STEEL ranges across San Francisco Bay at amazing speed—far ahead of schedule. Three towers already are up west of Yerba Buena Island; one more is to go. East, a double deck of steel reaches out one-third of the way alongside Oakland's Key Route mole.

Each girder, each rivet is a monument to the quality and efficiency of Cycol—the Pacemaker of motor oils and greases.

Night and day the unceasing machines of construction are protected from wear and power-loss by Cycol. With lubrication such as this, the bridge-builders can face other fronts in the race to beat completion dates. That is Cycol's contribution.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR BIG JOBS

CYCOL IS TOUGH:

It takes 20 quarts of the original, selected, wax-free crude to make one quart of Cycol. It's concentrated, the heart-cut. Cycol's protective film stands up under any operating condition.

CYCOL IS OILIER:

Solvent-refining removes more impurities than any other process. Cycol is all lubricant. Compounds that drag down power and waste fuel or form sludge and hard carbon are out.

CYCOL IS LIVELY:

It flows instantly, penetrates quickly and completely to tightest fitted bearings. Cycol's double vacuum-distillation selects fine lubricating stocks at lower temperatures, avoids heat injury.

NEWS AND COMMENT

By The Editor

What About Activity Fees?

OLD OREGON has received many queries of late from alumni who have wanted to know what this mess concerning student body fees is all about. Frankly, that is about what OLD OREGON would like to know.

The background and situation is just this. There was, back during winter term last year, a small minority of students who for some reason or another got it in their heads that the payment of student body fees was not justified. This group was headed by, in fact practically composed of, Oregon's one-time sophomore editor of the Emerald, Richard L. Neuberger. Most alumni are acquainted with the various activities and crusades of this very active young student and the small group that he has gathered around him to promote and incite his various "campaigns."

Neuberger's tenacity and determination resulted finally in the decision of the attorney-general declaring that mandatory collection of associated student body fees was unlawful. Of course this was a severe blow to the fine program of student body activities built up during a long period of years on a basis where all students shared in the expenses and where all students had an equal opportunity to benefit.

Established by Alumni

Many an alumnus will remember that at certain periods during the history of the University in the last 25 years that this program of student self-government was built up at the request of the students and in the interests of the students. OLD OREGON can recall, as an example, the elation of practically the entire campus when the Emerald was established as a student body project and a 75 cent fee was added to provide for the newspaper. Thus it was, with similar additions of worthwhile activities from time to time, that students of the University, now alumni, established and built one of the finest and most efficient student governed activity programs on the coast—this in face of small enrollments and limited finances.

However, no one questioned the validity of the attorney-general's decision. Now for three terms the A.S.U.O. has been attempting, none too successfully as far as finances are concerned, to carry on under an optional fee program where only those students who wished needed to pay the membership. There was destroyed the feeling of equality and equal responsibility on the part of the students in so far as their group activities were concerned. Naturally there were many who saw an opportunity to sidestep a responsibility.

Up to State Board

In a sincere attempt to re-establish the program, interested alumni and students sponsored a bill in the legislature empowering the state board of higher education to levy a fee of not more than $5 a term to be used for the activity program. This bill passed the senate and house and was signed by the governor.

PORTLAND ALUMNI

You are cordially invited to attend the big "spring frolic" dance to be held Friday evening, March 29, in the Grand Ballroom of the Multnomah Hotel, Portland. Students and members of the Alumni Association are to be admitted free. Alumni are requested to show their membership cards.

The dance is being sponsored by the students and alumni in honor of the graduating seniors of the Portland high schools, and each alumnus is particularly requested to bring a high school senior as his personal guest.

Remember the date:

SPRING FROLIC DANCE
MULTNOMAH HOTEL
FRIDAY, MARCH 29

Now comes Mr. Neuberger and his small group of mal-contented with a plan for submitting the bill to the people of the state as a referendum measure. They have already set their machinery in motion in an attempt to obtain the required number of petition signers. They justify themselves by stating that the bill was railroaded through the legislature, apparently forgetting that they themselves did everything in their power to influence the legislature against the measure. And on top of that, they seem to disregard the fact that the bill merely empowers the state board of higher education to assess the $5 fee or any part thereof.

Grudge Fight Now

Thus, as the situation drags out, it becomes more obvious than ever that Mr. Neuberger and his gang will submit to no authority in educational matters, but doggedly adhere to what seems now to be a sincere desire to get revenge in an attempt somehow to justify their minority belief and grudge.

So, unless their referendum attempt fails, higher education's own problems will once again be dragged out in front of the people of the state. Of course the people are interested in such matters, but just how many of them are qualified to speak authoritatively (or would even admit a basic knowledge of the problem) is certainly another matter.

Those who have followed Mr. Neuberger's "crusades" are well aware of his peculiar "ability" and "genius" for over-emphasis or under-emphasis and distortion. His tactics are those of the rabble-rousing politician, picking on the sensational and those facts that can be best twisted to his advantage.

Fees Not Real Issue

That is why OLD OREGON deploras the referendum movement. As we see it, there is only one fundamental issue at stake: Are the people of the state going to allow a person of Mr. Neuberger's type and tactics to hoodwink them into usurping the authority and trust which they have wilfully and lawfully placed in the state board of higher education? As for the question of optional versus compulsory fees, it only need be said that a student should be expected to pay those fees which the state board sees fit to levy in the best interests of higher education. The student always has the option of not attending the University or of going to some school that suits his individual wishes more completely. The state board will always listen to the sincere wish of a large group of students. The politically ambitious Mr. Neuberger does not represent such a group.

