Curricular Problems in the Oregon State System of Higher Education

IT HAS been the policy of the University of Oregon Alumni Association to leave the question of curricular adjustments within the system to the State Board of Higher Education. The members of the Board have shown themselves to be conscientious, intelligent and informed judges of sound educational practice. Whenever an institution has a legitimate request for some change in its curriculum, it should present its case to the Board, but the Board has the final authority to grant or withhold the request. It has been our policy to recognize this procedure and we intend to continue to recognize it and to abide by it.

These and some other observations to follow are necessitated by errors of statement and of interpretation concerning the University and its history under the unified system of higher education which have recently appeared in the press under Corvallis datelines and in publications bearing the imprint of the Oregon State College Alumni Association. In order that the alumni of the University of Oregon may be correctly informed on a number of facts which are being put into controversy, your careful attention is directed to the following:

1. No institution has more consistently supported the State Board of Higher Education than has the University of Oregon.
2. The University has believed that it should request the Board for such changes in its fields of instruction as seem to be educationally defensible.
3. That it has been successful in its request for major science does not mean "the scuttling of the system of higher education."
4. The recent board action did not create any new department at the University. It merely extended science work into the upper division and graduate fields.
5. The University does not have a School of Applied Social Science. The social science departments on the Eugene campus, formerly part of the old College of Literature, Science and the Arts, have been with us on a major, degree-granting basis for generations. They were never taken away.
6. Major work in Journalism never was restored because it never was taken away! For administrative convenience the School of Journalism was temporarily united with the College of Arts and Letters in 1932, but that union only lasted about a month.
7. Similarly, major work in music and major work in Architecture and Allied Arts were never abolished and therefore never returned. There was a brief experimental affiliation of the two as divisions of a School of Fine Arts, but that also proved unsatisfactory.
8. The University has had a School of Physical Education for many years—since long before unification.
9. The University never had a School of Science, and does not now propose one.
10. The University has not taken anything away from Oregon State College.
11. The list of purported "restorations" to the University is thus seen to be composed of items which have not been restored, or which were never taken away—the one exception being the privilege of granting degrees in our science departments in accordance with the recent action of the Board.

12. No University spokesman has ever said that the University was now "complete" in the sense that Oregon State College is now using that word in referring to its own institutional ambitions. The liberal arts core of the University may now be made complete, but in order to make the University complete in the sense of having professional schools which it does not now have and which many or most state universities do have, it would need to ask for engineering, pharmacy, forestry and others. The University has not considered requesting such curricular additions.

Wanted: Your Vote

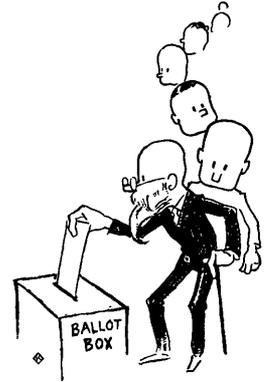

Attached to this edition of OLD OREGON is a printed ballot marked with the names of alumni who have been nominated for officers of the Association. A blank space also has been provided for a write-in candidate if desired.

The minutes required to mark a ballot and slip it into the jaws of the corner mailbox are very minor indeed compared with the importance of that vote. It is a privilege and a duty to vote, one of the most important an alum is called upon to fulfill. Cast your vote today!

Our Cover in Words

With the turn of the year two able officers will leave their posts and join the growing list of past leaders of the Oregon Alumni Association. They are President Hollis Johnston, '21, Portland, center in the cover picture, and Vice-President Forrest Cooper, '27, Lakeview, on the left. With them is Elmer Fansett, '28, secretary-treasurer of the Association. These men have led one of the most successful years in the history of the Alumni Association and certainly deserve a large share of the credit for that success.

WRITES OF HOMECOMING—Alumni Secretary Elmer Fansett, '28, gives first-hand impressions of Oregon's most colorful homecoming celebration.

Just at press time OLD OREGON has received word from Ernest Haycox, '23, that he cannot run for president of the association. "And in any event I would not wish to run against so able a man as Harris Ellsworth," Haycox added.

OREGON alumni crowding the downtown streets of Eugene . . . two "old timers" discussing the good old days . . . gay, colorful campus decorations . . . classmate meeting classmate at the alumni reception . . . huge electrically propelled signs depicting a Donald Duck at the control of all types of instruments of war making trouble for a hapless OSC Beaver . . .

CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT—M. Harris Ellsworth, '22, Roseburg, Douglas county Alumni Director and editor of the Roseburg News-Review, is a nominee for president of the Association.

Alumni Name Nominees At Homecoming Meeting

As Told by ELMER FANSETT, '28

Traditionally Homecoming has been the one event which Oregon alumni longest remember. Similarly it has been the celebration for which most graduates return to the campus. With a natural background of the Oregon-Oregon State game this year's homecoming call was heard by alumni in all parts of the nation. Here Alumni Secretary Elmer Fansett, '28, tells some of the highlights of a great weekend.

a real football game . . . and over all an air of excitement and friendliness.

This was homecoming, 1941. Already written into the history books of University homecomings this year's celebration has been acclaimed the largest and most colorful of them all. Already established firmly in the memory of most of the alumni who returned, the 1941 affair brought about many a happy reunion of Oregon classmates.

