1914 Roll Call Lists Big Shots

By F. H. YOUNG, '14

From the permanent class secretary of the class of 1914 comes a reminder that a keen, but good-natured rivalry between the classes of 1913 and 1914 still exists.

THE record of thirty years—1914 to 1944—abundantly substantiates the warning bequeathed years ago, "Don't sell short the Class of 1914!"

This great aggregation of minds, feminine charm, athletic prowess, has cut a swath across the nation's history the importance of which closely rivals the Teheran conference! One might as well make that claim for the 1914 class. If we don't, someone in the 1913's boastful assemblage will think of a similar grandioso comparison applicable to the preceding class which, of course, will be wholly without foundation.

As a matter of fact, the Class of 1914 is just beginning to make History, and the capital "H" is properly used.

For example, there's Reverend Jesse Kellems, who, after saving souls in Africa and faraway points, has been thinking of running for U.S. Senator from California, a state that certainly needs political saving. Jesse, so we are told by a Bend business man, has acquired a show-place country estate in the pine country, which shows that once a Webfoot, always a Webfoot.

And speaking of California, there is Donald Blair Rice, chief of Kiwanis International. If political tides turn in the right direction and Don's good friend, Governor Earl Warren, becomes v.-p. of the United States, the Oakland public schools may lose a good business manager.

Otto Heider owns a good portion of the main street business building frontage (and is probably acquiring more) in Sheridan, Oregon, while to Captain Clarence Ash the expression "crossing the bar" neither connotes a funeral hymn nor an incident of thirst quenching because Clarence has done much to speed thousands of tons of floated war materiel out of the Columbia river.

WE HOPE that "Deac" Davies hasn't run out of contractor's paint down Stockton way in California and that Charles Fowler, principal of a Portland grade school that's bulging with war-worker children, will stand up under his terrific responsibilities.

There's Vic Burris, perhaps the lowest handicap golfer among Portland chiropractic practitioners, and Wallace Benson, city attorney and principal barrister in Reedsport, Oregon.

Norma Graves has written considerably for the musical magazine Etude, and has traveled extensively in Europe and South America. We regret the passing of Hon. R. A. Booth, father of Mrs. F. K. Davis (Barbara Booth). Mrs. Walter Buse (Lucia Macklin) is prominent in community work in Oregon City, and Kathleen Stuart and Opal Jarvis are seen together frequently in Portland.

Mrs. Sidney Hoskin (Marguerite Rankin) is one of Portland's low-handicap woman golfers, while Wilhelmina Young, Mrs. Edsall P. Ford (Pauline Van Orsdel), Dr. Gwynne Watson and Everett Stuller apparently live not far apart in the Berkeley, Oakland, Palo Alto district.

Of course we must mention, with due modesty, that the Class of 1914 gave to the U of O its one and only Nobel prize winner in medicine, Dr. William P. Murphy, and Dal King is now Your Honor, if you please, as circuit judge for Coos and Curry counties, Oregon.

Obie Oberteuffer has made a name for himself as administrator of Boy Scout work in Oregon, and Colton Meek is principal of Portland's largest high school. Henry Fowler is high up in counsels of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' association, and Fred Anunsen, a great football end, sells sand and gravel in Salem.

Sybil Brown is teaching in Portland, Mrs. Melvin Solve (Norma Dobbie) is in New York City, and Mrs. Fred Stickels (Florence Thrall) is in Eugene.

We must not close this 1914 Class resume without mentioning Vernon C. Genn. Vernon rose to a high position in the General Motors corporation, as director general of that company's pre-war huge operations in the Japanese empire and also in central Europe. He attained probably the greatest business success of any member of the class. He's now head of the Diesel

Board Keeps Hoop Play; Hobson Leaves for Year

By BILL LOVE, '47

John Warren is predicted as the best possibility to coach the 1944-45 basketball team while Howard "Hobby" Hobson is at Columbia working on his doctor's degree in physical education. Sportswriter Love also tells of your Oregon athletes playing outstanding baseball on professional teams.

THE University of Oregon intends to have a basketball team during the 1944-45 season, but for the first time in 10 years Howard Hobson, '26, will not be coaching the Webfoot team. The veteran basketball and baseball mentor has applied for a one-year sabbatical leave of absence, which has been approved by the University administration and Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter.

Hobson intends to go to Columbia university in New York City and work on his doctor's degree in physical education. He received his master's degree from that institution in 1929. While at Columbia "Hobby" also hopes to have an opportunity to assist with the navy physical fitness program, and plans to do some research work and study in baseball and basketball.

He will resume his duties as baseball and basketball coach at Oregon on July 1, 1945. During his absence, the Oregon veteran has requested that his coaching duties be turned over to John Warren, '28, head freshman mentor at Oregon who has been football coach during the absence of Gerald A. "Tex" Oliver. Warren is familiar with the Hobson style of basketball, and has played a large part in developing freshman hoopsters into varsity material.

It appears quite likely that Warren will be given the position. Anson Cornell, '16, athletic manager; Bill Hayward, veteran track coach, and Warren are all expected to continue their association with the school of physical education. Hobson recently was made secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

THE announcement by the University board that basketball is to be retained closed the door on unfounded, but persistent, rumors that Oregon would not only discontinue the hoop sport by next year, but would also ask the coaching staff to take indefinite leaves of absence after July.

