AMERICA'S FIRST

SOLVENT-REFINED MOTOR OIL

First in the United States to be solvent-refined, New Cylol offers less oil-drag, grade for grade, than any other motor oil.

Oil-drag is motor-sluggishness caused by drag on moving parts by retardant impurities in the lubricant. New Cylol's solvent-refining removes more of these impurities than any other process. Cars go farther—and faster with less gasoline, less driving expense.

Ask your dealer for New Cylol motor oil in one and five quart cans—for convenience and easy identification of grade—for new power and protection. The hermetically sealed container is your guarantee that New Cylol is refinery-fresh, pure and lively. Quality sealed in—impurities sealed out.

NEWS AND COMMENT

By the Editor

A New Year

This issue of OLD OREGON should reach alumni readers right in the midst of the holiday season, and as an old year draws to a close and a new one with a wealth of promise and opportunity begins.

Of course, as a fireside pastime, thinking back over the happenings of the past year is entertaining and in many respects revealing. As far as the University and the Alumni Association are concerned one's reminiscences become confused in a myriad of past happenings, thwarted hopes, accomplishments and disappointments. But at the start of a new year one prefers to look ahead and plan ahead.

One wonders whether at the end of 1935 there will be cause for a more sincere confidence in the immediate future of the University; whether the entire system will be at last united in the common endeavor of making even greater public service institutions of the University and College than in the past; whether certain obstructions in educational progress will by that time be removed and personal prejudices and jealousies relegated to a dark and forgotten past. These are the things which alumni hope for and will work for during 1935.

But yet again, many of these things are still in the realm of hope only. How are they to be brought about? The answer, as far as the part that the alumni must play, lies within their support of the Alumni Association itself. For it is only through the Alumni Association that alumni may present a united front in the interest of a greater University. There are a few alumni who, by virtue of their position and prominence, can be of real service as individuals; but in the main it is the entire body of alumni that must make itself heard before fully representative alumni action can result. Too often it is the criticism of alumni that they are trouble raisers who make themselves heard where they are not wanted. Such criticism arises from disorganized and uninformed enthusiasts. The safety in numbers of a well organized and active alumni organization is the best safeguard against such criticism, and the greatest asset a University can possess.

So as 1934 rolls into the past and 1935 brings its challenge of greater accomplishment, alumni may well resolve that they are going to renew their efforts in the interest of their alma mater, but will do so with a better understanding of the part their Association must take in this work and of the backing that it needs from each and every alumnus and alumna.

With this message OLD OREGON rests its case for the new year, and at the same time extends to Oregon alumni everywhere a wish for a Merry Christmas and a happy and joyous New Year

As Cheap As One

The Alumni Association has been charged with encouraging matrimony among its membership. This charge comes from the fact that at the Homecoming meeting of the Association it was voted to alter the dues so that membership for husband and wife (both alumni of the University) could be had as cheaply as membership for a single person ($2.00) or for an alumnus married to someone who had never attended the University.

This paragraph is by way of explanation and defense of this action and a sharp denial that the Association is officially in favor of marriages within its membership, although it in no way frowns upon such happenings. It was felt that where only one magazine and one address plate was necessary for both husband and wife alumna, that the married alumni dues might logically be reduced without cutting down income, to the regular one-person rate.

OUTGOING AND INCOMING ALUMNI OFFICERS

On January 1 Merle Chessman, '09, right, and James Raley, Jr., '31, left, will take over the administration of alumni affairs. They were elected last Homecoming. Ralph Cake, '13, center, is retiring president and Joe Freck (not pictured) gives way to Raley as vice-president. Henry Fowler, '14, is to serve as new member on the alumni council.

ORDER OF COIF

Laurels for Law School

The Order of the Coif, honorary society for the legal profession and the oldest scholastic fraternity in American higher education, granted its thirtieth chapter to the University of Oregon law school in November. The chapter was installed December 6 by Harold S. Shepard, dean of the University of Washington Law school and member of the executive committee of the national chapter of the order, and acceptance was made by Dean Wayne L. Morse, head of the University Law school.

Charter memberships were bestowed on Dean Morse, and three members of his faculty; Claude H. Brown, Orlando J. Hollis and Carlton E. Spencer. Dean Shepard gave the installation address, stressing the need for up-to-date technique in teaching law and the studying of the means of social control in terms of its social consequences.

