Wanted: More Green Thumbs

IN A WORLD faced with constant food shortages in so many countries, more "green thumbs" are needed!

Here in America, modern agricultural methods have increased farm production 60% in the past generation—even though today there are 20% fewer workers on the farms. This increased yield means plenty of food for every one here—and more besides. And the same methods, applied in other countries, would help answer world food needs.

Better seed, fertilizer, and new scientific methods play their part. Equally important are the various chemicals that now fight off blight, disease, and destructive insects. Starting before planting and continuing until the food is ready for our tables, hundreds of new materials increase and protect our food supply.

Even after harvest, man-made agents speed the ripening process. Others guard our food against rodents and insects.

The people of Union Carbide help make possible the high productivity of America's food producers by supplying chemicals for fungicides and insecticides, gases for ripening and preserving, and the stainless steel so important in the preparation and distribution of food. If you have a materials problem, in this field or other fields, it is quite likely they can help you also.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

*His instructions have never been listed in the curriculum . . .
they are in the field of character and honorable living*

HERBERT T. CONDON '92, dean emeritus of students and secretary of the board of regents of the University of Washington, has been the kindly foster father of thousands of students there for nearly half a century.

During his long tenure there he has served successively as registrar, comptroller, dean of men and dean of students, in addition to his duties with the board of regents. He became dean emeritus of students in 1949.

Only living member of the class of 1892, Dean Condon has become a veritable "book of knowledge" on the history and traditions of the University of Washington, which he "adopted" in 1903. He carries with him a little black book filled with facts and figures about the University, collected over the years.

At the time of his retirement as dean of students in 1949, the Seattle Times said of him:

"Dean Condon has been a true teacher. His instructions have never been listed in the curriculum, but they have been as valuable and as richly appreciated as any 'course' the University has offered, for they were in the field of character, common sense, and honorable living."

The University District Herald said:

"He is not only a teacher of ability, but also a citizen of first rank. He delights in giving help to the community in which he lives, and certainly Seattle and the State of Washington are to be congratulated on having had a man of his caliber in a place of public service."

Dean Condon was born in 1870 at The Dalles, Oregon. He earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Oregon in 1892 and received his bachelor of law's degree from the University of Michigan in 1894. He came to the University of Washington as registrar in 1903 after teaching political science, history, and serving as registrar and comptroller at the University of Idaho for five years. His 48 years with the University of Washington give him the distinction of holding the longest record of continuous active service to that University—a record he is still adding to. He is married and has four sons and a daughter.

University of Washington President Raymond B. Allen has this to say of the beloved and durable faculty member:

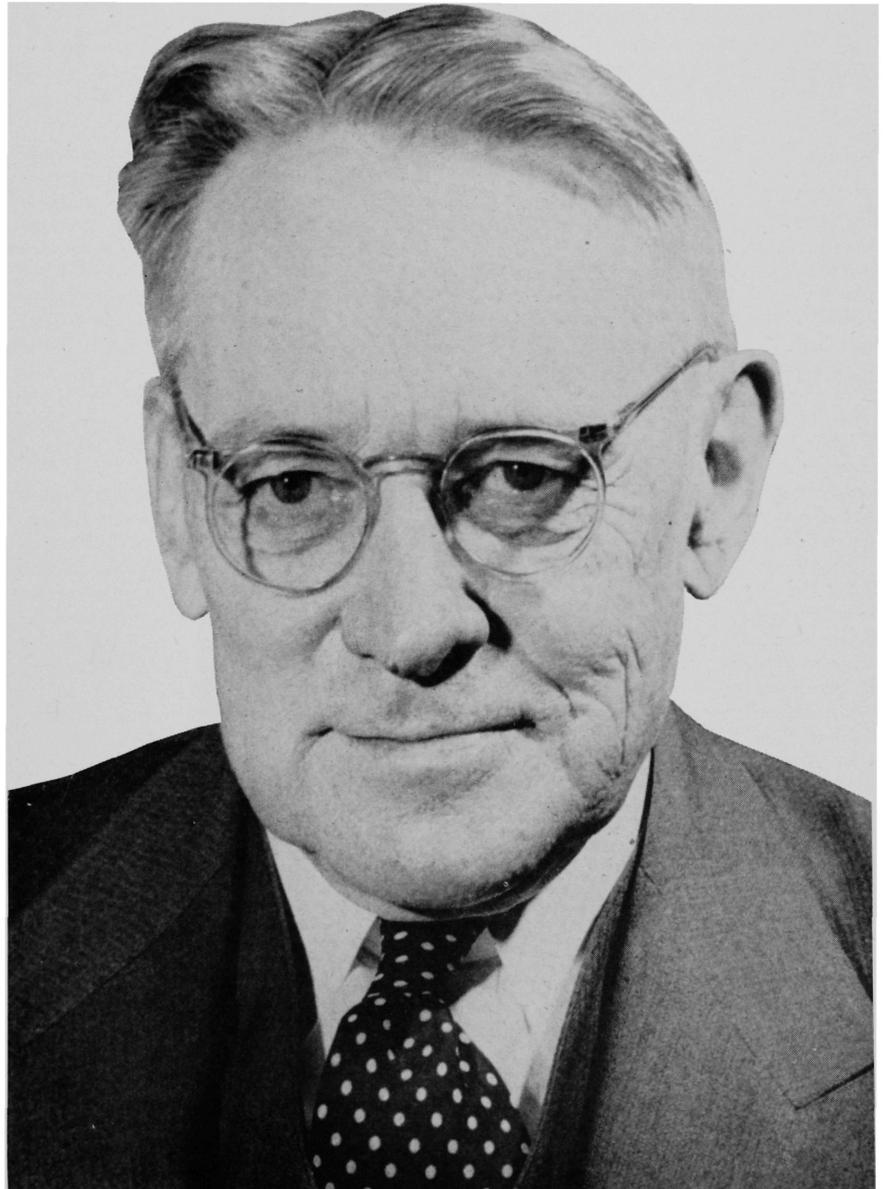

"I think Herbert Condon is one of the great men of education in this country. He is and has been a great man because he has never lost sight of the human-equation in his students. Guide, counsellor and friend, he exemplifies the truth that teaching and the guidance of students is only as good as the personal interest which the advisor and the teacher takes in the individual student. Education is nothing if it is not human."

And Dean Condon is the kind of man that not only helps make a University great, but something more human than the bare fact of being "an institution of higher learning."

The University provides housing for some 400 married veteran students in such projects as the 'Amazon Flats'

An Ex-barracks Is 'Home'

By Bill Frye

LIVING in a University housing project is an experience that will be placed among the strongest memories of days at Oregon for those hundreds of students who've found themselves with both a family and a GPA to maintain during their college days.

This time of year many Webfoots turn their thoughts and efforts toward picnics, trips to the beach and building Junior Weekend floats. The more serious-minded exceptions are the married students, who mostly confine their leisure time to dinner with the couple next door, a Sunday afternoon drive or repairing the picket fence.

Sunny spring afternoons are likely to bring the front-lawn baseball enthusiasts out of the men's dorms and fraternities, but if you happened around any one of the six projects housing married veterans you'd probably see them out washing windows.

But ask any one of the nearly 400 student veterans living in University housing if he yearns for the life of the on-campus resident and he'll likely point out a dozen reasons why the trailer, or converted barracks or the prefabricated structure he calls home is equally as appealing as any living organization.

These "war legacies," hauled in by the University and set up during the critical period of the housing shortage in 1945 and 1946, are situated in areas of Eugene as far from the campus, in one instance, as two miles. Comfortable and inexpensive housing is provided for the residents, most of whom are students, though some faculty members are included.

Of the six projects, probably the best known, and the largest, is "Amazon flats," located in Eugene's eastside nearly a mile from campus. The white-walled one and two story buildings aligned in long rows contain a total of 248 units. Accommodations offered there are typical of those found in most University housing.

In the two-bedroom apartment of the Dewey Wilson family, for example, are included such furnishings as dressers, beds, bookshelves, chairs and table. A wood heater, cook stove and ice box are also normally provided, but like many of the other tenants the Wilsons have replaced these with their own refrigerator, oil circulating heater and electric range.

When Wilson, a 26-year-old Navy veteran, and his wife, Donna, first moved into their apartment in February 1948 they found it adequate but somewhat shy in comfort and atmosphere. So, like most of the other Amazon residents, they refinished the interior and added more furniture to give it the pleasant appearance it presents now.