When Hobson entrained for the east several weeks ago to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, it was rumored that the successful mentor would take one of three offered posts—Minnesota, Notre Dame, or DePaul. The basis for this statement was that Oregon intended to forego the sport, and Hobson, along with the other coaches, would be out of a job.

Press reports have made this school virtually the "goat" for the abandonment of inter-collegiate football last fall, and to a certain extent, baseball and track this spring. Prognosticators were already saying that with Oregon quitting basketball (which the "U" already was supposed to have done secretly), Northern Division sports would be out for the duration.

That timely announcement that the school does intend to carry on with basketball next year has partially settled the troubled waters on the Oregon sports sea.

TAKING A SABBATICAL leave of absence, Coach Howard Hobson will go to Columbia during the school year 1944-45 to study for his doctor's degree.

RUMORS have also persisted that football may come back by next fall, though it hardly seems likely that this will come to pass next year in the Northern Division.

Jimmy Phelan at St. Mary's, with 4-F's and 17-year-olds, proved that the sport can be carried on successfully, even though a team may lose games by quite large margins. As examples, the Gaels last year played some of the top college elevens (with sailors) and also the leading powerful service elevens. Against schools in their own class, however, they were among the best.

The fact that Washington has the use of navy trainees seems to be one of the stumbling blocks that will prevent football in the Northern Division—even though the other schools in the conference are all in the same boat, without bluejackets to help them out.

The idea of football next year has been receiving considerable support. Most authorities figure that the situation will be better than last fall because numerous 1-C medical discharges have returned, plus the 4-F's and a large crop of 17-year-olds.

"Matty" Mathews, University of Portland football mentor, resigned because his school would not agree to carry on competitive football next year. It has been rumored that this same situation was an important factor when Babe Hollingberry, dean of Pacific Coast coaches, left Washington State.

As for basketball, Warren (if he gets the job) will probably have to start from scratch. Most of last year's team have either been called into service, or have quit school for various reasons. But 17-year-old high school hoopsters will probably flock to the campuses in larger numbers than last year, and with a couple of veterans to form the nucleus, Oregon fans should witness even better basketball than last year.

ATHLETICS have virtually become "extinct" at Oregon. The Oregon army air corps did have a diamond baseball team, but with the ASTU boys gone, little rivalry or competition resulted.

Colonel Bill Hayward has been extremely busy with his number one love—track—only with high school athletes instead of college boys. His Hayward Relays, held after a year's absence, were very successful even though gasoline rationing prevented many leading schools from attending.

But Oregon athletes are still going strong—especially on the baseball front.

The number one athletic alumnus, Joe Gordon, '39, is now in the army, but before he left, he did show Eugene townspeople how it is done in the majors. He performed on several occasions with a group of local semi-pro players and played at Howe field against the army air corps.

Taking over Gordon's position as the number one Duck athlete in the majors is Ford Mullen, '40, a member of the great Oregon basketball team of 1939. Ford played for the Seattle Rainiers of the Coast league last year, and is now holding down second base for the Philadelphia Phillies in the National league. Although he has not found the range at the plate as yet, his fielding has been outstanding.

Bill Sayles, '39, formerly star pitcher for Howard Hobson's diamond teams, who saw service with various major league clubs, will do all of his hurling for the Fort Lewis Warriors this spring.

Two members of this year's basketball teams are also playing professional baseball in minor league clubs: Bob Caviness, '46, is on the roster of the Birmingham Barons—both as a pitcher and an outfielder—first baseman.

Barney Koch, '46, brother of Ray Koch, '37, who used to shine with Gordon around second base on the Oregon diamond teams, is now an infielder for Montreal of the Class AA International league.

Medical Award Set

A gift of $600 in memory of the late Lt. Comdr. Joseph Lipshutz, M.D. '20, who died while on duty in the Solomons in December, 1942, has been received by Ralf Couch, executive secretary of the University of Oregon medical school. Dr. Lipshutz was a member of the school's staff before he enlisted in the navy in 1941.

The sum will establish an annual award of $50 to be given to a fourth-year medical student presenting the best paper in the field of pediatrics.

Drama Alums Tagged on Shack Maps

By JEAN LAWRENCE, '47

Awaiting his call in the draft, Horace Robinson inaugurated a totally new drama system on the campus. The formation of a University Theater Guild and the presentation of a sampling of all dramatic types were the major projects included in the plan.

TWO maps hang over the davenport in the front room of the University of Oregon drama bungalow with long, name-tagged pins thrust into every section of the world from China to New York, and from California to Italy. The maps are of the world and the United States, and the name-tagged pins represent the many University drama alums who still keep in touch with the drama department through Horace Robinson, now acting head. He receives letters from these alums on the average of at least one per day.

Kept up to date by Kay Korn, '45, these maps are one of the projects of the "new order" in the University drama department. Besides opening the field to students in all classes and majors, and working on a systemized plan of productions for education and entertainment combined, the newly formed University Theater Guild takes pride in keeping in touch with its many enthusiastic alums. These have been collected in the last 11 years since Mr. Robinson came to the campus.