Of major importance to most alumni was the annual meeting and nomination of officers to govern the association for the coming year. During the meeting the nominating committee appointed by out-going president Hollis Johnston, '21, and composed of Ralph Cake, '13; Ep Hoyt, '23, and Merle Chessman, '09, announced their selection of candidates for president and vice-president.

Listed were: for president, Harris Ellsworth, '22, Roseburg, and Ernest Haycox, '23, Portland; for vice-president, Don McCormick, '30, Portland, and Roy Vernstrom, '41, Portland. No other nominations were made from the floor, but a space will be provided on the ballot for write-in candidates.

Ballots for the election will be placed in this edition of OLD OREGON going to all paid members of the Association. Members of the group must cast these ballots and have them in the mail not later than December 25 in order to include their votes in the official election. Announcement of the results will be made January 1 in the daily press and in the January issue of OLD OREGON. Officers elected will take office at that time.

Homecoming started off as usual Friday with alumni returning by bus, train and car. A large number of directors were on hand Friday afternoon for the annual directors' meeting and registration of alums began in Johnson hall at 1 p.m.

PRESENT for the meeting were—President Hollis Johnston, '21, Portland; Vice-President Forest Cooper, '27, Lakeview; Secretary-Treasurer Elmer Fansett, '28; Walter T. Durgan, '28, Benton county; Robert W. Lucas, '36, Clatsop county; Remy M. Cox, '22, Crook county; Dr. H. C. Staples, '23, Deschutes; John N. Mohr, '28, Hood River; Dr. Claire L. Ogle, '16, Josephine; John H. Houston, '21, Klamath; Ben F. Dorris, '15, Lane; Lawrence Hull, '23, Lincoln; Ralph Cronise, '11, Linn; Earl Blackaby, '15, Malheur; Dr. Clarence W. Keen, '06, Marion; Dr. Asa B. Starbuck, '06, Polk; Raymond O. Williams, '14, Union; Gilbert L. Schultz, '37, Washington.

On the campus, but arriving too late for the directors' meeting were—M. Harris Ellsworth, '22, Douglas; T. Lester Johnson, '29, Sherman; Chester O. Knowlton,

'32, Tillamook; and Charles Erwin, '38, Umatilla.

With "Blitz the Beavers" for a theme the University campus Friday night became the scene of a mock warfare which threatened to put Mr. Hitler and associates to shame for methods of annihilating the enemy. Friday night presidents of campus living organizations threw the switches which transformed the front of each house into a battlefield in which an Oregon duck relentlessly "blitzed" an Oregon State Beaver. Huge electrically propelled airplanes with a duck in control, battleships with a duck at the command, and a moving impersonation of Donald himself combined forces to make trouble for the hapless beaver.

Saturday's dawn saw an overcast sky and an occasional hint of rain, but Oregon spirit, as indomitable as an Englishman's will, refused to be dampened. Alumni continued to reach the campus until shortly before game time. Many registered at the offices in Johnson hall and there inspected the various displays and collections.

A great deal of interest, particularly among old timers, centered around a collection of pictures and souvenirs turned

. . . LETTERS . . .

Edwin P. Shattuck, '97

To the Editor of Old Oregon:

In a letter published in the November issue of OLD OREGON, my old friend Walter Whittlesey has given names to each of the members of Oregon's first football team, a photograph of which appeared in your October issue. Just for the record, I wish to suggest one correction. My recollection is that the person at the left end of the bottom line is Jessup, not Thompson.

This photograph jolted me into happy recollections of those long past days and our initiation of football at the University.

I well recall the first time a group of us met to engage in practice. It was on a frosty afternoon in the fall of 1893 and we used the old field at the bottom of the campus. For costumes we rolled up our trousers and took off our coats—no padding or protective strappings during those early scrimmages, but we soon came to it as the uniforms in the photograph show. In those days none of us was familiar with football technique. The great football games of the time were between Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Pennsylvania and the newspaper accounts of those games and the news pictures gave us our idea of the flying wedge and other out-moded formations which were used to good advantage in our early games.

It is a long way down the football path from 1893 to 1941 and although far from the campus these many years I have eagerly followed the campaigns of the University's teams. Oregon has had its full share in making football history. It has developed some splendid teams and has produced some great players, and above all, has carried on in a spirit of fine sportsmanship.

Very truly yours,

Edwin P. Shattuck

Clyde Fillmore, '98

Dear Mr. Nelson:

Your letter, with clipping, has just been sent on from New York. . . . I am sending a check for $2.00 for the magazine.

The theater engagement referred to in the clipping was with the Alexander Woolcott company, a particularly interesting experience, since Woolcott is the man about whom the play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," was written. Woolcott, of course, played THE MAN. My wife and I played the unfortunate people who gave the dinner.

Woolcott was guest at the White House during our two weeks engagement in Washington and the president and Mrs. Roosevelt came to see the play the second night. We were all invited to the White House for supper afterwards, in many ways a most amusing event. We heard the since-famous diaper story from the president's own lips, with promptings from Eleanor, before it crashed the newspapers. Woolcott is now in England, but we haven't heard whether he's stopping at Buckingham Palace or not.

I was sorry not to see Homer Angell, '98, but had a phone chat with him and met his secretary, Ethel Johnson, 26. Homer was spending all his time in the senate gallery listening to the lend-lease debate. He had been to see the play, but was too cautious to come to see me in the mysterious region known as "backstage."

