A TRIBUTE TO DR. HALL

By The Editor

NO man, unless it was Prince Lucien Campbell, ever made a greater personal sacrifice for the University than did Arnold Bennett Hall. In both these men was to be found that high quality of devotion to a cause—a cause made lofty and purposeful by the strong idealism that was so integral a part of it—that so truly marks a great man.

For Arnold Bennett Hall was a great man, and the institution that shall forever reflect at least a part of his contribution to society is a greater institution by far than had fate never brought him to the campus and allowed his dynamic enthusiasm and unflinching idealism to steer the institution's course for six years and chart its general course for many more years yet to come.

Word of Dr. Hall's death brought to the campus not only the sorrow that attends the death of a great man and a true friend, it brought likewise a sorrow that somehow seemed similar to that which attends the death of a martyr. For in many respects, Dr. Hall was the martyr from whose sacrifices and from whose vision for higher education in Oregon, there now slowly is emerging a new and greater conception of education's responsibilities to the commonwealth.

PERHAPS it was his restless enthusiasm and uncompromising devotion to the only course that his idealism and conscience would allow that eventually took Dr. Hall from the active leadership of the institution. But that was typical of Arnold Bennett Hall, and though his active usefulness to the progress of higher education in Oregon was probably shortened thereby, his contribution was, for that very reason, the greater.

Dr. Hall came to the University at a trying time indeed. He found the working parts of a potentially great institution sadly out of gear—the result of a long period that had lacked leadership and direction. He found the people of the state that supported this institution restless and critical of the delay that this

DR. HALL DIES

Arnold Bennett Hall, for six years president of the University of Oregon, died at his home in Washington, D. C. on June 1, at approximately the same hour as the members of the class of 1936, the last freshman class he was ever to greet as president of the University, were receiving their diplomas at the University's fifty-ninth Commencement exercises.

Dr. Hall was fifty-five years old, and was a director of the Brookings Institute for Governmental Research—a position he assumed following his resignation from the University in 1932. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Grace Carney Hall, and a daughter, Grace Elizabeth Hall. He was buried at Franklin, Indiana, his birthplace, on June 4.

Dr. Hall obtained his A.B. degree at Franklin College in 1904, working his way through college. He received the Doctor of Jurisprudence degree cum laude from the University of Chicago in 1907.

He became an assistant instructor in political science and international law at the University of Chicago in 1907, an instructor at Northwestern in 1909 and went to the University of Wisconsin in 1910. He left in 1926 to become president of the University of Oregon.

He was a founder of the National Conference on the Science of Politics, and for three years served as its president. He played an important part in the organization of the Social Science Research Council, designed to promote a better integration of research among the various fields of social science.

Dr. Hall was the author of many books, including "The Outline of International Law," "The Monroe Doctrine," "Dynamic Americanism" and "Popular Government." He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity and Phi Delta Theta.

period had brought about in the institution's ability to keep pace with changing conditions and conceptions in the world at large as well as in the realm of education. He found, too, what some have termed "the Oregon temperament" of conservatism and caution to which he found it difficult to adjust his own impatience for decision and action.

But Dr. Hall plunged into this discouraging state of affairs and with unbounded confidence that it could be righted, that new and higher objectives could be established and with full belief in the future. He encountered many setbacks, for his enthusiasm sometimes carried him too far in the lead of those who followed. He made enemies, for he could not bring himself to compromise. And he met discouragement because of all this—and yet he continued with typical vigor and confidence toward the goal he had set.

THERE is little need further to chronicle for Oregon alumni the career of Arnold Bennett Hall as president of the University of Oregon. The new and greater institution stands as a monument to his devotion and endeavors—perhaps not so much a monument of brick buildings and expansive campus as a more lasting, human monument builded of educational values and lofty social purposes. And Dr. Hall would have it so. For Dr. Hall was a firm believer in human values and the part that education can play in the enrichment of life and culture.

The tragic end of Dr. Hall's active service to the University was in a way a tribute to the magnanimity of the man. Circumstances beyond his control—circumstances that new conditions and new conceptions imposed on educational progress, and which in his own conscience held no place for him—brought to an end the noble chapter in University history that belongs to him.

EVEN to the time of his death, Dr. Hall continued an uncompromising interest in and devotion to the University and the state it serves. Many were the warm friendships in Oregon that he maintained though several thousand miles removed. He was a man loved for his human qualities, and a man honored and respected to a degree few men attain, for his high qualities of leadership, his devotion to a high cause and his keen sense of social responsibility.

The University today is a richer institution by far because of Dr. Hall—and richer in those very qualities of human values for which he labored so ardently, so faithfully, and now—it can be seen more clearly than ever—so well.

COMMENCEMENT

467 Get Degrees

With a stirring plea for the preservation of liberty through an enlightened use of its opportunities rather than through an abuse of those opportunities still ringing in their ears from the Commencement address of J. Duncan Spaeth, four hundred and sixty-seven students were awarded various degrees and bid god speed by their alma mater at the fifty-ninth annual commencement exercises held in McArthur Court June 1.

Dr. Spaeth, noted professor of English literature and president-elect of Kansas City University, took as his topic for the address, "Training for Freedom."