The Wilsons were on a waiting list for nearly 18 months before they got their quarters, but the turnover is considerably faster now, due to the decreasing veteran enrollment.

A notable improvement since the unit opened is the elimination of the annual "flood" danger from the overflowing of Amazon creek. The area around 22nd Avenue and Patterson Drive has not been under water since the creek was dredged in 1948.

In appearance, the Amazon project is surprisingly similar to any other small community. The corner grocery, the school, the fenced-in yards and the children playing—all these elements are present.

The thing that distinguishes Amazon residents from everyday American families is, of course, their mode of living—little more than a program geared to "getting the head of the house through school." Conversation at the supper table centers around such topics as term papers and the bite the high cost of living takes out of a government subsistence check.

The role of the "war widows" has been taken over in part by the wives of the students. Unless they go to school with their husbands, as a few do, they see comparatively little of them during the day.

Wilson, who is preparing for his bar examination in July, leaves early and comes home late. Like most of the men he goes home for lunch, but often dinner is kept waiting until he can get out of a meeting or seminar.

Although as note and comment editor of the Oregon Law Review and a member of the Student Union board Wilson is closer to campus "activities" than most students, like the majority he feels that time away from studies should be spent with his family.

They Make it Rain--More

TEN years ago if you'd been able to tell Ted Gillenwaters '25 what his present job would be, he'd probably have laughed, at the very least. Not only did such a job not exist, it wasn't possible.

Today Gillenwaters is associated with a "rain-making" firm—without Indian dances or medicine show hoopla, but on a sound scientific basis.

But if you were to call it "rain-making," he would correct you. It's known rather as "rain-increasing". The Water Resources Development corporation, with which he is associated, insists on that point. No one can make it rain when it isn't going to rain anyway, they say. What they do is "help nature along" by increasing the amount of rain available from favorable cloud formations.

The story of how Gillenwaters became associated with this unusual enterprise begins during the last war, in which he served as chief of operations of the Air Forces worldwide weather services. Probably the story goes back farther than that, to his graduation from the Oregon law school and admission to the state bar in 1927.

While an undergraduate he earned two basketball letters, was president of his senior class and of the Order of "O", a member of Alpha Tau Omega and of Friars. Following admission to the bar he was Klamath county deputy district attorney from 1928 to 1930 and district attorney from 1930 to 1934. He served as Oregon state commissioner of aeronautics from 1933 to 1935.

Then in 1935 he moved to California and was admitted to the bar there the next year. He did legal work in the corporate field, in relation to the aviation industry.

In April of 1942, when he was called to active duty he held the rank of major in the reserves, having remained active since receiving his 2nd lieutenant's commission in the reserves through ROTC.

While with the Air Forces weather services during the war he met Dr. Irving P. Krick, who was chief meteorologist for General Eisenhower and predicted the weather for the European "D-Day." Before the war Krick had been head of the meteorology department at California Institute of Technology.

With the end of the war the two went their separate ways, Gillenwaters returning to legal counseling work in California. In early 1949 he did industrial counseling for aircraft subcontractors, an occupation he still carries on "with one finger".

The paths of Gillenwaters and Krick were again to cross, however, for in March, 1950, Weatherman Krick founded the Water Resources Development corporation, located in Pasadena, California. Aside from a financial interest in the undertaking, Gillenwaters advises on the legal phase of operations, negotiates all contracts having to do with rain-increasing, and makes educational talks to chambers of commerce and other groups.

In addition to the rain-increasing corporation, Krick is executive director of the American Institute of Aerological Research, which integrates up to a million weather reports per 24 hours and services commercial outfits whose businesses are affected by the weather, such as fuel oil dealers. Gillenwaters is special counsel for both.

The process of rain-increasing isn't something one explains thoroughly in a spare moment, but it can be roughly explained in general terms . . .

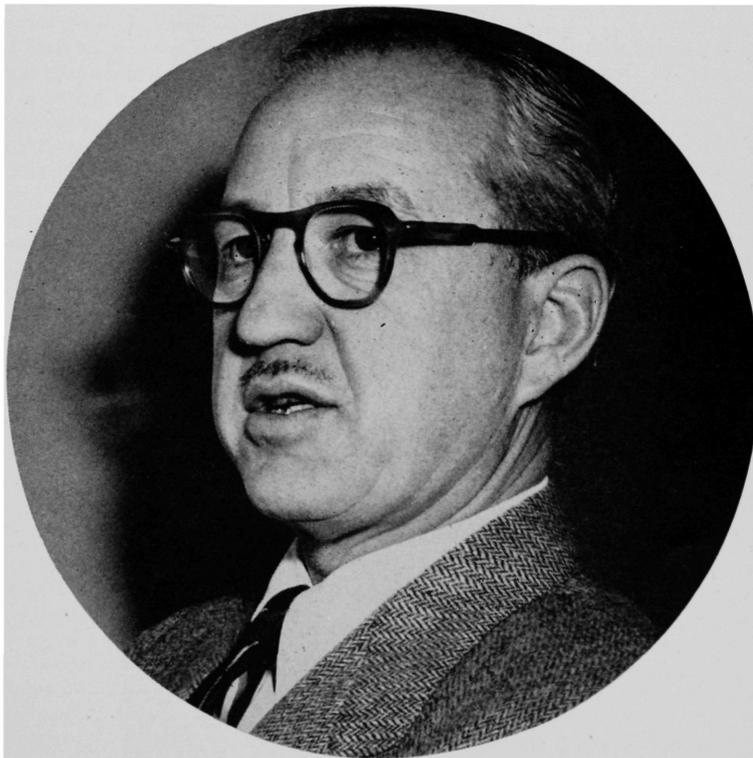

Firstly, the airplane is distinctly out of style for rain-increasing purposes; a machine about the size of an oil heater does the job much more efficiently from the ground.

Each raindrop that falls from the clouds, we're told, has formed around a tiny particle of solid substance, usually a minute speck of dust. Before these ever-present, though invisible, particles serve to form rain they must enter a "super-cooled" cloud—one whose temperature is below freezing. Minute, very cold water droplets that have been floating inside the cloud are drawn about these particles, setting up a sort of "chain reaction" which attracts more moisture. When enough accumulates, it becomes a small ice crystal or snowflake of sufficient weight to fall toward the ground. If temperatures below the cloud are above freezing it arrives as a raindrop.

The essence of rain-increasing is to supplement this natural process by introducing particles of silver iodide into the clouds. This is accomplished by a ground "generator" which emits silver iodide as a gas, which upon reaching colder outside air forms literally billions of tiny particles of solid silver iodide crystals. Because the generators are used only during times of likely storm—when conditions are such that it could rain anyway—natural updrafts carry these invisible particles into the clouds and disperse them, far better than is accomplished by dropping them from above by an airplane.

The silver iodide particles are superior to the particles normally found in the air in that they will attract moisture at higher temperatures than, for example, dust particles or others naturally found there. Thus even the relatively warmer (usually the lower) parts of the cloud may contribute rain.

Ted Gillenwaters '25—he makes a living out of "doing something about the weather."

An all-Northern Division forward in his first year, sophomore basketball star Bob Peterson watches the Webfoots whip Oregon State in their final game from the bench. Previously that evening he had apologized publicly for his much-publicized clash with an Oregon State fan the night before at Corvallis; he was held out of the season's final game. (He's third from left.)

To many Oregon fans that alone makes a successful season.

Probably the high-point of the season just past was the record-shattering 82-75 win over Washington in Eugene—the final Oregon-Washington game of the year and the only one the Ducks won from the Huskies.

By half-time of this game Oregon had built up the amazing total of 52 points, to 35 for Washington. The Webfoots simply couldn't do anything wrong that night. Sophomore Bob Peterson, All-Northern Division forward, canned 28 points, the most ever in one game by a Webfoot. The half-time mark of 52 points is a division record for one team in one half. Peterson made 14 of 15 freethrow attempts that night, and that, too, is a record.

At the end of the Northern Division season each year the five coaches in the league vote to choose an all-division team. Oregon placed its star sophomore, Peterson, on the first-string all-ND team. On the second team Oregon really dominated—chosen were sophomore forward Curt Barclay, center Jim Loscutoff (a junior) and guards Jack Keller and Mel Krause, both seniors.

