50 YEARS of General Electric Research

Industrial research began in 1900 in G-E laboratory set up in barn behind home of Charles P. Steinmetz.

When the General Electric Research Laboratory was established in 1900, it was the first industrial laboratory devoted to fundamental research.

At that time E. W. Rice, Jr., then vice president of General Electric, said:

Although our engineers have always been liberally supplied with every facility for the development of new and original designs and improvements of existing standards, it has been deemed wise during the past year to establish a laboratory to be devoted exclusively to original research. It is hoped by this means that many profitable fields may be discovered.

Many profitable fields were discovered—profitable not only for General Electric but also for industry, the American public, and the world.

A half century ago the industrial experimental laboratory was itself an experiment. This month it begins its second half century with the dedication of a new building, greatly augmenting the facilities it offers to the advancement of man's knowledge.

American Alumni Council Conference—A Report

Just how much importance U. S. colleges are attaching to their alumni programs is well borne out by the recent annual conference of the American Alumni Council held at Harvard University last July. For almost a week, some 400 professional alumni workers lived in dormitories and attended "class" on the banks of the Charles.

The curriculum was made up of 47 "courses" of the seminar or panel discussion type, all offering new approaches to the many tasks of an alumni secretary. Subjects included fund raising, magazine publishing, direct mail techniques, club activities, homecomings, reunions, and the many other activities normally identifiable with alumni associations.

The first conference of the American Alumni Council was held back in 1913 at Columbus, Ohio with 13 delegates present. Steadily the organization grew as more colleges saw the need for and the advantages of cultivating good alumni relations. Today a number of volumes are published by the Council in addition to the annual report of each of the 33 conferences held since 1913.

Because competition for patronage is nil, there are no "trade secrets" in alumni work. Ideas are exchanged openly and frankly. However, an idea that might have been a whopping success at one institution might end in dismal failure at another. But rare indeed is the alumnor (as alumni secretaries call themselves) who does not come away with a number of "gems" that he can use when he gets back home.

Admittedly, fund raising rates high in importance of the topics discussed at these annual meetings. But this doesn't mean that the latest devices to get old Al Umnus to cough up his last dollar to build a new gymnasium for alma mater is all that an alumnor cares about or thinks about. Far from it.

Alumni secretaries are doing some crystal gazing, too. That is why adult education programs are becoming integral parts of an alumni organization's program. That is why alumni magazines are carrying articles which discuss vital topics of the day, and book review columns have been added.

Colleges want their alumni to keep thinking even though they may have long departed from the classroom, and they are willing to accept some of the responsibility. As one old grad put it, "This was the first time I've heard a professor instead of the coach talk, at our last alumni meeting, and I actually enjoyed it."

Fulfillment

of an Oregon Dream

DR. DONALD MILTON ERB, after whom the Erb Memorial Student Union building is named, was born in New York State on August 3, 1900. He came to the University of Oregon March 1, 1938 as president. He had been professor of economics here for six years prior to 1933, when he went to Stanford. With his return to Oregon as the University's chief began the greatest epoch of expansion and prestige the institution had till then known. It was largely due to his leadership and ability that the upper division sciences were returned to the University. On December 23, 1943 at the age of forty-three, he died of pneumonia. An indication of his character is given in his words to the graduating class of 1938: "Be intolerant of superficiality, false analysis, evasion, and confusion of issues. Be tolerant in viewpoint regardless of religion, race, politics, economic status or education. By the force of your leadership and the consistency of your example help return a sane morality to the world..."

Donald M. Erb, 1900-1943

TWENTY-SEVEN years of planning, hoping, saving; years of alternate hope and discouragement; two years of actual construction: all have reached their fulfillment. The Erb Memorial Building is complete.

The $2,100,000 building was opened to the students September 17. The history of the building begins on that date, or perhaps in November of 1948, when construction began. But the history of the dream is now written in full. Homecoming, November 3, will see official dedication (dedication story page 10).

The dream began in 1923 when a drive for building funds was started under leadership of ASUO President John MacGregor. In the following years, the goal advanced and retreated, and it was not until after World War II that eventual success became certain. In early 1946 the fund stood at only about $100,000, but plans were going forward and a site had been paid for.

In 1947 a nation-wide campaign was launched under direction of Ernest Haycox, appropriately a member of the 1923 class, then president of the Alumni Association. All alumni were contacted and a building fund assessment of five dollars per term was collected from each student.

A ground-breaking ceremony was held in June of 1948 and construction started the following November. A billboard on the corner of 13th and University streets changed its slogan from "This is the Site of the Erb Memorial Building," to "Erb Memorial Union—Under Construction."

Only a few others of the names that have figured prominently in the 27 years of planning are those of the late Verdi Sederstrom '40, killed at Pearl Harbor, who led a student drive; Dr. W. V. Norris, consulting engineer in the early stages of actual planning after World War II; William N. Russell '35 who led a very successful Eugene fund drive; and Owen Bently '21 and Harry A. D. Smith '22. Lawrence, Tucker and Wallman of Portland were the architects. Thousands of students, former students and friends of the University have given support.

Director of the Union is Dick Williams '41 with his offices on the mezzanine of the new building. Assistant to the director is Olga Yevtich '49. Student supervision of the building will be handled by a Student Union board composed of representatives from each of the schools in the University and including the ASUO president and several faculty representatives.

The building areas may be roughly divided into five groups: basement area, mostly recreational in nature and including a barber-shop; food area; cultural area; ballroom area; student offices.

The basement recreation area includes eight bowling alleys, with seats for spectators and electric-eye foul lines; billiard room; and table tennis area. A central desk in the basement will coordinate recreation activities.

On the ground floor, the glassed-in soda bar will accommodate up to 350 persons. Meals of a hamburger and coke variety will be available at all times, and banquets in separate banquet rooms may be arranged for. A 100-side juke box will provide a variety of music in the soda bar, and loudspeakers in the roof may carry Oregon football games and other programs of general interest. Loudspeakers, in fact, are to be found all over the building, controlled from a central desk.

Cultural areas include a second-floor art gallery and music listening rooms. The browsing room, exact replica of the former library browsing room, might come under this classification.

The ballroom will do double duty, serving for both dances and movies. A Dad's lounge adjoins the ballroom, which saw service in the first week of school with the annual Hello Dance.

Student offices are centralized in the new building instead of being scattered about the campus. Included are ASUO, Panhellenic, Interfraternity council, Oregon and YMCA offices. The Alumni Office is on the mezzanine adjoining the Student Union offices, and a U.S. Post Office substation rounds out the list of offices.

The building contains six memorial rooms, furnished by families and organizations in memory of some loved one, most of them killed in World War II. The main-floor lounge with its leather furniture and fireplace is the Tom Taylor lounge; on the third floor is the Frank L. Chambers memorial board room, eye-catching with walnut wall paneling and 16 foot walnut meeting table; the student body president's office is the Maurice Harold Hunter memorial room; on the second floor is the Peter Benson Howard memorial music listening room; on the third floor is the Sigma Phi Epsilon memorial office; and a third-floor meeting room is the Colver Kemp Waller memorial room. Bronze plaques and framed statements telling the story of the memorial are hung in each of the rooms. (In its next issue, December, OLD OREGON will present a detailed picture of the building in words and photographs, including details of the memorial rooms.)

THE Korean war finds most Americans bewildered. Why, just five short years after victory over the Axis powers, are American boys fighting and dying in this small, insignificant and little-known country in the Far East? The answer, of course, does not so much lie in Korean politics as it does in the American-Russian rivalry that has grown first into the cold war and now into the first installment of a hot war. But why did the conflict begin in Korea?