Looking over the world map, there are white pins for Pvt. Robert Over, '46, South Seas; Ensign Charles Boice, '42, Solomons; Lt. Fred Waller, '41, Alaska; Sgt. Jeff Smith, '37, Australia; and Cpl. Ethan Newman, '33, Hawaii. Gerry T. Smith, '38 (Pursuit of Happiness, Idiots Delight, Pygmalion, Roadside), is a bomber pilot in China. G. T. played leads in the Portland Civic theater until the army came along. Parker McNeil, '43, who played in Tovarich, Of Mice and Men, and the lead in Berkeley Square, is a lieutenant in the air force stationed in India.

Crowded together in England are the three pins standing for Robert Henderson, '38, Milton Pillette, '37, and Pat Neal, '37, who are with the Red Cross entertainment unit there. In Italy, concentrated around the boot are Capt. Edward Burtenshaw, '41, Lt. Jack Lewis, '38, and Sgt. Gene Edwards, '43. Lt. Art Gray, '30, is a captain in the special service, in charge of putting on army shows overseas, and Sgt. Jerry Lakefish, '42, (best remembered as George in Of Mice and Men) is doing the same kind of job somewhere in the East. Helen Gorrill, '41, is in Australia with the Red Cross.

HORACE (his students wouldn't feel just right calling him "Mr. Robinson") recently received a letter from T/3 Howard Ramey, '44, in Iran, explaining the way things work backstage in a legitimate Iranian theater. Capt. Don Childers, '39, pin still stands in the Philippines, its owner now a Japanese prisoner, and Alice May Sieling's, '38, name is still planted in France where she was last heard from before the Germans took Paris. Two black pins, one in Italy and one in West Africa, mark the last addresses of Major Kenneth Kirtley, '38, and Lt. Jens Hansen, '40, killed in action.

On the United States map are such names as Anne Brown Stewart, '44, and Lt. Walker Treece, '42, army camp, Mineral Wells, Texas; Lt. Jim Bronson, '43, Camp Blanding, Fla.; Helene Parsons Williams, '41 (Berkeley Square, Idiots Delight, Tovarich) married and in Salt Lake City, and Mary Staton Krenk, '43, Emily of Our Town, who also played the lead role in Of Thee I Sing. She now lives in Eugene while her speech department husband is in the army. Elenore Gullion Kornberg, '35 (Juliet of Romeo and Juliet) went to the Cleveland Community playhouse, played a couple of years, married the technical director, and is now back in Eugene, while the director is in the army.

California rates tops now with these drama alums: Dan C. Clark II, '37, Mare Island navy yards; Bill Terry, '36, who went from Gods of the Mountain, Cradle Song, and The Chief Thing at the University to Out of the Frying Pan on Broadway and Stage Door Canteen and others in Hollywood. Smoki Whitfield, '40, Emperor Jones, is working in a Los Angeles aircraft factory and playing bit parts in the movies. Most famous University movie hero, Edgar Buchanan, '25, is still doing Westerns with ease.

Lorraine Hixson Hanna, '41 (With Fear and Trembling, Night Must Fall, Arms and the Man, and Peer Gynt) married a member of the speech department who is now in the army, and is now making a try at the movies. Walden "Wally" Boyle, '37, (Ethan Frome, Dinner at Eight, Goodbye Again, and Peer Gynt), formerly a teacher in dramatics at Hobart college, New York, is now working in a Los Angeles aircraft factory and teaching in the UCLA drama department. Jim, '41, and Iris Smith, '38, who met in workshop class at the University are also in California. The other department couple, Eddie, '39, and Kay Hearn, '39, reside in Seattle.

ON THE East coast are Lt. Ted Bouck, '43, Brooklyn; Bill Wood, '44, navy, Norfolk; and Ralphine Moore Staring, '37, Washington, D.C., carrying on in drama at

George Washington university. Dorothy Durkee, '42, (George Washington Slept Here, Three-cornered Moon, and the lead in Wingless Victory) is playing in Michael Todd's new musical Mexican Hayride in New York city. In Boston there is a pin for Robert Farrow, '44, the Paul Lukas of the University's version of Watch on the Rhine, going to navy school. Norma Baker Merrill, '44, and Press Phipps, '43, represent Fort Benning, Ga.; and Eddie Row is in Pensacola, Florida.

All these and many more are pinned up on the two maps in the University drama bungalow. As many as is possible receive the Guild Gazette, a bi-monthly mimeographed gossip sheet edited by Ervin Webb, '47, another new project undertaken by the University Theater Guild. Comments on the Gazette, and also on the new organization, in letters to Mr. Robinson are many and favorable.

"People in the theater are much closer together than in any other department," says Mr. Robinson, "so they are more interested in knowing all about Jane and Mary, and what Al is doing in the army." The University Theater Guild does its best to let the alums in on the "know."

Another new University theater project is the file and point system. All students who attend the guild meetings fill out a card for the files. This card lists the student's name, major and class, material concerning his clothes size, etc., his acting "type," color and makeup, and also any particular accomplishment that he may have such as dancing and singing. Under the three categories of acting, business, and back stage is kept a record of everything the person does in relation to the University theater.