Peterson was second highest scorer in the Northern Division for the season, and had the highest average per game, with 188 points in the 15 games he played. Loscutoff rolled up a conference total of 163 and Curt Barclay, the third "big man" of the Oregon line-up tossed in 152. Senior guard Mel Krause led all division players in shooting percentage by hitting on 37.6 per cent of his field goal attempts.

The team this year was marked by real fast-break basketball, with the big men—Loscutoff, Peterson and Barclay—giving the Webfoots backboard domination in nearly every conference game.

With only five seniors leaving the Webfoot basketball fold, the prospects for next season would be anything but dim—except for the question of military service. Graduation takes Krause, Keller, Captain Will Urban, John Neeley and Hal Webb.

If the armed forces don't take others, back next year will be Barclay, Peterson and Loscutoff. In addition will be Ken Hunt, who alternated at guard this year with Krause and Keller, and finished sixth in team scoring.

Also back will be forwards Mel Streeter, Jim Vranizan and Keith Farnam. Back at center to help Loscutoff will be Chet Noe and Henry Bonneman, both sophomores this year and both 6' 7". The open guard post will probably be filled by one of several players up from the freshmen or ineligibles this year.

The 1951-52 Ducks will have to work hard to beat this record.

A Fine Season

By John Barton

COACH John Warren's basketball Webfoots rose mightily from the 1950 season in the season just past. From a last place finish in Northern Division standings a year ago, the Ducks came back this year to finish in the number two position, with only the University of Washington Huskies ahead of them.

In division play with the other four conference schools, Oregon ended its season with a record of 10 games won and six lost. The Webfoots had a three-won and one-lost record with each of the other teams except Washington. The Huskies, who subsequently captured the Coast Conference crown by dropping UCLA in two straight at Seattle, won three games from Oregon, losing only one contest, that one in Eugene.

In total season play the record wasn't quite as good. The Oregonians wound up with a record of 18 won and 13 lost during the 1950-51 season. This was due mostly to a slow start. In pre-season games before Christmas the Ducks had a lot of trouble winning. But they finally proved to the basketball world and to themselves that they could win, and established something of a precedent when they beat College of Puget Sound in two games away from Eugene.

That accomplishment doesn't sound startling on its face—but those two wins were the first Oregon victories away from the McArthur court home floor in a long time. In the 1950 season, Oregon didn't win a single game away from Eugene. So the College of Puget Sound games were a turning point.

After those games the Webfoots started moving. But two heart-breaking losses were to keep Oregon from what otherwise would probably have been a championship year.

The first of these losses was in Seattle on January 6. That was a Saturday night, and the night before Washington had opened its Northern Division season by humbling the Webfoots 73 to 49. But Saturday night the Ducks came roaring back in the final part of the game and nearly won—final score was Washington 61, Oregon 60. That was to mean much in the final picture.

The second defeat which really hurt Oregon this season was to Oregon State in Corvallis on March 2—the next-to-last game of the season. Oregon had already run over the Beavers twice, 62-53 in Eugene, 66-47 in Corvallis.

But this third OSC-Oregon game meant a lot. Oregon was in a tie with Washington for the division lead, and the Ducks had to win to stay in that tie. It looked like they'd do it in the first half, but canny Slats Gill, OSC coach, changed his pace in the second period and final score was OSC 41, Oregon 39. And the same night up in Seattle, Washington was pushing the Washington State Cougars all over the maple, winning easily and taking over first place in league standings.

A second Washington victory over WSC the next night sewed it up for the Huskies, despite a lopsided Oregon 72-45 win over the Beavers the next night in Eugene.

From the standpoint of games won and lost it was a successful season for Oregon Coach John Warren and his charges. And by the traditional yardstick of the Oregon State series it was also a decided success. Oregon beat the Staters three times, with total scoring for the four-game series giving Oregon 239 points against 186 for OSC.

Spring Sports Scene

A Profile

LIKE father, like son," would be the trite—and true—way to begin a profile on Walt McClure Jr., three-year track letterman and a senior on this year's Webfoot cinder crew.

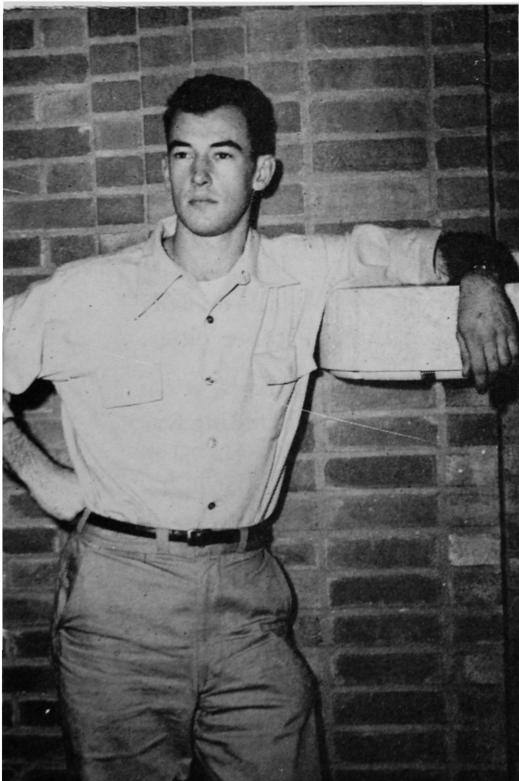

For both Walt and his father, Colonel Walter McClure '13 (U.S. Army, retired), have been Oregon track stars. Both ran under the late "Colonel Bill" Hayward, long-time Oregon track coach. Col. McClure ran the mile, went to the 1912 Olympics in Stockholm.

Young Walt fears he isn't quite an Olympic contender, but he's been Oregon's top half-miler for the past two seasons and undoubtedly will be again this year.

Born in Brooklyn, New York in 1928, Walt with the rest of the family followed Col. McClure from army post to army post, with the result that he had attended seven different schools by the time he was ready to attend university.

He graduated from high school in Fargo, North Dakota, and considered a number of universities before heeding his father's suggestion that he go West to the University of Oregon to run under Bill Hayward.

Walt McClure, who will earn his fourth track letter this spring.

He enrolled in the University in the fall of 1945, becoming a pledge of Alpha Tau Omega after his first term here. That year there was no freshman track team, so Walt went out for the varsity and under Hayward's guidance he made his first "O" that year.

The next fall he enlisted in the army, spending most of his subsequent two years at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

He returned to Oregon as a sophomore in the fall of 1948. Col. Bill Hayward had died by the time it turned another track season, and under a new coach, Bill Bowerman, Walt made his second track letter, and last spring he earned a third such award.

Walt began running when in high school in Manhattan, Kansas. He recalls with a grin that he wanted to be a miler like his father, but a state law prohibited boys under 15 from running that distance, so he settled for the quarter-mile. Since switching to the half-mile in college he has won plenty of Northern Division contests, but the race he recalls with the most pleasure was the third place he won in the Pacific Coast conference meet last spring.

That wasn't his fastest race though. The fastest time he ever turned in came in winning the half-mile against Oregon State in one minute, 55 and three-tenths seconds.

This will be Walt's third year under Coach Bowerman, himself an Oregon graduate in the class of 1933, and Walt is high in his praise of his coach. Asked about this year's Oregon track team he notes that last year's squad won the Northern Division championship; this year, he thinks, Oregon figures more as a "darkhorse." Both Washington State, a perennial track power, and Washington will be good, he figures, but if the right Webfoots win the right events at the right times Oregon might repeat.

Walt's college activities include membership in Friars, senior men's honorary; Phi Epsilon Kappa, physical education honorary; Order of "O"; and presidency of the physical education club. Like so many of the best athletes he's maintained a good though not astounding grade average, about a 2.75, or close to "B" average.

Walt lives at home with his parents, who have resided in Eugene since 1946. A physical education major, he will graduate in June and hopes to land a coaching job—track, naturally, though he hopes to be able to add basketball coaching later.

The Outlook . . .

With press deadline at the end of winter term, OLD OREGON'S athletic crystal ball again comes up a little cloudy in regard to spring sports, but the personnel for the major sports is pretty well set. . .

Oregon's defending champion track team under guidance of Coach Bill Bowerman suffered a number of serious losses through graduation, but there are a number of returning veterans and new men who provide the possibility of a top season.