"The end of all training is freedom," the educator told the graduates. "The trained athlete is free to use his body and command it to serve his will. The trained scholar is free to use his mind and command it to serve him in the pursuit of truth. If you use your physical strength and skill to trample those weaker than you, social control will devise restraint to limit your freedom. But if you use your power as a life-guard and a life-saver, society will say to you, 'More power to your arms.'

"Similarly, if you use your power of mind and special skills, vocational or professional, to prey on the community and enrich yourself at the expense of the commonweal, you will be restrained and your liberty of action abridged by law.

"But if you use your brains to make this a better world for yourself and your fellow men to live in, you will not only be free to pursue your own way but you will be given the freedom to translate your ideals into public policy. Power joined to good will is freedom. Happy those whose university training has fitted them to travel this road to freedom!"

Spaeth, Harada Honored

At an impressive ceremony, the hood denoting the degree of doctor of laws, the highest that can be conferred, was placed upon Dr. Spaeth's shoulders by Dr. C. Valentine Boyer, president of the University of Oregon. The degree was given him "in recognition of his ripe scholarship in the field of letters, his vitalizing influence upon students of American literature and life, and his vigorous championship of the fundamental ideals of American democracy."

At the same time the honorary degree of doctor of letters was conferred upon Jiro Harada, of the Imperial Museum, Tokyo, Japan, noted art authority who has served as visiting professor here for this year. His citation was "in recognition of his profound knowledge of Oriental art and civilization, his consummate skill in interpreting the culture of the East to the people of America, and his broad understanding of humanity and the vital significance of a world outlook."

A charge to the graduates by President Boyer and a parting word presented at the close of the exercises appears elsewhere in this issue.

O'Hara Is Speaker

At the Baccalaureate exercises held Sunday, May 31, Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara of Great Falls, Montana, spoke to the graduates. "You are expected to manifest in every personal relation the attributes of a cultivated mind and heart," he charged. His topic was "The More Excellent Way" and was a ringing appeal for the preservation of the monogamic family as the foundation of Christian civilization.

"Today the defense of the family is the rallying point for the forces that would defend our traditional culture," he declared. "It is the chief sin of Capitalism that it has struck at the family by destroying the economic security of the home. Communism stands ready to snatch the same incendiary torch and complete the destruction of this great institution.

"Do not be confused by side issues. The central issue of our time is the maintenance economically, socially, culturally, philosophically, religiously of the monogamic family, for it is the school of character and virtue, the shelter of childhood, the citadel of women's characteristic qualities, the noblest responsibility of man."

Love of country in its broadest sense was stressed by Bishop

O'Hara. "Part of the tradition of wisdom is love of country, which is patriotism," he said. "The educated man is at home among all people. He is not capable of narrow or racial prejudices, for he knows mankind is all one kin. He will not be guilty of stupid assumption of superiority because of racial or national background. Consequently he will be devoted to international peace and concord."

Saturday, May 30, was designated alumni day, with especial emphasis being placed on the reunion celebrations of six classes—1886, 1896, 1906, 1911, 1916 and 1926. Largest of these reunions was staged by the class of 1911, which celebrated its silver anniversary with a record and enthusiastic turnout.

Classes Hold Reunions

Events of the day included the annual meeting and breakfast of the State Association of University of Oregon Women held on Saturday morning. Miss Lenore Casford was chosen to head the group for the coming year. Other officers chosen were: Mrs. Gordon B. Fish, first vice-president; Miss Jeannette Calkins, second vice-president; Mrs. Walter Banks, secretary; Mrs. J. O. Holt, treasurer; and Mrs. Frank L. Chambers, Miss Elma Hendricks, Mrs. Ella T. Edmunson and Mrs. R. S. Bryson, trustees.

At the semi-annual meeting of the alumni association held later in the morning at Guild hall, the group went on record as favoring the addition of a field secretary to the staff of the alumni office, if means could be found. It was the consensus of opinion that only through constant and personal contact with alumni throughout the state can an active association be maintained. The executive committee of the association will study the problem at its next meeting, it was announced. President C. V. Boyer extended the greeting of the University to the returning alumni and other routine matters were presented and acted upon.

Hunter Is Luncheon Speaker

Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter was principal speaker at the annual University luncheon, given in honor of the returning graduates and the senior class. Dr. Hunter stressed the economic and cultural benefits of education to the commonwealth and held that in education is to be found the hope of continued democratic civilization. It was Dr. Hunter's first

Alumni Editors Honored

Alumni in the journalistic profession in Oregon have indirectly brought honor to the school from which they received their training through the recent awarding of several prizes for outstanding work in various fields of journalistic endeavor.

Most important of such awards was announced recently by the National Editorial Association to the Astorian Budget, published and edited by Merle R. Chessman, '09, immediate past president of the Alumni Association and also of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association. Chessman's paper was awarded the national trophy for dailies making the greatest contribution through the news and editorial columns to community development. This award ranks closely in importance to the Pulitzer prize. Chessman was awarded the state trophy in the same class of competition.

Another national prize was awarded to the Grants Pass Courier, edited by Earle Voorhies, '23, in the special edition classification.