Both Czarist and Communist Russia have had intense interest in this part of the world. Blocked effectively in Western Europe, the USSR turned its active attention to the Orient. The billion people of Asia, underprivileged and oppressed, offered an excellent field for the spread and acceptance of the doctrines of Communism. The inclusion of South Korea in the Soviet system would give Communism an unbroken stretch on the east coast of Asia stretching from the northernmost tip of Siberia in the Arctic circle to the southern border of China.

Failure to include South Korea in the Communist orbit would mean that a wedge that could be made into a bridgehead would be left threatening, in a military sense, the position of Siberia, Manchuria, and China.

Korea is a peninsula thrusting from the Asiatic mainland southeast by south into that part of the Pacific ocean known as the Sea of Japan. In area it is roughly the size of the state of Utah. Its population has recently been estimated as approaching 30 million, two-thirds of the people living south of the 38th parallel.

The peninsula is about six hundred miles long and averages about 125 miles in width. In a military sense it has a two-edged strategic value. The southern tip is separated from Japan by a strait only slightly more than a hundred miles in width. Occupation of South Korea by a hostile power endangers the military establishment in Japan. But Korea has also, historically, been the highroad of invasion from Japan to China. It also outflanks Manchuria and Siberia. So, the occupation of South Korea by a power hostile to these countries endangers them.

Over the many centuries of its existence, Korea was loosely held in the Chinese empire as a vassal state. When Japan, in mid-nineteenth century, decided to enter the modern world system of power politics, Korea was marked down for detachment from the Chinese. The struggle between China and Japan for Korea finally resulted in the Sino-Japanese war of 1894-95. Japan won this war but was unable to go ahead with its Korean plans, for Russia stepped into the vacuum created by China's loss.

Russia and Japan, after a ten-year political contest over Korea, finally waged war in 1904-05. Again Japan won. In 1910, Japan was finally able to fulfill its ambition and Korea was formally annexed as a colony. For the next 35 years, Korea was under Japanese colonial administration. However, in Korea the desire for independence never died. During this period there were many Korean underground parties, some of the strongest being Communist-led.

During World War II, as part of the plan to break up the Japanese empire, certain international undertakings were entered into by the United Nations concerning Korea. At Cairo, in November 1943, it was agreed among the United States, the United Kingdom and China that "in due course of time, Korea shall become free and independent." At Yalta, in early 1945, the decision was made for the entrance of Russia into the war against Japan. At Potsdam, in July, 1945, it was agreed that the zone of military operations for the Russians in their fight Communist parties. Our position was that in order to see that the government for a free independent Korea represented the true will of the Korean population, the establishment of the government should wait until all parties had had time to organize. In fact, the People's Republic was Communist-dominated. But the reaction of the majority of Koreans, both Communist and non-Communist, was bitterly anti-American.

The United States had been placed in the uncomfortable role of having kept the Koreans from becoming independent. Our position was made worse by our lack of trained American military government per-against the Japanese would be north of the 38th parallel; the zone for American military operations in Korea would be south of this line. When Russia entered the war, in the few days before the Japanese surrender, her troops entered North Korea. After the Japanese surrender, she quickly occupied the remaining portion of her zone.

The Japanese surrender caught the United States unprepared in its Korean policy. It was nearly a month before the United States could send troops to South Korea and then plans were formed only for the acceptance of the surrender of the large Japanese army that was in Korea. The American army, under General Hodges, was met by an involved political situation. Several days before the American forces landed, a convention of Korean parties was held and out of this convention came the establishment of a People's Republic. The United States refused to recognize this government as the free and independent government of Korea.

It was argued that the best organized of the Korean parties that had participated in the establishment of the People's Republic had been the Communist parties, that this had been unfair to the unorganized nonsonnel to take over the administration of the country, and our subsequent use of the old Japanese officials. It took the United States several years to overcome these initial disadvantages.

In the north, the Russians were in no such predicament, for it afforded them no embarrassment to recognize the Communist-dominated People's Republic.

This difference of opinion between the United States and Russia was placed on the agenda of the meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers that met in Moscow in December, 1945. An agreement for the settlement of the Korean problem was worked out when the council agreed that a four-powered trusteeship would be set up for the governing of Korea. It was further agreed that this trusteeship would last for a period not longer than five years, and that during the period of trusteeship the Koreans would go ahead with establishment of an independent government by democratic processes.

The reaction of the Koreans, with one notable exception, to this plan was immediate and violent. All of the non-Communist parties bitterly protested what they felt was another postponement of their independence. The notable exception was the group of Korean Communist parties who did not criticize the agreement to which Russia was a party.

In accordance with the Moscow agreement, early in 1946 the American and Russian military commanders in Korea met to establish the rules by which the Koreans could start working on the establishment of their own independent government. These conferences almost at once became deadlocked over the question of what Korean political groups would be allowed to participate in the establishment of the government. The Russians insisted that only those parties that had not protested the trusteeship should be allowed participation! Of course, this excluded practically every Korean who was not bound by the discipline of the Communist party. The American position was that all parties, including the Communist party, should participate if the government were to be democratic.

The discussions were soon abandoned and the 38th parallel then became a line marking off the political division of the country. After fruitless attempts to settle the question by bi-lateral action, the United States finally referred the question to the United Nations General Assembly.

In 1948 the General Assembly decided to sponsor a democratic election in Korea for choosing representatives to establish an independent Korean government. Although the decisions of the General Assembly are not subject to veto, the Russians boycotted the General Assembly action. The General Assembly decided to go ahead and to hold the elections wherever possible in Korea. A commission was sent to Korea to supervise the elections. This commission was denied entrance to the territory north of the 38th parallel. The elections were held in May, 1948, in South Korea, the United Nations' commission reporting that they had been held in a democratic fashion.

The representatives chosen in the election met in July, formed a constitution which set up the framework of the Korean government. In the legislature that was established, seats were left vacant for the North Koreans whenever they wished to enter the government. Thus by August a Korean government was established, sponsored by the United Nations, which laid claim to being the legitimate government for all Korea. The Russians in the north quickly countered this by the establishment of a People's Republic which, too, claimed to be the government for all Korea. Thus the Koreans were drawn into the large issue of American-Russian rivalry. Civil war was inevitable.

Russian and American military forces were soon withdrawn from the country. However, both sides left behind military missions to train the armies of the two governments. For whatever reasons that may be ascertained later, the United States failed to equip the South Koreans with the two major necessities of modern warfare: armor and an effective airforce. From 1948 to the outbreak of the war, the United Nations' commission continued its work, without success, trying to bring the two governments together. Finally, in the last of June, 1950, the civil war broke out when the North Korean forces invaded south of the 38th parallel. It is difficult to conceive, knowing the discipline that is exerted within the Communist parties, that the invasion was not undertaken without the specific decision having been made by the USSR.

That aggression posed for the United States as the leader of the world's anti-Communist countries the grave question of what to do about it if the dreary scenes of the 1930s were not to be repeated. We chose to sustain South Korea by Military force, acting in the name of the United Nations. The meaning, then, of Americans fighting in Korea is to sustain the principle of collective security, of collective action against military aggression.

To prevent other Koreas from happening, in a world that could not long stand an atomic war between the United States and Russia poses a larger problem.

The first step would seem to be the clear establishment of the rules of humanity by which we desire to live, the organization of all countries who wish to abide by these rules so that there may be provided a police force to enforce them.

The second and equally important step is a reexamination of the nature of the struggle between the United States and Russia. We have been too much inclined, it would seem, to think of the struggle against Communism in terms only of how much physical force it will take to contain it. Perhaps it would take less physical force if we were to shift to the question of what ideas are necessary to contain it. Much of the Communist success has taken place in areas where the mass of people are underprivileged and are grasping for freedom. It is time that we remembered and put into practice in our foreign policy the proposition that democracy stands for more freedom than the police state can ever grant.