The point system is worked out on a basis of one point for every three hours of work. When a point is earned it is put down on the proper card, which is then placed on file as no card is filed until at least one point has been earned. A lead role counts from 20 to 30 points, and an

Collection Mirrors Northwest Culture

By A. L. LOMAX, '23, M.A. '27

Biography, travel, art, drama, essays, literary criticism, research material on the Pacific Northwest—all are a part of the Teal collection of over 2,500 books now on display in the Browsing room at the University of Oregon library.

FRRIENDS of the University of Oregon library meet annually to express their interest in an institution whose avowed function is to perpetuate the cultural ideals of the state and region of which it is a part. Perhaps it was that concept which prompted Mrs. Ruth Teal Durell of New York City to place here at the University her parents' library of more than 2,500 books and also extensive research material.

Since the generosity of the Teal family highlights this year's meeting, the occasion demands an appraisal and appreciation of those things which reflect the character and personality of these philanthropists: one of Oregon's outstanding citizens, Joseph Nathan Teal—lawyer, transportation expert, booklover, fisherman; and the cultivated woman who was his wife, Bessie Thompson Teal.

Mr. Teal's parents came to Oregon in the early '50's, and engaged in business in Eugene City, in which village their son Joseph was born. After nearly 10 years, they moved to The Dalles, where the father turned his attention to livestock raising and steamboating on the Columbia river. As a veteran of the Indian wars he was commissioned a colonel.

About the same time that the Teals arrived in Eugene, D. P. Thompson also came. He became active in various territorial and state matters as well as in business. At one time he was a prominent citizen of Oregon City, where he helped to promote the woolen mill; later he moved to Portland, becoming mayor. He served as minister to Turkey, and in 1897-99 was on the board of regents of the University of Oregon.

The two families of Teal and Thompson were united by the marriage of Joseph N. Teal to Bessie, daughter of D. P. Thompson. Thus, from the beginning of his life in Eugene, he and his family have been associated with this community and this University, which now gratefully acknowledges the gift of beautiful books presented to the library. Not the least of their benefactions is the Phimister Proctor statue of "The Pioneer" on the campus, gift of Mr. Teal; and the valuable collection of Indian basket-work given by Mrs. Teal's sister, Mrs. Genevieve Thompson Smith, an outstanding presentation of this year.

JOSEPH Teal became a prominent lawyer in Portland, and his practice in the field of transportation so engaged his interest that he spoke and wrote voluminously and published many treatises on the freight rate situation in the Pacific Northwest and Oregon in particular. The Teal gift is distinguished by the fact that it includes over one thousand items tracing the development of transportation and that it contains, it would seem, nearly every book, pamphlet, news clipping and important government publication affecting railroad, inland waterway, and ocean transportation in the Pacific Northwest.

We at the University feel most fortunate that such a collection of source material has been made available to scholars and students of commerce and transportation.

The Pacific Northwest is on the eve of far-reaching economic, social, and political developments not only within the region itself but extending far beyond the shoreline into the vast Pacific basin. This excellent collection of Northwest transportation history will be of great value to those who will shape policies as well as to students of Pacific basin development.

Besides this research material, there are nearly 2,500 beautiful books from the private libraries of Mr. and Mrs. Teal, which mark the diversity of their reading tastes. Mrs. Teal was a finely cultivated and educated woman. She attended private schools in Europe and while there traveled extensively with her parents. She contributed articles to the old "Outlook" magazine for which she was European correspondent.

The influence of these associations is strongly reflected in her fine private library which has been presented to the University, and which through the years will delight successive classes of discerning students. To name a few of these book treasures, there are volumes of Moliere, Montaigne, and 50 volumes of a standard French edition of Balzac bound in bright red leather. There is an attractive set of Thackeray, of Dickens; 20 volumes of Scott bound in blue leather; the great poets, many in gold-tooled full morocco, and a wide range of contemporary poetry.

There are shelves of biography and travel; many books illustrated by famous artists; 40 little classics printed by Thomas Mosher, and books from other private presses. Included are such books as Emerson's Journals; letters of Poe, Emily Dickinson, William James, Meredith, and others. There are volumes of Kipling, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Henry James, and Doestoevski. Art, drama, essays and literary criticism are widely represented. There are lovely garden books and the splendid re-issue of Audobon's Birds of America. In fact, books to fit any mood at any time now grace the shelves and tables of the beautiful Browsing room, where students drop in to read for pleasure when an odd hour can be snatched from a busy day.

Distinctive also are the books comprising Mr. Teal's library, reflecting the taste of a trained and liberal mind: The works of James Bryce, John Fiske, Francis Parkman; books on Lincoln; letters from the Adams family; Beveridge's Life of John Marshall; the definitive life of Disraeli; works of Adam Smith, Machiavelli, Burke, Rousseau; books on South America, Turkey, Japan, and other countries; on political science, peace and war, railroads; on fishing and out-door life; many books on Oregon and Pacific Northwest history, and sets of encyclopedias and dictionaries.