In the state contests, Earle Richardson, '20, publisher of the Polk County Itemizer-Observer at Dallas won the award for outstanding community service by a weekly paper. Other winners were: Cynthia Liljeqvist, '35, outstanding women's page in a weekly newspaper, the McMinnville Telephone-Register; Ianthe

Smith, ex-'24, outstanding women's page in a daily newspaper, the Albany Democrat-Herald; and Giles French, ex-'21, editor of the Moro County Journal and Willard Arant, '33, editor of the Grants Pass Bulletin, were second and third respectively in the contest for best editorial pages.

¶ Raymond C. Hendrickson, '35, a graduate student in Physical Education, is one of 27 American students who was selected to attend the Olympic games in Berlin this summer as guests of Germany. Hendrickson has been teaching Physical Education at the University High School the past year. The party will include Henry M. Foster, '25, now professor of Physical Education at Washington State College.

Walter E. Holman, ex-'24, Portland, was elected president of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce at the national convention of the organization held in Memphis, Tennessee, early in June. Holman assisted in organizing the Portland unit of the organization and has served in various official capacities since that time. Mr. Holman was last year named Portland's No. 1 Junior citizen for 1935.

Leonebel Jacobs Is Hostess

One of the most interesting Oregon alumni gatherings ever to be held in New York City was an event of May 26 at the famous studio apartment of Leonebel Jacobs, '07, internationally famed portrait painter. Thirty-four University graduates attended the affair, which was arranged by John MacGregor, '23, chairman of the New York alumni group.

Mrs. Jacobs, aside from being one of the foremost portrait painters of her time, is noted for the delightful parties she gives to distinguished guests from the world of arts and letters in her well known apartment No. 1 West 67th Street. Mrs. Jacobs has painted portraits of Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Nicholas Roosevelt, Andrew Mellon, Dr. Francis Carter Wood, Gutzon Borglum, Rabindranath Tagore, Sir John Lavery, Sir Lenthal Cheatele and the latest Emperor of China. Her apartment, one of the most famous in the Bohemian district in New York, has silver walls, many balconies and a grand entrance with special wrought iron doors.

to the gathering was the fact that Karl W. Onthank, '13, Dean of Personnel, was in New York at the time and attended the party. Others attending were: Mrs. Ruth Duniway Kerby, '10, Philip Kerby, Dorothy H. Downard, ex-'17, Mary Evans, '22, Judge Walter H. Evans, LL.B. '05, Dr. and Mrs. Harold S. Tuttle, Dr. Laura Hall Kennon, '11, Arthur C. Babson, '31, Francis E. Taylor, ex-'26, Mrs. Margaret Holbrook Bergh, ex-'30, Philip T. Bergh, ex-'27, Con E. Art League Plans Gallery

Erection of a work shop and gallery at Southwest Corbett and Thomas streets, Portland, is planned by the University Alumni Art League next fall. The lot for the contemplated building has been donated by the city and proceeds from various fund raising activities are being saved toward the eventual construction of the building. Plans have already been drawn.

Paintings, sculptures, prints, sketches, pottery and handicraft items were placed on sale May 28 in the patio of the architecture and allied arts building, and the proceeds will be added to the building fund.

The workshop will contain a ceramics studio with a kiln for firing terra cotta. The gallery will be used for display and sale of work by University alumni. It is planned that as additions to the original structure are made possible, that other artists will be permitted use of the facilities of the building and that eventually it will become the art center of Portland.

FACULTY

Williams Honored

The Sigma Xi scroll for 1936, awarded annually to the leading scientist in Oregon, was awarded to Dr. Roger John Williams, professor of chemistry at Oregon State College, and formerly of the University faculty.

Dr. Williams announced the discovery of "pantothenic acid" this year, a substance distributed in living organisms and believed to be associated with cellular growth. The discovery has been hailed as one of the most important in recent years, and the Rockefeller foundation has allotted Dr. Williams $20,000 for further investigation and research.

¶ Capt. E. W. Kelley, assistant professor of military science, was relieved of his duties on the campus on July 1 by Major A. P. Morris, who was formerly stationed at Ft. Huachuca, Arizona. Captain Kelley has been on the University R.O.T.C. staff for the past five years. He has received no orders yet as to where he will be stationed next.

¶ John M. Rae, professor of business administration at the University between 1928 and 1934, has been named division chief of the census of business of the United States bureau of census. Mr. Rae was transferred to the new position from the securities and exchange commission in Washington, D. C.

¶ Frederic S. Dunn, head of the department of Latin at the University, presided over the annual meeting of the American Classical League, held in Portland recently in connection with the convention of the National Education Association.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

To Class of 1936

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is Dr. C. V. Boyer's charge to the Class of 1936, read at the commencement exercises at McArthur court on June 1. Many requests to have it published have been received, and Old Oregon gladly devotes this space in answer to these requests.

TO the members of the senior class who are today leaving the University, I beg leave to say a parting word. It has been customary in the past to speak of time spent in the University as a preparation for the world, as though university life and post-university life were entirely distinct experiences. They never have been entirely distinct and they are less sharply marked off from each other today than formerly. Many of you here have had to work just as hard to earn a living while in college as you will work after graduation. You have had to meet many of the same problems of adjustment, of application to imposed tasks, of the use of time, of the choice of values, of the exercise of judgment.