In this contest for men's minds, they must be given the choice between our kind of freedom, and Communism—not between Communism and their old oppression. Can there be any question that if they really were given that choice that there would be the danger of defeat for our ideology?

DR. PAUL S. DULL SERVES AS COORDINATOR OF FAR EASTERN STUDIES

Webfoots in Washington

By Anita Holmes

WASHINGTON, D.C., news center of the world, home of a million and a half people, is like a giant revolving door.

From all corners of the country people come to whirl with the capital. A native of this city on the Potomac is not easy to find; few continue to go round and round from one legislative session to another, from one administration to its successor.

Natives seem almost to be outnumbered by New Yorkers, Iowans, even Oregonians. Because Oregonians in Washington are many, so are University of Oregon alumni. Almost every walk of life contains a former Webfoot or two.

Typifying the most familiar category—the government girl—is Liz Brinton '48. Certifying and testing new drugs is her job with the food and drug administration. Her Georgetown-section apartment is around the corner from young Roosevelt, a block or two from Dean Acheson's house.

After two years of revolving with the Washington door, she is considering the foreign service, a field which has its share of Webfoots. Nancy Moran '50 this summer was training in the foreign service institute of the State Department, and not many months before, Marie Newman '49 had flown to a job in Java.

Bob Allen, student body president in '48-49, also talks of eventually going overseas. He's now in the vital Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs, and he's worked several all-night shifts since the late days of June.

A few of the Oregon alums get together occasionally for lunch or cocktails, spiced with news from Oregon. Often among them is John Cavanaugh '41. He received his law degree from George Washington university last year and has since been legal counsel in the office of the quartermaster corps. (Cavanaugh was so active on campus that Bob Frazier '48 remembers being assigned to "just follow him around.")

Two of John's closest friends are the Kitchens—Jeff '43, Helen '42 and young son Cole. Their 41st street apartment is a favorite gathering place. Helen finds time for some free-lance writing—she was Emerald editor on the campus, later working for Readers Digest. Her husband spends his working hours with an international powderkeg—Iran. He's a political desk officer in the State Department. On the campus Jeff was very much interested in the political—Webfoots of the early '40s remember his campaigning for Nancy Ames as student body president.

Such campus memories as that election are discussed when grads meet at the Kitchen home. Most of the Oregonians vote back home by absentee ballot, so state politics are almost sure to be hashed over.

Last summer, Wayne Morse's chances of returning to the Senate were well reviewed. Oregonians in Washington closely follow this man Morse, whose disregard for party lines and shrewdness in debate and committee have won him a place in newspapers up and down the Eastern seaboard.

As former dean of the Oregon law school, Morse is rightly considered one of the Webfoots in Washington. All other members of the Oregon delegation, except senior senator Guy Cordon, have either attended or "married into" the University.

Harris Ellsworth, fourth district congressman, was graduated in 1922. At that time readers of Lemon Punch little knew that one of the promoters of this now-dead campus humor magazine would someday be bucking CVA or talking about the boxcar shortage on the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives. His wife is the former Helen Dougherty '22. Their daughter Jane '48 recently made Washington society pages with her marriage to Thomas McKenna.

Congressman Stockman is linked only through his wife, former Dorcas Conklin '23, but Congressmen Homer Angell '00 and Walter Norblad both have cards in the alumni files.

Eyeing that absentee ballot, at least one of these Congressmen—Ellsworth—has a list of Oregon graduates, including some of the Pentagon population:

Major Raymond Schwar '40, Col. Lloyd H. Watnee '25, Maj. Bruce B. Hammond '41, Col. Don Z. Zimmerman '24, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Belieu '37 and '38, Major Frank S. Ison '30, Lt. Col. Mike Mikulak '36, Lt. Col. Joseph N. Renner '35, and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Fred J. Stevens Jr. '29 and '31.

Doctors of both medicine and philosophy are listed: Dr. and Mrs. Robert Y. Walker '29 and '27, Dr. Bruce E. Foster '29, Dr. Beatrice Aitchison '37, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Callaghan '26 and '31, and Dr. Kenneth H. Hunter '25, who is now head of the department of economics at American university.

Journalists: William E. Lowell '48 with the Washington A.P. bureau; Arthur L. Schoeni '30, whose address is Naval Aviation News; Charlie Hulten, formerly of the Oregon journalism faculty, now deputy assistant secretary of state and general manager of America's world-wide program of information, propaganda and educational exchange, including "Voice of America" broadcasts.

Carlton Savage '21, general consultant in the State Department, has been special assistant to Byrnes, Hull, Stettinius, Marshall and now Acheson.

A former alumni secretary is Mrs. Fergus Wood (Doris Hack '41), whose husband, a '38 graduate, is assistant professor of physics at University of Maryland. She was able to mention:

Mrs. Charles Owen (Charlotte Plummer '39); Mrs. Betty Brown Park, 1940 graduate of the Oregon law school; Blanche A. McClellan '40, overseas during the war; and Mrs. Jewel Ellis Reybold '35.

Picking a Washington building at random, you'd likely find a Webfoot at work there:

In the FBI there's Dick Tansing '48; in the ECA Merlin Nelson '43; in the Treasury building Grant Conway '37, very active in the Oregon State Society; in the Department of Justice James P. Garland '26; Library of Congress, Myron W. Getchell '11.

That's where they were recently; some have probably stepped out of the revolving door by now, and there are many who have been left out, but a newcomer in the overgrown county seat that is Washington can do no more than catch a few names and classes as dozens of Oregon alumni go by, all helping the city spin.

THE OLD OREGON crystal ball is under a severe strain because of the publication schedule. Coach Jim Aiken's Webfoots have met U.C.L.A. and California by now, but they hadn't at press time. Predictions written three weeks ago would be useless in the light of definite scores . . .

But here's a tip: If Oregon won both games, look for a very good season. If they lost both, the next three rate pretty much as breathers, and the team could well end with a roar. If they split, the same applies but a little more emphatically.

Who'll play where? That's been decided now, too, pretty well—but it wasn't at writing time. Jim Calderwood, reserve quarterback last year, put in an unexpected appearance and looked to have the nod there, and last year's regular quarter, Earl Stelle moved from quarter to full and then to half-back. He may have moved again by now. The same applies everywhere.

The only established thing is the coaching staff. Aiding Aiken are End Coach Jerry Lillie, Line Coach Bob McClure, and new Backfield Coach Johnny McKay, member of last year's backfield. Freshman coach is Bill Bowerman.

The remaining schedule reads thus:

- Oct. 7—Montana at Eugene.
- Oct. 14—Idaho at Moscow.
- Oct. 21—St. Mary's at Eugene.
- Oct. 28—U.S.C. at Los Angeles.
- Nov. 4—W.S.C. at Eugene (Homecoming).
- Nov. 11—Washington at Seattle.
- Nov. 18—Colorado at Boulder.
- Nov. 25—Oregon State at Portland.

(The Oregon State game is an OSC home game, merely transplanted in Portland, and Oregon's ticket allotment probably won't go far enough to include all interested Portland-area alumni.)

So the crystal ball stays in mothballs until the December issue, when "predictions" about the season will be much safer.

Profile: Dave Gibson

Something much more certain than who will defeat whom is that the life of today's college football player involves plenty of work. That's no surprise, but there were some surprises when OLD OREGON interviewed a relatively typical Webfoot gridder—Dave Gibson, a center through seven years of high school and college, recently moved to left tackle in the Oregon line.

One surprise was in regard to studies. Dave, an architecture major with a solid though not astounding g.p.a., somewhat above campus average, feels he does better work during football season. "There's so much to do that you just about have to make better use of your time, knowing you have to be in bed by 10 o'clock."