It was a very great pleasure to meet Senator McNary in his magnificent suite of offices in the senate building. He was no longer listening to the debate, but was waiting with obvious patience for the vote, undoubtedly dreaming of life on the Oregon ranch. He even said as much.

John MacGregor, '23, the very energetic master of ceremonies of the New York chapter of Oregon alumni, was good enough to rout me out of limbo a few years ago to attend the Oregon dinners. Dr. Erb was guest of honor at the last one and it was a great pleasure to meet him. He told us about the gates, of course, and many other interesting matters concerning the University. The person who came nearest to being a contemporary of mine was Laura Kennon, '11. I had difficulty in convincing her that the University had even been there the year I was graduated.

My wife and I were tremendously interested in seeing two of Maude Kerns'

'99, non-objective paintings at the Guggenheim galleries in New York in the early summer. We felt that Maude's work ranked easily with the Bauer and Kandinsky exhibit which occupied most of the wall space.

My wife is Lea Penman from the University of Denver. She and our son, Slaine, spent the summer at the Spa Theatre in Saratoga. Lea is now with the new Jane Cowl play, "Ring Around Elizabeth," currently trying out in Philadelphia.

In July at twenty-four hours notice, I had to cancel commitments for Saratoga and for the current New York season to "plane in," as Hollywood now puts it, for the pictures, "New York Story" and more recently "Shanghai Gesture" and "Remarkable Andrew." I may be taking you too literally, but I warn you never to ask a picture actor for information about himself unless you really want it, because you'll

End Conference Play

By JOHNNIE KAHANANUI, '43

And after the battle is over what will they say? . . . With the final gun in the Oregon-Oregon State Homecoming thriller Saturday, November 29, another edition of the Oliver varsity closed its coast conference play and moved from the active file kept by sports writers to that dusty shelf marked "history." Although not a highly successful season the play this year was not without its high spots a few of which are recounted here by Emerald Sports Editor Jonathan Kahananui, '43.

THE tumult and the shouting dies . . . the captains and the kings depart . . . It's all over. By the time this is ground through the presses and blanketed in form for state distribution, Oregon's 1941 football season will have emitted its death rattle under a blazing Texas sun. For in Austin, December 6, Coach Gerald A. "Tex" Oliver's Webfoots punctuate with period the final act of their 1941 football drama, a drama which soared to tremendous heights with the most delirious and epic of victories and which tumbled to the other extremity with defeats incredible and tragic.

Gems salvaged for Oregon from this year's blaze along the Pacific front, however, sparkle with a lustre that practically obliterates any ugly profiles of nonedescript gargoyles that will grin with mockery from the Webfoots' 1941 trophy case.

Oregon football enthusiasts will remember vividly the huge Duck machine that rolled out of the Pacific northwest, roared into the Los Angeles Coliseum, and there proceeded to rip apart Southern California's Trojan in a public demonstration of implacable efficiency. They'll live again that 20-to-6 Oregon win over USC long after the history of this season is compiled for posterity and relegated to some shelf to gather dust and crumble under the onslaught of bugs.

Oregon fans will recall that Saturday, October 11, 1941, and remember that it climaxed 26 years of drought, of anxious waiting for an eventual defeat of Southern California, that it marked triumph after 11 years of dogged trying. In the same mental image they will recall the herculean efforts of a blonde, 185-pound, triple-threat Oregon halfback, Curt Mecham. Eyes of the sporting world focussed on Mecham and blinked with amazement as he rifled all three of Oregon's touchdown passes, zigzagged back of the field 53 brilliant yards to set up one of the Webfoots' scores that day, and punted the Trojans into inescapable holes time and again.

These same eyes followed his exploits during the remainder of the season—his beautiful 30-yard touchdown pass to Jimmy Newquist against Washington, his 53-yard gallop for a score against Oregon State, and others—winked contentment when Mecham was named on INS' first-string all-coast eleven, and smiled when he was tabbed a "Five-Star" back by Fox-Movietone. His number, 25, will be blazed into Oregon records with those of stars of yesterday.

Portland, October 18, 1941, and the Oregon partisans can still see California's Golden Bear being soundly thrashed, 19 to 7, and ground in very mundane mud after being dragged from his famous lair. Portland, November 11, 1941, the Webfoots fulminated to two first-half touchdowns, roared one more across immediately after halftime, then settled back and watched, as Ace Bronco Halfback Kenny Casanega sparked a furious second-half Santa Clara splurge that fell two big points shy of overhauling the Ducks. Final score: Oregon, 21, Santa Clara, 19.

SEATTLE, November 22, 1941. In a contest packed with all the color and fury of an Oregon-Washington football game and spiced with large doses of Webfoot Halfback Tommy Roblin, the Ducks snapped a two-year Husky winning streak with a 19 to 16 victory that kept fans glued to cold bleacher seats until the final gun.

Husky players, smothered beneath a wave of Oregon blockers, looked on dismayed as the chunky Roblin slashed off their left-tackle and pounded 35 yards to a third-quarter touchdown that pulled the Webfoots abreast of the home-team after Newquist converted.

Boom, boom, Oregon exploded for two more touchdowns to lead 19 to 7, but the Huskies weren't muzzled. They retaliated with one of their own . . . 19 to 14. With seconds to go Roblin grabbed the toss from center, danced around behind the line of scrimmage, then retreated for his goal stripe over which he was dumped, giving Washington two meaningless points and Oregon a 19-to-16 victory. In that game Roblin clinched his niche on INS' second-string all-coast eleven, and a substitute end, Russ Nowling, earned his berth on the University - of - Washington - selected all-coast team.