Granting of the chapter is declared to be the greatest mark of recognition accorded since the law school was given Class A ranking in the American Association of Law Schools. Only 29 of the 77 Class A schools in the country have chapters of this fraternity, which limits its membership to law students selected from the highest ten percent of the senior class and from members of the bar who show exceptional ability.

Order's Origin

The origin of the Order of the Coif antedates by many centuries any other scholastic fraternal organization in this country. The English Order of the Coif was the most ancient and one of the most honored institutions of common law. In 1911 Frederick Greene, professor of law at the University of Illinois, brought a charter for a similar organization from England. Charles G. Howard, professor of law on the University campus, is a member of the Illinois chapter, and it was under his direction that petitions for the charter here were prepared.

The roll of members of the English Order of the Coif includes the names of the greatest lawyers and judges in English history, including Coke, Littleton, Dugdale, Fortesque, Bacon, Blackstone, Blackburn, Granville, Campbell, Coleridge and others. The English order never included many members at a time and its roll seldom exceeded 40 at one time. This feature of strict limitation has been maintained in America.

Law School Grows

The University Law school has shown a consistent growth and has kept pace with the raising of scholarship standards so well as to merit a place in the front rank of American law schools. Enrollment for this year is 130, and the first year class jumped from 42 last year to 72 this year. Six years are required to complete the course.

The school was established in Portland in 1884, and continued there until 1915 when it was moved to Eugene. It was admitted to the Association of American Law Schools in December, 1919, and its standards were approved by the American Bar Association in 1923.

Faculty, curriculum and other of its features have won high praise. The school's publication, the "Oregon Law Review," rates with the best legal publications of the country, numbering many outstanding state and national authorities among its contributors. The Oregon "moot court," student self-government, and other phases of the work have contributed to the school's exceptional standing.

Its latest claim of achievement was its sponsorship, with the state bar association, of the first Pacific Coast Institute of Law and Administration of Justice. The session attracted national attention by the attendance of noted legal men from every part of the country.

Faculty of the school includes Dean Morse, who in 1932 received the degree of doctor of jurisprudence from Columbia university; Dr. James D. Barnett, professor of political science as well as law; Orlando J. Hollis, law school graduate with one of the highest scholastic records ever made; Charles G. Howard, whose research work on restatement of Oregon law has won national attention; Carlton E. Spencer, staff member since 1913; Claude H. Brown and Henry L. Everett, who joined the school this year.

CAMPUS VISITORS

Socialist Thomas

Among the most popularly acclaimed campus visitors of recent years was Norman Thomas, Socialist leader and presidential candidate, who addressed a student audience that jammed Geringer hall, November 15. The renowned Socialist won the admiration and friendship of both students and faculty with his sharp-edged criticism and witty comment directed at the existent economic order.

Not limiting his thoughtful remarks to questions of production and consumption, he responded to student queries regarding education. "There must be complete academic freedom in the American universities, regardless of the scarcity of jobs," he declared.

He upbraided students for their tendency to live in a world apart, and exhorted them to take an active part in the issues of their cities and states, "regardless of threatening vigilantes, and dictatorial provosts." Scorning the college attitude toward politics, he declared that leadership must come from educated youth.

Sculptor Taft

A museum so inexpensive that every state institution could support it, yet containing all the masterpieces of the world—in plaster casts—is the "Dream Museum" of Lorado Taft, famed American sculptor, who spoke on the University campus on November 19. These casts, arranged in historical sequence, would bring to all the people the great masterpieces, and, he declared, would do more to create appreciation of artistic talent than costly museums containing a few originals.

The seventy-four-year-old sculptor and lecturer commended the apparent industry of the University's art school students, and spoke of his enjoyment of the Oriental art collection in the Museum of Art.

Others of Note

Other figures of renown were brought to the University campus during fall term. World traveler and observer of international affairs, Count Jean de Susannet spoke on "French Politics in Central Europe," November 23. Dr. Clark M. Eichelberger, national director of the League of Nations association, discussed "America's Place in World Affairs" on November 26.