In looking over the Teal collection it is evident to the most casual observer that it has been selected and brought together book by book by cultivated minds for the pure enjoyment of reading. And it is fitting that these libraries of Bessie Thompson Teal and Joseph N. Teal, children of Oregon pioneers, should now be passed on by their daughter to generations of students at the University of Oregon, for their great profit and pleasure.

AFTER men have made the long trek to a new land, have succeeded in establishing security and leisure for their descendants, it is then that their children can direct their efforts toward educational and cultural objectives, toward creating an environment favorable to a richer intellectual

Red Cross Charter---for Valuable Service

By MARGUERITE WITTEWER, '47

Coeds get a chance to feel they are doing something to aid the war effort as they roll bandages at the campus Red Cross chapter. The campus group is now the proud owner of a full-fledged charter.

"IN THE Red Cross you have the opportunity of expressing your highest ideals in humanitarian service. Each accomplished task is doing as great a service to society as a gunner fighting enemy ammunition," said Mr. H. V. Johnson, prominent Eugene attorney and chairman of the Lane county Red Cross, to students at the Red Cross all-campus assembly, when he presented the charter for the University unit to Carol Wicke, '45, campus chairman.

This year the Red Cross organization, heretofore playing only a minor role in campus affairs, made front page news for the Oregon Daily Emerald by contributing a major part to the University's war effort. One of the first universities on the west coast to recognize the need for an efficiently functioning Red Cross unit, Oregon recently received the official charter sponsoring the organization from Red Cross headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The campus Red Cross, headed by Miss Wicke, junior majoring in Romance languages, has been one of the committees working under the jurisdiction of and in conjunction with the war board and chairman Jean Frideger, '44. In the latter part of fall term, Mrs. Cora Pirtle, executive secretary of the Lane county Red Cross chapter, suggested to Dean Karl W. Onthank, '13, advisor, and Miss Wicke that an independent college unit could be established on the campus. The college units are branches of the local chapters and are one of the newer projects in the expansion of the organization from national headquarters.

Negotiations between the Lane chapter and Washington, D.C. began. Dean Onthank and Miss Wicke met with fifteen Red Cross members among the students and the group petitioned for a charter from the Lane county chapter which referred the matter to Pacific area headquarters in San Francisco. At the end of winter term the official charter arrived and the complex work of reorganization was begun.

AT THE beginning of spring term the organization plunged headlong into the focal point of campus interest by undertaking the greatest task in its history; the people of America were asked to contribute $200,000,000 and the University quota was raised to $1,000. Mary K. Minor and Dorothy Rasmussen, freshmen in Liberal Arts, were co-chairmen of the campus membership drive and a contest between living organizations was begun. The war board offered to award a cup to the house turning in the largest support and $2.50 worth of phonograph records was the second prize.

Their competitive spirit stimulated, 13 living organizations subscribed 100 per cent membership and the total amount contributed topped the University quota by $56. Kappa Kappa Gamma was awarded the war board's cup at the Mortar Board Ball for winning first place in the drive with $109. Alpha Delta Pi, $72.69, came in second place, and Alpha Gamma Delta received honorable mention for their contributions of $1.48 per member. The contest was judged on a percentage basis and the average contribution per member by the Kappas was $2.79.

Although their support was not added to the campus total or included in the quota assigned, the soldier students contributed generously to the Red Cross. The air corps gave between $150 and $200, and the ASTU men added $392.61 to the total of $567.61 from the army.

Carol Wicke, who will remain head of the unit until she graduates, comes from Kahu-lui on Maui in the Hawaiian islands. Largely through her efforts the campus chapter was organized, and she is already making plans to insure the continuation of this work when she leaves.

The greatest accomplishment of the unit this year has been the complicated job of organizing the committees and chairmen in order to begin fall term with everything ready for work. It is hoped that the Red Cross room will receive sufficient interest to warrant remaining open for the summer session, and all coeds are urged to help make surgical dressings in their spare time from June to September.

Concerning the Student Union building which is scheduled for construction at the end of the war, Miss Wicke has one unrelenting request: There must be room included in the architect's plans for Red Cross work, which will be carried on in peacetime, too.

TALL, dark-haired, dark-eyed Carol became interested in the Red Cross when she felt that she must personally help the war effort after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, when her own family was endangered.

"Working for the Red Cross teaches people to have a sense of responsibility. When they get the Red Cross habit it will set a pattern in their personality which will keep them working at things they begin. The biggest thing in life? I don't know what it is yet, but I know that just talking about doing things for people never helped anyone. I've worked as a nurse's aide and when I see the look on people's faces after you do just some little thing for them, some little thing to make them feel better—I know this is true."

And Miss Wicke's philosophy of working hard to accomplish anything has showed results in the records established this year. Besides the $1,056 collected for the membership drive, 12,000 surgical dressings have been made by the coeds and sent to army and navy hospitals and first aid stations here and overseas. With the stepped-up wartime curriculum most University women have not had time to knit—only a few watchcaps for servicemen were finished; but it is expected that this project will achieve better results next year when it will receive more emphasis.

