by JOHN CLINTON

As the Hispano-Plymouth and I grow old together, my respect for the old bus increases. I think when at last the war is over and new cars are once more available, I'll keep the H-P and have it studded.

* * *

For example, the other day one of the Union Oil engineers told me that if the speed of my engine were not reduced by the transmission and differential the H-Plymouth would travel at something like 240 miles per hour! Wow!

* * *

I never knew before just what the transmission and differential were for. But it turns out that they tame the power generated by your engine and apply it in tablespoonfuls to the wheels. And incidentally they're two vital departments of your car.

* * *

The transmission has something like 54 separate parts whizzing around inside a sealed box. It takes special lubricant that will withstand extreme high pressure to lubricate that stuff. And if you let it go more than 5,000 miles, you're taking chances.

* * *

It's too technical to explain in this space (even if I could do it!), but if you drive without proper lubricant in the T & D, a very unpleasant thing will happen. The transmission will growl at you, and the differential will hum! And once they start, they'll never stop 'til you put in new, expensive gears.

* * *

So, start now to have your Union Minute Men check your transmission and differential for you. They'll keep accurate records of when the service is due and notify you to come in. But—don't take chances. All you get is a noisy car!

Oregon, 1942 Edition

OREGON, 1942 edition, is a war-time edition as anyone who has visited the campus will testify. A large number of vacancies on the faculty, a new curriculum studded with service courses, department secretaries operating an airplane-spotting tower, and underneath it all a new note of seriousness . . . these and many more signs tell better than words that the University of Oregon is at war.

President Donald M. Erb has sounded the keynote for the coming year in the one word—"work." It will be nearly all work, little play for both students and faculty, for the job of the University is to train leaders for important parts in the war effort.

Most of the men students in school are in some kind of a deferred enlisted branch of the service. They have been allowed to complete their college education before being called for the sole reason that the military leaders believe that the time will be well spent, will finally bring into the services men with knowledge and qualifications which the country needs. The more thoroughly and more rapidly these men are trained the better for the nation.

It is with this consideration in mind that the University leaders have cut out many of the non-essentials and have turned to an "all business" way of life. Until the war is won returning alumni will miss many of the customs, many of the more pleasant nonessential things which they have come to associate with their institution.

Similarly the alumni association, of which OLD OREGON is so important a part, has cut down to its important job—service to alumni in the war effort, whether they be military men abroad or war workers at home. A great many requests have been received for a service issue and this will be coming up this fall.

News of the classes, backbone of the magazine and best-read feature, has been diverted almost entirely to news of men in the service. A somewhat smaller than usual staff is concentrating on keeping records and other vital information up to date.

This is Oregon: 1942 edition.

Polivka Transferred

Captain Douglas W. Polivka, '38, was transferred recently to the division of public relations in Washington, D. C., according to word received here. He has been editor of the marine corps magazine Recruiter in Philadelphia for the past two years, before which time he worked on newspapers in Portland and Salem, Oregon, and Boise, Idaho. His wife is the former Josephine E. Rise (J.D. '34).

Our Cover in Words

Alums Hold Reunion at Jantzen Beach Picnic

C OAST-WIDE dimout darkened the lights of Jantzen beach August 31, but failed to darken the spirit of 3000 alumni, students, and friends whose "civilian army" stormed to blitz success at the University of Oregon's 10th annual summer picnic.

War perforated the program but fell before the peaceful Lemon and Green "attack." The crowd, despite war-time limitations, was one of the largest in picnic history.

Free dinner rations, a spark of the Gay '90s, and "dancin' at Jantzen with Anson Weeks" streamlined the spirit to war-time tempo. It was a complete night for the home front—and a complete night all around, but for other uniformed thousands of University alumni who were fighting for the greater front abroad.

It is gratifying to see that the human race has profited from mistakes of the last war," said Headline Speaker Donald M. Erb, referring to confusion of joint military and professorial training in World War I. "The trust placed in higher education to train officers for this war is one of the finest compliments that could be paid to higher education."

The thousand and more new students there realized it wasn't University education versus the war, but education plus the war. The army, navy, and marine corps officers talked to the new men, prepared them for reserves from specially decorated booths.

Words of "Mighty Oregon" sounded just as loud, just as powerful in war as in peace. They, too, had added meaning in the light of a world of war.