Dr. David L. Crawford, president of the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, brought a message of international friendship to the campus on December 11, when he spoke at an assembly on the subject, "The Paradox of Hawaii."

A dancer of the modern school, Benjamin Zemach appeared in recital on November 14. With a company of three girls he displayed an unusual sense of form, and with a direct dramatic attack demonstrated the possibilities in combining two art forms, drama and the dance, to create a third.

Visitors to Come

Foremost authorities in the fields of art, Russia, literature, education and world affairs have been obtained for the winter term lecture series on the campus.

Five speakers who will visit the University are as follows: W. H. Chamberlain, author on international affairs and for many years correspondent in Moscow for the Christian Science

MRS. VIRGINIA JUDY ESTERLY

Monitor; Frank Lloyd Wright, re-garded by many as America's outstanding architect and leader of modernistic construction trends; Grant L. Farge, architect of the older school and designer of cathedrals, hospitals and memorials; Will Durant, well-known author and a critic of Russia who is expected to speak on the Soviet union; Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, former editor of the Century Magazine and noted as a liberal educator, who will discuss modern American trends.

Mrs. Esterly Returns

Former dean of women on the University campus, Mrs. Virginia Judy Esterly returned for a visit on December 13. Mrs. Esterly was dean of women from 1923 to 1930, and is at present counsellor on human relations and assistant to the president of Scripps college, Claremont, California. She was given special honor during her visit by the Associated Women Students.

Campus Gets Face Lift

On returning to the campus, Oregon alumni would find the familiar countenance in a face-lifting process. New sidewalks, regraded lawns, new-painted and new-roofed buildings, and interior remodeling have contributed to the improvements, given impetus during the fall months under SERA allotments.

The sun dial which graces a corner of the Johnson hall lawn may now be approached by way of a broad curving concrete walk. The change relegates to the memorybook the old cinder path and the short board walk which skirted the corner of Johnson hall.

Just south of McArthur court a bright green turf field has been made useful, pending a return of fair weather. Bleachers, stained green to make them inconspicuous, have been installed on the University street side, and may seat baseball crowds and outdoor music audiences numbering up to 2500 persons.

Exterior painting has been completed for Oregon, Condon, Commerce, and Johnson buildings, and interior refinishing in Condon. New shingle roofs now protect Music, Education, High School, infirmary and annex, and most of Gerlinger buildings, as well as the east-side grandstand, Susan Campbell, Hendricks and Mary Spiller halls, Thacher cottage, Haley house, Mickelson's cottage, and the physical education office.

Five Seek Rhodes

Five University of Oregon students have been named among a total of 17 as candidates in the state Rhodes scholarship competition, S. Stephenson Smith, professor of English and a member of the state examination board, announced.

Those selected were James W. Brooke, Parks Hitchcock, Lloyd Humphreys and John Caswell, all of Eugene; and Irvin Bartle Hill, of Cushman. The applicants will go to Portland on January 3 for the state examination. Four students from the district, comprised of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, and North Dakota, will go to Oxford in October, 1935.

Senior Six

The highest scholastic honor that can come to an undergraduate student was awarded recently to six University students by their election to the fall term "Senior Six" of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary. Those thus honored are: Lloyd G. Humphreys, Eugene, psychology major; Helen G. Abel, Astoria, English major; Valborg L. Anderson, Colton, English major; Mary Janet Cox, Portland, English major; Elinor Stevenson, Eugene, philosophy major; and Lloyd M. Faust, Eugene, economics major.

FACULTY

Off to Washington

One of the most recent faculty migrations is that of John M. Rae, associate professor of business administration, who has been appointed economic adviser for the federal civil service commission.

Rae has been granted a leave of absence and left for the national capital at the end of October. His duties will include the examination and interviewing of all candidates for government posts which require a knowledge of economics and business administration. The government civil service maintains examiners for each field of service.

Professor Rae came to the University from Harvard's graduate school of business administration in 1928. He was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1923 and taught for several years before going to Harvard.

For the last six months Rae has been on active duty in the United States army, as head of the CCC unit at Medford. He holds the rank of captain in the organized reserves.

Anthropologist Honored

Dr. Luther S. Cressman, professor of sociology here since 1929, has been named professor of anthropology as a mark of recognition for the extensive work he has done in this field in recent years. He will also retain his title of professor in sociology.