Losses included star dash-man turned quarter-miler Dave Henthorne, the "one-two-three" Northern Division pole-vaulting combination of George Rasmussen, Don Pickens and Lloyd Hickock, broad jumper Woodley Lewis, two-miler Pete Mundle and hurdler Jack Doyle. Gone from campus though not by graduation is ace sprinter Bill Fell.

Despite losses there are a number of promising men on this year's team, including these lettermen:

Bob Anderson, Hale Paxton and Herb Nill on the weights; Jack Hutchins and Art Backlund, distance; Walt McClure, half-mile; Al Bullier and Bob Cleary, sprints; Jack Countryman, 440; Chuck Missfeldt, javelin; Dennis Sullivan, high jump; and Jack Smith, sprints and broad jump.

Among the top prospects from this group are Jack Hutchins, a junior from Canada who has run a 4:15 mile; Walt McClure, back for his fourth year of 880 competition; Jack Smith in the high jump; and Chuck Missfeldt a junior and in the first rank of coast javelin-throwers.

Probably the high point of all time in Eugene track events will be the Pacific Coast conference—Western conference (Big 10) track meet, slated for June 19 at Hayward field. Teams will be made up of the first three place winners in the respective conference championship meets. The inter-conference meet will be a twilight affair, beginning about 5:30 p.m. A crowd of around 8,000 is anticipated for the "greatest meet ever seen here," according to Coach Bowerman.

Coach Don Kirsch's Oregon varsity baseball squad, third-place finishers in last year's Northern Division chase, hope for better things this year, though ineligibility of possible stars could hurt them.

The team spent the end of winter term in limited work indoors in McArthur court, waiting for a break in the weather that would permit them to move outdoors in preparation for their opening game against Linfield college April 2.

A squad of 36 players, which includes 11 lettermen and two outstanding transfers, plus a top-flight sophomore up from frosh ranks had so far greeted the coach's call. Kirsch announced that Hal Zurcher, two-year minor league veteran and ex-Webfoot star will handle the freshmen this spring.

Lettermen on hand for varsity baseball include Jim Hanns, Mel Krause and Lyle Rogers, pitchers; Jack Smith, catcher; Daryle Nelson, Phil Settecase and Ray Coley, infielders; John Jones, Duane Owens, Dick Salter and Joe Tom, outfielders.

New way of handling Long Distance

Operator Toll Dialing proves a big help in these busy days of national preparedness

Long Distance lines are really humming these days. There are many more calls than a year ago. More are from the Nation's industries and Armed Forces, hurrying the country's most important job.

A big help in keeping these calls moving is Operator Toll Dialing — a remarkable new telephone development.

You give the Long Distance operator the number in the usual way. She quickly presses several keys and your call goes straight through to the telephone you want in a distant city.

It makes for faster service — especially on calls that formerly were relayed through other cities.

With so many more calls on the lines, it's a mighty good thing that Operator Toll Dialing was developed and is now available and in use in so many places. About one-third of Long Distance calls are now being handled in this new way.

It is just one of many ways in which the growth and improvement of telephone service are now proving of extra value to the Nation in these days of preparedness.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD . . . More and more telephone users in a growing number of metropolitan areas can now dial Toll calls direct to nearby places the same way they dial Local calls . . . BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

THE CAMPUS

Dads Visit Campus

More than 500 dads invaded the Oregon campus in late February for the annual "Dads' Day" weekend.

Saturday noon feature of the three-day weekend was the Student Union luncheon, at which students and dads heard President H. K. Newburn, Chancellor Charles D. Byrne, and Student Body President Barry Mountain speak on various phases of state education and university life.

President Newburn explained the importance of the budget to the University progress, while Chancellor Byrne discussed the state budget and salaries of college teachers in Oregon.

Highlights of campus tours Saturday afternoon were the Student Union, Carson Hall, and the new Science building, now under construction.

Saturday night, Oregon dads saw Oregon tie up the Northern Division basketball race, as they defeated the Washington Huskies 82 to 75, after having lost the previous night by an eight-point margin.

Half-time activities at the game included awards to living organizations, and the announcement of Mrs. Gene Rose as Dads' Day Hostess. Mrs. Rose was elected by Dads who voted at registration.

At the annual business meeting of the Oregon Dads' Club, members re-elected their 1950-51 officers for the coming year. Owen Bentley '21, Portland, will remain president for 1951-52. Other re-elected officers are Paul Patterson '23, Hillsboro, vice president; Rev. Wesley G. Nicholson, Eugene, secretary; and Karl W. Onthank '13, Eugene, executive secretary.

Trees Condemned

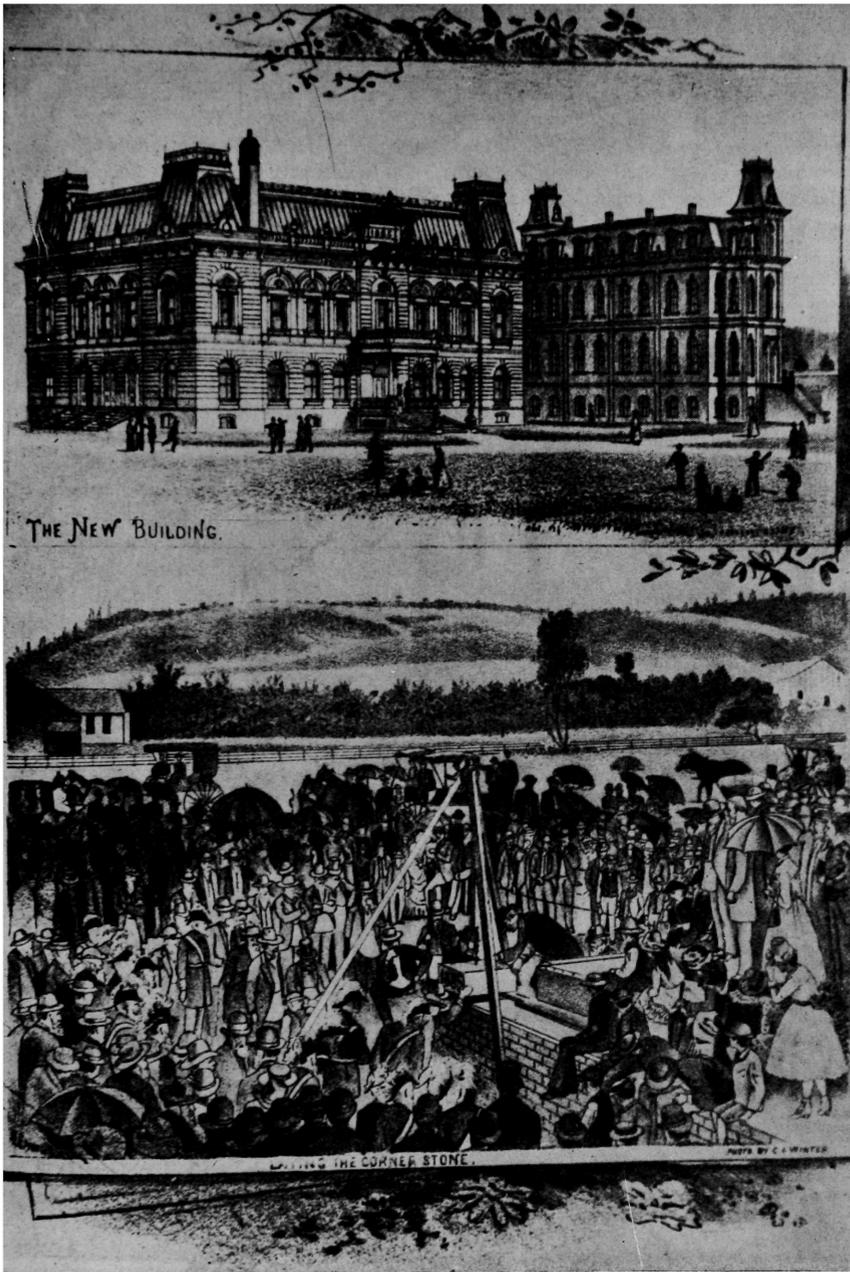

Tall evergreens and black locust trees, long familiar to the Oregon campus, are soon to be replaced by a hardier variety of English plane trees.