John Warren, the "top kick" of Oregon's 1942 football team, and Hobby Hobson, basketball mentor, promised their best for athletic turnout. His football coaching staff stripped of many "veterans," his team rid-dled here and there by enlistment but still intact, Warren promised a strong showing against Tex Oliver's navy eleven September 26.

As for the eastern basketball tour, Hobby said it was "off" for this year, though invitations already had been received for '43—"If the situation improves by then, and we all hope it will."

The food was served in style, under preparation of Don Daniels, Oregon Dad, head chef at Meier & Frank Co., and Mrs. Manley Treece and Mrs. Jim Rathbun, Oregon Mothers. Two thousand were served and by the time the last defense worker entered the park, more than 3000 were registered.

Physicists, Assistants Civil Service Need

Continuous open examinations for technical assistants and junior physicists, needed for civilian war service, is announced by the Civil Service commission. For junior physicist the requirements are completion of a 4-year college course including 18 semester hours in physics. Applications will be accepted from senior students who expect to complete the required course within six months.

For technical assistant there are various grades requiring from 3 years to 1 year of college work in engineering, metallurgy, or physics. There are no age limits.

Volumes of 'Liberator' Received by Library

Thirty volumes of William Lloyd Garrison's "Liberator," abolitionist newspaper, including 1500 weekly numbers from January 2, 1836 to December 29, 1865, have been turned over to the University of Oregon library through the work of friends in the east.

A priceless acquisition, the file comprises 30 out of 35 volumes of "The Liberator," running from volume 6 to the end of the enterprise. The last issue, dated December 29, 1865, contains Garrison's valedictory. The ratification of the thirteenth amendment, freeing the slaves, 11 days before meant that his life work was done.

Oswald Garrison Villard, whose mother was a daughter of William Lloyd Garrison and whose father's generosity helped save the University in its early days, and John M. MacGregor, '23, New York alumni president, were the leaders in obtaining the volumes for the University. Other donors to whom the University is grateful are—Phil Bergh, '27; Dean Genevieve Chase, '20; Allen Eaton, '02; Ina Jaqua, '14; Dr. Laura H. Kennon, '11; Dr. Esther P. Lovejoy, '94; Dr. Julius F. Neuberger, '13; Dr. Claude E. Robinson, '24; Arthur S. Rudd, '24; Rolf Klep, '27; Mrs. Mary Jane Bowles, '25; Mrs. Ruth Duniway Kerby, '10; Leon A. Culbertson, '23; and Francis E. Taylor, '26.

Henderson Dies

Louis Forniquet Henderson, noted botanist and teacher, and for several years curator of the herbarium and professor in research botany at the University, died this summer in Tacoma, Wash. Mr. Henderson came to the University in 1925 and was given an honorary master of arts degree in public service in 1926.

Named Captain of Cadets

Jack C. Hall, '40, has been named captain of cadets at the air force primary training detachment at the Ryan School of Aeronautics. His appointment, of the highest at the school, came after the Oregon alum had overcome several obstacles including the repetition of his training because of a shift to another school. He attended the University one year and played freshman football.

HEADS NEW DEPARTMENT—Professor W. A. Dahlberg, here putting over a point to one of his speech classes, has been named head of the new speech and dramatic arts division.

After his graduation from Oregon, Mr. Altstock made a special study of the motion picture industry at Harvard Business school.

What's Cookin' in the Duck Camp

By JOE MILLER, '43

Football prognosticating in time of peace has its difficulties, but in time of war with a squad losing as many as 21 of its members, it is in the same category as guessing what kind of people live on the moon. OLD OREGON Sports Editor Joe Miller, '43, spent most of his summer on the campus and has watched the lemon and green team start from scratch. Here are a few of his reactions to Headman John Warren's 1942 varsity.

ACCORDING to the national experts and California sports writers, this should be Oregon's worst football season in several years. One San Francisco sports editor claims that Oregon will be fortunate to beat out Idaho or Montana for the eighth place spot in final Pacific Coast conference standings. Other members of the higher sports writing gentry state with finality that the Webfoots cannot hope to win any more than a couple of games.