Recognition for Dr. Cressman's work came from a national quarter last month when the Carnegie corporation made a special grant to enable him and other faculty members to continue the search for more evidence of a prehistoric Oregon man. A thorough investigation of the region near Benham Falls in the Deschutes section, where three objects believed to be prehistoric tools were dug up last September.

Dr. Cressman has become nationally known for his anthropological discoveries made in Oregon in recent years. He has discovered rock writings and other evidences of early habitation in southwestern and eastern Oregon and recently uncovered a number of burial mounds in the Willamette valley.

Accounts of his work, published in newspapers and various other publications throughout the United States, are bringing attention not only to the state of Oregon but also to the University.

An account of a recent expedition to the Guano Lake country in southeastern Oregon made by a party headed by Dr. Cressman was deemed of sufficient importance to attain front page position in the Christian Science Monitor, international daily.

whose researches and studies have won promotion and Carnegie recognition.

Discoveries of increasing importance may result from investigations being continued by Dr. Cressman. In the Deschutes project, the age of the tools unearthed is roughly calculated at not less than 10,000 years by Dr. Warren D. Smith, geology professor. Found in a hard gravel stratum several feet below volcanic topsoil, the objects are crude resemblances to the artifacts of later Indian races. The search for other objects will be continued this spring.

Dr. Cressman received his doctor of philosophy degree from Columbia university. He spent some time studying and traveling in Europe and this country before coming to Oregon. He is author of "The Social Composition of the Rural Population of the United States" and numerous articles in the fields of anthropology and sociology. He is an associate editor of the Commonwealth Review, University quarterly.

Dr. Hall Named

New honors in the field of political science may be added to the University of Oregon's impressive record. Dr.

Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University during the years 1926 to 1931, and now director of the Institute for Governmental Research of the Brookings Institution at Washington, D. C., has been named head of the educational committee in charge of selecting candidates for the National Institution of Public Affairs.

Four students have been named from Oregon as candidates for training in actual phases of government during February and March, 1935. About 125 students will be selected from all sections of the United States for the governmental "internships." Candidates from Oregon named by a committee headed by Dr. James D. Barnett, professor of political science, include William J. Bruce, '31, John E. Caswell, '34, Jack Stipe, '32, and Walter Thrasher, undergraduate. Alternates are George Bennett and Martha Goodrich, both '34 and of Eugene.

Significant Study

Information on University of Oregon's research project in appreciation of art, already nationally famous, is now available in a published bulletin entitled "Studies in Appreciation of Art." The publication, like the projects here, has been financed by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. It was edited by Dr. Ralph W. Leighton, executive secretary of research, and contains four sections: Appreciation of Poetry, by Ernest G. Moll, assistant professor of English; Appreciation of Art, by N. B. Zane, associate professor of design; Appreciation of Music, by Kate V. Hevner, assistant professor of music at University of Minnesota, who has been at work on the Oregon project; Theories of Aesthetic Appreciation, by Dr. John Mueller, associate professor of sociology.

Oregon's research project on appreciation of art was launched in 1930 by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, then president of the University. It is regarded as one of the most significant studies in modern higher education, and has been watched with interest by many educators.

SPORTS

BASKETBALL

Eyes on Oregon

When basketball enthusiasts say that Oregon has her best basketball team in a good many years, the boast is not without foundation. The Webfoot hoopsters ended last season with seven wins in the last eight conference games, and shouldered their way into second place. That victory drive will be continued this season, aver most northwest observers, and Oregon has first-rate chances for coming out of the annual maple court scramble with top-place laurels.

Coach Bill Reinhart has a team in the making which in five unofficial contests has indicated brilliant possibilities. In meeting the Union Oil and Multnomah club from Portland, and Irish's from Eugene, and in two games with Southern Oregon Normal, the Webfoots have displayed a sturdy defense and flashes of scoring form. Six additional pre-season matches are expected to iron out many offensive difficulties.

Regulars from last year include Captain Bill Berg, reliable guard with two-year experience; Robert Miller, two-year center; the scrappy Jones boys, Willard, six-foot-four center, and Budd, lanky guard; Ron Gemmell, tall and speedy forward who sparked many a closing rally last season; Roland Rourke and Glen Sanford, both guards. Every veteran but O'Rourke is six feet or better in height.