The new program calls for replacement of trees lost during recent storms and others judged to be unsafe in the present positions.

Recommendation for the change was made by J. R. Dilworth, professor of forest management at Oregon State college, who was called to make a complete survey of campus trees. He was summoned after storms of the past two winters felled several trees, damaging a car and a University quonset hut. The stability of many trees has been threatened by high winds.

All of the black locusts now lining 13th Avenue have been condemned, along with 12 evergreens scattered over the campus, which were judged hazardous.

The plan, as set up by I. I. Wright, superintendent of the physical plant, includes immediate replacement of the locusts with plane trees, replacement of the

Do You REMEMBER WHEN?

In 1902, more than 80 students turned out to vote in the corridor of Villard Hall when H. B. Densmore was elected president in student body elections.

In 1909 an amendment to the constitution was passed allowing $100 a year for the editor of the Oregon Weekly and $75 for the business manager.

In 1911 classes were dismissed so that faculty and students could go to the Eugene depot to hear President Taft. "Busher" Brown and his Oregon spouters played "Oskey Wow Wow" as he pulled into the station.

In 1922 vendors sold "cougar meat in a biscuit" at the Oregon-Washington State football game. Oregon won 13-0.

In 1920 Oregon women formed a hike-every-Sunday policy. Jaunts of 5 to 10 miles were conducted by Ella Redkey, sports manager.

In 1934 coeds were wearing sheer dovetone chiffon hose, ties with cuban heels, and angora cloth slim-fitting dresses. Hair was in curls, forming bangs, coronets, and clusters around the ears.

In 1935 Richard L. Neuberger participated in a debate maintaining that membership in ASUO should remain optional. Over 350 persons turned out for the event. Also on the positive side was Howard Ohmart. Joseph Renner and Marshall Harrison held down the negative side.

evergreens with a springtime planting of about 20 evergreens, and gradual removal and replacement of potentially dangerous trees.

Adding to the new appearance of the campus in the future will be approximately 80 new lights, as part of a $16,000 lighting system, scheduled to be finished during spring term.

Conferences Held

Three major conferences brought dramatists, journalists, and Oregon high school students to the campus recently.

More than 200 state newspapermen met at the University for the 32nd annual Oregon Press conference. Included in conference activities was an address by Gordon A. Sabine, dean of the Oregon school of journalism, who outlined present and future plans of the school for the representatives.

A three-day conference of high school International Relations Leagues convened March 1 on the campus, sponsored by the Oregon Education association. Feature talks were given by William J. Bruce, assistant director of the statistical office of the United Nations since 1946. Director of the conference was Dr. Charles P. Schleicher, professor of political science at the University.

The Northwest Drama conference, largest of its kind in the United States, brought students and theater experts to the campus from all parts of the Northwest in mid-February.

Over 400 delegates participated in conference activities, which stressed school, community, and children's theaters. The roster of speakers was headed by Clarence Derwent, president of Actors' Equity, professional actors' union, who stressed the need for a national theater. The conference was sponsored by the University speech department.

Women Elect Officers

March elections by University women brought new officers into 21 positions in the three major women's organizations on the campus.

Nancy Allison, Portland, will head the Associated Women Students, organization of all University women. Elected president of the University YWCA was Ann Darby, Portland. Joan Skordahl, Nampa, Idaho, will head activities of the Women's Recreational association, which sponsors the women's athletic program.

Bennet Cerf Talks

Bennet Cerf, author, publisher and humorist, spoke on current trends in American humor to a University audience in a late February appearance sponsored by the University Assembly committee.

Cerf, author of five top-selling collections of humorous stories, asserted that humor is changing from hilarious laughter to a quiet, smiling humor of a more constructive type.

Cerf is president of Random House publishers and owner of the Modern Library Series.

Oregon's "Snow Queen," Miss Nancy Miller, freshman from Salem, won that title at the University of Nevada's Winter Carnival winter term from a field of candidates from other western colleges.

THE FACULTY

Educational Tours

University of Oregon alumni in Hood River, The Dalles, and Bend welcomed five University staff members at a series of dinner meetings held in those communities last month. This was the final leg of the state-wide educational tour sponsored by the alumni association which has reached every major community in the State during the past two years.

Making up the traveling party were Dean James H. Gilbert '03, emeritus professor of economics, Dr. E. G. Ebbighausen, associate professor of physics, Dean Theodore Kratt of the school of music, Bill Bowerman '34, track coach, and Les Anderson '43, alumni director.

Hood River was the first stop with a meeting of more than 50 local alumni present at a dinner meeting in the Apple Blossom cafe on March 13. David N. Browning '43, Hood River county alumni director, headed arrangements.

Arthur N. Muller '34 headed the committee in The Dalles where a dinner attended by 60 local alumni was held the following evening in the Hotel Dalles. He was assisted by Don Lewis '43.

The final stop was at Bend where more than 80 alumni greeted the traveling party. The committee in charge consisted of E. L. (Al) Nielsen '35, Deschutes County alumni director, Henry Fowler '14, and Robert W. Thomas '36. The dinner meeting was held in the Pine Tavern.

Trips to Southern Oregon and the Lower Columbia area are being planned for the spring.

No Faculty Drop

Despite predictions of nationwide drops in student and faculty enrollment in colleges and universities, President H. K. Newburn has announced that no great loss in faculty is expected at the University.

The statement was made in late February, after the appearance of articles in the New York Times predicting a drop of 20,000 to 25,000 faculty members in U. S. institutions of higher learning.

"Since our present faculty-student ratio is high, there need not be any great cut in faculty members at the University with a lowered enrollment," he stated.

Causes listed for the drop by the New York Times included resignation for government and military jobs coupled with the drop in student enrollment.

President Newburn explained that predictions of this sort must be influenced pretty heavily by institutions not similar to the University.

Referring to a predicted drop in student enrollment, he commented, "It is difficult to tell until we know what will happen to Selective Service and the Reserve Officers Training Corps program."

Coaches Shifted

The Webfoot football coaching staff was in a state of flux during winter term, with one assistant definitely hired, another hired and resignation accepted within weeks, and two resigned.

Hired to aid Head Coach Jim Aiken was Gene Harlow, formerly assistant grid coach at University of Idaho, to fill a similar spot on the Oregon staff. Harlow, ex-Vanderbilt university star, has been at Idaho for the past four football seasons.

Hired, then shortly afterward released to take the head coaching job at Arizona State college was Larry Siemering, former head coach at College of the Pacific. Siemering was signed as line coach but very shortly after appointment was released to take the Arizona State job.

Resigning from coaching positions were Bob McClure, line coach, and Jerry Lillie, end coach, both after two years with the Webfoots.

Working with the Oregon quarterbacks during spring practice this term will be Norm VanBrocklin, former Oregon great at that position and star of the professional Los Angeles Rams. John McKay, another backfield star of a couple of years back, will be retained as an assistant in coaching the backfield, the position he held last year.

Dean Little Travels

A transcontinental trek ended in late March for Sidney W. Little, dean of architecture and allied arts, who visited U. S. colleges and universities during a three-week absence from the campus.

Dean Little made arrangements in New York for securing graduate students of foreign countries interested in architecture. Preparations for exchange students at the University were made through the Institute of International Education.

A meeting of the commission for the survey of education and registration of the American Institute of Architects in Pittsburgh, Pa. was the first event of the trip. A Northwest regional meeting of the AIA was held at the University in February.

At Tulane university, Dean Little discussed the Oregon architecture school's no-grade, pass-or-fail policy with Tulane authorities. The return trip included visits to the University of Southern California, the University of California, and the California School of Fine Arts.

Visiting Professor

Added to the political science faculty for spring term is Dr. George H. Sabine, emeritus professor of philosophy at Cornell university, who will be on campus until summer.

Dr. Sabine's work at the University will be partly in connection with a program for preparation of college instructors, supported by the Carnegie Foundation.

He will conduct a graduate seminar in "Political Philosophy and History in England from 1540 to 1690," this term.

Dr. Sabine is a former vice president of Cornell and former dean of the graduate school there. He also taught at Stanford, the University of Missouri, and Ohio State university.

He is the author of "A History of Political Theory," a book widely used in universities and colleges, and is editor of two other volumes on political science and philosophy.

Faculty Salaries

Teachers in the Oregon State System of Higher Education are now waiting for response to a recent request for 20 per cent salary increases and a more adequate retirement program.