Nevertheless, there is a distinction. The football team, during practice, goes through the same motions and works just as hard as during a game. The game, however, is what the players are preparing for and is the occasion which calls forth judgment of their performance. So your university career supplies you with the knowledge and the training necessary in the competitive undertaking of making a living and rising to power and distinction. One may win or not win in competitive sports and competitive grades in college. But there is this difference to be reckoned with between your performance while you are still young and your performance when you become older. While you are young, either in college or just out, excuses will be made by your companions and your elders for failure to come up to expectation; your early performance will be judged leniently for the sole reason that you are young and not yet fully proved. There will still be expectations. But as you grow older, judgments will grow harsher and settle into convictions. If you and those whom you seek to impress regard competitive success as the goal of life, you will be cruelly judged if you do not surpass the Joneses, and you will know the bitter pangs of neglect and contempt. You will be depressed by inferiority-feeling, and be tempted to sacrifice every other value to competitive success.

BUT there are other than competitive values in life, and these other values are what I wish to stress at this moment. The grades which you received when you took your examinations may have been competitive; but the illumination of your mind as the result of your reading and experiments was not competitive. The knowledge which you gained of human and non-human nature from your studies was not competitive. Your present vision of the world as seen in the light of truth is not competitive. Your knowledge, your judgment, your taste are your own. They may be spread and shared, if you choose, without taking anything from you, and your enlightenment has robbed no one of anything desirable. You have been participants, on this farewell day to your Alma Mater, in a ceremony clothed with beauty and fraught with high seriousness. But the creation of this beauty has defeated no one; your participation in it has deprived the creators of nothing; on the contrary, in proportion as your appreciation has been actual, the satisfaction of the creators has been enhanced.

The non-competitive values are knowledge, beauty, and love. They are the creative forces of the world; they are the durable satisfactions of life. A life ungoverned by love of knowledge, love of beauty, or love of humanity is a dwarfed life, a sordid life, a life lived in darkness. It is through the pursuit of these values that man grows, develops to his proper proportions, becomes what a human being should become. It is through his non-competitive ideals that he ceases to be a mechanism and becomes a creator; that he rises above his animal heritage and manifests what there is in him of the godlike.

MAN'S desire for fame, for power, for comfort, for possessions is as real as his desire to create, to know, to love. This is so obvious that perhaps I should reverse the statement and say that the desire for God is as real as the desire for the world, that the desire to become is as human as the desire to get. Being human, we are driven to seek the fulfillment of desire, and there are happy periods when we are able to fulfill our desires harmoniously without sacrificing one value to another. But all too frequently we have to choose, and the sacrifice of any value, the failure to realize any desire, is painful.

It is of the moments of choice that I speak. You, young men and women, have been given an opportunity to acquire those skills which give you an advantage over the less fortunate in the business of earning a living and in the selection of a career. You have also had the opportunity through your study of science and history and literature to see the drama of life unfold itself; your vision has widened and deepened; you know something of the heritage of the human race, of its aspirations and its defeats, of its possibilities and its limitations. You know the weaknesses of men and their strengths. You know of what courage they are capable and of what cowardice. You have had a rare opportunity of coming to a rational conclusion as to the fundamental values, the durable satisfactions of life. You have formed ideals; you know something of human worth. It is the hope of those who have devoted their lives to the cause of education, it is the hope of those who have supported the institutions of higher learning in this state, that you will give a worthy account of yourselves and justify their faith in education. It is their hope that when you have to choose between values, you will choose those that elevate and unite mankind. May you always keep before you the ideal of becoming. There will be crises in your life when you will have to choose between popularity and self-respect. There will be times when the temptation will be very great to win the applause of the multitude but when to do so will mean the subordinating of your own opinion of what is true and fine to the opinion of mediocre minds. Mediocrity is never capable of fine distinctions; its judgments are based on gross appearances and obvious externals. Not infrequently you will have an opportunity to make a reputation by display, but if display is abhorrent to you, you will have won your reputation at the cost of your self-esteem. You may suffer from evil tongues, but a greater evil is to sink to the level of your detractors. There are two kinds of adversity: one is growing little in the eyes of the public; the other is shrinking in your own eyes. Remember, when you make your decision, that the loss of public favor is bearable but self-contempt is a living death. Cherish your integrity. I wish that you may be able to harmonize your values and lead a life of such happiness as is granted to human kind. But I trust also that when you are making critical decisions that affect your personality you will not forget the vision of man at his best, of a human being as he might become, worthy of love, admiration, and respect, which is true greatness, whether the worth is recognized or not. May you never cease to grow in knowledge, may you ever be considerate of your fellow man, may you be "full of grace and truth."

Goodwill Gift

A beautiful carved wood statue, decorated in gold, has been added to the valuable Oriental collection of the Murray Warner Museum of Art. The statue is a gift of the Society for International Cultural Relations of Japan and has been given to the University to commemorate the stay on the campus of Jiro Harada, visiting professor of Japanese art and culture, who was sent to the campus by the society which now has donated this statue.

The statue is of the standing figure of Sho-Kwannon, commonly known as the Deity of Mercy. It is carved in hinoki wood and decorated in gold and stands 34 inches high, while the image itself is 24 inches high. Parts of the statue date back to the 14th or 15th century, according to Dr. Harada who assisted in unpacking and placing the piece in the museum.