Prodigies From Frosh

To offset the loss of "Spook" Robertson, forward; "Gib" Olinger, captain and guard; and Jim Watts, reserve guard—all of whom graduated—the varsity has two sensational recruits from the frosh. Sam Liebowitz plays a fascinating, sleight-of-hand game at forward, learned as a New York All-City star and as a frosh last year. John Lewis, another six-footer who hails from Seattle, is a valuable adjunct to forward ranks.

Other players of promise include Bill Harcombe and LaGrande Houghton, reserve center and reserve guard from last season; Mel Kennedy, guard transfer from Long Beach; and Arnold Faust, guard from the frosh.

L.S.U. Passes Win

In the final game of the grid season, Oregon's smashing "cruncher play" met its equal in Louisiana State's elusive passing star, Abe Mickal, and by a margin of one conversion point the Tigers defeated the Webfoots, 14 to 13, in Baton Rouge, December 15.

With Fullback Michek driving through on the cruncher, and Van Vliet skirting the wings, the Webfoots astonished the 10,000 spectators with a score in the first period. Six plays carried the ball over from Oregon's 44, where L. S. U. had fumbled. Van Vliet's pass for the extra point was grounded.

A second drive bogged down on the Tiger 15, but Oregon started a third from her own 38-yard line. Passes and line smashes took the ball to the Louisiana 26, where Van Vliet dodged through right tackle and bolted over the goal line. Lamp Walker thumped a perfect placement, and Oregon led 13 to 0.

Mickal then started a series of baffling forward passes, and before the end of the half Louisiana had scored their initial touchdown, starting from Oregon's 24 after a poor punt by Van Vliet. Despite savage defensive play, the Webfoots failed to stop that aerial barrage before the Staters had scored again from Oregon's 39, where Fatherree boomed through on a reverse. Both extra points were good.

Oregon played one of her best games of the season, but suffered from the same weakness that turned the tide against her in the heavier games of the past season; namely, lack of adequate reserves. Louisiana's first touchdown was made by eleven newly substituted men, and frequent changes of lineup sustained the Tiger drive and passing attack. In contrast, the Webfoot team was composed mostly of "60-minute men," whose replacement meant a decided weakening of play.

Gaels Block Punt

A fighting Oregon eleven weakened in the second half of the Thanksgiving day game in San Francisco, after leading at half-time with a well-earned 7 to 0 margin, and bowed to St. Mary's Gaels, 13 to 7. Lacking the backfield generalship of Bob Parke, the Webfeet were able to grab but one scoring opportunity. In the second period, Van Vliet passed to Riordan for 26 yards, line thrusts put the ball on St. Mary's 15-yard line, and another pass with the same combination netted six points. Walker, starting right end, place-kicked the extra point.

St. Mary's running attack was held in check, until in the third quarter, Nichelini, right halfback for the Gaels, dashed unexpectedly around right end to score from Oregon's 41-yard line. The try for point failed, and the Gaels started another drive that bogged down on Oregon's fourteen. A place-kick attempt failed, and Oregon recovered. With only a minute to go, Riordan's punt from the twenty was blocked by Jorgensen, stellar Gael center, and Pendleton fell on the ball over the goal for the winning touchdown.

Games for 1935

Football fans hailed Oregon's 1935 football schedule, approved in the Pacific Coast conference sessions ending December 11, as a marked improvement over those of previous seasons. Two noteworthy changes were made: Oregon will play University of California in Portland on October 12; the Webfoots will not play University of Southern California. The Trojan feud will be resumed in 1936, when Oregon will again appear on the U. S. C. schedule.

California will be Oregon's opening conference foe. On October 19, Idaho will invade Eugene; one week later, Oregon will meet U.C.L.A. in Los Angeles. On November 9, the state's leading sports rivals will clash, with Oregon State coming to Eugene. Oregon will meet Washington in Seattle on Thanksgiving day, and the traditional Turkey day game with St. Mary's will be transferred to December 7.

Non-conference games thus far booked will bring Utah university to Eugene on October 5, and will match Oregon and Gonzaga university, probably in Portland and on a date not yet determined.