LEGISLATIVE

Diverted Funds Reduced

Only $75,000 will be diverted from the educational millage to the general fund of the state, if indications from Salem are interpreted correctly. During the biennium just closing, higher education has been forced to operate on a reduction of income of $508,000. The joint legislative ways and means committee, however, has reduced this diversion to $75,000 with good indication that this new schedule will pass. Although the extra $432,000 will aid materially in maintaining many threatened functions of the state system, the continued diversion for the next two years will nonetheless call for stringent economy in the face of increased enrollments and higher prices.

Building Tax-Free

A bill designed to place the University-owned Miner building of Eugene back on the tax rolls has been defeated by the legislature. The $7,000 annual tax on the property will thus be saved for educational purposes, since as state property it remains non-taxable. Arguments against the bill were that the bill was too inclusive and would include many semi-public buildings such as church schools, lodges and grange halls, and that to tax the property would only be taking money out of one pocket of the state and placing it in another, necessitating an eventual transfer back again to educational funds.

Anthropology Museum

Opposition to a bill creating a state museum of anthropology at the University developed unexpectedly recently when fear was expressed on the part of other institutions now owning valuable anthropological collections that their collections might be jeopardized. The matter was soon ironed out by amendment definitely stating that collections now in existence were not included in the measure. Because of the valuable material for such a museum that has been collected by L. S. Cressman, professor of anthropology, and because of the "finds" that have not yet been exhausted, such as the Memaloos islands in the Columbia, it was deemed wise to permanently provide for the safe keeping and display of the Indian relics and other anthropological material relating to prehistoric life in Oregon.

Ulysses Returns

Back from a solitary six-months cruise among the storm-swept islands and inlets of Cape Horn, Oregon's world-roving Ulysses, Amos Burg, ex-'29, has settled down at his home in Portland for a few months of work with material collected during his latest adventure.

The Oregon explorer presented an illustrated talk, which he entitled, "Our Strange World," in Eugene on March 5 and 6. The presentation, which included not only vivid word pictures of his adventures but more than 7000 feet of motion pictures as well, was the same as that planned for National Geographic society appearance in Washington, D. C., in March.

Invaluable data on the three tribes of natives, thousands of feet of cinema film and hundreds of photographs of the brooding land and sea, notes on narrow escapes of his tiny craft, and charts of unknown shores, must all be arranged for use in lectures, articles, and movie reels before Burg can go wandering again.

The former University journalism student left Portland in September 1933, for Buenos Aires, with a special commission from the National Geographic society. On the liner's deck rested his little boat, "The Dorjun," a re-conditioned, shallow-draft coast guard craft, equipped with sail and auxiliary motor.

From Magallanes, southernmost mainland settlement, he and one seaman ventured into the perpetually stormy Straits of Magellan. They

Two of them, William W. (Bill) Knight and Roscoe Krier, celebrated their birthdays on the same day, February 8, spending most of the day in the Hall of Representatives. Their ages are now 25 and 26, and the third, Walter Norblad, is 26.

Senator Dunn, who has a reputation for silence and shunning publicity, has served Jackson county in the state senate continuously since 1923, and had served in the house in 1895 and 1897. He is known as the "common sense senator."

Three Youngest

The new Douglas representative, Knight, was admitted to the bar shortly after his graduation in 1932, and achieved his initial familiarity with public office by serving as junior finance officer and as president of Phi Delta Phi, legal fraternity, while on the campus.

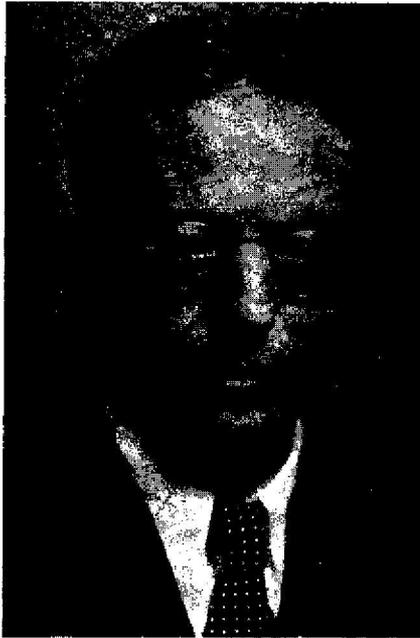

Roscoe Krier, ex-'33, representative fledgling from Wasco county, was delegated to the 1933 prohibition repeal convention a short time after he attended the University law school. He is a member and legal adviser to the Young Democratic League of Oregon.

Although it is less than two years since he was a student, having taken a year of post graduate work at Harvard after graduating from the University law school, Walter Norblad has already served as city attorney for Gearhart, Oregon, and is now associated with his father, former Governor A. W. Norblad, in law practice.

University's List

The roster of University trained state senators includes: Allan A. Bynon, ex-'17, Multnomah county; Ashby C. Dickson, LL.B. '15, Multnomah county; George W. Dunn, '86, M.A. '93, Jackson county; Walter S. Fisher, '13, Douglas county; Henry L. Hess, Union county; Elwin A. McCornack, ex-'08, Lane and Linn counties; Dean H. Walker, '13, Benton and Polk counties.