EUGENE, November 29, University of Oregon's Homecoming. Oregon vs. Oregon State. Beaver fans shudder every time they recall how close an injury-riddled Oregon team came to derailing their Rose-Bowl-bound special.

Fullback Lewis Shelton ripped through in the third quarter for OSC's first touchdown, after a controversial 15-yard penalty had sneaked the ball inside Oregon's 3-yard line, and after the Ducks had held there for two downs. The Orangenemen's place kick artist, Quarterback Warren Simas flunked his try. Oregon State, 6, Oregon, 0.

No sooner had the fourth quarter of the game opened, when Oregon's Mecham, displaying flawless side-stepping, change-of-pace, and dodging, raced 53 yards to score. Oregon fans howled, and went wild a few seconds later, when Newquist's perfect

America's No. 1 Businesswoman
Oregon's Vivien Kellems

MEET OUR ALUMNS

By RAY SCHRICK, '43

Second in a series of biographical sketches of outstanding Oregon alumni is this article on Vivien Kellems, '18, now president and founder of the Kellems Products company of New York City. Widely heralded as the nation's number one business woman, Miss Kellems is known as the woman who made a fortune out of a Chinese puzzle. At right Miss Kellems as she appeared recently in Eugene while visiting Fenna and Enna Van Gelder, two girls she sent out to the University.

VOTED the outstanding woman in industry by the National Association of Manufacturers . . . honored as one of the best dressed women in the nation . . . named in a list of the century's successful women . . . president and founder of the Kellems Electrical products company . . . a graduate of the University of Oregon.

These are but a few of the high spots in the highly successful career of Oregon's Vivien Kellems, New York manufacturer, who was in Eugene recently visiting her mother, Mrs. Louisa Kellems, and two girls, Fenna and Enna Van Gelder, whom she is sending to the University. Of course Miss Kellems spent plenty of time on the campus looking over familiar landmarks and talking to her old professors.

Vivien Kellems, '18, described as "a girl with a grip of steel," is acknowledged as one of the most successful business women in the nation. Hers is a story of success which would rival any of those of Arabian Nights.

Miss Kellems applied the oriental principal of the woven straw tub whose grip becomes stronger according to the pull of the object being held, to the electrical cable industry and developed a business which is reported to make her over $50,000 a year.

Her brother, Edgar, who is an inventor adapted the woven tube principle to cable grips some 14 years ago. Like most inventors, he did not think there was an open market, so he gave it to his sister and was through.

"I not only did not know there was such a thing as a cable grip," Miss Kellems laughingly states, "I didn't even know there were underground cables. I thought you merely turned the switch and the light came on."

That was when she first started. Armed with her University education and her background of economics, however, Miss Kellems set out in the direction of a local electrical utility company. She demonstrated samples of the old-type grip, then her new one. She talked to the "head man" and came away with an order. Soon other "head men" in affiliated companies were visited, and they, too, placed orders.

IT was a modest beginning, this embryo concern. Miss Kellems set up shop in a loft rented for $50 a month. Her product was, and still is, largely made by hand, so she needed little machinery. The first year her company grossed $40,000.

Kellems Products, Inc. is today a factory on Park Avenue, New York City. Kellems grips have been used in threading more than 1,000,000 feet of cable through electric conduits in the wiring of Chrysler building; they held high-tension cables used in building Boulder dam, and they held cables to the top of the Empire State building.

The latest war-time use of the cable has come only within the past few years. Carrying shells and pulling bombs out of the ground are only two of the many national defense duties.

Miss Kellems is an unusual picture for such a business magnate. She stands five feet two inches tall and weighs 115 pounds. And don't think that industry is her only job! She has her own home, and, as she puts it, "I love it."

She takes time off from business to enjoy some of the more feminine interests of life, and she was picked by the Fashion Academy as one of the thirteen best dressed women in public life. Miss Kellems also likes to collect old clocks. "When they are available and I can afford them," and to work in the rock garden which she is building at her Connecticut home.

As a public speaker she likes to say what she pleases, and therefore hates to accept a fee.

THE electrical industry firmly needs a feminine touch, Miss Kellems believes. She points to the fact electrical kitchenware, excellent as it is, is designed by men who never fried a pork chop or washed a dish in their lives.

THIS WAS HOMECOMING 1941

OLD OREGON'S New York reporter and ace alumni leader, John MacGregor, '23, writes with the latest news of a meeting held November 6 with Dr. Donald M. Erb of the University acting as host. The fact that New York alumni got together is no news, reports MacGregor, but when the president of the University acts as host, that is news.

Present for the meeting and guests of the president were—Dr. Esther P. Lovejoy, '94; Dr. Laura Hall Kennon, '11; Edwin P. Shattuck, '96; Dr. Claude E. Robinson, '24; Ralfe Clipp, '27; Francis E. Taylor, '25; Kenneth Youel, '23; Dr. Allen Eaton, '02, and scribe MacGregor, '23.

Mrs. Leonabel Jacobs, '07, invited the group to her studio. She was a member of the class of 1907 and is one of the country's most distinguished portrait painters.