Lone All-Coaster

One lone Webfoot grid star was given the much-coveted post-season honors that go with a place on the all-coast squad or with an invitation to play in the annual East-West charity game in San Francisco on New Year's day. Raymond (Butch) Morse, mighty left end and this year's co-captain, easily outranked all other ends on the coast except Stanford's all-American Moscrip, and won a place on virtually all mythical coast elevens.

Watts Named Coach

Jim Watts, for three years a guard under Bill Reinhart, has been named freshman basketball coach at Oregon. He has opened daily workouts with an initial turnout of more than 40 yearling hoop candidates. Among them were several former all-state and other outstanding prep hoopers.

ward has selected a mythical all-Oregon eleven. For thirty years Bill has watched Oregon's parade of football men come and go, giving his opinion an undeniable authenticity.

End	B. Mitchell	1916
Tackle	J. Beckett	1916
Guard	B. Williams	1913
Center	J. Risley	1916
Guard	E. Shields	1925
Tackle	W. Morgan	1932
End	R. Morse	1934
Quarterback	C. Huntington	1917
Halfback	J. Parsons	1916
Halfback	J. Kitzmiller	1931
Fullback	M. Mikulak	1933

"Oregon's greatest team," Bill declares, was the 1916 aggregation, coached by Hugo Bezdek. This team represented the West in the New Year's day game at the Pasadena Rose Bowl in 1917. This remarkable team registered 244 points to its opponents' 17 for a seasonal record. In the Rose Bowl they defeated a highly rated Pennsylvania eleven by a 14-0 score.

From that sensational team Trainer Hayward picks four seniors and one junior for his mythical eleven. No Oregon squad since that year is represented by more than one player.

Where are these mighty warriors in this year of 1934? Time has scattered them to far corners. Let us trace them to their present niches in the work-a-day world.

Hayward's all time Oregon eleven follows:

The Mythical Line

Ends. At the University of Nevada, "Brick" Mitchell is coaching the game at which he made a big name for himself. After his Rose Bowl performance, he was adjudged by critics to be one of the greatest ends in the country at that time. Mitchell as well as Beckett and Huntington, again played outstanding football in the Rose Bowl the following year, this time with the Mare Island Marines.

Captain "Butch" Morse, stellar end on Oregon's 1934 football edition, closes the chronological list. He was mentioned on every all-Coast selection compiled this season. He was particularly successful with his now-famed end-around play that resulted in a mean seasonal yard average.

Tackles. Being a captain seems to fall the lot of Oregon's leader of 1916. Johnny Beckett today is captain in the U. S. Marines, which he joined during the period of the World War. In work, as in play, he fits in where the demand is for a ready, rugged and reliable individual.

Instrumental in the New York Giants' professional football success this season, Bill Morgan continues to play the kind of game that won him renown while at Oregon. He was an inspirational leader, and at all times proved the faith placed in him by his team-mates when he was chosen captain of the '32 squad.

Guards. "Baz" Williams, stalwart guard on the '17 and '18 teams, is the owner and operator of one of Eugene's largest bakeries. As a linesman he was given much credit for the successes of two seasons through his aggressiveness and determination.

While playing with the teams of '23, '24 and '25, "Gene" Shields thoroughly mastered the rigid fundamentals of a linesman's duties. The acquisition of this knowledge, with his outstanding ability, placed him on Oregon's list of "greats," and resulted in his becoming line coach for the University under Prince Callison.

Center. Wandering into Oregon City with an old car, one would chance being confronted by Jake Risley with a proposition for a trade-in on a new one. Jake had the distinction as a center of placing on three different all-star teams, while wearing the yellow and green during '14, '15 and '16.

All-Time Backfield

Quarterback. Oregon's greatest quarterback, C. A. "Shy" Huntington, warmed the hearts of many university students, alumni and followers by his feats on the teams of '16 and '17. Today as a partner in the fuel business with "Skeet" Manerud, another ex-Oregon backfield star, he is warming the homes of many families in and around Eugene.

Halfbacks. Highly successful today as the head of a large chain of dairies in Seattle is Johnny Parsons. As the ace halfback on Bezdek's grid machine of 1916, he was recognized as the most remarkable open field runner in the Pacific Coast conference.