Denver-born Dave went through high school there, was attracted to Oregon at least partly because of the standing of its architecture school. Structural architectural architecture is his special interest. He likes the coast and hopes to stay here after graduation, with the cooperation of Uncle Sam and prospective employers.

The day begins for Dave, and all the other gridgers, at about 7 with breakfast—

Football Time Again

The crystal ball is a little indefinite, but Dave Gibson figures the 1950 eleven will indeed be a "fighting team" during the three weeks before school starts. After that they move into their living groups—Dave's an SAE—and follow a somewhat less regimented schedule. It's full-time before school, though. Training table breakfast at Carson hall is followed at 8:30 by chalk-talk, then morning practice from about 9 to 11.

It's about time for lunch at Carson by the time showers are over, then some "hit the sack," write letters, or talk till afternoon chalk-talk at 2:30 followed by two more hours of practice ending around 5. Then dinner. Then a show, or a date, "if you can get one" (Dave looks like he should have no more than usual trouble).

But the team has to return to Sederstrom hall, where they stay before school begins, by 10 p.m. every week night—and be in bed. After school starts the bedtime remains the same, and dinner is the only training-table meal, now at John Straub hall.

Practice shifts to a one-a-day schedule after school begins, and the hardest is, he says, over. But it's still work. In the early days of practice this year Dave dropped from 210 pounds to 195—and this isn't unusual among the players. One hot day last year he lost 16 pounds in one scrimmage. Most of this is lost in perspiration and soon comes back. He's up around 210 now, at 6 feet 2 inches.

Dave has earned two letters at center and is sure to earn a third this year at his new tackle position. He enjoys learning the new position, though finding it hard work.

How will the team do? Dave found more spirit shown at practice this year than ever before, says Oregon will surprise some opponents this year, and "they'll all have to play a hot 60 minutes to beat us.

Dave Gibson, below and inset, a senior on Jim Aiken's 1950 grid machine, will be a regular at offensive tackle.

Herbert J. Darby '23, vice-president of Mail-Well Envelope company of Portland, succeeds Robert S. Miller '35 as president of the Association. Miller as the immediate past president becomes a member at large of the executive committee. New vice-president is William N. Russell, Eugene businessman, who follows Francis Heitkamper '31 in that position. Harry A. D. Smith '22, manager of Olds and King in Portland, will fill the member-at-large position left by Russell.

Other members of the executive committee remain the same—Lester Anderson '43 as director and members-at-large Charles R. Holloway '35 and Orval N. Thompson '35.

New county directors appointed to three-year terms include Elvert S. (Ox) Wilson

'47, manager of the Baker hotel, succeeding James T. Donald '15; in Baker county; Frank C. McKinney '42, Oregon City attorney, succeeding Peter Laurs '27 as Clackamas county director; in Clatsop county, Don Malarkey '48 of the Lovell auto company in Astoria succeeding Robert S. Lovell '42; in Columbia county, Rainer lawyer Joe F. Walker '42 replacing the late James Mason Dillard '42; in Crook county, Dale F. MacKenzie '43, succeeding Remy Cox '22.

Reappointed to three year terms were Walter Durgan '28 of Corvallis, Benton county; George Huggins '16 of Coos Bay, Coos county; Vernon F. Hanscam '38 of Harbor, Curry county; George Luoma '41 of Roseburg, Douglas county; Elbert L. Nielsen '36 of Bend, Deschutes county; Robert Stranix '35 of Condon, Gilliam county; Orval D. Yokum '27 of John Day, Grant county.

There are no changes in the county directors having terms with a year yet to run. Of the directors whose terms expire in June, 1952, William A. Barker '36, Medford clothier, replaces Harry Skerry '45 as Jackson county director; and William J. Moshofsky '47, Klamath Falls attorney, replaces John Houston '21 as Klamath county director. Houston has been particularly active in the Association for many years.

The two top elective leaders of the association for 1950-51 were elected by mail ballot inserted in the June issue of OLD OREGON. They were nominated by a committee appointed by Past-President Miller, consisting of Ralph R. Cronise '11 of Albany, chairman, Boyd Overhulse '33 of Madras, Reynolds Allen '35 of Salem and Robert S. Lovell '42 Astoria. As provided in the constitution of the Association, only one slate, of Darby and Russell, was made by the nominating committee; other nominations may be made by petition signed by at least ten members of the Association, but no such petitions were received this year.

New president Darby has been active in the Alumni Association for many years. He has been president of the Portland Alumni club for the past two years and originated the Portland Alumni institute.

Darby lives in Portland where he is vice-president and general manager of the Mail-Well Envelope company. His wife is the former LaVerne Levis '24, and their daughter Ann is now a junior at the University.

Russell, the Association's new vice-president, has also served the Association in many ways since graduation. He has been a member of the executive committee for the past two years and acted as chairman of the highly successful Eugene campaign for the Erb Memorial Union.

A long-time Eugene resident, he is the owner of Russell's department store. During the war he served with an infantry division in Europe where he was wounded in action. He is married to the former Janeth Talbot; they have a son and two daughters.

I wanted personal freedom, and payment in direct proportion to my efforts

BACK in the days when I was deciding on a career, I was determined to choose one that would give me great personal freedom, plus advancement and pay in direct proportion to my efforts.

Of all the possibilities I studied, only one career — life insurance — seemed to promise these particular rewards. I next investigated several companies, and selected New England Mutual — for a number of reasons. I had been impressed with its magazine advertising*. My college roommate had joined this company earlier and had established a fine record. And I liked the type of men I met in the New England's offices here in Kansas.

I'm glad I made the choice I did. For now, I honestly feel that every minute of every day of the rest of my business career is mine to do with as I please. I am paid in direct proportion to my efforts. There is no waiting for advancement through "channels." But, even more important, life insurance is more than a mere job. It is a source of ever-increasing satisfaction for me to provide my clientele with a safe investment which becomes so vitally important to them in times of distress or tragedy.

Charles A. Colby

Recent graduates of our Home Office training course, although new to the life insurance business, earn average first-year commissions of $4200—which, with renewal commissions added, brings the total yearly income average to $6500. From here, incomes rise in direct proportion to each individual's ability and industry.

If you'd like information about a career that gives you a business of your own, with no slow climb up a seniority ladder and no ceiling on earnings, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Mass.

The New England Mutual, America's first chartered mutual life insurance company, backs up its field force with strikingly effective national advertising. This advertisement, appearing currently in The Saturday Evening Post and Fortune (in full color), and in Time, Newweek and Business Week, tells millions of prospects about the advantages and flexibility of New England Mutual policies, and urges them to consult our field men for expert help on life insurance problems.

CHARLES A. COLBY, Wichita, Kansas

Founded in 1835, the New England Mutual is the first mutual life insurance company chartered in America. From the start its ideal has been that of complete mutuality—a company owned by the policyholders and operated for their benefit. In this spirit of service, it has always been a leader in pioneering the "liberalization" of insurance procedure, provisions and methods. Insurance in force now exceeds $2¾ billions. During its business life, New England Mutual has paid to policyholders more than $1 billion, of which nearly $300 millions have been dividends.

Alumni Support Needed

Alumni and all friends of higher education can save the State System of Higher Education $1,200,000—at no expense to the taxpayer—by voting 302 Yes on a proposed constitutional amendment in November. The vote of husbands, wives, neighbors, brothers and sisters, associates and all friends will be necessary.

What the amendment will do is this:

It will enable the State Board of Higher Education to redeem and refund outstanding revenue bonds—issued to pay for income-producing buildings such as Carson hall and the new Student Union—and in their place issue general obligation bonds of the state of Oregon. The lower interest rate on the general obligation bonds will save an estimated minimum of $1,200,000.