A committee of professors representing all schools in the system petitioned the State Board of Higher Education in late January, citing the reasons for the request.

The committee pointed out that a 20 per cent raise would merely bring salaries back to the purchasing power level of pre-war days.

Chancellor Charles D. Byrne told Oregon Dads on February 24 that in the past two years Oregon has lost more than 100 good staff members because of salary factors. He pointed out that Oregon's salary scale is 25 per cent lower than that of Washington, and 40 per cent lower than that of California.

Regarding retirement provisions, the State Board is endorsing the Oregon State Employees Association retirement program, which has been presented to the Legislature. No further action has been taken toward a retirement program.

Of the 20 per cent increase in salaries asked by professors, 8 per cent is included in the board's budget request now before the legislature. No further commitments have yet been made by the board.

Representing the University on the professional committee petitioning the board were Charles G. Howard, professor of law, and Thurman S. Peterson, professor of mathematics.

Blue Cross Drive

Under direction of Frank F. Dickson '23, the recent Blue Cross hospital-medical-surgical prepayment plan drive at the University of Oregon resulted in 1,273 faculty and custodial employees enrolling.

Associated with Dickson in Blue Cross and participating in the drive were Claire Warner Churchill '19, director of public relations; Richard R. Ferriss '29 and Max Angus '49, both sales representatives; and Bonnie Miller Anderson '41, public relations department.

Another Webfoot, Richard Montgomery Jones '29 is national director of the Blue Cross commission, with headquarters in Chicago. Jones coordinates activities of 90 Blue Cross plans throughout the U. S., Canada and Puerto Rico.

THE ALUMNI

Alumni Institute

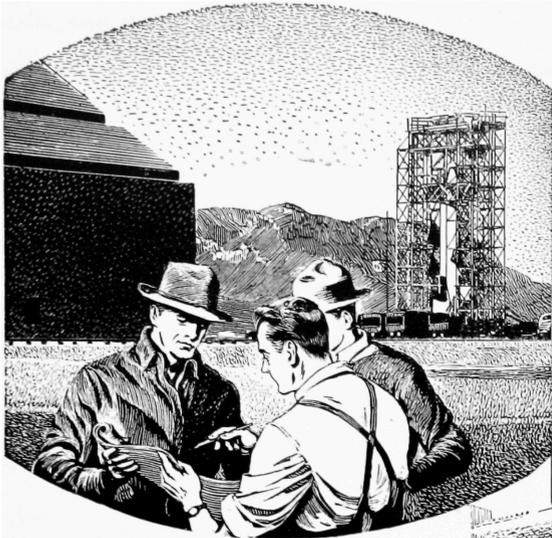

For the third successive year, the Oregon Alumni Institute played to a packed house in the Multnomah Hotel Ballroom on Saturday, March 17. The annual event, sponsored by the Portland Alumni club, features leading members of the University faculty who discuss topics relating to their fields of study.

The popular educational program which proves that "learning can be fun" opened with a luncheon featuring President H. K. Newburn in a speech entitled "Maintaining our Sense of Values." Head Football Coach Jim Aiken also spoke briefly.

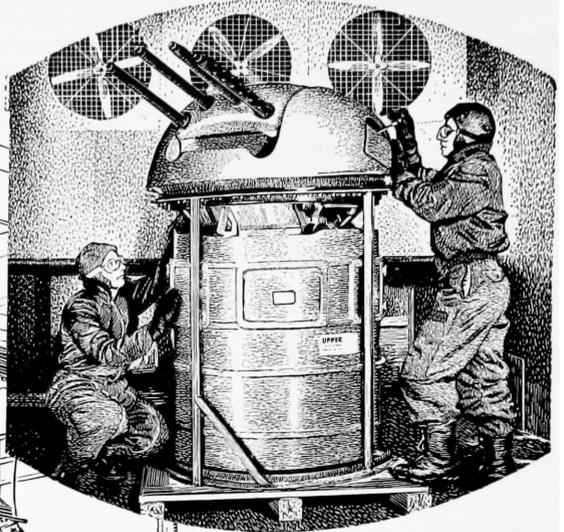

Following a brief recess, the afternoon "institute" session opened with Dean James H. Gilbert '03 recounting some of the prominent incidents which occurred during his 52 years at the University. In his talk, "Builders of Oregon and Heralds of Its Greatness," he reviewed and evaluated the administration of each University president since 1900, and cited the numerous alumni who have achieved prominence in varied fields as "heralds" of the University's position.

"Making Skeletons Talk" was the topic chosen by Dr. William S. Laughlin, assist-

Dr. Ivan G. Nagy, former secretary of the Hungarian Embassy and now a member of the political science faculty, gave a talk entitled "Revolution—our challenge to the Soviet." Dr. Nagy explained that Communism is actually a reactionary movement which is placing human rights in the same position as they were in medieval times, while the true revolution is offered by America in its interpretation of democracy.

Closing the session was Dr. E. G. Ebbighausen, associate professor of physics, in his talk, "The Physicist Dates the Past." He showed how evidences of civilization more than 20,000 years old can now be dated with amazing accuracy by using recent developments in nuclear physics.

Nicholas Jaureguy '17 introduced the speakers and acted as Institute Moderator.

A social hour followed the formal program.

Randall S. Jones '24, served as general chairman and was assisted by John W. Kendall '34, president of the Portland Alumni Club, E. J. Kolar '24, Elston Ireland '22, Willard E. Wilson '46, Wallace Cannon '24, Alys Sutton McCroskey '21, Mrs. Bruce L. Titus '30, Mrs. Francis J. Kern '23, and Mrs. William A. Palmer '33.

Cottage Grove Alumni

The annual meeting of Oregon alumni in Cottage Grove was held March 1 in the Cottage Grove high school cafeteria.

The program featured members of the Educational Tour troupe, which included President H. K. Newburn, Dean Theodore Kratt of the school of music, Dean Victor P. Morris of the school of business administration, and Dr. Roy C. McCall, head of the speech department.

Norman Richards '42 acted as chairman for the meeting. He was assisted by his wife, Kathleen Daugherty Richards '42 and Ruth S. Caldwell '23.

"Time" Correspondent

George Jones '37, former head of the Rome news bureau of Time and Life magazines, flew to England in mid-March to join Time's London bureau as senior correspondent.

He joined the staff of Time on December 26, 1947, the day of the big blizzard—he reported for work on Time on time but nobody else in his department showed up.

Jones, who speaks fluent Italian, was sent to Italy as chief of the Rome bureau of Time and Life in April of 1948, less than four months after joining the staff. One of his first reports from Rome was on the Italian elections. He was in charge of the Rome office for three years, returning to New York this February for reassignment.

Before joining Time, Jones was a reporter for several Oregon papers from 1934—when he was still in college—until 1939. He worked his way through the University as a reporter for the Eugene Register Guard and the Oregon Journal, graduating in 1937 with a bachelor of science degree in journalism and membership in Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity.

He stayed on the Guard's staff for some time after University, later working for the Capitol Journal in Salem. In 1939 he joined United Press as a west coast reporter and in September, 1942, went to the Pacific as war correspondent for U.P.

He wrote a book, "Tumult in India," following 18 months in that country after the war as correspondent for the New York Times. Jones is married and his wife flew to London with him for his present assignment.

Former Athlete Writes

The following letter was received recently by Leo A. Harris, director of athletics. Written by a former "O" winner now with the Air Force in Korea, it is reprinted here because it gives an indication of the type of athlete that a University always hopes to produce...

Headquarters Far East Air Forces
APO 925 c/o Postmaster
San Francisco, California

Dear Mr. Harris:

There are few things that I have received that gave me more pleasure than receiving my life-time pass to Oregon athletic contests because of having won a varsity "O". Whether I have an opportunity to use it matters little (except that I'll always want to see Oregon teams play) compared to the immense amount of satisfaction I enjoyed upon learning that Oregon is mindful of those students who gave so much time and effort to their school.

An athlete can perhaps understand events in Korea better than those who have not been subjected to the ups and downs of stiff group physical contests. One thing we always did at Oregon was to play our hearts out no matter whether we were winning or losing. We did it because we were taught to do it, because everyone expected it of us, and because it was the right thing to do.