The image stands on a lotus pedestal, which Dr. Harada says shows the best workmanship of the ensemble. Each petal is carved in wood, covered with gold leaf, and then further decorated with cut-gold, a process that involves narrow strips of gold-leaf cut with sharp bamboo knife and applied to the gold base with lacquer. This section probably dates from the 15th or 16th century, while the rest of the pedestal is from the 17th or 18th century.

The letter of presentation which accompanied the priceless gift of art came from Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the Kokusai Bunka Shinkokai, the Japanese name for the society that made the gift. The great care taken by the society in selecting the gift is shown by the fact that they asked Monoso Tanaka, noted art authority, to find a fitting statue. Mr. Tanaka is a direct descendant of the 36th generation, of Jocho, founder of the family of Buddhist sculptors in the eleventh century.

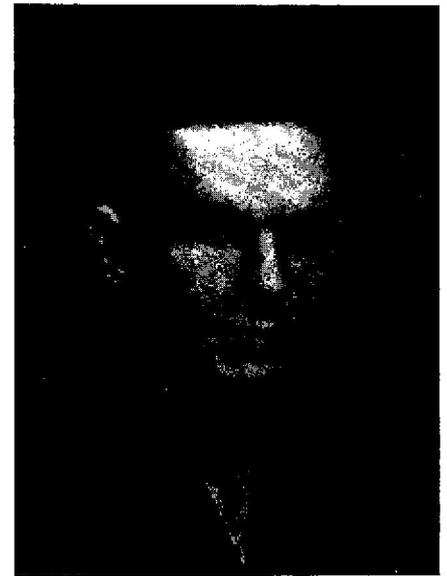

The statue, Mr. Tanaka said in describing it, came from a temple near the ancient city of Kyoto. Although it now represents an assembled whole, made up of sections completed at different times between the 14th and 18th centuries, it is in accordance with the tradition long followed by the Kyoto sculptors and represents the Muromachi type.

Dr. Harada, in his work in Oregon and on the Pacific coast during the past year, has been unusually successful in furthering interest in oriental art and culture. The esteem in which he is held at the University was demonstrated when he was honored at Commencement recently with the high degree of doctor of letters.

Dr. Harada is an internationally known art authority and author of a number of volumes on oriental art and has spent the past year on the campus of the University and at other coast institutions lecturing and offering courses in oriental art and culture. He is commissioner of the Imperial Museum, Tokyo.

Schomp will manage all activities, except athletics, including student publications, concert series, forensics, and student body and class affairs. He served in more or less the same capacity for the past year under Hugh E. Rosson, resigned graduate manager.

Similar to the new athletic board, an "educational activities board" appointed by the president, will supervise Schomp's activities. Personnel of the board is: Earl M. Pallett, executive secretary, chairman; Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel; Orlando Hollis, professor of law; Dr. Dan E. Clark, professor of history; and Kenneth L. Shumaker, supervisor of the English bureau. This central board will be assisted by sub-councils composed of student and faculty representatives of the various activities sponsored.

Students Aid in Work

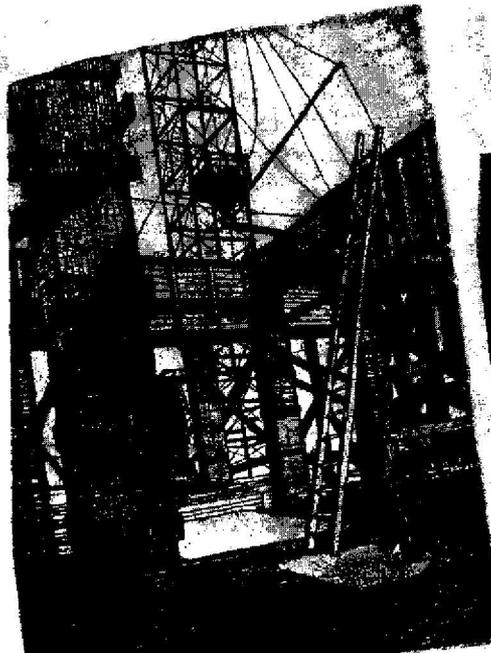

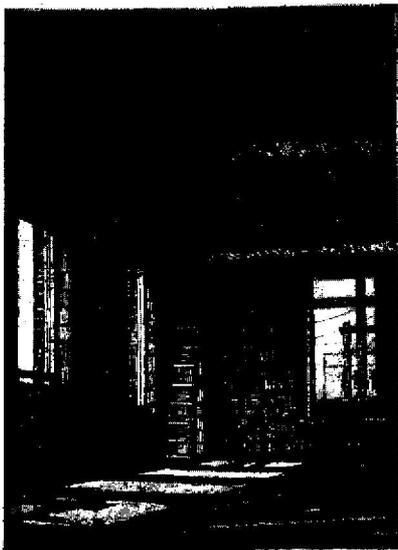

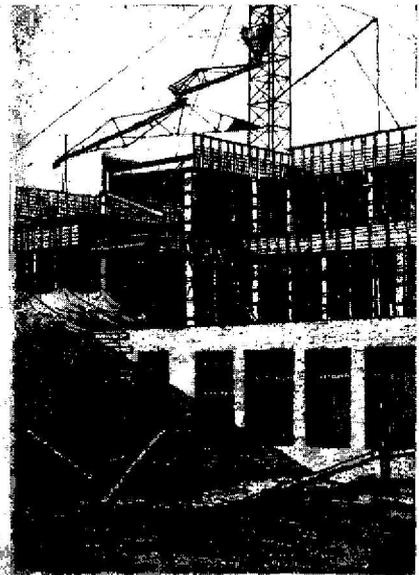

The student-run Greater Oregon Committee, an organization for the dissemination of information regarding the academic offerings and benefits of the University, is in full swing again this summer under the direction of William Schloth, senior in economics. The program, sponsored and assisted by the Associated Friends of the University, includes activity on the part of several hundred students in all parts of the state and the preparation and distribution of various publications and reports to high school graduates and others who are contemplating the continuance of their educational careers at institutions of higher learning.