The figuring is simple. The present revenue bonds require an interest payment of approximately $4,000,000 over the entire life of the bonds. If these bonds were general obligations, secured by the state, present interest charges would come to only about $2,800,000.

The change amounts to this: In place of the present bonds which are backed by only one agency of the state—in this case, the State Board of Higher Education—the new bonds will be backed by the full faith and credit of the state. In general, the prevailing interest rates on general obligation bonds are significantly lower than interest rates on revenue bonds.

The funds to pay interest and principal on either type bond come from a compulsory building fee assessed against all students; from income from the buildings, such as board and room, proceeds of athletic activities; special privilege charges; income from concessions within the buildings; contributions and other sources.

Leaders of all the state-supported higher education units are on record in favor of the amendment. President H. K. Newburn of the University says this, "This measure should be important to every citizen interested in utilizing educational resources to the fullest. It will make possible a substantial saving in interest charges on self-liquidating bonds issued by the institutions of higher education—without imposing an additional tax or financial burden on the state."

Dr. J. F. Cramer, dean of the General Extension division, points out another aspect: "This constitutional amendment is of direct interest to every citizen of Oregon as its merits are recognized equally in all localities regardless of the presence or absence of an established institution of the State System of Higher Education. As the State System agency in direct personal contact with every community of the state without qualifications of size or location, the General Extension division endorses this measure for its public savings and its personal services."

Safeguards are provided: Bonds can be issued only upon specific authorization of the legislature. Without legislative approval no bonds may be issued under this measure for new buildings until all outstanding revenue bonds shall have been redeemed or refunded. Bonds may not be issued at any one time in excess of three-fourths of one per cent of the assessed valuation of all the taxable property in the state. At present this means a maximum of $10,500,000.

The $1,200,000 that will be saved through approval of this movement will be used primarily to retire the presently outstanding bonds more quickly and to erase the debts of the state as rapidly as possible. The more rapid repayment of the debts of any state agency reacts to the benefit of all taxpayers.

The background for issuing bonds for higher education is this: Stated broadly, the action was made necessary by the growth of Oregon's system of higher education. Buildings for higher education fall into two general classes. The first, is that of purely academic structures—classrooms, laboratories, libraries, and administrative buildings. These buildings produce no revenue and must be financed by legislative appropriation. The second class, includes dormitories, student centers and athletic facilities. These do produce income.

The great need for this second group of buildings was met by the marketing of revenue bonds. The erections of such fine buildings as Carson hall and the Erb Memorial Student Union is a monument to careful planning and a forward look toward even greater college enrollments.

The bill has no organized opposition; it will not fail through opposition but only through lack of support. University of Oregon alumni can render a great service to the entire state higher education system through their favorable votes and active support.

Homecoming Scheduled For November 3, 4, 5

Homecoming, 1950, will take place November 3-5. Formal dedication of the Erb Memorial Student Union on Friday night will share the spotlight with Saturday's football battle, this year with Washington State's Cougars.

Annual events will include the Friday night noise parade, which will end up near the Student Union following dedication, just in time for open house; the sign contest; frosh bonfire—provided it's not prematurely touched off by Oregon Staters, or by the sophomores as in 1938; alumni "fish fry" in the Student Union; and possible rain as an informal, uninvited guest.

Dedication of the Student Union will take place at a 45-minute program beginning at 8:15 p.m. Friday. About 2,000 invitations will be sent to the principal donors to the building, plus about 500 others. The last half-hour will be broadcast over a Eugene station. Open house for the entire interested general public will follow the dedication program.

Dedication activities will take place in the ball room. Prospective speakers at press time were Governor McKay, John MacGregor '23, ASUO President Barry Mountain, a representative of the State Board of Higher Education and President Newburn. Featured speaker will be Porter Butts, superintendent of the Wisconsin Student Union. Chairman Kleinsorge of the state board's building commission will be present, and the whole board has been invited.

Representatives of various groups will include Dick Williams, Student Union director; Bill Russell '35, representative alumnus; Henry Panian, representing the student-run Student Union board; Barry Mountain, student body president; Glenn Starlin, faculty representative; Les Anderson, Alumni director; and Lyle Nelson, director of information.

Previous to the dedication, the building will be consecrated by representatives of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths, at 5 p.m. The ceremony is in the charge of the University Religious council.

By the time the Nov. 4 football date arrives, Pacific Coast Conference football fortunes will be pretty well determined, but with the Cougars of W.S.C. certain to sport the fancy U. of Michigan offense of their new coach, Forrest Evashevski, the game is sure to be interesting. And of course it will be the Homecoming game.

Construction Work Centers In Four Campus Buildings

With completion of the Erb Memorial Student Union, major construction and remodeling work on University buildings has centered in four campus structures.

The now-completed library wing nearly doubles floor space.

Library Addition

Library floor space has been nearly doubled with completion of the addition to the main structure, which adds 40,000 square feet of floor space to the 60,000 already available.

The addition, pictured on this page, was built at a cost of $750,000. The mid-section which joins the wing to the main building is finished in traditional brick, but the wing itself is of metal facing, painted dark gray. The wing will add room for 100,000 more books, making it possible to house a total of over half a million volumes. About 20 percent of the total enrollment of the University can be seated simultaneously in the entire building.

Architects for the wing, as for the original building when it was built in 1937, were Lawrence, Tucker and Wallman of Portland.

Heating Plant

About 20 per cent completed is the new science building, expected to be finished in about another year at a cost of $1,500,000. The concrete shell has been poured to a height of two stories at one end. The new building is across the dead-end of University street from the Journalism building.

It will house chemistry, physics and biology lecture rooms seating up to 200 students, will contain a working area of 100,000 square feet—and will be free from the usual chemistry-building smell thanks to specially designed ventilation, which will make air pressure inside the building slightly higher than outside, forcing odors out through special ducts. Lawrence, Tucker and Wallman are architects.

Science Building

Less publicized than the new buildings but equally striking, at least from inside, is the partially-complete remodeling of the interior of Friendly hall, begun last spring and over half way toward completion at a total cost of $82,000.

The one-time University dormitory turned classroom and office building is being given new plaster, new windows and frames, new lighting, new wiring, new plumbing, asphalt tile floors and complete interior trim. There will be no exterior changes made in the building, which was named for the late S. H. Friendly, pioneer Eugene merchant and friend and Regent of the University.

Friendly Hall

The new heating plant across the highway and Millrace from the rest of the campus, a $1,000,000 project, is nearing completion. A tunnel under 'Race and highway has been completed and steam heat for the campus will be produced starting in November; electric power for the entire campus will be furnished, at a considerable saving on electric bills, soon after the new year.

The heating plant is a concrete structure adjoining the new University warehouse, also across the 'Race. Offices of the physical plant have been moved from the old physical plant across from the art school to new locations in the warehouse.

Grades Show Rise

Seventeen per cent of the nearly 1,500 June graduates receiving bachelors' degrees had grades of 3.00 (B average) or better for their college careers minus the last term. Forty-two students—three per cent—had averages of 3.50 or better.

Grades of undergraduate living groups for the 1949-50 year found Orides, off-campus women's organization, and Philadelphia house, new men's co-operative leading with averages of 2.960 and 2.745 respectively.

Women's groups continued to show a definite grade superiority over men's organizations. Four women's groups led Philadelphia house, the first men's group, and Tau Kappa Epsilon, which ranked second among the men was behind nine women's organizations.

Other leaders among the women were Delta Gamma second, Ann Judson house, Highland house, Pi Beta Phi, University house, and Chi Omega. Next ranking men's groups were Omega hall third, Cambell club, Theta Chi and McChesney hall.

