scare of the season occurred at Salt Lake City as the University of Utah Redskins entertained a coast conference team on their home field for the first time. Before a capacity crowd of more than 20,000 the inspired Utes, behind 8 to 0 at the start of the third quarter, staged a stirring comeback to score seven points and almost add another six before the final gun. A determined goal line stand gave Oregon its 8-7 victory. A pass, Van Vliet to right halfback John Reischman, good for 41 yards resulted in Oregon's touchdown. A blocked punt late in the second quarter gave the invading Ducks two points on a safety and the victory. The mile high altitude of the Utah city quickly tired the Oregonians and nearly led to an upset.

BASKETBALL

Seven Lettermen

Some 20 candidates for the 1935 University of Oregon basketball squad have reported to Bill Reinhart for the start of organized practice for the coming hoop season. Seven lettermen, some unusually fine sophomores and a sprinkling of hold-over reserves and junior college transfers give Oregon a potentially strong quintet. The returning letter wearers are headed by Captain-elect Bill Berg and include Roland Rourke, Ron Gemmell, forwards; Willie Jones, Bob Miller, centers; Glen Sanford, Budd Jones, guards. From freshman ranks come Sam Liebowitz, the sensational Brooklyn, New York, star, and John Lewis and Arnold Faust from Seattle. Bill Harcombe, center and Andy Karstens, forward, are valuable and experienced reserves. Stan Riordan, center from Pasadena junior college, and Andy Hurney, guard from St. Martin's in Washington, come here with good reputations.

The season will not open until the Christmas holidays when a barnstorming trip into California is planned. The Webfoots hope to meet all members of the southern division of the coast conference. First northern section game is January 4 against Washington State at McArthur court, Eugene.

FACULTY

Replaces Conklin

Dr. Calvin Hall, specialist in the psychology of learning processes, who came to the University from the University of California, to become assistant professor of psychology, is taking over part of the work of Dr. Edmund S. Conklin, head of the psychology department, who has been granted a year's leave of absence to become head of the same department at the University of Indiana. Dr. Howard Taylor, professor of psychology and at present in charge of personnel research, has been made acting head of the department during Dr. Conklin's absence.

Dr. Hall graduated from the University of California in 1929 after a brilliant record as an undergraduate, and in 1933 was granted a Ph.D. degree from the same school. Since that time he has been research associate in psychology and has had extensive experience as a teacher in general and applied psychology.

Mrs. Henderson Dies

Mrs. L. F. Henderson, wife of Louis F. Henderson, curator of the University herbarium, died at her home in Eugene on November 21. Mr. Henderson has spent many years in collecting and preserving the flowers and shrubs native to Oregon, and Mrs. Henderson had worked with him in this work, accompanying him on many of his field trips over the state.

Boyer in East

Dr. C. V. Boyer, president of the University, left recently for Washington, D.C. where he will attend the annual session of Presidents of State Universities. The session will follow the annual meeting of heads of land grant colleges, to which Dr. W. J. Kerr, chancellor of higher education, will be delegate from Oregon.

Parsons "Brain Truster"

Dr. P. A. Parsons, head of the department of sociology of the University, was named recently by Governor-elect Charles H. Martin, to a group of nine which is to study and recommend a long-time developmental and governmental consolidation program for the state of Oregon. Dr. Parsons is already chairman of the Oregon State Planning Council, which group has been asked to act as technical adviser of the committee; and as such, he now holds a commanding position in Ore-

Faculty Room

Faculty members this year, and in the years to come, will have a regular meeting place—the newly designed faculty room in Friendly hall. Where once rang out the voices of dormitory students in their party moods, during the service of the room as a social hall, will now be heard the voices of learned professors.

The room will also be used for regular or special meetings of the various sub-divisions of the faculty, and for occasional academic lectures by visiting scholars or by members of the faculty.

CAMPUS

Emerald Exits

The troubled waters around the "shack" have subsided, and order reigns again, with the exit of Douglas Polivka, editor, Newton Stearns, managing editor, and the entrance of William Phipps and Malcolm Bauer, as editor and managing editor, respectively.

Polivka, who was named editor of the campus daily at the end of last spring term, was removed from office on charges of "not being able to hold the support of his staff, and the lack of judgment in publishing editorials on matters of grave importance to the University." His immediate subordinate, Newton Stearns, was discharged by Phipps, at the time temporary editor, on charges of not carrying out orders on the release of a story dealing with the editorship controversy.

Phipps has had wide experience in the newspaper field. He was assistant sports editor of the Oregon Barometer in 1930, while a student at Oregon State college. In 1932 he was day editor and a member of the sports staff of the Barometer, and last year served the Emerald as day editor and sports editor.

Other than his University work, Phipps was publicity director for the Oregon Normal school at Ashland, and campus correspondent for the Oregonian, Medford Mail-Tribune, and the Ashland Daily Tidings.

Bauer, who was appointed managing editor by Phipps, has held various positions on the Emerald staff, and also has wide experience in newspaper work.

Pass C.P.A. Exams

Three students from the campus passed the C.P.A. examinations given by the Oregon State Board of Accountants as a part of the requirements for obtainment of a Public Accountant Certificate. They are: Delford Bishop, Russel Morgan, and Burton Smith.

Two additional students, Orval

Young, and Delbert Kimberling, qualified in the examinations; that is, passed two out of the three subjects in which they were examined.

Enrollment

Just four students short of the 2,500 mark is the official enrollment figure for the University for fall term, according to the Registrar's office. It is an increase of approximately 17 percent over the fall term enrollment of last year.

Registration figures for the University medical school show a total enrollment of 243 students, of which 220 are men, and 23 women.

In the department of nursing education 242 students are taking the college junior certificate and degree courses. Hospital affiliations in these courses are now with St. Vincent's, Good Samaritan and Multnomah hospitals.

ORE.

Dear Satisfy"

"To me a cigarette is the best smoke. It's a short smoke... and then again it's milder.

"I notice that you smoke Chesterfields also. I like them very much."

"I HAD A BERTH in the ninth sleeper. It was a heavy train and a cold night—snowing—and I thought about the man with his hand on the throttle. I admire and respect those men."