Representatives who are Oregon alumni include: N. Ray Alber, LL.B. '17, Clackamas and Multnomah counties; Homer D. Angell, '00, Multnomah county; Clinton P. Haight, LL.B. '99, Grant and Harney counties; Dr. Jacob F. Hosch, M.D. '05, Deschutes county; William W. Knight, LL.B. '32, Douglas county; Howard F. La-

Named for Millrace

Globe-trotters from the University of Oregon who wander as far as Kwangsi Province in China will find that they have at least a speaking acquaintance with one of the native-born inhabitants of the district, a three-months old Chinese lad by the name of Eugene Millrace Chau.

King Chau, '33, and Pearl Tse, a Bible student taking some University work, first met on the Oregon campus in 1931. When Mr. Chau was graduated in 1933, they were married and returned to China to live. Friends in Eugene recently received an announcement of the birth, in November, of a seven-pound son whom the Chau's named for the stream adjoining the campus.

Mr. and Mrs. Chau now reside at Nanking in Kwangsi Province, China, where Mr. Chau is employed as chief auditor for the Bureau of Highways of the province.

Long Term

Gen. Milton F. Davis, '88, Superintendent of the New York Military Academy, Cornwall-on-Hudson, and internationally known explorer and educator, recently completed his 25th year at that school.

Retiring from the Army because of disability incurred in active service in 1909, Gen. Davis has devoted his time to service to his school. His honors have been many. He was decorated for bravery and gallantry in action in the Spanish-American war, was appointed governor of El Caney, Cuba, during the yellow fever epidemic in that province in 1898, and is a member of the Lambs club, the Explorers club, and holds several honorary positions and degrees.

Edits Best Weekly

Oregon's best weekly in towns under 1000 in population, the Redmond Spokesman, is edited by Joe Brown, graduate in journalism with the class of '30. The Hal E. Hoss memorial cup was awarded the ex-Oregon Emerald scribe by Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity, at the annual state press conference held on the campus last month.

Several University grads were among the 170 newspapermen in attendance during the conference. The oldest alumnus was Merle R. Chessman, last year's conference president, who graduated in 1909. Ralph R. Cron-

SPEAKERS

Durant Diagnoses

Declaring that America's economic ills are superficial beside the basic problem of racial decline, Will Durant, in a campus address February 14, discussed a four-point program for restoring the nation's vital forces of character and intelligence. In "diagnosing and dosing" his patient, Durant deprecated political efforts that seek only individual security without increasing the nation's resources.

His program dealt with the following points:

1. The greater fecundity of the unmental has brought intellectual decline, and the intelligent, capable portion of the populace must be given an incentive for once more raising large families.

2. Foreign markets have declined, threatening the present economic mechanism. The country must carry out a national program of rigorous training, for the search for markets must bring inevitable war.

3. Immorality of youth has come with the economic obstacles to early marriage, which must be restored to its natural age through return to the dowry and changing the attitude of parents.

4. American democracy nurtures the political machine with a premium on mediocrity rather than leadership. Unintelligence cannot be kept from the polls; rigid requirements for officeholders is the other alternative. Durant recommended a school for governmental training for every university.

Chamberlin On Russia

Russia's gains under Soviet rule have been made at far too great a price in human suffering and loss of human rights, emphasized William Henry Chamberlin during his Gerlinger hall appearance January 17. The noted author and lecturer based his views on 12 years spent in Russia as correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor.

Outlining a "Soviet balance sheet," the speaker listed among credits to that regime an increase in education, industry, military preparedness and recreation, and among debits, which he declared far outweighed the credits, heavy loss of life from famine, forced labor involving some 2,000,000 persons, and the depressive and repressive influence of an unremitting espionage system.

Other persons who have appeared on University platforms recently are: Scott Nearing, economist, sociologist, traveler and lecturer who spoke on "The Economic Significance of the Soviet Union;" Dr. Non-Yong Park, Japanese philosopher and author who spoke on "The Rising Tide of Japanese Imperialism;" William Haluk, Russian-born American, who discussed Russia and Russian propaganda; and Vernon Bartlett, diplomatic correspondent of the London News Chronicle who discussed the possibility of war in Europe.

Other Lectures Planned

Among well-known authorities yet to appear on the lecture platform this year are Frank Lloyd Wright, regarded by many as America's outstanding architect and leader of modernistic construction trends; Grant LaFarge, architect of the older school and designer of cathedrals, hospitals and memorials, and Glenn Frank, Wisconsin university president, former editor of the Century Magazine and noted as a liberal educator.

Beer Sale Permitted

University officials will not enter into the matter of a campus "dry zone," either through recommendation or disapproval of retail beer licenses around the campus, it has been declared by Dr. C. V. Boyer, president.

The Eugene city council recently voted out a proposed zone about the campus which would have restricted beer sales.

Dr. Boyer said that if the retail beer establishments in the university district were operated in an orderly manner and the proprietors exercised due care in conduct of their business, he saw no reason for interference.

Grade Points Revised

Grade point averages for the Oregon state system of higher education will be determined on a revised scale, starting with next fall term. The change is defined by Dean James H. Gilbert, chairman of the scholarship committee, as merely an arithmetic device for simplifying grade computing, and will not alter grade distribution.

The revised method is in use in about half of the universities and colleges of the country, and in no way affects the scholastic standing of the University.

The essential difference between the two scales is the raising by one point of the points for each grade in the new system. The grade of F, for failure, will no longer suffer the subtraction on one point, but will be given no points; D will be given one point, C two points, B three points, and A four points. Honor roll requirements will be raised to 3.5 instead of the present 2.5.