The primary purpose of the program is to encourage the young people of Oregon to continue their educational careers at Oregon schools and secondarily interested in presenting the offerings of the University in order that careful and wise decisions may be made in selecting schools.

SEASON'S REVIEW

Year's Record Impressive

University of Oregon athletic teams, both varsity and freshmen, posted an impressive average of .707 in victories and defeats for the 1935-36 school year. Webfoot teams won 94 and lost 39 contests in seven branches of intercollegiate competition—football, basketball, swimming, baseball, track, golf and tennis.

Freshman teams in all lines of activity except swimming, where no competition was available, scored 36 victories and nine defeats for an even .800 average. Varsity squads in both conference and non-conference activities won 58 and lost 30 encounters for a .659 percentage. Conference competition for the varsity teams proved slightly stiffer with 30 victories against 22 defeats.

Two minor sport teams, swimming and golf, turned in perfect records for the year. The Webfoot mermen, coached by Mike Hoyman, were easily the outstanding college group in the West. They won four dual meets, with San Jose State College, Stanford, California and Washington, and then handily won their second straight northern division title in the conference meet at Eugene.

Golf Teams Rated High

Both varsity and freshmen golfers maintained unblemished records in dual meets, although the varsity divoteers dropped their northern division tournament title to Washington State College. The varsity team won six straight dual meets with Oregon State College, University of Washington and the College of Puget Sound and the Ducklings trounced University High of Eugene, leading prep team of the state, and the Oregon State Rooks twice. Tom Stoddard was golf coach.

Basketball Proves Popular

Prince Callison's fourth Oregon varsity football eleven emerged from a torrid 1935 coast conference race tied for second honors behind the pace-setting California, Stanford and U. C. L. A. elevens. The Webfoots won the mythical northern division title by defeating all northern opposition and dropped its three games to California schools—California, U. C. L. A. and St. Mary's.

Outstanding features of the grid season included the 7 to 6 upset victory over the University of Washington at Seattle; the titanic struggle with the powerful University of California eleven at Portland, lost on a blocked kick in the fourth quarter; the 13 to 0 Homecoming victory over Oregon State at Eugene, and, finally, the brilliant play of a trio of great linemen—Captain Ross Carter, guard; Captain-elect Del Bjork, tackle, and Stan Riordan, end and punter.

One of the most colorful basketball teams ever to perform under Webfoot colors was the result of Howard Hobson's first year as head basketball mentor at Oregon. The "Grenadiers," as they were dubbed, flashed meteorically in early season play, slumped in the middle of the conference season, and then boomed again to close the year in fourth place.

The hoop season brought out a new type of Oregon team—a booming, driving group of giants who, when in form, brushed aside all opposition. Leading players included Sophomore Dave Silver, Sam Liebowitz, Chuck Patterson and Willard and Budd Jones.

Under the canny guidance of veteran Bill Hayward, Webfoot track and field men performed true to style and went through the heaviest schedule in recent history as "tops" in the Northwest. Dual meet victories over Washington State and Oregon State, a loss to Washington, and a fourth place over all northern teams in the revived coast conference meet at Berkeley were the essential features.

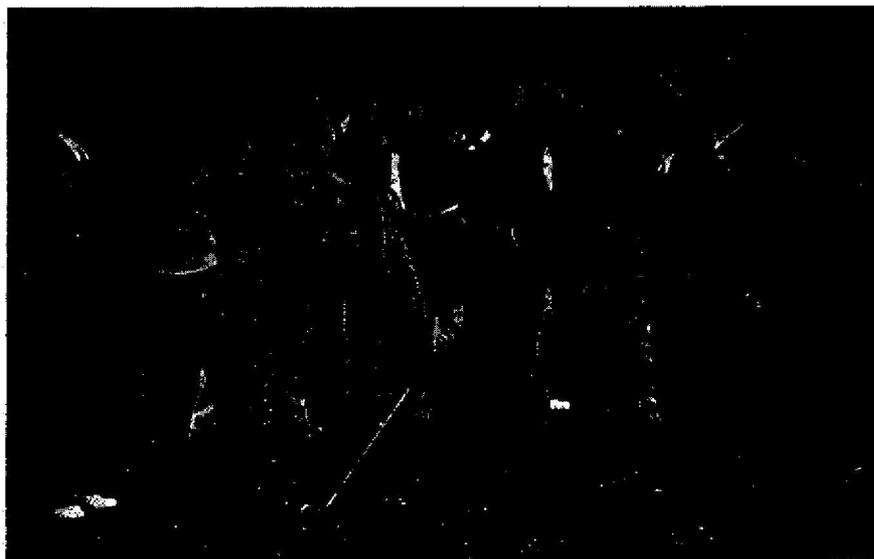

Track Marks Fall

Record breaking performances were turned in by several members of the team—including Frank Lloyd, broad jumper; Captain George Scharpf, miler; Captain-elect Sam McGaughey, two-miler; Bill Foskett, shot-putter, and Leonard Holland, discus thrower. All of these men are now in the midst of competition for American Olympic team berths.