Such an attitude is far more important in war than it is in intercollegiate athletic contests. Apparent military defeats are frequently turned into victories and the fate of a nation has often hung on the determination of a small group (or large) to "stay in there and pitch" when the going seemed toughest, and whatever the odds.

Again, please let me thank that great institution, the University of Oregon, through you for having the wisdom to add another facet to the great amount of pleasure it has given me in my life.

Sincerely yours,
Col. Don Zimmerman '24

Alumni Leaders Meet

More than 30 alumni leaders from all parts of the state attended the Third Annual Alumni Leaders' conference on the University campus Saturday, March 3.

Topics of general interest discussed were the legislative program, the enrollment outlook, deferred living and the general athletic picture. The Saturday afternoon session was held in the board room of the Erb Memorial Union. A short business meeting preceded a "round-table" discussion with University leaders.

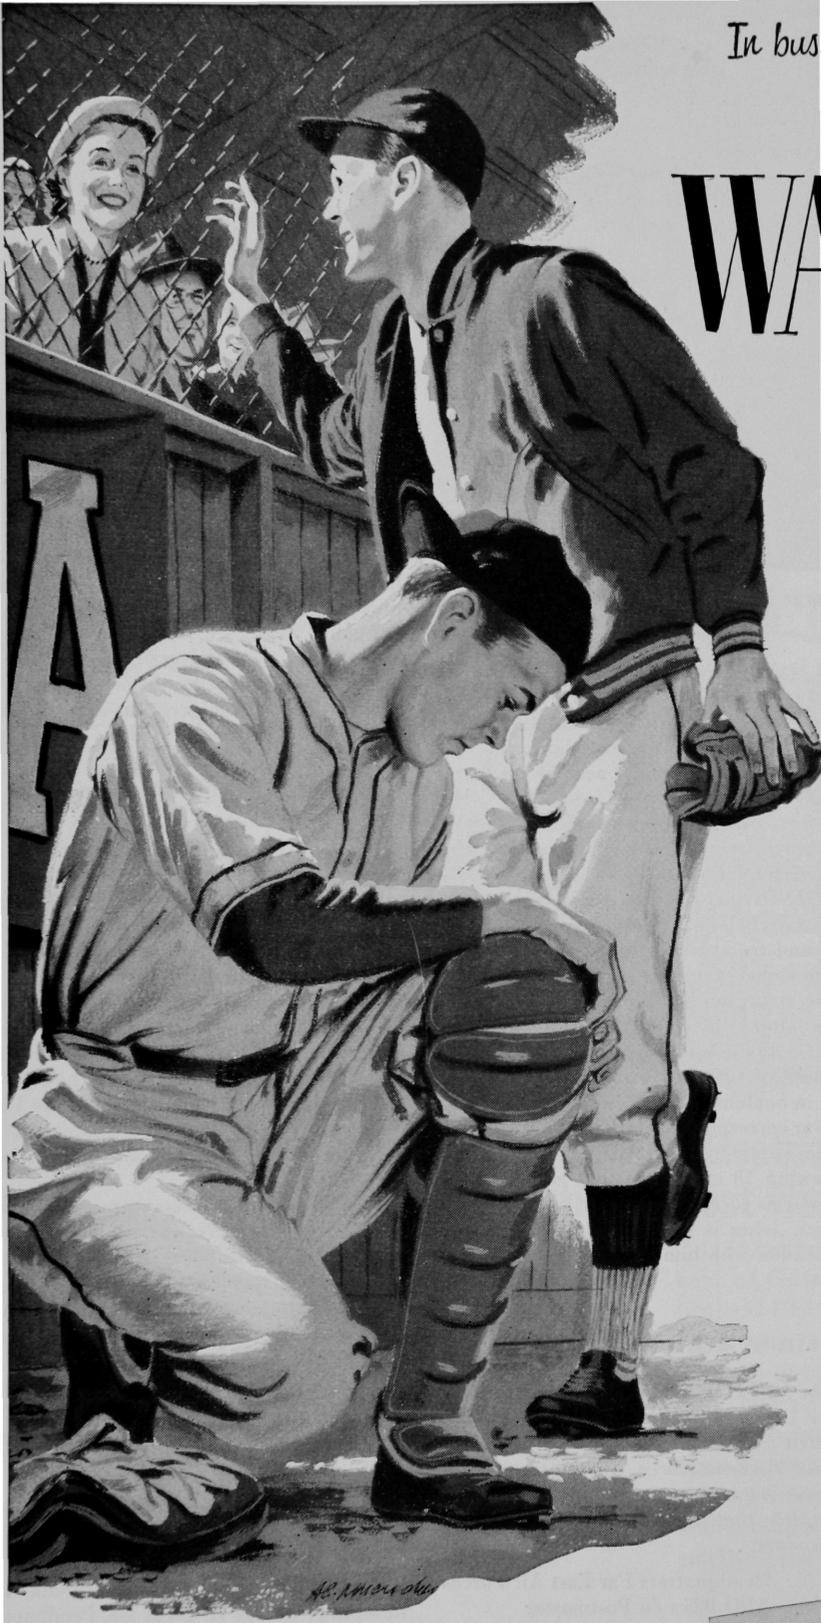

University staff members present included President H. K. Newburn; Leo A. Harris, director of athletics; J. O. Lindstrom, business manager; Donald M. DuShane, director of student affairs; Howard Lemons, assistant to the president; and Lyle Nelson, director of public services.

A reception and dinner were held for the delegates and their wives, following which all were guests at the final Oregon-Oregon State basketball game (won convincingly by the Webfoots).

Herbert J. Darby '23, president of the Alumni Association, presided at the conference. Attending the session were Don Malarkey '48, Astoria; George Luoma '41, Roseburg; George H. Corey '38, Pendleton; Walter Durgan '28, Corvallis; Boyd R. Overhulse '33, Madras; E. S. "Ox" Wilson '43, Baker; Josephine Ralston Johnson '29, Grants Pass; L. E. Dick, Jr. '40, Heppner.

WARM UP

"Mr. Kent will see you in a few minutes," the receptionist said pleasantly.

"Thank you." Tom Wilson went to the far side of the room and sat down. This was his first "big" call, on his own, as a New York Life agent and he was nervous, frankly nervous.

Tom picked up a magazine and turned a few pages idly. He had that same tense feeling in his stomach that he had the day he pitched his first big baseball game in college. Tom put the magazine down and let his mind wander back to the baseball diamond and that first big game.

He remembered warming up, he and the catcher, standing along the first base line. Then Tom had gone over to talk with his mother, who was sitting just behind the screen where she could see every pitch. Her understanding smile turned out to be the best part of the warm-up.

Tom had been so proud of her, looking as smart as any of the girls and, when she laughed, looking almost as young. Nobody would have guessed that she had borne the cares of the family all alone, helped only by the memories of her husband and an income from the life insurance he had so thoughtfully left her.

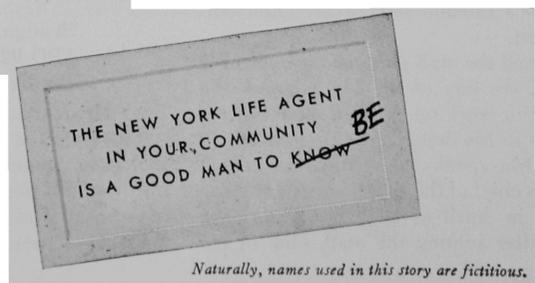

Tom had been proud of his father, too, for the love and forethought which had made it possible for his mother and himself to live and grow, not hemmed in by want. In fact, it was the deep realization of all the things life insurance had made possible for his family—and could make possible for others—which had led Tom to become a New York Life agent himself . . .

The receptionist's voice punctured Tom's thoughts. "Mr. Kent will see you now."

"Fine," he said. He got up and started to Mr. Kent's office. The warm-up was over. He had the confidence he needed now.

"Living-In" Study

To renew study of the new "living-in" plan under which all freshmen live in University dormitories, another special alumni committee has been appointed by Herbert J. Darby, president of the Alumni Association.

The group will succeed the committee headed by Sidney Milligan of Eugene, whose report recommended the appointment of a new committee and continuation of observing the operation and results of the new plan. It was recommended that particular attention be paid to analysis of the effect upon the financial status of living organizations, effect on social development of the individual student, and the effect of the plan on training students for individual leadership.