Harada To Lecture

Oregon will become the center of Japanese art and Oriental culture for the entire country with the arrival of Jiro Harada, commissioner of the Imperial Household museum in Tokio, who will lecture and conduct classes on the University campus during next fall and winter terms. The eminent authority on Japanese art will come under the sponsorship of the Society for International Cultural Relations of Japan.

Regarded as one of the greatest honors ever conferred upon the University, the selection was made following consideration of 30 institutions of higher learning in all parts of the world, six of them in the United States. Only three were assigned experts, and Oregon was the sole choice in the United States.

Competing with Oregon were Yale, Harvard, Southern California, California, and others in this country. The University of Oregon was finally named because of the nationally known Murray Warner museum of Oriental art, and because of the school's unusual record of interest in Oriental affairs during past years. Preliminary arrangements for the projects were made in Tokio by Burt Brown Barker, University vice-president, who returned two months ago from Japan.

Mr. Harada was the Imperial government commissioner to the Panama-Pacific International exposition in San Francisco in 1915. For eight years he served on the faculty of the National College of Nagoya, and since 1925 has had charge of the Imperial Household museum, where the rarest art treasures of the Japanese empire are cherished. Among his writings are six articles on Japanese art in the fourteenth edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

In addition to varied lectures, Mr. Harada will teach a two hour class each term. His lectures will cover Japanese art from a period prior to the introduction of Buddhism in 552 A.D. to the present. He will speak on Oriental archaeology, treasures in the Imperial Repository, Japanese painting and sculpture, and other arts developed in his country.

Infirmary Step Closer

Practical assurance that the University will have a new infirmary building was given when Governor Martin recently signed H. B. 239 appropriating $50,000 to be matched by a $50,000 PWA loan and grant. A similar bill had been passed several years ago making the appropriation, to be matched by private subscription. H. B. 239 was merely a rewording of the bill providing for the PWA loan instead of the private subscription stipulation. The loan, however, has not as yet gone through the necessary channels at Washington, D.C., although University officials confidently expect the loan and grant to be made within a short time.

In the meantime University architects are pondering the problem as just where to locate the new building providing the project goes through. The recent shifting of plans for future buildings on the campus, involving the change in location of a proposed auditorium, leaves the probable location on University street near Fourteenth street.

The new infirmary will fulfill a long-felt need for adequate provision for the health of students. The needs of the campus have long ago outgrown the cramped remodeled house on Onyx street. The new structure will be modern in every detail and provide adequate space and equipment for the infirmary and health unit of the University. The infirmary is a project that has long been a prime objective of the Oregon Mothers organization.

Library Plans Progress

The new University library, recently approved as a PWA project, moved a step nearer to actual construction at the March meeting of the state board of higher education when the formal grant and loan agreement with the government was approved and signed.

All that remains now is for the architects to complete the detailed plans for the building and the letting of contracts. Estimates indicate that ground will probably be broken within 60 days. Should approval of the infirmary project be made soon, it is probable that construction on the two projects will commence at about the same time.

Although definite plans have not yet been laid, it is understood that the "Old Libe" will be used by the law school, and that greater departmentalization of academic divisions of the University will result from the added space afforded by the law school's vacancy of Oregon hall.

IMPROVEMENTS

Outdoor Theatre

Symphonies and dramas in the open air will be made possible on the campus with the completion of an outdoor theater near the music auditorium. Lawns, shrubs and trees will enhance the setting for the theater which is planned to seat about 500 people, stated Frederick A. Cuthbert, University landscape architect, who is in charge of plans.

The location selected for the entertainment project lies just southeast of the music building, and is bordered on the east by the orchard and cemetery and on the south by lawns which will be seeded next fall. The theater will slope gently from rear to front, with a stage comprised of a lawn raised two feet above the audience, banked with shrubs and backed by the building wall as a sound board. Trees and shrubs will be planted to border the space.

Construction, which was started in November, is being carried out under the SERA.

Landscaping Plans

A comprehensive plan for campus landscaping is for the first time being gradually developed, under Professor Cuthbert's direction. Though no drastic changes are being contemplated, real designing in relation to campus architecture for future improvements of its decorative greenery has been made possible through his office.

Some improvements have been made during the present year. Condon hall's surroundings have been beautified with a rare species of yew, two cedars and several rhododendrons. Plantings have been made about the east and south entrances of Johnson hall, and about the sun dial nearby. Further changes will be made around the old library, Friendly hall, and in the Art court. Plants which are being moved from around the Murray Warner art museum, will be distributed during the spring months.

Commonwealth Conference

Three state-wide groups will gather on the Oregon campus March 25, 26 and 27 for their annual meetings as a part of the annual Oregon commonwealth conference, it has been announced by Dr. P. A. Parsons, head of the sociology department and general chairman.

Organizations which will participate in the conference include the League of Oregon Cities, state planning council and the secretaries and managers of chambers of commerce. In addition to these sessions two others, one on government and the other on recreation, will be held.

Approximately 500 people from all parts of the state are expected to be present. Several outstanding speakers have already been engaged for the event, including Governor Martin; E. S. Draper, assistant to the director of the Tennessee valley authority; V. B. Stansberry, secretary of the Oregon state planning board; Major R. F. Bessey, regional consultant for the northwest regional planning commission; Marshall N. Dana, head of the commission, and many others.

Students' Who's Who

The 1934-35 edition of "Who's Who of American Students," a national publication soon to be issued, will contain the names of 16 University of Oregon students, eight of whom are from Portland. Selection, made by a faculty and student committee, was based on leadership, character and service to the institution.