The all-University average for the year was a 2.487, nearly midway between the supposedly average C and a B grade. All-women's average was a 2.605, all-men's 2.4302. Women's sororities attained a 2.583, women's dormitories 2.537. Men's dormitory average was 2.3789, fraternities 2.376.

Grades for spring term alone revealed that in the process of leading all campus groups for the year, Orides set a record for one-term grades with a 3.13, better than B average. Also an all-time high was the spring-term all-University average, 2.556.

THE FACULTY

Warren D. Smith Dies

Dr. Warren D. Smith, geologist of national stature and for 34 years a University of Oregon faculty member, died July 18 at his home in Eugene, at the age of 70.

He served as head of the combined departments of geology and geography from 1932 until his retirement in July 1947. He was professor emeritus at the time of his death. Noted not only for his own work in the field, but also for his training of young geologists, Dr. Smith was also known in the northwest as a speaker and writer.

An expert on the Phillipine islands, Dr. Smith served as geologist for the U.S. Government Mining bureau in Manila from 1905 to 1906 and as chief of the division of mines in the islands from 1907 until coming to the University in 1914 as head of the department of geology. On leave from the University, he served from 1920 to 1922 with the mining bureau and as chief of the division of mines in the Bureau of Science of the Phillipine government.

Warren Du Pre Smith was born May 12, 1880, in Leipzig, Germany. He was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1902 with degree of bachelor of science. He received his master's degree from Stanford university in 1904 and Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1908. He married Phoebe Ellision in 1910. She died in Eugene in 1939.

Dr. Smith was a long-time member of the Eugene Rotary club, was a member of the mountain-climbing Obsidians, and active in the Congregational church. He belonged to Phi Beta Kappa; Sigma Xi, science honorary; the Geology Society of America; and was a fellow in the Royal Geographical society.

He is survived by a brother, Charles F. Smith, Wausau, Wisconsin; two sisters, Mrs. E. W. Blakeman, Berkeley, California and Mrs. E. J. Harvey, Deerfield, Wisconsin; a daughter, two sons, and two grandchildren.

Hawk New Dean of Men

Norman Ray Hawk '47, formerly a counselor in the office of student affairs, has been appointed associate director of student affairs for men, replacing Vergil Fogdall who held the post for the last three years and is now dean of men at Lewis and Clark college in Portland.

This position is equivalent to the post of dean of men, explains Donald M. DuShane, who holds the over-all position of Director of Student Affairs.

A 1947 graduate, Dr. Hawk also holds a master's degree and doctor of education degree from the University, the latter degree granted in 1949.

Dr. Hawk's teaching background includes two years as instructor in physical education and coach at Grants Pass. He spent four years in the service in fields of athletics, recreation and information and education services. He now holds a major's commission in the Air Corps reserve and has been designated as adviser on military matters in connection with an emergency program set up by the University to provide information concerning selective service and other military programs which will affect Oregon students.

(The effect of the draft on men students of the University could not be definitely told at OLD OREGON deadline, but it has been noted that selective service regulations provide that students enrolled in colleges and universities this fall may be allowed to finish the current academic year.)

Dr. Hawk explained that he will follow more or less the pattern set by his predecessor, stating "We will, of course, always stress academic standing." Also planned is a survey of off-campus housing, he said, primarily to make sure that such housing is adequate for students.

Dr. Calvin Crumbaker, retired head of the economics department, now runs Eugene Business College.

Dr. Crumbaker Retires

Retirement means no cessation of activity for Calvin Crumbaker, who was retired as head of the economics department at the end of spring term and now runs the Eugene Business college with his wife.

Dr. Crumbaker was a member of the University faculty for an even 20 years, becoming head of the economics department with the retirement of James Gilbert several years ago.

Before coming to Oregon he was on the University of Wisconsin faculty for two years and at the University of Montana for five. He also ran a hardware store and a wheat farm in Montana, where he was in the state legislature six years and speaker of the house two years. He holds a bachelor's degree from Whitman college, master of science from University of Washington, and Ph.D. from University of Wisconsin.

At the University he was a member of the academic requirements committee for many years and chairman of the committee on military education for 12 years.

The Crumbakers bought the Eugene Business college a year ago, and have moved it to a new location on East 11th. A general business college teaching mainly accounting and clerical work, it has 50 years behind it. Crumbaker, his wife, and two others make up the staff. Mrs. Crumbaker has done graduate work at the University and their daughter, Mary Kathryn Crumbaker Williamson is a 1946 graduate.

Byrne Interim Chancellor

Charles D. Byrne, for 18 years secretary of the State Board of Higher Education, in mid-September was named "interim chancellor" replacing Dr. Paul C. Packer who resigned to become director of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs educational program in Paraguay.

Byrne's appointment was called non-permanent by State Board Chairman Edgar Smith, but Byrne is to hold full power and prestige of the office until appointment of a permanent chancellor. He will continue as board secretary in the meanwhile. He will also aid in selection of the new chancellor.

At one time a newspaperman, Byrne has headed the departments of journalism at both South Dakota State college and Oregon State college. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and holds a Doctor of Education degree from Stanford university, where he was a visiting professor of education.

He was at Oregon State when the State System of Higher Education was formed and became director of information for the system, later board secretary and assistant to the chancellor.

The interim appointment was announced after a day and a half of closed meetings of the State Board of Higher Education, at which the college and University presidents were called upon to testify. They were not present during the board's discussions.

Dr. Packer had been chancellor since September, 1946 when he replaced Dr. Frederick M. Hunter in that position. Dr. Packer held a B.A. degree from Iowa State university, master's from University of Michigan, and doctorate from Columbia University. During World War II he held the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the education and information division of the Army. He formerly held the post of dean of the college of education at Iowa State.

Lester Beck Resigns

Lester Beck '30, nationally recognized pioneer in sex education for children and for many years professor of psychology in the University, has resigned to become head of the department of cinema at the University of Southern California.

Charles D. Byrne, recently named "interim chancellor" of the State System of Higher Education.

Professor Beck gained national recognition for his film "Human Growth," an explanation of human reproduction for students at the junior high school level. He completed a second film, "Human Beginnings," this year, designed for children at the first grade level.

He joined the University faculty in 1934. During World War II he headed the film evaluation section of the Army Pictorial service. Later he became a Naval reserve officer, evaluating training film production and usage.

Stehn Leaves Campus

John Stehn, connected with the University music school for 21 years, will leave the campus this fall but will retain his rank as member of the University faculty. He will be in charge of all musical activities of the extension division of the State System of Higher Education in Portland.

Stehn, who has become familiar to townspeople of Eugene as long-time director of the municipal band, joined the faculty in 1929 as assistant professor. His rank now is associate professor, and for many years he has been director of the University band.

Officer Again Trainer

Bob "Two Gun" Officer has rejoined the University athletic department as trainer after an absence of four years. Officer was coach at Pleasant Hill high school near Eugene at the time of his appointment this summer.

A native of John Day, the 46-year-old trainer became an assistant under the late Colonel Bill Hayward and then took over the head training duties in 1931. He held the position until 1942 when he entered the navy pre-flight program as a physical education instructor. After his return in 1945 he again served as trainer until he entered the coaching field in 1946. His Pleasant Hill track team captured the Class C Hayward Relay championship just a week before he joined the department.

THE ALUMNI

Marion McClain Dies

Marion F. McClain '06, first manager of the University cooperative store and for nearly 50 years a resident of Eugene, died August 12 at his home in Eugene after a long illness. He was 69.

Known to generations of students through his work with the Co-op, he saw that campus institution begin in 1916 in the building that now houses the Smorgasbord on Kincaid near 13th. He was manager from 1916 into 1917 when he became manager of the associated students of the University, which post he held until 1920, then becoming manager of the University book store. He continued there as manager until semi-retirement in 1948. The collection of rare books was his favorite hobby.