This year most effort was directed towards surgical dressings and establishing an awareness of the necessity of Red Cross work in Oregon coeds by building up the work habit and striving for regularly scheduled weekly hours in the Red Cross room for every girl.

ON Tuesdays the houses scheduled for work every day of the week were published in the Emerald. Members of each house reported the number of hours worked and at the end of each month the names of the winners were published and a revolving cup was awarded to the house which turned in the most hours. The houses topping the work list each week were also given extra publicity in the Emerald. Alpha

Frontline Alums

Capt. William P. Regan, '40, has been awarded the air medal for aerial action against the Japanese in the South Pacific. He was cited for scoring many hits on fortified areas, troop concentrations, anti-aircraft positions and Jap shipping. The flying marine was home in Pendleton in January and is now serving as section leader with a new group at El Toro, Calif.

After completing 25 missions as a Flying Fortress pilot in the European theater, Capt. Alan Tucker, '39, was awarded the distinguished flying cross. Earlier he was awarded the air medal and three oak leaf clusters. During the attack on Kiel his Fortress was badly damaged by fighter shells and flak and was set afire in three places. The top turret gunner and the radio operator put out the fires and with three engines working the bomber reached the target and fought its way home to a safe landing.

Determined to fly in spite of a "thumbs down" verdict on six different occasions by army medics, Capt. Carroll C. "Bob" Calkins, '44, overcame the decree of "unfit to fly because of functional high blood pressure." While a ground officer, Calkins learned the techniques of aerial photography, waited his chance, and finally flew as a pinch-hitting cameraman. His blood pressure now back to normal, he serves as waist gunner and cameraman. With an impressive number of missions to his credit, Calkins is one of the few—if not the only—ground officers ever to receive the Air Medal, three Oak Leaf Clusters and the DFC!

CAPT. CARROLL C. "BOB" CALKINS, '44, who beat the no flying rule of army medics to gain an outstanding record of missions and awards.

Capt. George K. Butler, '36, received the purple heart award for wounds received in the battle for Cassino last November. An enemy shot shattered a nerve in his right arm; however, the damage will not be

In Memoriam . . . Plaque Honors Casualties

A new plaque to honor former students and faculty of the University who have died in the service of their country will soon hang in the main hall of the administration building on the campus. It will replace an earlier one prepared by Sigma Delta Chi and outgrown by the expanding list. The gold-starred flag originated by the men's professional journalism fraternity will continue to accompany the plaque.

Both will serve as temporary reminders of those courageous men who gave their lives until after the war, when a permanent memorial will be constructed. Over $1,000 has been invested in bonds by Scabbard and Blade, the Inter-fraternity council, and the senior class of 1943 as a beginning fund for the construction of the permanent memorial.

Following is a list of the casualties whose names will appear on the plaque. It may be incomplete, because the University's sources for this information are limited to local newspapers and random accounts sent in by relatives and friends. For that reason the Alumni office would appreciate receiving verified reports of any others whose names do not appear on the present list. It is desired to make the memorial plaque as complete as possible to date.

STEPHEN S. BUSH, '42

Dear Editor:

I have received your first edition of the U. of O. Overseas Newsletter and enjoyed it very much. I'm eagerly awaiting the next one. While at the U. I was a member of the ROTC class of 1942 and went on active duty in June, 1942, as a second lieutenant administrative officer, or "paddle-foot," with the air corps. Three months later I went to England, where I joined a B-17 group. We went to Africa in November, '42, and remained there for a year. Before leaving Africa, I was transferred to a P-38 group, my present organization. I have been in Italy for four months. Altogether, I've been overseas nineteen months, but hope to return to the old U.S. soon.

While with the B-17 outfit, two of my fellow officers were Martin Luther, '42, and Fielding K. Weatherford, both pilots. Luther returned to the U.S. last summer after flying 50 missions and Weatherford is a captain in an air force headquarters here in Italy. Just the other day I ran into the first Webfoot I've seen in months. He was Major Mike Mikulak, '36, who is on duty with the military police here in Italy.

If you know of any other Webfoots on duty in Italy, I'd appreciate getting their addresses. I've been corresponding with a few classmates. Maybe you'd be interested in knowing who and where they are. Emerson Page, '42, is a captain (the last I heard, but he's going up fast) at an army air base in Florida, and is hankering to be overseas—naturally). Corporal Jim Lill, '41, is at present a skiing instructor in Wisconsin and saw action in the Aleutians last summer. Harry Kettering, '42, is a V-12 student at the U. of O. med school, in the U. S. Naval Reserve. John Halbert, '44, is a cadet at Georgetown university, studying to be an ordinance officer. Bob Brokaw, '44, is a bos'n mate, 1st class, at the U. S. Coast Guard station at San Diego. And Henry Morette, '41, is a corporal at Chanut field, Illinois, in a quartermaster company.

I'd appreciate hearing from anyone and will answer. Say "hello" to Anse Cornell and anyone around the athletic department who was there while I was football manager.