All of which makes Oregon's new head coach, "Honest John" Warren grin like a sleek Cheshire cat. He remembers what these same writers said about Lon Stiner's Oregon State eleven that ended up in the land of roses on New Year's Day.

It certainly would be rash to predict any bed of roses for Warren's squad. Numerically and physically they are the smallest Oregon has had for several years. At this early stage of practice, it is very questionable whether mainstays from last year's eleven can be replaced, such as Curtis Mechem, all-coast right halfback and winner of the Hoffman trophy, Duke Iverson, one of the West's finest blocking backs, Elliott Wilson, gigantic defensive center, Ray Segale, three-year varsity guard, and Bill Regner, veteran end. Add to this list six other lettermen that have either graduated or joined the armed forces, and it becomes hard to see the Ducks in a roseate glow.

BUT this is just the outside picture that the sports writing gentlemen saw. There is an inside picture. It centers, in the main, about new coach, John A. Warren, class of 1928. "Honest John" brings long years of experience around McArthur Court into the varsity coaching job, being freshman mentor since 1936. He also brings into his new job a new relationship between players and coach, one that has already boomed morale tremendously—this should be Oregon's most spirited and fieriest eleven in several years. This new relationship has strengthened personal ties, and even seasoned seniors can hardly wait to go out and give their all for "Honest John."

Another highly important factor in favor of the Webfoots is that most of the conference schools are going to have to depend on a large percentage of sophomores this fall. Many of the new coaches don't know too much about their neophyte material and will have to make snap judgments on them in the abbreviated practice period before the conference schedule swings into action. Warren knows his 24 sophomores, because he coached them last year. He has developed them—they know his system and style of play and are already worked into it.

A squad of 42 men greeted Warren when practice began September 10. It included these 24 sophomores, upon whom so much of the burden will rest, and 18 returning lettermen, 15 of these being seniors. These seniors will have a steady effect upon the newcomers, although several of the veterans are onestripers and junior college transfers.

The line, to quote assistant coach Manny Vezie, looks "sound." Although left end is still somewhat of a question mark, the first string strength should stack up with the best the coast has to offer. But, outside of the tackles, the reserves are mostly sophomores, and in the tough coast conference, considered the most evenly-balanced in the nation, a squad cannot subsist without adequate reserve material. The starting line is somewhat lighter than last year's, averaging just under the 200-pound mark, which, coupled with the lack of tried reserve strength, may make it hard for them to stand up over the grueling schedule.

TONY CRISH, on fishing patrol in Alaska all summer and not as yet back, stands in the all-important left end post, closely spelled by another veteran, Jim Shepherd. Crish, a Youngstown, Ohio boy, is a glue-fingered pass receiver, dropping nary a one last year in snagging four touch-down heaves. Shepherd is a smashing 200-pounder that has been steadily improving. Sophomore Pete Torchia is an elusive and fast receiver and has gained needed weight over the summer.

Right end is topped by skyscraping Russel Nowling, acknowledged last year to be one of the most able all-around ends in the conference. He has a swell chance for all-coast this fall. George Dugan, a sophomore giant, should be from his spring practice showing, be a capable alternate. Ray Blatchley, a converted sophomore tackle from Eugene, is rapidly learning the intricacies of end play.

The Webfoots are three-deep in strength at the tackle positions. Three lettermen, veteran Ed Moshofsky, Tom Terry, and Cliff Giffin, go the left side, all experienced giants, able to handle themselves in the most rugged company, and on the right, standing tackle position, two lettermen and a roaring sophomore, Dick Ashcom, Merritt Kufferman and Neophyte Bill Bartels. Ashcom has all-coast potentialities in his last year and Kufferman has lost 28 pounds, the loss of which, should make him one of the fastest tackles in the conference.

"Honest John" is also loaded at the guards, although here is not quite as strong as at the tackles. Ray Segale and Morry Jackson are the only losses from the 1941 squad. Mountainous Floyd "Scrapiron" Rhea starts in the left guard running position, backed by Sophomores Howard Steers and Vic Atiyeh. Rhea is winding up his third season as a Webfoot regular and is the strongest man on the squad and campus wrestling champion.

RIIGHT guard claims colorful Val Culwell, another two-year letterman and Chuck Elliott, moved over from his tackle position last fall, and Sophs Hank Steers and Hal Lloyd. This position is very strong, with Culwell having a chance for nationwide recognition if he doesn't get hurt, as he did last year.