Faced by the loss of 12 lettermen from the 1934-35 northern championship baseball teams, Coach Hobson was confronted by a difficult problem at the start of spring term. A shuffle and reshuffle of the few available prospects produced a nine that surprised everyone by hanging in the title chase until the last week and then taking the second position.

Freshmen teams were the strongest, on the whole, ever to represent Oregon. They included a husky gridiron team that produced more than 30 outstanding varsity candidates; a high-scoring basketball machine that won 19 out of 20 games, and a slow-starting baseball nine that downed the favored Oregon State College Rooks four times straight.

Among the freshmen stars who are certain to make their marks in varsity circles, many of them in the coming school year, are Jim Nicholson, Dave Gammon, Tom Blackman, Nello Giovanini, Henry Nilsen, Bob Hinman,

Prospects Promising

"Green, but very promising" is Prince Callison's favorite description of his 1936 football prospects.

Although Callison did not announce any first or second team lineups following the close of the school's longest spring practice session last month, he has settled on outstanding players for each position, with the possible exception of the end berths.

The recent spring drill was the longest held here in years. After a three week session devoted exclusively to the freshmen, Callison put the entire varsity squad through ten weeks of stiff workouts. Need of developing the many sophomores on the squad and of getting past rough scrimmage work before the top-heavy 1936 schedule starts next fall were the reasons.

Despite Callison's contention that the 1936 Webfoot eleven will be green, the probable first string lineup will be dominated by lettermen. The large group of 30 or more sophomores will furnish reserve replacements in the main.

Many Lettermen Return

Returning veterans who are favored for regular jobs next fall are led by Captain Delbert Bjork, giant Astorian who is regarded by both his coaches and coast grid experts as an outstanding all-American tackle candidate. Other lettermen due back are Ed Farrar, Vernon Moore, centers; Tony Amato, Joe Houston, Bill Estes, guards; Ken Skinner, Pat Fury, tackles; John Engstrom, Lief Jacobsen, ends; Bob Brad-dock, Dale Lasselle and Bud Goodin, backs.

From last year's reserve ranks will be drawn Denny Braid and Chan Berry, centers; Bill Foskett, Chuck Shimomura, tackles; Jerry Calhoun, Leonard Holland, ends; Don Kennedy, quarterback.

Line replacements will be Callison's biggest worry, outside of producing two ends to fill the spots vacated by Budd Jones and Stan Riordan. Leading sophomore line material includes John Belding, center; Nello Giovanini, John Pastega, Merle Peters, Elmer Williams,

SPRING SPORTS BRING OUT LARGE TURNOUTS

guards; Jay Smith, Cliff Morris, tackles; Bob Hinman, Henry Nilsen, John Yerby and Leonard Robertson, ends.

Of this group the best bets to break into the limelight next fall are Giovanini and Pastega, guards, and Hinman, Yerby, Nilsen and Robertson, the wing-men.

Second and third team backfield men are more plentiful, with several talented sophomores apparently due to see considerable action next fall. Leading the parade of new ball carriers are Jimmy Nicholson, Dave Gammon, Tom Blackman, halfbacks; Jean Lacau, Arleigh Bentley, Cliff Strom, fullbacks; Ernie Robertson, Fred Buroker, quarter-backs.

Probable Lineup Given

A guess at Oregon's starting lineup for the season opener against the University of Portland next September might read as follows: Moore or Farrar, center; Houston and Amato, guards; Bjork and Skinner, tackles; Engstrom and Nilsen, ends; Kennedy, quarterback, Lasselle and Braddock, halfbacks, and Goodin, fullback.

Going still farther, a second team would probably line up as follows: Braid, center; Giovanini, Estes or Pastega, guards; Fury and Foskett, tackles; Robertson and Jacobsen, ends; Ernie Robertson, quarterback; Nicholson and Gammon, halfbacks, and Lacau, fullback.

Reed Named Coach

Richard W. (Dick) Reed, ex-'23, former Webfoot and professional football star, has been added to the University of Oregon coaching staff as end coach by the athletic board.

Reed's appointment as successor to John Kitzmiller, ex-'32, who resigned recently, came as the board approved the Webfoot athletic budget for the 1936-37 school year.

Kitzmiller, for the past four years backfield coach at the University, will devote his entire time to the Dallas Machine and Iron Works at Dallas, Oregon, in which he is interested. Kitzmiller starred as a backfield ace at Oregon from 1928 to 1930 and with the New York Giants in 1931. Head

MEDICAL SCHOOL

Dr. Osgood's Research Praised

Hailed as one of the important medical researches of the decade is that being carried on by Dr. Edwin E. Osgood of the staff of the University of Oregon Medical School and recently reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The experiments have made possible for the first time the observation of the replenishment of the blood-cell supply by the bone marrow under artificially controlled conditions. The possibilities of this new discovery are conceded by authorities to be of utmost importance to the advancement of medical knowledge and they rank it above, even, the recently devised "mechanical heart." It is believed that the new "blood making machine" may open the door to extensive study of blood diseases such as pernicious anemia and luekemia. Several men high in the medical profession believe that Dr. Osgood will be awarded the Nobel prize for his work in this field.