Well Known Pioneer Mourned by Alumni

Amos S. Benson, member of a prominent Oregon pioneer family, died at his home in Los Angeles on April 15, 1944. Among his many public enterprises was the endowment of Benson Polytechnic school and the building of the Benson and Columbia Gorge hotels, all in Portland. He also took an active part in the development of the state highways and donated the Madrona park to the city of Portland in 1921 and Benson park on the Columbia River highway.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Alice Benson Allen, '05, and Mrs. Caroline Benson Unander, '06; a brother, Chester S. Benson, '27; three daughters, Mrs. Georgia S. Benson Patterson, '24; Mrs. Virginia Benson Shaw, '38, and Mrs. Mary Benson Black, '39.

On the Alumni Record

The welcome mat is always out for alumni as they come and go between military posts, to new jobs, on vacations. Last month several visitors crossed the office threshold. Lt. Harold Kaschko, '41, now with the 241st field artillery battalion, Camp Howze, Tex., exclaimed that he really likes army life and frequently has a chance to see Fred R. Fisher, '35, a captain in the same battalion.

Lt.-Col. Roy K. Terry, '10, stopped long enough to bring his alumni membership up to date and pass along some news of his son, Tom Terry, '43, now a second lieutenant with the ski troops at Camp Hale, Colo. Tom will be remembered as a ski enthusiast while he was on the campus. He's in Co. I, 85th infantry. Colonel Terry was on his way to a new station at Camp Roberts, Calif.

Phil Barrett, '40, assistant pastor of the Presbyterian church in Sacramento, Calif., with a few days to spend in Oregon, brought his pretty wife, formerly Enid Mills (Fresno State) down to get acquainted with the campus.

Just prior to Junior weekend, Uly Dorais, '44, dropped by. A second lieutenant in the medical administrative corps, he has been stationed at a base in Missouri for some time.

During Junior weekend, 2nd Lt. Les Anderson, 1943 student body president, came back to the campus to see his best girl, Terry Watson, '44. He expected to report back to Camp McCoy, Wis., and a little later, perhaps overseas.

Looking chipper in her Wac uniform and carrying her overseas orders was Sgt. Mary Graham, '37, with but a few hours to spend in town before proceeding on to Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., then overseas. Mary will be remembered as the former secretary in the Educational Activities office.

Glimpsed strolling about the campus grounds, Glen Hass, '43, was looking things over before having to report back to navy headquarters at North Pacific school of dentistry in Portland where he is studying.

and spiritual life. That Mr. Teal was aware of such an opportunity is shown by his words spoken at the unveiling of the Pioneer statue in 1919.

"... Here the Willamette and McKenzie rivers join their waters into one grand channel and create this beautiful valley, the paradise to which the pioneer struggled over great mountains and across desert plains, to which he first came in numbers, and in which he first made his home. Here, too, the state which he created has founded its great institution to train its young men and women. No more fitting place than the campus of the University of Oregon could be found for the memorial."

Although the Teal library has been formally accepted by the University, it is proper that public acknowledgement should again be made of the forethoughtfulness of Mrs. Ruth Teal Durell, New York City, whose generosity will make possible the broadening of scholarly effort at the University of Oregon among its faculty and graduate students, and the appreciation of good literature and beautiful books by its undergraduates.

ON FURLOUGH from Camp McCoy, Wis., 2nd Lt. Les Anderson, 1943 ASUO president, returned for Junior Weekend. His campus record included membership in Friars, Skull and Dagger, Scabbard and Blade, and Delta Upsilon.

Chi Omega won first-rate weekly honors for three weeks, and Laurel lodge, a dormitory, placed second for two weeks. Alpha Delta Pi was awarded the Red Cross cup five times for outstanding surgical dressing work.

Every day an average of 15 to 20 girls reported for bandage rolling. The long tables in the white-walled Red Cross room on the third floor of Gerlinger hall were usually covered with busy scarlet-tipped fingers folding the squares of white gauze into the regulation surgical dressings. All the coeds were required to wear cotton dresses and kerchiefs. The instructors—especially trained—wore white uniforms provided by the war board and the white veils with Red Crosses, indicating many extra hours of work. Thus day after day this year the work has gone on, and often a coed could be heard remarking to her neighbor at the table, "Well, if we don't roll them, they'll have to roll their own!"

To the war board, to Carol Wicke, and to the hundreds of often unrecognized workers orchids.

Phi Sig House Sold

The Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity house near the corner of 13th and Alder streets has been sold to the men's cooperative association of the University. Vacated by active fraternity members early in spring term, 1943, the house will be occupied by co-op men fall term, 1944. In the meantime a private family has been occupying the house.

assistant director will earn as much or possibly more depending on the responsibility he takes. Points are given on the recommendation of the director, business, and stage managers at a meeting of the theater council held after a production or at certain times during the term.

THIS is the first time that such a file has been kept at the University. One reason for inaugurating this system is that former students so often ask Mr. Robinson for material on what plays they were in or what they did in the University theater for recommendations, especially now in the Red Cross field of entertainment, and he has no such file system to go by. Also it may be used in the future, when the program is farther along, as a basis for four-year awards or for a dramatic honorary.

Finally, looking to the future, the University theater is making plans for a new policy in production. As soon as conditions permit the producing schedule will be enlarged to include six performances a year, three contemporary and three of the "greater dramas." These three "greater dramas" a season, or 12 during a four-year period, will be so selected as to give a historical resume of the drama for each college generation of playgoers and performers.