Center is markedly weaker than last year—6-foot 5-inch Elliott "Lil' Abner" Wilson, now in the marines; Hersch Patton, fiery alternate now in the navy air corps; and Don O'Neill, burly reserve now in the navy all being gone. Steve Bodner, two-year letterman guard takes over the position backed by two neophytes, Bill Mayther and Johnny Daniels. Bodner is a rugged 210-pounder, smart and a shrewd diagnoser of plays, but this is his first try at the center post. Mayther and Daniels have shown fine offensive ability, but are still untried sophomores.

The backfield is where Warren's troubles begin. He still has the veteran fireball, Tom Roblin, perhaps the greatest clutch back to ever play football for the Webfoots, but after Roblin, reserves and sophomores take over the burden. The weaknesses are glaring at quarterback and fullback.

Duke Iverson, one of the finest blocking backs on the coast last year, was a consistent 60-minute performer and his alternate, Len Surles had little to do. Now Surles must step into the varsity quarterback berth with little experience there, being converted from guard only last year. Roy Ell, '40 varsity, decided to play pro ball instead of coming back to school, which leaves Sophomore Don Brown, whom Warren likes, to back Surles. There is a possibility another rugged sophomore, Right Half John Garrison, may be moved over to bolster this position.

FULLBACK has no tested performers, either. Tom Oxman, a letterman reserve, saw only 56 minutes of action and also missed spring practice, so it is not known how he will perform in a starting role. A pair of husky sophomores, Bill Davis, all-state fullback from Grants Pass high school and Bud Cote, came on remarkably fast in spring drills but need seasoning.

MEET OUR ALUMS

Oregon roared its approval this spring when Lieutenant Robert S. Clever, '41, and his mates sent Japanese boasts of security out the window in a world-stirring raid on Tokyo. From the lowest Chinese coolie to the president of the United States, the raid was hailed as a turning point in the war. Lieutenant Clever, alum of the month, tells how he felt when he dropped his bombs on Hirohito's steel mills. At right is Bob being greeted by his father, C. C. Clever, at the Albina Engine & Machine works in Portland.

OREGON'S Bombadier Bob Clever, squinted through his bombsight, spotted his target—a huge steel mill in South Tokyo—and neatly laid his "eggs" on one of Hirohito's prize war industries. Hours later the whole world rocked with cheers for the daring American raiders who had knocked Japanese boasts of security into a cocked hat.

All of this happened during the famous American raid on Tokyo, but Bob lived again his "greatest adventure" in Portland this summer when he arrived home for a short visit with his father, C. C. Clever, an employee of the Albina Engine & Machine Works.

"I was too busy to watch my bombs all the way down, but the last time I saw them they were headed right," he grinned. "And the tail gunner saw them hit squarely on the target." When the plane turned to leave, Bob saw huge clouds of smoke coming from the plant.

"I don't think they were just blowing off that much smoke to welcome us," the lieutenant laughed.

ONE of the planes carried the inscription, "I don't want to set the world on fire; I just want to start a flame in Tokyo's heart." All the bombs were autographed, "Best Wishes, Hirohito," etc. Although Yosuke Matsuoka and Hisao Yoshii were too unimportant to be singled out for special attention, Bob hopes that he made them understand the way the University feels about them.

The American planes approached Tokyo from the ocean and skimmed along just over the tree tops until they reached the area of their targets. Then they zoomed up to 1500 feet—considered the safe level for dropping bombs—let go their load and roared back to treetop height.

"When we went over the Japs thought we were their own planes and waved at us from the ground. When we left they still waved—with their feet," the Oregon bombardier grinned.

The Japanese steel mills on which Bob dropped his bombs were fairly well protected by anti-aircraft fire, but the gunners under-estimated the speed of the American planes. Most of the shells exploded behind the planes, although the Nipponese gunners had the right altitude, Bob reports. When the American planes skimmed along at treetop height, it was almost impossible for the Japs to hit them.

Only 5 feet 4½ inches tall—he insists on the ½—Bob fits the picture of the happy-go-lucky, carefree American. Usually laughing, he is the "clown of the outfit," his companions report. Bob took a lot of kidding about his height on the Tokyo trip, but it was all in fun.