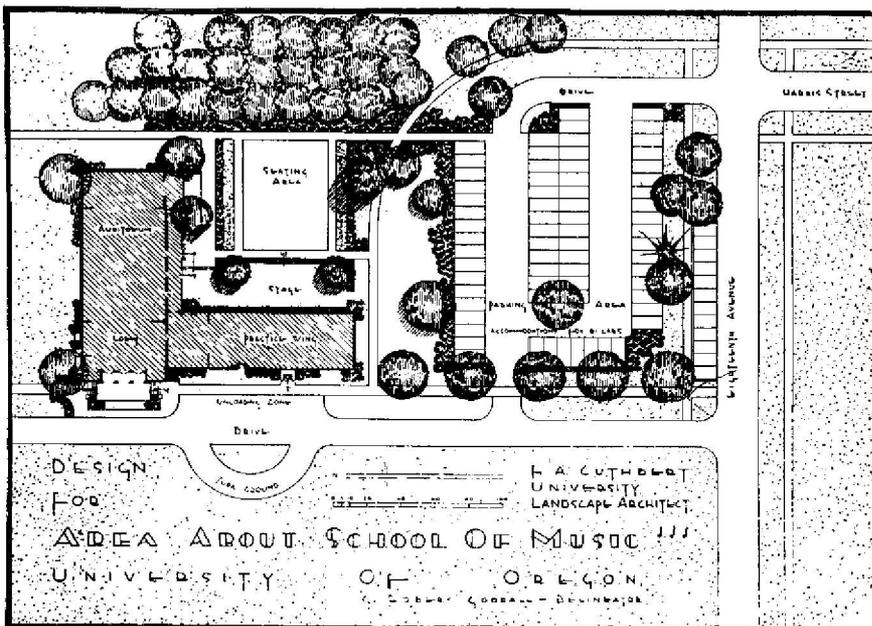

The list includes Nancy Archbold, Marygolde Hardison, Henriette Horak, Cosgrove LaBarre, Edmond A. Labbe, Robert Parke, William Russell, and Grant Thuemmel, of Portland, and Malcolm Bauer, Pendleton; Elizabeth Bendstrup, Astoria; Frances Brockman, Catherine Coleman, Roberta Moody, Joseph Renner, all of Eugene; William Phipps, Medford, and Josephine Waffle, Astoria.

Three Famed Artists

Three outstanding musical artists, Josef Hofmann, Jascha Heifetz, and Roland Hayes have appeared thus far on the A. S. U. O. concert series for winter term.

"The greatest pianist of our time" was a term echoed by those hearing Hofmann on February 10 in McArthur court. The Polish-born virtuoso displayed tapestries of tone and harmony so rich and colorful and a technical mastery so complete that his listeners refused to let him go with less than four encores.

The famed negro tenor, Roland Hayes, enjoyed a triumphant return engagement, February 28, occasioned by his unusual popularity in his appearance last year. His marvelous interpretation was not limited to the negro spirituals, which he has lifted to the level of the finest art-songs of the old world, but included a series of compositions of European composers. He displayed a definite quality of revelation.

In spite of cold, icy weather more than 3000 music lovers turned out for the presentation of Heifetz, January 19. The Russian-born and trained violinist displayed all of the technical skill which has won him unexcelled ranking in that field, and added a matured, mellowed interpretation of his short but difficult program.

Patrons of music were present for the three concerts from points as far away from Eugene as Portland, Medford and Bend, giving the University at least second place among the state's centers for fine musical attractions.

New Doctor Arrives

Dr. Meredith Hesdorffer, former member of the staff of the health service of the University of Minnesota, has accepted the position of assistant physician on the health service of the University of Oregon. He succeeds Dr. Sante D. Caniparoli, who has accepted a place on the staff of the Multnomah county hospital.

At Minnesota Dr. Hesdorffer had charge of periodic examinations of students for the past four years. Before joining the staff there he spent two years at the Minnesota general hospital, and before that a year at the University of Chicago clinic. Dr. Hesdorffer has taken an active part in medical research, and has contributed numerous articles to medical and other journals.

"Religion and Learning" is the general subject for a series of five lectures being given on the campus during winter term by recognized authorities in related fields. Dr. P. A. Hudson Ballard, newly appointed pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Portland, have spoken on the series. Talks are yet to be given by Dr. Olof Larsell, head of the anatomy department of the University's medical school, and Dr. Elam J. Anderson, president of Linfield college.

"Pioneer Mother" Praised

Regarded as one of the finest statues in American sculpture, Oregon's "Pioneer Mother" was given recent recogniton by "The International Blue Printer." An excellent half-page photograph of the campus figure appeared among its pages.

A descriptive caption points out: "Statue of the 'Pioneer Mother,' on the Woman's Quad of the University of Oregon at Eugene. This statue was the gift of Burt Brown Barker, vice-president of the University, a son of early pioneers, in memory of his own and other pioneer mothers. It is the work of A. Phimister Proctor of New York City."

Methods Clinic

Another new venture in the field of education on the campus, was the inauguration of a methods of study clinic, under the direction of Ralph W. Leighton, executive secretary of research.

The main purpose of this clinic, and the fundamental idea for which it was founded, is to better fit the student into academic situations, and to enable him to gain the maximum profit from them.

Associated with Mr. Leighton in the work of the methods of study clinic are B. W. DeBusk, professor of education, H. R. Taylor, professor of psychology, L. K. Shumaker, supervisor of the English bureau, and H. R. Crosland, associate professor of psychology.