A great deal of time was spent talking over old times and discussing educational advances of the University, writes MacGregor. Dr. Erb told of the extension of pure science work into the upper division and graduate fields by the state board.

over to OLD OREGON by C. E. Wagner, '01, to be placed in the University's collection. This valuable collection was received by Dr. Donald M. Erb for the University. It contains many old time sports pictures and souvenirs collected by Mr. Wagner.

Saturday's game which sent Oregon State College to the Rose Bowl was in every way a real athletic contest. Although on the losing end of a 12 to 7 score a crippled Oregon varsity played 60 minutes of brilliant football.

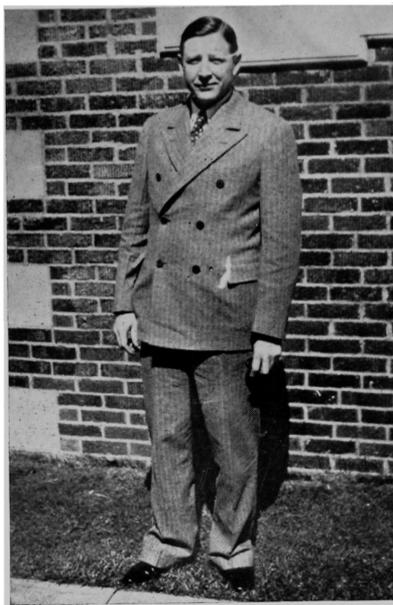

JUST before the game former Oregon athletes were guests of the local chapter of the Order of O at a banquet in Gerlinger hall. Robert Bradshaw, '14, captain of the 1914 football team, acted as toastmaster for the affair. The Order of O parade before the Homecoming game was enthusiastically applauded by students. Leading the parade were "Monk" Eastland, '96; Dr. Clarence Keen, '96, and C. E. Wagner, '01.

Immediately after the game, alumni met for their annual get-together and reception at the Eugene armory. It was a large and enthusiastic crowd, despite the football loss. Many former classmates met and had an opportunity to discuss changes in the University since their day.

Following the reception alums returned to campus living organizations for dinner and bull sessions around fraternity and sorority house fires. In the evening the annual homecoming dance called many of Oregon's grads. Several prominent alumni were represented in the Friars parade which followed tradition and made its way through the dance crowd to tap six senior men students for membership.

Even after the dance lights burned late on the campus as students and alums sat around house fires and discussed important phases in the University's rapid progressive growth. Sunday Eugene churches held special services honoring returning alumni. This was followed by dinner and the long trek homeward.

By evening Sunday the campus was almost back to normal and the University settled back to its daily educational routine to await still another year and another homecoming.

HEADS FRATERNITIES — New chairman of the National Interfraternity conference is Oregon's John MacGregor, '23. Active in support of the University, MacGregor is head of the New York City alumni chapter.

John MacGregor Named New Head of Fraternities

John M. MacGregor, '23, head of the University's New York City alumni chapter, is the newly elected chairman of the National Interfraternity conference, according to word reaching OLD OREGON via the local newspapers. One of Oregon's most active alums, MacGregor has carried the same energy and enthusiasm which put him on top during undergraduate days into his New York work and now ranks as a leading attorney.

While at the University he was president of the student body, president of his fraternity, Alpha Tau Omega, organizer of the Masonic group which was instrumental in getting the Masonic building on Fourteenth street next to Westminster house, leader of the student union move, and a member of Friars, to mention a few of his activities.

His capable leadership of the New York City alumni chapter has had a great deal to do with its rating as one of the most active and most successful in the Association. A tribute to this leadership is paid in another part of this issue by Actor Clyde Fillmore, '98, who writes:

"John MacGregor, '23, the very energetic master of ceremonies of the New York chapter of Oregon Alumni was good enough to rout me out of limbo to attend the Oregon dinners."

On several occasions when members of Oregon's athletic teams have been in New York City, MacGregor has been on hand to offer to show them the town.

MacGregor also has been a province chief of his fraternity and for a number of years on its national council.

Early Oregon Grad Dies at Portland Home

By C. E. Wagner, '01

James K. Neill of the class of 1910 died suddenly at his home in Portland, Oregon, November 6, 1941. LaGrande was his boyhood home. He entered the University in 1906 and worked his way through school entirely by his own efforts. He graduated in Electrical Engineering in 1910. His son, James K. Neill, Jr., graduated from Oregon in 1940, his father's 30th anniversary.

After graduating he entered the employment of the Portland General Electric Company in Portland, where he remained until the outbreak of the first World War. At that time he entered the shipbuilding plant of the Northwest Steel Company as their chief electrician. After the war he returned to the Portland General Electric Company, becoming what was then known as general construction foreman.

He later became Assistant Superintendent of Electrical Maintenance and Construction, a position which he still held at the time of his death. He was a good capable citizen and will be difficult to replace. He had a host of friends.

While at the University he played on the basketball team, and was one of Bill Hayward's weight men on the track team. He played football, but failed to make the varsity. In his senior year he was given his letter "O" in appreciation of his four years' faithful work on the second squad.

Gridders End Conference

conversion from placement shoved the Ducks ahead, 7 to 6.

By some mischance, however, Beaver Fullback Joe Day wiggled through the Webfoot line, ploughed 28 yards up the east sidelines of Hayward field to score, and steamed OSC into the Rose Bowl for the first time in history. Final score, Oregon, 7, OSC, 12.