Born September 15, 1880, in Emerson, Iowa, Mr. McClain attended grade and high schools there. He graduated from the University of Oregon in 1906.

He was married April 5, 1910, to Mabel Eaton of Union, Oregon, who survives him. Also surviving is a sister, Mrs. Don Lewis of Eugene.

Mr. McClain was a member of the Eugene Chamber of Commerce, Round Table, Presbyterian church, Alpha Delta Sigma advertising honorary, and of the mountain-climbing Obsidians.

Honorary pallbearers were Frederick M. Hunter, chancellor emeritus of the Oregon State System of Higher Education; Orlando John Hollis, dean of the law school; James H. Gilbert, retired dean of arts and sciences; Professor Dan E. Clark, head of the history department; U. S. Senator Wayne L. Morse; Robert W. Sawyer, publisher of the Bend Bulletin; J. Ed Turnbull, Eugene printer; and William M. Tugman, managing editor of the Eugene Register-Guard.

Active pallbearers were Paul Irvine, G. L. Henson, C. E. Lombard, Kenneth O'Connell, Eyler Brown, George Belknap, Sidney Claypool, and Randall Mills.

Chambers Keeps Busy

Election at the first of this year as mayor of Amity, Oregon, made Frank L. Chambers '38, M.A. '40, one of the busiest men in that town of 710 persons.

Chambers spends his days in the role of assistant manager of the Amity branch of the United States National Bank of Portland, assuming the duties of mayor in the evenings. He previously was the youngest member of the city council and as a resident of only two years he was probably the most surprised person involved.

Although the job of mayor pays no salary, Chambers takes his duties seriously. He has been able to increase the city's revenues by retaking the local census so the city would secure a larger share of state street and liquor funds. He is married to Thelma Peterson '47 and they are the parents of twins born in 1949.

Franklin W. Osburn

Comdr. Franklin W. Osburn ex-'03, USN-Ret., died May 21 at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Maryland, after an illness of 10 days.

Born in Eugene in 1882, he attended the University's preparatory department 1896 to 1882, when he entered the U. S. Naval academy, graduating in 1902. He was called to active duty with the navy in both World Wars, and was for many years marine superintendent of the American-South African steamship line, retiring because of ill health in 1947.

He resided in Forest Hills Gardens, Long Island, and was an active supporter of alumni activity in the New York area for many years. He is survived by his widow, Ethel Clarke Osburn and one son, Clarke W. Osburn.

Make Good in Television

The Los Angeles Examiner of April 23, 1950, carried the following item concerning Arnold Mills, '40.

About Ourselves

With this issue OLD OREGON begins a new publication schedule and introduces many changes in its physical make-up and content.

The magazine will go on a bi-monthly schedule with issues in September, December, February, April, June and August. These issues will be larger and more comprehensive than previously.

Most noticeable physical change will be the return of a second color to the redesigned cover, which will feature a series of drawings of campus buildings done by Richard Prasch, instructor in art. Wider use will be made of photographs, each issue beginning with a full-page campus scene.

More changes are planned. The December issue will see introduction of several more small departments, and a second color within the magazine. The departments will include a book-review section and a feature-department noting campus and alumni highlights of 10, 20, and 30 years past.

Other regular features will include a monthly message from Alumni Director Les Anderson, a timely or particularly interesting faculty-written article, and a sub-division of The Classes called Headliners.

GOOD MEDICINE

HARVEY WALTERS settled back in his chair on the sheltered side of the terrace, closed his eyes and turned up his face to enjoy the full warmth of the late afternoon sun. It was good to be home again. Good to be sitting here in his favorite old chair. Good to be alive.

He dozed off, presently, as he had several times that afternoon. Rest . . . they said that was the important thing, right now . . .

When Harvey opened his eyes a half-hour later, Fred Parsons was sitting in the chair next to him, smoking his pipe contentedly and looking across the lawn. "Hi, Fred," he said, "where'd you come from?"

Fred turned and grinned. "Your good wife, Clara, let me in ten minutes ago. She's back in the kitchen getting your afternoon snack together. Said she might even make me a cup of tea!" He looked closely at the other man. "Tell me, Harvey—did you have a pretty bad time of it?"

"Yes I did, Fred. For a few days, there, things didn't look too good. But I had good doctors and good nurses—and Clara was wonderful through it all." Harvey was silent for a moment and then said, "You know, Fred, another thing that helped me pull through was that good medicine you sold me twenty years ago."

Fred raised his eyebrows questioningly and waited. "I mean it, Fred. They didn't have to tell me things were tough. I knew it. And believe me, a million things run through your mind. About yourself. About your family. One thing I remember, out of all the muddle, was how good it was to know that at least Clara would be able to get along and the kids wouldn't have to quit college and come home . . ." He paused for a moment and then went on. "Yes, I believe that knowing those New York Life policies were around did me an awful lot of good at a time when I sure needed it . . ."

Clara Walters came through the door from the living-room with a tray of tea things in her hands and said, "It's a beautiful day, isn't it?"

Her husband looked at her and smiled. "It sure is!"

Fred Parsons said, "Couldn't be better!" And he decided that this was as nice an afternoon as he had spent in many a year.

Television is filled with Horatio Alger stories, and one of the most fabulous is probably the one about Arnold Mills and Bud Grossman. A few months ago neither owned a TV set and neither had ever seen a video show produced. After they saw a couple of "live" shows, they decided they could do better than that.

So for 75 cents they bought a second-hand book on television production, wrote a prospectus of a show titled "Helpfully Yours" and submitted it to several advertising agencies. Meeting only rebuffs they finally went directly to a sponsor they thought might like the idea. He did, and they were in the TV business.

Now, Arnold and Bud have two successful, sponsored programs, "Helpfully Yours," starring Norma Gilchrist, and "The Truth About Dixie," starring Harry Hickox and Harvin Ash. And that's how two video producers got that way.

Van Waters Authors Book

Dr. Miriam Van Waters '08 for over 15 years superintendent of the Framingham reformatory for women in Massachusetts, is among the authors of a new book, "Fruits of Faith" published by Abingdon-Cokesbury press in New York.

The new book, "Fruits of Faith," contains the writings of 18 writers, and is predicated on the belief that no other force has matched the impact of Christianity on world history and culture in the past 20 centuries.

Dr. Van Waters, strong advocate of prison reform, writes in "Fruits of Faith," "An institution for rehabilitation is a primary place for the trial of faith in action. It is a challenge to christians in the center of their belief in power of redemption. As the scientist has faith in the orderly approach of scientific method at work, both in diagnosis and therapy, because this method stands up under all tests as the only one to solve the problem, so the christian has faith in teaching and example of Jesus."

She is already author of two books, "Youth in Conflict" and "Parents on Probation." Among her past associates are the Harvard law school crime survey and the Wickersham commission on law enforcement. (The story of Dr. Van Waters' fight for enlightened penal methods in one of Boston's most controversial trials is told in OLD OREGON for October 1949.)

Tours with Hoop Stars

"The experience of a lifetime," is the way Ted Bouck '47 speaks of his recent South American tour with an American basketball team. Through his friendship with Frank Walsh, basketball director at San Francisco's Cow Palace, Bouck was asked to accompany the team as manager.

Leaving June 18th and returning late in August, the team logged more than 15,000 miles, all by plane, and visited Nassau, Panama, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Guatemala and Uruguay. It was the longest trip ever taken by a U.S. basketball team.