Dr. Osgood has been assisted in his work by Alfred N. Muscovitz, 26-year-old junior in the Medical School. Dr. Osgood was recently commended for his work through a resolution passed by the State Board of Higher Education.

NEWS OF THE CLASSES

Rev. Albert S. Mulligan, Methodist minister for nearly fifty years, died at his home in Salem in June, following a long illness. He was a member of the Oregon Normal Department class of 1885 to which degrees were granted in 1890. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Ida Sanders Mulligan, and daughter, Vesta May, both of Salem, and three brothers, Armstrong K. Mulligan, Portland; Charles D. Mulligan, San Luis Obispo, California and Dr. Wesley T. Mulligan, ex-'92, of Carmel, California.

1893

Judge Lawrence T. Harris, B.A. '93, M.A. '96, and Ben F. Dorris, '15, of Eugene, attended the Republican national convention at Cleveland, Ohio. Both have long been active in Republican party ranks in the state. Frederick Steiwer, '06, who was the keynote speaker is a close friend of Judge Harris, who was instrumental in launching the senator on his political career.

1889

Mrs. Pearl Cooper Moreland, ex-'99 (Mrs. William Moreland) of Portland plans to leave the middle of July for the East to sail for France to be the guest of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Moreland, Jr., in Bordeaux for several months. Mr. Moreland is American vice-consul in the French seaport town.

1900

Willis C. McGuire, ex-'00, former Eugene resident, died in New York City on June 4. Mr. McGuire had been engaged in the mining business in Colombia, South America, for many years. He was a Spanish war veteran, having been a member of Company C, second Oregon volunteers, going from Eugene. He and his brothers, Ernest and Harry, operated gold mines in Colombia.

1909

According to war department orders, Captain Dennis C. Pillsbury, ex-'06, will be relieved as instructor of the Oregon national guard July 30. He will be transferred to Fort Warren, in Wyoming.

1910

Mr. and Mrs. Ormond Rankin (Anne Taylor, ex-'16) moved the last of May from Arlington heights to Portland heights. Their new address is 2108 Southwest Laurel Street, Portland.

1912

William Edwin Fortmiller, eleven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Fortmiller, of Albany, died May 31 of septic meningitis. He leaves two sisters, Julianne and Marian Fortmiller.

1915

Mrs. Willametta McElroy, LL.B. '15, deputy city attorney of Portland, died at a Portland hospital on June 5. Mrs. McElroy was appointed a stenographer in the city attorney's office in 1908 and in 1915 she was graduated from the University of Oregon law school. She was named a deputy city attorney in 1921 and was placed in charge of all legal work in delinquent assessment cases where property was confiscated by the city. Her home was at 1024 Southwest Sixth Avenue.

William J. McGinn, LL.B. '15, of 5906 North Williams Avenue, Portland, died in the Portland Sanitarium June 18, following a brief illness. Mr. McGinn had lived in the Portland district for fifty-five years and was engaged in the insurance business for twenty years, having been associated with Phil Grossmayer and Company at the time of his death. In the recent primary election, Mr. McGinn led the Democratic ticket for state senator from Multnomah County. STOPS CARBON KNOCKS GIVES BETTER LUBRICATION

... say fleet operators

KEEPS MOTORS CLEANER... HAS LONGER LUBRICATING LIFE

Made by the Propane-Solvent Process

TRITON does everything any fine motor oil can do to protect your motor—and in addition gives you a plus feature found in no other oil.

It keeps your motor cleaner—prevents the accumulation of carbon that causes the motor to knock.

Triton is so pure, due to the Propane-Solvent process by which it is refined, that it forms almost no carbon in the combustion chamber. Previous carbon deposits burn, peel off and blow out the exhaust as you drive.

Tests have proved that a new car run with Triton will never develop carbon knock with any grade of gasoline that was satisfactory at the start.

No wonder so many new car dealers, fleet operators, mechanics and other experts are enthusiastic about Triton.

Use Triton in your own car. Note how it smooths out your motor in a few thousand miles—improves your gasoline and oil mileage and reduces operating costs. It costs only 30c a quart in sealed cans. (35c in Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.)

Sold by over 10,000 Independent and Union Oil Company Stations on the Pacific Coast

A gasoline to fit the weather

Flying A gasoline is sold everywhere—on the coast where it is cool, in the regions of boiling summer temperatures, in the rare atmosphere of high altitudes. But it's not the same Flying A. It's especially refined to fit the weather in which it is sold, when it is sold.

More than thirty changes in Flying A volatility characteristics are made each year. A chart developed from a weather study of 450 Pacific Coast points determines the refining procedure of Flying A. Always right for the climate in which you live, or in which you travel. Quicker starting, dependable power under all driving conditions.

Fill up with Flying A gasoline at Smiling Associated Dealers everywhere in the West for a smoother, quieter, cooler motor and happier motoring.