A 19-to-15 defeat by Stanford, and two unbelievable losses, 14-to-7 to UCLA and 13-to-0 to WSC complete the Webfoot calendar.

Oregon's football team this year was an explosive outfit. It could be outgained terribly on the statistic sheet, but time and again the Webfoots would function with finesse on perfect plays that it would negate the terrific hunks of yardage their opponent had plodded to pile up.

Six seniors, headed by All-Coast Mecham, played their last season for the Lemon and Green. They include Bill Ragner, 200-pound end; Ray Segale, 205-pound guard; Morris Jackson, 196-pound guard; Frank Boyd, 175-pound triple-threat left halfback; the aforementioned Mecham, and Hersch Patton, center.

This small number of losses through graduation, plus a wealth of fine material left over and a fair crop of freshmen, should promise an excellent season for Tex Oliver's Webfoots next fall . . . that is, providing the draft doesn't hack into the squad too much.

Robert Stephenson, '40, will act as student assistant curator of the museum of natural history on the campus this year, while working for his master's degree in anthropology. Last year he was employed as graduate assistant at the University of Texas.

Oregon's Athletic Rule Passes to Basketball

By FRED TREADGOLD, '44

With only a few bright autumn leaves continuing to resist the aggression of winter and the campus squirrel population already safely tucked in bed the time has come for King Football to give up his reign in favor of his younger brother, Basketball. Few of the 1940-41 varsity remain, but the Oregon quintet again this year promises the same kind of fiery basketball which has proved so popular in the past, writes Sports Man Fred Treadgold, '44.

ASOPHOMORE-sprinkled Oregon basketball varsity faces a gigantic task for the 1941-42 hoop year. Confronting the Webfoots is a stiff 27-game schedule which will carry the Oregon over 7500 miles during a five-month season.

For the fourth consecutive year the Ducks have been extended an invitation to "open" the basketball season at Madison Square Garden in New York City. On this trip Oregon will clash with eight of the nation's top-flight quintets. Upon return home an ominous 16-game northern division conference slate looms to greet the Webfoots, who will be trying to recover their league crown, lost two years ago.

Wayne University furnishes the first opposition, December 10, in the Michigan metropolis. Buffalo is the next stop the following night, where the Ducks go up against Canisius College in the Memorial Auditorium. Last year the Green and Yellow warriors carved out a 50 to 42 victory over the Canisius quintet.

With just one day's rest, the Oregon's push on to the "big city." Inauguration of the 1941-42 hoop season will be December 13 against the perennially tough Long Island University Blackbirds. These LIU boys last year made things plenty uncomfortable for the westerners who succumbed, 43 to 31.

Philadelphia is the next hop with Temple University acting in the guise of the host on the night of December 15. The Owls extracted a win from Oregon last season, but by a paper-thin margin, 45 to 42.

Continuing the westward drive towards "home," the Ducks lay over in Pittsburgh long enough to tangle with the Duquesne Dukes December 16. Another three-point margin separated the two teams in their meeting in 1940, with Oregon on the slim end, 37 to 34.

The setting for the third game in three nights is in Cincinnati against Xavier University, December 17. Chicago's Windy City is the next Oregon stopover where the Webfoots tangle with DePaul University, December 20.

Final encounter on this transcontinentally jaunt is with the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, December 22. The "City of Portland" again will bring the Webfoots home December 24.

Following the Christmas vacation, Oregon's varsity will be once again hard at work, polishing off their attack prior to the northern division "curtain raiser" January 9 against Washington State College, defending league champions.

The squad which has been working out since school started in the fall is the smallest in years. Only thirteen men remain to shoulder the brunt of the work. Of this number there are three seniors, three juniors, one varsity reserve, and six sophomores. That means that half the squad has had no varsity training, hence experience will not be the main forte.

ON paper the team stacks up as potentially better than last year's which won 18 and lost 18. Speed will again be the main feature of the Webfoot attack, with a fast break very much in evidence. Defensively, either a man-to-man or a shifting zone will be employed, depending upon the situation.

Heading the list of lettermen is George (Porky) Andrews, veteran guard with two year's service behind him. Andrews appears to be the only "cinch" starter. He scored 233 points last year, rating third highest on the team, and is an equally recognized defensive man as well.

Diminutive Paul Jackson, another senior, is rated as having preference at the other guard position. A capable scorer, Jackson marked up 146 points in 35 games last year. Also in line for the guard posts are Don Kirsch, Bob Newland, Wilson Maynard, and Cliff Anet.

A two-way battle rages at center between two 6-foot 7-inch boys with Archie Marshik, two-year veteran, and Lloyd Jackson, from the freshman squad, as the combatants. Marshik has had experience, but has been inconsistent, while Jackson's biggest handicap is lack of seasoning.