"THEY said that I was so short everyone would mistake me for a Jap if we were shot down. That was going pretty far, but I can take it," he laughed.

At the University Bob was a member of Campbell club, where, his class mates report, he was one of the best-liked fellows in the house. Always full of fun, he was a friend of everyone. He was on the campus from 1938 to 1942, but joined the army air corps before graduation. He worked his way through school by doing odd jobs around the campus and by working in Portland during the summers.

The only thing Bob won't talk about is the location of Shangri-La. That, he laughs, is a secret of the United States army and why should the army let the world in on its perfect city?

"Oh, yes, it's a swell place. Lots of girls and everything. We're going back one of these days and give the Japs another guess on where we came from," Bob says.

Bob did his great job of spoiling Hirohito's steel production plans through a makeshift bombsight which, he said, "could be bought anywhere for 20 cents." Because they were afraid that some of the American planes would fall into the hands of the Japanese, army authorities took off the famous Norden bombsights and put in their places makeshift ones.

"It made no difference. The steel mills still looked the same and we plastered them up good," Bob said.

While in Portland Bob was greeted by Mayor Riley who took him around town and to see his father, C. C. Clever at Albina in the mayor's official car. At Albina the workers gave Bob a rousing reception and cheered his father as the two met for the first time in over a year.

The youngest Oregon man featured in "Meet Our Alums" so far, Bob is perhaps typical of the many University men now in all parts of the world fighting for their country. Because his deed was somewhat more spectacular, it has received more notice. Thousands of other Oregon alums from Ireland to Australia are playing equally important parts.

LETTERS . . .

LIEUT. GLENN A. EATON, '41

Dear Nels:

Read your June OLD OREGON from cover cover (even the adv.) but failed to find any mention of us alums in Australia—we all signed your questionnaires while on the boat but at that time we couldn't say where we were heading.

Noticed from Lloyd Sullivan's letter that there are only four alums in Alaska with him—hardly worth mentioning compared with the "duck" contingent we have here. Just to mention a few—

Lieut. John R. Stretcher, '40
 Capt. Carlyle W. Arey, '34
 Lieut. Donald N. Anderson, '39
 Lieut. "Bud" Robertson, '39
 Lieut. William B. Foster, '39
 Lieut. John Mitchell, '39
 Lieut. Hugh B. "Loophole" Collins, '40
 Lieut. Leonard Jermain, '40
 Maj. Webster K. Ross, M.D., '26
 Lieut. William Berg, '36
 Lieut. James I. Draper, '37
 Lieut. Robert H. Goodwin, '39
 Lieut. Lawrence L. Lew, '41
 Lieut. John H. Neilson, '40
 Lieut. Ed. O'Reilly, '40
 Lieut. Clark P. Spurlock, '36
 Lieut. Ben F. Thomas, '37
 Lieut. Bill K. Chapman, '41
 Lieut. Lloyd G. Malos, '41
 Lieut. Edgar W. Martin, '38

That is only a few of the officers. Here are some enlisted boys:

Jim Mountain, '40
 1st Sgt. James Evans, '41
 Sgt. Bob Chessman, '41

But seriously Nels, doubt if we can make it for Homecoming or Rush Week this year. We have a date with our friend and fellow alumni, Matsuoka. Just a small house warming you know—"His House" and our heat. . . .

 San Francisco, Cal.

HUGH B. COLLINS, LL.B., '41

Dear Sir:

This will advise you that the undersigned has again changed his address and location, and is presently engaged in undergoing his second winter for the year 1942 in a pyramidal tent atop an extremely barren hill somewhere in Australia. My well-wishers can offer me condolences, and my not-so-well-wishers can give me the horselaugh at the below address. You too can utilize it by sending the Association publication there.

... These Australians are reasonably nice people, except for their almost unintelligible speech (they speak extremely fast), and infernal diet of tea and mutton. And for the benefit of the male readers, I spent 10 days traveling in and around some of the more prominent cities of the commonwealth, and during all that time, and since too, saw only one girl I thought could compare with American standards of appearance. They aren't repulsive, y'understand—just awfully foreign looking.