Doc Spears' pride and joy was Johnny Kitzmiller, who found a place on the all-Coast team in '30 and '31, plus several mentions for all-American selection. The "Flying Dutchman" is now working with Callison as backfield coach.

Fullback. In rating all-American recognition, "Mighty Mike" Mikulak proved not only to the fans of Oregon, but to the nation as a whole that he possessed more gridiron ability than the average. He was seldom equaled anywhere on defense. This season finds him with the Chicago Cardinals in the professional football league.

studied at the University medical school in 1916-17.

Dr. George Minot, of Harvard, and Dr. George H. Whipple of the University of Rochester share the honors with Dr. Murphy, and also the $41,000 award.

"For liver therapy in anemia," was the succinct summary of the award. The three scientists long battled the disease which until eight years ago was considered incurable.

Dr. Murphy, who began work with Dr. Minot in 1925 on pernicious anemia, is making a study of agranulocytosis, a blood disease manifested by a decrease in the number of white blood corpuscles, and plans to use his share of the Nobel money in furthering his study, which is being conducted in his laboratory in the Peter Bent Brigham hospital.

Dr. Murphy received his M.D. from Harvard medical school in 1920, and has been an instructor there since 1928.

Artist Alumni

Organization of an Alumni Arts League for the department of architecture and allied arts of the University of Oregon, with a program of exhibitions, sketching tours, life classes and social gatherings, has been announced by Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, and Dean Ellis F. Lawrence.

Officers of the league are H. Abbott Lawrence, '28, president; Walter E. Church, '16, vice-president; Mrs. Edwin T. Hodge, '27, secretary; Mrs. Donald H. Bichnase, '29, corresponding secretary; Dorothy Shaw, '31, treasurer; Frank Roehr, '27, activities; Stuart Biles, ex-'25, bulletin, and Arthur Runquist, '19, exhibition.

Activities planned by the league include an exhibition of work of members and of the faculty to be held April 1 to 22 at the Portland Art Museum and the publishing of a bulletin to announce coming events. Architecture and work of the league will be featured in the May issue of OLD OREGON, University publication.

Oregon Diplomats

On the basis of population, Oregon ranks high in the number of native sons now in the diplomatic service of the United States. Three of the fourteen Oregonians holding diplomatic posts all over the world are former students of the University.

John Nellis Hamlin, ex-'19, of Roseburg, is the American consul at picturesque Naples. A graduate of the University, and Harvard, he en-

Hats Off to "Eddie"!

Not so many years ago—in Professor Thacher's first short story writing class—an eager, young would-be writer handed in a story. "Not so good, Eddie, you can't sell it," said the professor. Eddie sold the story to the Saturday Evening Post!

Today, the world knows him as Edison Marshall, popular, widely read modern writer, winner of the O. Henry short story prize in 1921, and the highest paid serial writer of the present time.

The Oregon campus of 20 or 30 years ago plays an important part in the setting and plot of Marshall's latest published short story, "The Marquis Plays Poker," which appeared in magazine Liberty for October 20. Persons familiar with the history of the campus during that period are quick to point out that the fictitious characters in the story have their counterparts in real campus figures of around 1912. Such familiar words as "Deady" and "Villard" figure prominently.

How the hero of the story, one Tomimi Izumo, rose to a position of high rank in his country's service, is paralleled by the actual history of Yosuke Matsuoka, one of Oregon's most famous graduates, who was a visitor on the campus last year.

Several other characters in the story apparently have their prototypes in the history of the University. For instance, it has been pointed out by old graduates that Marshall's "Dick Smith of Sigma Nu" was the real Dick Smith, who figured prominently in campus activities in the early part of the century. The "Fred Weaver" is thought to be J. Fred Staver, who is in the realty business in Portland today.

Since 1920, Marshall has published over 13 novels that have found instant success. Along with this, he has written countless articles on his vast travel experiences, and also many short stories. His travels take him to the farthest nooks of the world, and his stories portray his experiences.

Nobel Prize Winner

One of the three men among whom the year's Nobel prize in medicine is to be divided is Dr. William P. Murphy, who received his B.A. from the University of Oregon in 1914, and tered diplomatic service in 1924 at Tirana, Albania, and before assignment to Naples, served at Madrid, Spain, and at Buenos Aires.