Both the "greater dramas" and the contemporary material will be selected in such a way as to give a sampling of all dramatic types: farce, comedy, drama, tragedy, mystery, fantasy, and all styles (realism, stylization, experimental, impressionistic, expressionistic.)

This year was a sample year. The Theater Guild decided to put on four plays, a comedy, drama, experimental drama, and a musical. The comedy was Out of the Frying Pan which gave the season an excellent start and netted the largest box office for the last 12 years. The drama was Dark Victory, another topnotch success. Especially well-done was the experimental drama The Great God Brown which caused more dramatic comment on the campus and in Eugene than any other play produced on the campus in the last 10 years.

It is not the fault of the Theater Guild or Mr. Robinson that the fourth production was not realized, but rather that of the unyielding draft. At present Mr. Robinson expects to continue the school year, but he may be called at any time.

Lumberman, Statesman Dies in Eugene, April 28

The founder of the University of Oregon's student loan funds, Robert A. Booth, who was awarded an honorary masters degree in public service in 1929 "in recognition of his scholarly interest in the history and economic development of Oregon and his outstanding record as statesman and public servant," died in Eugene, April 28, following a short illness.

Mr. Booth, a founder of the Booth-Kelly lumber company, was a former member of the state highway commission (its chairman for three years), state senator for eight years, a trustee for Willamette university, and also helped to establish student loan funds at Oregon State college, Reed college, Willamette university, and Pacific college.

fire, typewriter on his back, after the Higgins boat of which he was an occupant hung on a coral reef offshore during the invasion of Tarawa.

Lt. Fred Bradshaw, '39, M.D. '41, now serving with the naval medical forces on Allied-held Pacific islands, was depicted in a series of U. S. Navy pictures, published in the Portland Oregonian, treating natives of the islands. Care of the natives, said the caption, helped prevent the spread of diseases to the troops stationed in the area.

For participation in 17 battles, Lt. Howard Hughson, '42, has seventeen stars, in addition to the Silver Star which was recently awarded to him for outstanding bravery in the South Pacific. Emerging from the flak of Japanese anti-aircraft fire after a bombing run on the Jap-held Kavieng airfield on New Ireland, Lt. Harold R. Hartzell, '42, discovered his marine corps Torpedo bomber was minus the right half of the tail assembly. His rudder bar, control stick, and instruments were crippled. Emergency tabs, which govern only up and down flight, were Lieutenant Hartzell's only mechanical aids in piloting the ship 230 miles through rain squalls back to his base. After a nearly perfect landing, he counted 56 holes in the bomber. Returning to the Jap airfield two days later, he scored a direct hit on the runway, which, he said, "worked wonders" for his morale.

Medical Officer Now Authority in Field

Proving that flight surgeons zoom over vast areas of the world's surface, Lt. Col. Roland F. Marks, M.D. '29, has an impressive number of air miles on his record. The officer, who began only a year ago to visit America's Pacific outposts, is now a recognized authority on tropical diseases peculiar to that area. He has studied afflictions common among island natives, to determine how susceptible U.S. soldiers might be to the same diseases.

Dr. Marks was an eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist, and a flight surgeon for Pan-American airways in the San Francisco area before he entered service. He interned at New York Postgraduate hospital and at the Columbia university medical school after graduating from the Portland medical school.

Navy Man Re-Decorated

Comdr. Eugene B. McKinney, '25, one of the navy's most decorated officers in this war, has done it again. The heroic submarine commander was recently awarded the Legion of Merit for damaging two large enemy warships and taking heavy toll of Jap shipping. He adds this decoration to his previously won navy cross, two gold stars and the silver star medal. The commander is now on Oahu.

1 Last year Union Oil Company made a net profit of $7,269,199. At first glance, that looks like a lot of money. But what many of us overlook is that in Union's case—as in the case of most corporations—that money was divided among a lot of people.

2 Union Oil Company is owned by 31,375 stockholders. Divided among that many owners, the net profits amounted to just $231.69 apiece. Even that sum wasn't all paid out in dividends. $2,602,929 of the net profits were plowed back into the business.

3 So dividends paid out averaged just $148.73 per stockholder — $12.39 per month. In contrast to this, wages and salaries averaged $252.00 per employee per month. Even government got more out of the company than the owners. $4,666,270 were paid out in dividends, $6,354,200 in taxes.

4 This is not pointed out as a complaint, but rather to show you that while Union Oil Company today consists of about 145 million dollars' worth of buildings, oil wells, refineries, ships, etc., it is owned by ordinary Americans like you and your neighbor next door.

5 77% of the owners live in the West — 389 in Seattle, 16 in Medford, Oregon, 3,570 in San Francisco, etc. 2,716 are Union employees. The average stockholder owns 149 shares. Some hold fewer, some more; but the largest owns less than 1½% of the total shares outstanding.

6 So it is not the investments of a few millionaires, but the combined savings of thousands of average citizens, that make Union Oil—and most American corporations—possible. And without some such method of financing heavy equipment, American mass production, with free competition, could never have been achieved.