The clinic will aim to aid students who find difficulty in getting the most out of their studies—those who have been hampered by the inability to organize and prepare material given in regular course work, those who have had English and pronunciation difficulties, those who are not able to concentrate on the subject at hand, and deal with the hundred and one other problems which students encounter in lesson preparations.

Angell to Collaborate

An invitation to collaborate on a literary work to be known as "Matthew Arnold's Relation to French Thought and Culture" has been received by Joseph W. Angell, M.A. '34, teaching fellow in the English department, from Dr. Howard Foster Lowry, of Wooster college, Ohio.

Dr. Lowry is recognized as the leading authority on Matthew Arnold, and his invitation to Mr. Angell is a mark of recognition of the Oregon man's research work in this field of literary research.

When completed, the volume upon which Mr. Angell will collaborate with Dr. Lowry will be published by the Oxford University press, of which Dr. Lowry is director.

Mr. Angell has been on the teaching staff of the University since 1932. He attended Albany college, College of Wooster and the University of California before coming here. He also traveled and studied in Europe in 1931-32.

Awarded Fellowship

A fellowship at Phipps Institute at the University of Pennsylvania, where she will study advanced methods in control of tuberculosis, has been awarded to Dr. Marian G. Hayes, '25, M. D. '30, assistant physician at the University of Oregon, it was announced recently by Dr. Fred N. Miller, director of the health service.

The appointment, which will be for six months starting in March, is regarded not only as a high honor for Dr. Hayes, but a recognition of the tuberculosis control program of the University, a project that recently received wide attention and was hailed by many medical men and educators as the best in the entire west.

BASKETBALL

Exciting Finish

Writing an exciting finish to the 1935 chapter of Oregon basketball, Bill Reinhart's erratic squad of basketeers walked off McArthur court the evening of March 3 with a one-point victory chalked up against Oregon State, northern division champions.

Though the Webfoots' victory had no bearing on the relative positions of the northwest teams in the conference race, they nevertheless played an important part prior to the last game, having denied Washington even a chance at tying with the Beavers by a surprise win early in the week. After performing this neighborly deed of dropping the championship securely in the thankful Beaver's lap, Oregon proceeded to exhibit its belatedly discovered ability in a madhouse, hectic game against their previous beneficiaries, winning 29 to 28. A tie score at 21-21 late in the second half set off the fireworks that resulted in 35 personal fouls being called and four men forced thusly to leave the game.

Jinx Overcome

The final two-game series against Washington, played the previous Monday and Tuesday, in reality had much more significance than did the O.S.C. game, other than the satisfaction of beating the ancient rivals from Corvallis, newly-crowned champions. For it was the 35 to 30 win over Washington that had given the championship to Oregon State. But even more than that, it was Oregon's third win over the Huskies in the last 28 games played during the last eight years. It was the overcoming of a less-publicized but equally as potent a jinx as that which had up to last year been a bugaboo to the football team from Seattle. The first game of the two-game series served only to make the defeat on the second night more remarkable and more thrilling. In that game the Huskies easily beat the Oregon men, 39 to 27.

Webfoots in Third Place

Thus the Webfoots wound up in third place, with seven victories and nine defeats, as compared to second place, with just the opposite number of wins and losses, last year. They had the satisfaction, however, of taking at least one game from each of their conference opponents and of seeing Willard Jones, lanky center, win all-star

CAPTAIN BILL BERG

Who headed Oregon's 1935 basketeers through the grueling season just completed. Although Oregon got off to a slow start, they wound up the season by defeating Washington, title contenders, and Oregon State, champions, to take third place. Berg is the only regular who will be lost next year through graduation.

honors and place second in the individual scoring race.

Only three members of the 1935 Webfoot squad, none of them regulars, will be missing next December when Billy Reinhart opens drill for the next year's title chase. They are Captain Bill Berg, stalwart forward who was used chiefly in a relief role; Ron Gemmell, forward, who completed his only two seasons of varsity eligibility, and Bob Miller, center and forward who saw but little action due to a broken wrist.

Full Team to Return

The same combination which wound up the season with the victories over Washington and Oregon State will return next year to form the nucleus of the 1936 squad. Roland Rourke, with one season left, and Johnny Lewis, a sophomore this year, are the hold-over forwards. Willie Jones will have one more chance to top the league's scorers and defend his newly-won post of all-star center.

Sam Liebowitz, the temperamental sophomore guard, is expected to play an important role in the Webfoot's 1936 chances. His great passing and "feeding" ability, although erratic, stamped him as one of the most promising sophomores ever to play for Oregon. Glen Sanford and Budd Jones, who alternated as running mate to Liebowitz at guard, both have one season left.

Many Reserves

Other members of this year's squad who will be back for further competition are Bill Harcombe, lanky center, who has two more years of eligibility, and Arnold Faust, diminutive sophomore guard. A number of freshmen stars, among them Dave Silver and Dale Laselle, Portland; Jack Stafford and Ford Danner, Eugene, Lee Canessa, Astoria, and Bill Dick, The Dalles, are counted upon as varsity prospects for the coming year.

Japan Lures Gridders

Five former Oregon football luminaries are members of a squad of 28 former Pacific coast stars now on a two-month barnstorming trip to Japan. Choppy Parke, Oregon backfield ace in 1929-30-31, is co-coach of the squad, which is appearing under the sponsorship of the Asahi, Tokio newspaper.