Heading the new group will be Charles R. Holloway '35, Portland. Other appointments include:

Ivan McKinney '23, Portland; Mrs. Melba Hess '25, Portland; C. Earl Walter '47, Portland; Ray E. Vester '21, Portland; Robert T. Mautz '26, Portland; Henry N. Fowler '14, Bend; Mrs. Dorothy Porter, '45, Eugene; Rev. Wesley G. Nicholson, Eugene; and J. Wesley Sullivan '43, Salem.

She Enjoys Teaching

Since her graduation from the University of Oregon in 1926, Miss Juliette Claire Gibson has taught English, creative writing and journalism at Eugene high school, and hundreds of her former students have graduated from the University in those years.

Her room in the high school is filled with momentos left by the various classes, most of them dealing with the ever-popular study of Shakespeare, a phase of the English instruction. Crossed swords, shields with coats of arms, models of Macbeth's three witches—these are some of the things that make this room look like anything but the traditional bare-walled classroom. She admits that sometimes the things make her nervous, but the students like them so they keep on accumulating.

She enjoys her senior English classes, which are put at a college-preparatory level, but admits that her pets are the creative writing and newswriting classes, because "you can actually see them getting somewhere." Currently, she's glowing about a student who's had an article published in the February issue of Seventeen.

The EHS News, of which she is adviser, is put out by the newswriting classes under her direction; the paper has won high honors in state high school competitions on numerous occasions during her stay.

Held just a little bit in awe by some of her students, she has a policy of being firm but fair. College instructors who get her students think the policy pays off. And her former students find that she's done even more for them than they at the time realized.

She faces about 135 students each class day, and of late has also taught student teachers from the University's education school.

At the University she majored in journalism, minored in drama and English, and did some acting. She was, she says, "bamboozled into education" her senior year, which made it possible for her to take her present job at Eugene high just after graduation from the University.

"Somebody told me that teaching would be a good idea," she recalls and succeeding classes of high school students have benefited from that someone's urgings.

Kelso-Longview Club

The Kelso-Longview alumni club held a dinner meeting in the Community Church in Longview on March 16. More than 50 alumni were present.

Featured speaker was Dean James H. Gilbert, emeritus professor of economics, who spoke on the topic, "Builders of Oregon and Heralds of Its Greatness." Head Football Coach Jim Aiken also spoke briefly on football prospects for next fall. Robert L. Moran '48 was toastmaster, and Les Anderson '43, alumni director led the singing of Oregon songs.

Dan Welch '23, president of the local club, acted as chairman for the meeting. Others serving on the committee were Marjorie Holaday Cole '21, food; Mary Paulsen '50, reservations; Betty Ann Stevens '45, publicity; and Donald Bozorth '43, assistant chairman.

Has Book Published

A Western story set in Eastern Oregon is "Steel to the South," the fourth book written by Wayne D. Overholser '34, just published by the Macmillan company.

Before devoting full time to writing, Overholser taught school for many years at Tillamook junior high school and Bend high school. He has traveled throughout the Western states and gathered pioneer lore which he has used for background in the nearly 200 Western stories, novelettes and detective stories he has had published in the last 10 years.

His first full length book, "Buckaroo's Code," was published by Macmillan in 1947; "West of the Rimrock" in 1949; "Draw or Drag" in 1950. His latest, "Steel to the South," is a story of competing railroad interests brawling to gain property rights for a railroad through central Oregon to California.

Overholser has taken graduate work at the University of Montana and University of Southern California. He is a member of the Oregon Historical Society and the Colorado Authors' League. He is married, living with his wife and three young sons in Boulder, Colorado.

Recent Promotion

Recently promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Air Force was Major Andrew H. Price '42, according to announcement by Headquarters, Continental division of Military Air Transport Service at Kelly Air Force Base, Texas.

Colonel Price is serving as deputy inspector general for the continental division, which with two other MATS divisions, flies strategic cargo and passengers throughout the world.

A senior pilot with nearly 3,000 hours of flying time to his credit, the colonel served with the 19th Bomb group in the Southwest Pacific during World War II. He flew 62 combat missions in B-17 bombers and holds the Air Medal and Distinguished Flying Cross, with one oak leaf cluster.

Korea Is Book Topic

Dr. Robert T. Oliver, M.A., '42 is the author of a new book "Why War Came to Korea" published by the Fordham university press. Dr. Oliver has been the counselor for the Korean commission in Washington, D. C. and a member of the Korean delegation to the United Nations.

He has taught at Bucknell college, Syracuse university and the University of Seoul. During his stay in Korea, he became manager of the Korean-Pacific Press and is a close friend of President Sygman Rhee. At present Dr. Oliver is head of the speech department at Pennsylvania State college.

He was born in Sweet Home, Oregon, and received his B.A. degree at Pacific university. Later he received a Ph.D degree from the University of Wisconsin.

"Address Detectives"

To assist the Alumni Office in obtaining correct addresses for Oregon alumni scattered throughout the United States, a new organization to be known as the "Address Detectives" has been formed by the Alumni Office.

The "Detectives" are located in key cities throughout the United States and are sent lists of alumni to be checked periodically for correct addresses. More than 400 "detectives," mostly women, are being recruited for this activity.

THE CLASSES

We think you'll agree that keeping track of the doings of some 30,000 Oregon alumni is no easy task. That's why we're asking you for help. You can be our "local reporter" with your own activities and those of your alumni friends and neighbors as your special "beat."

Not only are we interested in the usual vital statistics—marriages, engagements, births, deaths—but many other items as well. Have you taken any trips lately? What's your family doing? Have you seen any of your classmates lately? What kind of a job do you have? Answers to these and other questions will make for interesting reading by your classmates when they glance through the pages of OLD OREGON.

Ex-barracks Home

Residents develop a dependence on each other that extends past the social; "sitters" can be found for the children while mothers go shopping, and ride-sharing and even telephone-sharing are common. Even the postman catches the spirit of helpfulness, one day saving a youngster's life by shaking him by the heels and dislodging a rock from his throat.

All told, there are 394 veterans and 57 faculty members in University housing, and with 200 veterans yet unoused by the University, D. H. Williams '49, director of University housing, does not expect a decrease in the need for student housing for some time. "There'll be veterans from the Korean war coming to school," he points out, "and when vets run out we'll start housing married non-veterans."

"The smartest move I ever made"

LARRY GRAEBER and family, San Bernardino, Calif.

These University of Oregon men are
New England Mutual representatives:

Dean H. Connaway '37, Portland
Mortimer E. Bonime '50, Portland

They can give you expert counsel on uniquely liberal and flexible New England Mutual life insurance that's tailored to fit your family's needs.

The NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL
Life Insurance Company of Boston

I ENTERED Naval Aviation in 1940, served as a fighter pilot in the Solomon Islands campaign, and continued flying for the Navy after the war. But in 1947 I was stricken with polio. My flying days were over.

In my search for a new career I took a number of adaptability tests, which indicated that salesmanship was a possibility for me. I investigated many businesses, including life insurance, and discovered that here was a field that required no capital, yet gave me a business of my own — something I had always dreamed of having.

It takes a lot of training to become a good fighter pilot, or a good life insurance man. So I began looking for a company with a thorough training program. I decided that New England Mutual offered its men the finest program in the field, and backed them up with personal help and solid advertising support*.

I entered the life insurance business with New England Mutual — the smartest move I ever made. It gave me independence and unlimited earning possibilities. The future looks good, because each year I expect to make more money than the year before. If I want to go hunting, I don't have to ask anyone (except my wife). If I need more income, I must work a little harder, and it seems I always need more money and am working harder and loving every minute of it.

Larry Graeber

Recent graduates of our Home Office training course, although new to the life insurance business, earn average first-year commissions of $4200—which, with renewal commissions added, brings the total yearly income average to $6500. From here, incomes rise in direct proportion to each individual's ability and industry.

If you'd like information about a career that gives you a business of your own, with no slow climb up a seniority ladder and no ceiling on earnings, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Mass.

The New England Mutual, America's first chartered mutual life insurance company, backs up its field force with strikingly effective national advertising. This advertisement, appearing currently in The Saturday Evening Post and Fortune (in full color), and in Time, Newsweek and Business Week, tells millions of prospects about the advantages and flexibility of New England Mutual policies, and urges them to consult our field men for expert help on life insurance problems.