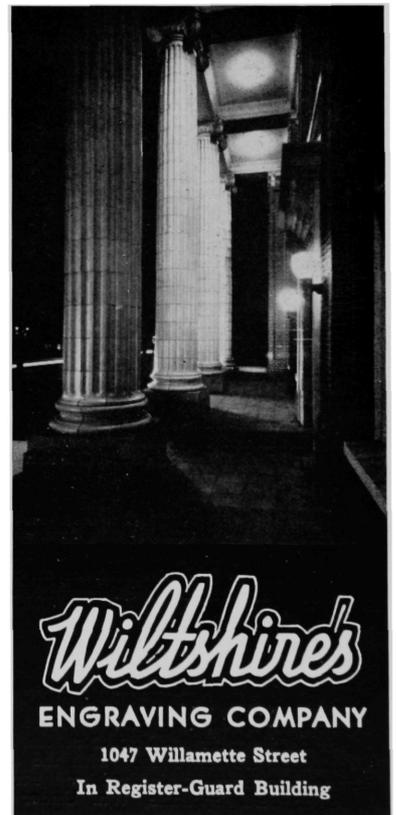

Two lettermen at forwards are being pushed very hard by a pair of sophomores. Warren Taylor, 6-foot 5-inch junior, and Ralph Fuhrman, 6-foot 3-inch veteran, both have shown brilliance, but must hustle to keep ahead of these youngsters. Bob Wren, after showing nothing exceptional last year in frosh ball, suddenly kindled into a potent scorer, also with a reputation as a battling defensive man. If early-season indications are significant it won't be surprising if Wren is included in the starting five. Warren Christiansen is the other

And that's the way the situation stands: A scrappy, small, inexperienced squad with plenty of odds against them which must tackle a rigorous 27-game schedule with the nation's best teams.

HOME AND COACH OF CHAMPS—Popular Coach Howard "Hobby" Hobson, '26, who has guided destinies of Oregon's basketball teams for the past seven years, will send another Oregon quintet on the road to conference victories January 9 in the season's conference opener against Washington State.

Oregon Alumni Help Write Leatherneck History

By ROY N. VERNSTROM, Publicity Sergeant

FROM first storming of New Providence forts in the Bahamas 100 years before the University became an institution, the Marine Corps has created legend much meatier than lusty fiction. And Oregon grads are aiding daily in developing the tradition of "semper fidelis."

Currently Lieut. Col. Elmer E. Hall, '14, is stationed with the engineers at Camp Elliott, Calif. Last year he coached the San Diego Marines, a football team of officers and enlisted men who played "Tex" Oliver's Ducks in a pre-season Eugene game. Due to the strain of emergency training major athletics have been temporarily discontinued among the sea soldiers.

At the same port with Col. Hall are Lieutenants Scott Corbett, '41, and Jack Coleman, '39. Camp Elliott is near La Jolla, Calif.

Newspaperman and former Emerald editor is First Lieut. Douglas Polivka, '38, now assigned to Philadelphia as editor of the Marine Corps Recruiter, a national magazine. Then there's Captain James Blais, '36, who presided over the Associated Students during his senior year. Today he commands an outfit of Devildogs in China or thereabouts if evacuation hasn't already taken place.

Second Lieut. Luther R. Seibert, '39, visited the Oregon campus last month while on transfer from line duty at the San Diego base to Pensacola, Fla., for flight training. Second Lieut. Harry Milne, '40, transferred from ROTC to a permanent commission with the Marine Corps after graduation. He is stationed on the U.S.S. St. Louis and may be addressed in care of the postmaster, San Francisco.

Some faculty members have helped make history as webfooted soldiers. Professor of physics Will V. Norris can speak the lingo of a leatherneck as a World War I sergeant. Having finished officer's training but day's ago is Dick Phillippi, '41, who remains at Quantico, Va., waiting transfer.

Private George W. Forge, '43, enlisted last April and is now with the second defense unit at Parris Island, S. C. Such are the samplings one can recite. Many others should be mentioned.

Known the world over as the toughest fighting outfit, these pugnacious sea soldiers are seldom suspected of mothering a classical temperament. Recently it was discovered their vigorous and singable "Halls of Montezuma" smacked of the introduction to Mozart's minuet from the opera, "Don Juan." Obviously this Hymn has a different flavor with the Marines than Don Juan had with Mozart.

Assigned to embassies around the world, as guards in bomb-wracked London, occupying Iceland and stations in Asiatic waters, the Marines are always the "first to fight for right and freedom." Never having suffered defeat in 166 years of colorful history, the corps has inherited the habit of being the first to land, keeping the situation well in hand.

Today recruits—dubbed "boots" by veterans—are between the ages of 17 and 30. They are given eight weeks of basic training at either Parris Island, S. C. or San Diego, Calif. Following this conditioning period they are assigned according to abilities: 20 vocational schools, line duty, foreign service, or the sea.

Much of the Marine Corps history is yet to be written. Oregon alumni already mentioned in the service and others to come will help scrawl more rugged events as the uncertainties of today become the crises of tomorrow.

Other Oregon alumni in the Marine Corps, according to records kept by Major F. I. Agule of the University ROTC department and Dean Karl W. Onthank are: Joseph N. Renner, '35; Robert W. Thomas, '36; Frederick R. Findtner, '39; Shelton C. Ingle, '41; Bruce Hammond, '41; Maurice Kelly, '41; Hymie Harris, '42; Elroy Jensen, '41; Roscoe Cole, '41, and Warren Smith, '41.

Current Events of the Campus

HOW DRY IT IS . . .

The millrace, one of Oregon's most prized traditions, ran dry recently, and homecoming alums were startled as they peered into the empty "trench" of today which was the pride and joy of their college days.

Floods washed away the dam which opens the flow of water from Willamette into the race. Now, speculators wonder, will repairs be completed in time for Junior Weekend or will Oregon enjoy celebrations minus Canoe Fete.