The Webfoot travelers are Raymond "Butch" Morse, co-captain and all-coast end during the past season; Howard "Dutch" Clark, guard in 1933; Alex Eagle, tackle stalwart of 1934; Ray Neveau, star of the 1929 era; and Choppy Parke. Two players from Oregon State are with the squad — Hal Pangle and Norman "Red" Franklin, Orange backfield stars.

Spring Practice Begins

Another small squad, but with more experienced players on hand and a much improved schedule was in prospect for Oregon football in 1935 as spring practice began on the campus.

About 40 candidates answered Coach Prink Callison's call for the regular spring training season on February 25. Tackles and halfbacks appeared to be his biggest worries.

Varsity destinies for next year however, will be placed in the hands of a small but proficient group of grid luminaries. Center prospects include Ed Farrar and Chandler Berry, varsity players from the past season, and Vernon Moore, 210-pound center from freshman ranks. Herb Olson, a husky 215-pound lad from Scappoose, is another contender.

Four lettermen guards will return: Ross Carter, Andy Hurney, Del Bjork and Clarence Coddling. Ray Nelson, 200-pounder, from Brainerd, Minnesota, and Tony Amato, 210, freshman guards, are regarded as likely reinforcements. Three tackles who will return are George Hallen, Bill Estes and Pat Fury; freshman recruits include Kenyon Skinner, Los Angeles and Chuck Bracher, Pendleton. John Engstrom, former St. Mary's player, will also be eligible.

Five returning ends, Vincent Walker, Stanley Riordan, Ken Smith, Ned Simpson and Budd Jones, will be reinforced by two frosh stars, Melvin Engel, Salem, and Lief Jacobson, from Jefferson in Portland.

The loss of Ralph Terjeson at blocking quarterback will be keenly felt, but Hugh McCredie, this year's understudy, is expected to fill that difficult position capably. Other possibilities for the position include Johnny Reischman, 170-pound handyman last season; Lee Canessa, former Astoria prep star, and Lester Lewis, 195-pound fullback from the yearlings. Returning halfbacks are scarce, including only Walter Back, Ray Lopez, Bill Patrick and Reischman. Two outstanding prospects from the freshman squad are Bud Goodin, 180-pound product of Artois, California, and Dale Lasselle, from Grant high school in Portland.

Frank Michek, line-smashing fullback from Scappoose, will return for his final season, as will his understudy, Dick Bishop. Up from the frosh will be Earl Groninger, 190-pounder and line-bucking star, and Bob Romanini, Glide.

Nine players, eight of them regulars, will be lost through graduation. Butch Morse, all-coast end, and Bob Parke, half-back, co-captains, head the list of departing players. Others who played their final game as Webfoots against Louisiana State university are Con Fury, center; Roy Gagnon, guard; Alex Eagle and Gardner Frye, tackles; Ralph Terjeson, quarterback, and Maury Van Vliet and George Pepelnjak, halfbacks.

TRACK IN THE SNOW

SPORT TABLOIDS

With eleven lettermen back from last year's championship baseball squad, prospects for another championship baseball year are bright on the Oregon campus this spring. Practice started early in February and playing will start after spring vacation on the new Stoddard Field south of McArthur court. The field seats approximately 1,000 persons and is considered one of the best collegiate baseball fields on the coast. Veteran pitchers who will lead the pitching staff this year are: Ron Gemmell, Don McFadden and Cecil Inman.

Earl Thompson, captain of the varsity rifle team finished his four-year career on the squad recently when he fired one of the highest scores ever made in intercollegiate rifle competition. He made perfect scores in the prone, kneeling and sitting positions, while three of his five standing shots were inside the bullseye. As soon as telegraphic returns are complete, it is expected that Thompson will have won the intercollegiate individual scoring title. The rifle squad this year, under Sergeant Harvey Blythe, has made a remarkable record in its telegraphic meets, with ten wins and two losses reported to date.

Bob Parke, Oregon football and track star, was officially declared All-American and All-College javelin champion recently when the report of the secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union was released. Parke's throw of 220 feet 11 5-8 inches in the NCAA meet last season set a new national mark. Although suffering from injuries sustained in football play this fall, he expects to begin preparing to defend his title shortly.

Prospects for the track team this year are somewhat brighter than last year, according to the dopesters. Headed by Bob Wagner, sensational 2-miler, who has only been beaten once in varsity competition, Hayward's squad goes into action April 26 against the O.S.C. relay team. Dual meets with Washington, Washington State and Oregon State are scheduled during the spring term prior to the annual northwest meet.

"No football captain or co-captains for 1935 football team" was the edict of the squad at a recent meeting. Instead of the former practice of having one or two players at the head of the team, Coach Callison and his assistants will name a captain prior to each game.

Oregon football will make its 1935 debut in the northwest on September 28 in Portland against Gonzaga, it was recently announced by the graduate manager's office. Thus the schedule as drawn to date provides for two games in Portland (Gonzaga and California), three in Eugene (Idaho, Utah and O.S.C.) and games with Washington, U.C.L.A. and St. Mary's.

Oregon Natators Win

Although Oregon's swimming luminaries had been successful in breaking three Pacific coast intercollegiate records in practice sessions, they were unable to chalk up an official record in any of these events in their only conference meet of the year. However, the Oregon natators came out on top against the powerful and highly-touted University of Washington team by a score of 51 to 32.

Despite three firsts taken by Washington's national champion, Jack Medica, Coach Mike Hoyman's boys were successful in capturing all other events and the meet.