The currency is baffling to the simple foreigner and the troops have a hard time conceiving it has any value. The currency looks so much like cigar coupons that they think

W. E. CUNNINGHAM, '36

Dear Sir:

Our June issue of OLD OREGON has just been received, and this is about the most-welcome piece of literature we receive these days.

It may be of interest to you to know that an Oregon man, Lieut. R. G. Emmens, '35, assisted in the bombing of Tokio. Bob has been in the Air Corps since 1937. It will probably be of far greater interest to you to know that his ship was the only one forced down, and which did not make it back to their bases. It was Bob Emmens that was forced down in Russia, where he is at the present time still interned. (This letter was dated June 18).

Lieut. Emmens was married in Medford, Oregon to Justine Miller, '35. Mrs. Emmens was blessed with a young son, Thomas Alfred on May 18, which son Lieut. Emmens has not seen yet, in view of his internment in Russia.

I hope that this information will be news to you. Bob is an old friend of mine and I hope you will have room to make note of his achievements in the next issue of OLD OREGON.

(Ed.: For story on Bob Clever, '42, other Oregon alum who helped bomb Tokyo see page 4.)

Forrest E. Cooper, '27, J.D. '28, former vice-president of the Oregon Alumni association and director for Lake County, has been conscripted by the state war bond headquarters in Portland and will be in that city "for the duration." Mr. Cooper took over his new duties as a deputy in the state headquarters on August 1.

they'll be in funds again as soon as they buy a carton of Kools. Oddly enough, the natives grow quite incensed when one comments on the similarity. American popularity is also being enhanced by the query: "How much is that in real money?"

... Trust you have mailed the bill for my alumni dues to my agent, J. C. Collins, 2224 E. Main, Medford, Oregon.

Hugh B. Collins,
 A.P.O. 41 c/o Postmaster
 San Francisco, California

BOB FLAVELLE, '41

Dear Lyle:

You will find three dollars here. Two dollars for one years subscription and an extra dollar with which I would like you to send me the issues since April, 1942, also the summer edition of the Emerald. If this is not enough to cover it, send me a bill for the rest.

Have been down here for a month. Emphasis is on building us into physical wonders in eight months—and they'll do it—or kill us in the attempt!

I've missed the Oregon gang like the very devil, and hope to get back in the future to check up on all.

What's Cookin'

Left half is a "green apple" past Tommy Roblin. Backing him are two young Portland sophomores, Bob Reynolds and Leroy Erickson. Both are young and sporadic, although they flashed in the short spring practice. John Warren may miss Jim Newquist here, a regular last fall, who is now in the pre-flight school at Moraga and will play against his former teammates in Portland September 26 when Tex Oliver's navy aviators come north.

Right half is anchored by two veterans, Roy "Tippy" Dyer and Ken Oliphant. Dyer is an all-around "Handy-Andy," particularly capable as a blocker, while Oliphant is a shifty climax runner, who, if he gets proper blocking, should have great long-distance scoring potentialities. Cameron "Scotty" Deeds, a newcomer and one of the most highly touted backs ever to come to Oregon, may push both these seasoned campaigners. He is the fastest back on the squad.

The schedule has its good and bad points. Bad ones are three of the toughest games coming right-off-the-bat, Navy pre-flight, Washington State, and Washington. The Navy game will be one of the hardest-fought battles ever to be played in Portland and should make or break the Webfoots. It will pit the tremendous Oregon fighting spirit against the All-Americans of Tex Oliver. W.S.C. will be tough in her lair at Pullman and the traditional game with Washington is always a riotous fray.

The good part of the schedule is that the California trips don't come until later in the season and that there are only two—Berkeley and Los Angeles. The schedule is not the man-killer of last year, only eight games with a breather against Idaho.

“Service to our Alums in peace and war”

Born just after the last war, OLD OREGON has served alumni of the University of Oregon through good and hard times. Now in the time of a great national crisis, the magazine continues to use its facilities wherever possible to bring encouragement and news to our alumni.

OLD OREGON is mailed to alumni in all parts of the world. Its message has not gone unheard. From the jungles of New Guinea to the frozen tundra of Iceland come letters and cards praising this bit of news from home. Members of the alumni association here at home are helping to make this service possible. To you, on behalf of these men fighting your battles abroad, we send our most sincere thanks.