FIRST MAN . . .

Dr. Donald M. Erb, popular president of the University, was named Eugene's first citizen for 1941 by the Eugene realty board. The board emphasized Dr. Erb's work in securing return of science granting degrees as an important factor in determining the choice.

Only other University faculty member to be so honored was Dr. C. V. Boyer, dean of the college of arts and letters, who received the award in 1938.

VALENTINE FOR DADS . . .

The largest Homecoming in University history quietly fades to rest, and immediately the campus fancy lightly turns to thoughts of February and Dads' Day, which will be Valentine's day, February 14. Jack Lansing has been appointed chairman.

BUG-HAPPY . . .

And now they've found a student on the University of Oregon campus who has a collection of 18,000 bugs. It's all part of a hobby which started in Poland a number of years ago. The student, Borys Malkin, is today a refugee and is continuing his studies in Eugene.

REMINISCENT OF '17-'18? . . .

Knittin' for Britain is the favorite pastime for many University coeds who are busy on socks, sweaters, or what-have-you to send to soldiers in England.

ALL WOOL . . .

Alfred J. Lomax, '23, University professor of business administration, recently released a new book on woolen mills in Oregon. The book is the product of intensive study of industries of the state by Mr. Lomax.

THEY STILL HAVE IT

Be there a man with soul so dead who remembers not the Piggers' Guide and its service. This year's book came out November 7, and quite appropriately so, for it was the morning before Sadie Hawkin's day.

'OF-AGE' NOW . . .

The University Co-op turned 21 this year, and a special celebration program is planned. The store was founded in 1920 and has continued its entire history under the management of Marion F. McClain, '06.

GOOD INSURANCE RISKS . . .

Two hundred and fifty persons have been graduated from Oregon's Civilian Pilot training course without a single injury or fatality. In addition, only three schools out of 775 participating in CPT work have trained more students than Oregon. James C. Stovall, '28, is coordinator in charge of the University program.

Meet Our Alums

The home, by the way, is another place in which the cable grip has caused many an innovation. Broom holders and holders to keep kitchen tables of proper height with space below for the workers' knees are only two of many adaptations.

Miss Kellems shows a strict sense of justice. This is shown in her business dealings of a few years ago.

George Wood, who invented the first cable puller, died, leaving his plant to his widow, though patent rights had expired.

The story, told in Nation's Business magazine, says that Miss Kellems bought out the widow when she realized what her new grip would do to her business. She paid $35,000, then scrapped the factory.

"My friends told me that I was a fool," Miss Kellems said. "But you know how women are."

really get it. I'm even sending you, under separate cover, a photograph of myself as a fat old Chinaman, the first one I ever played in, "Shanghai Gesture."

The name, by the way, is just Clyde Fillmore. The "Fogel" was legally discarded in 1918 when German names were notably unpopular.

Thanks for your letter. With all good wishes.

Sincerely yours,
Clyde Fillmore, '98,

OVER ONE MILLION BOOK-READERS USE THIS SENSIBLE SERVICE

OVER 400,000 families—thus at the very least, over a million discriminating book-readers—now belong to the Book-of-the-Month Club. They do so, in order to keep themselves from missing the new books they are really interested in.

Time and again you buy the "book-of-the-month"—not knowing it has previously been chosen by our judges—merely because some discerning friend has said warmly: "There's a book you must not miss." How sensible to get these books from the Club, since you pay no more for the books you buy, and save enormously in other ways.

You are not obliged, as a subscriber of the Club, to take the book-of-the-month its judges choose. Nor are you obliged to buy one book every month from the Club. You receive a carefully written report about the book-of-the-month chosen by our four judges, in advance of its publication. If it is a book you really want, you let it come to you. If not, you merely sign and mail a slip, saying, "Don't want it."

Scores of other careful recommendations are made to help you choose among all new books with discrimination. If you want to buy one of these, you merely ask for it.

In addition, there is a great money-saving. More often than not—as the books listed above demonstrate—our judges' choices are books you find yourself buying anyway. For every two books-of-the-month you buy you receive, free, one of our book-dividends.

These books can be given because so many subscribers ordinarily want the book-of-the-month that an enormous edition can be printed. The saving on this quantity-production enables the Club to buy the right to print other fine library volumes. These are then manufactured and distributed free among subscribers—one for every two books-of-the-month you buy.

During 1940 close to $5,000,000 worth of free books (figured at retail value) were given to the Club's members—given, not sold! You pay no yearly sum to belong. You pay nothing, except for the books you buy—and you pay for these no more than the regular retail price (frequently less) plus 10¢ to cover postage and other mailing charges. Your only obligation is to buy four books-of-the-month a year from the Club.

A FREE COPY TO NEW MEMBERS OF ANY ONE OF THE BOOK-DIVIDENDS LISTED ABOVE:

Begin your subscription to the Book-of-the-Month Club with one of its selections listed at the right, above. Surely, among them is one you have promised yourself to get and read. As a new member, the Club will send you free, with the first book you order, any one of the recent book-dividends listed.

BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB, 385 Madison Ave., N. Y.

Please enroll me as a member. I am to receive a free copy of any one of your recent book-dividends listed above, and for every two books-of-the-month I purchase from the Club, I am to receive free, the current book-dividend then being distributed. I agree to purchase at least four books-of-the-month a year from the Club.