In filing for the Republican nomination, Jordan stated "no branch of government should do for citizens what they can reasonably do for themselves," and that "the state must continue on a pay-as-you-go basis. No deficit spending should be allowed." He declared roads to be Idaho's number one problem, and outlined a five-point plan for remedying this situation. ## Half-Century Club

More than twenty members of nineteenth century graduating classes were on hand for the first gathering of the Half Century Club of the University of Oregon. Inaugurated on Alumni Day, June 10, the newly-formed organization includes in its membership those who graduated fifty or more years hence.

Opening ceremonies took place at the University Luncheon held in Carson hall. President H. K. Newburn called each member forward and presented him with a green membership card inscribed with a gold "50" across its face. Golden "O" certificates were also presented to those who had not previously received them at their golden anniversary reunions. A picture was taken following the luncheon on the steps of the new women's dormitory.

The Osburn hotel was the scene of the evening dinner meeting where the future plans of the organization were discussed and officers were elected. It was decided that the club meet each year on the campus, and that all classes which graduated fifty or more years ago would be invited. All members of these classes are automatically members of the club, and membership cards have been sent them through the mail whether they attended the first meeting or not. Next year the club will formally install the class of 1901 into the group.

Officers elected were: Lewis J. Davis '89, president; Herbert S. Murch '98, vice-president; Blanche Taylor Thurston '98, secretary; Agnes Greene Veazie '90, poet laureate; and Fletcher Linn '90, historian.

Others who attended the first meeting were J. R. Greenfield '90, Arthur P. McKinlay '93, Ethel Simpson Worrel '93, Edith Kerns Chambers '95, Louise Yorán Whitton '96, Ora Read Hemenway '97, Dora Laird Lewis '97, George W. Gilbert '99, Maud I. Kerns '99, Blaine H. Hovey '99, Charles W. Wester '98, Victor L.

1910

More than thirty members of the class of 1910 assembled on the University campus Alumni day June 10 to celebrate the 40th anniversary of their graduation.

Ceremonies began with the traditional University Luncheon held in Carson hall. A special section was reserved for class members, who were represented on the speaker's rostrum by Roy K. Terry of Portland. The class picture was taken immediately following the luncheon. During the afternoon the class assembled in the men's lounge of Gerlinger hall where they met and recalled experiences of their undergraduate days.

Highlighting the reunion, of course, was the class dinner held in the Bamboo room of the Eugene hotel. Ceremonies opened with a special radio program over local station KERG, especially dedicated to the class.

An impromptu solo rendition of the Millrace song by Oliver Huston, class president and reunion chairman, opened the formal program. Huston then called upon those assembled to tell about members of the class who were not present, and each one was called upon to render a personal autobiography of himself.

Prizes were awarded for certain achievements. To Ben Williams went the award for having come the longest distance—from Arlington, Virginia. He was closely followed, however, by Ruth Duniway Kerby, who now lives in New York City. Williams also snagged the prize for the "baldest head." Ruth Baldersee Wheeler countered with a prize for the most beautiful hair. A prize for the most handsome man went to Chester Downs, while the feminine counterparts were Isolene Shaver Gilbert for the prettiest figure and Loretta Showers Rossman for the most beautiful eyes. The most hair remained on the head of Roy K. Terry. Huston himself garnered the "most distinguished-looking" title. But perhaps the most sought-after distinction went to Kate Henderson Fish as the youngest-looking member of the class. Last, but not least, was Joel Richardson for being the "best fed." Isolene Gilbert has had eight grandchildren.

After considerable discussion, it was decided that the class bench shall be moved to the vicinity of its original location—in front of Fenton Hall. It was also moved unanimously that Oliver Huston shall hereafter be known as the permanent secretary and reunion chairman for the class. Final business concerned names of those who had died. Closing the ceremonies was the reading of a poem especially written for the class on this occasion by Dean Collins, now a feature writer on the Oregon Journal and a member of the class.

1912

Although not scheduled to hold another regular get-together until 1952, the class of 1912 assembled officially on Alumni day to rededicate their class gift.

This gift, a large bronze replica of the University seal, has rested for the past thirty-eight years on the north approach to Villard hall. However, after a vote of the class, it was decided to move the seal to a more prominent location in front of the Erb Memorial building.

Some fourteen members of the class took part in the ceremonies which began with the University Luncheon. At 3:00 p.m. a crowd which included interested alumni gathered at the new site to hear Chester A. Moores officially rededicate the Seal.

Moores recounted the history of the class, its achievements, and the pride with which it has presented the gift. A small steel box containing documents and a description of the ceremony was imbedded in the cement at the base of the seal. Officiating with trowel and cement were Clarence Walls and Edward Himes.

A bronze plaque now replaces the seal at its original site. It reads: "The University Seal originally placed here was moved June 1950 to the entrance of Erb Memorial Student Union the better to perpetuate an honored tradition—Class of 1912.”

The newly-formed Half-Century Club, left, met on the campus Alumni Day, June 10. The club contains all classes of fifty and more years ago.

1915

Celebrating its 35th anniversary, the class of 1915 had eleven members of its class present on Alumni Day. This small but vociferous number was headed by the class president, Ben Dorris.

To Mr. Dorris goes the worthy honor of having given the shortest class speech at a University Luncheon. Representing his class at the affair, which is attended by all classes, Mr. Dorris confined his well-chosen remarks to 52 words. The speech received not only the undivided interest of the assembly, but also brought rounds of applause for its brevity.

The evening dinner was held at the Eugene hotel where members of the class pored through a well-worn copy of the 1915 Oregonian, the latter being one of the thickest editions ever published.

Class president Ben Dorris also presided at this occasion at which Sam F. Michael was chosen to be permanent class secretary to replace Bert Jerard who passed away last year. His first official action was to send out a news letter to all members of the class with other editions to come later.

Those attending included Dorris, Dr. Ira Gaston, Herbert Lombard, Lyle Steiwer Wall, James Watson, Walter Dimm, Genevieve Cooper, Vern Apperson, A. P. School, Tom Boylen, Sam F. Michael, Victor P. Morris, Beulah Stebno Swanson and Callie Beck-Heider.

TELEPHONE LINES ARE HUMMING

THIS COUNTRY'S telephone service is one of its greatest assets in time of emergency. It unites millions of people — helps thousands of businesses to get things done quicker — and is a vital part of our national defense.

Since 1941, the Bell System has increased the number of telephones by more than 16,000,000. There are nearly twice as many now as nine years ago. Billions of dollars have been spent for new telephone equipment of every kind. The number of Bell Telephone employees has increased to more than 600,000.

All of this growth and the size of the Bell System are proving of particular value right now. One reason this country can outproduce any other is because it has the most and the best telephone service in the world.

Bright New World

FROM MORNING TILL NIGHT, the colors of the rainbow are all around you—through plastics. A blue plastic clock wakes you, and you flip on an ivory plastic light switch. You take your clothes from a yellow plastic hanger. Plastic toothbrushes come in colors for every member of the family. Cheerful decorating schemes are enhanced by the beauty of plastic drapes. There's no limit to the colors you can get in these versatile materials!

But this is only the start of the plastic story. Plastics help make better clothing. Modern furniture and furnishings owe much to plastics. Much of your food is packaged in clean, clear plastics. Plastics add safety, durability, and appearance to many of your electrical appliances.

These versatile basic materials are man-made. Organic chemicals are the ingredients of the "unfinished" plastics—called resins. From these resins come the many different forms of plastics we know.

The people of Union Carbide are leaders in the production of plastics, resins, and related chemicals. They also provide hundreds of other materials for the use of science and industry.

FREE: If you would like to know more about many of the things you use every day, send for the illustrated booklet "Products and Processes." It tells how science and industry use UCC's Alloys, Chemicals, Carbons, Gases, and Plastics. Write for free booklet C.