Russell Mott Brooks of Salem is consul at Curacao, Netherlands, West Indies. He attended University of Oregon during 1911-13, and after the war entered the foreign service at Rotterdam, The Netherlands, and since then has served at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England; Dresden, Germany; Belfast, Ireland, and London.

Albert H. Cousins Jr., '30, of Eugene, who served in Vancouver, B. C., is now vice-consul at Caracas, Venezuela.

San Francisco Party

More than 150 alumni of the San Francisco bay district gathered at the Clift hotel on Wednesday evening, November 28 for a buffet supper and dance. The event was in the form of an alumni get-to-gether and a rally for the Oregon team which played St. Mary's in Kezar stadium the next day. Maurice Hyde, '17, organized the affair. He was assisted by Ferd Fletcher, '32.

A feature of the Thanksgiving day party and game was the presence of the entire Oregon rally committee, headed by Ralph Schomp. This group of twenty students had raised money by various functions on the campus to take them to the Turkey Day game. They not only lead yells and songs at the dance, but took charge of the Oregon rooting section at the game.

Hoyt Honored

Palmer Hoyt, '23, managing editor of The Oregonian, was elected to the executive committee of the Associated Press Managing Editors' association, at the Chicago convention of the group recently. Hoyt was the sole recipient of such an honor from the Pacific coast.

chemistry, who died several months ago.

The new member of the faculty received his undergraduate training at Randolph-Macon University in Virginia, his M.A. from the Kansas State college in 1920, and his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in 1923. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, American Society of Biological Chemists, Society of Experimental Biology and Medicine, Phi Sigma, Sigma Xi, and Chi Beta Phi.

Joins Art Faculty

Among the latest additions to the University faculty is David J. McCosh, who began his work as an instructor of painting and drawing in the art department last month. For the past two years, Mr. McCosh has been an instructor in lithography at the Chicago Art Institute.

DAVID J. MCCOSH

His early training was obtained at the Art Institute and during a year of study in Europe on a travel scholarship. In 1929 he received the Tiffany Foundation scholarship in painting. His work has been exhibited in New York and Chicago.

His wife, Anne Kutka, who is a well-known New York painter, agrees with the new faculty member that Oregon is of unusual interest as a painting country.

New Course Added

For the first time in several years a course in astronomy is being offered at the University, under the direction of Dr. A. E. Caswell, who has spent the last two years teaching at Oregon State. Students of the course have the use of the Evergreen observatory of J. Hugh Pruett, former instructor of physics, who is rapidly gaining national recognition as an expert on meteors.

Stories Translated

German youth may soon become familiar with pioneer and present-day life in Oregon. "Marooned in Crater Lake," written by Alfred Powers, dean of the general extension division, has been translated into German by Dr.

F. G. G. Schmidt, head of the German department.

Dean Powers' book is a collection of stories of adventure of the old Oregon Trail, Skyline Trail, Umpqua Trail and others. The translation will be first published in a number of boys' magazines in Germany and later will be issued in book form. Attention of German literary men was first brought to the book by Margaret Creech, formerly on the extension division staff and now of the University of Chicago faculty, and by Dr. Schmidt.

Attends Convention

Herman Kehrl, director of the University of Oregon bureau of municipal service, and executive secretary of the League of Oregon Cities, attended the annual convention of the National Federation of Leagues of Municipalities, held in Chicago October 25, 26, and 27.

Prior to the convention, Kehrl attended a meeting of the group in St. Louis, Missouri, where he conferred with leading city planning experts from nearly every state in the union, and gave a detailed report on the progress of the organization in this state, the work of which has already attracted the interest of nationally known experts in this field.

¶ Paul R. Washke, professor of physical education, and nationally known for his research and studies in his field, has been named a member of a committee to study the matter of admitting new sections into the American Physical Education association.

A man and his wife who had just returned from a round-the-world cruise spoke of Chesterfield as "an international cigarette."

It means something

... that Chesterfield Cigarettes are on sale in 86 countries all over the world.

It means something that Chesterfields may be purchased on nearly all ships and at almost every port.

It means that for a cigarette to enjoy such popularity, it must have merit. We do our level best to make Chesterfield as good a cigarette as can be made.