Jim Reed, coast champion backstroke star, his sophomore brother, Chuck Reed, Wally Hug and Jim Hurd, transfer from the University of Hawaii, lead the attack against the Washington squad. Washington had won four previous meets including W.S.C.

In practice trials this winter Jim Reed clipped a fifth of a second off the Pacific intercollegiate 100-yard free-style record; Hurd lowered the 40-yard free-style dash by four-tenths; Chuck Reed unofficially tied the 200-yard breaststroke record; and the medley relay team, composed of the Reed brothers and Hug clipped five seconds off the existing record time.

Scheduled meets with Oregon State have been cancelled because the sport at that school has been dropped and California was dropped because they could not visit the campus except during spring vacation. However Oregon will participate in several non-conference meets and in the northwest conference meet in Seattle in April.

Two Texts Written

Two volumes, both of them text books, have been added during the month to the list of published works by University faculty-authors. Dr. E. S. Conklin, professor of psychology, who is now at the University of Indiana on a year's leave of absence, is author of "Principles of Adolescent Psychology." Dr. Nelson L. Bossing, professor of education, is writer of a comprehensive volume entitled, "Progressive Methods of Teaching in Secondary Schools."

Dr. Conklin's book is dedicated, "To the students and faculty of the University of Oregon, who were my loyal friends and colleagues for more than twenty years."

Idaho Names Unger

Dr. Hilbert J. Unger, assistant in the physics department last year, has been named instructor in physics at the College of Idaho, in Pocatello. Unger received his master's and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University in 1930 and 1932, after graduating from Reed college. Nationally known for his research activities, especially in the study of infra-red rays, Unger made a brilliant scholastic record while on the campus.

ALL-UNIVERSITY Spring Frolic DANCE

All members of the Alumni Association are cordially invited to attend the big free spring dance during spring vacation. Students and alumni are especially requested to aid the sponsors of the dance (your own Alumni Association and affiliated organizations) by bringing a high school senior as a guest. Oregon's own campus band, "The Ten Commanders" will furnish the music and Oregon songs. A fine program of entertainment has been arranged. This is the first time that students and alumni have played an equal part in a real All-University dance. It is hoped that every alumnus will be there. A charge of 75c will be made for alumni who are not members of the Association.

Dr. John Wolverton Barcroft and Dr. Norman C. Hampton, '14, share a suite of offices in the Broadway Building, Portland. Norman Hampton, Jr. is a junior in pre-meds at the University. His sister, Jean, is a senior in a Portland high school. She plans to enter the University next fall. The Hampton residence is at 3406 East Burnside.

Mary Opal Mattley is manager of the hotel at Woodburn, Oregon. Miss Mattley graduated from the University in 1919 and in 1926 received her M.A. degree from Columbia University.

A son, Kendall, was born, on New Year's day, to Mr. and Mrs. Kuykendall Striker of Route One, Eugene.

Bruce Yergen is assistant cashier of the First National Bank, Portland. He and Mrs. Yergen (Marguerite Whitton, '19) have one daughter, Dorothy, aged four and one-half years. This winter Mr. Yergen taught a night school class of 13 in "Analysis of Financial Statements" at Oregon Institute of Technology.

Ezra L. Boyer, manager of the credit department, Federal Reserve Bank, Portland, is now in Seattle, temporarily, managing the credit department there. He recently returned from a long stay in California, where he was temporarily transferred. His permanent address is Porter Building, Portland.

Raymond R. Staub, M.D. '20, of Portland, secretary of the Oregon state board of aeronautics and chairman of the air base committee of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed regional director of the National Air Frontier Defense Association, according to notification from headquarters of the association in Washington, D. C. Dr. Staub's appointment came as the result of the recommendations of the war department and the military affairs committee of the house of representatives for development of the army air forces of the nation.

Mrs. Naomi Hoskins Preston, ex-'20, and small daughter, Gary, sailed from San Francisco, February 8, for Santiago, Chile, South America. Mrs. Preston has accepted a position with Santiago College on a five year contract. She formerly taught in the Portland high schools.

Carlton R. Savage is the author of a recently published book entitled "The Policy of the United States toward Maritime Commerce in War." Mr. Savage, president of the student body during his senior

—one of five world-famous golf courses within a radius of five miles from Hotel Del Monte.

THE SEVENTH AT PEBBLE BEACH

Set down among the pine and cypress of Del Monte, her sunny fairways a mashie shot from the Pacific, Pebble Beach is known wherever golfers gather as the ace of courses. From the moment you take your practice swing on the first tee until you hole out on the eighteenth, you are in rare form—playing a champion's game on a champion's course.

Del Monte lies between San Francisco and Los Angeles, a 20,000 acre estate on historic Monterey Peninsula. Here, for more than fifty years, champions in every sport have come, played and never forgotten about it. Some remember a fast chukker of polo. Others think of tennis, or swimming, or trap shooting, or hunting, or the time they rode a horse for miles and miles in real horse-riding country. But all of them will tell you, if you ask them, "Some day, I am going back again."

If you are visiting California, the Orient, or Hawaii this year, plan to include Del Monte in your trip. It is only three hours from San Francisco; seven from Los Angeles.

Two people can live in a sunny, outside room with bath at Hotel Del Monte (with all meals included) for as little as $7.00 each a day. At Del Monte Lodge on the famous Pebble Beach links, the rates start at $3.50 a day European Plan. For further information and literature, address Carl S. Stanley, Manager, Hotel Del Monte, Del Monte, California.
